History, Religion Pervade Ancient Hungarian City

By JOHN BEST
ESZTERGOM, Hungary (AP) — History and religion pervade this old city perched atop a high bend in the Danube River, 40 miles north of Budapest.

This is where the Magyar invaders established their first royal capital more than 1,000 years ago.

It's also still theoretically the ecclesiastical seat of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic primate of Hungary, who since the 1956 revolution has been living in asylum in the United States legation in Budapest.

On the bus ride through ancient farming country from Budapest, you get a glimpse of signs of more recent history. At two or three points along the narrow, winding road Soviet army camps are visible. And if you look sharply across the top of the wall that separates one such camp from the road, you can see a row of tanks lined up in a shed, chilling reminders of the 1956 uprising which was suppressed by Soviet tanks in the streets of the capital.

In Esztergom itself the most striking physical characteristic is the basilica, largest church in Hungary, an imposing structure that rises out of a cliff just above the river.

The hill crowned by the church contains Roman, medieval Hungarian and Turkish remains, having been used by successive conquerors as a fortress and by the Hungarian kings of the early Middle Ages as the site of a royal palace.

Existence of the palace was unknown until a few decades ago when a large stone fell from an ancient rampart into a garden below. The owner reported it to police.

Investigation revealed two beautiful Romanesque gates, beyond which stood a building in the early French Gothic style. It was the palace of King Bela III — 1173-96 — which, like many other medieval buildings in Hungary, had been ruined and forgotten during the long Turkish occupation.

The primate's palace is situated in the oldest part of this city of 22,000, at the foot of the citadel hill. Inside the palace, at one end of the building, is the Christian museum, rich in early Hungarian and Italian paintings, French tapestries and Italian, Hungarian and German glassware.

It's possible to make an honest mistake on the way upstairs to the second-floor museum and wander — as I did — into the cardinal's residence.

The sign on the first-floor door says "keep out" but since it's in Hungarian, I didn't know this at the time. As a result I became one of the few Westerners who has been in Mindszenty's palace since the Communists took over in Hungary.

Portraits of popes and cardinals looked down from the walls of the dusky corridor along which I walked. As I stood studying one of these portraits, there was a rustle of garments nearby. From the interior of the palace came a lone nun who wasted little time showing me the way out.

Living in self-imposed exile in Budapest, Mindszenty at 74 is said to be in good health, enjoying a daily stroll in the courtyard of the U.S. legation.

Reports Costly Museum Is Now Moving Smoothly

By BOB PENDERGAST
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The multimillion dollar Los Angeles County Art Museum, severely battered by waves of discontent only a few months ago, now is sailing smoothly, its present director says.

"There is no disagreement between the museum staff and its board of trustees," Acting Director Kenneth Donahue told a newsman.

ROLE

"The board is concerned primarily with broad policies and initiating a drive for acquisitions. That is its role.

"The professional staff implements these broad policies; it's that simple."

But shortly after Donahue's assurances, the museum recorded still another casualty. James H. Elliott, its chief curator, announced his resignation last month, saying he was disenchanted with the policy of the trustees.

It was the question of policy that resulted in the resignation-dismissal last November of former Director Dr. Richard F. Brown, and hurled the magnificent $11.5 million structure into a churning sea of charges and counter-charges, accusations and denials.

INTERFERENCE

Brown said he had resigned because of internal interference from the board of trustees, some of whom he charged "forced decisions and took unilateral action not consistent with good museum administration."

He also accused the trustees of supporting "a generous but misguided donor's understandable refusal to . . . compromise his desires for a monument rather than build the finest community institution possible."

The trustees, however, contended Brown was asked to resign because of what they termed his "administrative inadequacies."

Brown accepted the directorship of the Kimbell Art Foundation in Fort Worth, Tex.

Elliott said he was "delighted with the challenging prospects" of his new position as director of the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, Conn.

COMOTION

Besides the administrative changes, there was a commotion on another front when an exhibition of paintings and three-dimensional tableaux by Edward Kienholz opened last month. Two members of the County Board of Supervisors raised charges that two items were pornographic.

Despite the controversies, crowds have been flocking to the museum. By mid-February, less than 11 months after its dedication, 2,194,239 persons had visited the facility and its art collection valued at more than $25 million.

"Our attendance is second only to the Metropolitan (in New York)," said Donahue, "and that is the most important function of any museum."

SERVE PUBLIC

"No matter what we hang on our walls, if we don't get the people here we're not performing our function. We're primarily a public education institution. Our only reason for being is to serve and inform the public."

Donahue, 51, joined the museum staff as deputy director in 1964 and was appointed acting director last Feb. 1.

He was a member of the staff of the Museum of Modern Art in New York from 1938 to 1943, later moved to New York's prestigious Frick Collection, and served as director of the Ringling Museum of Art in Sarasota, Fla., from 1957 to 1964.

—Despite his assurances that all is well at the museum, Los Angeles artists, collectors and dealers have banded together in a "Save the Museum Committee" and denounced what they term "trustee arrogance and interference" with the professional museum staff.

HAMPER

Many art patrons feared the dispute would hamper a forthcoming $12 million acquisition fund drive, and that prospective art donors might be reluctant to loan works to the museum.

Asked if these problems had arisen, Donahue replied:

"Well, I know for certain we have had no problem in borrowing art objects. However, I cannot say if fund drives will be hurt, although I suspect they will not."

But at least one important donor of contemporary art, stockbroker Burt Kleiner, wrote a letter to the trustees in which he supported Brown and said:

"Our personal dream of adding our collection to the museum is shattered."

Of the fund drive, which the trustees hope will bring in $12 million in two years, Donahue said:

"Things are moving, certainly nothing dramatic, but moving. With the aggressive action our board is taking regarding the acquisition fund, we feel we're doing very well."

"The important thing now is that we maintain aggressive, positive action. I think in six months we'll see a lot of change although I can't discuss them now."

One of the changes may be a new permanent director.

