ALL WASN'T WELL WITH THE NATIONALISTS

China Papers Released; Chiang Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Documents voicing criticism of the war effort of Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek are among the long secret China papers of 1945 released by the State Department.

The 901-page collection also includes a 1943 report to President
Franklin D. Roosevelt by Maj.
Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, who had gone on a special mission to China

where he talked with Chiang and U.S. and Chinese military leaders.
Officials said publication of the World War II papers was held up for at least five years because their release might prove offensive to Chiang, now on Formosa.
Although there was no immediate official comment from Formosa on the papers, made public Tuesday night, some Chinese Nationalists questioned the wisdom of the publication.
Prominent Chinese newsmen in

Taipei said they thought it unwise to release the papers at a time when the Chinese Nationalists are talking of a comeback against Communist China.

U.S. Ambassador Everett F.
Drumright has resigned and returned home from Formosa for undisclosed reasons, but presumably due to opposition to release of the papers.

Hurley's report said that on the whole, Chiang and the Chinese people favor democracy and would follow Roosevelt's leadership. But, he said, the Chinese central government gave importance to "conserving its strength for maintenance of its postwar internal supremacy as against the more immediate objective of defeating Japan."

Hurley was mentioned during hearings of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis., when it was charged that the State Department and some of its representatives in China during World War II had been responsible for withholding aid and handing China over to the Communists.

In August 1944, Hurley became Roosevelt's personal representative in China and in December of that year he became U.S. ambassador there.

Chiang's policies were criticized directly by John Patton Davies
Jr., a diplomat fired by the late

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles in 1954 on grounds that he lacked "judgment, discretion and reliability."

Davies, who said on his dismissal that he would be "content to let history be my judge," told U.S. Ambassador to China Clarence E. Gauss in a March 9, 1943, memorandum:

"China's policy is to remain technically in the war so as to be able to sit at the peace table as a 'fighting' ally, to expend as little of its strength as possible and to rely on other members of the United Nations — to defeat Japan."

George Atcheson, in charge of the U.S. Embassy in Chungking
during the absence of Ambassador Gauss, warned in August 1943
that the possibility of some kind of compromise between China and Japan could not be completely disregarded.

He said this was "because of anti-Western bias of the generalissimo, Madame Chiang and a widespread suspicion in Chinese government circles that Great Britain will not, after the crushing of Germany, devote her naval and other resources wholeheartedly
to the defeat of Japan, thus making a compromise peace between the Anglo-American allies and Japan probable."

Still A Problem

Dr. James M. Schless, director of Texas Tuberculosis hospitals, addressed a joint meeting of the Howard County Tuberculosis Association and the Permian Basin Medical Society Tuesday night at Coker's Restaurant. He pointed out problem areas in efforts to overcome the disease and ways the medical profession and lay persons can help. Shown at left are Dr. Preston E. Harrison, superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital, who was host for Dr. Schless, and Mrs. Harrison.

Dangers In TB Treatment Cited

Tuberculosis is not yet conquered and treating the disease
as if it were is asking for disaster, according to Dr. James M.
Schless, medical director of Tuberculosis hospitals for the Texas Hospital System.

"A belief throughout the nation
that we have whipped tuberculosis has often resulted in inadequate treatment," he said. "This kills organisms sensitive to drugs
being used, but it leaves resistant strains alive."

Dr. Schless spoke Tuesday night
at a joint meeting of the Howard County Tuberculosis Association
and the Permian Basin Medical Society. He arrived from Austin
by plane about 1:30 p.m.

Dr. Schless has been director of TB hospitals in Texas since July, 1960. Before that he was in private practice at Denver since 1948. He is a graduate of the State University of New York College of Medicine.

45 PRESENT
Some 45 persons were present
at the dinner at Coker's Restaurant. After the joint meeting, the two groups separated for business meetings.

"We are already beginning to see the results of complacency toward the disease," Dr. Schless said Tuesday. "Persons who have never received treatment are turning up with tuberculosis which is drug resistant."

He urged a revitalized interest
in treatment and renewed efforts in detection. The disease can easily be detected in the initial stages and treatment can be done before hospitalization is required.

In this area, he told the physicians that they could and should make tuberculin tests a part of their routine office procedure.

Local tuberculosis associations need to be active, he said. It is these volunteer workers who are needed to goad the public into an awareness of the problem and into doing something about it.

The tuberculin test on a large scale is an effective means of uncovering the disease, Dr. Schless said. Thorough follow-up of contacts made by known tuberculars can then lead to others who may carry the disease.

He pointed out a check made by a State Tuberculosis Hospital a few years ago to show how effective this can be. A contact study was made on 110 tubercular patients. There were 1,650 tuberculin tests made and 596 of them turned out positive. Of the 596, 50 were shown to have active tuberculosis.

Texas has peculiar problems in its treatment of the disease, he said. The Texas-Mexico border allows persons coming into the state
to bring the disease with them.
Many sparsely settled counties
have little or no medical facilities.

Berlin Issue Adds Urgency To Disarmament Parley

Niki Agrees With JFK's Space Unity

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev sent a message today to President Kennedy agreeing to cooperate in exploring space.

He said immediate cooperation
was possible in the use of artificial satellites for long distance communication.

Further he proposed close cooperation in the use of space ships
in weather forecasting.

The message was read over Moscow Radio.

Kennedy had proposed to Khrushchev that the two powers
cooperate in various space programs such as communications,
the tracking of satellites, weather
research and the measuring of the earth's magnetic field.

The Soviet premier said it was "desirable to have an international agreement" to bring closer cooperation in use of space ships and particularly in giving greater security to astronauts.

Khrushchev suggested the two nations get together in launching observation rockets to the moon
and planets.

His letter said all countries
should have equal opportunities for space exploration. Therefore,
the Soviet government suggested a series of joint research ventures including:

1. Use of artificial earth satellites for a long distance communications system.

2. Organization of a worldwide weather observation service using satellites.

3. Organization of observations, both radio and optical, under a joint program of objects launched in the direction of the moon, Mars,
and planets.

4. Pooling of efforts in the study of the physics of interplanetary
space and celestial bodies.

His letter replied to the President's letter of March 7 calling for space cooperation.

Khrushchev said Soviet representatives in the U.N. space committee would be instructed to meet the U.S. representatives "to discuss practical problems of telecommunications in exploration and peaceful uses of outer space."

Khrushchev went on to express satisfaction that his own proposals for space cooperation made in February "met the necessary understanding on the part of the United States government."

Actually, the Soviet Union had already told the U.N. Committee on Peaceful Uses of Outer Space
it would help set up an international communication system using artificial satellites.

This assurance by Soviet Delegate Platon D. Morozov was made in New York Tuesday.

morozov told the 28-nation committee Soviet scientists believe space research had reached the stage where artificial satellites
can be used for telecommunications
and that the scientists would take part in preparing technical projects along that line.

Morozov also urged international agreement on giving aid to astronauts who might make forced landings on foreign soil. He also asked that legal agreements be concluded for return of artificial satellites that might come down
on the territory of another state.

Khrushchev's letter, however,
made it clear that the key to agreement on space cooperation
would be the conclusion of a disarmament treaty.

"At the same time it is clear to me that the scale of our cooperation in the peaceful mastery of space as well as the choice of direction of such cooperation would appear to be possibly to a certain degree connected with the solution of the disarmament
problem," Khrushchev wrote.

identified themselves as officers

tion appeared at French gendarmerie headquarters late Tuesday night to talk about keeping peace
and common action against the European extremists of the Secret
Army Organization.

French officials said that more blood had been shed in the 36 hours following the cease-fire than in any similar period in the past five months of intense terrorism.

While terrorism, blamed largely on the European Secret Army Organization, took its toll in the big coastal cities, nervous French troops in at least half a dozen villages in the interior fired on Moslem crowds displaying the green and white rebel flag.

The army charged that the Moslems tried to attack European settlements, and fired on the troops first.

had been no reports of clashes
between French units and Moslems anywhere in the North African territory.

The army said "localized efferevance" of Moslem crowds continued in a number of villages but that "all demonstrations are being handled peacefully."

SHARP CONTRAST
The announcement was in sharp contrast to the bloody 36 hours
following Monday's cease-fire
proclamation in which at least 70
Moslems were killed and nearly 150 were wounded by the gunfire of French troops and European extremists.

Algerian guerrilla commanders
made their first formal contact since the cease-fire with the French army and staff officers
said the meetings were "correct, dignified and even cordial."

Syria, Israel Tangle Again In Air Battle

JERUSALEM (AP)—Syrian and Israeli warplanes clashed today
and a Syrian spokesman said one Israeli fighter fled from a dog fight in flames.

Each nation accused the other of violating its air space in this followup to hostilities launched in an eight-hour battle in the Sea of Galilee area Saturday.

An Israeli military spokesman said Syrian planes penetrated Israel's air space for the second day in a row, but were driven off
by Israeli fighters.

A Syrian spokesman charged that four Israeli planes flew into Syrian territory, where they were intercepted by fighters of that Arab nation.

"Our planes quickly went up against them and scored a hit on one of the Israeli aircraft," he said. "This Israeli plane was seen in flames returning to Palestinian territory."

The Syrians use Russian-made MiG-17s. The Israeli fighters are French Mystere jets.

A dispatch from Damascus said
unusual air activity was noted
over that Syrian capital this morning, with MiG fighters flashing through the sky. Damascus is little more than 40 miles from the frontier.

Israel filed another complaint
with the U.N. Syrian-Israeli armistice commission. Foreign Minister Golda Meir was reported to have asked Michael Comay, head of the Israeli U.N. delegation in New York, to request an early meeting of the Security Council to discuss Israel's earlier call for a debate on "Syrian acts and threats of aggression."

The Security Council is expected to meet next week to take up Syria's similar charges against Israel.

Donna To Face Illinois Trial For Murder

It is possible that Donna Marie Stone, 14, will be on her way to Illinois within the next week.

Sheriff Daniel F. Ringer, Belleville, Ill., told Chief Deputy Fern Cox of Howard County Tuesday afternoon that he would send officers for Donna Marie soon. The St. Clair County officer told Cox
he would advise him Wednesday or Thursday exactly when the Illinois officers would leave for Big Spring.

Cox had called Belleville to tell Ringer that the girl, who is under a double murder indictment in that city, is ready to be taken to Illinois.

Some weeks ago, St. Clair County filed a request to extradite the girl. At that time, Gil Jones, Howard County district attorney, was preparing to try her 33-year-old boy friend, John Edwin Myers, for the murder of a hitchhiker near here. Jones wanted to keep the girl, who had been Myers' companion at the time of the murder,
as a possible state witness.

Myers was convicted of the crime in a trial at Rusk last week
and is facing death in the electric chair. Donna Marie has been returned here from Rusk and is in the juvenile ward in the county jail. She was not called as a witness in the trial of Myers.

