Wild Protest At City Hall In California

This was the scene in front of Berkeley, Calif., city hall Tuesday night, as Viet Nam Day Committee members, an anti-Viet Nam protest group, tried unsuccessfully to enter a council meeting in session. Some 70 officers from the Berkeley police department, assisted by 60 deputies from the Alameda sheriff's office, formed ranks and prevented them from entering the building. (AP WIREPHOTO)

Why hasn't Mrs. Reba Hays missed a day's work since May 10, 1951?

Mrs. Hays is an operator for Southwestern Bell in Fort Worth. She hasn't missed a day's work since May 10, 1951. You have to have some pretty good reasons to work 15 years without being absent one day. You have to have what we at Southwestern Bell call the "spirit . of service." Mrs. Hays has this spirit.

"I've been very lucky to keep in good health," says

Mrs. Hays. "And something else that helps is liking my job. It's the company's responsibility to give the customer good service. As an operator, that's my responsibility, too."

Mrs. Hays and 50,000 other Southwestern Bell people have one thing in common. They're, making your telephone service—already the world's best—even better.

United Attack On Problem

No one can argue successfully that the human element is not the major cause of automobile accidents, even as pilot error is probably the primary cause of airplane accidents. But neither can it be argued that American automobiles are as safe as human ingenuity permits.

This is, after all, a barren argument. Pursued to its ultimate conclusion the parallel lines will never engineering of streets and highways Another is much stricter enforcement of traffic laws, plus periodic driving tests as a requisite to extending a driver's license. Still another is a greater commitment to the building of safety into autmobiles, including a greater margin of impact resistance, strengthened tops, perhaps even rollbars, and better tires.

None of these measures in themselves may improve the situation. But if the participants will just stop arguing and unite in attacking the problems in unison, significant progress can be made in the direction of auto-

The Draft

Thirty Republican members of Congress have joined in a call for a congressional investigation of the draft. There is a touch of political partisanship in the call, but there is a bipartisan agreement in the country that all is not well with the Even Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, concedes that the draft law is not without its faults. But he does insist that "abolsute equity has never been attained" nor is it possible.

The increased manpower requirements for the war in Viet Nam have served to sharpen public complaints of unfairness. A local draft board with ample eligibles can afford to be much more lenient than one that strains each month to fill its quota. Most observers are forced to concede, however, that one of the wisest decisions made in the Selective Service and Training Act was the delegation of draft responsibility to the local level. A blanket indictment of the system is not possible when one's own neighbors sit in judgment on questions of eligibility and deferment. Almost any young man who has graduated from high school and who cannot go to college because of financial or academic reasons is almost sure to be caught up in the draft. Those who can manage to get into college are almost automatically deferred. By continuing to take postgraduate work the student can continue almost indefinitely his deferment The burden of the draft thus falls heaviest in Texas on families of low income and poor education. In any event, there seems to be no alternative at the present time to the present draft. In the process a much more careful look may be necessary at the question of educational deferment. The needs of an educated citizenry are obvious, hence the draft law specifically provides for deferment when attending college. But if it is necessary, a system of priorities based on specialized educational needs of the nation may be instituted.

THE GUIDEPOSTS, first proposed in 1962 as "aids to public understanding," now sometimes have the practical power of laws.

THE GUIDEPOSTS tie wages and prices to the average gain in output per man hour-estimated at 3.2 per cent in recent years. Wage increases above that figure are considered inflationary. And industries with good profits and a productivity gain in excess of that figure aren't expected to raise prices.

WHEN THE President's Council of Economic Advisers introduced guideposts it described them as a "guide rather than a rule," a "contribution" to public discussion.

By 1964, however, they were re-ferred to as a "standard."

Billy Graham

Jesus said: "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." Does this mean that I must give up everything I enjoy to become a Christian?

