Eight Midland Schools Will Open Tuesday

Two new-school buildings will receive students Tuesday as the 1950-51 school term opens with the largest enrollment in Midland history.

More than 4,200 students in eight public schools are expected to respond to opening day roll call at 8:55 a.m. Tuesday. Several hundred more are expected to start to school within the first six weeks.

A ninth school in Midland, St. Ann's Parochial, is to open September 11, with 180 students in kindergarten and six elementary grades. The new Catholic School still is under construction, but the Rev. Francis Taylor, pastor, said he hoped to have classrooms ready by September 11.

In the public schools, all elementary students will go directly to their classrooms. Crockett Elementary, the newest in the expanding Midland system, is to be ready for full-day use by all classes except the first and second grades.

First graders at Crockett will attend in the morning, from 8:55 a.m. until noon. Second graders will attend from 12:30 p.m. until 3:40 p.m. Supt. Frank Monroe expects to be able to institute a full day schedule for first and second grades within a few weeks. Monroe also reminded parents of students at Crockett Elementary that the cafeteria is not completed, and students should make plans either to bring their lunches or to go home for lunch. The lunch period is 50 minutes.

Orientation Periods

At Midland High School, freshmen are to report to the auditorium at 8:35 a.m. for a short orientation period, while all other classes are to go directly to scheduled rooms.

Special orientation periods are scheduled for John M. Cowden Junior High School. Eighth grade students will meet in the auditorium; seventh grade in the gymnasium; and sixth grade in the cafeteria. All meetings will begin at 8:55 a.m.

Cohen Aide Avows He'll Sue Rangers

LOS ANGELES —(P)— A writer who came to Texas last week with gambler Mickey Cohen and quickly flew out under the watchful eyes of the law says he's going to sue the Texas Rangers for false arrest.

Plans for the suit were disclosed Sunday night by Denny Morrison and his wife, columnist Florabel Muir. They claimed Morrison's "civil liberties were violated" and said suit will be filed in federal court as soon as "we decide on an attorney."

Miss Muir, who writes for the Los Angeles Mirror and the New York Daily News, said Morrison was representing her on the trip and was in Texas "on legitimate business."

Landed At Midland

Morrison, Cohen and a companion landed at Midland Airport, then drove to Odessa and Wichita Falls. Texas Rangers picked them up there, hustled them to Fort Worth and watched them board planes leaving Texas.

Col. Homer Garrison, head of the Texas Department of Public Safety, said Cohen came to Texas to try to start a gambling empire. Cohen said he entered the state looking for "an oil deal."

Miss Muir said Morrison's business on the trip was "to check on information that Dave Ogil (missing Cohen henchman) was in Texas." Ogil skipped town last year, leaving Cohen holding a $25,000-bail check.

The Muir-Morrison plans came to light when the pair telephoned Sheriff Hammett Vance at Wichita Falls to discuss the case.

In Austin, Garrison, boss of the rangers, said "We have no statement to make" on the plans.

THE AMERICAN WORKER—He did it before and he can do it again. The brains, brawn and mechanical know-how that gave us the greatest war production the world has ever seen are on the job again, meeting the challenge of a foreign creed that scorns the integrity of individual man and makes of him a slave of tyranny.

Red Korean Tommy-Gun Girl Shoots Seven Bound, Captive American GI's

By STAN SWINTON

MASAN FRONT, KOREA —(P)— A Red Korean tommy-gun girl shot seven American prisoners Sunday night. They were captured in their sleep and their hands were tied behind them.

Two survived the hail of bullets but were left for dead. Also slain was a South Korean assigned to guard the detachment—a Signal Corps unit stationed atop a rain-swept hill only three miles from Masan port on the south coast.

"It is an absolutely verified atrocity of the most vicious sort," said an American investigator. The investigator could not be named because he is an intelligence officer.

The story was pieced together from a bedside interview with the two American survivors. Other details were added by a South Korean interpreter, Chung Kyu Yun, who escaped after wrenching his bonds apart.

One of the survivors, a Michigan soldier who can not be named until relatives are advised he was shot, said the detachment was asleep when attacked by ten Reds—three of whom were girl guerrillas—about 19 years old.

"They tied our hands, grouped us together and then one shot us down," he said. "I could not see which one did it."

But the other survivor, a corporal from New York City who was shot in the stomach, whispered that one of the girls shot them.

The interpreter said a rainstorm blew over a small tent where the South Korean guards slept. Chung and one guard who acted as an orderly moved into the Americans' tent to sleep.

Three other South Koreans, supposedly guarding the radio station, decided it was too wet outside. They set up the small tent again. They took out their wet clothes and were inside, naked, when the guerrillas, disguised as South Koreans, burst into the Americans' tent.

The sleepy Americans and two South Koreans leaped up to find Russian-made tommy-guns thrust in their faces. The three girls had knives and hand grenades tucked in their belts, Chung said. One had a tommy-gun. The other two pointed captured American carbines.

