The Midland Chapter of the League of Women Voters is completing plans for its community-wide "Get Out The Vote" campaign to be conducted prior to the July 24 primary election, chapter officials said Thursday.

The league also is sending questionnaires to all county, district and state candidates to obtain information concerning the individuals and to determine their stands on current political matters.

In line with a program of the national organization, the league here has been active for several years in getting out a representative vote at city, county, state and national elections.

The national league is commended for its "Get Out The Vote" campaign in a recent issue of the Ladies Home Journal. The article said, "The League of Women Voters cannot be commended too highly for its part in transforming women's civic apathy into action."

The article points out that better schools, better homes, and efficient management of public funds are possible only when citizens know how to work for them. Means by which the league is attempting to interest citizens in general in better government are listed.

Reddy Kilowatt Gets BrushOff

Reddy Kilowatt, star of the puppet show to be presented at the Texas Electric Show of '48 here next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, gets a quick brush-off from Larybones, another featured entertainer with the show. The puppet show is presented by Paul Walton, left, and Michael O'Rourke. A special stage will be erected for the puppets in the Midland High School Gymnasium. The performances will be presented at 7, 8, 9 and 10 p. m. each night of the electric show.

Fresh oysters from waters which are not polluted can be eaten in all months, though they are rather thin and stringy during the spawning season which is May, June, July and August in northern latitudes.

One clue to egg quality is the size of the air cell. This may be one-quarter of an inch or less in depth in an egg that meets U. S. standards for Grade A.

Dismantling City's Overhead Tank Is Job For Men Who Like Dizzy Heights

By STANLEY FRANK

If you like dizzy heights and hard work with hot metal in the Summer and cold metal in the Winter, chances are you'd enjoy being a member of M. L. "Red" Hill-ton's crew.

Red and his gang, employees of the Bass Boiler and Welding Works of Houston, are dismantling the 100,000-gallon water storage tank behind the city hall here.

All day long, they knock rivets from the tank and lower it, a section at a time, to the ground more than 100 feet below. It's hard, dangerous work, and it takes a tough man to thrive on it. But Red will tell you he's just as squeamish as anybody else when something goes wrong.

A day or so ago, for instance, a section of the tank sawed through a rope and fell from the tank. Fortunately, it crashed into a tree and did no damage. "But," Red said later in telling his boss, H. G. Bass, about the incident, "it sure made me sick at my stomach to see that iron sailing toward the ground."

It will take about 14 days to take the tank and tower down, Bass estimated. Then, the crew will haul the dismantled structure to Houston and erect it again for the Mission Manufacturing Company, who purchased it from the city.

About the same length of time will be required to erect the tank, Bass said. It's a bigger job to put up a second-hand tank than a new one, because some of the steel has to be straightened and otherwise worked on before being used again.

"This is a business where you don't make over one mistake," Bass said, watching one of his men working atop the tall tower. "One mis-step, and it's all over with. Unless you're saved by a miracle, as I was once before. I got too old to climb the things."

Saved By A Rope

This was the "miracle" to which

Bass owes his life: He was putting up just such a tank as his men are tearing down here. In erecting a tank of this kind, a scaffold is built immediately beneath the "bow" or bottom of the tank. Bass stepped on the end of a plank on the scaffold and to his intense surprise found the board hadn't been nailed down. It tipped up, sending him hurtling toward the ground more than 100 feet below.

Approximately 20 feet from the ground, a big rope had been strung between two legs of the tower. Bass, traveling downward at a speed you can calculate if you know the law of falling bodies, landed on the rope on his stomach. His body whirled around on the hawser so many times his clothes were twisted around the rope. That's what saved him. He had to cut himself loose from the rope with his pocket knife. Then he went back up to the scaffold and resumed his work—after making sure every plank was properly secured.

He had dropped about 90 feet, and became one of the few men in all history to have fallen that far and lived to remember it.

Spiced Dishes Add Zest To Meal

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Staff Writer

At the recent annual luncheon to food editors, given by the American Spice Trade Association, your editor picked these three well-seasoned dishes as the most outstanding. They fit happily into your family Summer meals.

Gaspacho

(Andalusian Raw Vegetable Soup) (Serves 4-6)
Six large, ripe tomatoes, 1 sweet red pepper or 1 green pepper, 3 small cucumbers, unpeeled, 2 tablespoons grated carrots, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder or 1 clove garlic, mashed fine, 2 tablespoons finely grated Bermuda onion, dash cayenne, black pepper, salt.

