sale is over the top. Lemon Velvet Walter Eubanks, co-chairman of the sale committee, said Saturday that Friday night's effort had just about wound up the job. "We have just five bags of .candy left on hand at the church," he said. "There are a few bags still in the hands of selling groups but I believe by Monday all will be sold." He said that Friday night saw 142 bags sold and that the club is now in a position to declare the sale a success. "The 2,000 bags of candy cost us $1,250. We will have $2,000 on hand when we complete the sale.

This will give the club $750 to pay on the note it owes at the bank," Eubanks said. He was referring to a note for $1,400 which the club owes as its part in the cost of providing Howard County Junior College with four new tennis courts.

LOOKING EM OVER

By TOMMY HART

The Big Spring-Cooper football game last weekend was doubly significant to the Steers because showed that Albert Fierro could step into the breach and efficiently serve as the Longhorn navigator.

Little Rickey Wisener remarked following the game that he could take his knee cap and roll it all around his knee but he insists he'll be ready for Odessa Permian this week.

I think the Steers had rather beat Permian than any other foe on their schedule. Permian has dealt out misery to the Steers since it joined District 2-AAAA and the local boys have long memories.

The misery, incidentally, spilled over into the B game and other sports. The watchwords at the local high school all season have been "Beat Permian!"

The Friday game here should attract the biggest home crowd in history. The Steers are richly deserving of such support.

Officiating in the Big Spring-Cooper game left something to be desired.

Not a yard was stepped off against Cooper by the arbiters during the contest, although one of the men in striped shirts threw the flag at the very end of the first half and charged the Cougars with "piling on." The call kept a Big Spring drive going and the Steers got their third touchdown after play had officially run out. Between halves, one of the officials approached Chuck Moser, athletic director of the Abilene schools, and confessed: "We sure goofed on that call. We didn't even step off yardage against Cooper." The officials had been imported out of Fort Worth for the game. One of them was John Bray, who in the late '30's quarterbacked a Big Spring all-star football team to a victory in a post season victory over a Hobbs, N.M., team in a game played in Hobbs. Among other Big Spring players in the game were

A Devotional For The Day

Be not therefore anxious for the morrow. (Matthew 6:34. ASV.)

PRAYER: God of faith, hope and love, we thank Thee that life is a pilgrimage of faith, and that he who puts his trust in Thee shall never be disappointed. May we so walk this day that Thou wilt open up new vistas to us. We ask it in the name of Him who said, "Be not . . . anxious for the morrow." Amen.

Holmes Alexander The Valuable Marine Corps

the other day, the Marine Corps suffered its first casualties on that line front where American troops are in shooting relationship with the Communist enemy. A helicopter went down, killing three Marines and two of their officers. The disaster nudged public attention to the little-known presence of a Marine Air Group in combat in Southeast Asia.

DURING A Congressional session when the three major services stirred considerable discussion about roles and missions, the Marine Corps made little fuss. The Army wants to extend its aviation facility; the Navy got a new Chief of Operations in Admiral Anderson; the Air Force went in for anti-guerrilla training, but the Corps quietly revamped its Reserve gram as of July 1st, so that its drillpay force is ready for an emergency call with a full Division and a full Air Wing to add to the three Divisions and whree Air Wings now in active service. But despite its low-key motif, the Corps is very much in the changing Defense picture.

WASHINGTON-Out in South Vietnam men, the Marines are sometimes lost sight of in the national consciousness which gets fixed upon Intercontinental Missiles, Polaris submarines and five Army divisions in West Europe alone. But the bent of Pentagon thinking, which may be wishful or may be deeply informed, is toward peacekeeping rather than warmaking, and this makes the Corps a very realistic foreign policy instrument in the Cold War. The availability of Marines with the Sixth and Seventh Fleets has an importance in the Mediterranean and the Far Pacific, and their presence at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base can very well be a major factor in what finally happens in Cuba.

> SIGNIFICANTLY, the Marines are positioned on the vast Cold War chessboard at places where there is the least control by the leaders of the United States and Russia. A major war over Berlin would result from very careful calculation in the rival capitals. No mere burst of gunfire, or sudden assassination, would bring the clash of armies in Europe, or cause the big missiles to fly. There would be cold, political decisions before that phase of World War III.

Around The Rim The Mortality Of Presidents

One thing and another: Six of our presidents have died in office. Co-incidentally, each man was elected on a 20-year cycle. William Henry Harrison (Tippecanoe and Tyler, too) was elected in 1840, passed on one month after his inauguration. Abraham Lincoln was voted into office in 1860 and was slain early during his second term. James A. Garfield was elected in 1880 and later felled by an assassin's bullet. William McKinley died the same way after being named by the people in 1900.

Warren G. Harding, chosen by the electorate to fill the nation's highest office in 1920, never lived to fulfill his term of office.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, elected for the third time in 1940, departed this mortal coil, while still in office. John F. Kennedy was also elected on a 20-year cycle-in 1960. Perhaps the jinx, after enduring a century, has run full cycle.

I LIKE THE story about the preacher, new to his job, who was shocked to see the senior deacon quietly lift a half-dollar from the collection plate before leaving the rest of the money at the altar. After the sermon, the minister called the veteran officer into his study and admonished him:

"How do you explain taking money from the plate?"

"Oh, you mean that old half-dollar of mine?" the deacon replied. "Parson, 1 been leadin' off with that for the last 18 years." . . .

The percentage of home freezers in that state's farms ranks it as number seven among the 50 states of the nation in that type of appliance.

Montana farms lead the list-it can get a little cool there, too. Nearly three-quarters of the farms in Montana are equipped with freezers. On the other hand, only a third of the farms in balmy Hawaii are so equipped.

The proportion of farms with home freezers has increased from 32 to 56 per cent in the country as a whole, according to a report issued by the USDA's Economic Research Report.