"They tied our hands behind us," Chung went on. "Then they heard shouts outside. The guards had started firing. They (the Reds) ran outside to see what was happening. 'I wrenched my bonds apart to get help. They shot at me but missed.'"

Chung ran all the way to the surgical hospital. They sent a patrol of South Korean guards up. A few minutes later, another patrol of volunteers from the hospital was led by Capt. Homer Mihm of Los Angeles.

Back on the hill, the guerrillas drove off the three guards, went back into the tent and ordered the seven Americans and one remaining Korean prisoner to stand. Then one woman shot them down with her tommy gun, leaving the bodies sprawled in a heap, hands still bound.

Ford Boosts Wages Of 126,000 Workers In Five-Year Contract

DETROIT —(P)—The Ford Motor Company boosted the wages of its 126,000 plant workers Monday and otherwise made history in a new five-year labor contract.

Ford, last of the auto industry's "big three" to fall in line in the march to higher pay levels, did it in an unprecedented manner.

On this mid-century Labor Day, the company junked one contract with the CIO United Auto Workers and agreed to a brand new one.

Its major terms:

1. An eight-cent hourly cost of living increase to 110,000 production workers. This would be subject to reduction in event of a fall in living costs.
2. Hitting the wage to the cost of living—in that respect duplicating the famed General Motors precedent.
3. An increase in worker pensions from $100 monthly to $125, including Social Security.
4. A four-cent flat annual hourly increase for four years of the contract.
5. A 13-cents-an-hour cost of living increase for 16,000 skilled workers, subject to reduction.

Ford and union reached the agreement after three days and nights of secret negotiations climaxed in a full understanding about 3 a.m. Monday.

Safe crackers struck one of the biggest blows in history here Sunday night, tearing into three safes and a filing cabinet at A & L Housing Company and hauling off another safe from the B & B Food Store.

About $250 was taken in the A & L job and about $100 in change was in the strong box removed from the grocery store.

The A&L job was one which required much time and effort. A combination safe-filing cabinet in the private office of Paul McHargue, vice president and general manager, was torn open on the second floor of the building. Another larger safe in an office adjoining McHargue's had its knob knocked. The filing cabinet was on the same floor in another part of the building.

The money was taken from a safe on the ground floor in the business office. The heavy door was mangled and the contents of the safe were ransacked.

Midland police and officers from the Sheriff's Department were at work on the two cases bright and early Monday.

Three Hurricanes Dot Weather Map

MIAMI, FLA. —(P)— Three hurricanes, one with winds up to 150 miles an hour, spotted the weather map Monday.

One skirted the Florida west coast and offered a potential threat to the Apalachee Bay area, due south of Tallahassee, after bypassing the tourist cities of Fort Myers, Sarasota and St. Petersburg.

Southeast storm warnings were ordered up north of Jacksonville to Charleston and hurricane warnings remained displayed from Sarasota to Apalachee.

May Bring Squalls

The storm was expected to bring squalls with winds of gale force to North and Central Florida during the day and in North Florida Monday night.

Another hurricane which backtracked after bypassing Bermuda turned northward again and headed out to sea in the Atlantic without causing any damage to the island resort.

A third disturbance, described by the Miami Weather Bureau as a "severe hurricane," was about 1,000 miles east southeast of Miami, moving northwest or north at about seven or eight miles an hour. It packed winds up to 150 miles an hour near the center and hurricane force winds (75 miles an hour or more) extended outward for 60 miles; with gales extending 150 miles from the center.

General Rains Are Reported In Area

General rains fell in Midland and West Texas Sunday and early Monday—the slow kind that will be beneficial to late cotton and grain crops and to range land.

The rainfall covered a wide area. It was reported heavy in the Pecos area and at Monahans, Wink and the area surrounding.

Precipitation recorded at the City Barn here totaled .35 inch up to 10 a. m. Monday. The CAA office at Midland Air Terminal reported .27 inch.

San Angelo, Big Spring, Lamesa, Stanton and the area to the south and east reported more than a half-inch from intermittent showers.

The heaviest fall was about 5.15 a. m. Monday in Midland.

Rain Dampens Texas Labor Day Holiday

By The Associated Press

Texas weather didn't cooperate Monday with plans for Labor Day picnics and outdoor celebrations.

Over the entire state heavy, dripping clouds were hanging and rain was falling intermittently. The outlook was the same for Tuesday.

Temperatures were on the cool side except in deep South Texas and along the border. Laredo's 94 was high Sunday. The low Texas reading Monday was a chill 54 at Marfa in the Big Bend country.

Roping Is Day's Top Attraction

Thousands of Midland and area residents were expected to flock to the Midland Rodeo Grounds on East Highway 80 Monday afternoon to attend one of Texas' biggest Labor Day celebrations.

Matched roping contests, featuring four of the world's top calf ropers, a five-gaited and jumping horse show, and a special jackpot roping program, were on tap for the Labor Day entertainment.

