Problem For Texas Higher Education

Texas is losing some of its ablest educators because of the sub-standard salaries prevalent in its colleges and universities. Pretty much the same situation confronts public school administrators for the same reason.

President Earl Rudder of Texas A&M College supplied a case in point over the weekend. He announced the resignation of Dr. John B. Page, dean of the college and its graduate school, to become dean of Iowa's State graduate school at Ames.

Rudder delcares Dr. Page's salary at Iowa will be $2,600 a year more than he was drawing at College Station. His salary at Iowa will be $17,600 a year, or

Get After The Hubcap Thieves

We haven't taken the trouble to run the total on the number of hubcaps reported stolen to the police within the past fort-

We feel safe in saying that the total is no less than two or three dozen. At a conservative figure, this could equal a few hundred dollars in economic loss.

We run into waves of this type of lowdown thievery periodically, and now and then a case is broken which leads to discovery of a cache of hub caps and the dissolution of a ring. Usually this type of thievery is the work of juveniles and young punks, but the value of a hubcap has reached the level now that low-grade adult criminals dip into the traffic.

Hub caps are stolen for money, and rarely for any other reason. Somewhere, somehow these articles have to be fenced sold through a dealer) to be converted into money. Usually, the fences operate on an inter-city basis-taking the hot merchandise from one locality into another. But always someone has to become the outlet for these items.

We're anxious that the finger be put on these petty thieves and appeal to all residents to furnish officers with any tip. even if they don't think it is important. We are particularly anxious to get at those unprincipled individuals who fence these stolen articles. We don't defend the thief, young or old, but we damn the ones who make it profitable.

Goodwill, Love And Understanding

WASHINGTON-Billy Graham's Easter they, therefore, approve of those who message about race relations in America contains many significant passages. The world evangelist, just back from a tour of Africa, says the most burning issue of modern times is the race question, that take its course. Today lynchings are rare. people are discussing it all over the world nd that it is not confined to South Africa or to the South in the United States. He says:

"Wherever two races, nationalities or cultures live side by side there are tensions and problems.

The real issue is one of mutual adjustment-whether it shall be forced, or follow the paths of evolution.

"The Bible," says Billy Graham, "recognize that each individual has the right to choose his own friendships and social relationships. I am convinced that forced integration will never work. You cannot make two races love each other and accept each other at the point of bayonets. It must come from the heart if it is to be successful. Otherwise, we can build walls of hatred and prejudice that will take generations to overcome.

"CHRIST SAID THAT OUR problems come from within: 'Out of the heart are the issues of life.' The Supreme Court can make all the decisions it feels are necessary: but, unless they are implemented by goodwill, love and understanding, great harm will be done.

"I am equally convinced that 'Jim Crow' must go. It is absolutely ridiculous to refuse food or a night's lodging to a man on the basis of skin color. There are many cultured, refined, educated Negroes, Indians or Mexicans, who are insulted as human beings when they cannot get a decent place to sleep in many parts of our country."

The evangelist says that some clergymen of both races have unwisely made the "race issue" their gospel and that it is more important to create an atmosphere where all racial differences can be settled and love can prevail." He added:

"This doesn't mean that the race problem is not to be preached and taughtbut it is not to be our 'gospel' nor are we to judge a man's relationship to God solely on the basis of his attitude on the

"THE ISSUE IN AMERICA has moral, social and political implications. Sometimes these questions are extremely complicated - and equally devout men see them somewhat differently. The Christian life requires growth by education and communion with God.'

Unfortunately too many people who want to see the race problem solved overnight are too impatient. They cry out that they have "waited long enough," and

The Symbols Of Status

Ever since Vance Packard came out with his best-seller on the status symbols of modern society, increasing interest has been focused on the various strata in our society. Packard's premise was that individuals seek to identify themselves with certain levels of society by embracing symbols (the big car, exclusive club, cabin cruiser, fine work of art, etc.).

Now comes Lee Rainwater, who is an associate director of Social Research, a motivation research organization, to pinpoint the class division in America. Writing in the Chicago Daily News recently, he made these generalizations:

THERE ARE THREE BROAD social classes in the United States, the upper, middle and lower. Each of these are divided at least two ways-upper upper and lower upper, upper middle and lower middle, and upper lower and lower

The upper division, he says, comprises 2 to 3 per cent of the population and are more apt to be the rich and influential, the old families. Usually this is an unostentatious class. The lower upper class contains the rich people, top corporation executives and business owners, highly successful professional men. In this group money must be translated into socially relevant terms such as a proper house in a proper neighborhood, right clubs, proper charitable activities, and leadership in civic service.