She has said she wants to go home. Her family lives in Chicago and her grandparents in a town a short distance from Belleville.

Gromyko Calls East German Top Diplomat To Geneva

GENEVA (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko summoned Communist East Germany's top diplomat to Geneva today for consultation. This step gave fresh urgency to East-West talks on Berlin against the background of the 17-nation disarmament conference.

The conference itself addressed
a special bid to France to abandon its boycott of the Geneva meeting and send a delegate to fill the empty 18th chair. There was no indication that President de Gaulle would heed the appeal. He considered the meeting useless.

On another front, disarmament
experts of the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union resumed
three-power discussions of a nuclear weapons test ban. Informants said they failed to make any dent in the East-West deadlock over provisions for inspection to police the ban. They did agree to meet again Thursday.

PRESSURE UP
Pressure mounted among the uncommitted nations for a moratorium on nuclear weapons tests
before the United States resumes testing in the atmosphere next month.

From Moscow, meanwhile,
came word that Premier Khrushchev had sent a message to President Kennedy agreeing to discuss international cooperation in exploring outer space.

East German Foreign Minister
Lothar Bolz was expected here late today or tonight to consult with Gromyko. He would have come earlier, Communist informants said, but for some reason Switzerland was slow in issuing

the necessary visas. Gromyko protested to the Swiss.

Western officials were closely watching the outbreak of Soviet activity, which seems to have begun with new instructions to Gromyko from Moscow Monday. On that day Gromyko asked Secretary of State Dean Rusk to a brief talk and reportedly gave him a
"working paper" of various views
on Berlin crisis issues.

AT DINNER
Gromyko entertained Rusk and a panel of Berlin policy experts at dinner Tuesday night. They talked for more than three hours. Later word circulated in Western quarters that the Russians had not come up with any new ideas or hints of concessions.

Concerning a moratorium, Foreign Ministers Mahmoud Fawal
of the United Arab Republic, Ketema Yifru of Ethiopia and U Th-Han of Burma joined in Menon's demand for an unpolluted agreement to suspend test plans while the big powers negotiate.

The United States so far has been firm in its determination to go ahead with the April series of tests in the atmosphere unless the Soviet Union agrees to a test ban treaty with provision for adequate inspection to prevent cheating.

NEUTRAL STATIONS
Menon suggested Tuesday that nuclear test detection stations be set up in nonaligned countries.

Prime Minister Nehru explained
in New Delhi that such an arrangement would make it "more certain" that nuclear weapon tests would be discovered because the stations would be nearer the test areas.

The conference at its plenary session today called on France to reconsider and attend the Geneva disarmament talks. The resolution presented by Menon asked the conference co-chairmen, the United States and Russia, to pass along the request to French President de Gaulle.

De Gaulle refused to send French delegates to the conference, saying worthwhile disarmament
negotiations could be carried on only by the four powers that have nuclear weapons—the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union. He said it was a waste of time to negotiate with 14
non-nuclear powers cluttering up the proceedings.

SUMMARIES
Rusk and Gromyko reportedly exchanged summaries of the U.S.
and Soviet policies toward Berlin
in their meeting Tuesday night at Gromyko's villa. The two were expected to continue Berlin discussions at least until early next week, when Rusk leaves the 17-nation disarmament conference
here and returns to Washington.

Western diplomats reported no
solid basis so far for optimism
about any East-West agreement—or even tacit understanding—on the Berlin dispute. But they were cautiously encouraged by the fact that Gromyko, apparently on orders from Moscow, had initiated
the new Berlin discussions.

A&M Club Has State Hospital Patients As Guests For Dinner

Members of the Texas A & M
Club had the Big Spring State Hospital patients "out to dinner"
Tuesday evening, continuing a custom which began more than a year ago.

Over 300 patients (some are on a special diet and could not participate) enjoyed a chili supper
served by the club.

Most patients came to the central dining room where they were urged to eat their fill, but for those who could not leave the wards, club members fixed large trays of the chili and trimmings

to serve.

More than a year ago the club served its first meal when it had a wild game dinner supplied from the lockers of Aggies and friends.
Since then there have been other servings with the menu being varied.

Tuesday's hospitality required 400 pounds of chili, 100 pounds of dry weight beans, four crates of lettuce, 80 loaves of bread, 48 pounds of crackers, 8 gallons of sliced pickles and other foods.

About 15 members did the actual serving.

Money for such projects is raised by the club members. So far as can be determined, this is the only such undertaking by a former student group in the county.

Ralph Hughes is president of the club and Don Newsom is chairman of the foods committee.

Club Leading In C-C Contest

Members of the Contact Club of the Chamber of Commerce lead the board of directors by a good margin in the contest to bring in new memberships and make others current.

They have six new memberships and 19 delinquent memberships to their credit. The board of directors has turned in only one delinquent membership to date.

The contest is for March, with the losers paying for steaks.

David Read has earned a red coat and admittance into the Ambassador's Club of the Contact Club by selling more than five memberships during the current drive. He has added seven delinquents, each counting one-half member, and three new members to earn his coat.

Membership in the Chamber now stands at 764, an all-time high.

RIVERS OF LIVING WATER

By A Christian Writer

"... Jesus stood and cried, saying, 'If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.' (Jno. 7:37-38) This living water is the indwelling Spirit, the Comforter, the helper of our infirmities (Jno. 7:39; Jno. 14:16; Rom. 8:26). This water is figurative, representing the Holy Spirit within. This water is received after (not before) we become children of God ('because ye are sons,' Gal. 4:6). There is another water that comes before we are sons of God. It is a part of the new birth (Jno. 3:5). It is literal water. It is baptism. Baptism comes before the new life (Rom. 6:3, 4). When one believes in Christ, repents of sins, confesses Him and is baptized 'for the remission of sins,' Christ gives him 'living water' which is His presence through the Holy Spirit (Rom. 10:9; Acts 2:38). Now in progress: Wednesday night lecture series. Speaker this Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., Austin Nibbel, from Midland, Tex. Subject: 'Christianity, the Religion of the Individual.' You are always welcome at the Church of Christ, 200 West Highway 30, T. H. Tackett, preacher (no Australian preaching mission 'til May 15). Box 1363—adv.

Misunderstanding Evident In Nixon Blast Against JFK

WASHINGTON (AP)—Allen W. Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, says Richard M. Nixon was in error when he charged that President Kennedy had been briefed during the 1960 campaign on Cuban invasion preparations.

Dulles said, however, he believed the charge contained in Nixon's new book, "Six Crises," was the result of "an honest misunderstanding."

Nixon contended Kennedy had been told the CIA was helping to train Cuban rebels for an invasion and had jeopardized the plan in campaign oratory.

The White House denied this Tuesday, saying Kennedy knew nothing of the invasion preparations until after he was elected and that Nixon's account is apparently based on a misunderstanding.

BROAD REVIEW
White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said Dulles had briefed Kennedy during the presidential race but that the briefings consisted mainly of a broad review of the world situation.

In a memorandum Dulles said, "There has been here, I believe, an honest misunderstanding. This was probably due to the nature of the message Mr. Nixon writes he received as to these briefings. The Cuban situation was, of course, dealt with in the briefings I gave Sen. Kennedy."

"My briefings were intelligence briefings on the world situation. They did not cover our own government's plans or programs for action, overt or covert."

In Los Angeles, Nixon's office said it had no comment on the Dulles or White House statements.

Nixon, who now is a member of a Los Angeles law firm, is seeking the Republican nomination for governor of California.

IN TO DILEMMA
In his book, the former vice president said Kennedy had forced him into a dilemma on Cuba during the campaign. This was, he said, the only time during the race he got angry at his rival.

Kennedy, said Nixon, called for action to "strengthen the non-Batista democratic anti-Castro forces in exile and in Cuba itself who offer eventual hope of overthrowing Castro."

He did this, Nixon contended, after having been briefed about the training of Cuban exiles.

Nixon said that Kennedy's call for stronger action put him on the spot and forced him to take a public stand at variance with his actual views because "the operation had to be protected at all costs. I must not suggest even by implication that the United States was rendering aid to rebel forces in and out of Cuba. In fact, I must go to the other extreme; I must attack the Kennedy proposal to provide such aid as wrong and irresponsible because it would violate our treaty commitments."

DANGEROUS
He did just that, according to a transcript of the fourth Kennedy-Nixon television debate. He called Kennedy's Cuban proposals "probably the most dangerously irresponsible recommendations" of the campaign.

He said if the United States supported a Cuban invasion "we would lose all of our friends in Latin America, we would probably be condemned in the United Nations and we would not accomplish our objective."

He added: "It would be an open invitation to Mr. Khrushchev to come in, to come into Latin America and to engage us in what would be a civil war, and possibly even worse than that."

Salinger, in denying that Kennedy knew of plans for the invasion at the time of the campaign, read the following statement: "The President does not believe the intelligence briefings are a proper subject of public debate, but in the light of the account in

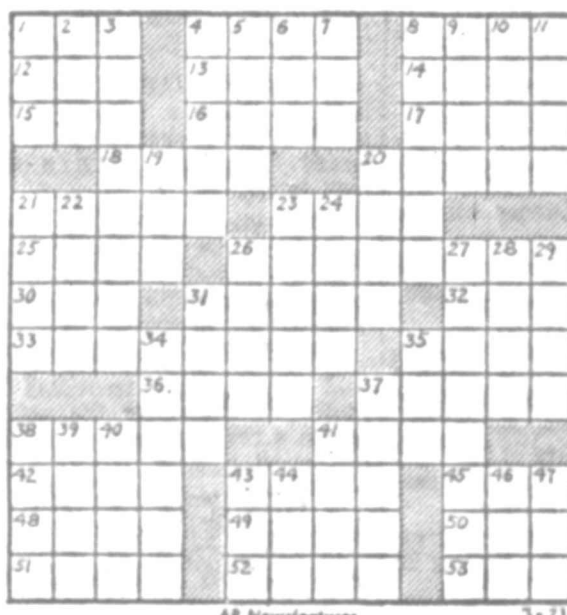

Mr. Nixon's book it is necessary to say that the then Sen. Kennedy was not told before the election of 1960 of the training of troops outside of Cuba or of any plans for 'supporting an invasion of Cuba.'"

"Mr. Nixon's account is apparently based on a misunderstanding," Sen. Kennedy received two briefings from Mr. Allen Dulles of the CIA, the first on July 23, 1960, and the second on Sept. 19, 1960. The two briefings covered an over-all review of the world situation during which Cuba was mentioned, but Sen. Kennedy was first informed of the operation to which Mr. Nixon refers in a briefing by Allen Dulles and Richard Bissell of the CIA given in Palm Beach, Fla., on Nov. 13, 1960."