Edward W. Carter, president of the board of trustees, said a special committee has been appointed to seek the candidate "best qualified for the permanent directorship."

He said the evaluation would be made on the basis of "acknowledged stature within the art profession, scholarly competence and administrative skill."

But the Los Angeles based magazine Artforum, critical of the board, said in an editorial: COMPROMISED

"It is difficult to imagine what self-respecting outside museum official could, in good conscience, step into the compromised position. Dr. Brown has abandoned."

Administrative problems such as insufficient guards and funds have troubled the museum since it opened March 31, 1965.

Then another problem arose — one directly concerned with Brown's departure — charged. Financier Bart Lytton, for whom one of the galleries is named, urged county supervisors to withhold $1.4 million in operating funds unless taxpayers were directly represented on the board of trustees.

"Art museum policies are being adopted and implemented by a small, self-perpetuating body which is making the direction and management of the museum its private preserve," Lytton himself a trustee — charged.

It was the "private preserve" issue to which Brown alluded in his resignation statement.

Brown, however, refused to elaborate or to identify the individual to whom he referred.

WHO'S WHO

The list of 20 trustees reads like a Who's Who of the West Coast business world and includes:

—Carter, president of a major retail store chain, who is trustee, president and its most vocal spokesman.

—Howard Ahmanson, a savings and loan tycoon who donated $2 million, and for whom the main gallery is named.

—And Norton Simon, chairman of the board of a food company. In addition to substantial financial support, Simon has loaned the museum several valuable works, including Rembrandt's "Titus," which cost nearly $2.3 million.

Debt Limit Is Going Up Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has completed congressional action on legislation increasing the national debt limit by $2 billion — to a record $330 billion.

The Senate passed the bill 50-17 and sent it to President Johnson for his signature. The administration had asked that the ceiling be boosted to $332 billion. But after the House approved the $330-billion limit June 8, Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler said he would accept the compromise figure.

DEAR ABBY

Dieters At A Party

DEAR ABBY: I think dieters are the cruelest, most selfish people in the world. Dieting has become a national mania. If you wear a size 12, the diet nut tells you should wear a size 10. How crazy can people get? I gave a coffee recently and stayed up past midnight the night before, baking date-nut bread and four kinds of cookies. Of the 20 women who came, nine took only token servings, and six refused even to sample my baking! One had the nerve to announce to everyone that she belonged to some crazy kind of diet club and was on an 18-day diet with a pack of other women. I didn't sleep a wink that night. I was even too sick to cry over the way my baking had been scorned. I will never entertain again as long as I live. Do you blame me?

THRU ENTERTAINING DEAR THRU: I appreciate your disappointment, but look at the other side. Those who are fighting the battle of the bulge should not be made to feel guilty if they count calories. A gracious hostess appears to take no notice of how much or how little her guests eat. The purpose of entertaining

De Gaulle's Forthcoming Trip Causing Suspicion

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle leaves Monday for Moscow on a trip that has caused uneasy suspicion among at least two of his allies — America and West Germany. Both are worried that he may engage in some bilateral treaty or agreement with the Russians which would be disadvantageous to the West. The United States regards the journey with a somewhat jaundiced eye, and officials have been frank in saying privately that they are worried lest De Gaulle engage in some special agreement with the Soviet Union on Germany. To French officials who are as privy to the austere French president's thinking as one can be — and that is not always especially close — nothing could be farther from the facts. They say he does not plan to sign any treaty or agreement, and that such is not the purpose of his trip anyway. It is likely that they are correct, for in the framework of his policy, there is nothing mystifying about his journey to Moscow. De Gaulle feels that the German problem is the matter of greatest importance, and when he says German problem he means the questions of Germany's reunification. He regards the eventual renification of Germany as a long-range project. More important, he regards the creation of the proper atmosphere for reunification to be a strictly European matter. French sources say De Gaulle does not think America could be any help in relaxing tensions between East and West, so the Europeans should do it. In what seems to be an exercise in presumption, he has made it clear that once the conditions were established for reunification he would consider it proper that the four victorious powers in World War II would sign the peace treaty with Germany. In short, in the French view, the United States should let Europeans get on with relaxing tensions all around so that, on some distant day perhaps 10 years hence, there will be the proper atmosphere for German reunification. It is certain that he is going to talk to the Russians about the reunification of Germany. This is not a popular subject with the Soviet Union, which expresses fear of a resurgent Germany. But De Gaulle thinks that a solution to the German problem requires a detente and agreement, especially among Germany's neighbors. "He considers the reunification question the nucleus of the entire German problem and thinks that the Iron Curtain should be lifted bit by bit so that a detente can be accomplished," said one French source.

Horsemen Club Schedules Show

Howard County Youth Horsemen Club will have a free performance show Saturday night at 7 o'clock in the Club Arena. Barrel racing, pole bending, flag racing, and ring racing will be the featured events. Several events will also be held for the "old timers" more than 19-years-old, according to Kenneth Williams, show chairman. The club is divided into four age groups. The first is nine and under, 10-12, 13-15, and 16-19. All surrounding riding clubs are invited to come and ride. A concession stand will be provided by Kent Oil Company. The Youth Arena is located one mile south on the Garden City highway, off US 87 south.

'Space Baby' Is Doing Fine

HOUSTON (AP) — America's first "space baby" and her mother were reported in good condition today at Methodist Hospital. Air Force Lt. Col. James A. McDivitt's wife gave birth to a 7-pound, 13-ounce girl Thursday. It was the McDivitt's fourth child and the first conceived by an American astronaut's wife since her husband returned from space. McDivitt, 37, was the command pilot on the four-day Gemini 4 mission last June. During the flight Air Force Lt. Col. Edward H. White II made a 21-minute space walk. The infant arrived on the couple's 10th wedding anniversary. McDivitt's wife is the former Patricia A. Haas of Cleveland, Ohio. McDivitt is a native of Chicago, Ill.

