Supreme Court Rejects Chessman

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court today rejected a last-minute appeal that it stay the execution of Caryl Chessman, condemned sex criminal, in California's San Quentin Prison.

The court in its brief order had no comment, merely stating that a motion for leave to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was denied.

Chessman is under sentence to be executed Friday. The court's denial apparently leaves only one remaining possibility for Chessman to escape the gas chamber—clemency from Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California.

House Panel Clears Stalled Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Rules Committee agreed informally today to clear a stalled civil rights bill for House consideration.

Formal action sending the measure to the House floor probably will be taken Thursday. The decision to act was made at a hurriedly called session this morning.

The House probably will consider the bill next month. Meanwhile, a Democratic plan for securing Negro voting rights was placed before the Senate Rules Committee, but consideration was deferred.

Sanity Hearing Is Postponed

Sanity hearing for Rosa Bustamante, charged with murder with malice, will not be tried in 118th District Court on Thursday.

Judge Ralph Caton, 118th District Court, announced at 11:30 a.m. today that he had been advised by defense counsel that Dr. Preston Harrison, superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital, and principal witness slated to be heard in the case, is still ill and cannot come to court.

Judge Caton immediately postponed the hearing until Feb. 29. He said that the court clerk would endeavor to contact all members of the jury panel who had been instructed to report to court on Thursday advising them they were excused from further duty this week. No other cases are docketed for trial.

10 Construction Companies Cited

AUSTIN (AP)—Ten construction companies have won safety award plaques from the Texas Highway-heavy branch of the Associated General Contractors.

The awards were presented to company officials Tuesday at the annual safety clinic held to promote safety.

South Texas Construction Co., Corpus Christi, won place 1 in Division A. Gilvin-Terrill, Inc., Amarillo, took second.

Battery Charge

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Novelist Thomas Chamales must appear in court March 21 to answer charges of battery, drunkenness and disturbing the peace at his estranged wife's home.

Mrs. Bustamante was to have faced a sanity hearing. Such proceedings would be heard by a jury whose responsibility it would be to say if the defendant is sane at this time, and whether she was sane or insane at the time of the alleged offense.

She is accused of causing the death of her young daughter in 1957. She was recently released from the Big Spring State Hospital where she had been committed soon after the death of her child.

Surprise Snow Blankets Area

Heaviest snow fall of the winter greeted surprised early risers in Big Spring Tuesday. The temperature was mild, however, and the snow, which was dense enough to reduce visibility for a time to a few blocks, melted as it struck the earth.

Beginning shortly before 8 a.m., it continued unabated in force until nearly 10 a.m. It dwindled sharply at 11 a.m. The snow was heavy with moisture and left yards and streets saturated.

All parts of Howard County had snow in about the same quantity as Big Spring. Lamesa, to the north and west, had a heavy fall which amounted to as much as 2 inches but melted rapidly.

Cold Front Fools Weather Experts, Brings In Snow

Up to 4 inches of snow covered the Texas South Plains Wednesday as the result of a heavy snowstorm that rode in on a cold front that had been expected to be a dry one.

The fall in Lubbock measured 2 inches. It started a dawn and continued until midmorning. Visibility was cut sharply. Highways were passable but hazardous.

Schools at Cooper, in south Lubbock County, and at Seminole, in Gaines County, were closed.

Snow was reported as far south as Fort Stockton and Midland. Light snow also fell in the Panhandle. Pampa reported a trace. Rain or snow was forecast for most of the state as the cold front moved eastward. Freezing temperatures were expected for most of the state Wednesday night. Lows of 15 to 25 degrees were forecast for Northwest Texas, including the Panhandle. Readings of 22 to 32 were expected in North Central and Southwest Texas and

No Variance With Nixon, Ike Claims

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said today that never in seven years has there been any major variance between him and Vice President Richard M. Nixon on national policies.

Getting Ready For Head Count

Two crew leaders who will direct the 1960 federal census for Howard County, Louis Stallings (center) and Matt Harrington (right) have been named. Their appointment was announced today by Earl E. Kerr (left) after he conducted a series of interviews here Tuesday.

Ike To Broadcast On Defense, Tour

President Is Angry Over Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will go on nationwide television and radio Sunday evening to discuss national defense and his forthcoming South American tour.

The President announced this at a news conference today. And—in cold anger—Eisenhower called it despicable for anyone to suggest that he may have misled the nation regarding its defense position.

Eisenhower said that if anybody believes that he has misled the nation on defense matters, he would like to deny it to that person's face.

Eisenhower asserted that America's defense is not only strong, but also awesome and respected elsewhere.

The President's Sunday evening talk will begin at 6:15 p.m. EST. He expects to talk for about 15 minutes. Major radio and television networks will carry the speech.

Eisenhower announced his plans for the talk after a reporter recalled that just before the President's December tour to 11 nations he went on nationwide TV-radio to discuss that trip.

ANOTHER TALK The newsman asked whether the President planned another talk before he leaves the air for 15 minutes Sunday evening.

He said that in addition to discussing his forthcoming visits to Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay, that the talk would deal with national security and defense policies.

Eisenhower replied that he did intend to go on the air for 15 minutes Sunday evening.

He said that in addition to discussing his forthcoming visits to Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay, that the talk would deal with national security and defense policies.

In the course of the news conference, the President also discussed these matters:

NUCLEAR — He said the Soviet Union's latest program looking toward development of nuclear weapons tests seems to get away from the completely rigid position the Soviets have maintained previously. The Soviet proposal certainly is going to be studied by this country, the President went on.

NUCLEAR CHEATING However, Eisenhower hit at one aspect of the new Soviet plan — that calling for a limited number of inspections to determine whether any nuclear power was cheating.

When you get into the business of limiting inspections, Eisenhower said, you at the same time get into a long argument because you get into the old numbers racket.

FRANCE—Eisenhower called it only natural for France to want to join the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union in development of atomic devices. He made that remark when asked for comment on France's first explosion of such a device last Saturday.