Toots Mansfield, Big Spring, holder of the world's calf roping championship for five years, and Troy Fort of Lovington, N. M., the current champion, were to be matched in the feature attraction. Each roper was to rope and tie 12 calves each. Sonny Edwards, Big Officials in charge of the Labor Day matched calf roping contests announced shortly before press time Monday that early morning rains had not damaged the area. Cal Boykin, director of the event, said the arena is in good shape and the event will be held on schedule.

Spring, and Walton Poase, Rankin, were to be paired against each other with each roper trying six calves.

Davis To Direct

The five-gaited and jumping horse show, billed as one of the best ever to be staged in this area, was under the direction of Chappell Davis, a Midlander with a wide reputation as a horseman.

Six entries had been posted in the five-gaited contest and three entries, all of El Paso, were posted in the jumping class.

The big Labor Day program is sponsored by the Midland County Sheriff's posse with Cal Boykin, posse foreman, as director of the event.

Allies Repel All Thrusts In Other Sectors

TOKYO —(P)— Two tank-led Red Korean columns cracked Allied lines on the northeast war front Monday and forced down main highways in a power drive that threatened to outflank strategic Taegu.

The Reds broke through defenses south of Kigye in the Pohang sector. Advance spearheads rolled south 12 1/2 miles for the greatest Red gain in weeks.

Elsewhere on the 120-mile front, Allied forces beat back fresh Communist attacks. An American counter-thrust by Marines and Doughboys ground out gains in the Reds' Nakdong River bulge west of Yongson.

Pioneer Will Seek New Hearing On El Paso-Amarillo Route

DALLAS —(P)— Pioneer Air Lines plans to ask the Civil Aeronautics Board to reconsider and allow its Amarillo-El Paso route to be continued.

The CAB last week extended Pioneer's operation right on four of its five routes. It did not renew the authority for the Amarillo-El Paso route.

Harding L. Lawrence, vice president of traffic and sales, said the airline would furnish additional information to the CAB in its request for an extension.

Fire Department Facilities Not Adequate

By DALMON McNAIR (Fifth of a Series)

One fire station is not adequate for a city of more than 21,000 inhabitants.

That not only is the opinion of Midland city officials, it also is the consensus of the Texas State Fire Insurance Commission, which has recommended the city add two new substations and make extensive improvements on the central station.

A $175,000 item in the $3,500,000 bond proposal to be placed before city voters Saturday would provide funds to construct a new substation on Midland's south side and a new substation either in the north or northeast sector of the city. The funds also would be adequate to provide additional equipment to meet the standards of the Fire Insurance Commission and either relocate or remodel the present central station.

A $50,000 proposal for the construction of a new city jail, also will be offered voters in Saturday's election.

State Recommendations

Recommendations made recently by the State Fire Insurance Commission include the provision for the two new substations and enlargement or relocation of the central station, to provide additional equipment to meet standard requirements, and to maintain a fire-fighting force of at least 28 firemen.

The construction of the new stations and addition of equipment and personnel would enable the city to avoid a penalty which now makes up a portion of the key insurance rate.

Costs of the new buildings would be approximately $125,000, leaving

$50,000 of the bond funds available to add new and modern equipment. The present equipment would be retained in service. However, the present equipment alone is inadequate to meet all requirements of the insurance commission.

Officials point out that Big Spring, with a population approximately 5,000 less than Midland's has two modern fire stations, and Odessa with slightly more than 29,000, has four complete stations.

If steps are not taken to expand the fire protection forces here, officials say the insurance rate definitely will be affected in most areas of the city.

A new city jail, designed to meet all sanitary and safety standards, would be erected with $50,000 in tax supported bonds.

The present jail, with two small and unsanitary cells, long has been inadequate, according to officials. It is capable of accommodating only six persons comfortably, but often as many as 25 or 30 are crowded into the two tiny cells. There is no provision for women prisoners and all have to be transferred to the county jail.

If the central fire station is moved to a new location, that portion of the city hall would be remodeled into an adequate jail, according to City Manager W. H. Oswald. A place of retention for women prisoners definitely would be provided in any case, the city manager said.

If the bond funds are not made available to provide a new city jail, the old jail will become more and more overcrowded, more unsanitary, and subject to increasing safety risks, officials said.

Thar's Gold(bergs) In Them Thar Hills Of Hollywood

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
NEA Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—Movies Without Popcorn.

Hollywood's still doing the plish-tush routine over the idea of making movies for television, but over at Paramount, television is making a movie for Hollywood.

It's the celluloid version of Gertrude Berg's "The Goldbergs," a non-stop opus of family life that is to the smaller-than-life medium what Andy Hardy and the Kettles are to the swollen image industry.

A word like "channel," even when it refers to something you try to swim over, is taboo at most movietown studios, but at Paramount, the executives are talking about 16-inch screens and rubbing their hands gleefully over the thought of theaters packed with television fans.

