Police Family Puts On The Feed Bag

Members of the Big Spring police department and their families held the annual picnic at the city park Thursday night. Over 150 persons, including city commissioners, city manager and others, were present.

People Will Decide

The American people will decide who stabbed whom in the back, Symington snapped. At this point he banged his gavel and announced that the hearing was recessed subject to call of the chairman.

Similar Remark

Symington said the contract resulted in a "fantastic corporate setup where the Hanna Mining Co. sold ore to the government, the government sold the ore back to the smelting company, the smelting company sold the ferro nickel back to the government and the M. A. Hanna Co. took a high management fee despite the fact that some of the officers were officers in all three companies."

ply, but other members blocked the abrupt ending of the proceedings and the chairman finally ironically recognized "Senator Humphrey." The witness said he had made the statements attributed to him and told Symington "That statement you just made is ample proof of the intentions of this committee."

Delayed An Hour

But Symington delayed the session an hour and then began reading a 10-page statement which bitterly assailed Humphrey and his testimony Thursday.

Took No Part

Bush and Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., both members of the investigating group, disassociated themselves from Symington's attack on Humphrey and implied that the chairman was playing politics.

Humphrey Denies Records Destroyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — George M. Humphrey, secretary of the Treasury from 1953 to 1957, flatly denied Thursday during five hours of vigorous testimony that any records important to the Senate stockpile inquiry were destroyed in offices of the M. A. Hanna Co. in Cleveland.

Watery Bird Haven

DULUTH Minn. (AP) — You won't find Perkins National Forest on any map, but the birds like it. That's what good-natured hecklers called it when second mate J. P. Perkins began to further his bird-watching career by keeping some potted trees on the deck of the iron ore carrier Sewell Avery.

Birds flying across the vast water spaces of the Great Lakes have long used ships as temporary havens. Perkins of Conneaut, Ohio discovered their affinity for a bit of greenery some years ago when he was taking a few potted evergreens back to his home.

His forest now consists of two willow trees in buckets during the summer months and a variety of evergreens in spring and fall. He had to listen to a good deal of heckling when he started the project.

But it was all in fun. You would be surprised at the number of sailors that became nearly as interested in birds as I am. Perkins furthers his hobby with photographs using a movie camera mounted on a gunstock to take pictures of dozens of varieties. He has identified 204 species during the past five years of water-borne bird watching.

The Avery, owned by the Pittsburgh Steamship Division of the U. S. Steel Corp., piles the Great Lakes with cargoes of iron ore.

Perkins' restoration as an ornithologist has grown. He has identified 18 separate flyways on the Great Lakes and recently was asked to write an article for the National Audubon Magazine.

Kiwanians To Hear Governor

Kiwanians from all of the clubs in Division 22 of Kiwanis International are to be in Big Spring Friday night to welcome the governor of the Texas (Oklahoma) Kiwanis District.

He is Jay Dee Fountain, Lawton, Okla. business man and he will give his address at a banquet at the Golden Country Club at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Fountain is to be in Big Spring, Kiwanis Club as his official visit to Division 22 of which Big Spring club is a member. Other clubs in the division are three clubs from Odessa and Midland and the clubs from Lamesa, Andrews, Snyder, Colorado City and Monahans. All of the clubs have notified Jack Alexander, division lieutenant governor, they intend to have delegations at the banquet in honor of the district governor.

Fountain is a charter member of the Northwest Lawton Kiwanis Club. He is past president of the club and has served as chairman of social and district committees for many years. He has a record of attending eight international conventions and all district and midwinter conferences of the Kiwanis since he became a member. He has a perfect attendance record in his club since its initial meeting.

He will be accompanied to Big Spring by Mrs. Fountain and his son, Kent, 14.

J. C. Pickie, president of the Big Spring club, has issued an urgent appeal to all Kiwanis and their wives to attend the banquet. Soc Walker will be master of ceremonies.

Bob Bradbury will lead the group singing. The invocation will be by Rev. V. Ward Jackson. Mrs. Don Newsom will be presented as a special guest and will sing. After the dinner, a get acquainted party is to be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Smith, with the Smiths, 712 Dallas, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Alexander as hosts.

joined the Eisenhower Cabinet. He is now honorary board chairman and director of the firm.

W. A. Marting, president of the Hanna Mining Co., backed this up late in the day. And Robert A. Shiff, head of Varneco Services, Inc., a New York firm which supervised retention and destruction of all Hanna company records, said he was shocked by testimony that any records vital to the stockpile inquiry had been destroyed or were missing.

Under prodding of Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., chairman of the Stockpile Investigating subcommittee, Shiff conceded he had not been present in February and March — shortly after the Senate inquiry got under way — when some Hanna records were destroyed.

Symington read earlier testimony by Walter H. Henson, head of a team of government auditors working on the stockpile probe, that checks and invoices had disappeared and Henson had been unable to find them or get a satisfactory explanation.

Both Humphrey and Marting have testified that copies of all such destroyed documents were available and could be seen by the investigators.

Symington finally ruled that all the Hanna officials as well as subcommittee investigators should get a chance to clear up the details.

Earlier, Humphrey emphatically disputed testimony that the Hanna company made more than $64-million profits from the stockpile nickel contracts, signed in early 1953 just before he became secretary of the Treasury in the Eisenhower administration.

Humphrey insisted that Hanna profits, after taxes, amounted to $7.5 million over a seven-year period and he said a return of 25 or 30 per cent for a raw material company was not excessive.

The Cleveland industrialist said both Hanna and the government benefited from the nickel project.

He said the mining complex would have made twice as much money and had a much better business today if it hadn't sold nickel for the government stockpile.

We think that in the nickel we gave you, you got all your money back," Humphrey said as he constantly used you in referring to the government.

Humphrey differed sharply at times with both senators and Richard Coburn, general counsel for the investigation.

Coburn contended that the Hanna Nickel Smelting Co., a wholly owned Hanna subsidiary, acquired a smelting plant worth $15 million to $19 million for payment of $1.7 million.

Humphrey agreed that the government invested some $26 million in the plant but insisted it was repaid through the nickel produced for its defense stockpile.

Coburn contended that nickel ore remaining near the smelter and mine at Riddle, Ore., will provide Hanna with future profits of some $56 million through use of the smelter.

Humphrey said the smelter was not worth a nickel unless Hanna supplied the ore needed to operate it.

World War I Pilots Swap Yarns Today

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP)—Fliers who piloted the legendary wood-and-canvas crates of World War I swapped memories today of their battles.

Some 20 of the survivors of the famed Lafayette Escadrille, the Lafayette Flying Corps and the French Foreign Legion gathered at Battle Creek for the first reunion air show staged as a tribute to Americans who fought for France in World War I.

A former enemy airman—Baron Hans Georg von der Osten, 66, of the Von Richthofen squadron of the German air force—also was on hand.

The Royal Air Force was represented, too, by author Arch Whitehouse, who has written more than a dozen books on military and naval history, including the "Legion of the Lafayette."

Whitehouse, 66, resident of Montvale, N.J., signed up with the British forces and served in the trenches before moving up into the skies.

He was credited officially with shooting down 16 German planes and six kite balloons, he said. Whitehouse said he knocked down most of his victims as a gunner in a two-seater F. E. 2B—nicknamed the "Flying Piano."

Whether Whitehouse or any of the Americans who flew for the French forces ever came up against Baron Von Der Osten in the skies will never be known.

But Von Der Osten is credited with shooting down five British planes before he was badly wounded himself in a large air battle.