Chop tomatoes with green or red pepper. Cut cucumbers lengthwise, scoop out seeds, chop. Mix in glass bowl with tomatoes, grated carrots, garlic, onion, cayenne, lemon juice and seasoning to taste. Chill and serve very cold, preferably in glass bowls. Garnish with a sprig of watercress or serve with bowl of crisp watercress.

Mustard Mayonnaise
Two eggs, 1/8 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 2/3 cup salad oil, 1/8 teaspoon black pepper, dash paprika, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1/16 teaspoon cayenne, 1/8 teaspoon turmeric powder, 1/8 teaspoon sugar, 1 tablespoon chopped "fine herbs" (chives, tarragon, parsley, dill).

Beat eggs in bowl. Add sugar, salt and rest of seasonings. Add vinegar gradually, beating briskly. Add oil very slowly, drop by drop, beating continuously. When well blended, add herbs. More mustard may be added to taste.

Brushed Lettuce With Celery Seed (Serves 4)
Wash a head of Boston lettuce. Parboil in salted water five minutes. Cut in half lengthwise. Put one sliced onion in baking dish, add 1/2 teaspoon celery seed. Arrange lettuce on top and cover with chicken

Hen May Have Been Laying Bets With Eggs

By CHARLES OVERTON

DETROIT—(AP)—Charles Overton's hen might have been laying bets, Patrolman Ross Faustino told Recorder's Judge George Murphy recently, but it seemed more likely someone had put that book of numbers tickets under her.

The patrolman reported he heard the hen give a strange cackle, and he found the tickets in her nest along with an egg. Overton, 30, was fined $40 on a charge of engaging in an illegal occupation.

or other broth or bouillon (tongue or ham stock excellent for this). Bake 20 minutes in a slow oven (300 degrees F.). Thicken, season to taste and serve lettuce with sauce.

Seminole VFW Rodeo Scheduled To Open Saturday Afternoon

SEMINOLE—Styled the "Wild West Event of West Texas," a rodeo sponsored by the VFW Post 7311 is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, at Seminole's new football stadium.

Following a parade from the business section to the stadium, the first performance will begin at 2:30 p. m.; after the rodeo, cutting horse contests will be held.

Except for horses in the cutting contests, livestock in the rodeo will be from a rodeo company's ranch near Paris, Texas. Six events, including Saddle bronc riding, bareback bronc riding, bull riding, steer wrestling, calf roping and ribbon roping, will be on the program. In addition to prizes for winners in these events, a cash purse will be awarded the best all-around cowboy in the show.

Bertha Mae Mangrum, Seminole, has been unanimously chosen by the VFW post to be queen of the rodeo.

Philippines May Date Back 120,000,000 Years

MANILA—(AP)—The Philippines may be twice as old as geologists thought they were.

Geologist I. Paniza of the National Museum has returned from the big island of Mindoro with mollusk fossils from the Mesozoic period, which goes back 120,000,000 years. Filipino geologists, on the basis of previous fossil findings, have always placed the Philippines in the Cenozoic period running back 60,000,000 years.

It's her first dip in the lake, and 18-month-old Leslie Ditts of Harvey, Ill., finds water a trifle on the chilly side. It's too hot on Chicago's North Avenue beach and too cold in Lake Michigan, so Leslie decides it's about time to cry.

Russian Observer Says Reds Ready For War, U. S. Not

By MAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—I just talked to a man fresh back from Moscow, and he scared me.
He said something I have said out loud and believed in my heart for some time—that the Russians are prepared to face another war, and we are not.
He is an experienced observer. Therefore I think his views are worth presenting, even though I have to do so anonymously.
He says after a year or more in Moscow:
"It is foolish for Americans to kid themselves that there is an effective resistance movement against the Russian government. There simply isn't one."
"The Russians believe that there is only one more battle to win—the third World War," he said. "And then they feel they'll get all the advantages they don't have now."
He was speaking of the mass-produced creature comforts such as the American civilization has produced most of and been most successful in distributing among its people—motor cars, washing machines, radios, and other gadgets to relieve life's tedium.