Legal Noise Over Grace

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Hollywood press agents are beating the drums over the return of Grace Kelly. The din may be augmented by some legal noises.

When Alfred Hitchcock announced Grace would make a movie for him in August—her first since she married Prince Rainier of Monaco in 1956—MGM Studio found itself with a position to study.

"It is our position," said MGM, "that we still have a contract with Miss Kelly and we are studying this position now."

Miss Kelly walked out on an MGM contract when she married. The contract would have expired by 1960, but MGM put its royal runaway on suspension. MGM thinks the suspensions may have extended her obligations to the studio through this year.

New Methods For Finding Industry To Be Discussed

New methods being used in establishing industries will be the subject of the ninth annual West Texas Chamber of Commerce Industrial Workshop which will be held in San Angelo Thursday. The session will be held in the Cactus Hotel and begins at 9 a.m.

A highlight of the meeting will be a panel discussion of methods as established business can use to expand. The panel will consist of men representing three San Angelo business firms.

Persons interested in attending should contact Carroll Davidson, manager of the local Chamber. Transportation to the workshop will be arranged, Davidson said.

T.Sgt. Henry Retires At Webb

T. Sgt. Johnnie C. Henry, 3560th Air Base Group at Webb AFB, retires from the Air Force March 31 and the Georgia-born sergeant plans to settle down in Monroe, Louisiana.

Sgt. Henry joined the Army 22 years ago and was with the first wave of troops to land on Normandy on D-Day. He was wounded in Luxembourg late in 1944. His younger brother, Boyce, was killed fighting in France.

Henry served as a transportation supervisor in "Operation Crossroads" - the 1948 A-Bomb testing at Kwajalein. He came to Webb AFB in 1958 and is assigned to the Group's Transportation division.

The sergeant is married to the former Sara Beeson of Bridgeport, Texas and the couple has two children.

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Aeronaves de Mexico said today it will begin using DC8 jets on its flights to New York on June 15.

Dogs, Trash Rounded Up

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—For a long time, both stray dogs and trash had accumulated in sparsely populated sections along Gentilly Road in the eastern fringe of New Orleans.

Then a city official decided the debris should be removed. Nothing was said about the dogs.

Cleanup crews started their work. One of the dogs growled and snapped at the workers and finally nipped a policeman.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals sent a truck Tuesday to extend the hospitality of the SPCA pound to the dogs.

The idea didn't appeal to the mutts or to John Gould, 37, who lives in the section. Gould offered the dogs sanctuary in his small home and many accepted.

"You're interfering," police told Gould.

"You'll take these dogs over my dead body," shouted Gould. "Put me in jail instead of the dogs, if you want."

Patrolmen Merrill Koenig and Alex Vega decided to accommodate Gould. But they wanted the dogs, too. Fists started swinging. Gould went to jail. He was charged with keeping unlicensed dogs, interfering with police and assault on arresting officers.

Koenig went to a hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises below the right knee.

The dogs went to the SPCA shelter. And, finally, the trash got picked up.

Elephant Ride

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, right, is shown going for her first elephant ride in Jaipur, India. Sharing the high gold seat with the First Lady is her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill. The eight-foot tall elephant is painted and decorated and wears false wooden tusks to impress the public.

Jackie Ends India Tour, Now Heads For Pakistan

NEW DELHI (AP)—Jacqueline Kennedy left India for Pakistan today with the cheers of the public and the praise of officials ringing in her ears.

Prime Minister Nehru, Mrs. Kennedy's host, told a news conference the U.S. First Lady's nine-day visit to India had added greatly to the "psychological pull between the United States and India."

"She has been liked wherever she's gone, chiefly due to the charm of her personality," Nehru said.

India's ambassador to the United States, B. K. Nehru, said Mrs. Kennedy had "charmed everyone wherever she went." He said he had never expected the enormous crowds that turned out to cheer her, especially in out-of-the-way areas.

Indian officials said privately they hoped Mrs. Kennedy's visit had set the stage for a full state visit by President Kennedy.

The prime minister went to the airport for a final goodbye as Mrs. Kennedy and her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, left in a Pakistani four-motor turboprop airliner for Lahore.

During a 4 1/2-day stop in Pakistan Mrs. Kennedy will visit Lahore, Rawalpindi, the temporary capital of Pakistan; Peshawar and the Khyber Pass, and Karachi.

She leaves Karachi March 26 for London, to spend three days at Princess Radziwill's home before flying on to Washington. In London Mrs. Kennedy will lunch with Queen Elizabeth II.

Mrs. Kennedy exchanged farewell presents with Nehru Tuesday and at night attended a reception and dinner given by U.S. Ambassador John Kenneth Galbraith at the U.S. Embassy.

She gave Nehru a silver-framed photograph of herself and the President, signed by both and bearing a personal message from Mrs. Kennedy.

DEAR ABBY

Knock-Kneed And Foolish

DEAR ABBY: Now that skirts are being worn above the knees, I have a problem which I can no longer hide. I am knock-kneed. You have never seen such big, bony, ugly knock-knees! Someone told me that an orthopedic surgeon could do wonders for me. It would mean breaking both my legs and removing some of the bone and cartilage. I know it would be expensive and probably painful for a while, but I would do anything for a pair of nice-looking legs. I am no kid. I am 29.

DEAR KNOCK-KNEED: If I were to tell you about some of the youngsters I have seen this month in Easter Seal hospitals, who would "give anything for a pair of healthy limbs," you would blush with shame. Any attempts to improve your legs through surgery at your age would be risky and, in my opinion, foolish. Thank heavens you can walk! Wear your skirts longer.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widow for 9 years and have met a fine widower. He has been courting me for 3 years. I have no children and his are married. Would you kindly let me know if it is proper for him to pick me up at my home? My mother says I should meet him on the outside somewhere because I live alone and she is afraid people will talk if they see him in the hall or near my door. I am 41 years old.

DEAR QUESTION: Your friend should call for you at your door and see you to your door when he brings you home. I am all for girls listening to their mothers, but yours is way off the beam and at 41 you are no longer a girl.

DEAR ABBY: Could you please tell me what the superstitions are about moving? By this I mean, which days are lucky and which are unlucky for me? Someone once told me that because I was born in July under the sign of Cancer it was bad luck to move on a Tuesday. I also heard that if I didn't have a loaf of bread and a box of salt in my new home before I moved in I would have bad luck there. I would appreciate any information on this subject from you or anyone else who knows. Do you believe in superstitions?

DEAR SUPER: Many people have great faith in both superstitions and the horoscope. But not I. I touched wood only once, when I hit a tree. That brought me bad luck immediately.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for telling that young girl to let her boy friends pick her up at her own home and not to be ashamed because she lived in a "dump." My wife lived in such a dump when she was a girl. Her people were so poor they did not have enough to eat most of the time, but that didn't bother me. I took her away from all that. We have been married 30 years and she has made me a wonderful wife. Pure gold comes out of dirty sand.

Governor Candidates Keep Up Steady War Of Words

By The Associated Press

Rival candidates for governor kept up their steady war of words in the Texas political campaign Tuesday.

They talked about how much money is being spent on the race, past records and the length of time some have held public office, oil imports, education, the projected Padre Island park on the Gulf Coast and the United Nations.

Atty. Gen. Will Wilson, on a North Texas tour, asserted John Connally "is trying to buy the governor's office with a million-dollar campaign" and "he's going to find out that the people of Texas are not for sale."

Wilson said Gov. Price Daniel has claimed "the most economically operated state government... when the people of Texas are burdened with an $86 million debt because of Daniel's deficit spending, red ink government." The attorney general visited McKinney, Denton and Decatur.

Marshall Formby, back in Austin from a swing across West Texas, said Texans are weary of political bosses and he would "fight these political bosses to the bitter end."

Formby invited voters to examine his record as a county judge, state senator and highway commissioner before making a choice in the governor's race.

Don Yarborough, in Corpus Christi, proposed an expanded adult education program "to raise Texas' low per capita income" and had some sharp remarks about both Daniel and Connally.

He proceeded to Beeville, Victoria and Austin Wednesday.

A Padre Island study commission named by Daniel "is a scheme to disrupt the proposal for a national seashore area, Yarborough alleged. He accused Connally of teaming with Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., to restrict the length of the seashore park and "to delay action while land values skyrocket."

Speaking in El Paso, Connally said he was concerned over basic education in Texas schools and suggested more emphasis on foreign languages because trade is becoming "more and more a foreign matter."

He moved on to Houston Wednesday.

Connally predicted he would be elected in a runoff and "the incumbent third term governor will be in third place in the primary election May 5." He also called attention to the state deficit under Daniel's administration.

Daniel linked criticism of the State Department with the state's curtailed oil production in a talk before the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association in Houston, where he also opened a county campaign office.

"I think it is high time our State Department gave as much attention to the economy of the individual states as to the economy of foreign countries," the governor said, also warning that imports could hurt the livestock industry.

Edwin A. Walker told retail credit managers in Dallas there is a conspiracy to put all this country's fighting men and weapons under a United Nations command. He followed Connally to campaign Wednesday in El Paso.

"I have been accused of only talking on the national and international situations and also of having made my opponents the Kennedy administration and Lyndon Johnson," Walker said in his Dallas talk. "And if they would add (New York Gov.) Nelson Rockefeller, I'd be very happy."

Jack Cox, who seeks the Republican nomination for governor, again said Texans could start a national swing to the conservative banner by electing him. Campaigning at San Antonio and Kerrville, Cox said more people will vote in the Democrats' primary than the Republicans' but predicted enough would switch to the GOP for him to win in the general election.

"However, I want to emphasize that I hope for a large turnout in the Republican primary," Cox said, "and I urge every conservative to vote in that primary."

Republican Roy Whittenburg likewise was in Houston. He planned to spend two or three days organizing his campaign in that area.

Police Exams Set Thursday

Written examinations will be given Thursday, beginning at 8 a.m., to applicants for positions as patrolmen on the Big Spring police force. Chief Jay Banks said applications would be taken up until the time of the examinations.

"We want to emphasize that, among other qualifications, a high school education is required of all applicants who may otherwise qualify," Chief Banks said. "A man must be at least 21 years of age, of good moral character, and physically fit."

Those passing the written examinations will appear before a screening board at 2 p.m. the same day. After passing the screening board an applicant's driver's license record, his criminal record, and financial record and standing will be investigated.

Banks said two vacancies would be filled April 1 if two men passed, and that others passing would be placed on an eligible list for future positions.

Youth Charged With Murder

DALLAS (AP)—Terry McIntire, 17, was charged with murder Tuesday in the shooting of a classmate, Suzanne Lawson, also 17.

The shooting occurred at her home Sunday night. McIntire, a high school cheer leader, told police they had discussed suicide.