Von Der Osten now lives in Cologne, Germany. After managing his father's estate during the post World War I, he rejoined the German air force in 1925 and became commander of all Luftwaffe air force bases in Germany during World War II. His visit to the air show was cleared by the U. S. State Department and the West German government.

Indonesians Told Of N. Guinea Pact

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—President Sukarno told his people today of the Dutch agreement to hand over West New Guinea and declared Indonesia's other problems can now be solved "as we go along."

Sukarno also laid the groundwork for improved relations with Indonesia's former colonial masters in a speech on Indonesia's 17th anniversary of its declaration of independence from the Netherlands. His speech was the government's first official announcement of the Dutch-Indonesian accord signed at the United Nations Wednesday.

The Dutch-Indonesian accord provides for transfer of administration of West New Guinea to the U. N. and then to Indonesia by next May. Sukarno's government promised a plebiscite in 1969 in which the territory's 700,000 Papuans could choose permanent Indonesian rule or independence.

Speaking from a porch of his troop-ringed Merdeka Palace, Sukarno let the people know that Indonesia will not have full control of West New Guinea by Jan. 1, as he had often vowed. But he noted that his promise was in a measure fulfilled by the agreement's provision for a symbolic raising of the Indonesian flag over West New Guinea soil on Jan. 1.

He called the agreement "a victory. A blessing of God, a gift of God." He asked that the people accept it "with feelings of gratitude to God."

Sukarno expressed hope that "this time the Dutch will really honestly implement the recently concluded agreement."

"If this conflict can be solved in a satisfactory manner for us and in an honorable manner for the Dutch," he said, "then I state here that the hand extended last

Demon Servant Of Man Kicks Up His Traces

VALDEFE, N.C. (AP)—Imagine that you're working in a bakery. Suddenly, the conveyor belts carrying the bread stop, reverse, and begin hurling loaves at you.

It would be perplexing, to say the least. And it happened here. Suppose you're working at a hosiery mill. The machines stop, reverse and needles become jammed with thread gears break, socks become entangled.

That can be startling and that happened here, too. These and other nightmarish things occurred here Tuesday when machines turned on their operators because of a freak electric power disturbance. Telephone service also was interrupted, adding to the confusion. No one could find out what had gone wrong.

Workers watched wide-eyed as power boilers spewed smoke and flame when forced drafts went backwards, blowing air through the furnaces instead of outward.

A Duke Power Co. spokesman said it was all caused by a phase reversal in a 44,000-volt line.

The disturbance, which occurred when equipment was being installed at a power company substation, affected only three phase motors and not the single-phase types used in household appliances.

The power company said the chances of such an occurrence are about one in a million.

DEAR ABBY Why Not Try Positive Line?

DEAR ABBY: Am I foolish for being jealous of my husband's first wife. She is no longer living, and I never knew her but Abby it's not easy to live in HER house, look on HER stove and sleep in HER bed I haven't said anything to my husband about you I feel because I know he can't afford to replace everything all at once but it's getting the down. Any advice to boost my spirits?

WIFE NUMBER TWO: DEAR WIFE: A little patience will go a long way. And your point of view needs changing. It's YOUR house now — and YOUR stove, YOUR bed, and more important, YOUR man. So if you love him, don't give him a problem he can't solve right now.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my husband. He says he isn't an alcoholic because he drinks only beer, but I have seen him drink 20 bottles at one sitting. He stops at a tavern on his way home from work every night and he comes 4 to 5 hours late and loaded. Then he picks a fight with me because I refuse to heat up his dinner. I keep his dinner hot for an hour or so, but I don't think he deserves a hot meal when he comes home 4 or 5 hours late and drunk. Can a man become an alcoholic on beer alone? Your answer is important.

HEARTSICK READER: DEAR HEARTSICK: Yes, a man can be a beer alcoholic. Yours qualifies for A.A., but if he isn't ready to admit it and seek their help, you should investigate membership in Al-Anon. It's a non-profit (free) organization whose function is to teach non-alcoholics how to live with alcoholics. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is so superstitious I'm getting my goat. If a black cat crosses the road in front of us, she makes me turn the car around and go the other way. She won't leave the house on Friday the 13th. You couldn't pay her to sit at a table. How can I convince her that superstitions are a lot of baloney? Or am I the nutty one?

DEAR ABBY: Superstition arises from ignorance. Hotfoot it over to the library and get a book on the origin of superstitions. (But don't step on a crack or you'll break your mother's back.)

Unload your problem on Abby. For a personal reply send a self-addressed stamped envelope to ABBY, care of the Big Spring Herald.

For Abby's booklet "How To Handle A Lovey Wedding" send 50 cents to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

JUDGED BY WHAT?

In preceding articles we have seen that all, both sinners and Christians, shall be judged when Christ comes again. Now what will be the standard by which a man shall be judged? Jesus answers: "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." (John 12:48) Thus, the words of Christ constitute the standard for the judgment.

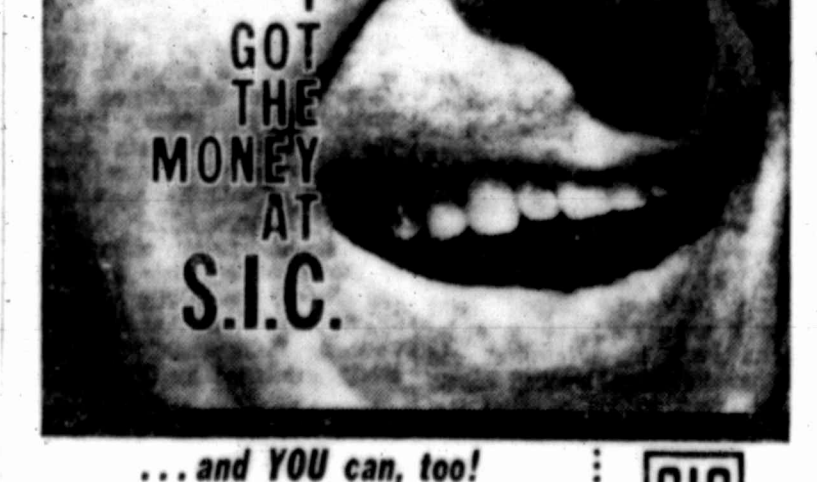

We see then, the importance of obeying the words of Christ, as taught by Himself and His inspired apostles who gave us the New Testament. "And being made perfect, he became the author of

He is commanded to believe on Christ (Acts 16:31) to repent (Acts 3:19) to be baptized (Acts 10:48) and then he is commanded to observe all things that Christ has commanded (Matt. 23:19, 20) which includes pure living, observing the Lord's supper, etc. etc.

Police Take Applications For Volunteer Reserves

Applications are being taken at the police station for the first contingent of the Big Spring police reserve force approved by the city commission Tuesday night on final reading of the ordinance.

Police Chief Jay Banks said he is assembling material and making plans for the basic training necessary so that the reserve can be put into operation as soon as possible.

"We are limited to residents of the City of Big Spring," Banks said. "We are looking for family men with business connections of responsibility and will necessarily have to be restrictive in accept-forms and equipment will remain the property of the City of Big Spring.

The police reserve will be organized and trained to work with regular police and each man will be required to put in a minimum of four hours each week. He may put in more time on a voluntary basis if he desires.

"This will give the police force better coverage of the city and at the same time allow foot patrols in the business area during hours when most crime is committed," Banks said.

"We will be able to have two-man patrols where we have had only one man in many areas and can give the city as a whole better coverage at all hours."