A newsman asked whether Eisenhower was concerned about that development, or whether, on the other hand, he thought it would strengthen the position of the Western Allies.

The President harked back to 1947 and the Bernard Baruch report on atomic energy problems. One thing sought at that time he

Home Never Like This

NEW YORK (AP)—The Air-men's Club at Kadana Air Base on Okinawa is more than a home away from home, says Time magazine. Home was never like this.

A Time article describes these club attractions for a $1-a-month fee: nightly dances with a 75-cent admission featuring pretty, medically approved Okinawan hostesses; bingo games with $1,000 prizes plus expense-paid trips to Hawaii; cocktails and highballs for 5 cents each; steaks for 25 cents; free drinks and pizza pies once a month.

They are paid for by slot machines in the service clubs.

NATIONAL COUNCIL PROTESTS AF Bans Manual Linking Churches And Communism

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force today announced the withdrawal of an instruction manual which had been attacked by the National Council of Churches as linking churches and communism.

An Air Force statement said Secretary Dudley Sharp ordered an investigation Tuesday, immediately upon learning of the existence of the manual. It reported the manual already had been withdrawn by Air Force headquarters on Feb. 11.

The statement said: "Secretary Sharp categorically repudiated the publication as representing Air Force views.

"He has directed an Air Force inquiry into the circumstances of the development and issuance of this manual, including names of individuals responsible.

"He has directed a check to see whether similar material is contained in any Air Force or Air Force Reserve publications.

The statement said the manual was withdrawn when its existence was brought to the attention of "responsible officials by a member of the reserve forces."

It was understood an Air Force chaplain first called the attention of the Air Force Reserve officials to the manual.

As evidence, the council cited such statements in the manual as inquiry into the circumstances of the development and issuance of this manual, including names of individuals responsible.

"He has directed a check to see whether similar material is contained in any Air Force or Air Force Reserve publications.

Court Upholds Contempt Case

AUSTIN (AP)—The Court of Criminal Appeals refused for the second time today to overturn the contempt of court conviction of Odessa publisher John Aldridge.

The court overruled a second motion for rehearing. There was no written opinion.

Aldridge, publisher of the CCC News in Odessa, was ordered jailed for three days and fined $100 after copies of his newspaper were distributed in the courthouse during selection of a jury in the T. M. Shirley murder trial.

Dist. Judge J. H. Starley of Pecos cited Aldridge for contempt after Dist. Judge Paul McCollum of Odessa declared a mistrial.

McCollum objected to a story in the paper saying the defense attorney had the judge and the district attorney under his thumb. Starley was brought in to hear the case after McCollum declared the mistrial.

The high temperature Wednesday morning was 56 at Brownsville and Corpus Christi.

High temperatures Tuesday ranged from 75 degrees at Laredo and Presidio to 54 at Galveston. No rainfall was recorded in Texas Tuesday.

The five-day forecast issued Wednesday calls for temperatures 5 to 8 degrees below normal in East and Central Texas. It will be colder Wednesday night and Thursday and warmer Saturday and Sunday. Precipitation will be light to moderate. Scattered showers were forecast in the eastern half of the section Wednesday night and showers Sunday or Monday.

In West Texas temperatures during the five-day period were to be 3 to 6 degrees below normal. Temperatures were to be lower Wednesday night and higher Friday and Saturday. It was expected to get colder again Monday. Precipitation was expected to be moderate in the north and light or no rain was forecast in the south. Whatever rainfall came was expected mainly in the week-end.

The U.S. Weather Bureau reported the snow general over the South Plains. The bureau said it was rather cold northwest of the cold front which during the morning extended from near Paris, in North Texas, along a line to Waco and Junction.

The bureau said the snow was expected to spread a little farther eastward during the day and then change to rain showers over Central Texas and thundershowers over East and South Central Texas.

The bureau predicted clearing from the west Wednesday night and Thursday.

The snow—just enough to cover the ground—and the thunder and lightning hit Lubbock starting at about 1:30 a.m. and the snow continued for several hours. Light snow fell westward from the South Plains into New Mexico.

West and north of the front skies were cloudy with temperatures ranging from the middle 40s along the front to near 30 over the Panhandle and South Plains. East and south of the front skies were clear with patches of fog in East Texas. Temperatures reached the 50s

Call For Campbell

With Spring just around the corner, many Big Spring homeowners will be looking toward various odd jobs that have been put off around the yard.

Maybe it is a retaining wall to keep top soil from washing out of the yard. Or, perhaps a patio for summertime barbecue parties. Or, a walk down the side of the house.

Whatever concrete work you plan, Charles Campbell's telephone number will be a handy one to remember.

Many Big Springers have tried the do-it-yourself method of laying bricks or installing concrete appearances. And many have found that it takes a real expert to smooth off a walk or lay an even wall of bricks.

Most will agree that it is worth a little extra money to have the job done right and professional-looking the first time. Such problems as proper forms, a good batch of cement and expert workmanship come with experience and know-how.

It is these skills that Campbell offers his customers on any contracting job. The telephone number is AM 4-2467.

Keep Tires In Annual Checkup

The annual automobile inspection, as required by state law, is currently under way in Big Spring. One important point to remember in auto check-up is tires.

With your annual inspection and spring maintenance, give those tires a long careful look. Or better still, drive the car around to the Creighton Tire Co., 601 Gregg, and have them give your tires the once-over.

ROUGH TREATMENT
During the fall and winter months, you have probably driven through many chug holes, punishing your tires on dirt streets. If they were a little old to begin with, chances are they should be replaced.

The vacation season is approaching as well as weekly outings to the lake or visits to relatives, now that most of the bad weather is over. Nothing can make such trips more dismal than tire troubles.

A careful tire check now may save you needless lost time and worry when on the road. And the safety factor should not be dismissed. Bad tires cause many highway accidents every year.