"Both America and Russia are like two railroad engines headed down a one-way track toward a certain collision."
"This man—and he is voicing only his American beliefs—feels that the one way to combat Russian expansionism is by a display of internal and external force."
"If the American people feel that the Russians are afraid of them, they are wrong," he said. "They have been told by their leaders that they won the last war, and therefore today they believe they are invincible."
He said he felt the only thing that would permanently stop the Russians from a program of conquest and assimilation was the full threat of an American fist.
I asked him how he felt about his own country's awareness of its world problems and responsibilities. He is a patriotic man who saw men die in the last war and took his own share of the risks.
He said:
"All I can say is that the Russians have been conditioned by their propaganda to fight one more war for what they believe it will get them—and we aren't willing either to fight that war or put the money into Europe to prevent it."
Human Freedom
This is only the opinion of one man back from Moscow who says he thinks the basic issue left in the civilized world today is: "Human freedom."
He says we do have it here and they don't have it there, and that the world is a gamble between freedom and promised security. "His own prejudice is toward personal freedom, and I present his views along with his prejudice."
The world, he says, will soon have to choose. It will be a momentous decision—if any historical decision can be so clear cut. Today most decisions are compromises.
Spread deviled ham on buttered toast and top with scrambled eggs and finely chopped chives or parsley; serve as a luncheon dish with a mixed vegetable salad.

Hunter Has Means Of Bringing Back Rhino

SYDNEY (AP)—Want to catch a fully-grown rhinoceros and bring it back alive?
Willie de Beer, hunter, says he has the know-how. Listen to him:
First, go to Africa, to the rhinoceros country. Travel by motor truck. Catch up with a wild rhino. Piling masses with lengths of steel rail attached round his neck. Do this until he has too much dead weight to carry and drops exhausted.
Get down out of that truck. Send the rhino to sleep with a shot of anesthetic. Then get Africans to build a crate around him before he wakes. Freight him off to your own little zoo.

Green pepper, finely minced, onion powder and a small amount of chili sauce are good added to scrambled eggs; use as a filling for a toasted sandwich, is desired.

Swedish Youth Jumps In Bear Pit On Wedger

STOCKHOLM (AP)—A youth at Malmo, Sweden, jumped into an enclosure for bears in a public park on a bet. He climbed up to a platform in a tree, one of the bears following him.
Hundreds of spectators were attracted, women screamed and objects were thrown at the bear which climbed almost to the platform. A fire-brigade turned a jet of water on the bear and a fire-ladder rescued the youth. He had lost one shoe.
"He was lucky," one of the guards in the park said, "that none of the she-bears chased him. One of them is a very good climber."

Put a quarter pound of ham, a quarter pound of snappy yellow cheese, and a third cup of pecans, walnuts or filberts through the food-chopper; mix with cooked salad dressing and use as a sandwich filling.

UN Members Pay Dues Readily Without Fight

LAKE SUCCESS (AP)—On dues collections the United Nations has become a whooping success.
Member nations are paying their dues with much more unanimity than they show around the conference tables.
Assistant Secretary-General Byron Price, and the UN treasurer, Noel Monod, of France, consider this remarkable in view of the shortage of United States dollars in the last two years.
"This year, the UN decided to make it easier on the 58 member nations."
It was decided that one-eighth of the 1948 dues could be paid in Swiss or French francs, or Dutch guilders. The remainder must be paid in dollars.
Swiss francs are needed to pay bills in Geneva, where there is a large UN office in the old League of Nations palace.
Dutch guilders are helpful to pay bills for the international court of justice, which sits at the Hague. French francs will come in handy when the UN assembly meets in Paris September 21.

The UN assessments for 1948 total $2,600,000. Thirty of the 58 members had paid $2,370,576 on this year's bill by May 20. Price and Monod expect the rest to come along in good time.

Britain To Present Air Might To Public

LONDON (AP)—Britain's latest civil and military aircraft will be displayed publicly September 7 to 12 at the annual exhibition of the Society of British Aircraft Constructors.
The event will be staged at the aerodrome of the Royal Aircraft Establishment, Farnborough, where seventy thousand spectators can be accommodated. More than fifty of the most up-to-date aircraft, including new and experimental types, will take part in flying program.

English Excavators Find Old Roman Houses

CANTERBURY, ENGLAND (AP)—Foundations believed to be those of a second century Roman town house have been discovered during excavation here on the site of the Royal Fountain and Rose Hotel, which were destroyed during the war.
Some of the foundations are five feet thick. A large Roman bath room, thirty feet square, and a cobble quadrangle between two of the wings of the ancient house are among the discoveries.
The smaller finds include numerous urns, one of the Emperor Claudius ear (A.D. 41-54), as well as Samian ware, some decorated and others bearing the potter's name, bronze rings and pins and part of a gold necklace.