While the first contingent will consist of up to 18 men the city ordinance provides, when needed, for up to 40 men in the reserve force.

COLORADO CITY'S ALL SAINTS CHURCH MAY GET MEDALLION

COLORADO CITY—The All Saints Episcopal Church, one of the oldest churches in the city, may be due for a Texas Historical Building Medallion. An application blank for a medallion has been completed.

The church was built in 1885 and was consecrated June 20, 1886. The first Methodist Church here was also built in 1885. An application blank has been requested for that church also.

The All Saints Church is still in excellent condition and is being used. It began in 1883 as the Mission of Grace organized by Bishop Garrett.

Connections Of 557 Wells Severed

AUSTIN (AP)—East Texas oil wells with allowable production worth about $700,000 a month have been shut off from their markets in the state's slant-hole drilling probe.

Atty. Gen. Will Wilson's office reported Thursday that pipeline connections of 557 wells in the East Texas field have been severed.

Daily allowables of these wells total 3,634 barrels. They could produce every day because they are marginal and do not fall under proration limits. Based on the current price of $3 a barrel, the daily output is worth $24,302.

The wells were shut because state surveyors showed 109 were drilled at illegal angles to take oil from nearby leases and 22 were plugged illegally to prevent testing.

The Texas Railroad Commission also has severed pipeline connections of all wells on any lease containing such a slanted or plugged well.

Survey crews in the nearby Hawkins and Quitman fields are cleaning out obstructed wells. Two crews in the Hawkins field are in their third week of fishing obstacles from two wells. A Quitman crew has cleared only 144 feet of an obstructed well so far.

Railroad Commission Chairman W. J. Murray Jr. disclosed proposals to strengthen deviated drilling rules as an outgrowth of the three-month-old East Texas investigation.

The changes to be considered at a statewide hearing Sept. 30, would require inclination surveys on 644 new oil wells to verify that they do not slant more than five degrees from vertical.

The proposal also provides that unauthorized well deviation or the filing of false survey reports would subject the operator to penalty actions.

Saturday Is Big Day For Cosmonauts

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet capital donned carnival attire today for the arrival of the Soviet space twins. Maj. Andrian Nikolayev and Lt. Col. Pavel Popovich Soviet officials announced their big parade will come Saturday.

The astronauts' families have already been brought to Moscow for the festival. The celebration got an added boost by the announcement that air force day, previously scheduled for Sunday, will be moved forward to Saturday. Both astronauts are air force pilots.

The astronauts themselves have been flown from Karaganda, their landing area in Kazakhstan about 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow, to a nearer designated base. They continued to rest and to undergo examinations of the effects of weightlessness during their record orbital flights that kept them in space four and three days.

Both were reported feeling excellent and apparently sprucing up for the big reception. A brief shot on Moscow television showed Nikolayev lathered up, as a barber stood by to shave his growth of beard from four days in space.

The bright weather that prevailed in Moscow during most of the astronauts' flights gave way Thursday night to rain, but preparations went ahead for their triumphal arrival. Red Square was full of cranes and construction machinery as platoons of workers threw up viewing stands and other trimmings that go with Moscow celebrations.

Tradition calls for the nation's newest heroes to be flown to Moscow in a big plane with a lighter escort. Premier Khrushchev will meet them at Moscow Airport and ride with them into the city where thousands will jam Red Square to cheer them. Khrushchev, who has been vacationing on the Black Sea, has already promised to meet the space twins in Moscow.

Diplomatic quarters predicted that Khrushchev may use the space triumph to make some dramatic political gesture in the near future. There has been no official hint of what it might be. However, there is speculation Khrushchev may announce his intention of going to New York for the U. N. General Assembly's meeting which starts in September, with the expectation of meeting President Kennedy without the burdensome formality of preparing a four-power summit conference.

Khrushchev's aim, diplomatic quarters indicate, would be to try to get broad public support for the Soviet version of how to disarm and of how to settle the German and Berlin problems.

Housing Plan For Elderly Makes Financing Possible

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government's housing program for the elderly set up under 1959 act of Congress, enables churches and other non-profit organizations to finance projects with a minimum outlay of cash.

The program is operated by the Communities Facilities Administration, CFA, and handled through its regional offices. Projects in Texas cities are handled through the agency's office in Fort Worth.

The CFA makes direct loans for up to 50 years at 3 1/2 percent interest upon approval of applications by non-profit sponsors.

In addition to showing that funds are not available at such terms from local private financial institutions, the sponsors must submit plans showing the type of dwelling units planned. They must be economical—suited for elderly persons, close to necessary shops and services, and be nondiscriminatory regarding occupancy as to race, creed or color.

The program is aimed at helping the low and middle income groups. Congress has authorized the CFA to put out loans totaling $175 million. Legislation is pending to double the amount.

Actually, only $80 million has been appropriated. As of June 1, about $18 million of that amount remained unallocated. When repayments begin to come in the CFA will have that much more to lend.

The sponsoring organization runs and manages the housing project. The loan is for 100 percent of the development costs, although the sponsors will have been out some planning expenses before the application is approved.

The applicant sponsor also must show that he has available at least 25 percent of the first year's operating cost of the project when it goes into operation. There is no limit as to the size of the projects. Most of those approved range from 30 to 250 dwelling units.

40 Viet Cong Guerrillas Die

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP)—Government ground air and sea forces have killed 40 Communist Viet Cong guerrillas and captured 60 more in a massive operation in mangrove swamps at the southern tip of Viet Nam, military sources reported today.

The operation began at dawn Wednesday in Ua Mau Province. It was reported still under way today.

About 600 government troops were reported combing the mangrove swamps, supported by fighter planes and naval craft operating through the rivers and canals of the region near the coast.

The government forces captured a big Viet Cong ammunition dump Thursday after a 30-minute exchange with the guerrilla guard.

Six U.S. Marine helicopters ferried the ammunition back to a government-controlled area. It was the biggest haul of Viet Cong ammunition so far in the war against the Communist guerrillas.

The operation was launched by 22 U.S. Marine helicopters and eight Vietnamese army helicopters which lifted a paratroop battalion into four villages at dawn Wednesday.

Something To Boast About

The Texas Highway Department has something to boast about in its record of building the Interstate Highway system in this state. Costs per mile have been running 40 per cent below the national average.

This means that in Texas when the 3,000 miles allocated to the IS system are built, costs will have been a billion and a quarter less than they would have been had Texas come up to the national average of costs.

Look at it another way. If the nation had been able to come down to the Texas cost factors, the 41,000-mile system would cost 15 1/2 billion dollars less.

Of course there are some factors such as terrain and climate which may adversely affect costs in a few other states, but 40 per cent difference on the average seems out of line.

What makes the Texas record all the more remarkable is that this state has consistently led the nation in miles open to traffic and work in progress. Texas has opened 1,018 1/2 miles Interstate miles to traffic, and it has 1,322 miles of this work in progress.

These are some of the factors which the highway department has applied to its Interstate building program to effect maximum efficiency in application of funds. Advance planning by "stockpiling" engineering plans and developing a team of engineers experienced in IS type of work; a steady and planned flow of work (also resulting from planning) which has stabilized the Texas road contracting industry to the point of lowering contract rates; cooperation of Texas counties and cities in obtaining much required right of way even before advent of the IS program holding down right of way costs to fair figures; full utilization of local materials.

