United States Offers To Halt Viet Bombing

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States offered today to halt the bombing of North Viet Nam and begin a phased withdrawal of U.S. troops if the Hanoi government will take corresponding steps to de-escalate the Vietnamese war. In a major policy declaration, U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg told the General Assembly that the United States is willing to take the first step if the North Vietnamese government will indicate by private or public response that it is ready to match the U.S. action.

He gave new assurances that the United States is not seeking to impose a policy of alignment on South Viet Nam and that the United States does not intend to maintain permanent military bases in that country.

NO HOLY WAR And, in an indirect reply to criticism from U.S. Secretary-General U Thant, Goldberg declared: "We are not engaged in a holy war against communism."

Numerous foreign ministers sat among the 118 delegations in the assembly chamber. Neither U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk nor Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko was present, however.

Goldberg declared the United States was ready to begin a phased withdrawal from South Viet Nam if the Communists would agree to withdraw their troops under effective supervision.

TWO QUESTIONS He posed these two questions to North Viet Nam: "Would it, in the interest of peace, and in response to a prior cessation by the United States of the bombing of North Viet Nam, take corresponding and timely steps to reduce or bring to an end its own military activities against South Viet Nam?" "Would North Viet Nam be

TEXANS AT WAR: VAN LOON Career Soldier Fires Rocket In Front Door

By The Associated Press It was the first combat run for Capt. Weston O. Van Loon, a Texan at war commanding a three-helicopter fire team over a patch of South Viet Nam jungle alive with anti-aircraft fire. "I wanted to see who was shooting and I thought if I got in low I could see better. I found them—the Viet Cong who were sending up tracers directing the fire of the others—and I got a rocket right in the front door. "That's got to be at least part luck," recalls Van Loon of the 1965 incident during which he suffered two bullet wounds. "If you place them within 10 yards at that range—200 yards—you're doing well." Except for scars on his thigh

TOLL HIGH As the jet air battles raged over the North, U.S. pilots raided ground targets in North Viet Nam in 121 missions and claimed a high toll of railroad cars, trucks and anti-aircraft sites.

The U.S. military command announced that 96 U.S. servicemen were killed in action last week and 583 were wounded, an increase in both categories over the previous week. Enemy casualties dropped sharply. The week before, 71 U.S. servicemen were reported killed and 450 wounded. The latest figures brought American combat deaths for the Viet Nam war to 5,130. The year's total rose to 3,282 killed and 19,360 wounded. Five Americans were reported missing or captured last week. Enemy dead was given as 722 compared with 1,157 for the previous week. A total of 111 enemy troops were reported captured, half the number the week before. South Vietnamese casualties were reported as 172 killed and 424 wounded. The week before there were 174 killed and 488

Snyder Man Dies When Car Flips

A 36-year-old Snyder man whose car flipped over one and a half times early today, became Howard County's 16th traffic fatality of 1966. Eight of these deaths have occurred on rural and state highways, and eight within the city limits. State Highway Patrolman Arvin Henry, who with Deputy Linda Oldfield, investigated the wreck, identified the dead man as J. W. Dinwiddie Jr., of 3002 38th Street, Snyder. He was an employe of the Standard Oil Co. Jess Slaughter, justice of the peace, ruled death due to an accident. Henry said that the wreck apparently occurred around 4 a.m. today. It was one-half mile west of the Coleman Store near Vincent on SH 350. Dinwiddie, alone in his light car, was thrown 50 feet from the wreckage into a field where his body was not found until daylight. Henry said that Jack Graham, who lives in Vincent, came upon the wreckage of the car around 4:30 a.m. He walked around it and checked the area. Finding no bodies nor injured persons, he assumed no one was hurt. At 6 a.m. a second search was made and the body was located in the field. Big Spring Ambulance was called and the victim brought to the Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home here. Later it was removed to the Bell-Seale Funeral Home in Snyder where arrangements are pending. Dinwiddie was travelling west when his car ran out of control and flipped over, Henry said.

Living Costs Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices for food, autos and medical care boosted sharply rising living costs another fourth of one per cent last month, the Labor Department reported today. The biggest August price hikes were for food, up 1.3 per cent over all, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said. DOUBLE The increase brought the government's consumer price index up to 113.8, meaning it cost $11.38 in August to purchase items that cost $10 in the 1957-59 period on which the index is based. The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the index so far this year was up 2.5 per cent, more than double the rise in the first eight months of last year and the biggest hike for the period since 1957. USED CARS Commissioner Arthur M. Ross announced that the bureau will check closely price increases by the auto industry on 1967 models to see if added safety equipment represents a real increase in values. The results of this check will not be known until November. In August, it was used cars that showed price increases, rising 1.5 per cent at a time when prices usually go down as dealers unload remaining new 1966 models. The August consumer price index for all items, including a broad range of typical family living costs, was 3.5 per cent higher than a year ago. The index for all items and for food usually goes down in August. MEATS SOAR In food, eggs went up 18 per cent in August, lettuce up 15.2 per cent, bread up about 5 per cent and dairy products up 4.5 per cent. Meats, poultry and fish rose two-tenths of one per cent. Fruits and vegetables were up seven-tenths.

Plane Blast Claims 24

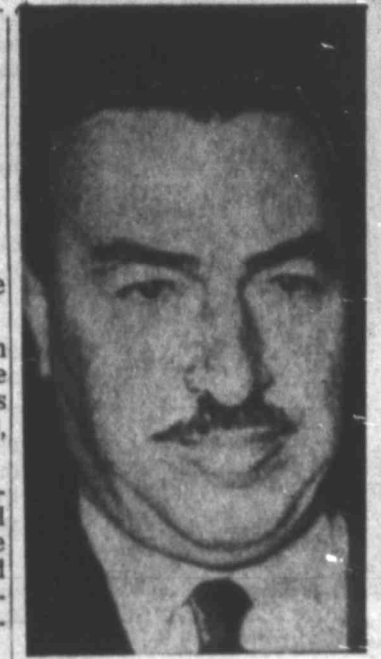

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — An Australian airliner caught fire and exploded in the air northwest of Brisbane today, killing all 24 persons aboard. The bodies of two children were found in the scattered wreckage 12 miles from Winton, 715 miles from Brisbane. The plane was operated by Ansett-Australian National Airlines on a run from Mount Isa to Brisbane. The death toll was the second highest in the history of Australian civil aviation, surpassed only in 1960 when 29 persons were killed in a crash near Mackay, Queensland.

24 Idols Of Longhairs Evicted From Courtroom

DALLAS (AP) — Some teenagers went to court today because they were concerned that their rock 'n' roll idols may be kept out of school because of long hair. But the fans, two dozen of them, found themselves evicted to leave the courtroom of U. S. Dist. Judge W. M. Taylor Jr. because they weren't wearing suits. The courtless youngsters filed out of the courtroom on orders of the bailiff and waited in the

TUMBLING CRAFT FACES SMASH-UP Moon Trip Kissed 'Goodbye'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — All hope of landing America's Surveyor 2 spacecraft gently on the moon disappeared today when scientists decided "there's not enough power left in the battery to complete the mission." "We just kissed it goodbye," a spokesman for the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said early today. "Even if we got it stabilized there wouldn't be enough power left to operate the landing system's radar." That means, he said, that the tumbling spacecraft will smash into the moon tonight and be destroyed. "We tried one final time to jar the rocket motor into action, but all it did was make the spacecraft tumble faster," he said. It was tumbling at about 146 revolutions per minute until the final action which ended the mission—firing the 9,000-pound-thrust retrorocket in the bottom of the spacecraft. There was contact with Surveyor for about 30 seconds after ignition of the retrorocket indicating the tumbling had slowed to perhaps 116 revolutions per minute, then contact was lost. Stripped

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., arrives today at a hearing room before the House Education and Labor Committee vote to strip the controversial chairman of much of his power to direct the committee's business. NY Solon Levels Lynching Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Education and Labor Committee voted overwhelmingly today to strip controversial chairman Adam Clayton Powell of much of his power to direct the committee's business. The vote was 77 to 1, according to Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., a member of the committee. LYNCH The action came at a meeting from which another Republican member emerged to charge that Democrats were trying to lynch Powell. "There's a lynching going on in there," said Rep. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., as he stormed from the closed committee session in protest. But Goodell and other Republicans left open the question of how they would vote on the move to curb Powell's authority. "I'm convinced he's fairer than three-fourths of the Democrats trying to reform him," said Rep. John M. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who had said before the meeting he would vote against Powell.

WIN LIMITATIONS Democrats leading the fight to strip Powell of most of his powers as chairman succeeded in winning a debate limitation. Republicans protested the Democrats were trying to "gag" opposition to their movement. Republicans lost an effort to open the meeting to the press and public. Ashbrook said the Republicans went into the meeting with the view that it was a good time to put through needed committee reforms. "But we found it turning into a farce," he said. "It became nothing but an opportunity to enhance certain Democrats and turned into an attack on Powell that, at this time, I don't think is warranted. And I've never been a friend of Mr. Powell's." Neither Ashbrook nor Goodell gave details of any tactics to which they objected. Democratic members are leading a move to reduce Powell's authority as chairman, and the Republicans referred only generally to this. If they succeed, Powell, a Negro, will lose his unchallenged authority to draw committee funds, hire and fire committee employes and pocket committee-approved bills that displease him. There have been complaints against him on all counts. NEXT SESSION Such changes, however, would expire at the end of the current session. With new rules due to be adopted for the next Congress in January, the battle would have to be fought all over again. Committee Republicans called the revolt a farce Wednesday and said they would have stiffer rules changes to propose today. Ironically, Powell's only hope of escaping the rebuke of his colleagues would appear to be the possibility of a fight between Democrats and Republicans over who wants to be harder on him. Although 13 of the 21 Democrats on the 31-member committee are backing the proposed rules changes, it would take 16 votes to put them into effect. Assuming the other eight Democrats stay with Powell, that means Republican support would be needed to limit him. Committee Republicans met with their House leaders Wednesday, then declared that Powell was the Democrats' problem. They said the proposed rules changes appeared to be a whitewash of charges against Powell. Informed sources say the Teamsters Union is giving all-out support to Powell while the giant AFL-CIO maintains official neutrality. UNION ROOTING But sources add that the AFL-CIO, which has clashed often with Powell, is privately rooting for curbs on his power. The committee handles most labor legislation. The latest anti-Powell proposal was drafted Wednesday as a substitute for a version offered by Rep. Sam M. Gibbons, D-Fla., who spurred the revolt last Thursday. Gibbons would have put a six-man executive committee in charge of all committee affairs. Rep. Edward J. Gurney of Florida, a committee Republican who had been expected to support the Democrats, sounded the general GOP view when he said Wednesday that the new approach "leaves Powell in the saddle as chairman and does little more than restate what a majority of the committee can do already."

'Print' Key Percy Lead

KENILWORTH, Ill. (AP) — Authorities said today a "good fingerprint" that does not match those of 20 persons who had access to the Charles Percy home is the best lead in the investigation into the slaying of Valerie Percy. Robert Daley, Kenilworth police chief, said the print was found on glass cut from a French door. He described it as "the most important piece of evidence we have right now." Three Coast Guard scuba divers searched the bottom of Lake Michigan off the Percy estate Wednesday for a truncheon or knife that may have been used to kill Valerie, 21, last Sunday. The divers stopped after two hours because of choppy waves. Also used to search the lake was an iron drag bar with rows of magnets welded on. The Coast Guard planned to renew scuba diving today. The Coast Guard would not comment on a report it located an object that possibly could be the murder weapon. Wednesday night Capt. Daniel Drugel of the Chicago police crime laboratory, which is cooperating in the investigation with Kenilworth police and state's attorney's investigators, said he hopes to have a report in seven to ten days on fingerprints, palm prints and other possible evidence gathered in the Percy home.