He said his .22 caliber rifle was on safety when she put it to her head and it went off.

Young McIntire said he had helped the girl and her boyfriend mend a misunderstanding earlier in the day and was despondent because of a breakup with his own sweetheart.

Police said a 16-year-old boy was present shortly before the shooting. He told officers McIntire talked of suicide, remarking that he and Miss Lawson would "feel funny when he didn't show up at school."

Greatest Beauty Trick Is Not To Look Made Up

Rita Gam's clear skin and shining eyes, her adroitly applied make-up, give the idea that she must have some tricks up her sleeve to share.

"I think one of the greatest make-up tricks is not to look made up," she says. "It takes a steady hand and patience to accomplish this. Nobody can smear on a quick-type of make-up and not have it show. Take the women of the ancient times, such as I play in 'King of Kings' (opening at the Ritz March 29). They dabbed their eyelids with black smudges until they looked like two burned holes in a blanket. They used pomegranate juice for rouge and didn't bother to hide the fact, with the result that there were large patches of color on their cheeks with no attempt at blending.

"A woman should make up for the occasion. If you're going to a football game you'll want to play it down if you expect to score with your escort. That bright outdoor light is a big tattletale. Go sparingly on the make-up for all outdoor sports. But if you are going to a dance, with those soft lights and sweet music, you can afford to be more generous with the facial fancies.

"Cleanliness is an essential for a good complexion, which is no news, of course. It is so much easier to start out with a clear canvas than to try to cover up blemishes.

"For a foundation I like a light one the exact shade of my skin

Wife Of Herod-Antipas

Herodias, wife of Herod-Antipas and mother of the evil child, Salome, as portrayed by Rita Gam in "King of Kings."

so that the natural skin tone comes through. For daytime I use a vanishing cream as a base and cake powder the exact shade of my skin. If both are used sparingly, you get a luminous effect. Sometimes I highlight with white on the cheekbones and over the outer side of the eyelids. This is good for evening light, but it has to be carefully blended or you might come out looking like a clown.

"Applying the eyeliner is a job that calls for a steady hand. Pull up the outer edge of the lid ever so gently and apply the line just above the lashes, ending with a little upward stroke at the outer edge. If you must tamper with the lower lashes, and I don't think it is usually a good idea unless you are very colorless in that region, give just a very gentle stroke on the outer side. If the eyes are well made up, a very light lipstick instead of a deeper shade will add glamor and accent to the eyes."

There is nothing, she adds, that takes the place of a professional shampoo and hair-do, but she has discovered a shampoo mixture which is good in an emergency. "I used it on location in Spain, when the nearest beauty salon was not within camel-riding distance. You take two eggs and equal parts of olive oil and brandy, about a tablespoonful of each, and mix them together. I guess the brandy cuts the oil. After you massage this mixture into the scalp and hair and rinse it out thoroughly, you have a nice shiny crop.

"Make-up is an individual problem, however, and every woman should experiment to discover what type of make-up is best for her."

She Is A Champion

By JOY MILLER

AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — If anyone ever starts an annual list of the 10 Most Outstanding Husbands, Stasia Czernicki's spouse should win a regular berth.

Anthony Czernicki (pronounced ZERN-icki), Webster, Mass., postal clerk, doesn't demand a night out occasionally with the boys while his wife stays home with the children. Instead he babysits and she goes to the bowling alley.

Twice a week she practices candlepins (small ball bowling), to maintain the prowess that makes her the current women's world champion. She set a world record in the 1961 tournament with a 10-game total of 1218, the only bowler of either sex to hit more than 1200 in a world championship tournament.

And she's a heavy favorite in a Saturday bowling competition that gets highest ratings on New England television circuits.

"I wouldn't be where I am today without my husband," blue-eyed Stasia says on a visit to New York. "He kept after me to keep practicing when I didn't feel up to par. He's terrific."

They've been married 15 years. "On our first date we went to a bowling alley," she recalls, "and I've been bowling ever since."

Stasia, who does her own housework, likes to play golf when she has time. Her average game is in the 90s, garden in the back yard, go ice skating with the family. "We do everything together," she says.

"I don't have time to belong to women's clubs. I think family activities are more important."

Jews Today Note Ancient Purim Victory

BETHPAGE, N.Y. (AP) — An ancient story of the triumph of beauty over villainy was chanted in Hebrew aboard a Long Island Rail Road train Tuesday as Jews commuted to their New York City jobs celebrated the festival of Purim.

The traditional noisemakers drowned out the clatter of the train as commuters turned their attention to the Megillah of Esther—the story of the deliverance of the Jews of Persia some 2,500 years ago.

Following the religious service, "Hamantaschen"—the traditional sweet cakes—were passed out to the congregation-in-motion.

The service was the brainchild of Rabbi Theodore Jungreis of the Bethpage Jewish Community Center, who decided to take the synagogue to Jewish commuters who might not otherwise have been able to attend a Purim service.

Jews are not required to abstain from work or other daily chores on the joyous holiday. The only duty incumbent on them is to hear a recitation of the Megillah.

The Megillah—the Old Testament's book of Esther—tells of the plot of Haman, the prime minister of ancient Persia, to destroy all the Jews in that far-flung empire.

Learning of the plan from her uncle, Mordecai, the beautiful Queen Esther interceded with her husband, King Ahasuerus. She told him that she herself was a Jewess and begged him to spare her people.

Incensed at the plot, Ahasuerus ordered Haman hanged on the very gallows he had prepared for the righteous Mordecai. He also published a decree throughout his empire sparing the Jews and permitting them to arm themselves against their enemies.

The scheduled day of destruction had been decided by the casting of lots—in Hebrew "purim." Instead, it was turned into a day of deliverance, and the Jews were instructed by their leaders to celebrate the day every year as a religious festival.

It was in observance of this age-old command that the Jewish commuters assembled in the railroad train's club car, put on their skull caps and held the service.

Small noisemakers and Hamantaschen were provided by Rabbi Jungreis' wife.

Her name, incidentally, is Esther.

Aug. 25 Being Considered For Release Of Guardsmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defense Department officials are reported considering Aug. 25 for starting demobilization of more than 155,000 National Guardsmen and reservists now on cold war active duty.

According to this thinking—and it still is tentative—most of the reservists would be mustered out within the following month, informed sources said.

More than a month ago, President Kennedy indicated a possible release for reservists and Guardsmen starting in August, when the first of two new regular Army divisions is expected to become combat ready.

From Kennedy on down, officials have sought to avoid pinpointing any target date for demobilizing reservists and Guardsmen because they consider the Berlin crisis which prompted the callup to be still very much alive.

Only Tuesday, Gen. George H. Decker, the Army chief of staff, ordered his commanders to impress on the reservists and the Guardsmen they are needed on active duty because, he said, this country is "in a very real sense at war" with the Communists.

Decker—acting in the wake of new unrest among reservists at several Army posts—stressed that Soviet efforts to harass air traffic in the corridors to West Berlin has heightened tension there and that the situation in South Vietnam is very serious.

Some officials suggested the possibility of a summit meeting early this summer is another factor working to keep reservists in uniform. They said reserve demobilization around that time might be taken by the Russians as a sign of weakness.

At the height of the Berlin crisis last summer, Congress authorized Kennedy to call up to 250,000 men for as much as a year of service.

All but a few thousand of the more than 155,000 kept for crisis duty came on active service in October—about 76,000 on Oct. 1 and another 79,000 on Oct. 15.

The Pentagon took a number of other steps to build up U.S. might, particularly in ground forces.

As a result, the United States had 2,849,116 men under arms as of Feb. 1—352,121 more than last Aug. 1.

For six months—from August through January—draft calls were raised as much as four times the pre-crisis level.

These new troops now are starting to come out of basic training and are being fitted into new regular Army units.

Two new regular divisions were organized early in February. They are the 1st Armored at Ft. Hood, Tex., and the 8th Mechanized Infantry at Ft. Carson, Colo.

When they are ready, they will replace two Guard divisions which have been on active duty since last October—the 32nd Infantry of Wisconsin, now at Ft. Lewis, Wash., and 49th Armored of Texas now at Ft. Polk, La.

The regular Army then will total 16 divisions in fighting trim.

Other lesser units, support-type outfits, also are being built for the regular Army with the new manpower coming from the bigger draft of recent months.

Wright Wants Date Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wright, D-Tex., says he thinks men of the 49th Armored Division of Texas have a right to know when they may expect to be released.

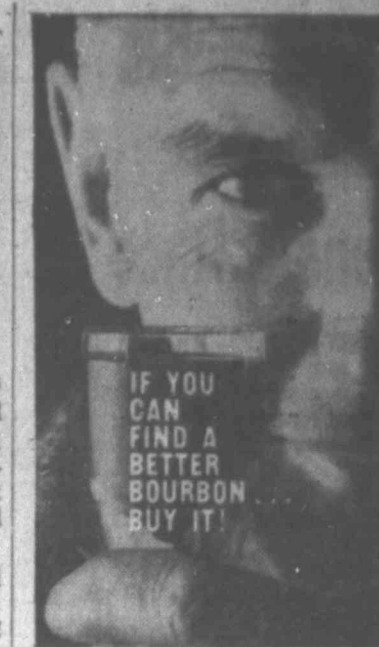

He asked the Army Tuesday to fix, if possible, a target date for the release of the men. Wright told Secretary of the Army Elvis Stahr that the National Guardsmen, stationed at Ft. Polk, would like to know when they might reasonably expect to return to their normal vocation.

Wright asserted he does not condone the "We want out" rallies that have been staged by groups at Ft. Polk. Wright, who inspected the fort last December, said most of the men were without noticeable bitterness and for the most part realized that "someone had to do this job."

Other Texas congressmen had little comment on orders of Maj. Gen. Harley West's order banning "We want out" meetings this week at the fort.

The division commander's order followed two weeks of demonstrations seeking information as to when National Guardsmen and Reservists called to active duty during the Berlin crisis would be released.

Andres Framini, right, is hugged by a supporter, Francisco Marcos Anglada, in Buenos Aires province. Framini, 47-year-old labor leader, is a follower of exiled former dictator Juan D. Peron. Argentina's President Makes Deal With Military

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Arturo Frondizi clung to his job today by making a deal with Argentina's armed forces chiefs to form a coalition cabinet — half civilian, half military — and outlaw all political activity by resurgent Peronists.

The crisis eased for the moment at least, as the government announced that the eight civilian cabinet members had resigned to make way for the new coalition.

Frondizi made peace with the military in a 40-minute conference during the night with Gen. Raul Alejandro Poggi, the army commander in chief, Adm. Agustin R. Penas, chief of naval operations, and Brig. Gen. Cayo Antonio Alsina, the air force commander.