California, New York and Ohio with a $17 million per mile cost, Illinois with $13 million per mile, Pennsylvania with $15 million-per mile might well look to the Texas record. We suggest that they take an especially good look at the whole operation of the Texas Highway Department under the capable direction of the commission and State Highway Engineer D. C. Greer and his competent and dedicated staff. While they are at it, they might take a look at Texas' good roads.

Getting To Be A Habit

Once again, the Texas Railroad Commission has established an 8-day production pattern for the state's oil producers. This provides for nearly 40,000 barrels more per day than during August, but probably because September has one less day.

The suggestion has renewed that importers voluntarily reduce their imports by 30 to 40 per cent to allow Texas a 12 day pattern. Chairman W. J. Murray said he was coming to think that tighter mandatory controls would be necessary for relief from this direction. He probably is correct for there will have to be a great deal more industrial statesmanship exercised on the matter of imports than has been exhibited so far by the major concerns.

There are many factors intertwined in this problem such as trade instead of aid, taking oil to keep it away from the Reds, holding the line on domestic fuel costs through dilution of crude prices with foreign oil. In some cases survival of independents may be at stake, not to mention the state's economic and fiscal welfare. Hence a constant and close scrutiny is in order to find a more equitable solution.

David Lawrence More Political Than Economic

WASHINGTON — President Kennedy said over television and radio on Monday night that he was speaking as the only American official, along with the Vice President, elected "by all of the people" in all of the 50 states. But, unfortunately, he spoke as a politician seeking re-election and he did not tell the people the whole story of the economic plight that confronts them.

Mr. Kennedy said not a word about the cause of the last two recessions and not a word about the news development that happened the same day he spoke which can bring on the next recession—an arbitrary rise in wage costs which could materially reduce if not wipe out, most corporate profits.

FOR THERE appeared on the front pages of many newspapers—on the same morning that the President's speech was printed—the most important piece of news that has struck the business world since the 1959 strike in steel. It was announced by the executive committee of the AFL-CIO—which comprises some 17,000,000 members—that it had by formal resolution decided to demand a 35-hour work week and will insist on the same take-home pay as is being received for the 40-hour work week. Also, any overtime beyond 35 hours would have to be paid for not just on the basis of one and one-half times the hourly rate as at present, but at twice the hourly rate. The President has known for some time about this plan.

WHERE IS American business going to get the money to pay for the strikes that now will ensue or for such a stupendous rise in wage costs? What good can come from the tax reduction in 1963 of a few percentage points promised to American business if there is to be such a rise in wage costs?

Every consumer and businessman in America standing to me tonight knows he can safely spend and invest tomorrow with real confidence in the long-range future of the United States of America.

THE PRESIDENT says that the economy was sick in January of last year "not only because of the 1960-61 recession, but also because of the recession of 1958."

But the President didn't tell his listeners the fundamental cause of both recessions. The threat of strikes and the actual work stoppages caused inventories

MR. KENNEDY'S address would have been reassuring if he had covered all the bases, and if he had dealt with the labor problem. But being a politician and dependent on labor-union votes and campaign contributions, he probably feels he cannot afford to antagonize his political allies. Yet economic recovery of any durable kind is doubtful nowadays because Mr. Kennedy does not venture to speak for all the people or tell them the full story of the economic dangers that really confront them today.

Exit The Free Table

GASTONIA, N. C. — Free Picnic Table read the roadsign beside U.S. 29 near here.

Somebody took it literally. Gaston County Rural Police reported, and hauled off the table during the night.

James Marlow This Election's Too Peaceful

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's not normal. An American election campaign begins soon, for seats in Congress. And there's not an explosion or a deep, distracting, emotional disturbance in sight.

History says this can't last. There has been some surging or disquieting situation before each election going all the way back to 1948 when President Truman defeated Thomas E. Dewey.

In the midst of the presidential campaign that year, the United States was trying to break the Berlin blockade, not knowing where it would end—which the Russians had begun in the spring.

BY THE TIME of the 1950 congressional elections the United States was at war in Korea while here at home the country was being split apart on the Communist issue raised by Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

And on top of that, just a few days before the election a couple of assassins tried to kill Truman.

The Korean War was still going on its sickening way like a grisly ghost in the background, by the time of the 1952 presidential race. Republicans made it a central issue and Dwight D. Eisenhower promised, if he beat Adlai Stevenson, to go to Korea. He won and went.

There was no foreign crisis during the 1954 congressional campaign—the Korean War was over then—but there was an extraordinary distraction, with a deep emotional undercurrent, here at home.

THE CENSURE proceedings against McCarthy were being held during the election, resulting in his condemnation by the Senate.

But there was a shocking explosion in the midst of the 1956 presidential contest between Eisenhower and Stevenson. In fact, most of it happened just a few days before the election.

The British, French, Israeli attack on Egypt began, the Hungarians revolted, and Russia moved in and smashed the revolt.

Calm of a kind enveloped the 1958 congressional campaign, but it was far from complete. The Red Chinese were bombarding the offshore islands of the American by Chiang Kai-shek, and no one could be sure of the outcome.

There was just a little national uneasiness.

In 1960, except for the developing chaos in the Congo, all the explosions, and there never had been anything like them, burst before the presidential race.

But the reverberations hung over the campaign.

IT WAS IN that year, in the spring, that the Soviets shot down the American U2 spy plane over Russia, capturing the pilot, Francis Gary Powers, of the outcome.

And right on top of that, and because of that, Premier Khrushchev insulted Eisenhower broke up his summit conference with him, and called off the American President's scheduled trip to Russia.

Up till now in 1962 nothing has happened to jitter the American nervous system—no crisis, no explosion, no emotional issue—at home or abroad.

The recent Soviet achievement—putting two men into orbit at the same time—had no crisis, no threats, no tension for Americans. It was simply a performance.

To Your Good Health Some Polyps May Become Cancerous

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M. D.
Dear Dr. Molner: Some day when you run out of subject matter, would you write about rectal polyps? S. M. H.

Run out of subject matter, sure! Impossible! With the vast number of health questions people have, my problem is answering them.

A polyp is a small growth arising out of the mucous lining of an organ—any organ with such a lining. Polyps, for example, are quite common in the nose.

Rectal polyps can occur in any part of the colon. They may give no symptoms whatever, or on the other hand, they may ulcerate and cause bleeding.

There is a possibility that they may become cancerous. Not all of them do, but by any means, but enough risk is known so that they should be removed whenever found—I'm talking about polyps in the colon, not those in the nose which do not seem to have a tendency toward malignancy at all.

Removal of polyps, particularly in the lower part, is sufficiently simple so that it incurs no risk and permits examination of the tissue to be certain that it is benign.

Discovery of such polyps, before they cause any symptoms, is readily possible with the sigmoidoscope, an instrument fitted with a slender tube and light permitting direct examination of the interior of the colon.

In my opinion, this should be part of a complete physical examination. It is excellent insurance against the nuisance, a 4d worry of ulceration and bleeding, not to mention the possible ultimate risk of malignancy. Some cancer authorities, in fact, insist positively and without qualification, that all such polyps should be removed as soon as discovered.

As to polyps higher in the colon, beyond range of the sigmoidoscope, detection has to be by means of barium enema and X-ray. In this instance, management of the case is more complicated and depends on symptoms and the clinical judgment of the physician.

However, if we pay sensible heed to the lower polyps which are in 'easy range, we can feel that we have devoted reasonable care in taking care of ourselves.

Dear Dr. Molner: This last winter and spring I had flu repeatedly, one after another, and I feel completely worn out and discouraged, yet my physical check-up indicates that I am in good condition. Would flu shots help?