State Department Shake Baffles Most Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Curious senators are about to seize the opportunity of taking a new reading on President Johnson's foreign policies as a result of the shakeup in his State Department team.

There was little doubt that the nominations of Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach to be undersecretary of state, of Prof. Eugene Rostow as undersecretary for economic affairs and of Ambassador Foy D. Kohler as deputy undersecretary of state will get Senate confirmation.

But before that happens, mystified Democrats and Republicans on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee made it clear they want to know what it's all about and whether the appointments Johnson announced Wednesday portend any change in his international course.

AMAZEMENT
Almost without exception, senators expressed amazement that Katzenbach would step down from a Cabinet to a sub-Cabinet level.

Speculation on his successor centered on Deputy Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, son of Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark, a Texan like Johnson. But the possibility of the selection of Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall, a Negro, for the top post was not ruled out.

TEXAN EYED
Attorney Leon Jaworski of Houston, Tex., a long-time friend who visited with Johnson at the White House Tuesday night, was described by one source as one of two or three under consideration for the job. He told a newsman Wednesday night "there is no way I could comment on this. Any announcement would have to come from another source."

A Minneapolis-St. Paul television station, KSTP-TV, reported Wednesday night that Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman will be named Katzenbach's successor. Freeman, former governor of Minnesota, was the Democratic-Farmer-Labor candidate for Minnesota attorney general in 1950. He was defeated.

FREEMAN
Freeman was not available for comment Wednesday night. His wife told a newsman the KSTP-TV report was erroneous. She said Freeman was in bed with a bad cold.

Whether Katzenbach was taking the first step toward eventually succeeding Dean Rusk as secretary of state remained an intriguing question that apparently only Johnson himself could answer.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, called for a "thorough inquiry" by the Foreign Relations Committee into Katzenbach's views and any impact the appointment might have in altering the administration's course in Viet Nam and elsewhere.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., Foreign Relations Committee chairman who has been critical of the administration's Southeast Asia decisions, indicated in a separate interview he expects the committee to explore policy matters at some length with Katzenbach.

FIRST LOVE
Although Fulbright said he didn't know Katzenbach was interested in foreign affairs, the appointee told a news conference Wednesday he felt he was "returning in a way to my first love, I guess."
Katzenbach taught international law at both Yale and the University of Chicago and is an authority on the legal aspects of space.

GOP SPLIT
Katzenbach said he looks on his new assignment as "another new and exciting experience; I think that nothing in the world is more important than trying to work for peace."
Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., a Foreign Relations Committee member who has been critical of Johnson's Viet Nam policies, said in this connection he hopes Katzenbach "will be more interested in finding ways toward peace than some other State Department officials have been."

Republican reaction to the appointment was divided. Hickenlooper said he was in "substantial disagreement to some of the far-fetched positions" Katzenbach had taken as attorney general. Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., said he wished Katzenbach had resigned "and stopped right there."

WORKER
But Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said there was "not a particle of doubt" that the nomination would be confirmed. Dirksen said he doesn't know how well qualified the appointee is for a diplomatic post.

But he added: "Nick is a brain, make no mistake about that."

Agreeing, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California, assistant Republican leader, said Katzenbach is "dedicated to public service and has a great capacity for work."

To Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana, assistant Democratic leader, the appointment came as a surprise, as it did to others.
His reaction: "I'm glad to see they are getting at least one competent man in the State Department."

States' Rights Shout Going Out Of Style

KENTUCKY DAM VILLAGE, Ky. (AP) — States' rights, once the rallying cry for the South, may be going out of style.

There were strong indications at the Southern Governors Conference just ended that Dixie has switched, instead, to "state responsibility" within the framework of a state-federal partnership.

Most conference speakers, including some of the governors, talked openly not of states' rights but of the way the states can take part in federal programs — supported partly or wholly by the federal government.

TAXPAYERS
"We in the South resent the implication that our opposition to federal encroachment ends when federal funds are available," said Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama. "This isn't federal money; it's taxpayers' money and the taxpayers of Alabama are just as entitled to it as anyone else."

Nonetheless, more than one election campaign has been conducted in the Southern states on the issue of which candidate can get the most federal funds.

And the speakers, beginning with the first business session Monday and ending Wednesday, seemed concerned mostly with filling in the governors on new federal programs, with new federal funds, and how their states can qualify for their share.

PROTEST
South Carolina Gov. Robert E. McNair, who submitted a resolution protesting the civil rights guidelines of the U.S. Office of Education, told the conference that nearly $500,000 in federal funds has been spent in the South during the past three years on educational television research.

Gov. Edward T. Breathitt of Kentucky noted that new highway safety legislation passed by Congress requires states to have their own federally approved safety programs by 1969, to qualify for $55 million in federal matching funds.

Otherwise, he said, they stand to lose up to 10 per cent of their federal highway construction funds as well.

CRUCIAL
Aubrey J. Wagner, Tennessee Valley Authority chairman, noted that the federally owned power reclamation flood-control agency, which predated the Southern Governors Conference, was a leader in putting the South on its economic feet.

Breathitt perhaps best summed up the tone of the meeting.
"What we need to fear is not the disappearance of the states," he said, "but their increasing irrelevance to the needs of this day. The states could survive only as markers in a constitutional graveyard."

This, he said, is not necessary — but warned that it could occur unless there was what he termed a "rebirth of state responsibility (in which) the governors and the legislators of the states will play a crucial role."

Lester Browns Happen To Run Into Each Other

ACKERLY — Mr. and Mrs. Lester Brown, widely known residents of Ackerly, happened to run into each other last Monday morning.

"The darndest thing I ever heard about," commented Mr. Brown.

Mrs. Brown relates the story thus: "I had been downtown and was coming home in my car. My husband had just left home in his pickup. I was approaching an intersection of the road which leads to our house. He was coming from the house toward the road I was on."

"There are tall weeds and growth at the corner. These block the view."
She said the next thing she knew there was a tremendous crash.

Neither she nor Mr. Brown was injured. His pickup was damaged $200. It will cost $400 to fix Mrs. Brown's car.

They checked with their insurance man. Because they hit one another, it's all in the family and the liability clause in their policy doesn't pay.

However their collision insurance does.

"It was so embarrassing," mused Mrs. Brown.

NO SWEAT
GENEVA (AP) — Soviet spacemen don't have the sweat problem which hampered a U.S. astronaut last week, says Dr. Boris Yegorov, the Soviet cosmonaut who was the first doctor in space two years ago.

Yegorov is in Geneva attending the assembly of the European Group for International Space Development.

He said the problem doesn't exist for the Soviets "because the atmosphere and environment of the Soviet space cabins and space suits are absolutely normal whereas the Americans rely on artificial air mixture."

Yegorov said the U.S. cabins have a higher than normal proportion of oxygen. This, he contended, can cause heart and blood complications for the astronauts.

House Expected To Take Aim At 'Peaceniks'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite administration opposition, the House is expected to give overwhelming approval today to a bill aimed at activities of some outspoken opponents of the war in Viet Nam.

The bill, subject of four tumultuous days of hearings last month by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, is directed at overt antiwar acts such as collection of medical supplies for the Viet Cong and attempts to block troop trains.

Only a couple of dozen opponents of committee activities were expected to vote against the bill sponsored by Rep. Joe R. Pool, D-Tex.

The legislation is given virtually no chance for enactment into law, however, because both Republican and Democratic Senate leaders oppose it.

The bill would provide penalties up to a $20,000 fine and 20 years in prison for sending aid to the nation's enemies. Sections covering obstruction of military supplies or troops carry a maximum penalty of $10,000 and five years.
Deputy Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, testified that the bill is unnecessary and might infringe on constitutional rights.

Mr. Bell liked to make things better...

After Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone in 1876, he did not rest on his laurels. He helped form the National Geographic Society, developed the basic method of making phonograph records on wax discs and pioneered a method of locating icebergs by detecting echoes from them. He made suggestions and contributions that helped give us air conditioning and the iron lung. For 46 years after inventing the telephone, he lived a vigorous and creative life.

Southwestern Bell likes to make things better, too... Six short years ago, we did not offer the Princess® telephone, Home Interphone, Wide Area Telephone Service, Centrex service, Data-Phone data communications service or Panel Phone. There was no electronic artificial larynx, no automatic dialer and no Speakerphone. Today, these new items help us provide the best telephone service in the world. But we want to make it better. That's our legacy from Mr. Bell.

Oscar Derby Shaping Up As Lively Contest

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This is the season when the leaves start to golden and the swallows bug out of Capistrano. It also marks the beginning of the home stretch in the Oscar derby.

It is shaping up as a lively race, one of the best in years if the prestigious autumn releases fulfill their promise.

The pace was set earlier this year by "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" which had the shock value and dramatic power to nominate itself immediately, and in all departments.

The film may produce the oddity of having all four players nominated in the four acting categories: Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton as stars and Sandy Dennis and George Segal as support. The Burtons conceivably could win history's first "his" and "hers" Oscars.

"ALFIE"

Little else that has been released earlier in the year seems to be in top contention. Alan Arkin made an impressive debut in "The Russians are Coming etc." and could be nominated. There are nomination chances in various categories for "Khartoum," "Fantastic Voyage" (effects), "Alfie," "The Blue Max" and "Harper."

Hallie Loses Her Strength

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tropical storm Hallie ran out of steam near the Mexican coast Wednesday when cool dry air moved into its system.

In its final advisory on Hallie, the Weather Bureau said Navy and Air Force reconnaissance flights showed that Hallie had become weak and disorganized.

Highest winds reported late Wednesday were about 33 m.p.h. in showers along the Mexican coast from Tampico to Vera Cruz.

SOLDIER'S JOURNEY

Foreign Legion Is Tough Outfit

BIEN HOA, South Viet Nam (AP) — Rudiger Richter is a tough young member of the crack U.S. 173rd Airborne Brigade.

What does he think is the toughest military outfit in the world?

The French Foreign Legion, naturally.

Richter comes by the opinion through hard experience.

GREAT UNIT

For him, the road to Viet Nam began when his family fled the Russian army's World War II advance into Berlin. As a youth in postwar Germany, Richter joined the Foreign Legion at the age of 16 by shifting his birthday back a bit.

"It was a great unit and I am proud to have served in it," Richter reminisces in the Vietnamese jungles with his new comrades.

TURMOIL

For seven years, Richter fought in Algeria with the legion's famed "Regiment Etranger Parachutiste," the crack 1st Paratrooper Regiment which ended its career by taking on Charles de Gaulle.

That was during the final turmoil of the Algerian rebellion when many Legionnaires supported the series of anti-De Gaulle outbreaks. As a result, the proud 1st Regiment was broken up and Richter finished his days in Algeria at headquarters in Sidi bel Abbes before that, too, was lost to the Legion.

After seven years of fighting in Algeria, Rudi Richter went back to Germany as a seasoned veteran of 23 with nothing particular to do. Living in Berlin with his mother, he accepted the sponsorship of an uncle and went to the United States.

DRAFTEE

"When I saw how people were living, I wanted to stay and decided to become an American citizen," Richter said.

"I didn't plan to join the Army again, not after seven years in the Legion, but since I planned to become a citizen I couldn't very well object when I was drafted," Richter said.

With his background as a paratrooper, Richter was a natural for the 4th Battalion of the 173rd Brigade, arriving in Viet Nam about four months ago.

"The United States takes far better care of its men than the Legion did," Richter said, "but in general the Legionnaires were tougher. They were all volunteers."

Fire Wipes Out 2 Business Houses

FLORESVILLE, Tex. (AP)—A $100,000 fire destroyed two Floresville business places Wednesday night.

Fire Chief Edgar Ehlers said there apparently was a small explosion in the Kenneth Brown Ford agency, followed by a roaring blaze which quickly spread through the adjoining building of the Floresville Implement Co.

The blaze broke out about 10 p.m. Nothing was saved in either building.