Barnes Goes On Peru Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of Texans led by Speaker Ben Barnes of the state house of representatives has begun a two-week trip to Peru to discuss trade possibilities and to ask the Peruvian government to participate in San Antonio's Hemisfair exposition in 1968. Barnes said at a reception in Washington Thursday that the group will prepare a report for the Texas Industrial Commission on opportunities for investments and new markets in Peru. The trip to encourage trade and cultural relations is being made under the "Partners of the Alliance" program, which promotes people-to-people contacts between American states and sister countries in Latin America. Others included in the delegation are State Rep. Ralph Wayen, Plainview; Banks Miller Jr., Austin, executive director of the Texas Partners of the Alliance; Robert Schenkkan, University of Texas faculty member; Dr. Robert Leachman; Willie Wells, Longshoreman union official, and John Ford, San Antonio newspaperman.

Jailed For Feeding Pigeons

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Geri Southworth, cited for violating a San Francisco ordinance forbidding feeding pigeons on public property, insisted on going to jail. And that's where she is today. She got the citation Tuesday in Civic Center Plaza as she fed the birds. Mrs. Southworth, 52, told Art Schaffer, assistant district attorney, in City Hall: "I don't need counsel. I want to plead guilty. I did it. I fed the pigeons. I'm guilty and I'll do it again. It's a dumb law." The judge sentenced her to 30 days.

Shows Milady's Knee

Triger's Target Is Legs, Little Middle

AP Fashion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The leggy lass with a little middle and a lot of money is in this year as far as designer Pauline Triger is concerned.

So are turtle pins, hairy dresses, rhinestone bibs and bonnets, men's chevron tie materials, built-in lingerie, fur shirt dresses and fur formal gowns, and boots as supple and fitted as gloves.

"Suits are out this year," Miss Triger said as waiters passed cocktails and sandwiches and television cameras ground away during her fall collection opening Wednesday.

"Women want a freeness around the waist."

The models who stepped forward later wore slim coats, jaunty jackets or swingy capes over dresses with fitted or belted middles. Chins disappeared under bulking collars, huge ascots, and yards of scarves. But no bulk went to waist.

Other figure faults would have been indiscernible under Triger's fashion formula. The flat front and back of skirts flared or pleated at the sides.

In tweeds and knits the manikins slipped into pliant leather boots that reached higher than their above-the-knee hemlines.

Sometimes silk neck scarves matched the linings of collarless coats. Other times the inside story of cape-like coats was furry warmth.

A wardrobe of fitted dresses, long and short, some with swirling cape coats, and made of Russian broadtail were among latest Triger status symbols.

The really one-upmanship dinner gown was of broadtail, bordered, cuffed and collared in Russian sable.

Modesty bibs are what the once French designer calls those collars of twinkling rhinestones and which models tucked into their plunging necklines, were with bare-shouldered dresses.

There were glittering baby bonnets to match these.

For grand entrances were gowns gleaming in silver and gold; and jewel embroidered see-through dresses, some with nude lined slips.

And there were floating chiffons with built-in petticoats for cool comfort. Many gowns bristled with hair like plumage.

Gold turtle pins were worn everywhere, even on the hemline of Miss Triger's own dress — collecting turtles is her hobby. Slivers of rhinestones were pinned in odd places such as the cuff of a long sleeved dress. And rosebuds sometimes grew out of one side of a collar or covered the cleavage otherwise exposed by a low necked dress.

After the show, the audience shouted for the author. And Miss Triger sat down on the platform and cried.

Dinner Set For Group At Church

Plans for a June 19 "potluck" dinner were discussed during the Tuesday evening meeting of the Women of the Trinity Lutheran Church. Mrs. Donald Kenning was hostess and Mrs. W. H. Muegge presided.

The dinner will honor Bible school pupils and workers.

Mrs. Muegge gave the devotion, and Mrs. Kenning conducted the study, "The Psalms and Worship Today."

Several "Kleni - Kits" were completed to send to pre-school children in Viet Nam through the Lutheran World Action.

Welcomed as guests were Mrs. Anna Kenning of Pomroy, Iowa; Mrs. Jack Watkins and Mrs. Ramona Jones.

The July 5 meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Cleo Egebreton.

Philatheas Have Study

"The Essence of Time" was the discussion topic during the Thursday evening meeting of the Philathea Sunday School class of the First Methodist Church at the fellowship hall.

Mrs. Bert Affleck conducted the study, and Miss Nell Hatch gave the opening prayer.

Hostesses were Mrs. Rogers Heffey, Mrs. S. R. Nobles, Mrs. H. M. Rowe, Mrs. T. G. Adams, Mrs. C. M. Weaver, Mrs. Earl Hughes, Mrs. Ward Hall, Mrs. Lige Fox, Mrs. T. P. Harrison and Mrs. B. D. McMillan.

Miss Gladys Burnham presided during the business session, and Mrs. V. H. Fiewellen led the group in singing "Living For Jesus." The piano accompaniment was by Mrs. B. M. Koesel.

Small Item Sale Held In Citadel

A small item sale was held during the Wednesday afternoon meeting of the Ladies Home League of the Salvation Army. Proceeds from the sale of handmade items will be donated to the Mexico offering.

Plans were discussed to take Father's Day favors to patients of area rest homes Sunday afternoon, and members were reminded that quarterly birthdays will be observed at the June 22 meeting.

SCOUT CAMP CALLED OFF

The Girl Scout Day Camp has been cancelled.

Insufficient registration was given as the reason for calling off the projected camp which was to have run Monday through Friday. Despite urgent pleas, the last few days brought in only two additional registrations for a total of 27. Leaders figured this was too few to operate the program.

A LOVELIER YOU

Short Skirts Reveal Few Legs Are Ideal

By MARY SUE MILLER

At present more lovelies are more concerned over their leglines than their hip lines. And that's a real switch!

But it could hardly be otherwise, now that the legs and knees are in the center of the fashion scene on every occasion. What can a girl do, poor thing, when the view is less than ideal?