The Creighton Tire Co. can furnish truck, tractor and passenger car tires and tubes. Charlie Creighton is the Seiberling dealer in Big Spring, a fine name in motor car tires.

TRAINED STAFF
A trained staff is equipped to install your new tires in perfect alignment and perfect balance. This is necessary with new tires to insure that you will get maximum life from new tires.

If you do not have puncture-proof tires and tubes, this is a safety factor you may want to investigate. Whatever questions you may have concerning your car's tires, Creighton and his staff can answer them for you and insure you a safe tread under foot.

Jay's staff applies its talents in providing specialized service—the objective is always to satisfy all of the customers to the fullest. This has been achieved. Jay suggests that a prospective carpet buyer contact one of the Carpet Store's many satisfied customers. Find out what they say about the Carpet Store and then decide for yourself the best place to buy floor covering.

Valley Man Denies Slash At Hospital

HARLINGEN (AP) — A Harlingen man has denied that he sliced veterans' service from the Houston VA Hospital that one located in South Texas could provide them. Austin Anson added Tuesday that "I have never commented on this subject and am now only because statements have been falsely attributed to me."

Anson referred to a statement attributed to him by Dr. Lee Cady, manager of the Houston Veterans Subcommittee in Washington, before a House Veterans Subcommittee. Dr. Cady said sentiment seemed to be developing against the proposal for a VA hospital in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. He quoted Anson as subscribing to this view.

"I returned to the Valley shocked today to learn this sort of statement had been attributed to me," said Anson, who is manager of the Texas Fruit & Vegetable Growers Assn.

Anson said he met Dr. Cady recently when a load of fruit and vegetables was sent to the Houston hospital.

"I would be extremely happy for the hospital to be located in the Valley rather than for sick people to have to travel 355 miles for treatment," Anson said.

Rep. Joe Kilgore (D-Tex) and Rep. John Young (D-Tex) have introduced a bill authorizing a VA hospital somewhere in a triangle bounded by Corpus Christi, Brownsville and Laredo.

Kilgore said after hearing Dr. Cady's statements that he will insist that a hospital be located in the region.

U.S. To Renew Oil Aid Program

HOUSTON (AP) — The Interior Department is planning to reorganize its program under which the government receives expert advice from oil executives while preparing strategy for possible future wars.

The Military Petroleum Advisory Board of 35 top industry executives has been inactive since the Justice Department questioned its status under anti-trust statutes two years ago.

The MPAB is charged with analyzing long range strategy of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and other military agencies and determining the capabilities of the oil industry to meet the petroleum requirements involved.

Giesler Sides With Chessman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Famed criminal attorney Jerry Giesler says condemned sex terrorist Caryl Chessman's 11 1/2 year stay in San Quentin's death row is "refined legal torture."

He asked Gov. Edmund G. Brown Tuesday to spare Chessman's life, although he said Chessman should be kept behind bars. He noted Chessman had been condemned for an offense which did not involve the death of another human being.

We Rate Far Ahead Of Reds In Electric Power Output

FORT WORTH—The continued argument about whether the United States or Russia is predominant in the production of guided missiles overlooks another important measure of a nation's strength—the production of electric power and its efficient distribution, a field in which the U. S. holds a wide margin of superiority, J. B. Thomas, president of Texas Electric Service Co., said today.

At the end of 1959, the United States had more than three times the generating capacity for electric power than the Soviet Union, Thomas reported. This is one of the greatest advantages this country possesses, he added.

A report on Russian electric power developments just released by the Edison Electric Institute sets out the findings of two delegations of American electrical industry leaders who toured the Soviet Union at the request of the United States State Department and makes clear that this country will continue to increase its lead over Russia in electric power supply during the next five years, Thomas stated.

The report estimates that the total capacity of the United States in 1965 will be 245 million kilowatts, as compared with the Russian goal of 110-112 million kilowatts. This is a difference of 134 million kilowatts.

Information in the report, Thomas pointed out, tends to correct any impressions that Soviet Russia is in any way likely to outstrip the United States in the production of electric power.

In the field of power transmission, Thomas reported that in 1957 Russia had only about 46,500 miles of power transmission lines of 35,000 volts and above. That year the United States, with about one-third Russia's area, had more than five times as many miles of comparable transmission lines, a total of 240,000 miles.

Thomas also said the relative standard of living of the peoples in Russia and in the United States might well be measured by the average residential use of electricity which is about a 400 kilowatt-hours a year in Russia and 3,500 kilowatt-hours a year in the United States.

"Communism and an all-powerful state have surely failed to approach the tremendous advantage in electric power supply for factory and home that private industry has brought to this country," Thomas said, "even though some ardent proponents of federal ownership of the electricity supply facilities of the United States, and of other industries and businesses as well, are continuing to try to convince our people that this nation should follow the Russian example."

Pearl Harbor Unit Takes Area Nikes

MINERAL WELLS (AP) — One of the few military units in condition to fight when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor formally takes up Friday the defense of the Southwest against air attack.

The outfit is the 64th Artillery Group, which will exercise command over Nike missile battalions in this region.

Civil leaders and senior commanders of the Army Air Defense Command will meet at Camp Wolters near here to activate the group.

LT. Gen. Charles E. Hart, chief of the Air Defense Command, will present the colors of the 64th Artillery to Col. James W. Milner, commanding officer of the activated unit.

Milner's group will be responsible for the Nike missile battalions at Dallas-Fort Worth, Abilene and Austin; a battalion at Roswell, N. M., and another at Shreveport, La.

The battalions are expected to be operating by July 1. The 64th originally was a coast artillery unit organized Jan. 15, 1918. In May of that year, it was organized as an artillery unit and sent to France. Later it was demobilized.

It was reorganized May 2, 1921 as the Hawaiian Anti-aircraft Regiment — the first A. A. regiment in the U. S. Army.

In November, 1941, the unit went through exercises and retained its armament. It thus was able to defend against the second and third plane attacks on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941.

