Drop-Back Order Issued In Defense Of China Capital

By HAROLD K. MILKS

NANKING —(P)— The critical battle for Central China appeared Monday to be shifting from Suchow to the very approaches of this Chinese capital.

It was confirmed officially that the estimated 250,000 Nationalist troops at Suchow, defense bastion for Nanking, have been ordered to withdraw southward to engage the main Chinese Communist forces.

The outcome of the entire battle for Nanking may depend on the ability of the Suchow garrison to make the withdrawal. The Reds are concentrating in the areas of

New England Home Setting For 'Late Christopher Bean

Belated recognition of an artist's talent several years after his death. and the resulting scramble for his paintings which had been considered of no value, is the theme of Late Christopher Bean," The which the Midland Community Theater will present Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights in the City-

County Auditorium. The single stage setting is in the home of a doctor in a small New England town. Doctor Haggett, played by Dick Connally, had attended Chris Bean in his last illness and was given a number of pictures by the artist, who was unable to pay his bill.

All the family had considered the pictures "perfectly terrible" and when New York art circles suddenly discovered Bean's work and started looking for more of his paintings, the Haggetts found that some of their collection had been placed in the attic, some in the barn, some given away, and some admittedly put on a bonfire.

'Neutral' Nations Get Lesson

The latest Soviet veto has accomplished at least one useful purpose. It has shown the so-called "neutral" governments in the UN, and particularly the six whose representatives framed the compromise resolution on Berlin, just what the United States has been up against in dealing with Russia.

This is cold comfort, perhaps. But since Russia has seemed to set some slight store by favorable world opinion, the effect of Vishinsky's veto on that opinion cannot be dismissed as entirely unimportant.

The neutral resolution was a conciliatory document, and at the same time practical. Its authors had bent over backward to avoid condemning the Soviet Union for the blockade. It offered a face-saving exit from the stubborn crisis. It gave to Russia, as America's Dr. Jessup pointed out, what she claimed to want—the Soviet-zone mark as the sole Berlin currency, a foreign ministers' conference on Berlin and Germany, and other concessions.

Some of the neutrals had considered the attitude of the United States and Britain toward Russia too hostile. They apparently thought that the Western Powers had not used all the available diplomatic approaches in trying to settle other differences with the Soviets. It may be assumed that the mild and reasonable Berlin resolution was an example of how they thought the job should be done.

But the result was the same. Russia would not lift the blockade. On the surface, the reason for refusal was petty. But it must be clear now to all the UN members during this time in getting acquain- shocking visitors who expected granthat the Soviets do not want settlement.

They obviously do not want it until they have tried was a stranger to the one I knew harder to drive the three western nations out of Berlin.

The Kremlin has its bets down on all these possibilities. It is gambling on the chance that it can win all those for troops on leave; London was bets and then settle with the losers on its own terms.

Last August I published a series of six articles on the book entitled "The Point-Count System of Bidding in Centract Bridge" by Fred L. Karpin of Washington, D. C. The publishers are the Kaufman Press of Washington. The book has caused a great deal of comment, and I have received a dozen or more manuscripts from other authors who either have written or are planning to write a book on the point-count system, which, briefly, values an ace four points, a king three, a queen two and a jack one.

In the August ssue of "The Bridge World," A Moyse, Jr., publisher and editor of the magazine, rote an article entitled "Why I Dislike the 4-3-2-1 Count." Mr. Moyse says he has never maintained that "the honor-trick table

Thousands Atlend
Dedication Event
At Midland Airpark

throughout the Permian Basin thronged Midland Airpark Sunday afternoon and shivered in near-freezing weather to see one of the most spectacular air shows ever staged in the Southwest. The latest types of military aircraft went through special performances and stunt flyers presented a full schedule of daring acts. The air show was held in connection with the dedication of Midland Airpark.

dedication of Midland Airpark.

Mayor Pro Tem R. I. Dickey delivered a short dedication address.

Bruce Cabot, Hollywood movie star, and guest at the dedication, was introduced by Master of Ceremonies
Bud Huddleston. Cabot spoke brief-

Irby Dyer, commander of the Midland post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and J. J. Jackson of Big Spring, CAA official, also spoke.

A giant B-36 from Consolidated Aircraft Corporation in Fort Worth made low altitude runs over the field as Col. Robert L. Scott, famous Air Force flyer, described the construction and capabilities of the craft over the public address system.

Formation Acrobatics An Army Air Porce, acrobatic team of four F-80's flown by Captain Howard Jensen, Captain Walter Selenger, Captain Ben P. Yeargin and Lieutenant Michael Smolen presented an amazing demonstration of formation acrobatics at speeds in excess of 500 miles per hour in the jet-propelled planes. Herb "Mad Man" Page, Hollywood stunt flyer, thrilled the crowd with his low altitude stunt runs, a demonstration of the "rocket takeoff," and the landing of a plane on "the world's smallest airport" atop speeding automobile.

Ralph Jackson did a series of low altitude stunts in a gag "radio control" flying act, and Beaumont Cooley of Odessa did an acrobatic routine in a specially designed glider.

The Aeronica Chief, flying on five to six gallons of gasoline in a "guessing game," stayed in the air one hour, 24 minutes and 10 seconds, and Buddy Calcote of Rankin was declared the probable winner.

The dedication and air show was sponsored by the Midland Veterans of Foreign Wars post.