I watch genial, plumpish Gertrude Berg and Eli Mintz, who plays Uncle David, rehearse a kitchen scene. Walter Hart, TV director for "The Goldbergs," puts them through their film paces in a sequence involving the painting of the kitchen walls. A halt is called as members of a pro football team.

Blasts At Secretary Johnson Reach New High In Bitterness

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Criticism of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson reached a new note of bitterness Monday with a congressman helping heckle James Forrestal out of office.

Forrestal, Johnson's predecessor as defense secretary, resigned in March 1949, due to illness and an extreme nervous condition. Two months later Forrestal committed suicide.

Representative, Tauriello (D-NY) made the assertions about responsibility for Forrestal's resignation in another letter to Johnson urging him to quit. There was no immediate comment from Johnson. Tauriello's first bid a week ago for Johnson to step out brought a report from Johnson that he had no intention of doing so.

The Buffalo congressman wrote in his latest letter that he had hoped Johnson would have the "humility and patriotism to strengthen your country by resigning," and said further:

"I am informed by reliable officials and newspaper correspondents that you contributed in no small way to the persecution of Mr. Forrestal. I understand you gathered and relayed gossip and information critical of Mr. Forrestal, and, in effect, forced his resignation."

Congressional critics of Johnson previously had centered their fire on his economy cutbacks and the condition of the armed forces at the outbreak of the Korean war.

Carver High School are to follow the same schedule for classes, opening at 8:55 a.m. Carver High School, still under construction, is to be ready for classroom work, though construction of some parts of the building will continue for several months.

Monroe again reminded parents and students of the change in scheduling of sixth grade classes. This year, sixth grade students will remain at North, South and Crockett elementary schools, instead of progressing to junior high school. Only West, Terminal and Latin American schools will be five-grade schools.

It is the plan of school officials to retain the sixth grade in all elementary schools as soon as room can be provided. West, Terminal and Latin American are crowded for space, and cannot retain the sixth grade in their present quarters, Monroe said.

The Midland Independent School district expects in the future to establish schools on a 6-3-3 basis—with six grade in elementary school, three grades in junior high and three grades in senior high.

The coal dealers buried the safe on the same spot—hoping to see the last of it. But a bulldozer recently unearthed it while working on an excavation for a building in the empty lot. Detectives hunted up the owners to return it.

A partner of the firm said: "It's going to the junk pile—I hope for keeps."

Heavier Contributions Planned With New Social Security Law

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Increased Social Security benefits under the new law just passed by Congress are not entirely free. They are paid for by deductions from the employer's pay, matched by an equal contribution from the employer.

The present tax is one and one-half per cent on the first $3,000 a year. The tax on the employer, in each case, is matched by an identical payment by the employer. Starting in January the tax will be collected on the first $3,600 earned.

The tax rate will go up to two per cent on each worker and employer in 1954; to two and one-half per cent in 1959; to three per cent in 1965, and reach its peak of three and one-quarter per cent in 1970.

Some 4,700,000 self-employed non-farm workers now are brought under the act for the first time. But only self-employed people earning more than $400 a year will be covered.

In all, almost 45,000,000 out of the 61,000,000 people now in the U. S. labor force will be eligible for Social Security coverage after next January 1. Every employee covered would contribute, at the most, $54 a year for the next three years. His employer will contribute a similar amount.

Now take a look at who will be eligible to receive Social Security benefits and what they amount to. First take what's known for short as OASI—Old Age and Survivors Insurance—or in simpler language, retirement pensions.

Any government-insured worker can get this pension when he reaches age 65. This is no change from the old law.

Terms Liberalized
Anyone between 65 and 75 can keep on working and still draw benefits if he earns less than $50 a month. Over 75, this limitation is removed.

If a Social Security-insured worker's wife is 65, she will get a pension equal to half her husband's pension.

If they have dependent children 18 years of age or under, a pension will be given to the wife, regardless of her age. The pension for dependent children will be three-fourths the husband's pension for the first child, half pension for other children.

Widows and dependent widowers, if 65 or over, will get three-fourths of the pension due the insured worker. Children of a deceased, insured worker and their mother will get pensions equal to half the insured worker's benefit, as under the old law, but the terms have been liberalized.

Dependent parents of a deceased worker will get benefits if there is no surviving widow or child to receive them. This also is no change from the former law.

But an important change is that lump-sum death benefit payments will in the future be given to the survivors of all insured workers. This lump-sum death benefit will be three times what is called the primary benefit.

The primary benefit is calculated as follows: First the worker's average monthly wage is calculated for the period he has been covered by OASI. The primary benefit then is calculated as 50 per cent of the first $100 per month of average wage, plus 15 per cent of the next $200 per month average wage.

The maximum primary benefit thus would be half of $100, or $50; plus 15 per cent of $200, or $30. Total, $80 per month. This would be for a worker with one and a half years or more of insured employment under the Social Security system.

The minimum primary benefit is changed under the new law to $25 a month, unless the average monthly wage is less than $35. The minimum is then graded down to $20 a month for the average monthly wage of $30 or less.

