Deramus Again Loses Rail Case

AUSTIN (AP)- The State Supreme Court rejected today for the second time the plea of the president of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad that he be released from a contempt of court sentence.

However, the court repeated its previous observation that the contempt of court decision handed down by Dist. Judge Jack Thornton of Dallas against W. N. Deramus III is void and cannot be enforced.

Attorneys here for the Katy president indicated the appeal may be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Deramus was held in contempt by the Dallas court because his trains violated a court injunction 86 times by blocking a Dallas intersection for more than five minutes at a time.

"In order that there may be no misunderstanding we now hold that the order is wholly void and will not support any fine or im-prisonment," the Supreme Court's opinion held Deramus was assessed 240 days in jail and a $4,000 fine.

Today's opinion said the Supreme Court had the "firm belief" that no trial judge will attempt to enforce an order that the Supreme Court has held is void.

U.S. Astronomers Place First Bets In Starry Guessing Game

By ALTON BLAKESLEE Associated Press Science Writer GREEN BANK, W. Va. (AP)-On behalf of Planet Earth, U.S. bets in a great guessing game of the universe.

Just how would intelligent life on other planets go about trying to contact us? Can we pick up and decode their signals? The first attempt to hear from anybody out there starts this week, with a radio telescope ear cocked at two stars 11 light years away, though it's not known whether they have planets, or life on any planets

Perhaps nobody knows about us, or is trying to reach us, says ly learned is a very important Dr. Frank D. Drake, directing the listening quest at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory.

But we might pick up signals they were beaming to their own space ships or satellites-and thus discover there are intelligent planets somewhere, even if we couldn't tell exactly where. Such radio signals can travel tremendous distances

Another guess is that someone is trying to reach us

SUPERIOR CULTURES Drs. Philip Morrison and Guiseppe Cocconi of Cornell University speculate that intelligent dizations long ago arose aroand other stars in the Milky Way, and some of these already are in ouch with each other and exchanging valuable information. Members of this galactic club might be beaming signals steadily at us and many other stars that they think might have planets. But beaming for years at hun dreds of stars would be tremend ously expensive, costing too many dollars, francs or lotys or whatever unit of value, even in a super-civilization that had licked inflation.

More likely, Dr. Drake thinks, other planets may be trying one distant star after another, beaming out a signal at each one maybe only once every year or few vears

Contact by us might require luck to be listening at the right

Cousy Is Back: Celtics Grab Big Victory

By BOB GREEN BOSTON (AP)-"Cousy's back.

That's the story.' Boston's Bill Russell was talk-won the honors in the broad jump is going to make the Howard the Celtics to a vital 127-102 playand that he only needs now to get Hawks Tuesday night

The decision gave Boston a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven series that shifts to St. Louis for the sixth game Thursday night. The seventh game, if necessary, will be in Boston Saturday afternoon.

Cousy was the key to the decision that gave the defending champions the whip hand in the playoffs. The long-time star had been in one of the worst slumps of his 10-year professional career. He had announced that if he didn't break out of the doldrums he would bench himself for the good of the team.

There was no need to.

The Boston Garden crowd of 13,909 gave him a standing ovation when he took a breather midway through the second quarter. By that time he had engineered a drive that broke the game open. giving Boston a 48-30 lead.

St. Louis was only one point back. 25-24, when the big push started. Cousy scored on one of his dazzling layups, worming his way past three defenders. Then he struck on a long, one-hand push shot. Then he set up Tommy Heinsohn for another and Boston was in front to stay. Cousy wound up with 21 points and 10 assists.

"I wouldn't say Cousy was the difference," St. Louis Coach Ed Macauley said. "But he's the quarterback. When he's up, the team is up. He gave them the momentum and when a great club Buckner formerly performed for like that has momentum they're

Midland Bulldogs Shock War Birds

MIDLAND (SC) Midland shocked Abilene, 12-6, in the District 2-AAAA baseball opener for both teams here Tuesday afternoon. The Bulldogs made the most of 12 hits. Bill Worley drove out a bases-loaded home run for Midland in the third that capped a five-run rally for the winners. Blacky Blackburn, the Abilene coach, sent four pitchers to the mound in a vain attempt to halt the slaughter.