Afterward the government announced in a brief communique that the president would form a "Cabinet of national unity" after consulting today with "the representatives of the Democratic parties and representative institutions."

Frondizi also declared he would not retreat from his unpopular austerity program, which was widely blamed for his election setback.

His agreement with the military brought Frondizi through the worst challenge to his hold on the government reins since he took office in May 1958. He still faced the reaction of millions of voters who chafed at his smashing victory for Peronists in Sunday's congressional and provincial elections. So far, however, the capital was surprisingly quiet.

The military chiefs had appeared ready to force Frondizi out and seize control to nullify the landslide election wins of Peronist forces in 10 provinces.

Hoffa Calls Union Move Success Despite Charges

WASHINGTON (AP)—James R. Hoffa said today the Teamsters Union he heads has become a billion-dollar operation and is doing fine despite a barrage of indictments against him and his fellow officials.

Hoffa, back from his latest bout with the courts, was interviewed on the maze of federal court actions brought against key Teamsters leaders in cities from coast to coast alleging fraud and violence.

"There is no question the government is spending millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money to satisfy Bobby's (Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy's) vendetta," Hoffa said. "It's costing us money for defense against these charges that we could use for collective bargaining and other union purposes."

"And what has the government come up with? Nothing."

Government prosecutors obviously think otherwise. A steady return of Teamsters indictments began when Kennedy, former chief counsel of the Senate racket committee which investigated the Teamsters affairs for three years, became attorney general. Hoffa

Clothing Taken From Car Here

A Hope, Ark., woman, traveling west, reported clothing stolen from her car while she was eating in Big Spring at the Wagon Wheel Restaurant on East Third. She did not miss the items until she reached Monahans.

Detective Jack Jones, Big Spring police department, received a telephone call from Monahans with a description of the clothing taken from the car driven by Mrs. Cora Evans. A cashmere coat, coat, valued at $125, was the most expensive item. Three dresses and two suits were also listed.

T. A. Smith, owners of the Smith Grocery, 300 N.W. 4th, told officers that a 380 Belgium automatic pistol was stolen from a shelf behind his meat counter Tuesday afternoon. Two clerks in the store identified a man, who they said entered the store, bought a package of Fritos, and later went behind the meat counter. A pay telephone, located at 3910 US 80 west, was broken open some time Tuesday morning and an unknown amount of money taken.

said he knows more than two dozen grand juries are delving into Teamsters matters.

Hoffa minimized one indictment after another, and expressed confidence he will be freed from the 16-count mail fraud indictment pending against him at Orlando, Fla. This alleges that Hoffa and a Detroit bank official misused $500,000 of Detroit Teamsters funds in a Florida land development deal.

"Nobody got defrauded out of a quarter," Hoffa said. "So where in the hell is the problem?"

"Stories about the Orlando case make it look like Hoffa put $500,000 in his kick. Which ain't bad if you can do it—but I didn't."

Hoffa, asked about the net worth of the Teamsters and the union's various pension and welfare funds put the figure at $1 billion.

He said a rumor that he had put a couple of million dollars of Teamsters pension funds in the building housing Toots Shor's new restaurant in New York City is only partly true. He said the sum was over $4 million, adding that Shor leases the nine-story structure at a 9 per cent investment return basis.

"It's a very good investment," Hoffa said. "I'd say the value of the property has tripled since the day they put the first shovel in the ground."

Hoffa has about two months respite from the Florida court charges. Arguments have just been made by his lawyers to dismiss the indictment. They succeeded in obtaining dismissal of an earlier indictment in the same case.

The Teamsters Union president was highly critical of a U.S. Senate resolution which forbade senators or staff employees to give testimony in the case without specific Senate permission on matters they had investigated.

Hoffa said it was a new form of the Fifth Amendment. He said that during Senate rackets hearings Teamsters claiming Fifth Amendment privilege against testifying were denounced as crooks and Mafia members. But now, he said, Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., who headed the rackets hearings, has been given a special Senate immunity against testifying in a criminal case.

"Take the FBI," said Hoffa. "They're walking in on people and saying, 'We want Hoffa—you tell us what you know, or we'll investigate you.' That kind of nonsense is going on every day of the week."

The Teamsters chief said he recently had read a published report that he had money in bank accounts in Switzerland and Mexico.

"If they're no closer than that, they're not very close are they?" Hoffa chortled. "I always say, 'Show me where it is and I'll give you half.'"

Outside of battles with the law, Hoffa said, "everything in the Teamsters is in good shape—we have no problems."

Hear Ye, Hear Ye! If You Gotta Spit You'd Better Git

Don't spit on the floor in the county court house!
It can get you locked up in jail. There's a 57-year-old man in a cell on the fourth floor of the court house who can testify to this fact.

He made use of the floor on the main lobby as a cuspidor last Thursday. Miller Harris, sheriff, saw the act and was inspired to take the offender into custody.

He was fined $5 for the charge when he pleaded guilty in justice court and the costs ran the total to around $25.

Not having that sort of money—nor any sort of money for that matter—he was placed in jail. He is still there.

If all goes well he may get out on March 22. The per day credit toward a fine and court costs, when one is juggled, is $3.

Screwworm Battle Chief Sees Success

HOUSTON (AP) — A leader in Texas' fight against the screwworm fly, one of the worst hazards of cattle raising, said today he expects the campaign to be a large success.

"Barring some disaster, most Southwestern stockmen shouldn't have to doctor another case of screwworm this year," said C. G. Scruggs, president of the Southwestern Animal Health Research Foundation in Dallas.

"And no one should have to treat any cases in 1963," he added at the 85th meeting of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Cattlemen are beating the screwworm, which Scruggs said is the most costly and bothersome pest they ever had to fight, by using atomic energy. Radiation makes the male fly sterile. The female then lays infertile eggs, which fail to hatch after being deposited in cattle wounds.

"The program will eventually allow all North America to be free of screwworms," Scruggs said. "It produced in the Southwest the fastest moving, most widely discussed program that has been seen in agriculture."

He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture laboratory at Kerrville is releasing 20 million sterile flies a day. The program started in February.

"Construction is under way at Mission on a facility to produce 75 million flies a week," he said. "It will be completed July 1."

Stockmen in Louisiana and Oklahoma are forming county committees to collect funds for their own screwworm programs, he reported.

Scruggs said all but 10 of Texas' 254 counties have organized against the fly and are collecting funds. Val Verde County has contributed the most, $36,251.29. Crockett, Uvalde and Edwards counties have raised more than $30,000 each.

P.H. Stephens, director of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank at Wichita, Kan., said a 10 per cent decline in feeder cattle and calf prices is likely this fall unless feeding profits are larger than now appears probable.

Looking farther ahead, he said potential beef supplies at hand point to a 30 per cent drop in beef cattle prices and a 50 per cent drop in beef cow prices in the next three years.

The major cause of this does not lie in the 18 per cent increase in total cattle numbers, he said, but the 44 per cent increase in annual beef production per animal.

"Most cattlemen do not realize how efficient they now are as a food production group," Stephens said.

"Beef has no real competitor among foods," he said. "The devastating competition is among cattlemen. If crude oil can be maintained at $3 a barrel, good beef on the hoof can be maintained at 30 cents a pound."

Judd Morrow and Don Wideman of the Southwest Agricultural Institute in San Antonio told the cattlemen about uses of ultrasound to measure the fleshing qualities of live animals.

YMCA Ponders Budget Problems

A lengthy discussion on means to ease a budgetary problem was held by directors of the YMCA at their monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Methods of trimming outgo—and of soliciting more membership participation—were discussed. Proposals for reduction of staff, or for reducing hours of operation of the association were heard, but decision was reserved until a special meeting March 29, when an area representative of the Y will be here.

The activity report showed February attendance of 2,576 people in the Youth Department, 4,310 in the Physical Department, and 271 in the adult activities, for a total of 7,257.

A report from Capt. Parnell Johnson showed good progress on the Lakeview Y, which is due to have formal opening of its new facility May 6. A membership effort has realized $1,800 in cash and pledges toward a $2,000 goal, Capt. Johnson said.

Acquisition of fidelity insurance to cover staff workers as well as protection against theft was approved.

A new system of encouraging wider membership was adopted, in that a "budget" system of paying family dues—or a monthly payment, if desired—will be employed henceforth. It was felt that if families could set their Y obligation on a monthly payment rather than annual, more would be in a position to participate. It was decided to create a special membership solicitation group to work on a continuing basis, rather than to concentrate all solicitation efforts once a year.

A report from the Youth Activities committee stressed that action must be taken to see that those who partake of the YMCA facilities should be bona fide members, or that a system should be worked out to arrange for those young people who are unable to pay their membership dues.

The physical education committee pointed to increased attendance with the addition of trained persons on the staff who have been giving instruction in gym activities and in swimming.

"I don't believe in Lent," said Sam. "Those days are like any other days."

"It's true," said Bob, "but don't you feel that a special time should be set aside to think about the Lord's suffering?"

"We should be thankful to Jesus every day," said Sam.

"I agree," said Bob. "Will your men at the plant work July 4th?"

"Of course not," said Sam.

"Now look," said Bob, "we should be good Americans every day of the year. But still you're setting aside July 4th to remember our independence. It's good to set aside a day to celebrate what is true all year, isn't it?"

"Perhaps July 4th and Christmas and Labor Day," said Sam. "But those are single days."

"The principle is the same," said Bob. "We need to think about what Jesus suffered when He died for us. That's Lent."

"I see your point," Sam agreed. "Don't you agree, too?"

A Devotional For Today

I am not ashamed of the gospel: it is the power of God for salvation to every one who has faith. (Romans 1: 16. RSV.)
PRAYER: Almighty Father, send into our hearts the conviction that it is our duty to witness to the gospel to everyone. Glory be to Thee for Thy good news because it is Christ's power to everyone who has faith. We pray in Christ's name. Amen.

Encouraging Industrial Investment

Among the measures awaiting action in Congress are proposals by the administration to provide standby powers to cope promptly with incipient recessions. These include certain authorizations for spending, and on the other hand the power, subject to congressional approval, to effect immediate tax cuts.

Another part in somewhat the same vein but with the objective of industrial expansion on a scale to create the jobs necessary to avert recession is a system of tax credits for capital investments. The administration believes that this is a sound approach to providing incentive for investment. There is some disagreement whether this is the best or simplest way, and whether the basis of original costs rather than replacement costs is adequate for depreciation schedules.

A counter proposal, and one which has much to recommend it, is more latitude in depreciation of capital equipment. A popular term is faster tax write-offs, but by whatever name the process does reduce risks and thus creates immediate inducement for investment. Over the normal span of depreciation, the government would receive as much revenue. For example, if a write-off period were reduced from 20 to 10 years on heavy capital equipment, the tax rates for the second 10 years would be much higher because the equipment already would have been depreciated fully.