After that, the unit was broken up with units moving to many battle fronts in the Pacific. One group of the 64th is credited with destroying 50 Japanese planes, damaging 28 and probably destroying 6 others.

The unit was inactivated in 1947 but reconstituted this year for the defense of the Southwest.

Oklahoma Decline Drops Oil Average

TULSA (AP) — A decline in Oklahoma helped lower daily average oil production by 50,755 barrels to 7,728,670 barrels during the week ended Feb. 13, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Oklahoma was down 38,300 to 543,500 barrels. Texas helped make up some of the net loss with an increase of 34,850 barrels to 7,796,225 barrels.

The Journal estimated 1960 production at 317,162,900 barrels compared with 317,338,700 a year ago.

Beauty Doesn't Render Like Lard

A writer in the current Saturday Evening Post, J. C. Furnas, deprecates the growing tendency—in the schools and in every day life—to use cut-down texts of the classics and near-classics in reading courses.

He seems to think this is the laying on of profane hands, and something to be frowned on or driven from library shelves.

But it goes further than mere condensation. In many cases the whole text and tenor of the original has been altered to conform to modern notions, and in some cases the fact of condensation and alteration has been concealed, and parent and child are left under the impression the work is as the author wrote it.

None of the great classics, apparently, has escaped this boiling down.

What boots it if a child has read a cap-sulated form of "Ivanhoe" just to be able to say he had read Scott's masterpiece? His knowledge of the subject must be sketchy and impermanent; he has ingested the crumbs and missed the real meat. He has "absorbed" what some other person, quite possibly a hack, thought Scott intended to say, not what Scott actually said, or the way he said it. And the way a classic is written—its very bones and sinews—is what made a classic a classic in the first place.

If nobody has thought to condense Poe's "To Helen" it is possibly because it couldn't be condensed and leave anything more than ashes behind.

You can't render a great classic, like Treasure Island, for example, as you would render the lard out of a side of meat and have anything worth reading left. As Furnas points out, the "story" itself isn't what made a classic what it is; it is the way it is put together, the sentence structure, the choice of words, the phrasing, the "style," the living, breathing spirit of the thing that has thrilled succeeding generations of readers in many languages.

The craze for condensation, or "digesting" as it is sometimes called, is part of the modern world's hurry-up attitude. The result is that millions of youngsters and adults take a hasty sip from a thimble-sized cup and never know the joy of drinking from the inexhaustible fount of knowledge and beauty.

If this disrespectful treatment of the great works of literature continues apace, another generation or two will see the last of the great masterpieces, and will be all the more ignorant for having missed them.

We Might Remember This Lesson

SAC Commander in Chief Thomas Power is among those who think we should keep a certain percentage of our SAC bombers aloft at all times, ready for instant reaction in case an enemy strikes, and especially to keep the bulk of our deterrent strength from being destroyed on the ground by a sneak missile attack now or later.

This view is shared by a great many competent observers inside Congress and among Air Force officers. Main objection: It would cost about a billion dollars a year, and subject our bombers to considerable wear and tear which we could ill "afford," seeing that much of our bomber strength is obsolescent and we aren't building enough new ones to keep up replacements.

But in testimony before the Senate Space and Preparedness subcommittee, made public Sunday, Air Force Chief of Staff Thomas D. White was quoted as saying a U. S. round-the-clock airborne alert now might prod the Soviet leaders into rash decisions.

This strikes a reminiscent note. We heard it in Congress and from other sources in the months before Pearl Harbor, when it was argued that we should not spend four million dollars fortifying the harbor of Guam because, in effect, "the Japs wouldn't like it."

That was when Speaker Sam Rayburn, now again Speaker, came down into the well of the House and his face livid, shouted: "To h— with the Japanese empire!"

Well, as everyone knows we didn't get around to doing anything about fortifying Guam in time, and the Japs struck Pearl Harbor and Corregidor in Manila Bay. Had Guam been fortified in time, and the Philippines strengthened, it is possible the Japs never would have sneaked attacked at all. They would hardly have by-passed a powerful fortress on Guam to strike at the others. It might have taken weeks to obliterate Guam; as it was they simply ignored it because it had no military significance.

Today, we might profit from this lesson.

J. A. Livingston No Switch To The Moskvich

My carefully considered opinion of the plan of the Soviet Union to send 10,000 Moskvich passenger cars to the United States over a two-year period is that it won't come to pass, and that if it does, it will pass quickly.

The distinguished columnist, Ralph McGill, has asked: "What will Ivan think?" Will Russians, who have to wait for years to buy a Moskvich for 25,000 rubles ($6,250 at the standard rate of dollar exchange, $2,500 at the tourist rate), resent the sale of autos here at a price of, say, $1,400, $1,600, or $1,700?

MY FEELING IS THAT Ivan won't hear about this U.S.S.R. excursion into the American automobile market unless Premier Khrushchev and Deputy Premier Mikoyan, who master-minds the U.S.S.R. trading procedures, want him to know. In that case, the news will be dashed out as propaganda. "See what wonderful cars we make. Even in America, they will Moskviches." That, supposedly, will make Ivan feel proud, not resentful and envious.

The significant question is not what Ivan thinks, but what Mike, Jim, Herman and Cecil think, what Americans think, after the Moskvich gets here, if it ever does.

It took years and years for Americans to cotton to Volkswagens, British Fords, French Simcas, and so on. Americans have been xenophobic car-buyers. Would they get service, spare parts? GIs, stationed abroad, who used the Volks, Opel and other foreign makes, gave them their boost here.

THE AVERAGE AMERICAN is a conservative when he's buying a car. The outlay is too big to gamble on. That's why the Big Three for so long have been so strong in the domestic market.

When Henry Kaiser tried to bring out a postwar car, these questions invariably arose: Will the company last? What will the trade-in be on some other make?