Two Webb Airmen Cited For Aiding Safe Landings

Two Webb airmen have received Certificates of Exemplary Action, signed by Maj. Gen. Daniel C. Doubleday, commander of airways and air communications service. The two aircraft controllers of 2010-3 AACS Detachment, S.Sgt. John Workman and A.2.C. DeTocqueville's Analysis Reads Like Prophecy

Young Alexis de Tocqueville, who visited this country a century and a quarter ago, last night gave the local Great Books group one of its most interesting-and most disturbing-discussions. His famous book, "On Democra-cy in America," is disturbing enough in the X-ray quality of its analysis of American character and institutions in 1831; it recognizes strength as well as weakness, virtues with vices, and in general the reader feeling he has been turned inside out. But most disturbing to the meeting was his chapter entitled "What Kind of Despotism Democratic Nation's Have to Fear," which reads far disconcertingly like a description of the United States in 1960.

Those who missed this experience will have another opportunity at the next meeting April 19, at 8 p.m. in the Music building, at HCJC. The subject will be the "Communist Manifesto," by Marx and Engels.

MUCH FOR

HOW'S YOUR SOAP BOX DERBY RACER COMING ALONG?

Building a car of your own is fun. If you haven't started on yours yet, you'd better hurry. It takes careful planning to put together a winning car. Ask your parents to take you to your Chevrolet dealer's to register you for the Soap Box Derby. You'll be given the Official 1960 Rule Book which you should read carefully before you begin to build. Should a problem arise, you can get advice from anyone you wish but no help in the actual building. Remember, it's your car and any honors a fast car might bring will be yours alone. So, build carefully. That extra ounce of effort may give you the extra margin of speed that will win your local Derby and carry you all the way to Akron, Ohio, for the All-American Soap Box Derby.

A Devotional For Today

Death is swallowed up in victory. (I Corinthians 15:54.) PRAYER: Our Father, glory be to Thee for Thy power that brought Christ from the grave to live forevermore. Help us to admit the living Christ into our hearts that His light and love may rule in us. To Thy name's glory and for His sake. Amen.

Missile That Serves Cause Of Peace

On Sunday Uncle Sam's new weathereye satellite, Tiros I, made its 19th passage around the earth and was duly checked by a 60-foot "dish" antenna at Fort Monmouth, N. J. There a 10-man crew working in a maze of electronic equipment, "relieved" the satellite of its photographs and issued new instructions for its future conduct.

The photographs revealed weather conditions around the world, enabled meteorologists to chart the heavens-from actual pictures-exactly as they were a scant few hours before. The eventual effect of this first-hand information may endow the science of weather forecasting with a greater degree of accuracy than ever before.

Tiros I is undoubtedly the most "sophisticated" missile ever loosed into space. 'Marvelous'' seems an inadequate word for it. Ten years ago it would have been unimaginable

The fact that it is up there, following its pre-determined orbit around the earth. is marvel enough. That has been done before, of course, by the U.S. and the Soviet. The Soviet had even landed some sort of missile on the moon, and taken a "picture" of the moon's other side.

But Tiros I, resembling an old-fashioned circular rat-trap, does everything but think for itself. Its instrumentation is elaborate, and many of its functions are controlled by earth-bound signals. In outward appearance the satellite is just about the most unlikely-looking contraption one could imagine. Its shape, its broomstick antenna wouldn't permit it to last 10 seconds in a hurricane.

But there is no wind up there where the Tiros travels, no pressure to disturb it in the even tenor of its ways.

Tiros I represents a long step forward in the slow conquest of space, and we Americans have every reason in the world to be proud that American ingenuity put it up there. Its performance does much to remove the humiliation of knowing that the Soviet beat us to the first Sputnik and the first Lunik. For here is something for which there is a scientific application that serves the cause of peace, and brings to human needs the threshold of practical solutions not heretofore attainable.

Tiros I does not end the necessity of catching up in solving the mysteries of space, but it does augur well for our ability to match wits with the best the world is likely to afford.

Thump It, Man! Thump It!

One item in Life magazine's hints to gardeners intrigued us no little. It was under the heading of watermelon.

After describing the type of soil suitable to melons (sandy) and certain cultural procedures, the Life item ends in these words:

"To tell if a melon is ripe, tap it. If it sounds hollow, pick it."