Well, cosmetic makers declare that what's good for the face is good for the legs. Texture lotions that keep facial skin velvet-smooth will do the same for the legs. Facial masks that clarify tone and color are particularly effective for improving the glow of the knee complexion.

When stockings are worn, contour bluishers can be used at the sides of the legs and knees to shadow fleshy spots.

Incidentally, stockings are not apt to be so quickly shed this summer, for nothing else is as flattering to the leg. And you just know it!

When bare, however, the flawed legline can be glossed over only by cosmetics made for the purpose — liquid or cream leg make-up with, perhaps waterproof finishing powder. Being opaque, cream make-up covers serious blemishes. Liquid varieties, not unlike a powder base, refine skin tones.

But don't expect instant miracles; practice, and following directions, makes perfect. Experimentation also may aid the cause. Liquids may go on smoother with a large silk sponge, or an undercoat of moisturizer may give creams more slip. In any case, botched leg make-up is worse than none at all.

LEGLINE TRIMMERS

If your individual problem is heavy legs, send for my new leaflet, Legline trimmers, which contains spot reducing exercises that will meet your individual needs, whether for thighs, knees, calves or ankles, or for contouring your entire legline. Write Mary Sue Miller in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and five cents in coin to cover handling.

NATIONALISM POSES THREAT TO ALLIANCES

Concept Of Military Blocs In Doubt

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Resurgent nationalism threatens today to frustrate efforts of both the United States and the Soviet Union to keep their alliances intact, and threatens in the long run to shatter the concept of big military blocs. In both the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact, pressures of national interests are producing rips in the fabrics of what once were tightly knit associations. Because of the problems of the two greatest powers, each with its own restless and balky allies, long-entrenched ideas about cold war are being seriously challenged.

WIDE CHASM

A jolt to NATO, produced by President Charles de Gaulle of France, and the increasingly wide chasm between the Soviet Union and Communist China are opening doors to free-wheeling diplomacy by the allies of both big powers. For many years after World War II, Europe was the main front of a cold war between the United States and the U.S.S.R. Now, in the background, is an emergent China, historically contemptuous of all foreigners, developing rapidly into a military-nuclear power. Before long, China may control the balance between war and peace. This is giving an entirely new look to the cold war, so far as Europe is concerned. Statesmen today are reflecting that the real threats to peace in the future are not going to be inside Europe, but outside, in the hungry, underdeveloped nations of Asia and Africa.

Europe, East and West, feels the impact of this sort of thinking. Today, nations which under Communist rule long occupied the roles of docile Moscow satellites are becoming balky. The existence of another pole of Communist authority, Red China, has encouraged this.

CHOU BUSY

Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai now is in Romania for a week's visit. He lost no time in cheering the Romanians on in what he called "defense of the independence of their country." Romania's Communist party chief, Nicolae Ceausescu, has questioned Soviet leadership of East Europe. He said in a speech Wednesday that the notion of Moscow guidance of all Communist parties had become obsolete.

Romania is to the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact military alliance in the East what France is to NATO in the West, an irritating thorn in the side of the dominant big power. In the West, De Gaulle has judged U.S. domination of NATO as an affront to French sovereignty. In the East, Ceausescu has declared all military blocs to be anachronistic and "incompatible with independence and national sovereignty." Romania is seeking closer trade and other contacts with the West, including the United States, and a loosening of the Soviet tie. Its activities are being watched with fascination.

France is making its own direct approach to the Soviet Union. De Gaulle goes to Moscow next week, where he may make his independent pitch to the Russians for an understanding on Europe's future. This might include proposals on German reunification and on the reduction of U.S. influence in Europe.

WORRIED

The Russians have been worried enough about Romania to have party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev hustle off to Bucharest in May on a secret mission, shortly after Ceausescu indicated balking over Soviet plans to strengthen Moscow control over the Warsaw Pact.

The Americans are just as concerned about what is going on in France — and about new manifestations from West Germany. Along with De Gaulle's various activities — including his departure from the NATO military organization — these activities could represent yet a new tear in the fabric. Rainer Barzel, deputy chairman of West Germany's ruling Christian Democratic Union and an heir apparent to Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, said in a speech prepared for delivery in Washington that "in a reunited Germany, and within the framework of a European security system, there might even be room for troops of the Soviet Union." He proposed economic and political lures for the Russians in exchange for giving up an independent Communist state of East Germany for a reunified Germany.

This has been billed as a major foreign policy statement, but the Erhard government disassociated itself from Barzel's remarks. Nevertheless, the words could have strong impact. Soviet policy has centered on the idea of European security and keeping German fingers away from a nuclear trigger. For the foreseeable future, the Russians might not be willing to surrender East Germany to such an arrangement, but the idea would have powerful attractions. In addition, the Russians might seek ways of using this sort of idea as a lever in further attempts to loosen the ties which bind NATO together.

In any event, recent ferment in both power blocs has produced an air of crisis both for the United States and the Soviet Union.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk evidently aiming his words at De Gaulle's punitive attempt to spearhead a German settlement, emphasized with a note of urgency that the only way the problems of Germany and the East-West chasm could be solved was by maintenance of a strong, united defense in the West.

Thus, NATO now has become the West's biggest problem. Recent events have produced concern about the future of integrated collective security and of the element of deterrence which NATO maintained for 16 years. NATO is more than just a military affair. It involves political unity in Europe. Should that fall apart, it would have strong effect on future development of relations between the West and the Communist East.

But the Russians have their own large quota of troubles. They are bedeviled by the war in Viet Nam which sees a Communist nation, North Viet Nam, under attack daily by an "imperialist" foe. They obviously want to concentrate on building their internal economy, a program hampered by prospective deep world crisis. They are vilified daily by the Chinese and other extreme Communists who accuse them of betraying world revolution.

In addition, there are distinct echoes of Romania's defiant independence elsewhere in the East bloc.

So long as the wide split with Red China persists — and it seems likely to do so for a long time — there will be an atmosphere in which the urge for independence can prosper.

