Russia's March Back To UN

By returning to the United Nations Security Council, Russia is giving the world one more dramatic lesson in the nature of Soviet diplomacy. The world should mark it well.

The lesson is that Moscow is completely cynical in her dealings with other nations. She may vow over and over at the top of her lungs that she never will take a certain step, and give elaborate reasons why.

Then suddenly Russia may execute a full right-aboutface and do the very thing she said endlessly she'd never do.

In this case, the Soviet Union walked out of the Security Council last January in protest against its failure to seat Communist China in place of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist representative. Through succeeding weeks, Soviet delegates deserted every UN agency on which Nationalist China was represented.

Russia shouted in a hundred different ways that she'd never set foot in UN council chambers until Red China was admitted.

Soon afterward the Soviet leaders stooped to the lowest depths of cynicism. Taking advantage of Indian Prime Minister Nehru's well-intentioned desire to mediate the Korean war, Premier Stalin announced that Red China's admission to UN councils was a necessary prelude to any talk of peace.

Our government turned down Stalin's blackmail terms. Still Moscow persisted, repeating its offer via fact now has developed that the competition between U. S. airlines mond lead with dummy's ace, and official radio broadcasts.

One who was foolish enough to take Russian statements at face value would have concluded from this that government time. Russia began the Korean war to get Communist China into the UN.

How fraudulent this pose was can be seen clearly now. A brief telephone call from Jacob Malik, Russia's Security Shimon, who spied on the Argentine American competition. ## COMMERCIAL CANNERS PREFER FRESH SUGAR

... so should you!

When thousands of dollars worth of fruits and vegetables are being canned by commercial canners they prefer fresh sugar. They can't take chances on old sugar that might affect the delicate flavor or keeping quality of their pack due to thermophillic contamination. Fresh sugar helps assure your canning success, too.