Ehlers said the loss would run $100,000 or more.

Floresville is 30 miles south of San Antonio.

Larry Shaw Has Top Calf

LAMESA — Larry Don Shaw, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Shaw, Knott, showed the grand champion steer of the Dawson County Fair here Wednesday.

Young Shaw, a member of the Howard County 4-H Club organization, had entered his calf in the commercial division. It turned out to be the best animal of all classes and won its trophy over 75 other steers.

The calf was a Howard County-bred animal from the Lloyd Robinson herd. Robinson's ranch is near Knott.

Linda Shaw, Larry's sister, won a red ribbon with her commercial entry in the fair. She and Larry were the only Howard County competitors in the Dawson County competition.

Communications Stressed In Class

"Effective communication between individuals is a key to greater personal growth and development," said Warren Quinlan, director of the Dale Carnegie Courses, at a business workshop meeting with the employees of the State National Bank, Tuesday afternoon.

Quinlan emphasized three problems which cause breakdowns in communications. He also discussed the close relationship between human relations and communications.

Employees were given a format in which they could concentrate on "skill abilities" and receive a better return on their areas of specialized knowledge. The workshop was presented as a non-commercial business program. The Daily Herald is sponsoring the course as a community service.

Parks Board OKs Birdwell Pavilion

The Parks and Recreation Board agreed Wednesday afternoon to let the Boy Scouts have another chance to renovate the old Gideon house in the City Park for use as a troop hut. They also voted improvements at Birdwell Park, including a pavilion.

Jack Watkins, chairman of the board, said that the Scouts had still not done anything about renovating the old house, which is located midway on the east side of the park. However, he was in favor of letting them have another chance to maintain it.

Larry Crow, city manager, said that a lease had been drawn up by Harvey Hooser for the Boy Scout troop which is to use the house. The lease has not been signed yet.

The city will have the option to tear down the house and use it as a reserved pavilion if the Boy Scouts do not begin work on it by the lease expiration December, 1967.

Scouting personnel maintain that the delay on the house so far was due to summer camping activities, vacations and extra duties by the scoutmaster. Members voted unanimously to continue with improvements on Birdwell Park, Hillcrest Park and City Park with original bond money that was deferred until the Lakeview Park was completed. Some $9,000 is on hand for improvements in the three parks.

Big Turnout For Dawson Co. Fair

In the flower show, Mrs. Herman Pettaway was sweepstakes winner in the artistic division, and Mrs. John Banta took the sweepstakes prize in horticulture. The fair will end Friday night.

The market was lower from the start but at no time was the loss as bad as Wednesday. Leading motor stocks wiped away small losses and all showed plus signs. Airlines were mostly higher, aerospace defense stocks mixed.

Oils, rubbers and mail order retailers continued lower. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 1.7 at 284.6 with industrials off 2.4, rails off .9 and utilities off .3.

Xerox scratched out an original loss of four points, and showed a net gain of nearly a point. IBM erased a loss exceeding a point and showed a net fractional gain.

Du Pont canceled most of a loss which was well over a point at worst. Wall Street was assessing the meaning of the U.S. offer to halt the bombing of North Vietnam and began a phased withdrawal of U.S. troops if the Hanoi government will take corresponding steps to de-escalate the Viet Nam war.

Electronics, drugs and steels were mostly higher. Rails remained generally lower. Oils were a little lower on balance.

Lions Prepare For Carnival

Fresh from a recognition affair, the Downtown Lions are turning to their annual Fun-A-Rama here next week.

Materials for booth construction were moved on site at College Park Shopping Center, and assembly was to start today. The carnival-type show gets underway Monday evening and will continue through Oct. 1.

Frosty Robinson is in charge of construction and said there would be a dozen booths operating in addition to the ride attractions booked in for the event. At their Wednesday meeting in the Settles, Lions witnessed a film strip on the electoral college and needs for reforms. Dan Conley was in charge.

The awards dinner, held last week had outstanding contributions to the club, and particularly to the long-time members. Joe Pond, who has been a member of Lions International for 40 years, received his pin with four chevrons and the praise of his fellow Lions. He is a past district governor.

Dan Conley received his 30-year pin. Other awards included Choc Jones, Dr. Dick Lane, John Dibrrell Gilbert Gibbs, 25 years; D. S. Riley, also a former district governor, L. T. King, president, and R. H. Snyder, 20 years; J. R. Turner, John B. Hardy (who was a charter member of another club), 15 years; Ernest Boyd, Robert Dean, John Quigley and Louis Carothers, 10 years. Mrs. D. S. Riley was honored with a life membership in the Lions League of Texas Crippled Children's Camp.

Packet Missed From JP Office

Walter Grice, justice of peace Precinct 1, Place 1, said Wednesday that a bank packet which contained checks, money orders and some cash on several cases is missing from his office. He asked that if anyone finds the light brown imitation leather packet, or any checks or money orders to his office to advise him.

Materials Handy For Installations

Many requests are coming to TFWC Headquarters asking for material on "Installation of Officers." While the executive secretary, Mrs. Vivian McCracken, is delighted to oblige, it would expedite delivery if the clubs would write direct to General Federation of Women's Clubs, 174 N. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. 20036, thereby eliminating her having to mail the request to them.

When ordering material from GFWC, please allow three weeks for delivery, unless you send a self-addressed and stamped envelope and ask for a quick response.

This is the time of year when new presidents are being elected, and it might be well for them to write to GFWC and get a new list of material available. It is one of your privileges and the program department at GFWC is always updating their material.

Little Effect Seen In Walkout

BEAUMONT (AP)—Wagoner Carr declared today that the walkout from the state Democratic convention by Harris and Midland County delegates will "have very little effect on party unity."

"The Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate made the statement at a breakfast as he launched his Southeast Texas campaign. His way was to be climaxed with an 18-county rally tonight at Mount Pleasant in far northeast Texas.

"Some were just looking for a reason to walk out anyway," said Carr. "As long as we stand together, they (the Republicans) can't beat us."

The official Harris County delegation, a liberal group, refused to attend the state convention Tuesday after a committee diluted its voting strength with conservatives. About 20 Midland County delegates joined them.

A newspaper press? A computer battery or any of a dozen other kinds of machines? It's a cotton gin, that's what. In the new Planter's Gin, half a mile north of town, gin stands have not only been reduced from five to three, but capacity has been boosted from six to 15 bales per hour in the process. Techniques have changed as drastically as design, for rollers now turn, which presents lint to the speeded saws much more rapidly. Any type cotton can be handled. The new facility is owned by Sweetwater Cotton Oil Co., which have 32 in the region. J. M. Bradley is district manager, Lester Adams is gin manager. (Photo by Danny Valdes)

Valley Area Not Receptive To Water Plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Plan's proposal to divert East Texas water to the Rio Grande Valley for irrigation met lukewarm response in the valley, the director of the Texas Water Development Board says.

"The prospect of importing water into the valley was not enthusiastically received," Joe Moore told a news conference.

He announced the topics his staff would take up as they re-evaluated parts of the plan that were criticized during the hearings across the state this summer.

These included the possibilities of transferring East Texas water to West Texas for irrigation, municipal and industrial purposes. West Texas was largely left out of the plan.

Moore said planners would look for east-west routes "with as many level stretches and reservoirs as you can get" to "keep lift to a minimum." He listed the Brazos and Colorado rivers as possible channels.

Moore said he is not sure how long the re-study might take, adding that estimates have run from six to 12 months. He said planning funds have about run out and the board must request an emergency appropriation when the legislature meets in January.

He said the board was not dismayed by the hostile reaction to parts of the plan, but "it would be safe to say the hearings provided more opposition in places different from those where we anticipated it."

"There has to be some plan for redistributing the state's surface water," he said. "The objections generally were a matter of local concern. I anticipate we can still achieve substantial statewide support for a statewide water plan."

Maybe Those UFOs Are Just Fireflies

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Are some of those Unidentified Flying Objects recently sighted over parts of the United States merely flying ants or other insects with a "glow" on?

Norton T. Novitt, an amateur Denver scientist whose hobby is the study of the electric properties of insects, thinks it's highly possible. Not necessarily insects with a built-in glow, such as fireflies, but insects which have somehow attracted an electric charge so great that they give off lights.

In 20 years of UFO sighting reports other scientists have said the shiny-bodied insects might be mistaken during daylight for flying saucers.

But the glowing insect theory is original with Novitt, a scientific illustrator with the U.S. Geological Survey in Denver. And he believes it may account for a small part of the seven percent of UFOs which the Air Force admits it cannot explain.

It all started with Novitt three summers ago when he was a member of a Denver moon-watch team, one of the groups of volunteers around the country who help the National Aeronautics and Space Administration keep track of some of the large artificial satellites.

Novitt had set up a telescope in a vacant lot to see if he could spot a satellite during daylight. He picked up a bright object traveling too fast to be a satellite. It soon was joined by a second object.

Fascinated, he watched the two objects descend until they nearly reached the ground. Taking his eye from the telescope he was startled to find that the apparent landing site was in front of a garage a short distance away. He hurried to the spot and found two winged ants.

He surmised the bright light he had observed was sunlight glinting from their iridescent bodies.

Research produced the fact that at certain times of the year male and female ants sprout wings to take part in an airborne mating ritual. The winged ants gradually group together into giant swarms, some estimated to contain as many as 37 million, to set up new ant colonies.

He wondered what these giant swarms would look like at night if they could glow. Perhaps ants could pick up enough static electricity to make them give off light.

To find out he glued 24 ants around the outside of a plastic ball. A static electric generator was connected to the ball with a thin wire. The ball was suspended from the ceiling of his home laboratory with threads.

Sure enough, when he cranked the generator the entire ball seemed to glow with a dim blue light. The bodies of the ants were discernible as brighter specks of light as the electricity drained off them into space.

"It's simply an emission of electric corona light," he explained.

The ball hovered, moved erratically as pulses of static electricity drained off with differing intensities from the ants.

New York City recorded 5.54 inches Wednesday — the heaviest 24-hour rainfall there in 63 years. It was exceeded only on Oct. 8 and 9 in 1963 when 11.17 inches deluged the city.

Albany, N.Y., recorded 1.38 inches of rain in six hours, Montpelier, Vt., 1.23, and Concord, N.H., 1.27.

A coastal storm dropped heavy rain in New England during the night but moved out of the area near dawn, leaving only scattered showers.

Heavy downpours in Maryland followed one of the driest summers in history. Rainfall for Tuesday through Wednesday morning amounted to 3.10 inches at Baltimore's Friendship Airport, 5.18 at Great Mills in Southern Maryland and 3.20 at Frosburg in Western Maryland.

Last week the fall in North Central Maryland totaled more than 10 inches.

Mostly clear skies prevailed over the rest of the country except for light showers in the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley.

it also gave off a crackling sound. Novitt said a swarm of several million ants would emit a very loud, humming or buzzing noise.

"No new scientific principles are involved," he said. "It is rather an application of a natural combination of the principles of three sciences — meteorology, atmospheric electricity; physics, electrostatics of assembled small airborne objects; and entomology, gathering of insects."

He said the same is true of gossamer, the networks of cobwebs that float in the air during spider migration seasons.

The Denver experimenter believes there are at least four ways in which ants apparently can pick up a glow:

Individual ants become charged on the ground and then join a swarm, creating a mass of many different electrical charges.

Ants fly up through successively more highly charged layers of air.

Ants create their own static electricity by rubbing together in flight, much like a person does when he shuffles across a rug.

Ants often swarm right after a thunderstorm which has left the air saturated with a different kind of charge than there was just before the storm.

"The theory," he said, "logically explains many of the characteristics of the UFO phenomena such as materialization and disappearance, hovering and departure, glowing and pulsating lights of various colors, apparent high velocity rotation of the objects, varieties of shapes and sizes, humming noises, pitting of ground surfaces, scorching of vegetation, residues of chemical substances, seasonal appearance in late summer and Indian summer, and lack of communication with the airborne objects."