All independent companies since the late 'twenties have had to contend against this consumer insistence on security of value, dependability of service, certainty of survival. So, I think Mr. Robert Castle, auto dealer of Syracuse, N.Y., who intends to import the Moskvich, is building—pardon the obvious—castles in the air.

President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Herter never know which way Khrushchev is going to zig or zag on Soviet foreign policy. American car buyers have enough common sense to recognize that Soviet shipments of Moskviches do not depend on their reception, price, or commercial prospects. Shipments will be governed by Soviet political zigging and zagging.

IF THE MOSKVICH'S propaganda quotient in the U. S. is high, the Soviet bureaucrats will zig 'em here. But India, or Syria, or French North Africa, or Great Britain might become the better propaganda zag. It's even possible Khrushchev will zig Moskviches to Russia for propaganda kicks. Khrushchev doesn't have odies of Moskviches to zig or zag. Total passenger-car output in the U.S.S.R. comes to only 120,000 vehicles in a year, of which 70,000 are Moskviches. Only in America are 6,000,000 cars made a year.

Therefore, I suspect that if any of these Moskviches are offered here, Americans will regard them with even more doubt than they did the Kaiser car. Americans, doubtless, will demand concessions to compensate for the unexpected zags.

THIS MEANS THAT the Moskvich will have to sell at a price not comparable with the Volkswagen, which has established itself, or the Renault, or the Simca, or the Volvo. Not at a price slightly lower than the Rambler American, or the Falcon, Corvair, Valiant, or Lark, but at a price much, much lower.

It may be a good car, but it's a speculation—as to service, trade-in value, and performance in this market.

Speculation, did I say? Gamble would be better.

And, as they say in Wall Street, it should be discounted accordingly.

Finance Fees Collide With Usury Laws

By STERLING F. GREEN

AP Foreign News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you are appalled at the financing charges you must pay to buy a home, you have a reason.

They are at about the highest point in 30 years, and have bumped into the usury laws of some states.

Some mortgages, it is suspected in Washington, may actually have violated usury statutes, although it would take a court action to find out for sure.

For that reason, the government's Federal National Mortgage Assn. recently refused to offer a dozen or so mortgages of being for sale by Tennessee lenders, until their legality was attested.

THAT WAS A RATHER remarkable incident. In effect, one federal agency declined to accept obligations insured by another agency—the Federal Housing Administration—for fear the paper would be found illegal and void.

Among the 11 states whose usury laws forbid interest charges higher than 6 per cent, some have considered raising the ceiling so as not to choke off housing credit.

Builders and organized real estate dealers recently have attacked what they called excessive discounts demanded by lenders.

When the builder of a new house finds a buyer, he usually sells the mortgage to a bank or loan company, which will collect the monthly payments. When money is tight, the builder has to take a discount on the mortgage; in other words, he accepts less for it than its face value.

LAWYERS GENERALLY agree that a discount cannot be construed as part of the interest charge, even though the home buyer may pay for it ultimately. The builder who knows he will have to take a discount may simply jack up the price of the house to cover it.

Builders recently have reported lenders in some areas asking discounts of up to 10 or 12 per cent.

The federal housing agencies are showing some nervousness over the situation, because the FHA permits a 5 1/2 per cent interest rate on loans which it insures—just under the usury level of several states.

On top of that is added 1/2 of one per cent as an insurance premium, bringing the total charge to 6 1/4 per cent in the first year of the mortgage. If the insurance charge were held to be interest, the usury limit would be exceeded in Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia.

However a Tennessee court has held in a test case that the insurance premium is not interest. Maryland's attorney general has ruled to the same effect.

But on certain low-cost homes involving mortgages of less than $8,000, the FHA permits the lender to add still another 1/2 of one per cent as a "service charge." This is intended to compensate the lender for the higher cost of handling a small mortgage.

That was the type of mortgage which FNMA questioned and sent back, pending formal assurance of its legality.

This was FNMA's concern: If a home owner could obtain a court ruling that the mortgage was usurious, FNMA would be holding a worthless piece of paper.

That is because Tennessee, like New York, is a state in which both principal and interest of a debt are voided if the terms of the loan violate the usury laws. In North Carolina, Virginia and some other states the interest alone is forfeited.

Would it help the buyers of low-cost houses if FHA abolished the service charge? Not a bit. Lenders simply wouldn't take that type of mortgage loan. Few are making them now.

To Your Good Health

Sleeping Face Downward Doesn't Help Cold

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M. D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about the merits (if any) of children sleeping on their faces when they have a cold." —Mrs. F. B.

This is an idea that has gotten around more than it should. The theory (if you want to call it one) seems to be that since the nose drains while the child has a cold, it is in a better position to facilitate the drainage.

The theory's sound. Good. In practice it won't work, either for children or adults.

First of all, the fore part of the nose, when there is a cold, is congested and stuffy, and no matter whether you lie face up or face down, much of the drainage has to work its way backward into the throat.

Remember that what we commonly refer to as the "nose"—the part that sticks out in front like a job seal—is only a portion of the nasal area anatomically. The upper (or rearward), if you prefer) parts of the nasal system are so located that there isn't a tremendous amount of difference whether you lie on the back or the stomach.

Second, I would like to see the child who will stay in one position long enough for the changed position to be of very much use in drainage of such nasal passages as are likely to be aided.

Youngsters, like adults, move while they are asleep. They roll, squirm, twist. No single position is retained for very long.

In short, the idea of trying to get a child to sleep on his face is impractical and wouldn't be very useful even if it could be achieved. Just let it go that a cold is a miserable thing to have. A child (or an adult) will thrash around during sleep, but will spend most of the time in whatever position permits easiest breathing.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I've had a thorough physical examination and the chest X-ray shows some fine densities which the doctor said probably represent the first degree of pneumoconiosis. Would you explain? Is it contagious? What does the word 'densities' mean?" —M. M.

