"Resign! resign!" cried op position Laborites after the government mustered only the onevote margin to defeat an amendment to exempt drugs and medicine from the bill.

Technically the issue was not a major vote of confidence, and the government would not have been obliged to resign had it lost. But some Conservatives, aware of the strength of moral pressure in British politics, felt resignation would have been unavoidable if the government had lost the vote.

The bill would prohibit manufacturers dictating retail prices, an established way of British business life. With Britain's general election to be held some time before Nov. 5, many Conservatives fear they will lose the votes of the country's 300,000 small shopkeepers. These merchants see supermarkets and other large chains driving them out of business if prices are free to fluctuate competitively.

Motivation Techniques Explained

Remotivation techniques were explained Monday evening to members of the Big Spring Re-motivation Club by Walter Widger, chief of social services at the Big Spring State Hospi-tal. Frank Salazar presided, and Royce Satterwhite worded the invocation.

Widger served as moderator during the audience participation part of the program.

Guest speaker was Bruce Frazier who told of motivation methods used in advertising. He said that before a person could be motivated their attention must be captured. In advertising this is often done with pretty girls, children or pets. The attention - getter is followed with facts, then action. Hostesses were Mrs. A. I

Beatles Are Painted On Easter Eggs

The Beatles, a group of en-tertainers that are fast becoming the current teen-age fad, have affected Odila, 12, and Orelia, 7, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Rumaldo Del Bosque, 101 Carey.

While painting Easter eggs Tuesday the girls, thinking of their idols, were inspired to paint the Beatles' likeness on the shells of the eggs. So they did

What eventually will happen to the egg Beatles though, shouldn't happen to an insect. Hollow on the inside, the eggs are stuffed with confetti.

Pretty Olga Del Bosque, 15, sister of the young painters, smiled and explained the fate of the eggshell Beatles:

"We crack them over one another's heads Easter." She said this has been traditional in the family for years. This, however, is the first year 'Beatles' have been painted on the eggshells

A Devotional For The Day

Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father and it sufficient us. (John 14:8. ASV.)

PRAYER: God of love, we thank Thee that Thou hast revealed Thyself in the life and sacrifice of Thy Son. May Thy love, which is "broader than the measure of man's mind," redeem our lives from evil. Keep us ever aware of the power of love to achieve the goals of Thy kingdom, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Within two weeks, local voters will ly have been "drafted", because, in have been called upon to go to the polls and select various school trustees and city commissioners.

In the case of the City Commission. there are six applicants for three posts; on the board of the local independent school district, three candidates for two places.

All those who have announced for the offices are meritorious people of good stature, and The Herald would not presume to suggest any individual preference. It is good that the voters do have a choice.

The hope expressed here is that the candidates will be chosen on their own merits, as best the people know them, and that we can continue the course of our city and school administrations on the basis of whom each o' us as voters think will best serve the public interest. This means, literally, all the public interest and not just a segment of it.

It is gratifying to know that, historically, this has been the case in Big Spring through the times. In many and many a year, the office pened in those states and those cities has had to seek the man, and not the man the office, and this has been good. People of sound judgment and public conscience frequentgood

Around The Rim Game Of Wits

Of all the animals that inhabit this a pasture several sections wide, you region, none is more cunning than the coyote. The fact that he is still around is evidence enough, for his enemies, led by man, are constantly on his trail. Many years ago, Earl Brownrigg, county trapper, had pulled his annual bag down to slightly over 100 coyotes, and I thought we were at. last running out of this wily creature. Last year Earl and another trapper working in this county got around 300 together. Coyotes keep coming in from the north and the northwest.

and the second provide the second second

CATCHING A coyote becomes a battle of wits, for the coyote is cagey and is endowed with a sense of logic about what his adversary will do. Lay a dead rabbit out for bait, and he will not touch it. Pull the rabbit carcass under a bush as though it were dragged or had crawled there, and he limb or twig to make the terrain look may be interested. Even so, the coyjust like it was before. ote will not approach head on but rather will steal in warily from the side. With great caution and patience, he will reach out with his paws, scratching softly to see if there is a buried trap.

BUT THE COYOTE is a creature of habit, and this most often is his undoing. Thus, to catch a coyote, the trapper must pin down his pattern of habits, not only on his trail, his methods of foraging, but also his time-table. Old hands like Earl can watch the tracks and signs and come up with a picture amazingly accurate of the quarry. The study has to be done painstakingly, for if you hurry the situation, you'll probably mess it up.

"I'd rather have one trap and three days to set it in than a dozen traps and one day," he explained. "That trigger is about the size of a half dollar, and when you put it down in wits.

at the right time!" THERE'S MORE than burying a trap, for coyotes can smell them with a seeming sixth sense. Not long ago a popular magazine had a story about a trapper catching a big lobo. He supposedly put his traps in a sack and swung them over his shoulder - a sure-fire way to announce presence of man to a coyote. Earl boils his traps to make sure they are clean, then carefully wraps them and handles the wrapping only with gloves. When he gets to the spot, he frequently wraps his feet, then lays down a tarp where he is going to work. Any excess dirt from where he digs a spot for the trap is carefully carted away, and the area is brushed gently with a

IN SETTING traps, the coyote's cunning has to be taken into account. For instance, he is cautious about the ground where he habitually jumps over a fence. So the trapper sets his trap on the side where the covote lands

The trapper doesn't succeed every time, because the shrewd coyote, always suspicious, may deliberately spring his traps. If he stays around, sooner or later he will end up in a trap, because he follows his basic rounds and habits. Earl has tracked a couple as long as 30 days before getting results, and once he stayed after a particular animal six weeks. Not infrequently, a coyote spots a trap and decides it is time to take a vacation and thus lives to forage another day. All the trapper can do then is wait. The next disaster to fetch the disarmament chaps was in the same year, when the League of Nations established a temporary mixed commission for the reduction of armaments. Note that nothing has changed, except that the league substituted "temporary" for "permanent." They learned slowly in those days, but they did learn. YOUR CHRONOLOGY of despair may now move ahead to the 1922 treaty signed by France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan and the United States which imposed the 5-5-3 ratio of naval strength on the U.S., England and Japan. Later the same year, the same peace-loving nations agreed to outlaw the use of submarines. But France chickened out when it came time to ratify, the pact never took effect, and thus it could not be violated in the traditional fashion. There is no end of material for your travelogue on the road to Armageddon. Novel Of Presidential Politics

"twere, the mirror up to nature," is the Shakespearean precept for creative art, and it need not be advice for high-brows only.