Heavy Rains Hit Northeast

By The Associated Press

Heavy rains continued to soak the Northeast today and officials of the Agriculture Department said the downpours had improved pastures and late hay prospects.

In some areas, however, farm experts said the rains came too late to help most crops.

Erhard Attacked By Service Unit

BAD GOESBERG, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Ludwig Erhard angrily walked out of a meeting of the Civil Service League today when the head of the organization criticized him.

The incident came amid a wave of attacks on Erhard and his government. Usually the criticism is pointed at the chancellor's close advisers, not directly at him.

Undergarments Get Shorter To Match Stylish Skirts

By PEGGY SIMPSON

DALLAS (AP) — What's a woman to wear under today's short-skirt skirts?

A tiny slip, perhaps, or a girdle with a frill attached.

Whichever it is, even the lingerie manufacturers are hard put to describe the brevity of it all.

Some of the manufacturers' representatives tried, at a recent Dallas market, to tell what a slip looked like after the underwear revolution.

"It stops above mid-thigh," ventured one salesman.

"We call ours 'barely below the hips,'" said another.

"What about short-short-short?" offered a third.

From the way the abbreviated undergarments are being snatched up by stores across the country, the experts predict women-watchers will see hemlines higher this season than anyone imagined.

The lingerie industry is delighted, of course.

One salesman said his company was sure there were limits to the times a gal would stitch a pleat in her old slip, or hike it up with a rubber band, so it wouldn't sag below her shortened skirt. Soon she'll buy a made to order short slip.

Henson-Kickernick, a Greenville lingerie manufacturer, considers itself a pacesetter in the undergarment revolution.

Its "teddy bra-slip" skinkily simple in the British Mod style and short enough for mini-skirts, was introduced in mid-August and was sold out in hours at all New York stores.

The one-piece nylon tricot bra-slip is lace trimmed and low necked and sells for $7. It comes in the "barely below the hips" category.

The revolution began about three years ago, with the upswing of knit dresses and suits.

Henson-Kickernick brought out a sleeved slip with a noncinging taffeta skirt. The idea was unheard of in a field where only the sleepwear styles were imaginative.

"We gave the woman a reason to buy a slip," said a Henson-Kickernick executive, Peter Cook. "She didn't even know she needed a slip with sleeves."

Last year, the taffeta underliner half slip went home with thousands of American women.

Henson-Kickernick began as a family owned company in 1922, with Kickernick added in 1950, and now is the fifth largest lingerie firm in the country and the largest Texas maker of women's soft goods.

Another best seller this year are freddy pants, underclothing 4 1/2 inches shorter than last season's petti-pants. They often are worn instead of a slip. The wilder the color, the better. One style is bolero blue with chartreuse and hot pink leg bands.

The East and West Coasts are the most hep on Mod and the with-Mod undergarments — but the wait and see—Midwest and Southwest markets are surprising manufacturers with their enthusiasm.

It promises to be a shorter look Christmas gift season.

For an idea of the dramatic upward movement of skirts, look at the accompanying rise of underslips:

Teen-agers inched up their skirts, young working women followed suit and the lingerie makers woke up. They came out with a "short" slip, 18 inches from waist to hem. Then came a "demi" of 16 inches and this season, the "short-short," only 14 inches from waist to hem.

Ironically, another best seller in the lingerie industry is a cover-up waist-to-ankle "pant-liner." It's an elasticized girdle which the manufacturers diplomatically call a "control garment" for women who bulge under curvaceous stretch trousers.

Shades of the pantaloons!

There has to be some plan for redistributing the state's surface water," he said. "The objections generally were a matter of local concern. I anticipate we can still achieve substantial statewide support for a statewide water plan."

A Devotional For The Day

In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength. (Isaiah 30:15)

PRAYER: O God, our Father, whose mercy is wide enough to embrace our sins, help us to feel the power of Thy love. May we not be tempted to offend Thy holy will by the stubborn desires of our sinful hearts. Keep us close to Thee, through the redeeming love of Thy Son. Amen.

(From the 'Upper Room')

Not A Propitious Moment

President Charles de Gaulle visited the Western Hemisphere and is gone, without the summit meeting with President Johnson that Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield yearns for. It's just as well. It is difficult to conceive of any agreement on any issue of substance between the two leaders.

De Gaulle is determined to be treated as an equal in the Western alliance. We are not prepared to give him that status.

De Gaulle's vision of Europe is completely at variance with Johnson's view. De Gaulle is relaxed and unafraid of Russia, whereas we are on guard and wary of Russian moves.

De Gaulle wants to Preserve Europe for the Europeans—even to the exclusion of Great Britain. We want Europe as a community which looks to the United States for protection.

De Gaulle not only believes that the war in Viet Nam is dangerous to world peace, he believes that we may win a military victory but that we cannot win a political victory. For our part we view South Viet Nam as a victim of aggression from the North and are determined to impose a peace acceptable to us in Viet Nam.

If there ever is a good time for the two to sit down and discuss issues of moment, that time has not yet arrived.

Wise Decision

The Department of Justice has wisely thrown its weight against the idea of using the USIA film about John F. Kennedy, "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums," for a political fund-raising show. The proposal of the Milwaukee Democrats to employ the film thus to help finance James P. Buckley's congressional campaign demonstrated a serious lapse in both good taste and common sense.

When it approved public showings of this picture, Congress made an exception from the established and sound general rule against distribution of any USIA materials in this country. The exception was made because this was a unique case; Congress judged that the public had a right to see this moving film about the career of an assassinated president. But surely Congress did not intend that the film should wind up as a benefit performance for political campaigns.

Why Is President Making Picks?

WASHINGTON—President Johnson has served notice on Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and anybody else who may want to become the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1968 that Hubert Humphrey has the full support of the man in the White House today.

WHAT IS MOST significant, however, is why Mr. Johnson felt it necessary to make such a comment a year and ten months before the next nominating convention. Also it is worth noting that the information was disclosed somewhat incidentally and that Vice President Humphrey himself made it public in a tactful and discreet way, pointing out that, of course, Mr. Johnson is free to change his mind between now and convention time if he feels that circumstances warrant it.

THE WAY the vice president himself dealt with his own prospective renomination is rather unusual. He expressed his viewpoint in a television interview last Saturday at St. Louis. The vice president recalled that on Aug. 31 at a White House dinner—attended by 300 top labor leaders, including president George Meany of the AFL-CIO—President Johnson put his arm around him and quipped, "We're married to each other." Mr. Johnson added: "As long as I'm President or running for President, I want him (Humphrey) by my side."

At a news conference, however, two weeks after the episode at the dinner, President Johnson chose not to answer a direct question as to whether he favored Vice President Humphrey for renomination. This produced speculation and may have prompted a decision to reiterate the President's position. In the television interview, Mr. Humphrey was asked whether "by my side" meant that the President was leaving the door open to appointment of Mr. Humphrey to a cabinet post. Mr. Humphrey replied: "That's not the way I understood it."

BUT THE VICE president made it clear in politics people can, if

Billy Graham

When you and your team go to a foreign crusade such as England, do you receive any remuneration from your services?

Neither I, nor any member of my team, receives any extra pay for any crusades we conduct in the world. This is our policy, and we have never digressed from it. Most foreign nations have a much lower standard of living than we, and we feel that to receive additional pay for our services would create problems. All the members of our team have set salaries. Since, living abroad incurs extra expense, the members of my team are reimbursed for the actual extra expenses during a crusade. But they receive no additional salary.

Sometimes, of course, like on our crusades to Latin America, our association must subsidize our actual expenses, for the offerings received are barely sufficient to pay the local expenses, for the offerings received are mailing and advertising. Thus, many of our foreign crusades are considered missionary projects, and are underwritten by our association. We are grateful for the opportunities open to us, and although sometimes we must be absent from our families for months, we labor happily, for we are conscious that thousands are being reached for Christ who could not be reached otherwise.

the occasion requires it, reverse their decisions. He said:

"If he (the President) wants somebody else at his side after 1968 to fulfill the political realities of the situation then, I would understand. I'm going to cause him as little trouble as a man can."

THIS IS IN accord with the techniques of modern politics, and certainly the President must appreciate the flexibility which Mr. Humphrey has given him. The big question, however, is: Why was it deemed important to say anything publicly about the renomination of a vice president so far in advance of a national party convention? The answer is that Sen. Bobby Kennedy has been making a vigorous campaign for political attention not only inside his own party but with the American people generally. It is rightly assumed that he wants to be president of the United States someday. So it is natural for the political world to assume he would like to get there as soon as possible. He could have 1968 in mind for the vice presidential nomination and then 1972 for the presidential nomination, since at that time Mr. Johnson will not, under the Constitution, be eligible for another term.

THE NEW YORK senator knows he couldn't displace Mr. Johnson to head the ticket in 1968, but he would, of course, be happy to be selected as the vice presidential nominee. In the event that, by a turn of fate, Mr. Humphrey should become president between now and 1972, Mr. Kennedy's chances of becoming president in the subsequent eight years would be dim. Even that, by a turn of fate, Mr. Johnson might be in political difficulty in 1968 and need the help of Bobby Kennedy. As the popularity polls show President Johnson's strength sagging, there are among the boosters of the New York senator some who think Mr. Johnson would gain considerable support by putting the name "Kennedy" on the next ticket.

AS FOR the party leaders, a survey of the 50 Democratic state chairmen, published in "U.S. News & World Report" this week, shows a 49-to-1 vote declaring that there is no likelihood of Bobby getting the presidential nomination in 1968, and a 45-to-5 vote predicting that Mr. Humphrey will be the vice presidential nominee if Mr. Johnson wants him.

Dirksen Taught Katzenbach How To Deal

WASHINGTON (AP)—It hardly seems a coincidence that, two days after the 1966 civil rights bill was killed, President Johnson announced the appointment of Nicholas Katzenbach as undersecretary of state.

For months it was common knowledge in Washington that undersecretary George W. Ball, 56, wanted to resign his State Department post although no one seemed to know when or why.

AS ATTORNEY general, Katzenbach, 44, was not only Johnson's chief architect in putting together the 1964 civil rights bill but the administration's chief spokesman and engineer in trying to get it through Congress.

He was also the principal authority on it as it crept on its tortured way through the House and finally over to the Senate. This took months in which Washington waited for official word of Ball's departure.

Katzenbach and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, had worked together in getting civil rights bills through Congress in 1964 and 1965. But this year Dirksen balked.

HE WAS the bill's chief executioner as the Senate killed it last Monday. There was nothing more Katzenbach could do about that bill.

And then Wednesday Johnson announced: He was naming Katzenbach undersecretary of state to succeed Ball who resigned Saturday. To do this meant Katzenbach had to resign as attorney general, leave the President's Cabinet, and take a $3,000 annual salary cut.

The switch made Katzenbach No. 2 man in the State Department under Secretary of State Dean Rusk, whose resignation has also been rumored but with less certainty than Ball's.

BALL AND Katzenbach have this in common—both are specialists in international law. Before he became the State Department's No. 2 man, Ball was widely experienced in foreign affairs. But this is a brand new field for Katzenbach.

Immediately after Johnson appointed Katzenbach—since

Katzenbach was taking a reduction in rank and pay to move over to the State Department—there was speculation he would succeed Rusk sooner or later.

Later, if at all, seems the likely time for that switch, which means Rusk isn't likely to resign for many months. It will probably take Katzenbach that long to learn about wheeling and dealing in foreign affairs, although one Washington wit said: "Anyone who can deal with Dirksen won't have trouble with (Andrej) Gromyko (the Russian foreign minister)."