Some camels can carry several tons for 300 miles without eating or drinking.

It Can't Be Done So Coloradoan Does It

DENVER —(AP)—About 25 years ago some agriculture experts told Charles W. Severy mushroom could not be grown profitably in Colorado's high and dry climate. But Severy rigged up some caves under a viaduct.

He began to have hopes of a going business when the chief of police called to say citizens objected to fertilizer being hauled through the streets every few days, bound for the mushroom caves.

So Severy bought a hilltop farm seven miles north of Denver. Then he and his son, Robert, went back to Chester County, Pennsylvania, and really studied the mushroom business. Now the farm is one of the three largest mushroom producers in the west, turning out 2,700 pounds of buds daily.

Russian Let-Up In Cold War Means Reds Seek New Path

By REYLMAN MORIN
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Something very like a lull has fallen over the battlefields of the "cold war." But—

Lenin taught the Communists, in the early days of the movement, that pursuing a policy was somewhat like climbing a mountain. He said they would encounter obstacles, and often have to change direction. He predicted the necessity to turn and twist, and even to go downhill, before finding a new path and resuming the climb.

The important thing, said Lenin, was to keep the objective in sight.

The front is relatively quiet in Europe today.

But it does not mean that the Russians have called off the dogs. It means simply that they have encountered the obstacle on the mountain. And they appear to be turning back on the path. In reality, they are merely looking for the new path, the next opportunity.

Will To Resist

An American diplomat who has considerable new and first-hand knowledge of Europe and the Russians believes that the obstacle is what he calls "the will to resist."

It is a result, he says, of many different factors. The collapse of Czechoslovakia, and the dramatization of it in the death of the well-loved Masaryk, was one. The successful rebuff of Finland to Russia was another. The Italian elections and the failure of the Greek guerrillas were others.

And the Marshall Plan—of which this diplomat is an ardent proponent—is still another, in his view.

So he finds the people of Europe with a "will to resist" today, which they did not have three or six months ago. Russia is now confronted, he says, with a united Western Europe.

To be sure, the Red Army could nevertheless go right from Berlin to Gibraltar as things stand today.

Could Win First Round

Russia could win the first round of a major war, but having occupied all of Europe, her problem would be the same problem that faced the Germans, and that they failed to solve: How to control so many millions of people who also had the "will to resist."

What will come next is hard to discern. Russia's first objective must be to weaken that common will, or otherwise to get around it.

For that reason, the supporters of the Marshall Plan are very much worried about the effect, in Europe, of the present battle over proposed reductions in the amount of money authorized. Moscow Radio was quick to comment on that. It noted the "disappointment in England," and stressed the controversy and confusion that had been aroused elsewhere.

Coal Mine Troubles Still Worry British

LONDON —(AP)—Britain's publically owned coal industry, the very core of the nation's hopes for prosperity, is having serious troubles. Their solution—or the lack of it—may profoundly affect the extent and nature of more state ownership schemes that are being considered for the future by the Socialist government.

After 17 months of government ownership of the coal mines, production has dipped and levelled off; there is friction between the miners and the government-appointed national coal board which operates the pits.

Pointing up a deep conflict within the board itself was the resignation from the board of Sir Charles Reid, an internationally known mining engineer who was piloting production and reconstruction of the pits.

His study of the pits—the "Reid report" published in 1945—still is the blueprint for reconstructing Britain's crazy quilt of coal mines. Labor, management and both major political parties were agreed that the pits were run down, ill equipped, inefficient and under-manned.

Russia Pushes Radio For Every Home Idea

MOSCOW —(AP)—A new type of five-tube home radio receiver with a speaker has been put into production at a Riga factory. The USSR, Fravda reported, is now in the midst of an intense radiofication plan for the whole nation.

More than 7,000,000 "radio points", including wired speakers and vacuum tube receivers, are functioning in listeners' homes and millions more are planned in the next few years. Listeners pay a small listener tax.

Until 1930, soap was not within reach of the average man because of its high cost. But in that year the cost came down when a French scientist discovered soda could be made from common salt, and his research made soap available to the average man.

Cold storage is an aid to insect control. Insects that damage dried fruit are dormant at 32 to 40 degrees F., according to USDA entomologists.