Because the requirements for coverage are more liberal under the new law than under the old, it may appear that there are two ways to calculate the primary benefit. But the law provides that in every case, the beneficiary shall be paid the higher rate.

Labor Celebrates By Pledging Defeat Of Red Aggression

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Labor celebrated its annual holiday Monday pledging to work for the defeat of Communist aggression everywhere.

That is the prime goal stressed in Labor Day messages by President William Green of the AFL and Philip Murray of the CIO. Millions of Americans enjoyed the holiday in the usual ways of fun and relaxation. And there was a usual heavy toll of accidents.

President Truman had sounded the keynote for the Labor Day speech-makers in a statement for the occasion several days ago. He said he knew he could count on organized labor's support against communism to win peace—a peace that will mean even greater rewards not only for our own workers but for workers everywhere.

Treatment Of Arterial Disease Prohibits All Use Of Tobacco

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

The arteries carry blood to all the tissues in the body and the veins return the blood to the heart and lungs. The importance of well-functioning arteries cannot be exaggerated and if anything goes wrong with them the tissues will suffer. It is amazing how well they perform during the ordinary lifetime but they are subject to a few diseases and, of course, to injury.

Two of the diseases which involve the blood vessels, while fairly rare, do cause a great deal of difficulty and are known respectively as Raynaud's disease and Buerger's disease, each named after the physician who first described them. These two disorders both affect the blood vessels but not in just the same way and the outlook for health is also different.

In Raynaud's disease the blood supply to a particular part is not cut off entirely but the blood vessels involved go into spasms and contract, especially when exposed to cold. An emotional upset may act the same way as cold. Raynaud's disease is most common in the hands and consequently the fingers often turn white when put in cold water or when anything else happens which produces a contraction of the blood vessels. Exposure to cold, emotional upsets and like factors which bring on the symptoms should be avoided. Tobacco must be prohibited.

The cause is not known and although several good treatments are available there is none which as yet can be considered a sure cure. In Raynaud's disease, surgery can be useful although amputation is rarely necessary. More often surgery is aimed at the sympathetic nervous system with the purpose of relaxing the spasms in the blood vessels.

In Buerger's disease, the arteries and veins are actually inflamed, particularly those in the feet and legs. After a while the changes produced may cause complete blockage of blood flow through these blood vessels.

Treatments Vary

The disappearance of the normal pulsation or beats of the blood vessels in the involved area is characteristic. It is much more common in men than in women. Although the cause is not definitely known, tobacco, infection, ringworm, and a chemical poison known as ergot have been most commonly incriminated.

All patients suffering from Buerger's disease cannot be treated alike. The most important items of treatment, however, are absolute avoidance of tobacco, removal of any sources of infection, and a good intake of fluids and salts. In the more serious cases the use of drugs to prevent coagulation of the blood and some other form of medical management may be useful. Surgery frequently is required. When the blood supply has been cut off to a toe, for example, the entire toe may have to be removed.

The treatment of both these diseases is improving. More and more can be done for them and with research now going on further improvements may be expected.

Walter Sorensons At Home In Pharr

PECOS — At home in Pharr are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sorenson. Mrs. Sorenson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phyl Wanslow of Pecos.

The couple was married August 17 in the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sorenson, in McAllen, with the Lutheran minister of that city reading the double ring ceremony. The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of pink and white carnations.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Julius Sorenson. She wore a light blue suit complemented with white accessories.

Julius Sorenson served as best man for his brother.

The bride wore a tailored suit of gray wool gabardine, with black and coral accessories. Her corsage was fashioned of white carnations.

A graduate of Pecos High School, Mrs. Sorenson later attended Abilene Christian College and Texas Western College.

The groom received his discharge from the U. S. Navy in February. Since that time he has been engaged in citrus farming near Pharr.

Abundant Living

By E. STANLEY JONES

Luke 16:15-16; Rom. 1:19-25; II Pet. 2:19-22.

NATURALIZED IN THE UNNATURAL!

Seek first the Kingdom of God! We have seen that the Kingdom of God is written into our true nature and that to live according to it is to find ourselves. But we have been so accustomed to false ways of life that we think them our true nature. We hold to our unnaturalness, and suspect God's true nature. A woman who had lived all her life in the foul, heavy air of the slums of New York said that she got physically sick when she went into the country and breathed the pure, fresh air. Her lungs had become so accustomed to unnatural foulness that natural freshness was unnatural! In a South American city a new market was built, clean and sanitary, with tiled floors and walls. But the people holding the stalls in the dirty old market would not move into the new. One woman stall-holder explained her attitude thus: "That market is so clean it makes me sick. It is just like a hospital."