Can you imagine a man approaching a full-grown watermelon, leaning down and giving it a tap with his index finger? How far would he get? Nowhere, that's where

You don't "tap" a watermelon, kiddo. You thump it. You thump it by placing the middle finger of the right hand firmly against the ball of the thumb and letting the finger fly against the melon, fingernail first. (If left-handed you act accordingly, of course.) "If it sounds hollow, pick it."

That is the rankest heresy. A ripe, fullbodied melon gives off a dull thud, as if it is so full of rich juice it just couldn't stand it another minute. If it "pings" instead of thuds, walk away from there. To "tap" a melon is entirely another procedure, strictly for amateurs who can't trust their own hearing. You thrust your knife into the melon up to the hilt four times, creating a four-sided wedge. You remove the wedge and examine it for redness and ripeness. If it isn't ready to "pick," replace the plug and try another melon.

It pains us to see the ancient rural art of thumping a watermelon so inexcusably misrepresented. "Tap" indeed! Tap, our foot.

lations . . . The Royse City High School and Conservatory 1909-10" Such is the title of a well preserved booklet, a combination chamber of commerce brochure and school catalogue, handed down to Paul Sledge.

Paul's father, L. T. Sledge, was on the board of trustees, and his copy of the publication is in a remarkable state of preservation after 50 years. Probably moreso than the curriculum.

However, you've got to admit they weren't behind times. Actually, the catalogue would indicate that Royse City was quite progressive for its time. The high school and conservatory was good enough to have 400 enrollment, many of them "boarding in" pupils.

THE CATALOGUE SETS out in detail the qualifications of the faculty, plainly delineated lines of authority without equivocation to the superintendent, and he in turn to the board. It held teachers accountable for neat, attractive rooms and for raising a beef if the janitors didn't keep them that way. Included in the curriculum were the solid subjects, based on the three R's, of course. The superintendent taught Latin and Greek. Others taught arithmetic, algebra, history, civics, botany, geometry, rhetoric, literature, geology, trigonometry, physics, chemistry. A pupil had to have generous doses of all these subjects in order to graduate.

An adjunct was the music course or the school of music, which could be had as part of the curriculum or as a postgraduate course to earn a Bachelor of Music degree. Other special departments were in oratory and penmanship. Great store was placed in these three special-

"In response to a strong demand for work of this kind we have added a course in typewriting," the catalogue noted. "Duplicating and carbon copying will not be neglected. The latest model Oliver Standard Visible machine will be used." The school also had commercial courses for "those who are qualified to pursue such a course."

Another feature was a bona fide military company for the boys. There was a baseball team for the boys and a basketball team for the girls, but the catalogue promised that "we will not make a proessional ball player" out of your children. Chapel exercises, three times a week, were specified.

ALMOST AS INTERESTING as the detailed outline of the course of study were the supporting advertisements in the paper -fresh and pure drugs, a bank "with absolute protection for depositors," shelf and heavy hardware, a sure-cure for dandruff, satchels and book straps, coal delivered to your bin, tender meat. There was not a word about automobiles.

It would be interesting to note why such a thriving city 50 years ago sort of fell by the wayside later. It had a Commercial Club, a Traders Day every second Monday, it had 13,000 bales of top cotton grown in the famous "black waxy" belt of North Texas. And perhaps this is one tip-off. Among other things, the good people must have let their soil resources be washed and worn away. Yesterday, I mentioned the Air Force poopie" and "moon" suits, neither of which is Ivy League but vital to airmen. Colonel White says the days of the Wild Blue Yonder are over, but it looked wilder than ever to me after I saw the poopie and moon suits.

THE MOON SUITS, as you might suspect, are terribly complicated garments for fliers who tool through the blue at 50,000 feet or better. Even Dior couldn't have figured out how to get into 'em. At least, they were that baffling to me. The poopie suits are survival gear, so intricately made that I don't see how anyone ever gets into 'em or moves once he is encases. But they save the life of . fliers dumped into the freezing ocean, and are a marvel of ingenuity and watertightness. Never have I seen a miracle of compact packaging to rival the ejection seat of the jet fighters, seats possibly 16 inches square by five inches deep, in which are compressed an automatic life raft, food, chemicals to desalt sea water, a machete (so suppose you come down in a jungle!) iron rations, shark repellent, medicines, and 20 other gizmos, including a two-way radio that once cost the Air Force about $270 and is now down to less than $60.

