Pitfall Of Isolationism

The nation, and the Republican Party, too, ought to hope that Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan stays in good health when he returns to the Senate next January.

For if he is unable to exercise a fair degree of his former leadership in foreign policy, there may be grave trouble.

A lot of observers believe the chief impact of the election results will be felt in the field of foreign affairs. They see the GOP sufficiently strengthened, in the Senate especially, to insure that changes will be made in vital foreign programs.

The post-election statements of Senator Taft and numerous others seem to bear out this notion. Though the Republicans did not win a majority in either house. they appear to feel that the November 7 outcome was a repudiation of Democratic leadership in foreign affairs.

In the light of the actual figures, this is definitely presumptuous. Yet there is no doubt that a serious effort will be made in the coming year to modify and curtail several prime foreign programs such as the Marshall Plan, foreign arms assistance, and the Point Four plan for aid to

But A&M hasn't been doing so well against Texas in the modern period. Not since 1939 have the Aggies beat the Longhorns.

However, even in the years when it was figured A&M didn't have a chance, this was the big game of the year-packed crowds, color and fiercely played football. Both Headed For Bowls

Tradition and a fine football team-champion of the Southwest Conference, foe of Tennessee in the Cotton Bowl-make Texas a twotouchdown favorite to beat the Aggies although statistically A&M has a wide edge.

Both teams already are in bowl games. A&M plays Georgia in the Presidential Cup game at Washington December 9.

Not in the history of Memorial Stadium here has an Aggie team beaten Texas. That tradition started in '324 when the stadium was dedicated. That is one of the traditions Texas will be fighting to uphold. Bipartisan Advisory Body Asked To Aid With Foreign Policy

By JACK BELL WASHINGTON —(AP)— Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo) Monday proposed the creation of a continuous bipartisan advisory commission to help President Truman shape the nation's foreign policy.

Such a commission should be unaffected by national elections, Johnson said, "so that we would have a perma-