In their swift, suspenseful novel of presidential politics, "Convention," Fletcher Knebel and Charles W. Bailev II have fictionalized a battle for the GOP nomination of 1972 by taking their ideas, situations and characters, the authors tell me, as straight as possible from life. It is a feat which requires, of course, the benefit of experience and the powers of observation. But more than these, it requires the moral willpower to resist temptation.

IT MAY BE that this last named trait is a cardinal discipline in all creative endeavor, and deserves prominent mention. For the sin into which so many contemporary narrators fall is to sensationalize their accounts of political life with sex and villainy, far beyond the facts of life.

Again, many political novelists have reached for realism-and missed itby using superficial imitations from life. Knebel tells me that his live model for Charlie Manchester, the Secretary of Treasury who wins the GOP nomination. was a real Treasury Secretary-George Humphrey of the Eisenhower Administration. And Bailev tells me that his live model for the retired Air Force General, who plays a minor but pivotal role in the book, was a real military man, now retired-General Omar Bradley

SECRETARY HUMPHREV has talked to Reporter Knebel about the dismaying lack of morality in certain industrialists who participate profitably in huge Defense contracts without the slightest concern as to whether these programs are good for the country. The central plot of "Convention" turns on Manchester's unwillingness to endorse a $10 billion program for Daphne missiles, which would dump nuclear destruction upon Moscow a few seconds faster than existing weapons. When Manchester says he'll re-examine Daphne, if elected to the White House, and will

In a day when most people are merging their personality and identity with the "crowd." I would suggest that you be yourself and stop trying to adjust too much. However in any given situation there is a certain amount of adapting one can do without surrendering one's convictions and identity. Most of the 'trailblazers' of history have been non-conformists. They stood out from the ordinary people because they dared to be themseives, to live up to their ideals, and to fulfill their purpose. We need Lincolns who can't adjust to slavery; more Livingstons who can't adjust to an affluent society: more Wesleys who can't adjust to spiritual lethargy; and more Florence Nightingales who can't adjust to suffering

WASHINGTON - The private club in America is headed for legal trouble-maybe lots of it. The "civil rights" bill already passed by the House and awaiting action in the Sen-BEFORE resuming the film regular radio and television change officials would stress ate stipulates that in certain respects private clubs will no longer be private under the proposed law.

Not all private clubs will be affected but primarily those which provide lodging as well as restaurant service or swimming pools or the use of golf courses to guests of members or which allow patrons of a nearby hotel to use their facilities.

law would seem to mean that, while private clubs are exempted in many respects, the exemption does not cover club facilities which are made available to guests of members.

Are these guests to be regarded as part of the "public"? If a member chooses, for instance, to give a guest card to a Negro, the visitor must be furnished lodging or permitted to use the golf course or swimming pool. If any of these facilities are denied to him, discrimination on the basis of color can be charged, and the club officers can be hauled into court. The same thing would be true with respect to guests who happen to be of a particular religion or national origin.

THE BILL pending in the Senate says under Title II, Section 201:

"(A) All persons shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, and accommodations of any place of public accommodation, as defined in this section, without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion,

IT HAS BEEN assumed by many members of both houses of Congress that private clubs are to be exempted, but a careful reading of the exemption clauses now raises doubts. This READ LITERALLY, the proposed subsection of the House bill pending dence.

BUT AN "establishment" is defined under subsection (B) as one "which provides lodging to transient guests' or one "principally engaged in selling food for consumption on the premises." Can private clubs be sure that, when they furnish such facilities to guests of their members, the "public accommodations" provisions and penalties do not apply?

In a "bona fide private club," there are often restrictions as to the use of lodgings and other facilities. The fact remains, however, that under the proposed law, the courts will have to decide whether any private club which permits as guests persons of

Co-Op Slates Annual Meet For Saturday

The annual membership meeting of Cap Rock Refrigeration Cooperative has been set for Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Cap Rock Electric Cooperative building in Stanton.

A free chili supper will be served to those attending, and annual reports on the cooperative's activities will be presented to the members. Directors, who serve one year terms, also will be named.

Serving currently are W.-D. Howell, president; Glenn Cantrell, vice president; Mrs. Lee Castle, secretary; J. C. Sale and D. W. McDonald, directors. All are on the electric cooperative board with the exception of Howell

The 460 member refrigeration cooperative has 602 lockers and facilities for custom slaughtering and processing in its plant in Stanton. It also sells beef and pork carcasses by whole or half, along with cured hams, bacon, sausage and pork loin.

During 1963, the plant processed 524 head of cattle, 434 hogs, 694 head of poultry, and 68 deer, sheep and goats, for a total dressed weight of 282,055 pounds of meat.

This is the 20th anniversary of Cap Rock Refrigeration Cooperative. The plant was completed in 1944 with the aid of an REA loan. In 1955, the Cooperative became one of the first in the nation to retire its loan. paying REA in full. It has been owned wholly by its members since that time.