Wool Finalists Gathering Today

DALLAS (AP)—Twenty finalists in the Miss Wool of America contest started gathering in Texas today for a gay and busy week which will end with one named the winner the night of June 24 in San Angelo.

Executives of the annual pageant, being held for a ninth year, flew here to greet the contestants, en route to Dallas from their respective homes.

Mini Seats For Mini Skirts

Eleanor Scott tries out a seat which seems perfect for her thigh-high skirt. The seat, shown in London and designed by Peter Harvey of the British Royal College of Art, could solve the embarrassing seating problem of the girl with the short-skirt, but Harvey designed the seat for use on crowded buses and subways. He says he was not thinking of Britain's high-skirted girls but claims his design will enable a train or bus to carry 50 per cent more people. (AP WIREPHOTO)

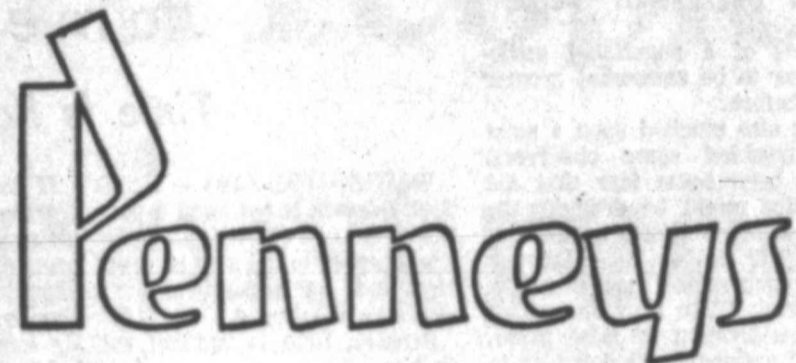

Designs Set For Skirts

LONDON (AP) — Designer Peter Harvey has invented a seat which allows a girl wearing a short-skirt to sit down and show only as much leg as when she is standing up. Harvey, 25, said he designed the seat to alleviate crowding on subways and buses and did not have the short-skirt fashion in mind.

Made of fiber and foam rubber and attached to a one-piece chrome tube, the streamlined seats allow a person to half-lean, half-sit in it.

Going around the Royal College of Art Design Show, model Anna Watson—who was wearing a skirt seven inches above her knees — walked over and tried the seat.

"Look," she marveled, "no more of the leg is exposed when I'm sitting down as when I'm standing up."

Tank Cars Afire

Plywood which fell from a freight car and landed across the tracks caused a train derailment of about 15 cars. The Georgia railroad said some of the tank cars hauling inflammable fluid caught fire, spewing flame and smoke high in the sky.

The fire is expected to burn at least 24 hours. A motorist in a nearby road suffered a burn on his arm but was not seriously injured. (AP WIREPHOTO)

Webb's Ranking NCO Assigned To Hawaii Post

CM. Sgt. Leonard R. Ermel, who has served as wing sergeant major since June, 1964, left Webb this week for a new assignment at the Civil Engineer Directorate, Pacific Air Command, Hickam AFB, Hawaii as administrative superintendent. Sgt. Ermel is scheduled to serve in the same directorate as James Tidwell, former Big Spring now working as a civil engineer for the Pacific Air Command.

He and his family will sail from Long Beach, Calif., Saturday. One son, Michael, 19, a 1966 graduate of Howard County Junior College, reported for ROTC Field Training at Fairchild AFB, Wash. After completion of the training, Michael will attend the University of Hawaii under the ROTC program.

Entering the Navy at the age of 17, Sgt. Ermel has had 23 years of active military service. The sergeant enlisted in the Air Force in March, 1961, coming in as a technical sergeant. While serving at Webb, he received his eighth stripe, which made him the top ranking non-commissioned officer assigned to Webb. During World War II, Sgt. Ermel served aboard the USS New Mexico and the USS Princeton. While at Webb, Sgt. Ermel has been an active member of the incentive awards committee, the golf council, Webb Village council and has served as treasurer of the credit union.

Auto Pollution Threat Grows

WASHINGTON (AP)— Pollution of the air from automobile exhausts threatens to grow steadily worse, a Senate subcommittee was told this week. "We estimate that before 1980 motor vehicles will be so numerous that present approaches to controlling pollution from the internal combustion engine will be totally inadequate," Vernon MacKenzie, assistant surgeon general, testified.

Other witnesses saw no hazards to health at this time from the lead additives used in gasoline but they favored continuing research and vigilance.

The testimony was given a Senate Public Works subcommittee which is considering additional legislation to combat pollution of streams and air. Pending bills would expand federal assistance to states and communities for control of pollution.

MacKenzie called for new approaches to deal with the problem.

Among new approaches that should be explored, he said, are development of new control techniques and modification of the internal combustion engine to improve its efficiency.

Felix Wormser, former president of the Lead Industries Association and a former assistant secretary of the interior, testified: "Lead constitutes no public health hazard in America today."

He quoted from an American Medical Association report, issued in February, stating that on the basis of "vast clinical evidence" the general public is not now, nor in the immediate future, facing a lead hazard.

"Nor do lead anti-knock compounds influence the formation of photochemical smog," Wormser said.

He said continued research is necessary, however, for control of air pollution from any source.

Battle On Spy Agency Looms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The director of the Central Intelligence Agency is not ducking a looming Senate battle over supervision of the spy agency.

William F. Raborn, it was learned today, has informed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he was willing to give it "substantive intelligence information" — but would not disclose "sources and methods."

And that, he said in a letter Wednesday to Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., was the only kind of question the committee asked that he refused to answer at a February briefing that helped trigger the clash over who supervises cloak and dagger activities.

The exchange of letters between Raborn and Fulbright was interpreted as probably killing the last chance for a compromise that would avert a floor fight on the touchy issue.

Fulbright's group has argued that because of its jurisdiction over foreign relations it should have some role in overseeing activities of the intelligence agency.

He and some committee members were disturbed when Raborn acknowledged in the February briefing that he did not feel he could give them as detailed information as he gives the Senate's Executive CIA Watchdog subcommittee.