—MRS. J. S. STILLEY

Yes and no. You can't expect flu shots (a vaccine) to lift you out of the doldrums after an attack. The shots are a preventive measure, not curative.

Remember there are various strains of flu virus, and it is thus possible to have one attack after another. Flu vaccines are prepared in conjunction with government studies so that each year the vaccines protect against the strains most likely to appear at that time. They cannot promise 100 per cent protection against all varieties, but if you avoid some substantial portion of the known types, you have accomplished a lot.

Remember that these vaccines confer immunity only for a matter of months; new shots are required for the next year.

Don't Quit Because Of Arthritis is the title of my leaflet designed to help all who suffer the aches and pains of arthritis. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of The Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 5 cents in coin to cover cost of handling.

Dr. Molner is always happy to hear from his readers, but he regrets that he cannot answer individual letters due to the great number received daily. Whenever possible he uses readers' questions in his column.

Around The Rim He's Weakening—But Not Much

With a six-year-old car eating up my gas allowance, I've been thinking about applying for membership in that exclusive club of foreign car owners.

Some of the disadvantages are obvious—the size of the usual foreign make, for example, making it possible to be mistaken for a rabbit by a near-sighted eagle. Or, coming off worst in collision with a heavier car or a truck. Or, trying to squeeze 200 pounds into an automobile designed for nationalities who don't always get three squares a day.

BUT THEN, there are the advantages. Owners of foreign cars swear by them. They tell me my payments would be cut in half by my fuel savings, and that parking becomes a thrill rather than a chore.

And suppose I run out of gas on the highway miles from the nearest gas station. I am told that the smaller models come equipped with auxiliary wheelbarrow handles—so, in an emergency, I pick it up and wheel it to the top of the next hill, hop aboard, and coast down the other side and part way up the next hill.

SOME ADDICTS have told me of the sail technique—tying one's handkerchief to the radio aerial by all four corners so as to form a parachute-type sail. With these Texas winds a person could use this technique even without an emergency and really rack up a mileage record.

However, I doubt the yards I am told about how each foreign car has bicycle pedals for auxiliary power units. No one would dare try to sell to an American any contraption which required physical exertion to operate. ( see below).

NOW THAT I HAVE committed myself to thinking about joining the clique, there are those who give me advice about saving even more on fuel bills—like, why not buy a motorcycle and get 150 miles to the gallon? Or a motorcator, and get 230 m.p.g.? So even suggest I get a bicycle and do away completely with fuel, but this falls into the same classification as () see above.

Inez Robb A Great American Resource

On Sunday, one of America's great natural resources, Bernard M. Baruch, will celebrate his 92nd birthday anniversary. To say that he is full of years, wisdom and brains is to be redundant.

Undoubtedly between the congratulations and the birthday cake he will have his morning and afternoon swim in the outdoor pool of the Long Island retreat where he spends the summers. Last week, when the mercury grazed 50 in his section of the island, and guests half his years found the water too cold for a dip, he not only took his usual morning and afternoon plunge but threatened to toss the shivering non-swimmers into the pool.

HE AGREES with his old friend, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, who recently turned 82, that "a man shouldn't quit in his prime." (Although Mr. Baruch is apt to regard anyone in his 80s as rather boyish, including another old friend, Winston Churchill.)

At all odds, Mr. Baruch has not quit in his prime. Like another youngish friend, Herbert Hoover, who celebrated his 88th birthday anniversary recently, he believes that work is what keeps a man alive, hale and on his toes.

AT 92, MR. BARUCH leads an astonishingly active life. The men who seek him out in person and those who telephone him regularly for his advice or opinion on a variety of subjects from medical research to finance, and from atomic control to agricultural surpluses, compose a roster of Who's Who and not only in America.

"But, dammit, I don't want to be known as Citizen Fixit," he keeps exclaiming to men in and out of government who seek the benefit of his wisdom. "As anyone can see, I am the master of the obvious," he likes to insist, "just the master of the obvious."

IN EUROPE LAST month, when a distinguished foreigner said to Mr. Baruch, "But my nation is neutral," the American snorted. "And just how long do you think your country could afford the luxury of neutrality if the United States weren't the great power she is? Whose power do you think enables you to indulge in neutrality?"

It will take more than two Russian cosmonauts overhead to disturb his religious faith, amounting almost to a belief in the glory of the United States. Of course, he does not rule out the necessity for wisdom, decision and fortitude on our part. And sacrifice.

"FIRST THINGS FIRST" is an old Baruch rule of thumb. It is no secret that in the months since the stock market break, he has been besieged by persons in and out of government for his opinion on how to get the market and the economy moving upward again.

He believes that a nation, just as an individual, needs a system of priorities—"first things first"—to keep its financial house in order. A nation, like an individual, at times must choose, so to speak, between a new refrigerator and a new washer-dryer. When it clearly cannot afford both simultaneously, the country, like the citizen, must establish an order of priority for the programs it envisions. That is sound fiscal policy for citizen and for state.

AS HE APPROACHES his 92nd birthday anniversary, Mr. Baruch also believes that the nation's vast agricultural surpluses in a world in which so many people are hungry, could be a great national asset if properly husbanded and used.

As for the man himself, he remains extraordinarily sound in mind and body. He may walk a bit more slowly than in the past, but he still stands six feet four inches—a handsome man of distinction whose silver thatch is on a par with Robert Frost's. He goes to his office regularly, carries on a wide correspondence, sees all kinds of persons, plays an awesome game of bridge and mixes a dandy Old-fashioned Drinks. It's too

And like his young friends, Herbert Hoover and Sunny Jim, he has no thought of quitting in his prime.

Marquis Childs Deep Rift In Democratic Party

WASHINGTON — No matter what the final outcome—and the odds are heavily weighted on the side of the powers that be—the struggle in the Senate over control of the satellite communications system will leave a wounding division in the Democratic party.

The ideological nature of the struggle touches the roots of Democratic party conviction. The little band of so-called liberals, to appropriate a phrase out of an earlier, more earnestly embittered struggle, see themselves as defenders of the great mass of the people against the ever-increasing reach of corporate power.

THEY SEE themselves as the heirs of the Populists of William Jennings Bryan and the social advances of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal. This was the ideological base from which the Democrats, beginning in 1932, made themselves the country's majority party. This is no longer in effect asking. Then for what does the party stand and how can it claim support from the mass of the voters?

One evidence that this may touch the conscience of many reflective party members is the fact that the Democratic conference of 13 Western States showed sympathy for the fight of the dozen or so Senators who have been filibustering to prevent passage of the Administration bill putting the satellite communications system in a private corporation.

THERE IS a disturbing anomaly, as Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee noted, out of the recent past. Despite the blow of the stock market crash in the fall of 1929, the Republican party was still the confident instrument of America's glorious and prosperous future. On the night of November 2, Sen. George H. Moses of New Hampshire delivered a speech in which he used a phrase that was to become famous.

Moses denounced the rebels in the Republican ranks as "a host of wild jackasses" and, in effect, read them out of the party. These were the Western Senators, George Norris of Nebraska, William E. Borah of Idaho, Robert M. LaFollette Jr. of Wisconsin. They and others like them, and the voters for whom they spoke, were alienated.

A YEASTY, leavening element was lost. Norris became technically an independent, in fact a Democrat re-elected with the help of FDR. As today's opponents of the Administration measure like to recall, it was Norris who on at least three occasions led a filibuster to block a measure giving the great power site at Muscle Shoals to a private corporation. Norris was determined to save the site as the heart of a public power development which took shape as the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The powers that be in this struggle are powerful indeed. They include the Administration, the majority and minority leadership in the Senate, most of the Democrats and all of the Republicans and last, but far from least, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, with its great influence throughout the country.