THE UPPER MIDDLE CLASS is composed of families of successful but not the highest placed executives and business owners, professional men. They are generally at the top levels of civic and charitable organizations. The income level may vary from say $7,000 to as much as

The lower middle class includes some 35

THE LOWER CLASS comprise about 60 per cent of the total, and two-thirds of this group are in the upper lower class. Rising wages and government activities has made this the rising class. But although they may even out-earn those of another bracket "there are still important differences in the ways wage earners live and think compared to the lower middle class

In the lower lower class are the people whose training or background have not qualified them for steady or good-paying positions. Usually the minority groups are

People, he observes, are more or less gregarious as to classes, and unconsciously attach themselves to the identifying symbols of their class.

But, warns Rainwater, lest eager-beavers think they can lure anyone into any kind of purchase for status' sake, the symbol can be deceptive. For instance, the man who carries a fountain pen may command more respect than the man in the super-big car. You see, the latter means only he has money, but the fountain pen may say "this man has an education. See, he can use a fountain pen.

Day Of Dainty Doll Is Done

"Man wants but little here below, nor wants that little long," so the saying goes, and it is a good thing that man's sights are low. Because, as the tea leaves twirl for this oracle, man's days-unless he acts quickly-are numbered. He is not even apt to inherit that little with which he is supposedly content.

It isn't anything as simple as the hydrogen bomb that he has to fear, or any War Between the Worlds or Strife Between the Stars. That's corn, man, corn.

The real struggle, which man has so far refused to face, is here and now. Even before pigeons replace people, living dolls may well have inherited the earth. Ever since the end of World War II, I have been filled with morbid fascination, and eerie forebodings over the trend in dolls for tiny and so-called innocent

YEAR AFTER YEAR, dolls have become more life-like. From a relatively simple mechanism that merely wet its diapers, dolls now walk, talk, eat, sleep, drink, burp, cry, whine and come with wardrobes more extensive and elaborate than that of the Duchess of Windsor.

Every time I think doll inventors have gone just about as far as they can go and that this Imitation of Life has its limits, man is robbed of one more quality that makes him unique. And that unique quality turns up in a newer doll

Once upon a time, a deep sunburn, particularly in the dead of winter, was a distinct status symbol for man. It implied that he had both the money and the leisure to go to Florida, or Arizona or Mexico and tan his hide the color of an old Cordoba saddle. Even if he acquired that color under the sun lamps in the Turkish bath, he got the benefit of the doubt if only he practiced discretion and buttoned his

NOW, THIS IS ANOTHER distinction he has lost to the doll house. A patent has just been granted on a doll capable of sun-burning while man, the ninny, fiddles. This doll, like its human counterpart that tans well, has a skin both tough and sensitive to light. Put this doll out in the sun or under a lamp, and it will acquire a color comparable to that of a Palm Beach debutante.

Set this doll in the shade and she begins to fade gradually, even as you and

As if this intelligence weren't enough to unsettle me for a week, I have word of another new development in the doll world, a twist that again infringes on man's uniqueness. There is now a hypochondriac doll on the market, designed either for hypochondriac moppets or for teensy tykes who like to play doctor or nurse.

THIS DOLL, called Marybel, is-like too much of modern mankind-sick, sick, sick. (At last I've discovered for whom those drop-dead get-well cards are designed: Marybel!)

Marybel, to gladden the hearts of the sick, sick, sick younger generation, comes complete with splints for arms and legs, crutches, band-aids, dark glasses for eye injuries, red spots for measles, yellow spots for chicken-pox, and, for all I know, a brace of walnuts to stuff in her cheeks to simulate mumps.

Get Marybel decked out in all her splints and spots, and she is a sure-enough basket case. No emergency ward could conscientiously refuse her, or any Gray Lady ignore her. So, in less than a generation, we have gone all the way from the living doll to the dying doll, Marybel.