GOP Dark Horses Have Good Chance

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The chance of a dark horse winning the Republican presidential nomination is better than usual this year. Generally, the Republican nominee has been an outstanding pre-convention favorite. In 14 out of 23 Republican conventions the nominee was chosen on the first ballot. However, the hot contest this Spring between Active Candidates Dewey, Stassen, and Taft increases the nomination prospects for compromise, or dark horse, candidates.

That's because a close race between two or three leading candidates often develops into a convention deadlock, one of them being able in several ballots to muster a required majority of the delegates' votes. That's where the compromise candidate comes in. There will be 1948 delegates at the Republican convention which opens in Philadelphia June 21. To win the presidential nomination, a candidate must receive at least 848 votes.

Along with Dewey, Stassen and Taft, four so-called "receptive" candidates have been named on most presidential-prospect lists. They are Senator Vandenberg, General MacArthur, Speaker Joseph Martin and Governor Earl Warren of California.

Higher Rating

Supporters of Vandenberg and MacArthur contend their favorites deserve a higher rating than that of dark horse. What is a dark horse? The traditional definition is a comparative "unknown" or long-shot possibility who is given a last-minute boom for the nomination in order to break a prolonged deadlock among major contenders. This year, however, the term dark horse has been used to describe all of the presidential prospects except active candidates Taft, Dewey, and Stassen. Vandenberg, MacArthur, Warren and Martin have been called dark horses, along with "favorite sons" of various states.

Among the favorite sons are Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois, Sen. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey, Sen. Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut and B. Carroll Reece, of Tennessee, chairman of the Republican national committee. They will receive the votes of the delegates from their states on the first ballot at least. Vandenberg is Michigan's favorite son and Warren has the backing of California.

Greeks About 2,355 Years Ahead Of U. S. In Hiring Soldiers

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Greeks were about 2,355 years ahead of us. Back in 407 B. C., when things were getting tough, the city state of Athens let the slaves enlist in the army with the promise of making them citizens.

The U. S. Senate, working on a draft law, has voted to let 25,000 anti-Communist aliens enlist in the U. S. Armed Forces with the promise of making them American citizens after five years' service.

History is full of the story of nations hiring aliens to fight for them. Here in the Civil War men could escape the draft by hiring substitutes.

Lodge Explains Plan

Senator Lodge, Massachusetts Republican, offered the alien volunteers idea to the Senate which accepted it, but not without some protest.

Lodge said that every alien—such as anti-Communist Poles and Czechs in Europe—who enlisted, would mean one less American to be drafted.

A soldier hired to fight for a country which is not his own country is called a "mercenary." Lodge said the 25,000 aliens he has in mind should not be called mercenaries.

But Senator Holland, Florida Democrat, said this country just the same would be accused of doing that, hiring mercenaries.

And Senator Gurney, South Dakota Republican, fighting Lodge's idea, said:

"Many people feel that such a move would subject our nation to the criticism that our own people are not willing to bear arms in the defense of the nation."

Women Boo Longer Skirts For Daytime

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Seven thousand women here for the 33rd annual convention of Kiwanis International gave vent to an overwhelming "boo" when a fashion expert asked them if they wanted long skirts for daytime wear.

The women, answering questions put by Kira Metts, chairman of the California Fashion industry's advisory committee, said they wanted no skirts for daytime wear below 13 inches from the floor.

Nobody Loves Forever

By Margaretta Brucker

XXVII

JESSICA went to the kitchen and put on the coffee pot. A step on the porch sent her rushing back to the front door.

Doris, in pajamas, with a man's coat bundled about her, her auburn hair wet and disheveled, "Lord, what a wind," she cried. "Bill's gone. He went downtown to see what happened. A man came along and told him it was in one of those old hotels on Main Street."

"I'm afraid Mrs. Blake is at the fire," said Jessica, measuring coffee. "I thought she might come home wet through."

"I could drink a cup of coffee," said Doris. "Where's Lucy?"

"Gone off on a Y hike, I think. You're not sure?"

Jessica looked at her. "Why do you say that?"

Doris shrugged. "No reason. I just wondered. Thought she might help find her mother."

She gulped down a cup of coffee and a little later went off, promising to return if she heard anything further about the fire.

Jessica could not understand the panic which sent her back and forth from the kitchen to the living room windows after Doris left, the apprehension which grew as the minutes passed, the relief when she heard a car stop outside the house. Someone had brought Mrs. Blake home.