THE OPPONENTS contend that ATAT will inevitably dominate the private corporation—with three Presidential-appointed directors on the board—and they charge in effect that the government is giving away half a billion dollars in research.

As was perhaps bound to happen, the little band in opposition has a feeling of martyrdom. They see the rich and powerful leaders of their own party leagued against them. At the head of this list they put Vice President Lyndon Johnson. He is overlord of the empire of space, and a hefty empire it is, with billions in contracts. How they are awarded and where the new installations go must count for a great deal.

NEXT ON THE roster they put Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, who, as chairman of the Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences, is the Vice President's close ally. Kerr is probably the wealthiest man in Congress. The uranium contracts of his own company with the government encompass hundreds of millions of dollars. His own oil and gas interests are extensive and he has major allies in the industry.

Kerr's position as No. 2 Democrat on the Finance Committee is possibly enough in itself to insure that any move to close or even narrow the 27 1/2 per cent depletion allowance tax loophole of the oil industry will fail.

IN THE VIEW of most of their colleagues the little band is a group of soreheads. Their martyrdom gives them away. They are sons of wild jackasses braving before the image of a past that is gone forever, and in the meantime they are holding up the business of the Senate and increasing the difficulties of their own President.

So rigid have the postures of the opposing sides become that the substance of the debate has largely been lost sight of. Would not a government-operated satellite system become merely another part of the swelling military bureaucracy? What about a lease to private communicating companies, with the government retaining ownership?

These and far more complicated questions have been raised. But with the fall elections approaching, the struggle in the Senate has stirred old emotions and raised new doubt.

Summer Heat
Eases A Bit
More In Texas

By The Associated Press
Summer heat eased off a bit more over Texas Friday, although a weak low front stalled in its southward push. Slight drizzle in the 10-degree cooler.
The leading edge of the cooler air, starting to lose well-defined shape, lay along an east-west line through the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Ahead of the approaching front a brilliant electrical storm roared through Houston Thursday evening, snarling traffic in zero visibility. Winds hitting 27 miles per hour in gusts accompanied the downpour.

Residents of the Westbury residential district in Southwest Houston blamed a small tornado for damage to four homes. It ripped away a porch, tore off a patio roof and smashed windows in the vicinity.

Lightning grazed several Houston buildings but there were no injuries. The storm left 1.28 inches of rain at the Houston airport and dropped the temperature from 89 to 84 in an hour.

Skies were clear to only partly cloudy and occasional showers had stopped throughout the state by Friday morning. Forecasts promised little change. Widely scattered thundershowers were predicted in South and extreme West Texas.

Thursday's top temperatures ranged from 100 degrees at Presidio and San Angelo down to 88 at Amarillo. The mercury reached 101 at Junction and 100 at College Station, San Antonio and Waco.

Optimists Will Sponsor
Boy Of Month Award

Big Spring Optimist Club is inviting the residents of Big Spring to submit nominations for the club's new boy-of-the-month activity.

The program begins with the meeting of Sept. 3. The movement is in accord with the state-wide program of the Optimist Club and is intended to recognize younger citizens of Texas.

Boys between the age of 11 and 17 will be eligible for nomination and the one chosen as Boy of the Month will be determined by the report the individual nominating him makes on the youth's school, church, activity, sports and employment.

The youth will be a guest of honor of the club and will be honored by the Big Spring Optimist Club. The youth will be first sent to the Optimist Zone I Contest. The youth will be first sent to the Optimist Zone I Contest. The youth will be first sent to the Optimist Zone I Contest.

At the end of the year, the district winners for each of the 12 months will compete and the winning youth will be awarded a $2,000 scholarship plus an all-expense trip to Washington, D.C. and a suitable trophy. The next two boys in the contest will receive scholarships valued at $1,000 each.

The officials said that to nominate a youth for the honor, the sponsor should obtain an official nominating blank from the Optimist Club. This should be filled out completely and supplemented by any additional information that may seem essential.

It was said the selection of the youth to be honored will depend wholly on the information afforded by the person making the nomination.

Additional information relative to the program can be had from John Crawford, who can be telephoned at AM 3-2340.

Camilli Sees That LA Ends Losing Streak

By MIKE RATHET Associated Press Sports Writer Reserve catcher Doug Camilli, inserted into the starting line-up for the first time since June, may have pulled Los Angeles' bedraggled forces together just in time for the Dodgers' invasion of Cincinnati tonight and a key four-game series with the Reds.

The right-handed swinger responded to the call by driving in four runs, and powering the National League leaders to a 7-3 triumph over Pittsburgh Thursday night that ended the Dodgers' longest losing streak of the season at five games.

Camilli, 25, whose father Dolph played for the then Brooklyn Dodgers in the late '30s and early '40s, gave the Dodgers a 3-3 tie with a sacrifice fly in the fourth inning, stroked a two-run single that put them out front in the sixth and added a home run for insurance in the eighth.

Camilli's efforts provided the Dodgers with an added buffer going into the Cincinnati series, boosting their edge over second-place San Francisco to 2 games while leaving the defending champion Reds 5 1/2 behind.

His team had a low-ball score of 60, 11 strokes under regulation figures.

Yanks Find Twin Ace Hard To Hit

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Sports Writer Big Frank Sullivan got credit for his third victory, without a loss Thursday when Minnesota's Bernie Allen looped a one-out single to left field in the 10th inning, driving in the run that beat the New York Yankees 9-8.

Sullivan blanked the Indians for seven runs in the first inning, and coasted in.

The big burst made it easy for Eddie Fisher (5-4), who gave up 12 hits, including ninth-inning home runs by Jerry Kindall and Ty Cline Jim Mudect Grant lost it.

Sullivan, who is 6 feet 7, picked up from the Philadelphia Phillies, has to rank as one of the big reasons the Twins are still close. He's either won or saved the game the last three times Minnesota has beat the Yankees.

The game attracted a crowd estimated at 1,000.

Proposed Baptist Church

This is a rendering of the over-all new plant which the First Baptist Church hopes to undertake. The large building at the right is the sanctuary which will rise to a height of about 60 feet, and at left is a chapel. Educational offices and classrooms connect along the front.

Church Plans To Be Firmed

The First Baptist Church is preparing to move into the working drawing phase of its church plant planning.

The congregation last weekend acted on preliminary plans and instructed the building committee to proceed with shaping final plans for the first phase of a major building project.

Included in this first phase is the sanctuary, currently designed to accommodate up to 1,500, plus educational facilities designed for a minimum of 800 attendance. These would include a one-floor wing along the front of the facility in addition to the main two-story unit which will be on the south side.

In effect, the plant will be split level since the 13-acre tract out of the former Country Club area slopes pronouncedly to the south. A second phase, if the entire plant is not feasible at the outset, would add more educational space, a fellowship hall-gymnasium and a chapel. The initial phase contains approximately 60,000 square feet of floor space. There is no fixed time table, Gary and Hohertz are architects.

Ezekiel Proclaims God's Love

THE DIVINE PROMISE OF THE COMING OF A SHEPHERD WHO WOULD BRING AN ABUNDANT AND UNCHANGING BLESSEDNESS

Scripture—Ezekiel 33:1-20; 34.