Conflicts Of Interest In Defense

WASHINGTON - In these days of "payola" and accusations of "conflict of interest" with respect to members of federal commissions or agencies, it seems strange that a big question mark isn't getting much attention generally.

This is in the Department of Defense, and it concerns some of the many generals and admirals who have retired from the armed services but who now draw big salaries from defense contractors and nevertheless maintain their own sales contracts at the Pentagon.

A House committee has held hearings and uncovered an unhealthy and questionable relationship between former military officers and the bureaus in the Pentagon that award contracts. The House of Representatives was scheduled to vote today on a measure that would prohibit any officer for two years after his retirement from making any sales contacts with the Pentagon.

HOUSE MEMBERS generally are agreed that the practice should be discouraged, but some of them want merely to limit the penalty to a loss of the retired pay. Other members say that it would mean nothing for a retired officer to give up two years of a pension at $10,000 a year when he is being paid a salary of $50,000 or more by a defense contractor during each of those same two years.

Instead, Representative F. Edward Hebert of Louisiana, Democrat, who has been leading the fight against the so-called "munitions lobby," is sponsoring an amendment to the pending bill so that it would be a violation of law, subject to criminal penalties, if any retired officer during the two years following his retirement engaged in any form of selling at the Pentagon. This is in line with other existing law which forbids any attorney employed in the Internal Revenue Service from practicing before the Treasury Department for two years after he has left the government. There is a similar statute which forbids attorneys from pressing monetary claims for clients before the government within two years after being employed in the Department of Justice.

MANY OF THE military officers, while on active duty, have a voice in recommending the appointment of their own successors in charge of important defense projects. Naturally, it is inferred that there might be an obligation of some kind felt by the incumbent if his predecessor appeared before him later as a sales representative of a defense contractor.

"Conflicts of interest" are difficult to legislate upon, and there is no way to instill honesty where it is absent but the government can take some steps to discourage "conflicts of interest." One method embodied in the pending bill in the House calls for publicity of the names of all former officers who are employed by defense contractors. Such an enrollment would be posted and distributed inside the bureaus at the Pentagon and kept up to date.

THE HOUSE committee, which recently carried on an investigation of the whole subject for more than two months, found that there are 2,000 former officers now employed by defense contractors, and of this number 260 are engaged in some form of selling at the Pentagon.

There is no objection, of course, to the employment of former officers by defense contractors. The knowledge these servicemen have is valuable and can be of great help in developing the proper weapons and improving the nation's armament. But there is a difference between duties that are confined to consultations held inside the defense contractor's own offices where advice is given to associates, and a direct contact by such a retired officer on visits to the Pentagon.

THERE ARE OTHER evils which have not yet been remedied but are under study by House members. These concern the activities of civilians who resign from active posts in the Department of Defense and immediately become highly placed executives in companies that are engaged in many billions of dollars of defense work. No bills have as yet been pressed on this issue but steps to deal with it are in the making.

There are upwards of $50 billion of defense contracts each year, and the existence of a "munitions lobby" has been mentioned by President Eisenhower himself at one of his press conferences. Much of the "missile gap" propaganda is believed to have had its origin among officers of defense-contractor companies. It would be a tragic thing if Nikita

Khrushchev were able to get any support for his constant cry that disarmament is being blocked in America and armament is being increased largely as a result of a "munitions lobby." It is essential for the sound development of an effective defense program that America be rid of any practice that could cast doubt on the integrity of the Department of Defense and thus weaken the confidence of the American people in the judgment of the men who disburse the public funds for the armed services

The colonel figured Royal Doulton could scarcely cost more. Well, the cost of paper cups at Otis is now down to $5,000 annually, with everyone on base limited to two daily.

Another informer said that in other days when a big gizmo went wrong on the RC-1-21Ds, it had been necessary to ship the vital part all the way to California at a cost of $3,000 for repairs. Then, one day two enlisted men asked if they could have a go at repairing the gizmo. They got the chance, and it now costs $2 to put it into A-1 shape.

Strong Opinion For Electoral Changes

The Gallup Poll

PRINCETON, N. J. --With another presidential election on the horizon, grass roots sentiment is 2-to-1 in favor of changing the present "winner-take-all" system of the Electoral College to make it more representative of the will of the people.