It simply means that to be a true disciple of Christ's we must put Him and His kingdom first. Half-hearted Christianity is no Christianity at all. If you love someone with all your heart, soul, mind and strength, delight to share your all with them. For that reason the marriage vow includes these words: "Forsaking all others . . . until death do us part. I have married a lot of couples, but never have I had a bridegroom ask before the ceremony: "Does the marriage vow mean that I really must forsake everything for that woman I'm about to marry?" They don't ask that because they are willing to give their all to the one they love. If you leave love for God out of religion, it becomes a meaningless thing. It does seem a harsh saying: 'He that forsaketh not all that he hath cannot be my disciple," but what we forget is that the rewards of being a Christian are much greater than the sacrifices required. Just as a young man who loves a girl very dearly knows that what he forsakes is little compared to what he gains in a life of happiness, so a person giving his life to God gains much more than he may be called upon to give up.

COMPANY OFFICIALS were invited to Washington, the increase was rolled back and then compromised at a much smaller figure. The industry acted differently the next time it sought an increase.

U.S. Steel did not await a summons to Washington. An executive rode down and discussed a proposed increase in advance of its announcement, a recognition once more of the increasing power of the guideposts.

THE U.S. STEEL executive told the administration the company wished to raise prices on some products $2.92 a ton and decrease them on others. The arrangement seemed within the guideposts and was cleared. Gardner Ackley, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, applauded the move.

Around The Rim

Why It's Hard To Be Safer

There is a popular notion going around that automobile manufacturers are conspiring against safety of passengers in a concession to profit and style.

NOW ANYONE as big as the car makers should be able to fight their own battles, but I rush to their defense, nevertheless. Now I grant that it might be possible to make safer cars, but carried to an extreme, they could be monstrosities. There must be some acceptable ground between a padded cell and a marketable, functional product.

Manufacturers are spending vast sums trying to find that ground-trying to devise means which will help human beings protect themselves from their own folly. Car makers are making meticulous scientific tests, sacrificing scores of new cars against brick walls, in order to base design changes upon hard facts.

A RECENT report from Ford Science Front (and I am sure that other dealers are delving into the problem with equal resource and vigor) furnishes information laymen ought to know, for in knowing they will appreciate what is being done.

What is the difference between putting your brake on 100 yards away and coming to an easy stop just as your car touches a brick wall, or banging into that brick wall at 50 miles per hour? Well, even an idiot can tell the difference in results, but what happened? In both cases the identical thing happens, but in a different manner

MOVEMENT, speed, or whatever you want to call it, is energy. In order to halt, that energy must be dissipated. Your brakes dissipate the energy harmlessly in the form of heat. The crash dissipates the same energy, but in a fraction of a second.

A major portion of the kinetic energy is dissipated by collapse of the car structure. What is left affects the passenger. At least four factors will determine the extent of harm that will come to a human in the car during a crash: 1) the weight of the passenger, 2) the speed with which he impacts with some part of the car, 3) the resistance of the part to impact, and 4) the physical area of contact between the part and the individual's anatomy.

MOST OF US have the idea that if cars were built as strong as tanks. they would be safer, but only until they met another of the same or heavjer construction. It is all relative. The thing which lessens the shock is the dissipation of energy through crumbling-in this order-of the bumper, fender sheet metal, hood, radiator and fan, frame and possibly the floor pan. This takes only a tenth of a second.

A standard size car weighing 4,000 pounds has 120,000 foot pounds of energy when it hits a barrier at 30 m.p.h. Highway speeds can involve close to a million foot pounds-the equivalent of 18,000 horse power working a tenth of a second.

SOME DEVELOPMENTS to help absorb energy in event of a crash included padded instrument panels, collapsible steering columns (such as an inverted dish design of the steering wheel). The search is to find other parts which will move or collapse over a greater distance.

There is one other factor now almost universally available, but alas, survey after survey shows that the majority of people are still not even using seat belts. They can absorb a lot of crash energy, but most of us sit on them. Maybe manufacturers need to invent something that will prick our consciences or shock our bottoms when we do that

Inconsistency In The U.N.

WASHINGTON-A former justice of the Supreme Court of the United States - Arthur J. Goldberg - must have an uncomfortable time every and then functioning as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Or maybe he is not troubled at all by the inconsistencies, if not hypocrisies, of nations supposed to be guided today by the fundamental principles of international law.

For a long time, lawyers and jurlaw must be respected if an effective ment rejected De Gaulle's April formula for maintaining world peace is ever to be evolved. Indeed, this NATO forces out of France. It doctrine hopefully motivated the founders of the present World Court.