By N. SPEER JONES
THE SCENE of this week's lesson is still Babylon, at the Chebar canal near the capital. Ezekiel continues to preach to the exiles there, with one very important difference—Jerusalem has fallen to the conquerors in whose land he lives.

This fact means two things. First, it means that many, many more exiles join the group of captives already there. The area around Babylon becomes a center of the Judaistic remnant. Second, the occurrence of this great disaster means that Ezekiel may stop preaching the dire things to come. His warnings have done no good, but now, at least, he may change his message to one of consolation and hope.

Secondly, no matter how sinful a man has been, if he does repent and follow God's word, there is "life."

Lastly, he points out that this disaster has not been due to God's unfairness to His people, as they allege, but to themselves individually (Ezekiel 33:17-20).
Along with Ezekiel's change from warning to consolation comes a change in metaphor from watchman to shepherd (see chapter 34). Just as the good watchman and bad watchman were described, here we see Israel's false shepherds or leaders (the literal translation of "to shepherd" is "to rule") compared with the good ones, especially the coming Messiah Himself.

GOLDEN TEXT

"You are my sheep, the sheep of my pasture, and I am your God," says the Lord God.—Ezekiel 34:31.

In fact, he terms himself a watchman (Ezekiel 33:1-9). In an agricultural community, this was a very meaningful term; a tower was often erected over pasture lands, where a watchman might be on guard against attacking thieves or animals, and blow a trumpet to signal danger. Ezekiel says that if he had not warned the people of their impending doom, he would have been a very poor watchman.

Since the disaster, Ezekiel's message from God to the people is threefold. First, he points out that there is no hope without repentance. The exiles were so discouraged that they appeared more indifferent to their sins than ever, yet the first step toward recovery then, as now, was repentance.

COMMANDS EXCLUSIVE AND INCLUSIVE

The way Bible matters are handled and as simple as everyday matters. For example if you tell your son to go buy for the store sugar, salt and bacon and he goes and returns with something else you call that disobedience. So does God in dealing with His people. The "strange fire" in Lev. 10 was not something immoral but Nadab and Abihu were disobedient. They weren't mean boys but they were disobedient. They offered a different kind of fire on the altar than that which God had specified. A specific commandment is not a general commandment. A specific commandment includes the thing that is specified and excludes any and everything else. So it is relative to BAPTISM. Rom. 6:4 says we are buried with him by baptism — raised to walk in the newness of life. This law of being buried is specific it included burial and excludes sprinkling. Some say "This is only a little thing. I ask how little is disobedience?" And who are you or I to tell ourselves to say and be the judge? How little was the "strange fire" offered by Nadab and Abihu which cost them their lives for their disobedience? The command to "Sing" is specific it excludes other ways of making music. Mechanical music has no New Testament sanction but is the preference of people. Cain offered the fruit of the field because he preferred to do so. But by faith Abel offered up God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain — Heb. 11:4. Remember that Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God — Rom. 10:17. It is therefore evident that God had commanded both Cain and Abel to offer the "Fruit of the field." I ask was it necessary for God to say "Thou shalt NOT offer the fruit of the field" to make it wrong? Do you consider that if your child bring back from the store something else than that which you have specified that you have been disobedient? God loves us BUT HE IS STRICT and we will be judged severely on the day of judgment. It was not necessary for God to specify by name all the number of seeds and cuts which have risen to make them wrong. He simply gave us the positive truth of what His church is and we ought to follow it. Infant baptism is not wrong because of something immoral about it what the wrong and evil therein is that God has simply told us in the New Testament that baptism is for believers, and for penitent believers. Babies do not qualify. Acts 2:28. Mk. 16:16. Matt. 28:18-20. Let's not try to steal a march on God or outwit Him.

Patriarch Will Visit

By GEORGE McARTHUR
RETRAIT AP — For the first time a patriarch of the Maronite Roman Catholic Church will visit the United States this month.

Patriarch Paul Mouch, 68 will be received by President Kennedy in Washington and then tour the United States visiting his scattered flock—one of the most widely dispersed church groups existing today.

Temporarily displaced by the mounting Lebanese troubles throughout the Middle East, the Maronites are at once the pride and despair of their patriarch. It is a joy to announce that he will visit and be among our own people, he says, but some times at home we wish them to stay.

Although the Maronite Rite is identical in doctrine and the essential of worship with the Roman Catholic Church, it was separated by a schism and retained Lebanese identity. Maronites from Maron to Los Angeles look to the white-bearded patriarch in Lebanon as their leader, who is recognized by the Pope as the ultimate authority.

There are approximately 700,000 Maronites, about 25,000 of them live in the United States. Although no patriarch in office has ever visited the United States before, Patriarch Mouch was named a patriarch in 1959 and at the time became an American citizen. He reluctantly gave up his citizenship when ordered back to Lebanon. He said he felt his four required returning Lebanese citizenship.

He would like to be preferred to ministerial citizenship in both countries, he says. The United States should permit dual citizenship to many countries.

The United States was so free, he said, that it was a pleasure just talking to people. He was well received and was prepared to leave his days there when I was in Beirut.

At that time he was in Los Angeles, where he opened the first Maronite church. Shortly after his return to Lebanon he was made bishop of Tyre. He became patriarch in 1959.

Lebanon is still a hotbed of tension between Moslems and Christians. Most of the Christians are Maronites, and so the patriarch is regarded as spokesman for the Christian community.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake, (2) For his children's sake, (3) For the sake of his community and nation, (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

France Gives Up Indian Enclaves

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—France's last formal hold on Indian soil came to an end Thursday with the exchange of instruments ending to India the four coastal enclaves that formed French India.

India had controlled Pondichery and the other three enclaves—186 square miles with 500,000 people—since a de facto transfer treaty was signed in November 1954 in Paris.

Today's ceremony was the final act in a colonial history going back to the 17th century in which Britain, France, Portugal and Holland contended for control of India.

Teller To Speak At Science Meet

AMARILLO (AP)—Dr. Edward Teller, renowned as the "father of the hydrogen bomb," heads speakers for the Golden Spread Nuclear-Space Seminar here Aug. 27-28.

Many of the nation's top scientists, industrialists and educators will attend.

Securities Plea

AUSTIN (AP)—State Securities Commissioner William King says Independent Grocers Inc. of Abilene has applied for permission to sell $15 million in stock in Texas.

Official Sees No Cause To Change Space Plans

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara sees no reason why the United States should alter its carefully charted space plans because of the Soviet Union's spectacular double orbit.

It can be said authoritatively that McNamara does not feel there is reason to be concerned about the military implications of this latest Soviet experiment.

He does not believe that changes should be considered in either the U.S. military or space programs as a result of the double orbit feat.

Like McNamara, U.S. civilian space officials say they see no need to change their space program. James E. Webb, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration told a Wednesday news conference that the current program is fast paced.

Webb said the United States could gain time in the race to the moon if it shifted to a crash effort like the one that produced the first atomic bomb. But he said it would cost more money and "undoubtedly cut into the military program."

Associates said McNamara wasn't surprised at the latest Soviet space feat. The Soviets didn't do anything that he hadn't anticipated.

McNamara's view that no changes are needed will come as a disappointment to certain Air Force officers who advocated a bigger and broader American space effort in the military field.

This segment of Air Force opinion disagrees with McNamara on the military significance of the record orbital flights by two Soviet cosmonauts.

These officers see the Soviet experiments as aimed at developing military spaceships which might be armed with nuclear weapons, possibly superbombs of the type the Soviets have tested.