Under the present method the candidate who receives a plurality of the vote in any state wins all of its electoral votes.

In sounding out public opinion on revising the electoral college system, the Gallup Poll first sought to determine how many voters know what is meant by the "Electoral College."

ABOUT THREE out of ten voters, or 32 per cent, had a reasonably correct idea of the meaning of the term, while the remaining 68 per cent either gave incorrect answers or said they didn't know what the term meant.

Each person in the survey was then asked a question in which the general idea of the present system and a proposed change were described as follows:

"Today, the presidential candidate who gets the most popular votes in a state takes all the electoral votes of that state. Do you think this should or should not be changed so that each of the candidates would receive the same proportion of electoral votes that he gets in the popular vote?

"THIS WOULD MEAN for example. that if a candidate gets two-thirds of the popular vote in a state, he would then get two-thirds of the electoral vote of that state.'

Here is the way opinion divided among all persons questioned in today's survey: CHANGE

"The boys made this discovery themselves," Colonel White said proudly, "The other day when I was on inspection, an enlisted man-when I got to his quarters -said, 'Colonel, sir, please take off your shoes.' His floor shone like the sun.

"What did you do" I asked. "Why," replied the colonel, "I took off my shoes!'

Both Republicans and Democrats show about the same measure of approval for the proposed change. The greatest approval vote is recorded among the nation's Independent voters.

WHAT THE proposed change-which would require a constitutional amendment -would mean in an actual election can be seen by comparing the 1956 electoral vote with what would have happened had the proportional method been in effect. Stevenson, who got 42.2 per cent of the major-party vote, received only 14 per cent of the electoral votes. Eisenhower, with 57.8 per cent of the major-party vote, received 86 per cent of the electoral

If the electoral votes had been divided according to the popular vote. Eisenhower's total would have been reduced from 457 votes to about 307. Stevenson's total would have been about 224 instead of the 74 he actually received.

JUDGING BY SOME of the incorrect answers received as to what the Electoral College is, some Americans have some strange ideas about the present method. Here are just a few of the answers Gallup Poll reporters got from voters defining the Electoral College incorrectly: "It's where they train the politicians

Confusion And Suffering Came With Freedom

Editor's Note—The emancipation of Ne-groes during the Civil War brought enor-mous changes—and problems. This third of four articles by a well-known historian tells the troubled story of the Negro in the Re-construction Era: which set the stage for conflicts yet to come. Negro franchise would unseat the party in power, and the business interests feared unfriendly legis-lation that might result. These forces worked together to over-

Using the opportunity offered by Johnson, the Southern states adopted "black had been subjected to, the Negro was unfairly blamed for the miscodes" which generally curbed the rights of Negroes in various ways with a view to forcing them sufficiently credited with its acto work, increasing the power of their employers over them, and limiting their freedom of movement, kinds of employment, freedom of speech, and right to possess firearms. The right to vote was withheld and so was full citizenship RADICAL RECONSTRUCTION The new laws angered Northern friends of the Negro, but they would have been powerless had they not enlisted the aid of powerful political and business inter-

They return of the South without continued to vote in large numbers in some states for two decades or more. At least one Negro from the South was a member of every Congress but one until 1901. Political activities of the Negroes were definitely curtailed, however, and they sought salvation in other fields.

For a time training as skilled workmen enabled many freedmen to establish themselves strongly in the crafts and trades. Others found opportunities in the mining and forestry industries and some in factories. The majority stuck to agriculture as share croppers. In the towns and cities a new Negro middle class of businessmen and professional people emerged to serve their own race. With the aid of philanthropists, they built colleges at Nashville, Washington, Atlanta, and elsewhere and began to train their own scholars, writers, and leaders. The Negro's contribution to the building of the New South was as vital as his role had been in building the old. The future of the Negro darkened toward the end of the century. Racial animosity released new hatreds and violence all over the country. Epidemics of race riots broke out, and the crime of lynching reached an unprecedented peak in the 1890s, with the Ne gro always the most frequent victim. He was driven from crafts and trades in which he had long been established by jealous white labor and further discriminated against by employers. Politicians made capital of racial feeling to deprive Negroes of jobs on th