"Densities" are places where the X-rays do not come through as strongly as elsewhere. An X-ray, after all, is just a shadow picture. The more flesh (or bone) that the X-rays must pass through, the less reaches the X-ray plate on the other side. So "densities" are just places where there is more (or denser) flesh, bone, etc.

As for pneumoconiosis, this is a condition caused in the lungs by inhaling particles of dust or fibers. Whether it is severe depends on how much has been breathed in for how long, and what kind of material. Dust containing iron or coal particles, for example, are not dangerous. Dust from silica, on the other hand, is highly irritating, and you've heard of silicosis, which affects people working in jobs where silica dust is plentiful.

In the case of irritants (such as silica) areas of the lungs form into nodules, or you could say "scars," and thus form lumps and reduce the breathing areas. Pneumoconiosis is NOT contagious, although in some cases the patient is more likely to fall victim to TB germs, get tuberculosis, and hence acquire a disease that IS contagious.

Why suffer from sinus trouble? Much can be done to help you, and it is explained in my booklet, "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble." To receive your copy, write to me in care of The Big Spring Herald, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover handling.

Around The Rim

Mr. White Slanders Our Sewage

Just because some of the flow into Lake Livingston would come from upstream sewage plants, the use of effluent from the Big Spring disposal unit came in for rough handling last week.

We were caught innocently between proponents and protesters for plans for two dams on the lower Trinity River. W. F. White, consulting engineer, apparently cited Big Spring as proof that industrial use of effluent isn't practical or desirable.

"Didn't you use the Big Spring example just because it was the worst example you heard of?" asked Attorney Victor Bouldin.

"It's a red flag, something to look at before you jump," answered White.

My provincial pride is wounded, and I rise to the defense of our sewage, and especially its effluent (the treated liquid issue from the plant).

White had testified that Cosden had used effluent from the Big Spring plant for nearly a decade for cooling towers and that it had corroded parts containing copper. Moreover, its organic content fertilized algae growth so that slime conditions had to be combated constantly.

"Cosden discontinued the use of city sewage effluent when they could get Lake Thomas water although the lake water cost 12 cents more a thousand gallons."

He went on to admit that Cosden still used effluent for boiler feed. Indeed, the big refinery and petrochemical plant does to the tune of 17,000,000 gallons a month.

What he apparently did not say was that Cosden did a lot of pioneering on this front, blazing a trail that others (notably the Texaco refinery at Amarillo and the refinery, butadiene and rubber plants at Odessa) have followed successfully.

No one argued that effluent was the equal of fresh water, although its bacteriological purity might be as good. But it does contain some ammonia, plus minute organic particles. Cosden found ways to deal with these and to come out with an acceptable product, and for a long time a water more satisfactory than that which had been available from its string of small wells of hard water.

The water was treated successfully to yield feed stock to the boilers, so much so that it is still in use. Meantime, the lake water, which was not then even in the picture, became available and it was more economical to use it. Had it not been feasible to get the lake water, Cosden would still, as a matter of supply and economics, be making maximum use of effluent.

In this sector, the utilization of effluent will increase with time. When (for we surely are facing this problem) we put in a new sewage treatment plant, the effluent probably will have been aeriated and otherwise treated more completely so that its quality will increase.

Here is a source of several million gallons of water per day for practical industrial or other applications. It makes sense that in a country where nature has so limited our water supplies that we make maximum use of all supplies.

These partial and slanted pictures developed in the forum of public hearings does a disservice to those who pioneered this matter and who have made it work. —JOE PICKLE

Horizon-To-Horizon For The Hucksters

Let us rejoice! At last some practical, commercial use has been found for the sky above us and the mountains around us, not to mention the flat surface of any architectural monument in the offing.

The advertising world is prepared to use each as a backdrop, a veritable silver screen, for the new magic lantern capable of projecting enormous pictures and messages on any outdoor surface made by God or man.

In the near future, when man scans the skies, if he can see them through the man-made smog, he will not search an empty empyrean bare of all save the same old heavenly bodies. No, indeed, thanks to this new invention, he will see "Pie in the Sky, Like Mother Used to Make. Take Home a Blueberry Pie To-night—85 cents at Your Nearest Super-Market."

A SWISS INVENTION, called the Sky-jector, has been brought to these shores for promotion by an American firm, the Unexcelled Chemical Corporation. The gadget is capable, according to its American promoter, of enlarging a four-by-six picture or slide 72 million times at a distance of five miles. Last year, this machine, right out of Orwell's "1984," covered an unoffending Alp with a picture of a girl!

Given a cloud a mile high, the Sky-jector can focus on it a picture and advertising message visible for 15 miles in any direction. It opens up the prospect of a horizon-to-horizon gray-flannel world, with the sky open and available to nature lovers only in rainy weather; with America's rocks and hills and wooded hills covered with gigantic exhortations to "Eat the Inexpensive Spread That Looks Like, Acts Like and Tastes Like Butter But Costs Only a Fraction as Much."

FOR A WHILE, THE POETS may miss the sky. They have made a good thing of it since time began. But they cannot expect to monopolize it forever. And the birds may be confused for a while, too. But you can't let birds and poets hold up progress. And this new Swiss invention spells advance.

Certainly, if any fuddubud attempt to make the sky or the Rockies and the Adirondacks off-limits to this new advertising media, on the ground that nature is sacred or even good to look at, the outdoor advertising interests can depend upon Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma to protect them in Congress.

IT WAS SENATOR KERR who came to the rescue of the outdoor advertising boys in the last session of Congress with a rider that practically nullified President Eisenhower's and the Administration's attempt to keep billboard advertising off the new Federal highway system.

The Skyjector may have difficulty making itself seen in some parts of the nation where billboards already obstruct the beauties of nature on the thesis, invented by the outdoor advertising industry, that undiluted nature is dangerous.

Too much scenery puts us to sleep at the wheel of the old jalopy, in the industry's view, while all those lovely billboards keep us wide awake. Of course, the industry can offer no proof of its statement, but if it just keeps repeating it often enough, we'll all be convinced. Or so the industry believes.