She ran out to the hall, flung open the front door and saw a man mount the steps.

"People named Blake live here?" the man asked.

Jessica nodded. Her anxious glance traveled past him to the car at the curb. He said bluntly, "Got a woman out there in the car. We identified her by a letter in her purse. Why should an old woman visit a fire? She acts like she's had a fit or something."

He went down the steps and came back carrying a limp figure. "Where'll I put her, miss?"

Jessica found her voice. "In here." She led him into the living room and he put Mrs. Blake down on the sofa. "You're in a fix, for I don't know where you'll get a doctor," he said. "Everyone's at the fire. It's something awful down there. Regular inferno."

"Thanks for bringing her home," Jessica murmured.

"Don't mention it. I think she'll come out of it after a while. Better call someone to help you."

HE left her alone with Mrs. Blake, lying queer and still, her face ghastly pale where it wasn't streaked with smoke. Her hands were livid with burns and her gray hair wet and wispy about her shoulders.

She's lost her mind, thought Jessica wildly. What shall I do?

Doris would call Doris. Doris came and brought her husband with her. Bill was a heavy-set man with thick black eyebrows and a shrewd red face. "Looks like she's had a stroke," he told Jessica. "I'll try to find a doctor."

He left. It was a half-hour before he returned, but he brought a doctor with him.

The doctor wore no hat. He had a cut on one cheek, and his clothes smelled of smoke. He hurriedly examined the woman on the sofa.

"Shock," he said. "Might be a stroke. She may be like this for hours, maybe longer. I'll try to call again in an hour or two. Just watch her. How did she happen to be at the fire? He lifted one scuffed hand gently.

"She's a firebug," said Doris bluntly. "She never misses a fire. But this looks as though she rushed right into it."

"Hard to keep people back," said the doctor.

After he left, Doris said, "Bill was there. He said it was awful. A lot of people were trapped and the elevator jammed."

"The men who take girls to those dumps are heels," said Doris' husband. "They sneaked out and saved themselves and left the girls to get out alone. There are a couple of bad cases. One died while they were bringing her out and a couple more are unidentified."

Jessica said, "I can't imagine—Doris exchanged a glance with her husband. "Bill's leave is up tomorrow," she said. "We've got to go."

JESSICA went to the door with them, then returned to the living room to watch beside her mother-in-law. One hour passed... two... soon the doctor would return. Once she thought she heard the siren again. A few cars passed.

It was very still in the house, a horrid stillness which wrapped the room where she sat, tense and rigid, listening for the doctor.

Then she heard a car far down the street. She was on her feet and at the door, gazing at the approaching headlights as they came nearer.

She was weak with relief when the car stopped.

"Doctor," she cried, and left the hall and went out on the porch. "Oh, I'm so glad..."

Her voice died away.

The car was a taxi. The doctor had come in his own car before. She watched a man swing out of the car and pause for a moment in the shadow of the trees which lined the sidewalk. She waited, feeling an odd sense of panic as he emerged from the shadow and came directly up the front walk toward her. She gave a little gasp as a shaft of light from the open hall door fell upon the tall, advancing figure.

He wasn't the doctor. She felt her knees weak as water beneath her and the blood pounding dizzily in her reeling head as she retreated, one step at a time, toward the hall behind her.

It can't be, she thought wildly. It can't be!

The man spoke her name. "Jess!"

She could not answer but only stared blankly at Tom Blake as he strode through the door toward her.

McKenney on Bridge

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY
America's Card Authority

In tournament bridge it is not permitted to waive a penalty, such as leading out of turn or revoking; it is required that the tournament director be called because of the effect that the offense may have on the balance of the field.

In today's hand South was using the two demand bid which required his partner to show ace. Therefore, North's three club bid simply showed the ace of clubs. The three heart bid by South was an asking bid, and North's response showed the king of hearts. So all South had to do was to bid seven spades.

At this point East led the king of diamonds out of turn. The tournament director called, and he explained the rule. The king of diamonds could be treated as a penalty card, which meant that it would have to be left face up on the table and East would be required to play it at his first opportunity.

Or else the declarer could concede the lead, in which case he would stand. South's hand would become the dummy and North would have to play the contract. The third option, and the one commonly employed, is for declarer to tell the offender to pick up the card led out of turn and call for the lead of a specific suit.