Many businesses can project a fairly clear picture five or 10 years ahead. With a depreciation schedule tailored to that period, they are willing to make great investments. Of course, if things went sour after that time the government would suffer loss of revenue in the projected heavier tax period. But by the same token, if things went sour, the government would suffer critical loss of revenue regardless. Meanwhile, the new jobs created by expansion would have resulted in greater personal income, hence more immediate revenue from this source.

Finally, this approach has the advantage of simplicity. Once a faster write-off is approved, management knows what its picture is. It is not subject to administrative and interpretative whims from year to year. Moreover, the initiative as to type and degree of expansion would be greater with management under this approach.

The Wide, Wide Open Spaces

The earth is still a vast place, with some areas remote in a way ordinary inhabitants of the planet can scarcely appreciate. This was emphasized, recently, when a French camel corps roaming the Sahara desert came upon the remains of an English pilot and his aircraft missing for nearly three decades.

This was no tiny object; it was a bi-plane. It seems difficult to believe that it could have gone unnoticed for that long, even in the desolate expanse of the Sahara. Yet unnoticed it was.

Just this week the wreckage of a plane

in frozen wastes of a New Guinea Mountain was reported.

While the tragedy of this flight by an intrepid young pilot racing to Capetown and the flight across the remote mountains will become real again for those with personal attachments to him, the rest of us may see in it something else. When the world bears down and our neighbors seem too close, when the traffic becomes too thick on the way home, it might be well to recall the vast and lonely places in the world. This may not thin out traffic, but at least it is something interesting to think about while the light changes.

Protection From The Government

WASHINGTON — It is reported that somebody among the White House aides thought up a good title for a special message to Congress — "protecting the consumer interest" — and then they all sat around trying to decide what to put into it. The net result was a hodge-podge of recommendations, but the message was really significant, not for what it contained, but for what it omitted. The President said in one of the opening paragraphs:

"FORTUNATE as we are, we nevertheless cannot afford waste in consumption any more than we can afford inefficiency in business or government."

But nowhere in the essay was there anything said in explanation of the inefficiency in government. The message used up nine long pages of single-spaced typewriting and dealt with everything from alleged misrepresentations in advertising of foods and drugs to the kind of lipstick or hair dye that women are misled into buying.

It would seem that somehow consideration now should be given to "a message from the victims of government inefficiency."

FOR IN THE many thousands of words in the President's latest message about protecting the consumer, there wasn't a single sentence telling of the damage being done to the consumer by the government itself. There was no reference to the constant diminution of the wages of the citizens through taxes and the attrition of the purchasing power of the dollar as a result of unsound fiscal policies pursued by the administration in Washington, especially as they relate to wasteful expenditures here and abroad.

THE PRESIDENT complains that "highly developed arts of persuasion" are being used in America to sell goods to the consumer. He rightly argues that the consumer should be protected against "fraudulent, deceitful or grossly misleading information, advertising, labeling or other practices." But why hasn't the government itself been efficient in this field? Mr. Kennedy gives the impression that all these abuses have just begun to happen and that nothing has been done about them heretofore. He doesn't mention that the Pure Food and Drug Act has been on the statute books for decades and that the Federal Trade Commission over the past half-century has been charged by Congress with specific responsibility for taking action on these misrepresentations.

And what about the misleading statements of politicians? Wouldn't it be "protecting the consumer interest" — or at least the "voter interest" — if all political salesmanship, including messages by the President to Congress and speeches in both houses, were subject every day to the same strict standards of scrutiny and common honesty that Mr. Kennedy now recommends for salesmanship in business? Better Off In The Caves?

WASHINGTON (AP)— Compared with the olden days — when men never heard of a barber and communicated with clubs — this is a civilized world, although a man from the olden days might doubt it.

Modern man, unlike his long-haired ancestor, can read, wears clothes, and lives in a house. This is quite a lot of progress in 50,000 years, if you never lived in a house. He discusses philosophy and the rule of reason, if not as a fact at least as a theory; he is proud of his system of jurisprudence which he says enables him to live by the rule of law, more or less.

HE HAS A moral code which makes him feel good — except when it gets too inconvenient to be observed, and a trained respect for the rights of others — except when he forgets about it.

He also trusts his neighbor, although not completely, and keeps a few instruments handy to protect himself, as he says, like jets, tanks, rifles, pistols, night sticks, brass knuckles, knives, bayonet, flamethrowers, germ spreaders, plastic bombs and nuclear bombs.

There are some days, practically every day, when a man from the olden times might think it was safer back in the woods where he used to lie in wait for anything that moved.

TUESDAY WAS one of those days, although it was rather mild, the first day of spring.

Still, it was a good example of man's boundless enthusiasm for the no-nonsense way of getting things done. There were much better days this past year. There will be even better days ahead.

In Algeria, two days after the Moslem rebels and the French government had agreed on a cease-fire to eight years of war, Moslems, Europeans and French security forces blazed away at one another, leaving death and blood in their wake.

All three sides probably knew, as they slaughtered one another, that this was as mild as a table tennis game compared with what's coming when the assassins of the French secret army hit their stride.

AT GENEVA the United States and the Soviet Union, which have enough missiles and nuclear bombs to make the world look like a piece of bread that was left in the toaster too long, still couldn't agree.

What they couldn't agree on was some way of not demonstrating the weapons which have them both scared half silly.

Along the shores of the Sea of Galilee, best remembered for the Man who preached love and peace in that neighborhood, Israelis and Syrians discussed their problems with guns, planes and gunboats.

In Havana, Prime Minister Fidel Castro, not busy enough trying to find food for his rationed Cubans, let it be known he's going to bring to trial those captured rebel Cubans who tried to invade him last year. He has 1,000 of them.

THE WAR WAS still going on in Laos, government troops and Communist guerrillas were fighting to the death in Viet Nam.

Perhaps the brightest note of the day came from Southeast Asia. There the President's wife, Jacqueline Kennedy, finished a nine-day tour of India and set off for Pakistan. For the sake of American relations, she had to visit both of them.

To Your Good Health

Kidneys Lose Efficiency As We Grow Older

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M. D.
Dear Dr. Molner: Why do I retain water all day and then have to get up from three to six times at night? — MRS. E. H.

Ordinarily we get rid of about three times as much fluid during the day as at night. Or, whole system works faster by day. Besides, we drain fluid just before we go to bed, and do so again in the morning, and we sleep only about eight hours. And that's how we come out even on intake and output, and don't "have to get up at night."

But suppose the kidneys don't work quite as efficiently as they once did. This is not uncommon as we grow older. Well, the kidneys don't filter fluids as rapidly, and the result is that we have to change somewhat from our life-long schedule. This delay, in a word, means we "have to get up at night."

Sometimes a matter of health is involved; sometimes it's just growing older, with the kidneys losing efficiency. Cystitis (a disorder of the bladder), or prostate trouble in men, or diabetes at any age, which causes excessive thirst and hence frequency of voiding, are the commoner health causes. A physical checkup to rule this out of the picture is advisable, and it isn't a very complicated or costly sort of examination. So do this first.

Once these factors are ruled out, consider the others which are involved. The rate and frequency of urination depends, besides, on the amount of fluids consumed; the diet, which can be "dry" or of average moistness; on the state of our emotions, since nervousness causes greater frequency; the temperature; the amount of exercise we get; and, as I said before, the efficiency of the kidneys.

If no health problem is involved, we should try to get our fluids (whether soup, fruit, vegetables, or anything else, since virtually everything we eat is partly water) earlier in the day. Give the slowed kidneys a little more time to catch up.

We may, to our own advantage, cultivate a habit of drinking water, milk, tea, coffee, or whatever, in the morning, or in the first half of the day, and tapering off in the afternoon and evening. Tea, coffee and alcoholic beverages of any kind, taken in the evening, not only add fluid but also because of their chemical nature increase physical urgency to excrete the fluid. So avoid these late in the day or in the evening. It's not easy, I know, to change the habits of a lifetime. But if changing our habits will let us sleep with fewer interruptions, it's worth it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 54 and weigh 196. My blood pressure is on the high side, 190 to 200, and I also have some liver trouble. Does whiskey cause the blood pressure to rise and does it hurt the liver? I really enjoy my liquor but consider myself a moderate drinker. — MR. IN-BETWEEN

Moderate-schmoderate! Whiskey combined with a liver ailment is just asking for more trouble. And the same for that 196 pounds.

NOTE TO MRS. S. G.: "Pterygium" means a membranous corner of the eye (usually from the inside). It grows very slowly but may, of course, interfere with vision if it extends across the pupil of the eye. It is seen in older people, usually those who have been considerably exposed to wind and dust. It can be removed surgically if necessary.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with fissures, flatulas, itching and other rectal problems, write to Dr. Molner in care of the Herald, requesting a copy of my booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids," enclosing a long, self-addressed stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hospitality At Wanderer's Inn

There's something about the name Wanderer's Inn that connotes a haven for the weary traveler, a sanctuary of warm hospitality.

In all candor, Wanderer's Inn was a trifle more prosaic and austere in the days that it functioned here as a local institution. It served as a haven for the wanderer, all right, but frequently against his will.

THERE WERE legions of men moving across the country restlessly in the depression and in the gray days as the country floundered slowly out of the great economic slough of despair. Every freight train into Big Spring brought a larger cargo of human flotsam than of freight, this being a division point on the railroad, we were a logical spot for the uninvited passengers to dismount and forage for a meal or inquire about prospects of a job.

At the bottom of the depression, a federal project was set up to provide food and lodging for men who were booming across the country. This was established in a portion of the Bauer building in the 100 block on Main, but it became apparent after a time that many were making a career of this boarding place. Anyhow, the red-nosed radicals were worming their way into this seedbed of unhappiness, so the program was abandoned.

THIS DIDN'T HALT the traffic, however. To cope with the problem of transients roaming all over town in search of a meal or a warm spot, the city of Big Spring acquired an old railway express building from the T&P Railway Company. It was located about three blocks east of the depot.

Each evening the police would serve as a welcoming committee for the arrival of freight trains, inviting the unofficial passengers to be guests at Wanderer's Inn.

When it was rumored that the choice lay between accepting the hospitality at the Inn, or being booked at the city pokey on suspicion of vagrancy, most visitors gladly went to the Inn. Many of them had an aversion to fingerprints which were part of the routine at City Hall.

THE LATE J. M. CHOATE, who had been on night duty for the city police force, was named manager of Wanderer's Inn. Although affable enough, Mr. Choate took no guff from his guests, and the word soon got around. Consequently, he rarely ever had trouble, unless some wino decided to act up. The interior of the building was plain, plain vanilla with a few benches. There was a big urn to furnish the visitors a hot shot of coffee. Fires kept the visitors comfortable on the coldest nights. Early next morning, just as the freight trains were being assembled, the doors of Wanderer's Inn opened.