SO THE FACT THAT the outdoor advertising industry is now reaching for the sky should be no surprise. Or for the mountain ranges. Or the sides of the Washington Monument. (All those columns make the Lincoln Monument rather impractical.)

"None of the objections leveled against the conventional forms of outdoor advertising apply to the Skyjector," says a spokesman for the Unexcelled Chemical Corporation. "It projects its message without altering, marring or cluttering up the landscape. It comes, it goes; it leaves no scar."

All it does is pre-empt the sky and the eternal mountains for Big Brother! (Copyright, 1960, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

We Can Rattle Missiles If We Have To

WASHINGTON — Maybe the Soviets ought to be worried about the "gap" question. For it begins to look now as if the United States is not only the strongest military power in the world today but, if the Soviets do get their 200 missiles into the operational stage by the end of 1962, the United States will have by that time, too, more than 500 effective missiles equipped with nuclear bombs and able to reach all targets inside Russia.

Since many of these American missiles would be fired from movable bases, it is not going to be possible for the Soviets to prevent the deterrent power of the United States and its allies from becoming effective even if they try a surprise attack.

These conclusions can be drawn from the impressive testimony, just made public, given last week before congressional committees by Admiral Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations.

The Soviets are reported to have planned to operate 150 inter-continental missiles and 150 intermediate missiles by the end of 1962. The first group could supposedly destroy bases in this country, and the others could be aimed at allied bases overseas.

ADMIRAL BURKE says that it has been found difficult to get even one missile fired at a specific time, and that to fire 150 or 200 simultaneously to arrive at all targets coincidentally is impracticable.

So the potential enemy has to worry about the retaliatory power that may be directed against it in the lag between firings of its own missiles.

First, there's the Polaris missile developed by the United States. No equivalent is possessed by the Soviets. The Polaris will be ready for use this autumn. It can be fired now from submarines, and later it could be fired from cruisers. It can be carried on fleets of fast-moving merchant ships.

One submarine armed with Polaris missiles, according to a statement by the secretary of defense last year, carries as much destructive power as all the conventional bombs dropped by both sides during World War II.

"WE HAVE TESTED THIS missile," says Admiral Burke. "We have fired this missile from various types of launchers from under water, so that we know what it will do. We have tested the tubes. We have tested the warhead. We have tested all the components.

"We anticipate no difficulty whatever. It is just a question of putting the systems together now, which will take a couple more months. . . . This missile—warhead—will be many times the size of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima."

The admiral revealed that there will be a total of 32 operational Polaris missiles by the end of this year and 80 at the end of next year and 128 by the end of 1962.

Now, these Polaris missiles are relatively cheap. They cost only $1,500,000 apiece. They can be deployed far and wide—an arsenal that could be kept moving all the time.

But while all the Polaris missiles planned for submarines are to be operational by 1962—that is, about 128 in all—to this strength must be added the Titan range missiles that the United States has already in operation and the Titan long-range missiles which are about a year away.

WITH POLARIS MISSILES roaming the high seas and Minuteman missiles moving around this country and intermediate-range missiles based on the territory of our allies, and our manned airplanes carrying nuclear bombs, the deterrent power of the Western Alliance today and in the foreseeable future is so formidable that it justifies in every sense the momentous declaration of Gen. Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who said to a congressional committee on Feb. 9th:

"On the basis of all the information available to me, and in view of the mission and locations of our retaliatory weapons systems, I just do not believe that any nation possesses the ability today or in the foreseeable future to attack us or destroy us without receiving unacceptable damage in return."

That's the whole missile controversy in a nutshell, and it explains the confidence about the outlook felt by President Eisenhower and the three military chiefs of our armed forces. America doesn't like to do any "sabre-rattling," but, if it is forced on her by misguided politicians, plenty of "missile-rattling" will be done.

"The Garden Picture Through the Year" was the theme of Mrs. L. W. Harris's program Tuesday evening for the After Five Garden Club.

points were given when Mrs. Harris told the women to fill in the bare places of their yards with annuals. These flowers can be used until evergreens and other shrubs grow to their full extent.

Take Your Time

Marisa Pavan, now living in Paris, suggests that we might have fewer tensions and reducing problems if we take time for an old-fashioned meal in the middle of the day. She is soon to be seen in United Artists' "Solomon and Sheba."

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY

Parisienne Would Reform Our Habits

HOLLYWOOD — Although Marisa Pavan and Pier Angeli are twins, they don't act, talk or think alike. Marisa is rather difficult to know while Pier likes to meet and talk to people. The one thing they do have in common is their charm.

"I still don't enjoy it," she confessed, "but I am more disciplined. We have to be flexible in life and learn to adjust to those things we don't like. For instance, when I was making 'Solomon and Sheba' we worked in Spain for four months, and I didn't care for their shooting schedule from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. I found it very difficult to relax after working so late. There was nothing I could do to change it, so I adjusted.

I've known Marisa since she first came to Hollywood. She's a serious, hard-working girl who finds little time for play. Old beyond her years, she has a happy marriage with Jean Pierre Aumont. They live in Paris and Marisa "jets" to Hollywood for an occasional TV show. When she was here recently, we lunched cafeteria-style in the studio commissary. There we discussed the beautiful luncheons to be had in Paris.

"They tell me I don't show it but I'm the nervous type. This is my biggest problem and some day I hope I'll learn to lose my tenseness. I enjoy lying on a board with my feet higher than my head. I think there is something beautiful about reversing the pull of gravity.

"I don't gain weight in Paris. We don't have sweets in machines to tempt us or all the billboards with such beautifully displayed food. It makes me hungry to look at it. But I don't think you hear as much reducing talk over there as you do here.

"I also find it very relaxing to have a hot bath just before going to bed. I know it's supposed to be stimulating but it has the opposite effect on me. But I think the most successful way to break tension is with controlled breathing," she concluded.