New Bedford's Junior Craftsmen Typify Growing Youth Achievement Corporations

Minding their own business—Four members of the Wamsco Woodcraft Co., a Junior Achievement firm of New Bedford High School students sponsored by a textile plant, make sewing kits which they sell, later dividing profits by paying dividends on the stock of their miniature corporation. Left to right: Robert Reynolds, Frank Lauro, Paul Gosselin, Daniel Goodman.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—(NEA)—Thirteen teen-agers from New Bedford High School got together and formed Junior Craftsmen, Inc., when school began last Fall. Among themselves, and to their parents, they hold 208 shares of stock at 50 cents each. Every youngster had to buy one share; none was permitted to buy more than five shares. Last month Junior Craftsmen, Inc., was dissolved.

Pitcairn Finds Moving School Is Headache

AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND—(AP)—Pitcairn Island's first school teacher is having a headache getting his prefabricated schoolhouse to the island. Meanwhile descendants of the Bounty who waited 150 years for a school will just have to be patient.

New Zealander A. W. Moverley, under contract to the British Colonial Service, left New Zealand in March for Pitcairn, via Suva, Fiji, to set up the first school for the islanders. With him went his wife and daughter.

They are still in Fiji. He wrote a friend in Auckland: "The overhauling of the ship is causing delay. The loading of the buildings, furniture and equipment will take time. Then we have 3000 miles of difficult navigation, followed by the headaches of landing everything on a dangerous beach, lifting it up a 300 ft. cliff, and finding a school site where the grade will not exceed one in six on this precipitous island."

Moverley has three Indian builders from Fiji with him and labour for building the school will be found on Pitcairn. The work is expected to occupy several months once the site is found.

Next Fall, soon after school's reopening, another group of similar size will "re-incorporate" Junior Craftsmen, and go on making the popular maple novelty lamps, like an old-fashioned New England pump with the handle as a switch, that one corporation after another, under the same name, has produced.

Junior Craftsmen, Inc., is one of 19 New Bedford "corporations" organized and supervised by Junior Achievement, Inc., which has about 1000 such groups in 14 states from Massachusetts to Houston in the West and Atlanta in the South.

Each is a small-scale business concern. It is organized exactly as though it were a full-size manufacturing enterprise. It has its own officers, makes and markets its own product. Usually it is sponsored by an adult industry whose officers help the teen-agers with their problems.

Sponsored And Helped Junior Craftsmen is sponsored and helped by the Hathaway Manufacturing Company. Another local textile concern, Wamsutta Mills, sponsors Wamsco Woodcraft Company, which makes cloth-covered sewing kit boards. The New Bedford Standard-Times backs a juvenile printed newspaper published by 11 girls and eight boys between the ages of 15 and 18 years.

The stockholders are mostly high school juniors and seniors. Each year, when the company is dissolved, the seniors are out for good, but most of the under-class members are so enthusiastic that they show up next Fall to help found a new corporation.

A few are children of business or professional parents, but most come from the families of skilled or semi-skilled workers. From the Junior Achievement companies, they get a chance to learn something their parents never knew—how a business is operated from the management side.

The movement, with headquarters in New York, has become national only since the war. Before that it was confined largely to New England, where it started.

Its father was the now late Horace A. Moses, who grew up on a farm and became chairman of the Board of the Strathmore Paper Company, of Springfield, Mass. Moses was familiar with the work done by the 4-H Clubs for farm children. There was nothing of the kind for city boys and girls. AT and T President

In 1919 he interested Thomas L. Yall, then president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, who came from a Vermont farm, and Senator W. Murray Crane, another paper manufacturer. Seven years later, after Crane's death, the first Junior Achievement company was organized.

Each company's operations are financed out of the proceeds of its stock sales. From its raw materials are bought. With the advice of their adult sponsors, the youngsters decide on out-of-school working hours and on wage scales. As they begin producing finished goods, they map out house-to-house sales campaigns.

Their incorporation is strictly extra-legal—a training fiction, in which the quarter comes from the national headquarters. Otherwise everything is strictly on the level. Each company has its own board of directors, issues stock certificates, holds dividend-declaring corporate meetings. It pays nominal rent, light, heat and wages.

Most companies, here and elsewhere, make money. The stockholders can do what they choose with their profits when they break up in June. One New Bedford group declared handsome dividends and still had enough profit left to make a nice donation to the local hospital drive. If they are among the minority who lose money, it is up to them what to do about that.