FOUR MEN who served as attorney general became secretary of state: Edmund Randolph (1794), Jeremiah S. Black (1886), Richard Olney (1895) and Philander C. Knox (1909).

The way Johnson chose to announce the resignation and appointment Wednesday was another good example of his unpredictability. Late Tuesday night a Johnson press aide informed newsmen the President himself would conduct Wednesday morning's news briefing. This was extraordinary in itself.

THERE ARE usually two briefings a day at the White House when Johnson's press aides call in newsmen to tell them what the President wants known or to answer questions. These seldom provide major announcements. The President usually reserves them for himself. But, instead of a news briefing Wednesday's session became a news conference.

'He's Single—His Pockets Jingle'

NEW YORK (AP)—Remarks that bachelors get tired of hearing:

"What's the matter with you, Horace, are you afraid of women?"

"There must be something wrong with him, or some good gal would have snapped him up long ago."

"That's the bachelor—the one with the dark circles under his eyes."

"There's no mystery about it. The tightwad is just too cheap to support a wife."

"IF WE find it necessary to invite someone else just to fill up the dinner table, we can ask Horace. He's always available."

"But how can a man your age get along without a wife in a civilized world? Who wakes you up in the morning? Who tells you to remember to carry an umbrella when it's raining?"

"That's the bachelor—the one who looks like no one had told him it was time to get his hair cut."

"You know he's single—his pockets jingle."

"HEY, HORACE, mind if I borrow your apartment for a few hours tonight? An ex-girl friend of mine is in town, and I'm looking for a quiet place where we can set and chat about old times together."

"Yes, you've got the ability, but for an executive job such as that the firm prefers a family man."

"Horace, I promised to take my wife out tonight but now I find I have to stay late at the office. Do me a favor and take her out, will you? I now she'll be perfectly safe with someone like you."

"WHY GIVE him a merit raise? He doesn't have anyone to support but himself."

"Just come by yourself, Horace. My wife is having someone there she wants you to meet. You'll love her. She's an old maid, too."

"Boy, I'll bet you live the life of Riley. If I was single again, I'd never get in before dawn."

"Well, nobody can blame the human population explosion on Horace. He's an innocent bystander."

"I hate to wake you up at this hour, but can I come over and spend the rest of the night at your place? My wife locked me out."

Blackouts From Heart Block

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.
Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain a heart block. Can anything be done to prevent blackouts from it?—Mrs. R. T.

A heart block is some interference with the impulses causing the heart to beat. There are different types of this, they behave in different ways, and have to be treated differently.

One type involves faulty conduction, through the tissues, of the impulses to beat. The result is that the heart slows down. If, in consequence, blood circulation is sufficiently impaired, a blackout can result.

Such a blackout is caused by insufficient circulation to the brain, and there are causes, other than heart defects, which can be responsible. An ordinary fainting spell, sometimes from an emotional upset, is an example. If a person faints, when he lies down circulation to the head is quickly restored and the blackout ends. Or a blackout can result when a person is sitting or lying down and then stands up suddenly. When, as in your case, it is a result of heart block, certain medications are effective in treatment. They are prescription drugs, however, so you must see your doctor.

In more stubborn cases, in which the heart remains at a very slow rate, the use of a pacemaker is the answer in an increasing number of patients. There has been steady improvement in the design of these battery-operated pacemakers, and I have no doubt that they will be still further improved.

Another type of heart block is known as "bundle branch block," and is identified by electrocardiogram. It does not cause blackouts and requires no treatment.

The foregoing discussion of heart block has been considerably simplified for the sake of brevity. The main idea is that heart block can be treated successfully, but it is not a problem to be left to home remedies. You need careful examination by your doctor, and often by a heart specialist, to determine the type and degree of the trouble. "Cure" is too strong a word, but one method or another of helping the heart to resume a normal rate of beating is very much possible and practicable.

Dear Dr. Molner: My mother is 55. The doctor says she has ataxia and that she is too worried about home affairs. Our problem is we don't understand what she has.—Mrs. J. S.

And I can't explain without knowing more. Ataxia is a lack of coordination which can cause instability in speech or movement, or in rare cases inverted emotional response—for instance, crying instead of laughing and the reverse.

Causes include degenerative diseases, heredity, emotional tensions. That covers a lot of territory, so your problem isn't in understanding what ataxia is; it is having the underlying cause diagnosed in this particular case.

Shoes, Anyone?

I'M NOT WORRIED nearly so much about LBJ's guidelines or his proposed plan to solve galloping inflation, as I am about the effect of runaway shoe-buying. In our household, the latter poses the more serious threat.

For awhile there, hardly an evening went by that my sparkie-eyed heir didn't meet me at the door with that tell-tale shoe box, pleased as punch with some new foot covering. At her tender age of three, no one pair will last long enough to require half-soles—indeed, some of them never get out of the box.

ONE EVENING this week, her surprise package included a spanking new pair of "go-go" boots. "What's this?" I asked the distaff leader of the house. "She had a pair last year and wouldn't even put them on."

"But she's older now," I told, "and will simply love wearing those cute little numbers."

A few days earlier, the box dutifully brought for my inspection contained a pair of those saddle ox-band-father in the land to field a ploy like that one. No more formidable array ever faced the Legions of Rome, nor won quite so easily.

A SECOND PAIR that same day was dragged from the closet. Black, shiny leather ones this time. "Don't tell me," I pleaded. "These are obviously the dress-up pair for winter, to replace the dress-up pair of summer that she has outgrown." She gave me the pleased look for a backward pupil who has finally learned his lesson.

It was only two days later that two more boxes accompanied my usual greeting. "Not more shoes," I beg. These turned out to be one pair for ballerina dancing and another pair for tap-dancing. "They only charged 25 cents to put the taps on," my good wife explained. "I didn't think I could get anything for 25 cents anymore." I agreed with her there. "I didn't think YOU could either."

LEAPING QUICKLY to the defensive, she said: "Don't you want your daughter to have the same dancing class shoes the other children have? If you want us to, we'll take them back." Meanwhile, the heir-apparent clutched the boxes tightly to her breast, as though protecting baby chickens from some awesome dragon.

I defy any economy-minded husband-father in the land to field a ploy like that one. No more formidable array ever faced the Legions of Rome, nor won quite so easily.

SO THE SHOE CLOSET is well stocked for the winter months, but I still reach hesitantly for the front door knob of an evening. I have high hopes the buying spree will turn toward getting the cupboard in a like condition.

Change In Political Climate

SANTA MONICA, Calif.—There are at least three human activities at which previous experience is not necessary—recognizing an earthquake when you feel one underfoot, bailing out of a falling plane if you've got a parachute, and sensing a political revolution when it is all about you.

I AM HERE to begin a series of columns on Western State campaigns and other happenings, and haven't yet started the interviewing process—but merely to sniff the air in California is sufficient to know there's an atmosphere of deep-going change.

I was here about 15 months ago to interview Ronald Reagan at his nearby home, and then to dine out with some old friends. What a ribbing they gave me about taking Reagan seriously as a political figure! That movie actor who had never done anything except recite the lines of a TV speech for Barry Goldwater! George Murphy had recently been chosen U.S. senator, and wasn't one Hollywood profile enough? Besides, California had had its fling with kooky conservatism, and it would never happen again.

TWO YEARS AGO I was here when Barry Goldwater had won his GOP primary and later took the presidential nomination, and the same friends were solicitous about my sanity because I was all out for Barry. That trigger-happy extremist who wanted to bomb North Viet Nam! That Neanderthal who had voted against the 1964 Civil Rights bill on grounds that he believed the public accommodation section violated an 18th Century scrap of paper, the American Constitution.

BUT WE OLD friends dined again together last night, and none of us had changed nearly so much as the climate of opinion. Not far from the airport at which I had alighted was the socio-political earthquake territory called Watts, which had exploded under the feet of Gov. Pat Brown's administration. Another Civil Rights bill had gone before Congress, and this time a whole lot of senators were leaping through the Constitution to see what it says about invasion of privacy and private property.

Over in Viet Nam, our planes were hitting the enemy homeland with as many as 170 missions per day, and north of here the university campus at Berkeley had replaced every other California location as the place name of Kooksville. In the same interim, George Murphy had turned out to be one of the most valuable and respected Republicans in Washington, and the only popular actions of President Johnson had been his imitations of the Goldwater line.

TO QUIT POOLING around with polite generalities, these awfully nice but awfully conventional friends of mine had done a 180-degree turn in their thinking. I think it would do no violence to truth to say that a typical Democratic-voting, liberal-oriented, World War II veteran, self-made business executive in Southern California was thinking as follows:

"This fellow, Reagan, is the best thing that has come down the pike. He is attractive, articulate and touched with the white light of truth. He probably has an inferiority complex about his smattering of ignorance on big matters like our water policy and some of the fiscal possibilities. I'm not sure Ronald knows the time of day on the political clock, but I'm convinced he knows what year it is on the calendar of history."

"AND WHAT'S the use of kidding myself? I can't vote for Pat Brown because that's a vote for a nation-wide Negro revolution which I know is sparked by Communists. I can't have any confidence in Brown after the way a handful of Red-led incendiaries have been allowed to disgrace the University of California. A vote for Brown is a vote for Lyndon Johnson, and I'd rather cut off my right arm than to pull that lever."

Hard To Be A Nice Guy

WASHINGTON—Congressman Adam Clayton Powell has been on the hot seat for so many things recently that one hardly knows where to begin. Among the things his opponents have charged is that he has his wife on his congressional payroll although she lives in Puerto Rico and has never seen any of her paychecks.

Powell maintains that everyone in Congress has relatives on his payroll and people were just picking on him because he wears a mustache.

IT'S TRUE that Congressman Powell is not the only one who has a relative on his payroll. The other day I interviewed Congressman Wadley Peyton Howl, one of the most controversial figures in the House.

"Congressman Howl, it is rumored that you have your mother-in-law on your payroll."

"I've never denied it. She is a great asset to me and worth every bit of the $28,000 the government pays her."

"What does she do for you?"

"She answers my mail for one thing."

"BUT CONGRESSMAN Howl, your mother-in-law lives in the Aleutian Islands."

"Exactly. We get a lot of mail from Eskimos, and we send it on to her."

"She claims she's never seen a paycheck from the government."

"Of course not. What would you do with a paycheck in the Aleutian Islands? I deposit the check for her in my account, and when she needs something like whale oil or earmuffs I send it to her."

"CONGRESSMAN HOWL, I hope you don't mind my asking these questions, but it is said that although you are chairman of the joint committee on recreation and school lunch periods you have never attended a meeting."

"This is a new low in political irresponsibility." Howl said. "The only reason I haven't attended any meetings of my committee is that I've been traveling and gathering information for an investigation I plan to hold on school lunch periods."

"Is that why you went to Acapulco last month?"

"Exactly. I heard about a school down there that holds lunch periods at night, and I was very curious about it."

"YOUR DETRACTORS also claim you spent four weeks in Las Vegas and handed in a $15,000 expense account."

"Las Vegas has schools, too."

"What about the trip to the Riviera this summer?"

"I went there to find out if we should introduce water skiing into our poverty program."

"Mr. Howl, although you represent the Fifth District, no one has ever seen you there."

"I used to go home to visit my constituents, but every time I did someone would have me arrested. So I said the hell with it. Let my constituents visit me."

"THERE IS SOME talk they may try to take your committee away from you."

"Let them try, and they'll hear from every Eskimo in this country."

"Congressman Howl, why are people always picking on you?"

"I'll tell you why, but you won't print it."

"Yes, I will."

"Because I let everyone take advantage of me. It isn't easy to be a nice guy."

The General rose to his feet. With piercing eyes he looked into the face of the condemned man.

Policemen Leave Posts

BRENNHAM, Tex. (AP) — A citizens committee hoped today to work out a compromise solution to a dispute which resulted in the resignation of this city's six patrolmen.