BUT IN THE Rhodesian affair, international law is being bypassed. Expediency has taken its place. Great Britain happens to be in a dilemma over the effort of the white people in Rhodesia to save themselves from the chaos and financial ruin they feel would ensue if the tribes of black inhabitants, most of them uneducated. were to try to run the country. But this is an internal problem, and there is not the slightest basis under international law for any outside govabout business expenses? I'd ernment like that of the United States or any organization such as the United Nations to intervene and tell the "Can't we finish this argu- Rhodesian people what they must or

> THE BRITISH nevertheless have decided to use economic coercion. So last November, when Rhodesia declared its independence, the London government imposed an economic embargo. The United States, being anxious to play ball with the British and retain at least their vocal support on questions like Viet Nam, determined to undertake a voluntary embargo. Congress alone under the Constitution is supposed to "regulate commerce" with foreign nations." but no authority for an embargo was requested by the President or volunteered by Congress

THE UNITED NATIONS called on its members to join the embargo, but this was an appeal and not an order or decree. Certainly there is not a single clause in any article of the United Nations charter which authorizes the intervention of that organization by military or economic means in the internal affairs of any country unless requested by the national government in power to ward off an aggressor

But even when there is something that really threatens international peace, as is the case in Viet Nam, the United Nations maintains a hypocritical abstention. For the U.N. charter says military and economic force is justified, collectively or by individual nations, whenever international peace is endangered. No such situation, however, has arisen with respect to Rhodesia.

THE LATEST CRISIS developed because Portugal sent a big shipment of oil to its own colonial port in Mozambique that could go by pipeline to Rhodesia. The British government asked the Security Council of the U.N. to intervene and block such trade.

The right of revolution is universally regarded as sacred. The American colonies separated themselves from England, and the precedent of 1776 has been extolled ever since as an example of the way peoples may express their will anywhere in the world.

BUT WHEN THE Rhodesians attempt to do the same thing, the United States and other countries are being asked to step in and help Britain suppress the effort of a colony to establish its independence. African members of the U.N. are in a paradoxical position, as some of them don't want to set a precedent for similar interference in other countries where the existing governments are overthrown.

> "YOU MENTIONED the Common Market and NATO. How did we ever deal with De Gaulle?" the Traveler inquired That was easy, too, he was told.

> After we withdrew two of the five American divisions in Europe, and prepared to withdraw the others, Europeans quickly got the message. Either we stayed in Europe on our own terms, or we went home.

"There was a time when it seemed that Russia would beat us to the moon, as well as to the planets of outer space," said the Traveler. "How did we ever keep our prestige without bankrupting the country?"

AN ELEMENTAL exercise of logic, he was told. We simply cancelled the Apollo Project and all those interplanetary flights. Russia reached the moon, as well as Venus, Jupiter and a lot of other barren stars, but the Kremlin bankrupted the U.S.S.R. in the process and became a secondclass earthly power. Meanwhile, by transferring all the money and brains of the space race into making ourselves the toughest nation on earth, we began to have things pretty much our own way.

"Amazing." declared the Returning "And yet the only surprising thing is that we waited so long to become anti-social.'

Capital Cherry Blossom Fete Is All Wet

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Cherry Blossom Festival - which boasts of being the world's outstanding springtime celebration - opened in wind and rain with water dripping off Hubert H. Humphrey's ears.

All agreed it was something of Several hundred folding chairs were set up in puddles amid cherry trees near the Jefferson Memorial.

BLOOM EARLY The trees are annual agony to festival officials who fear they may bloom too early or too late for the six days of festivities. This year the blossoms came early and hard-driving rain sent half of them to the ground. Stewart L. Udall noted, with water dripping off his nose and his feet drenched, that the fallen petals created a nice "polka dot effect.'

There was no tent for comfort and the rain never stopped.

IN RAIN COATS The 50 cherry blossom prin cesses, representing the states, were clad in identical plastic raincoats. Their mascara ran and hairdos collapsed.

Japan's cherry queen, Hisako Nakahara of Tokyo, held a hurriedly purchased $3.98 drugstore umbrella. The wife of Japanese Ambassador Ryuji Takeuchi wrapped her kimono around her legs to keep