That is the tragedy of our humanity. We hesitate to take God's way. The greathearted mayor of a city in India, who had cleaned up vast portions of the slums and in their stead had built lovely, neat cottages and apartments, said to me: "Sometimes I walk around the remaining wretched sections of the city at night and say to myself, 'If the people would only let me, I could do anything for them.' But they won't let me. They are naturalized in their fifth, and cling to it, though it kills them off like flies." How Christlike that great, lonely figure, sighing over people who would not accept the life he offered! Christ must be doing that today! He sees us with our unworkable ways of life, running into roads with dead ends, ending in frustration and futility, losing our means of living, and our lives themselves, and He says again: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, . . . and all these things shall be added unto you." But we are seeking other things first, and all these things are being subtracted from us.

Gracious Father, we have our life strategy wrong, and things won't come out right. We become all tangled up, because we will not take Thy way. Help us to have sense—just plain sense. Then we will abandon our ways of futility for Thy ways of fruitfulness. Help us to seek first the Kingdom. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Labor Day, 1950

Labor Day is by tradition a holiday for the man who works for a living. It is dedicated to clambakes, celebrations, picnics, loafing and the torture of bumper-to-bumper traffic bound homeward after the last long weekend of Summer.

This year there is a man-made cloud over the holiday such as there has not been since the dark days of 1942. On this Labor Day, 1950, there are no picnics, speeches, clambakes, nor is there any rest for the tired American boys laboring at the deadly business of war.

Yet on the home front, too many of us still are dedicated to business as usual; to working only for ourselves. Not the least of these is the workingman for whom we are celebrating today. There are strikes among the railroad workers that have shut down huge steel mills at a time when we must make and move material to build up our defense muscles; there are "demonstrations" that hold up production in a big electric company, where 20 per cent of the output is war work; there are rumblings of battles to come in other vital industries.

Labor is not alone in the home-front offenses. There have been some price rises, since the day the 38th parallel was crossed, that bore the unmistakable stamp of "get it while you can." And the profiteers and percentage boys are migrating again to Washington. But we are talking particularly to labor at this moment because this is labor's day.

In the midst of a crisis that may well involve us for the rest of our lives, it would make sense to rededicate this holiday not to labor as a group of people but to labor as a job. To what the dictionary calls "physical or mental exertion, particularly for some useful or desired end."

Caviar And Applesauce

Jacob Malik, the UN Security Council president who kept giving the floor to Jacob Malik, the UN delegate from Russia, decided to follow the usual practice of giving a dinner party for the rest of the delegates at the end of his term as president.

The reasoning may have been that by now his tactics had given all the other representatives an ulcer or two, and they would stick to a milk diet. On the other hand, they may have wanted to serve that applesauce U. S. Delegate Warren Austin insisted Malik was using to fill his jar of propaganda tricks.

A Day Set Aside For Serious Contemplation

DREW PEARSON ON THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Drew Pearson says: Truman applies haberdashery debts to Alaskan defense; Johnson asks help in ousting Acheson from Cabinet; Johnson and Acheson drip syrup over each other at Senate session.

WASHINGTON — Harry Truman's experience of going broke as a haberdasher and paying off his debts for 20 years now influences his decisions as President of the United States.

Military advisers were trying to get the President to O.K. a plan for public housing and utilities in Alaska to be paid over a 35-year period.

Truman listened carefully and then said: "No, I'm not going to approve that. I spent 20 years of my life with a heavy debt hanging over my head, and I'm not going to burden the people of Alaska with that kind of worry."

Philosophically, Truman continued: "I don't want my children or children's children paying off the debts for mistakes I could make in the White House."

It was the likeable, controversial secretary of Defense, Louey Johnson. Truman's friend got in the car, and after some conversation, Louey put his hand on the friend's knee and said:

"We've got to get Acheson out of the Cabinet. You can help me. You can talk to the President and get it whereas I can't. Let's pitch in and put this across."

Truman's close friend was non-committal. He made no promises. But the incident illustrates the white heat which the Acheson-Johnson feud has reached.

Senators who sat in the closed-door session of the Appropriations Committee listening to the testimony of Secretaries Acheson and Johnson last week never would have dreamed there was any animosity between them.

Everyone present was sworn to secrecy; but here is what happened: Senator Homer Ferguson, fiery, white-haired Michigan Republican, did most of the sniping at Acheson and Johnson, asking needle-pointed questions in an attempt to rouse them against each other.

"It isn't a question of agreeing," replied the secretary of Defense. He explained that both are members of

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By OSWALD JACOBY Written for NEA Service

Bill, the bold bad bidder, was in to see me yesterday. He said, "You've been giving Generous George, Larceny Lou and Pessimistic Pete all the publicity lately. How about one of my good hands for a change?"

"Do you ever have any?" I asked. Bill is famous for getting set. "Well, here's one in which I fixed up old Pete with a little help from my partner. Don't criticize my spade overall. It worked. As for Pete, his bidding did not show his usual pessimism, but his play did.

"I opened the ace of spades and Larceny Lou, my partner, dropped the queen. On the bidding, he could count declarer for at least eleven top tricks, and saw that the only chances to beat the hand would be to knock out the king of spades immediately."