The six patrolmen walked off their jobs Tuesday after the city commission refused them a $50 a month pay raise. The commission offered a five per cent raise, the equivalent of $15 a month. The patrolmen make $315 a month.

The patrolmen also had asked for more help at night and for a city judge to handle their cases.

The committee, appointed Wednesday, first met with Police Chief Arthur Sternberg, who has remained at the post he has held for 26 years, and then conferred for three hours with the six patrolmen.

Besides Sternberg, only two dispatchers, two nightwatchmen and a meter man remained on duty. Sheriff John Schulle and his two deputies were helping police the city of 9,000.

Sternberg expressed concern over the lack of policemen to direct traffic during the Washington County Fair, which started Wednesday, and two scheduled football games this weekend.

through that door and face the consequences, whatever they may be. But you have a choice. Down the corridor to my left is a black door that is closed. Of course, you have no idea what lies beyond that door, but you may choose. You may walk through the open door to my right, or the black door to my left. You will have 24 hours in which to decide."

The young man was taken back to his cell. He paced the floor, trying to decide which door he would choose. The next morning he was again taken before the Persian General. He stood erect, as the General asked, "Have you made your choice?" "Yes," the young man replied. "I shall walk through the open door." With fear and apprehension the condemned young man slowly walked down the corridor and through the open door. There he was met by a firing squad.

Man after man was brought before the General and was convicted. To each man the choice was offered but, after much deliberation, the open door was always chosen.

And then one morning the Persian General stood in preparation to pass sentence on another convicted spy. He said, "You may walk through the open door, and you will have 24 hours in which to make your choice." The young man quickly replied, "I won't need 24 hours. I have made my decision. I'll take the black door."

He walked briskly down the corridor and, with his trembling hand, reached out and pulled the black door open. There, to his delight, he found a life of freedom. He walked away a free man.

Often we are inclined to hold back. We are prone to sidestep anything that is unfamiliar. We hesitate to pursue that which has not been tried and proven. This trait can cheat us out of many worthwhile accomplishments.

Wasn't it Thomas Carlyle who said, "Go as far as you can see and, when you get there, you can see farther."

When we develop a strong faith in ourselves and our own abilities, when we become willing to choose our course of action and go as far as we can see, then we have taken another important step toward the self-preparation that will enable us to achieve much more in life.

Skies Clearing Across Texas

By The Associated Press
Skies were almost cloudless over Texas today, the last official day of summer. Temperatures remained mild in all sections.

Although a dry cool front was expected to edge into North Texas by Friday, weather observers foresaw no appreciable change.

Tropical storm Halle, which threatened briefly to kick up trouble in the Gulf of Mexico, faded from the picture. Its top winds dwindled to 33 miles per hour as Halle fell victim to cool, dry air and ran out of steam.

A final Weather Bureau advisory reported the storm became weak and disorganized by Wednesday night as it brought showers along the coast of Mexico from Veracruz to Tampico.

Texas Farmers Raked In $2.4 Billion During 1965

By TEX EASLEY
WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas farmers and ranchers received $2.4 billion on sales of their crops and livestock in 1965, an amount exceeded only by California and Iowa.

A recent Agriculture Department report shows sales of livestock in Texas last year brought $1,124,000,000 and sales of crops brought $1,346,000,000. The combined receipts in California totaled $3.7 billion and in Iowa, $3 billion.

In sales of livestock, Texas receipts ranked fifth, being exceeded by those in Iowa, California, Illinois and Minnesota. In crop receipts, however, Texas ranked second only to California, with Illinois, North Carolina, Florida trailing. Iowa ranked sixth in crop sales. The report said receipts for all states totaled $39.3 billion last year. Alaska was at the bottom with $4 million. Livestock sales bringing in $3 million and crops $1 million. Rhode Island ranked 49th with receipts totaling $21 million.

In addition to the receipts from sales, Texas farmers and ranchers also got $198,814,000 in federal funds because of participation in price support programs. In only two other states were the payments larger—$228 million in Iowa and $207 million in Kansas.

The dollar breakdown of the conservation and crop price support programs in Texas last year (8 millions): Conservation, $20.3; sugar act, $1.2; wool act, $2.9; soil bank, $19.9; great plains conservation, $2.9; cotton domestic allotment, $14.9; feed grain diversion, $74.0; feed grain price support, $29.8; wheat diversion, $2.4; wheat marketing certificates, $30.

The federal subsidies to agriculture in Texas rose from a total of $20.5 million to $198.8 million in the decade from 1955.

One set of figures in the report dealt with "realized net farm income." "This is the most representative measure of farm income actually realized in a calendar year by farm (and ranch) operators, and is the primary measure of changes in their income position," the report said. "It omits from consideration the value of any change in the inventory of crops and livestock held by farmers."

The realized net income per farm (and ranch) in Texas in 1965 was put at $4,822, as compared with a U.S. average of $4,210. This compared with a Texas average of $2,455 in 1955 and a national average of $2,417 that year.

Texas' neighbor states showed these comparable realized net income averages for 1965: Arkansas, $5,095; Louisiana, $3,569; New Mexico, $5,969; Oklahoma, $3,099.

In addition to the cash receipts, the report noted that the 1965 home-consumed crops and livestock had a total value of $223 million for the country as a whole.

Tower Will Try To Block LBJ

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson's anti-inflation move to suspend investment tax credit for business growth "would be another bucket of cold water dashed on the expansion of business," Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., said Wednesday night.

For that reason the senator said he will try to block such a step.

"I am most concerned because this proposal by the federal government would press down on wage earners seeking new and better jobs," he told members of the Dallas and Fort Worth chapters of the American Institute of Banking.

Tower blamed the government for "rising prices, tight money and high interest rates." He said Texas is suffering worse than "the old traditionally industrial states of the Northeast" with less need for expansion capital.

Campaign Expenses Studied For Possible Law Changes

By GARTH JONES
By The Associated Press

There's no guidelines from LBJ or anybody else to stop it," moaned a statewide candidate. The election law study group is gathering suggestions from throughout the state and later will hold public hearings on proposed law changes it will recommend to the 1967 legislature. "Primary elections are an integral part of the state election process," Robert Campbell of the Victoria County Republican Committee told the committee. "The major costs of all primary elections required by law should be borne by the state."

John Daniels, chairman of the Bexar County (San Antonio) Democratic Committee, said the filing fee for the 1966 Democratic primary ranged from $1,845 to $3,000 a person. "This expense alone is sufficient to dissuade individuals from offering themselves for public office," he said.

Mrs. A. N. Dahl, Bee County (Beeville) Democratic chairman, says local candidates get a raw deal during presidential years. "In the presidential election year, the vote is quite heavy, demanding more workers and there are fewer persons running for office because district judges—and quite a few other offices—are filled the year before. In other words when we assess the candidates one month's salary to file, the year when the president does not run we get in a lot of larger total filing fees than we do when the president runs. . . . It hardly seems fair to me to charge persons running for office with the same salary, in the same courthouse a different rate of filing fee," she said.

"A grave evil under our present election law involves expenditure of large sums of money to elect candidates whom the donors expect to corrupt thereby," said Rolland Bradley of Houston in his suggestion to the committee. . . . Some of these donors make their contributions without securing the prior consent of their candidates. As a result said candidate fails to report such contributions in his affidavits. However, said donors expect their candidates to serve the donors' special interests while holding public office."

Rep. Jim Wright, Fort Worth Democrat, told a congressional committee recently that it takes upwards of a million dollars to make gubernatorial and senatorial races in the large states. Wright lost in the 1961 special Senate election to fill the vacancy created by Lyndon Johnson's resignation to become vice president. "After it was all over, we figured that a total of some $270,000 had been spent in my campaign. Obviously, it hadn't been quite enough. But I ended up owing $68,000. . . . Mostly for debts of which I had no personal knowledge."

LADY BIRD TRIGGERS HEADACHES

Hearst's Enchanted Castle Ain't What It Used To Be

SAN SIMEON, Calif. (AP) — Hearst's incredible castle provided a $30 million backdrop for California's party honoring the nation's First Lady. But the old place wasn't what it used to be.

It took 20th Century Fox, caterers, gas heating experts, scores of workmen, truckloads of supplies and the Santa Maria Barbeque Club to get the dinner going Wednesday night for 450 guests.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown and his wife, entertaining Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, didn't quite know what headaches they were setting up when it was decided to throw a culture-beautification whing-ding at the opulent "Enchanted Hill" homestead of the late newspaper tycoon, William Randolph Hearst.

HORNETS' NEST

They may even have opened a political hornets' nest by using the now state-operated museum showplace while a gubernatorial campaign is in high gear. It was rumored Ronald Reagan, Republican opponent to Brown's re-election bid, might ask for equal partying time.

Versailles, the Louvre, the Smithsonian Institution and Mount Vernon have been used for official parties before — but never San Simeon, and it probably has some art treasures that rival works of all these famous places.

BIG TREAT

It was a treat for the guests, including Nobel Prize winners, educators, Hollywood stars and leaders in the conservation and beautification fields. They lined up in a receiving line beside the gleaming outdoor marble Neptune pool. With its stately, Greco-Roman temple, date palms and Italian cypress trees it once served as the setting for the movie spectacle Spartacus.

While Mrs. Johnson and the Browns greeted guests, a dozen girls from the Santa Clara Aquacade performed a water ballet in fluorescent gold and orange sequined swim suits.

SUN SETS

The sun was setting over the Pacific below and the Santa Lucia Mountains made a picturesque backdrop. Bars were busy serving drinks and the champagne flowed, each glass garnished with a huge California strawberry.

And then, the barbequed prime top sirloin dinner was served — on golden tablecloth with golden candles on a high terrace overlooking the sea — outside the front door of the 100-room twin-towered Gothic-Moorish Hearst castle.

Everything went off well considering some 10 days of turmoil were needed to get the place to work.

CHALLENGE

Vacated since Hearst's death in 1951, the castle's wiring, plumbing and kitchen facilities were no longer equal to the task.

20th Century Fox electricians adept at providing movie sets, took this on as "a challenge." They strung some 6,000 feet of cable, installed powerful floodlights at pool and patio. The gas company set up 40 radiant panel heaters, but they were still inadequate to ward off the chill of the seaside air.

What it cost to provide the party in honor of the visiting First Lady was not disclosed. Mrs. Johnson has been in California two days, dedicating Point Reyes National Seashore and the Big Sur Highway.

Senate Kills Prayer Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Everett M. Dirksen says he'll try again next year to win approval for his proposed constitutional amendment to permit voluntary prayers in public schools.

The Senate Republican leader's plan lost Wednesday on a 49-37 vote — nine short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

Dirksen maintained that the people overwhelmingly favor the amendment, prompted by Supreme Court decisions prohibiting official prayers in public schools. The Senate vote was regarded by some colleagues as injecting another issue into the fall election.

Voting for the proposal were 22 Democrats — all but six of them Southerners — and 27 Republicans. Against were 34 Democrats and three Republicans: Sens. Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, Jacob K. Javits of New York and Thomas H. Kuchel of California.

Immediately after the vote, Dirksen told the Senate he would carry on his "crusade" for the amendment under which public school authorities could provide for and permit "the voluntary participation by students or others in prayer."

Academic Dissent Right Defended By Humphrey

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, speaking today at Rutgers University, defended the right of academic dissent over the Viet Nam war but declared that "military force, at this juncture, is necessary."

Addressing the 200th anniversary celebration for the state university of New Jersey, Humphrey, a former college professor, praised Rutgers and Gov. Richard J. Hughes for defending academic freedom during a controversy a year ago.

Humphrey did not mention Coahoma C-C To Talk Of Paving

COAHOMA (SC)—State highway paving on First Street will be discussed tonight at 7:30 o'clock by members of the Coahoma Chamber of Commerce. Joe Smoot, state highway engineer, will be present to answer questions. Homeowners and business interests on First Street are urged to attend. The meeting will be held at Rick's Cafeteria.