ONLY, OF COURSE, Marybel doesn't really die. Peeled of bandages and bandaids, she is good as new, which is more than can be said of humans under simi-

It is only too clear that the Frankensteins of the doll world are well on the way to producing the monster that will not only replace you and me but the Frankensteins, too. Between pigeons and playthings, man is going . . going . .

Prof. Hayek And His Shocker

professor of economics at the University of Chicago and popularly known for his "The Road to Serfdom," has thrown forth a shocker: Give the corporation back to its stockholders.

Prof. Havek isn't an academic visionary. He knows that the managerial revolution is too far gone for reversal. Corporate executives will not turn over control of industrial property in the United States to a town meeting of stockholders.

None the less, for the sake of a provocative argument and to make a point. Dr. Hayek asks: Would not corporation executives govern themselves and the company differently if each year the stockholders individually had the power to decide what part of the net profits to leave in the husiness?

THE PROFESSOR CHOSE a unique and fitting occasion for his trial balloonthe 10th anniversary of the Graduate School of Industrial Administration of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. He is participating, with other distinguished persons from academic and business life, in a symposium examining "Management and Corporations in 1985."

Why 1985? Because, says Dean G. L. Bach, of the School, the men who are being educated today will assume "business and civic leadership" then.

Since change is the only economic verity, the Carnegie business school curriculum is designed to impart understanding of economic mathematical, and engineering principles so that graduates will le able to cope with the changes sure to come in structures, and the social and political environment. In this, Carnegie departs rom the famous "case method" of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

social role of the corporation has changed, back to first principles.

PITTSBURGH-Dr. Friedrich Hayek, Dr. Hayek argues that executives have strayed far from the original purpose of money-making to do-goodism. Policies are guided by "social considerations." This, he contends, is dangerous, because it invites government regulation.

> Corporation managers control immense resources-an organization, a pool of labor, plant and equipment, and cash. Such control, says Hayeck, is "comparatively innocuous" so long as it is used for only one specific purpose and not "for other aims, however desirable in themselves."

When corporate executives give money to universities for research, or for medical help for the community, or to the arts for general culture of society, or to political effort, they are exercising power and influence in areas for which they, as business men, have not been trained. They are apt to misuse and misapply their

"SO LONG AS MANAGEMENT is supposed to serve the interest of stockholders. it is reasonable to leave the control of its action to the stockholders. But if the management is supposed to serve wider public interests, it becomes . . a logical consequence. . .that the appointed representatives of the public interest should control the management."

So, Prof. Hayek produces his shocker. If annually corporations were to distribute all of their earnings to stockholders and then invite shareholders to re-invest in the company, the whole tone of managerial decision-making would change. Stockholders would invest in those companies that make the most profitable use of resources. Companies that did the most social work or had the best public image would only obtain funds to "grow on," if they grew.

by those who argue publicly about the theory of "integration." Anybody who has discussed this subject with fair-minded Southerners will find that mere refusal to serve Negroes and whites at the same lunch counter is in itself not the issue. Nor is the question of mere attendance of Negroes and whites in the same schoolrooms the underlying obstacle. The possibility of intermarriage is the basic fear of those who oppose "integration." Not long ago this writer had lunch with a prominent Negro who is one of the leading editors of a self-governing country in Central Africa. When asked about intermarriage as a problem in his country. he answered that it was forbidden by law and that he heartily approved of the ban.

His reasons were based on pride of race.

THERE HAVE BEEN suggestions that here in America segregation in public schools by sexes might come in time with white boys and Negro boys attending the same classes while separately white girls and Negro girls were studying together. Critics of this idea say it wouldn't help matters much because Negro boys would doubtless be invited by white boys to their homes or Negro girls would become chums of White girls and inevitably at the home there would be social relationships which could develop intermarriage problems. The people who feel deepest about the race question speak of the intermarriage issue as superseding all else. They say that controversies about lunchrooms and schools are mere symptoms of the larger conflict on the intermarriage question. There have been some intermarriages between whites and Negroes in America but more unions between whites and members of the yellow races. It is on this subject that the men in the pulpit will be called upon more and more to define the application of their doctrines of human love so that worried mothers and fathers living in areas where non-whites predominate can be given some answer consistent with the teaching of Christian

The Panthers counted runs in each of the first two innings, then flooded the plate with 10 tallies in the third. They sent 14 batters to the plate in that round. Reid drove out his home run in