BILL SEAL AWARDED A&M SCHOLARSHIP President Henry Hill congratulates winner

Aggie Scholarship Goes To Forsan High Graduate

Billy Ray Seal, 18, graduate of Forsan High School, has been selected to receive the Texas A&M University scholarship.

He was presented with the award at the 14th annual Aggie Scholarship barbecue Thursday evening at the City Park amphitheatre. Capt. Henry Hill, president of the Aggie Club, made the presentation. An estimated 1,400 attended the annual affair to partake of barbecued beef, frijoles, salad, and all the trimmings and refreshments.

The scholarship will be worth $1,000 over a four-year period for Bill, who wants to study animal husbandry.

"You'll never know what this means to me," Bill told the crowd after announcement of the scholarship. "Thanks from the bottom of my heart, I'll try not to disappoint you." Bill is the son of Mrs. Maud

Seal, a widow who works in the Forsan school food program. They live in the Lockhart Addition of south Big Spring. Before they moved there, they lived in the country and Bill raised cattle and pigs and worked with animals every time he had a chance.

At Forsan High, he had been on the football, basketball and track teams, in the Coin and Stamp Club, and was a class favorite his freshman year. Last year he was on the yearbook staff. He has been a member of the Central Baptist Church for many years.

Capt. Hill and others who assisted in staging the annual barbecue expressed appreciation to the public for its support of the program. There currently are three scholarship winners in school.

VIOLENCE CONTINUES FOR FIFTH DAY

Leader Opposes Buddhist Strike

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Radical Buddhists called today for a three-day general strike, but the moderate head of the Buddhist Institute warned that their chaotic, emotional struggle against the military regime may bring the collapse of the church. As violence continued in Saigon for the fifth consecutive day, Thich Tam Chau issued his appeal from a secret hideaway after he abandoned the beleaguered Buddhist Institute compound to more militant monks.

His statement, published by the progovernment press but ignored by Buddhist papers, was a stern rebuke for the disorders in Saigon and in the northern Buddhist stronghold of Hue.

STERN REBUKE

Whether his words could stem the wave of unrest fomented by the militant monks seemed doubtful.

A mob of 1,000 chanted anti-government slogans and listened to denunciations of the regime over loudspeakers inside the Buddhist Institute compound on the outskirts of Saigon. Riot police kept the area firmly bottled up.

An eight-foot caricature of President Johnson hung from a fence along the compound. Nearby, the Buddhists set fire to three American vehicles, including a U.S. Embassy jeep. Others spilled debris in the streets and shouted insults at the police.

The Buddhists brought hundreds of children into the streets, apparently hopeful of baffling the riot forces. One mob seized a government plainclothesman, roughed him up slightly and let him go an hour later. Across the city 100 monks offered themselves up for arrest. Authorities chased most off.

10 ARRESTS

The government seemed determined to keep the demonstrations in check. Whenever they threatened to get out of order, police and troops opened up with tear gas grenades. They hauled off 10 of some 500 demonstrators who assembled on the Saigon waterfront.

Tam Chau, denying that he had abdicated his job, was particularly caustic over the use of Buddhist family altars as a protest gesture. He openly criticized his rival in Hue, Thich Tri Quang, for ordering — in Tam Chau's words — such a sacrilegious exhibition.

The northern Buddhist chief began the 10th day of a hunger strike in Hue, but there was no word on his condition. He had said he would take only liquids until the United States withdraws its support of the government and the ruling generals resign.

U.S. Air Force B52 Stratofortresses carried the war to a Communist troop and supply depot in the jungles near the Cambodian frontier 60 miles northwest of Saigon.

The Guam-based bombers dropped their massive explosives in support of a two-week-old sweep by the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, which a spokesman said had killed at least 175 Communists.

JET DOWN

Elsewhere there was little action in South Viet Nam, but U.S. jets flew 90 multipass missions against North Viet Nam. A Navy A4 Skyhawk became the 266th American plane shot down over the North. The pilot was presumed captured. However, an Air Force F105 Thunderchief dodged three Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles, and then went in to blast the missile launchers, a spokesman said.

Premier Nguyen Cao Ky sent another 500 paratroopers into Hue to reinforce the 1,100 soldiers and riot police seeking to quell the lingering Buddhist rebellion there and placed the northern city of 100,000 under martial law.

With the reinforcements, Ky pushed the odds in the government's favor in the event of further skirmishes with pro-Buddhist elements of the 1,500-man local garrison of the Vietnamese army's 1st Infantry Division. The junta paratroopers killed one infantryman and wounded at least three Thursday in breaking up a march by anti-government troops under Buddhist banners.

Government tanks rumbled into the downtown area after the shooting.

Ky's forces seemed in control of most of Hue, except for the ancient walled citadel where Viet Nam's emperors once lived and which now serves as headquarters for the Vietnamese 1st Division.

Occasional gunfire sounded, apparently government troops firing into the air to scatter crowds. A U.S. Marine truck convoy traveled from Hue to Phu Bai Airport, eight miles away, without encountering rock-throwing mobs who greeted the first contingent of government paratroopers Thursday.

Air Strikes Cut Monsoon Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are indications that the pre-monsoon supply buildup by the Communists in South Viet Nam fell below expectations, sources said today.

This may be one explanation for the failure of the Reds so far to mount the kind of offensive that American forces had been preparing to meet during the rainy season which began about a month ago.

The recent evaluation also figures in the belief of some key U.S. authorities that the cumulative effects of the bombing in the North and against the supply routes through Laos are telling.

During the spring, officials said repeatedly that the North Vietnamese were putting on a maximum effort to push arms, ammunition and other materiel into South Viet Nam, even risking daylight truck convoys to do so.

To counter this operation, the U.S. Air Force and Navy intensified their plane strikes all along the infiltration routes and against ammunition depots and other similar installations in North Viet Nam.

There was no immediate way to tell how effective those strikes were. Normally it takes about six weeks to develop the hard intelligence information for a firm evaluation.