Rutgers Prof. Eugene Genovese by name, but referred to the public furor over the Rutgers teacher who stated that he favored a Viet Cong victory in Viet Nam.

He said the support given to Genovese's right to speak his mind "gave concrete meaning to the spirit of the Bill of Rights."

The vice president, discussing the role of dissent and informed criticism aimed at high officials, said:

"If responsible political leaders do not always follow the advice of dissenters, it is not because such advice is ignored or summarily dismissed."

"It is because in submitting Segelman To Speak

Ralph Segelman, assistant professor of sociology at Texas Western College at El Paso, will be the luncheon speaker Friday noon at the meeting of the Health and Welfare Organization. The session will be held at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, 306 W. 3rd. Segelman's discussion will cover "Community Mental Health."

Violence Rumors Are Dying Down

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Rumors of imminent violence appear to be dying down in the Dominican Republic despite the departure of the last troops of the Inter-American peace force.

About 40 soldiers of the U.S. 82nd Airborne Division left by air Wednesday, ending a foreign presence in the riot-torn island republic which began on April 30, 1965, when the first of more than 24,000 troops, including 22,500 U.S. soldiers, arrived to restore order.

COAHOMA (SC) — The '49ers will be the theme of the pack meeting of Cub Pack 45 tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Presbyterian Church. James Renfro is the Cubmaster.

'Life Is Pretty Sweet' For Comic Genius

By GENE HANDSAKER
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On humor: "I'm always wary of guys who claim to be authorities on humor. And guys who say, 'I've never bombed.' Everybody has bombed. It's like baseball; you can't hit a home run every time. Everybody strikes out."
 So says Jonathan Winters, husband, father, hobbyist, fisherman, comic genius and at 40 a happy man.
 "The Man Up There has been very good to me," said the moon-faced satirist with the sad eyes and teeth-gritting grin.
PRETTY SWEET
 The years of performing in noisy night clubs, with their misery of lonely hotel rooms and separation from family, are far behind.
 "Turning 40 last Nov. 11 was not the frightening experience he had feared. "You begin to realize that life is pretty sweet."

 His home, formerly Dana Andrews', is a big English Tudor type on more than an acre around the corner from Bob Hope in fashionable, suburban Toluca Lake.
 His wife is the former Eileen Schauder, whom he met while attending art institute in his native Dayton, Ohio. Their children are Jonathan Jr. (Jay), 16, and Lucinda, 10.
BALL GAMES
 Winters often has weeks for fishing, wood-carving, snapping pictures or taking his son to ball games.
 Work this year has included a television special taped at London's Palladium Theater; Winters' fifth movie, "Enelope," and a two-hour television drama, "The Midnight Oil."

"Things weren't always this good."
 He won't talk about his own misfortunes—"I quit complaining because I found there are too many people who can top you." But they're reflected in news records:
 —Police taking him to a psychiatric ward in San Francisco seven years ago after he insisted, they said, on climbing the rigging of an oldtime sailing ship and declaring he was "a man from outer space."
JUST TIRED
 His wife, flying from New York the next day, had him removed to a rest home, saying, "He'll be all right. He's just tired out." Winters had been appearing at a San Francisco night club.
 —Winters, on the wagon now for eight years, saying he was "bombed most of the time" in his night-club years.

"BOMBED"
 He has "bombed," too, in another sense. "It was a cold Winters night," a critic wrote early last year. "Jonathan Winters' fifth special of the season was painfully disappointing." But the vast preponderance of Winters reviews are favorable: "Very funny man." "Hilarious." "One of the funniest men on television." "One of the freshest, most ingratiating talents of the postwar period." "Brilliant."
 At lunch in a smart restaurant, wearing cowboy pants, boots and shirt because "I like old clothes," Winters said: "...If I went (died) tomorrow, I'd be well ahead of the game. I never dreamed I'd go this far."

"WINGING IT"
 Television brought him fame, first on Jack Paar's old morning show, then on "Omnibus," the George Gobel show and his own "Jonathan Winters Show."
 He is a frequent guest on other big time shows.
 His first television job, after wartime military service, was as announcer for WBNS-TV, Columbus. Performing later at the Blue Angel night club, New York, he was seen by Paar, who invited him to the home screen.
 What's his appeal? Said Winters, whose favorite form of entertaining is "winging it," or ad-libbing his comic invention from a given situation:

 "I like to believe that basically people have no sense of humor. I try to paint a verbal picture they can identify with."
 "Reality can be both frightening and funny. I take situations from life and exaggerate them, but not too much. You don't have to go too far out to make it funny."

Underwater Tests Slated Despite Kremlin Protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials indicated today that the United States will go ahead with plans for 24 non-nuclear underwater test explosions off the Russian-held Kurile Islands, despite a Soviet protest.
 Authorities described the program as a major seismological field experiment to determine how fast sound waves travel through the earth in a vast earthquake-prone area of the North Pacific Ocean 500 miles long and 90 miles wide.
 This information is essential to the accurate locating of earthquakes and other phenomena, it was explained.
TNT BLASTS
 Sources said the series of one-to-five-ton TNT blasts will begin in October under the direction of the Defense Department's Advance Research Projects Agency.

The program is designed to study the feasibility of distinguishing between underground nuclear explosions and earthquakes through the detecting, locating and identifying of seismic disturbances.
 Officials emphasized that the purpose of the tests in the Kurile Islands area was not to increase U.S. capability for detection of Russian nuclear blasts.
HIDE
 But some sources indicated that the study could serve as a deterrent to any Russian nuclear tests.
 "If you were trying to hide something," one defense official said, "you would try to hide in an active area," meaning an area where earthquakes frequently occur.
 The Russians have protested that the blasts may damage their seismic equipment in the area as well as disrupt fishing and the migration of fur-bearing seals. More than 300 Russian fishing trawlers operate among the 36 islands of the Kurile chain located between Russia's Kamchatka Peninsula and Japan.

FISH
 The State Department announced Wednesday it has assured Russia that all possible precautions will be taken against damaging fishing resources.
 It said representatives of the Soviet Union and Japan have been invited to observe the blasts, which would not be made within five miles of fishing vessels on the high seas. Two chartered commercial ships will undertake the experiment and all results will be made available to the international scientific community, the State Department said.

Air Force, Navy Faces Severe Pilot Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force and Navy are facing what some military officials describe as a severe shortage of young pilots — a shortage they said may not be eased until the early 1970s.
 In a series of interviews, top officers said the shortage is largely due to two factors: the increased U.S. commitments in Viet Nam and the increased demand for trained pilots in the booming airlines industry.
 The situation is so serious, some sources said, that within the past two years an estimated 2,500 qualified but nonflying officers — many of them in key administrative positions — were ordered back into the cockpits.
ATTENTION
 It was learned that the matter is receiving the top attention of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, who is now considering an expanded Air Force training program. Current programs will boost the number of pilots 30 years old and younger by approximately 75 per cent over the next nine years. The defense secretary will be handed a similar proposal from the Navy soon, qualified sources said.
 Despite the over-all shortage, top military officials emphasize that all manpower needs in Viet Nam and in the Strategic Air Command are being met. But they concede that elsewhere, things often are not up to par.

industry began experiencing huge growths in passenger service. About 70 per cent of the airline pilots are recruited from the service, he said, adding that the commercial demand for pilots will continue at least through 1968.
NO WINGS
 To combat this manpower loss, service officials have begun motivation and other studies to determine why officers leave the service at certain ages and at certain points in their careers.
 Although Pentagon officials are reluctant to talk about it, there's another reason for the lagging re-enlistment rates: A few pilots in Viet Nam have turned in their wings rather than fly in the war.
 But top officers say that fear of Viet Nam duty is not a major factor. As one put it: "In any outfit you're going to find the working boys and the gravy boys. As soon as the gravy congeals, the gravy boys want to get out."

 After World War II, he advanced for arms Sunday, Sept. 19, saying there is no shortage and past policies on pilot training defended McNamara's present more than a question of the now that amounts "to anything planned," many excess aviator requirements "imposed by the services to accommodate the large number of pilots left over."
 Citing pilot training boosts totaling about 1,100 for the Air Force and Navy from 1965 to 1966, the official said "It is not clear at this point that the approved pilot production program is not adequate."
 But Navy Comptroller W.R. Carter recently told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee that the Navy's total pilot requirement is 15,986, compared to a total of 14,536 officers on hand—a 1,450 pilot shortage, "however," Carter added, "in the young pilot area, lieutenants and junior, the requirement exists for 9,231 pilots as compared to an inventory of only 6,617."
 Officers said that in terms of numbers, the Air Force is meeting all of its pilot requirements — about 13,500 officers now draw flight pay. Both the Navy and Air Force say that losses from all sources — including resignations and retirements — are within planned attrition rates.
 But numbers don't tell all the story: Many qualified pilots have important desk jobs in the backup components of the Air Force, such as personnel research and public information, and do not fly.
 Adding to the services' pilot problems, however, is the fact that their training camps are now operating at or near full capacity. The Air Force expects to turn out more than 2,900 jet pilots this year and the Navy about 2,200, considerably above their production last year.
 At present training rates, the Navy estimates its shortages in junior grade pilots will not be overcome until the early 1970s.
 Air Force sources estimate it will take at least two years, along with more training bases, to turn out a satisfactory number of young pilots.
 The cost of training jet pilots has been estimated at as high as $500,000 over two years with later per-pilot flying costs fixed at about $500 an hour.

MEN IN SERVICE

FACTS
 The immediate facts are these:
 —Thousands of Viet Nam pilots are scheduled to be rotated back to the United States this year and must be replaced. Officials indicated that some pilots may have to return for a second tour unless the picture changes by 1969.
 —The Air Force is planning more extensive use of the F-4 Phantom jet, which requires two pilots. In addition, the Air Force hopes to begin using a two-pilot version of the F111 as soon as production of that new jet begins.
 —The heavy stepup in the air war. In one day last week, U.S. pilots flew 150 missions over North Viet Nam involving at least 450 planes and 387 individual sorties over South Viet Nam.
 Reflecting the concern over pilots, the Air Force and Navy recently surveyed sample groups of resigning officers to determine the impact of airline recruiting efforts.
TREND
 The Air Force study showed that 60 per cent of its senior pilots intended to become commercial pilots after separating from the service. A similar survey in 1964 showed that only five per cent of the resigning officers planned to join an airline.
 "We expect this trend to continue as a direct relation to the airline need," the study concluded.
 The Navy reported, in response to a query, that about 67 per cent of its pilots who resigned last June 30 ended up working for the airlines.
 A spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which accumulates data on airline pilots, said about 7,000 pilots have been hired since 1964 when the

Baltimore Could Wrap Up Loop Title Today

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

This could be THE day for the Baltimore Orioles.
Poised on the threshold of their first American League pennant, the Orioles went into today's game at Kansas City needing only a combination of two victories or Detroit defeats to clinch their first American League pennant.
With the Tigers hosting California in a doubleheader, Baltimore could wrap up the flag without even winning.

The Orioles set the stage for the clincher with a come-from-behind victory over the A's Wednesday night. Two home runs by Frank Robinson led the high-flying Birds to their 10-8 triumph.

For 6½ innings, the Orioles looked like anything but a club about to win the flag. They made five errors, three by first baseman Boog Powell, and helped Kansas City to a 6-1 lead. Then Robinson went to work.

With two outs in the seventh and Russ Snyder on base, the lanky slugger hammered his 48th homer of the year, putting the Orioles within striking distance at 6-3.

In the next inning, the Orioles struck.
Powell opened with a walk. Curt Blefary singled and an infield out advanced the runners. Pinch hitter Charley Lau doubled two runs home and another pinch hitter, Vic Roznovsky, singled the tying run home.