"Instead, he decided to draw trumps and hoped to make the hand either by finding the hearts three in each hand, by picking up the queen of diamonds, or by working some sort of squeeze. As you can see, none of these things happened and we set him one trick."

On this one hand Bill's bad bid did not pay off. Had Bill kept his mouth shut, the opponents might have bid game only, or they might have bid the slam and made it.

The reader will note that Pete could have made his twelfth trick by trumping his third spade, but the combination of Bill's bid, Lou's deceptive play and Pete's own pessimism led to the contract being set.

The whole hand is worth studying. Without the second spade lead, Pete can make the contract by ruffing out two hearts and setting up the rest of the suit. The second spade lead killed a necessary re-entry to dummy.

Furthermore, it required very careful discarding on the part of Bill and Lou to beat the hand as it was. Any little slip on the part of either one and Pete would have brought home the bacon.

One man asked another to explain the difference between capitalist and labor. The other answered: "If I loan you $50, that's capitalist; if I try to get it back, that's labor."

The FORMER MISS FREY

By Edwin Rutt Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

THE garden was completely shut in, on three sides by walls of white limestone, on the fourth by the low, sprawling, comfortable house itself.

AS he passed the corner where old Mrs. Delavan was holding court, she put out a hand. The thin hand, heavy with old-fashioned rings, closed about his wrist.

"I'm glad to see you," she said. "I've been waiting for you. How are you?"

"I'm well, thank you," he replied. "I've been thinking of you a great deal lately."

"That's good," she said. "I've been thinking of you, too. How is your business?"

"It's all right," he said. "I've managed to get things going again."

"That's good," she said. "I've been thinking of you, too. How is your business?"

"I'm well, thank you," he replied. "I've been thinking of you a great deal lately."

"That's good," she said. "I've been thinking of you, too. How is your business?"

A gentleman was bending over the young woman, holding a match to her cigarette.

"Of course, I know," Mrs. Delavan looked at him shrewdly. "It didn't do you much good when she married young Flood, did it, Gilbert?"

"I think," Gil said cautiously, "that Edie has something of her own. From her mother."

"Corny Frey," said Mrs. Delavan, with authority, "is a mean old devil. Of course, this Flood was a palpable fortune hunter but Corne could let them have something. He reckons with money. Had a private fortune to start with and doubled it; they say, in that advertising business of his."

Summerfield turned amused eyes upon her. "My gosh, Delly, what puts such ideas into your head? They're married. Quite happily, as far as I know."

"You don't know anything," she said. "When you get my age you'll be able to read faces. And people. Suddenlly he put a hand on his shoulder. 'I like you, young Gilbert. You're a waster and indolent and no-account, but I like you. You've got too much money, that's your trouble. And I wish you didn't have it. I'd like to see you settled down and amounting to something, but I don't suppose I ever will.' She sighed. 'Well, I presume you're bored. So run along. Run along.'"

Gil sauntered away. Near the door leading into the house was a large table loaded with bottles. He poured brandy into a snifter and carried it away with him. For a moment he leaned against the pink-tinted side of the house, studying the face of Eve Flood, perhaps, he thought, old Delly had been right. Perhaps he hadn't, as yet, the ability to read faces. He smiled. No doubt Delly had started the wheels of his imagination turning. Edie's face, upturned to the man in the cream dinner jacket, was laughing and alive. But, it seemed to Gil, there was a trace of bitterness around the corners of the mouth, and her lips were a hard red line that laughter couldn't hide.

HE hadn't seen much of Edie these last few years. But two months ago when she and her husband had come to Bermuda and taken the unpicturesque cottage overlooking Riddle's Bay, they had renewed their acquaintance.

Gil's mouth twisted wryly. Once it had been friendship, very good friendship. But a casual drifting friendship. Too casual, Gil thought now, too drifting. He'd merely been one of the men who were always "around" Miss Edith Frey. There'd been no particular reason for her to consider him when the more spectacular and then-successful Peter Flood had more or less crashed into her life.

Peter Flood had come out of the Midwest and brought with him a touch of its drive and energy. He had also brought a play that he proceeded to sell to a well-known producer. The thing had run for a season, which in itself was nothing especially startling. But it was Flood's first and the critics made much of it. For a time Peter Flood had been the fair-haired boy. He was seen everywhere, and with everybody who counted. And, presently, he was seen chiefly with Edie Frey.

Apparently Peter Flood, with his bold, almost arrogant eyes, his shock of ginger-colored hair and his full, rather sullen mouth, was a man who made things happen suddenly. All at once, and quietly, the marriage was an accomplished fact.

Rumors started then. It was said in cafe society that old Cornelius Frey, wealthy advertising agency owner, opposed the marriage. There were stories of bitter quarrels between Cornelius and his new son-in-law, between Cornelius and Edie. People entertained theories, and kept them none too private, that old Cornelius, keen as a razor though his fortune was originally an inherited one, perceived that this energetic young man was one who, even though temporarily successful, believed in making financial assurance doubly sure. Cornelius, they said also, was long on family and tradition. And the roots of Peter Flood were obscure.