"What would you have for a typical lunch?" I asked. "Perhaps a hot sea food with a lovely sauce and a rice ring with steamed vegetables inside. With this we'd have a good white wine, green salad, cheese, fruit and coffee.

"You know they say the French live to eat," Marisa smiled, "but by taking enough time during meals, they break tensions. You don't hear of people dying from heart attacks at the rate they do over here." It was obvious that Marisa loves Paris.

"The women are difficult to know but I have many friends now. The French woman is very conscious of fashion. She attends the showings and devotes a lot of time to being well-groomed.

"The newest novelty in Paris is the rage for wigs. Everyone is wearing them in different colors. Sometimes it's difficult to recognize a person as a blonde one might be a brunette the next. But it gives them freedom from the beauty salons because with the styles so complex, the Parisian woman usually has two or three appointments every week.

"The whole key to your appearance is set by your hair, and unless you learn to be a do-it-yourself girl you are at the mercy of your hairdresser," she added. "Once you told me that there were so many interesting things in life that you wanted to do and to learn that you resented the time you had to spend on grooming," I said.

Lunch Bar Protest Climaxes In Brawl

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — An eruption of tempers and fists Tuesday turned a sit-down demonstration by Negro students at a segregated lunch counter into a short but bloody brawl.

One white youth was temporarily hospitalized with a slashed face—probably done with a razor, police said. Three Negro students were arrested. All were charged with disorderly conduct. One also was charged with assaulting an officer and carrying a concealed weapon.

The violent outburst was concentrated in the parking lot of a suburban shopping center. But it had its inception in the attempt of some 50-60 Negroes—mostly high school students—to obtain service at the "white only" lunch counter of Rose's Department Store.

Defense Leaders Have Alert Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top defense officials conceded in writing today they have full authority to order an immediate airborne alert of the Strategic Air Command.

The new defense budget carries 185 million dollars to buy spare engines and parts and meet other preparatory costs for such an alert; 90 million is to be spent in the fiscal year that begins July 1.

Witnesses said the Negroes crowded into the whites and began heckling and pushing. Some of the Negroes obtained seats.

Subdued Niki Discusses Aid With Burma

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A hot-so-bouncy Nikita Khrushchev discussed possible new Soviet economic aid to neutralist Burma in talks today with Burmese President U Win Maung and resurgent political leader U Nu.

A government source said the Soviet Premier and the Burmese leaders also touched informally on relations between Burma and Communist China and the China-India border dispute. Khrushchev reportedly applauded the agreement Jan. 28 settling some disputed points on the Burma-China border and agreeing to negotiate the others.

Some Burmese observers felt that Khrushchev would not be in a handout mood on this visit. They noted that the Communist National United Front party lost 43 of its 46 Parliament seats in the Feb. 6 elections. But others believed he would make a token offer of at least one aid project in an effort to show that Soviet friendship is not based on Burma's internal politics.

Khrushchev today toured two Soviet gift projects that resulted from his 1956 visit, a technological institute for 1,100 students being built just outside Rangoon and a plush, 200-room hotel nearing completion in a Rangoon suburb.

By Bob Smith

Theodor Uppman, the "fair-haired boy of opera," as his publicists used to call him, is swinging through West Texas again. He was here two years ago on the Concert Association series.

This time (next Monday) he'll be with the Lubbock Symphony. Also on the program are orchestral pieces, plus a Lincoln narrative by Richard Tolley, of the Tech music faculty.

Uppman is well remembered by many in his local audience, and his concert here gained him a large following. The Monday concert will be at 8:15 p.m. in the Lubbock Auditorium. Tickets at $2.50, $2.50 and $1 may be had at the window or at the Symphony business office, 1625 Ave. Y.

John Findlater has turned his old home town a bit more toward art.

He opened his one-man show Sunday in the Kendall Gallery in San Angelo and drew "several hundred" people the first day. Besides selling four paintings, which was a record.

The show has two weeks still to go. The Standard-Times went all out, too. A 3-column announcement story Sunday, followed Monday with a page one 3-column story with 2-column picture. It seems to be the biggest splash yet by a local artist.

Fred Short reports there are now seven colleges for sure in the state one-act play contest to be held here in March.

These are Lon Morris of Jacksonville, which has one of the finest junior college drama departments in the state, Wharton County, Navarro of Corsicana, Temple, South Plains of Levelland, Odessa, and Howard County junior colleges.

Short expects 10 or 12 colleges to sign up before the deadline, and if he gets as many as 10 he'll be happy. Short will get about 12 colleges into the contest if interest continues to grow at the usual rate of two new participating colleges each year.

The Army, incidentally, dropped out. An official in special services at Ft. Sam Houston headquarters cited "complications, lack of time," etc. but indicated that they would have troops turned troupers next year.

Short's play, "The Petrified Forest," is reported on its feet, but barely.

Next week, he hopes to have his students working without scripts.

Short has named Frank Snow to fill the role of the ex-grid star turned gas station attendant — a role he should be able to do justice to, seeing Snow's also an HCJC athlete. There are several athletes in the play, in fact.

Sherry Coats is a real trouper. A flat fell on her head Monday night, but she smiled and rubbed her head, and went on. Tuesday, she wasn't feeling too good, and went around all day with a knot on her head.

Ad Man Sees Danger In Laws

DALLAS (AP)—An expert said today that advertising could be illegal in 20 years.

That note was sounded before the Dallas Advertising League by Lee Fondren of Denver, vice president of the Advertising Federation of America.

"Small but continuing discriminatory bits of legislation could tear down the foundation of advertising's believability," he said. Fondren cited the recent federal highway bill designed to give state bonuses for restricting outdoor advertising on federally-financed highways as one attempt to control advertising.

"Federal control of advertising could reduce competition and jobs in an enterprise now allowed self-control," he predicted.

The nation's advertising business last year totaled an 11 billion dollar expenditure "which paid for a program that moved a tremendous amount of merchandise," Fondren said.