All of this cut down remarkably on the amount of petty thievery and panhandling. It may have reduced traffic by those who didn't enjoy the nightly roundup, for Wanderer's Inn was known up and down the T&P. E. V. Spence, then city manager, observed that it kept the good men warm, and helped the bad men stay good.

THE CITY GOT double utility out of the old frame building. Each Friday afternoon the county health officer's nurse would meet with the domestics and others who had to have blood tests or shots to combat certain social diseases.

Once we assigned one of our staff members, Jack Douglas, to disguise himself and spend a night at Wanderer's Inn, incognito. He did and went unrecognized — also sleepless. He always claimed we gave him pneumonia and muttered darkly about not being able to sleep for fragrant feet in his face. Anyhow, it made a good story. —JOE PICKLE

Foreign Trade, Local Taxation

Not so long ago, Henry Ford II made two statements deserving of second thought. First, he declared that in less than 12 years the Ford Motor Co. had made a net plus contribution to the United States balance of payments of $2,000,000. Even for a country as big as the United States and for a company as big as Ford, that's big money.

Second, he attacked as "bad economics" the President's proposal to subject the income of foreign subsidiaries to domestic income taxes. At present, such funds escape taxation until brought back home.

"HISTORICALLY," Ford asserted, "America's export surpluses have been greatest where our investment is greatest." Though Ford's own data lend this statement credence, neither economic theory nor global statistics justifies it.

Ford's balance-of-payments plus came primarily from one major item—the sale of cars, trucks and tractors abroad, which totaled about $2,000,000,000. In addition, purchases by Ford foreign subsidiaries of parts and services in America amounted to about $50,000,000, and dividends and profits brought here amounted to another $100,000,000. In all, the gross flow to the U. S. was $3,000,000,000.

THIS WAS OFFSET by about $900,000,000, made up as follows: Sales by foreign subsidiaries of cars, trucks and tractors in the United States and imports by Ford of America of raw materials, parts, and equipment amounted to $400,000,000. Direct investments abroad by Ford amounted to about $500,000,000.

Included in this half billion was the $370,000,000 purchase of outstanding stock in Ford of England, which invoked so much unwarranted criticism. At the time, the United States was losing gold rapidly and running up a record $3,900,000,000 balance-of-payments deficit for 1960. It was argued that Ford should postpone the purchase Ford decided—and to me it made sense — that the investment would return dividends to Ford and the U. S. in the long run.

HOWEVER, FORD's own balance-of-payments surplus hardly establishes a cause-and-effect relation between dollar investments and trade surpluses. Trade follows need, though investment undoubtedly tends to stimulate trade.

An American company that puts up a plant abroad is likely to purchase machinery or parts in the United States. Thus Ford of Germany bought shock absorbers from Monroe Auto Equipment. "If there were no Ford of Germany," said Mr. Ford, "it is probable that there would have been no sale of these American-made shock absorbers in Germany."

EQUALLY, IT CAN be argued that if there were no Ford or General Motors of Germany or no Ford or General Motors of England, then perhaps sales of American-made cars abroad would be higher. Instead of selling only shock absorbers in Germany, Ford might be selling the whole car. It might even be making here a special car for the European market. Who knows?

We buy coffee, copper, oil, tin, from Latin America because we need them. We have large surpluses with Europe and Japan because of sales of cotton and wheat. Was demand for cotton stimulated by U. S. investment in Europe?

NOT LONG AGO a case could have been made for tax-free income for earnings of foreign subsidiaries. American companies couldn't bring such earnings home because of foreign-exchange controls. Further, the U. S., as a matter of policy, sought to encourage investment abroad—to help rebuild Europe.

Now currencies move freely between the U. S. and Western Europe, and Western Europe is rebuilt and becoming a strong competitor.

Ought the U. S. Treasury make interest-free loans to foreign subsidiaries of American companies? That's what tax exemption of foreign earnings left abroad amounts to.

The Sixth Grade Mentality

WASHINGTON — Government is the wrong place to look for logic and consistency — but has anybody noticed that the Kennedy Administration is trying, with its retraining legislation, to "upgrade workers, and is trying, with its literacy test legislation, to "downgrade" voters?

LET'S NOT put too fine a point upon it. Such things are always happening in Washington, no matter who lives in the White House. We have a Defense Department preparing for war, and a Disarmament administration housed in the State Department to prepare for the heavenly days when war is obsolete. We have the Interior Department bringing new lands into cultivation, and the Agriculture Department taking lands out of cultivation.

There are other examples of schizophrenia-on-the-Potomac, but none uncovers a more paradoxical condition in our system than the downgrade vs. upgrade conflict.

THE PRESIDENT's retraining program, substantially improved and supported by Republicans in Congress, is one of the few really "good" laws, in that it resulted from a genuine public demand. Since touching on the subject in a previous column, I have been enlightened by some new information from the grassroots. Recent editorials in the Tallahassee (Fla.) Democrat and the Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union have praised an experiment in upgrading which is taking place in Panama City in that State. The Panama City Commission found that the average municipal worker had little more than a ninth grade education. City officials arranged with local schools and junior colleges to pay the enrollment fees of workers who would attend night courses for the advancement of their own education. No Federal aid is involved.

IN LOOKING for other non-Federal efforts, I find that upgrading of workers has been studied and undertaken both by large industries, like the Pacific Tel. and Tel., and unions like the Amalgamated Meat Cutters. The House Education-Labor Subcommittee on Automation has accumulated much documentation on the subject. The documents show that there does exist in our American society — quite aside from Government policy — a desire and an attempt to improve our skills, training, knowledge and productivity.

This is a sound argument. It appears to me, why the Federal Government should take a lively interest in the upgrading of the working and teaching forces of our country, always keeping within the limits of the Constitution.

BUT WHY NOT the same trend when we look to the largest of all American groups — the voters? Why should the administration reverse the upgrade proposition by insisting upon the low, fixed literacy standards of a sixth grade education for voters? Why not, if the Federal Government is to enter this field at all, take the opportunity to set the standards high?

Attorney General Robert Kennedy recently was arguing manfully before the House Judiciary Committee that the Federal Government ought of limit the right of any State to be arbitrary in the literacy-testing of its voters. He found that many Southern election boards had used a State law to prevent Negroes from voting. In a 1959 check of 16 counties, where voting age Negroes were in the majority, no Negro was registered to vote. In 49 other counties with heavy Negro population, the voting percentage of Negroes was close to five per cent. He cited random examples where college-trained Negroes were conned out of their registration rights.

THESE ARE certainly examples of arbitrarily applied political power. But I daresay that the result has made for a relatively high standard of voting.

Kernohan Is Convicted

WAXAHACHIE (AP)—A jury convicted Oscar Kernohan Jr. of murder today and fixed his sentence at 99 years.

The jury also found the Army deserter sane at the time of the slaying and sane now.

Kernohan, 33, who had admitted three killings, pleaded innocent. The defense presented testimony that he was mentally ill.

The jury deliberated seven hours Tuesday night. It resumed its deliberations at 8:30 a.m. today and returned its verdict at 9 a.m.

The jury received evidence about only the slaying of the defendant's stepson, Roger Gibbs, 2½, near Pecos 18 months ago. Separate complaints charge him with the other two deaths.

Prosecutors, demanding the death penalty, introduced a statement Sheriff A. B. Nails took from Kernohan at Pecos soon after his arrest.

Kernohan admitted in the statement that he first killed his wife Dec. 18, 1960 in San Antonio, drove to a point 40 miles south of Pecos, shot the boy and buried him in the same grave. He added that he picked up Norman Cox, 21, a hitchhiker from Benton, Ark., shot him in a $5 holdup and hid the body in a culvert.

Dr. Robert Jones of Lancaster testified for the defense that Kernohan is mentally ill but was aware at the time that the bullets he fired would injure someone.

Dr. Edward Stern of El Paso, a rebuttal witness for the state, said he found Kernohan a man of superior intelligence and numerous frustrations.

Judge A. R. Stout gave the jury a choice of four verdicts.

Mrs. Ed Pearcey, 1119 E. Pecan, Midland, holds a burning paper in her mouth while Lee Morgan, a bullwhip artist, takes a crack at it with his whip.

Popping The Whip

He got it. The Big Spring Elks' Club entertained patients at the VA Hospital Tuesday and presented Morgan and his whip during the afternoon.

Mexican businessmen and students pulled out all the stops to welcome a delegation of Big Spring and Howard County residents who made a weekend trip from Presidio, Texas to Topolobampo, Mexico on the Gulf of California.

The delegation from here was headed by Bruce Frazier, chairman of the agriculture department at Howard County Junior College. Frazier had made the trip over the unique railroad before it was finally pushed over the Sierras to the West Coast.

In all there were 32 in the party, and one entire car was chartered on the Chihuahua al Pacifico railroad, and part of a second car was required. The group returned here Tuesday.

"We were met by large delegations at Chihuahua City and at Las Mochis," said Frazier. "They even provided two bands, and later we were taken on a launch trip of the bay, then feted to a party that barely broke up in time for departure on the train."

What made the hospitality all the more remarkable was that not until Saturday did his letter arrive in Las Mochis a city of almost comparable size (32,000) with Big Spring. Goldie Byrley, a United States citizen who has been living there for the past 20 years and who operates the Hotel Bel Train, rallied a reception committee.

It was also pointed out that farmers have only until March 30 to sign up for the farm grain program. There are important features of the program this year which growers would do well to study, Helbig said.

LAMESA (SC) — Technicians at the Department of Public Safety laboratory in Austin have indicated that a study of human bones sent from Lamesa would probably be concluded in about two weeks.

The lab said that the bones, found by three Lamesa youths in Borden County, 25 miles southeast of Lamesa, are being studied to determine age, race, sex, height and any other personal characteristics that could lead to identification.

It was reported that such studies consume lengthy periods. When completed, a formal report will be given to the Dawson County sheriff, the submitting officer.

Most of the bones, discovered in a dry creek bank, were in good condition.

Two Big Spring area road projects are included in the bids tabulated Tuesday by the State Highway Department. The jobs proposed involve expenditure of $8,723,554 and are for both construction projects and for seal coating of roads already built.

Additional bids are to be opened today.

The two jobs in this area are: Fisher and Nolan counties—FM 57, one mile south of Longworth, 3.7 miles, rebuild grade structures, base and surface treatment. W. M. Bailey, Contractor, and J. H. Strain and Sons, Inc., Abilene, $197,118.

Ector County—US 385, from 5.7 miles north of Odessa to Andrews County line, 9.9 miles, grade, flexible base and one course surface treatment on shoulders. Henry L. Stafford, Lubbock, $60,291.