DADDY RINGTAIL

Daddy Ringtail And My Day For Mischief

On the day I am going to tell you about, Uncle Bunkum was wanting a vacation visit to the Great Forest, there where Daddy Ringtail, your monkey friend, lives in a monkey house. Yes, and Uncle Bunkum also was wanting to get into mischief. He cackled out loud a cackled laugh like a chicken, even though a monkey is what he was. Yes, the day was his day for mischief.

"Help! Help!" Uncle Bunkum began to shout out from his cage at the zoo. There came the Monkey Catcher, running to see what was the matter, and to see what was the why for the call for help.

Uncle Bunkum looked to be sure that the Monkey Catcher could see him, then he flopped on his back like a very sick monkey. He closed his eyes and waited.

"Uncle Bunkum!" the Monkey Catcher shouted at the door of the Quicker than a flash of light, Uncle Bunkum jumped through the door and locked it. He was outside now from the cage. The Monkey Catcher was locked inside. "Uncle Bunkum, you come back here and let me out!" the Monkey Catcher was shouting. But Uncle Bunkum ran straight on and away through the Great Forest, on his way to Daddy Ringtail's house.

It was Uncle Bunkum's day for mischief, he thought, except the Monkey Catcher opened the cage with the key he had in his pocket. He phoned Daddy Ringtail to say that Uncle Bunkum could stay for a little vacation visit, and so Uncle Bunkum wasn't in mischief after all. I am happy to say. He wouldn't have tried to get into mischief if his Conscience hadn't been asleep, but that's the story I'll tell you tomorrow. Happy day!

Old Thresher Used To Harvest Oats

DES MOINES, IOWA—(AP)—F. J. Wood, 87-year-old inventor of a steam threshing engine built in 1917, saw the machine used recently to harvest oats. Wood, one of the founders of Wood Bros. Farm Machinery in Des Moines, designed and built the old steamer.

Talk of old threshing days was heard this year on the Louis Thorsen farm north of Tipton. The veteran threshermen were Henry W. Meyer, of Clarence, operating his machine for the 58th year, and Ray Chellis, of Tipton, who has been threshing for over half a century. Both think that threshing is still the best way to handle small grain.

A scene reminiscent of the past was the harvesting of oats recently on the W. T. Hunt farm near Ottumwa. Horses pulled wagons of shocked oats to the thresher. However, the thresher, instead of being powered by a steam engine, was operated by a tractor.

The Unsensational Little Fillers Have Place In Newspapers

By TANNER LAINE

One time when we were talking to the Midland High School journalism class about the makeup of its Bulldog page in our paper, one of the sweet young things up front asked:

"What are those things down at the bottom of the page like the leopard has 299 spots, etc?"

"Well, where do you get them and why do they always seem so remotely far from high school news," she wanted to know.

"That was a good question. Perhaps you, too, have wondered about fillers."

"Fillers! You know fillers, like 'The Sandfly transmits the tropical disease known as dum-dum fever.' There they are at the bottom of news, the tiny unsensational news fillers."

"We've had some corks in our paper we admit."

Actually, fillers are used to facilitate the newspaper's layout. When an item doesn't fill out and about two or three or more lines of type are needed—presto, the printer sticks in a filler.

Must Stand Alone

However, the filler must stand alone. It is ruled apart.

A lot of readers get a kick out of reading fillers. They can provide a laugh. For instance, say along in July there would be a filler warning: "Play safe. Keep fire away from the Christmas tree."

And another boner could be pulled if a bunch of fillers on the same subject was put together, right by each other on the same page.

They are a necessity in the newspaper business. And they are in general, accurate and informational. You can learn a lot from fillers.

Occasionally this newspaper writes its own fillers for special editions. This was exemplified in the Progress Edition of 1948. Interesting facts from Midland's history were put together for fillers.

Brevity is the essence for fillers. Small as they are, fillers fascinate some readers. And they are to the trouble of writing in about this one or that one. Perhaps they have a question to ask or seek more information. They are referred to Associated Press Newsfeatures, our source of fillers.

Fillers grow, rather casually, in the AP Newsfeatures' office. A new writer is liable to have a bunch of material shoved at him with the offhand request, "Write some fillers."

There is a communal feeling about them. "We all take a hand," says M. J. Wing, Newsfeatures' general editor.

Fillers stem from bulletins of federal agencies, trade associations, research groups, etc., and are sometimes born in consultation with handy encyclopedias. "Austria, a Summary of Facts and Figures," put out by the information department of the Austrian Consulate General, is the sort of racy-toe filler writers plumb. They also take on the "Journal of the American Diabetic Association," the bulletin of the American National Livestock Association, how-to-do pamphlets put out by various authorities, and other sundries.

It is guarded against, but to err is human. Sometimes a filler gets in print without that very important cutoff rule. The result can be em-