American air attacks against the lines supplying the Reds in South Viet Nam from the North now are running somewhere between 9,000 and 11,000 sorties a month. A sortie is one flight by one plane. The level of these air operations is between twice and three times as intense as before the 37-day bombing pause of late December and early January.

Recent official reports tell of as many as three Navy carriers mounting bombing strikes and strafing raids against North Viet Nam in a given week.

A check of official summaries shows claims over the past four weeks amounting to the destruction or damage of more than 200 trucks, more than 200 railroad cars, more than 200 bridges, some 60 ferries, better than 600 barges and junks.

U.S. Buildup Marked By Growing Casualties

NEW YORK (AP) — In nearly 5½ years of war in Viet Nam, the United States has lost 3,504 men to enemy action, 3,454 of them since June 1, 1965, a study of casualty figures showed today.

The South Vietnamese reported nearly 11,000 battle dead in the period since June 1965.

The sharp increase in the number of Americans killed over the past year demonstrates the heavy buildup of U.S. forces in Viet Nam.

The heaviest weekly toll of U.S. servicemen killed in action was 224 in the week ending Nov. 22, 1965, reflecting the bitterness of the fighting at Ia Drang Valley, in the central highlands.

In three weeks this year, in the April and May period, in which the Saigon government turned its attention to the quelling of an internal effort to overthrow it, the number of American battle dead exceeded the South Vietnamese.

In the period June 1, 1965 to May 31, 1966, the United States reported 3,203 battle dead, with 251 added in the first two weeks of this month. U.S. wounded reported from June 1, 1965 to May 31, 1966 totalled 17,979. In the period June 1, 1965, through May 31, 1966, the figures — with none available for three weeks — show South Vietnamese reporting 10,918 combat dead. They do not report figures for wounded.

SHAKING THE CAN TO OIL THE FINANCIAL WHEELS OF PROGRAM

GUESS WHO HAS A RALLY GOING?

This is Little League Week, and Danny Valdes has visited Little League parks in Big Spring to capture some of the spirit of the season. Dal Herring, likewise, has probed into the scope of this program, with its extension into teenage play, in Big Spring.

MASCOTS BRING SMILES AND LUCK

IT'S FANS THAT MAKE WORLD GO ROUND

COLLISION AT HOME PLATE

MAMAS MAKE THE MONEY WITH CONCESSION OPERATIONS

HUNDREDS INVOLVED

Little League—Big Stuff

By DAL HERRING
Baseball has become a city-wide summer operation in Big Spring.

More than 750 boys participate in a program that involves thousands of parents, coaches, sponsors and interested citizens six afternoons and evenings of the week.

In six different ball parks, these many persons are engaged in activities that range from the actual playing of the sport to working in the concession stands and repairing catchers' equipment.

There are two teen-age leagues, the Hi-Juniors and the Sophomores. The four little leagues are the American, Texas, International, and the National. These four include the major, minor, and pee-wee categories.

Each league has its own governing board consisting of a president, one or more vice presidents, a secretary and a concessions stand officer. The person in charge of concessions oversees the operation and is responsible for getting the women out to help.

VOLUNTEER HELP
The home team furnishes at least two mothers for the concessions work. This duty is rotated so that each mother will only serve twice in a season, except the one in charge.

The home team also marks off the field, waters it, puts out the bases, shapes up the pitcher's mound, and provides an announcer and a scorekeeper.

The winning team must take the score books to the newspaper and pick them up later.

Parks are located in and outside the city. The Internationals are at Webb AFB, the Texas League operates in Northside, the American League is in the HCJC district, the National League plays south of town on Highway 87 and the Sophs and Hi-Juniors play north of Interstate 20.

The Pee-wees are 8-9-year-olds and have five teams; the minors are 9-10 years old with 17 teams; the majors are 10-12 and outfit 24 teams. The Sophomores are 12-14 years old and have eight teams, and the Hi-Juniors are 14-16 years old and field six teams.

BUYING PLAYERS
At each stage in the boys' advancement, they are put up for bid, as are big league players, and the coaches bid points for each player. For instance, a Sophomore League coach is given 36,000 points with which to "buy" his team. He may bid 1,000 points for one player and 6,000 for another, depending upon his judgment of the players' skills.

A draft choice is also used at the high-junior level. The team on bottom last year gets first choice for one player. Choices start with the bottom team and work to the top. After all six teams have drafted one boy, the names of all players are called alphabetically and the coaches may bid at will.

Usually 15 boys play on a team. In some cases where coaches and sponsors are short, a team may have as many as 22 players.

MAKE THE TEAM
Once chosen for a squad, the boys are on their own to make the team. Little Leaguers have no limitations for playing except pitchers are held to six innings a week. Games go six innings unless one side gets 10 runs ahead.

The only means of revenue are local donations, collections at ball games and profits at concessions.

"An average collection for one night is about seven dollars," said Leon Farris, president of the two teen-age leagues. "Two umpires must be paid $5 each. The deficit must be made up from concessions revenue."

This collection total probably would hold good at Little League parks, although on nights when leading teams or bitter rivals meet, the take may be substantially more. Always some of the fathers oblige by taking up the collection, working the stands and going from car to car.

OTHER SOURCES
Another source of revenue is the sale of advertising signs on outfield fences. A 4 x 8-foot ad costs about $50, and a 4 x 4-foot costs half that.

"The amount of money and volunteer labor involved in the total program is tremendous," said Farris. "When we built the Sophomore and Hi-Junior parks, fathers, coaches, and local businesses all worked together. If our parks had to be paid for at regular construction costs, I would estimate $50,000." "Instead, machinery and men were donated for putting up the lighting, digging the trenches needed, and laying the necessary cables and pipes. Some of these machines would have rented for $25 an hour, not to mention salaries for the trained technicians," added Farris.

"The bawks have been wonderful, also," he said. "Last year we borrowed $5,000 to put in the Sophomore Park. We were able to pay off $1,000 last season, and hope to do better this year."