They want the United States—whose space program now is largely oriented to peaceful purposes—to get going with work on vehicles that could attack hostile satellites and possibly on offensive space weapons, too.

McNamara takes the position that the military requirements in space still are unclear. He does not know what those requirements may be.

So far, McNamara has received no specific Air Force proposal for expanding space research in the direction of creating war satellites and like space weapons.

This is surprising in view of the large amount of discussion generated by Air Force advocates of space war preparedness.

McNamara does not object to Air Force planners thinking ahead to the problem of waging war in space. At the Defense Department level, McNamara's people are thinking in the same terms.

But for the present, he believes a priority objective should be the development of a greater rocket capability so the United States could boost much bigger craft into space.

With such rocket power, McNamara feels, the United States would be in position to seize the military space initiative, if this became necessary.

In this connection, the Air Force is working on a Titan III rocket which its designers expect would generate enough power to send aloft space payloads heavier than 5,000 pounds. And the U.S. Saturn C5 booster now under development is designed to produce 7.5 million pounds of thrust.

The Defense Department already supports a considerable space program, all but a small part of it run by the Air Force.

This program includes work on satellites to detect enemy missiles as soon as they leave their pads, to take pictures of military bases and terrain in potentially enemy country, and to provide instantaneous worldwide communications for the services.

The Navy is in the space business, too, with its transit navigation satellite system expected to be in business this year.

Schirra Will Fly Only Six Orbits

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP)—A top American space official says astronaut Walter M. Schirra Jr. will be limited to six orbits of the earth, no matter how well his Project Mercury flight goes.

The mission is scheduled for recovery near Midway Island after six orbits, and that is the way it will be flown, D. Brainerd Holmes, director of manned space flight programs for the United States, said Thursday.

Thus, the fact that two Soviet cosmonauts zipped around the earth for three and four days will have no immediate effect on the U.S. program.

NEXT, 18 ORBITS

Holmes said Schirra, a Navy commander, will be launched on his space venture in the middle or at the end of September. His will be the only six-orbit mission, the space chief said. The next Mercury flight will be for 18 orbits and take a full day.

"I will commit to you that this nation will be second to none in the conquest of space," Holmes said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration official told his audience at Virginia Polytechnic Institute he was somewhat surprised at the reaction of many qualified people to the Soviet achievement.

"If we felt that this was surprising, then we were selling the Russians short," he said. "What they have done can be traced in every aspect to a large payload of considerable capacity and reliability fired over and over again."

"They did it—something we could not do. Far from belittling the Russians, one should have expected it."

Holmes defended Mercury astronaut John J. Glenn Jr. and Malcolm Scott Carpenter against complaints voiced at the conference here that as military test pilots primarily, their scientific findings had been disappointingly thin.

SCIENTISTS, TOO

The complaints were coupled with a suggestion that NASA train scientists as future astronauts.

"Glenn and Carpenter didn't just sit there and stew about whether their retrorockets would get them back to earth," Holmes said. "They went about their missions with keen interest, and made good observations."

Holmes said it would be impossible to include scientists among the first Apollo crews unless they were qualified to act as pilots.

In great detail, he outlined the steps by which three U.S. astronauts are to be launched—by an advanced Saturn C5 rocket—some time before the end of this decade, in an Apollo spacecraft, into orbit around the moon.

Two of the spacemen will leave the Apollo craft in a small capsule, or "bug," to land on the moon.

Holmes said this country would be unable to launch two astronauts into simultaneous orbit because NASA has only one Mercury-Atlas launching pad.

But, he added, NASA probably would not choose to do it with an Atlas booster even if it could. The Mercury spacecraft, he said, is considerably smaller than the Soviet Vostok spacecraft and would not be able to support life as long as the Soviet craft.

Holmes said that Apollo spacemen who approach the moon in the "bug" will be able to change their minds about landing at the last moment should conditions on the moon appear to be too dangerous.

Should the "bug" lose its propellant power, he said, the two men would be able to escape from the capsule and grab lifelines to transfer back to the mother craft, which will be capable of going after them if they are in trouble.

Holmes said the "bug" would detach from the Apollo craft at an appropriate time when it is in orbit 100 miles above the moon. The two men would fly close to the lunar surface, however a minute and, if they wished, still could get back to the mother ship before it was out of sight.

The first Apollo mission will spend only one day on the moon.

Holmes said some consideration is being given to landing on the moon during the "earth-glow"—that is, at night, to avoid the problem of intense heat.

Those French Spies Are Efficient

For the second time in less than a year, Sophia Loren wiggled her voluptuous figure into a form fitting nude colored leotard and swam in ice cold water to please the requirements of a supposedly naked movie scene. The first dip occurred in Spain when she made "The Pride and The Passion." The second occurred outside the town of Ghamès, Libya, North Africa, where "Legend of the Lost" was filmed.

Now Ghamès, located on the rim of the Sahara, is fifty miles from everywhere, but somehow, and it remains a mystery to this day, 200 French soldiers garrisoned in Algeria showed up at the lone lake on the morning of Sophia's dip.

And they were all equipped with binoculars.

Connally Loses Grass To Fire

FLORESVILLE, Tex. (AP)—Firemen from three cities worked until early Thursday to stop a grass fire that for a time threatened ranch houses and barns owned by John Connally.

The buildings on the ranch of the Democratic candidate for governor were saved when firemen from Floresville, Poth and Pleasanton, plus hundreds of neighbors, plowed and set backfires.

Connally's crop of coastal Bermuda grass was lost. The fire was probably started when lightning hit a tree shortly after dark. None of the Connally brothers was home.

Mrs. J. E. Connally, mother of the candidate, said the grass, grown in watered pastures, was virtually wiped out on the 4-C ranch.

PASSIONS ABLAZE! AN EMPIRE AFLAME!

THEODORA, SLAVE EMPRESS

ON THE SHELF

THE RIVER AND THE WILDERNESS By Don Robertson. Doubleday, $7.50. By The Associated Press.

This novel has a Civil War setting, but it has the universal qualities of a story about men and women caught up in any war.

It is big, and it deals with many characters. It has graphic passages about fighting, and it has sharp vignettes that tell revealing things about the human personality. In its 764 pages there are many discursive incidents that are like small narrative swarms in the main current of the story.

As a Civil War novel, it has a "modern" tone. There is no sense about the rustle of ermine, the smell of jasmine or the dashing captain carrying off the sweet simpering belle.

On the other hand, it does not swing as far to the side of blood and obscenity as some novels dealing with more recent wars. It is earthy and direct, as war is earthy, recording a firm measure of the sweat, mud, swartheness, hunger and brutality of combat.

The story has several major characters on each side of the fight. On the Union side there is Major George Peters, who had flunked out of West Point and then had become a ham actor because he had fallen in love with a Shakespearean actress of considerable greed, Henrietta Blackstone. The other woman in George's life had been Nancy, who married an Indiana farmer named Henry Ferris, and Henry is a corporal in George's regiment.

On the Confederate side there is a colonel named Hard Andy DeLong, a sadist from one of the First Families of Virginia; his wife Phyllis frustrated into becoming a wine-drinker, and a giant of a fighting man named Marlin Slocum.

The range of human emotions, from fear to courage, from boredom to ironic laughter, is conveyed in these pages. This is Robertson's third book about the Civil War and he knows his subject. His style ranges from staccato rifle-fire sentences to the torrents of words that depict the mental processes of men under pressure.

Perhaps this book should have been shorter. But the author has undertaken much and accomplished much.

One thing is sure. You won't forget these people of the North and the South very soon.