Funeral was held Friday for George Thomas Culland, father of Mrs. J. T. Grantham, in Taylor, Ark. Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Grantham and Johnnie, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Grantham and Mrs. James R. Grantham and Steven, attended the rites.

Mr. Culland was 80 years old. He was born in Atlanta, Texas, and lived most of his life in Arkansas. Interment was in Forest Grove Cemetery. He had served as a deacon in Forest Grove Baptist Church for a number of years.

Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. W. C. Smith, Springfield, La.; Mrs. Bertha Windsor, Homer, La.; Mrs. Albert Martin, Los Angeles, Calif.; and Mrs. J. T. Grantham, Big Spring; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. His wife preceded him in death 12 years ago.

Pallbearers were four grandsons, James R. Grantham, Ralph Grantham, Bill Grantham and Travis Phelps and a nephew, Pickett Orr.

LAMESA (SC) — Lamesa City Council appointed a board of equalization and called for bids on five new vehicles at a regular meeting here Monday.

Named to the board of equalization, which will convene later this spring after the revaluation program is completed, includes M. E. Boren, Bernie Holt and J. D. Williams.

Bids on the new vehicles, to include three patrol cars for the police and two pickup trucks for the water department, will be opened on April 2.

An expenditure of $4,222 was authorized for four chlorinators and the firm of Wilton and Bizzell, CPA's of Lamesa, was authorized to conduct the annual city audit.

Close Study Is Advised

Farmers should make a close study of their own farm operations and familiarize themselves with the government seed grain program thoroughly in order that they can pursue the course which is economically best for each individual.

This was the recommendation John Selbert, farm management specialist, Lubbock, made at a meeting of grain producers here last night. The meeting was in the science department of the Howard County Junior College and was attended by 32 farmers.

Herb Helbig, county farm agent, who arranged the meeting in cooperation with Gabe Hammack, manager of the Agricultural Stabilization Committee office, expressed himself as well pleased with the attendance and interest.

It was also pointed out that farmers have only until March 30 to sign up for the farm grain program. There are important features of the program this year which growers would do well to study, Helbig said.

Unruly Weather Calms Down As Spring Begins

By The Associated Press

Unruly weather marking the first day of spring in Texas calmed Wednesday and the mercury sagged below freezing in the Panhandle.

Skies cleared over most of the state in the wake of a mild cool front, which touched off a small tornado near Cleburne, put a big slice of North Central and Northeast Texas under a threat of other twisters and raised clouds of dust in West Texas Tuesday.

The tornado wrecked a cow shed and overturned a boxcar and trailer.

A tornado alert for other areas in the state expired without any report of damage.

Winds racing up to 50 miles per hour in gusts whirled silt aloft around Wink, Lubbock, Dalhart, Childress and other points. High winds raked parts of Central Texas and the Brownsville area about the same time.

Rain Tuesday included Wichita Falls .72 inch, Abilene .62, Midland .51, Dallas .19, Fort Worth .16, Wink .13, Mineral Wells .08, Waco .07, San Angelo .06, Lubbock .04 and Brownsville, Galveston and Houston .02.

Forecasts called for clouds to build up over West Texas again Wednesday night and to spread over the north part of the state Thursday, with a possibility of showers in extreme Southwest Texas.

Another chilly night was in prospect for the Panhandle, where lows near freezing were expected. Overnight temperatures in the 40s to 50s were promised other sections.

Thermometers dipped to 23 at Dalhart, 31 at Lubbock and 35 at Amarillo before dawn Wednesday while McAllen had a mild 70 degrees.

Bullwinkle A Bit Too Brash; May Be Leaving Network

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV - Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—It is likely that a brash and off-beat cartoon program, "The Bullwinkle Show," will be leaving NBC next season. And that will be good news to the network's department of continuity and acceptance (that's televisionese for "censorship").

It has had nothing but trouble with the irreverent creators of the show, Jay Ward and Bill Scott, who take delight in treading on sensitive toes.

The show started poking fun at "Disneyland," calling it "Dizny Walter's Land." Early in the season, attorneys for Durward Kirby of the Garry Moore Show, formally notified them to stop using the name "Kurwood Derby" for a magic hat. They invented a pyromaniac bear, Stokely, which got quick angry action from the U.S. Forest Service, pointing out that Smokey Bear was a treasured, copyrighted property of the service and not to be kidded.

Red Skelton registered annoyance with Bullwinkle's voice (a moose) claiming it sounded like Red's Clem Caddiehopper character (and it does).

But worst was a sequence that slipped by the censors in which they cooked for Thanksgiving dinner, a peacock. A peacock is NBC's symbol of color shows.

"We got complaints," said Ward. "So we offered to apologize on another show. But they said that it was forbidden. It's sacred."

Recently, Ward and Scott took another poke at Disney. They preceded his expensive, lavishly mounted adaptation of "The Prince and The Pauper" with a fast nonsense tale called "The Prince and The Popper."

The censors let the cartoon through, but made Ward and Scott remove the title from their little satire.

The show may be a headache to NBC, but its sponsor loves it. And because the sponsor has a lot of money to spend for other shows, it won't have any trouble finding a new home for "Bullwinkle" next season.

ON THE SHELF

By The Associated Press
MASSACRE AT MONTSEGUR.
By Zoe Oldenbourg. Pantheon.
$6.95.

In the early years of the 13th Century, the splendid civilization of the Provence, in southern France, was destroyed by fire and sword in the prolonged agony of the Albigensian crusade.

It was a moral tragedy, involving the medieval church, the French monarchy, the counts of Toulouse and the heretics they protected, and the legion of innocents who regularly perish when great matters are decided by violence.

The story of this savage war, which started as a crusade but rapidly degenerated into a campaign of conquest by the northern nobility against the Languedoc, is ably told by Miss Oldenbourg, a historical novelist of note, in a first purely historical work.

Those who prefer their historians dispassionate will have some cause for objection. Miss Oldenbourg's sympathies are all on the side of the Albigensians, or, more properly, Cathars who aroused the concern and then the repression of the church in league with the secular lords.

Not much is known about Cathar doctrines and practices except through their enemies. Their outlook was dualistic; they thought the world created by evil, forever warring with God; they opposed procreation, marriage, family; they did not believe in eternal punishment; they were united in their abhorrence of the church.

In the South of France, this hearsey — or rather, new religion — spread for various reasons, until the church resorted to force after vain efforts at persuasion. Then blow by blow the disaster unfolds: the invasion of the South under the formidable Simon de Montfort, who combined savagery with superb generalship and a considerable degree of piety; the cruel sieges, massacres of garrisons, burnings and mutilations, conquests and rebellions until the final capture of the Cathar citadel of Montsegur. Thereafter, the Inquisition took over.

It is not an edifying tale. Few would quarrel with Miss Oldenbourg's pointed contrast of the temper of the crusade with the days of St. Bernard, who said, "Faith is the work of persuasion which cannot be imposed by force."

At the same time, it may seem severe to judge medieval society, including the church, by standards of toleration which gained wide acceptance only very much later. To the church, the Cathars presented a profound challenge, as Miss Oldenbourg notes, the Languedoc was the first Christian country to turn against the church.

Reference to the spirit of an age cannot excuse its moral transgressions, but it can do much to explain them; here Miss Oldenbourg proves less than illuminating.

But these are matters of interpretation and attitude. "Massacre at Montsegur" remains a valuable, absorbing exploration of a dark corner of history.

Community Split Over Beach Issue

By DIAL TORGERSON

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Laguna Beach—renowned for its scenic shoreline, art colony, whimsical litigants and wildly impractical jokes—is now a divided city.

The issue: Should Laguna restrict its beaches—banning them to most out-of-towners?

The city has 18,000 feet of beaches and coves, picturesquely arrayed along the Orange County coast an hour's drive south of Los Angeles. Laguna has 10,000 residents. On a summer weekend it may be jammed with 40,000 people.

The City Council is to take action Wednesday on a plan that would ban day visitors from most beaches. Why?

Here's what resident Glenn E. Vedder told one council session: "Teen-agers on the beach make the most offensive sexual passes at each other right in the open. These day visitors don't spend a nickel in Laguna Beach."

Another resident, George H. J. Langskov, gave prompt rebuttal. "This seashore was made by God, not man. Beaches should be open to all who want to enjoy them," he said.

City officials, dreading another onslaught of summer visitors, put a citizens' committee to work on a beach plan.

The committee plan: The main beach, two blocks in the downtown section, will be open to all. For several blocks to the north, out-of-towners can use the beach for a fee. But 10 other beaches and coves will be open only to Lagunans, their guests, and guests at the city's many motels and hotels.

"Laguna has been running a state park, free," said City Manager Jay Mercer.

"How would you like it," asks Ruth Carey, "if you paid $700 a year taxes on a home near the beach, and you can't even get on the beach on weekends?"

"Either we are our stranger's keeper, or we aren't," said Woody Cove, a columnist in the weekly Laguna Beach Post. "Either we believe in sharing, or we don't."

On every straw vote taken so far, Lagunans have voted for the plan.

But opponents are muttering darkly about a visit to the state attorney general. Residents hold title to the sands as far as the mean high tide line. Theoretically they could fence their property up to that mark; but the law says the tidelands must remain open to the public.

Someone Slipped

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Allen Nutting said Tuesday he has ordered an investigation to determine how an auto license plate had been sold to one Kris Rindere Kringle (fictitious) of 234 Snowfall Lane (also fictitious) on a non-existent 1959 car.

Board Freed In Contempt Case

HOUSTON (AP)—U.S. Dist. Judge Ben Connally has refused to hold the Houston School Board in contempt of his grade-a-year integration plan.

Negro lawyers in January had argued the board had used several special enrollment rules to minimize the effect of the order that became effective in September, 1960, with the first grade.

The lawyers centered their attack on a "brother and sister" rule which required all elementary grade children within a single family to attend the same school. This would prevent a first grader with a brother or sister of kindergarten age from enrolling at a previously all-white school. Kindergarten classes were not included in Connally's order.

After the January hearing, the board modified the brother and sister rule and it no longer applies to kindergarten children.

When The Humans Come Back To Capistrano

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP)—The swallows were outnumbered by people Monday when they made their flight to this historic mission town on St. Joseph's Day.

More than 1,000 persons were watching as about 500 of the birds returned to Capistrano to nest among the ruins of the old church.

Cities Service Income Is Higher

NEW YORK (AP)—Cities Service Co. reports 1961 net income of $46,476,000.

The big oil product company's annual report showed gross income of $997,659,000, compared with $1,001,722,920 in 1960.

The 1961 income compares with 1960 income of $41,320,000.

Gross production of crude oil and other petroleum liquids totaled 53,595,000 barrels, a new high and a 5.4 per cent increase over 1960.