SPONSORS ARE VITAL
Sponsoring a team is a real responsibility. The first year, it usually costs a sponsor about $500. He must buy 15 uniforms complete, about 18 caps, 24 bats, three dozen balls, outfit a catcher complete with mitt, chest protector, masks and chin guards, and sometimes buy practice bases.

The second year costs about $200. There are new caps to buy, repair of catcher's equipment, bats, balls, and one or two more uniforms. The uniforms usually last about three years.

The 250 boys involved in his teen-age program buy about $750 worth of insurance a year, Farris said. These fees the boys pay themselves. There are about 900 boys in the entire program.

In addition to the teams in Big Spring, the Knott community is moving toward establishment of a Little League program. Within the city, each of the leagues has geographical territories, and boys must play within those lines.

So near as is possible, the program operates much like pro baseball. It's practical, and besides, it makes a boy feel grown up.

Infant Kidnap Case Reopened

CHICAGO (AP) — The mystery that enveloped the hospital kidnaping two years ago of 37-hour-old Paul Joseph Fronczak has been reopened with the adoption of a child by the parents.

The infant was taken from Mrs. Chester Fronczak's arms in Michael Reese Hospital April 27, 1964, by a woman posing as a nurse.

The woman, who said she was taking the infant for an examination, walked out of the hospital with the baby. They were never seen again.

The Fronczaks believe they have their son. He is a sandy-haired 2-year-old abandoned July 2 in Newark, N.J., and has been in an orphanage.

Neighbors said Mr. and Mrs. Fronczak have told them they are convinced the child is theirs. They said the lad has been playing in the Fronczak yard since last week.

"His name is Paul Joseph, the same as before," Fronczak, 35, a machinist, told reporters. But he declined to say more.

The FBI, which has been investigating the case, refused to comment.

Lt. John Cartan, who has led the Chicago police investigation, said he was aware the Fronczaks have had a boy in their home. He declined to elaborate.

Goldwater Conservative Free Society Simmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barry Goldwater's Free Society Association, one year old today, is neither as big as its promoters forecast nor as troublesome as organization Republicans feared.

But the conservative-minded association believes it is making headway in what Goldwater once called a nonpartisan crusade for political education. The vast majority of its members are Republicans.

Republican National Chairman Ray C. Bliss said at the outset that the society, with a defeated GOP presidential nominee as honorary chairman, would make more difficult his quest for party unity — and drain away dollars which might otherwise go to the GOP National Committee.

Bliss, worried about rocking the unity boat, is not talking publicly about the society now. But he is known to feel the organization has not posed a problem to the National Committee.

Charles M. Lichtenstein, research chief at the Free Society Association, said the organization now has some 42,500 members.

Its president, Denison Kitchel, had forecast first year membership of 400,000 to 500,000, and a budget of $2 million to $2.5 million.

"We're maintaining our speed and course and we're on schedule," said Langhorne Washburn, executive director of the Republican National Finance Committee.

HIGHER BILLS Medicare May Adversely Affect Private Patients

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Science Writer

"You get a sick patient in a hospital who is 85 years old," the surgeon said. "He has to be fed, taken to the bathroom, washed, his teeth brushed—but Uncle Sam says that patient is less expensive to take care of than a youngster with an appendectomy."

Right or wrong, that is the opinion of many doctors as Medicare provisions come into effect July 1 and millions of elderly Americans can compete for additional medical services.

An Associated Press survey across the nation shows that some of the troubles forecast in the wake of Medicare are:

Higher fees for some specialized doctors, perhaps higher hospital bills for private patients, more hospital crowding at least at first, less nursing care for everyone, and in some areas a longer wait for surgery.

But the opinions are far from unanimous—and confusion marks most of the thinking when medical experts try to predict just what Medicare will do.

One thing appears certain: The new financial ability of doctors to buy long-needed care—from surgery to nursing home benefits—will show up many of the shortcomings of the U.S. medical establishment. But over the long run, it will help build a bigger and better house for U.S. medicine.

Even hospital administrators are confused on just what effect Medicare will have on the private patient and his bills.

With Medicare bills fully paid, the private patient may get a better break than he now gets," says John Rasmussen of the Hillsdale, Mich., Community Health Center.

Not so, says Harold Reed of the Clinton Memorial Hospital in St. Johns, Mich. "The private patient outside the scope of the law will be affected adversely," he said. "His bills will be higher and already burdened medical and nursing staffs will have less time to devote to the private patient."

He expects that the hospital will break even at best on Medicare patients and will lose money in some cases. "This means that the private patient must subsidize the Medicare patient," Reed said.

Massachusetts General Hospital, with 6,000 employees, increased Social Security levies will cost the hospital $300,000 more this year — and that cost boils down to almost an extra dollar a day per patient. It will show up on hospital bills.

To some, Medicare will discourage hospitals from employing their own chiefs of surgery and radiology. To one administrator, that is "a classic blunder on the part of Congress" and is going to set back U.S. hospital development "a good 15 to 20 years."

But over-all, most are optimistic about the effects of Medicare.

Said Albert L. Koch of the Barstow, Calif., Community Hospital, only 40 beds: "I think that many of these people will be going to doctors and hospitals now, particularly those in lower income groups who were on Social Security, but who lacked the funds to go previously. Those who had been going to county hospitals and clinics can now take advantage of services in their own community."

OTHER COSTS
William A. Clermont, administrator of the Malone, N.Y., Alice Hyde Hospital said that medical costs would continue to rise—not because of Medicare—but because the national economy expands and "salary mandates continue to increase."

Almost universally, the new billing procedures under Medicare are going to mean that many hospitals will have to change billing practice and all will run into more clerical and accounting work.

John O'Connor of Los Angeles County Hospital says more clerical help will be needed.

"There'll be more detailed reporting of costs and county hospitals will probably have to get away from the flat rate billing they now use," he said.

For many hospitals, it will mean an increased itemization of individual patient costs — and that will mean computers and mechanization.