Random thoughts in a time of crisis or present crisis could persuade Fifth Aveprelude to the melancholy days-Not to put a Pollyanna face on the current situation, still and all, it's an ill wind, etc. The decision on the part of both major political parties to curtail electioneering and campaign oratory is a great break for John Q. Citizens' in other parts of the nation may be starting to stock up. But there will be no hoarding in New York City. That fact does not imply any superior virtue on the part of New Yorkers. But where, in the average New York apartment, can you find room to stash an extra five pounds of sugar And who is willing to admit he is old enough to remember when the word 'quarantine'' meant a bright yellow sign, tacked to the front and back doors of the house and reading "Smallpox," "Chickenpox," "Diphtheria" or "Scarlet Fever"?

WHAT OTHERS SAY

A study of mutual funds prepared for the Securities and Exchange Commission by the Wharton School is a comprehensive and largely factual report that provides the first real profile on depth of a dynamic, expanding industry. It should be useful to the public and Congress and, above all, to the industry itself, for it presents a wealth of information on the scope of mutual funds and the problems that they face.

Mutual funds have the important function of offering the small investor the advantages of diversifying risk. They could not have grown at so impressive a rate. averaging 14 per cent a year, if they had not done a good job in filling a vacuum left by other financial institutions.

The Wharton report suggests that the industry is a giant that has not entirely come of age. For instance, the practice of charging a flat percentage for advisory services may have been appropriate when a fund was in its infancy; but it is not when funds increase vastly in size, for costs do not rise in proportion to growth in assets. Though the investor may think he is protected by the fact that 40 percent of a fund's directors must be independent, the report makes clear that management control is prevalent. Because the appeal of mutual funds is mainly to the small, unsophisticated investor, it is understandable that industry executives have been attacking the report, even before its publication, for undermining public confidence. Confidence, however, can be destroyed more quickly by pretending that problems do not exist than by taking corrective action.

week.

If the industry is prepared to live up to its responsibilities, then there will be no need for any major legislation.

Independent directors can raise standards throughout by insisting that their own funds follow the example set by the best-managed groups.

David Lawrence Nuclear Stalemate Exists

ways easy to deflate, but it isn't necessary to succumb to fears when indubitable facts point the other way.

For if there is one thing that is plain about the world situation today in contrast to any other period in history, it is that a nuclear stalemate exists now which restrains the two major powers from destroying one another.

THE TWO WORLD wars of this century came about because there was no balance of power such as prevails today. One side-the Kaiser in 1914 and Hitler in 1939-was really in each instance stronger militarily than the other side. Also, the assumption in Berlin on both occasions was that the United States either wouldn't enter the war at all, or that its help would come too late to affect the result.

Today there is a balance of terror, and what has happened in respect to Cuba doesn't alter the over-all situation in anyway. For Nikita Khrushchev isn't going to risk the lives of millions in the Soviet Union in order to help Castro save face. The people of the Soviet Union still remember their battle casualties in the second world war-amounting to at least 7,500,000. The surviving relatives are numerous. If there's any one thing certain, it is that the Soviet people will not wish Mr. Khrushchev to start a war, and he will not throw any bombs unless they are thrown at his people. It is equally certain that the United States will not start a war or throw any bombs at the Soviet people unless this country has been attacked or there is a certainty that it will

FOR ALL PRACTICAL purposes, the stalemate will continue for a long, long time. What confuses many people, and understandably, too, is the fact that bluffing in international policy has not become outmoded. The dangers of miscalculation are always theoretically present. It is often asked: "But supposing somebody pulls cians's advice I have been taking the trigger by mistake?"

> The answer is that it takes more than one man to make a decision of such importance either in Moscow or in Washington, and the people who surround any commander-in-chief newadays know the consequences to them and their families

WASHINGTON - A war scare isn't al- bluffing tends to become less significant. Thus, it may well be that President Kennedy's vacillation on the Cuban issue in recent months wrongly gave the Soviets an impression of irresoluteness in the White House. But whatever inferences were drawn from this unfortunate period, the President has exhibited a positiveness and a firmness beginning with his speech last Monday night that now can hardly be misconstrued anywhere.

> THE WAITING period in itself could be regarded as constructive, except for one thing-the missile bases in Cuba already functioning which a reckless Castro could use. That's the real danger to this country and it ought to be removed. There are two ways to do it-one is by using our bombers to wipe out the missile bases, and the other is by pressure on Cuba through Moscow, which could be brought about by the influence of the United Nations

> The important point is that the bases have to be dismantled. They cannot be left as a means by which Castro or anybody else can attempt to blackmail the United States.

> THE TURNING BACK of certain Communist-bloc ships now on the oceandoubtless by orders from Moscow-is a healthy sign. It proves that the Soviets aren't interested in "escalating" the situation still further and would prefer to wait and see what happens in Cuba itself. Castro can be sacrificed at any time by Khrushchev, and, even if the missile bases were destroyed by force, the Soviet Union would logically do no more than issue propaganda protests. A world war to save Castro wouldn't be justified in the eyes of the Soviet people.

> There is always the risk that the American policy may be weakened in appearance by a letdown in any of the measures of defense already taken. The deployment of ships and Marines around Cuba and the maintenance of the "quarantine" or blockade are all necessary, at least until the missile bases are dismantled either voluntarily by Castro or otherwise.

They became unnecessary as Khrush chev promised to dismantle the missile bases and bring the rockets home.

Actual military action against Cuba probably would not have been launched Sunday, informed sources said.

But it was clear such action would not have been long delayed because, as one official put it, "time was telescoping."

The evidence, gathered by reconnaissance planes all last week and the week before, showed the Russians were rushing work on the missile bases to get them into firing shape as soon as possible.