Singles by Luis Aparicio and Snyder coupled with two errors in the Athletics' outfield gave Baltimore two more runs before Robinson walloped his second home run of the game and No. 49 this season.

In the only other American League games played Wednesday, Detroit got a two-out ninth-inning homer by Willie Horton to beat California 2-1 and Cleveland downed Minnesota 6-2. Chicago at New York and Boston at Washington were rained out as was the second game of the Tigers-Angels scheduled doubleheader.

Dean Chance had the Tigers shut out on two hits with two out in the ninth when Horton's home run beat California.

Norm Cash had walked with one out and after Al Kaline was retired, Horton walloped his 27th homer. Until Horton connected, Chance had allowed only a pair of singles.

The Angels' only run came in the first inning when Jay Johnson singled, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on Jose Cardenal's hit.

Home runs by Max Alvis, Leon Wagner and rookie Vern Fuller led Cleveland to its victory over Minnesota. Jim Kaat, seeking his 25th victory, was tagged with the loss.

Fuller's shot snapped a 2-2 tie and was the infielder's first home run in the major leagues. Winning pitcher Steve Hargan also drove in a pair of runs with a single.

Bauer Admits Frank Makes Biggest Try

Bauer, typical of managerial non-interference, has consistently refrained from getting involved in selecting a Most Valuable Player from his pennant-bound Orioles.

But Robinson, capping a fantastic first season in the American League, has taken the lead in six major offensive categories including the Triple Crown departments of hitting, homers and runs batted in.

Wednesday night, before Robinson smacked two homers and drove in four runs while leading Baltimore to a 10-8 victory over Kansas City, Bauer finally intervened.

"There's no question that Frank has been the big guy," Bauer said. "Not only for what he has done for himself, but what he has done to inspire the other players."

Robinson raised his batting average to .313 Wednesday, taking a five-point lead over Minnesota's Tony Oliva, who was hitless in five trips.

With four homers in three games, the Oriole outfielder has raised his league-leading total to 49. He also paces the league with 118 RBI, 118 runs, 358 total bases and a .605 slugging percentage.

The 31-year-old veteran also has been credited with giving advice to young Oriole players, and keeping the bench alive with his caustic comments.

Robinson said he will always look on 1962 as his greatest year. That's when he hit 39 homers, batted .342 and drove in 136 runs. But he didn't lead in any department.

"But from a personal standpoint, this season will give me my greatest satisfaction," Robinson said. "Not only because Cincinnati traded me, but also because a lot of people have been skeptical of my ability and I've never gotten full credit for what I've done. Some people still aren't convinced."

Robinson is not included among the skeptics.
"Is there any doubt in your mind who should be the Most Valuable Player in the American League?" he was asked.

"None whatsoever," said Robinson, who drew some critical comment for saying something similar a couple months ago when he and teammate Brooks Robinson seemed to be running neck-and-neck for the honor Frank won in the National League in 1961.

"I wasn't joking then," Robinson said. "And I'm not now."

Brownwood Is After 20th Win In Row

Texas' massive schoolboy football program, now in its 47th year, moves into a third week of more than 500 games with only two rated teams meeting and Brownwood expected to extend the state's longest winning streak.
Dumas, undefeated, uncoursed in two games and the new leader in Class AAA, meets Class AAAA Pampa Friday night at home. Dumas, which replaced Bridge City as the 3-A leader this week, has beaten Class AAAA Amarillo Palo Duro 14-0 and Class AA Phillips 8-0. Pampa has broken even in two games.

Namath Rings Bell For NY

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath probably couldn't get his gimpy right leg insured by Lloyds of London, but then right now he's happy with his own insurance agency.
The insurance agency, a subsidiary of the New York Jets, is the offensive line which stands between Namath and opposing tacklers, protecting the $400,000 quarterback and his $1.98 right leg.

The linemen, particularly guard Sam DeLuca and tackle Sherman Plunkett and Winston Hill, did such an outstanding job Sunday that Namath stood in the New York backfield pitching five touchdown passes in a 52-13 victory over Houston.

Penn State Boy Wins AP Award

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Penn State middle guard Mike Reid has played only one game of varsity football, but it was good enough to win him Linemen of the Week honors. And if he keeps up the good work, the Nittany Lions just may pull off the upset of the season Saturday when they play No. 1-ranked Michigan State.

Reid, a 19-year-old, 238-pound sophomore, who plays the piano when he's not tackling ball carriers, was named top lineman by The Associated Press Wednesday for helping his team to a 15-7 win over Maryland last week.

He accounted for two of three safeties scored for Penn State and smashed Maryland's offense during most of the game.

Frazier Goes Down—Not For Long

Joe Frazier, 1964 Olympic heavyweight champion, goes down under blow from South American champion Oscar Bonavena in second round of their fight at New York's Madison Square Garden Wednesday night. Bonavena floored Frazier twice in the second round for mandatory eight-counts but the 22-year-old fighting Philadelphian went on to win his 12th straight fight of his 13-month-old professional career. Frazier was declared winner on a ten-round split decision. (AP WIREPHOTO)

Clay Still Long Way Down Road

NEW YORK (AP) — Cassius Clay still is way off in the future—say 1968—for Joe Frazier, the unbeaten 1964 Olympic heavyweight king.
After Wednesday night's split decision over Oscar Bonavena, the South American champ, they know Frazier can (1) go 10 rounds, (2) handle a rated fighter and (3) get off the floor.

Bonavena, ranked No. 9 among Clay's challengers, dropped Frazier twice in the second round for mandatory eight-counts. The 22-year-old Philadelphian came up fighting and proceeded to sweep the next four rounds.

Frazier was ahead on the cards of referee Mark Conn, 6-4 and judge Joe Eppy 5-4-1. Nick Gamboli, the other judge, had it even, 5-5, in rounds but gave Bonavena the edge in points 8-3 on the basis of four big points in the knockdown round. The AP card had Frazier on top 6-3-1.

It was the 12th straight for the pro of only 13 months but it also was the first time Frazier had failed to knock out his opponent. He made Oscar grab and hold a couple of times from body bombs but never had him in real trouble. The two knockdowns by short right hands left some question about his chin.

Bonavena, boxing's gift to the world of The Beatles with his long hair curling down his neck, complained about low blows throughout the fight. Syd Martin, his trainer, carried his protest to the referee and was ordered to report to the New York State Athletic Commission Friday to explain his actions.

"I told them they ought to bring the referee down, too," said Martin, pointing to Bonavena's bruised right thigh. "He got hit low six times in one round and the referee never warned him."
Dr. Harry Kleiman of the commission said Bonavena, who weighed 205 to Frazier's 202½,

Bengals Warned Of Rice Effort

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Louisiana State football coach Charlie McClendon has added concern over Saturday's Rice game because "the Owls will be striving hard to give coach Jess Neely an opening victory in his last season."
Neely has announced this will be his final season at Rice after 27 years.

Despite a 42-14 victory over Rice last year, McClendon's teams have not fared well against Rice in previous seasons.
"It's always been a squeaker for me," he said. "They're going to be better than last year."

Manpower Losses Strike Steers

AUSTIN (AP) — Fresh manpower losses hit the Texas Longhorns Wednesday.
Sophomore Scooter Monzingo, who intercepted a pass to set up their lone touchdown in losing to Southern California 10-6 last weekend, went out for the season with a broken left arm.
Earlier in the day 6-foot-2 Bill Sullivan, a 215-pound starter as defensive end, told coach Darrell Royal he had decided to give up football.
Monzingo suffered his injury during a pass defense drill. He succeeded Gary Moore, a 1965 starter, as the Longhorns' No. 1 fessional baseball contract.

LOOKING 'EM OVER

With Tommy Hart

Pat O'Dowdy, the wrestling impresario from Odessa who came over to start the window-dressing for his Sept. 27 show here in the Municipal Auditorium, says Ector is the coming school in his city in athletics.

Ector consolidated with a Negro high school there and benefited immediately from the football talent it embraced. Ector knocked off El Paso High, 34-0, in a show of power last weekend.

O'Dowdy thinks the Negro talent is so good in Odessa that school officials will find a way to channel some of it to the other two high schools there. At any rate, District 2-AAAA schools are going to have to start worrying about Ector by 1968, at the latest, because by then it should be a part of this district.

Clarence Redic is the best addition to the Ector team from the Negro school, says O'Dowdy, and probably is the finest football player in the Odessa public schools.

Judging from the results of a school consolidation election held in San Angelo last weekend, wherein the voters in the Lake View district approved a proposal to consolidate with the San Angelo school system, 2-AAAA might grow still more in a year or so. Division lines are often changed under such conditions. San Angelo voters themselves still have to approve the consolidation but that is expected.

Such a consolidation would firm up the Lake View program and possibly weaken the San Angelo Central athletic setup a little. One thing such a consolidation would do would leave Big Spring as the only one-high school system within 2-AAAA.

Phils, Marichal Tighten Up Race In Senior Loop

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rick Wise and Tony Taylor have muscled in on the Dodgers' pitch-and-putt concession in the National League and Juan Marichal is making a play for the Giants' clean-up job.

Wise pitched an overpowering six-hitter and Taylor delivered the tie-breaking run with a sixth-inning squeeze bunt Wednesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies nipped league-leading Los Angeles at its own game, 3-2. It was the Dodgers' sixth loss in 32 one-run games at home this year.

Marichal, meanwhile, atoned for a mediocre pitching effort with a ninth-inning homer—his first of the season—that lifted San Francisco past second-place Pittsburgh 6-5 and kept the Giants' faint pennant hopes alive.

The Giants' come-from-behind victory boosted them within four games of the Dodgers, who retained their 1½-game spread over Pittsburgh.

Philadelphia managed only five hits against Claude Osteen and reliever Phil Regan but Wise, who celebrated his 21st birthday last week, made the one-run margin stand up by blanking the Dodgers over the last seven innings for his fifth victory in 11 decisions.

"The kid had good stuff," Dodger Manager Walter Alton said. "That's all there was to it."

Willie Davis got the last Dodger hit—a lead-off single in the sixth—and Wise then retired 11 batters in order before walking Lou Johnson with two out in the ninth.

Taylor pushed the lead run across with his sacrifice bunt after a single by Dick Groat and a throwing error by third baseman Dick Schofield set the stage in the sixth.

Marichal homered off reliever Roy Face in the ninth after his battery mate, Tom Haller, pulled-the-Giants even with a two-run shot off Face. The Pirates had touched Marichal, now 23-6, for two runs in the top of the ninth and a 5-3 lead.

Elsewhere, Atlanta rolled to its 18th victory in 20 games, blanking St. Louis 4-0 on two homers by Denis Menke and rookie Dick Kelley's three-hit pitching, while homers by Billy Williams and Adolpho Phillips powered Chicago past Cincinnati 9-3.

Baltimore topped Kansas City 10-8, Cleveland whipped Minnesota 6-2 and Detroit edged California 2-1 in American League play. The Tigers-Angels nightcap was rained out, as were the Washington-Boston doubleheader and the Chicago-New York single game.

Rich Allen hit his 39th homer for the Phils in the second but the Dodgers countered with two runs in the bottom of the inning, the first scoring on Allen's error and the second on a single by Osteen.

The Phils tied it in the fourth on singles by Allen and Harvey Kuenn and a force-play ground-three singles but all three base runners were erased in double plays.

A Wrigley Field turnout of 530—the smallest crowd of the season in the majors—saw Williams' two-run homer and Phillips' three-run blast carry rookie Ken Holtzman to his 10th victory against 15 defeats.

Pete Rose had three hits for the Reds, including a homer, bringing his hit total to 292 for the season.

Goliad To Play Travis Tonight

Five of the city's six junior high school football teams are booked to see action this week, two against each other.

The two Goliad teams will be at home to Snyder Travis this evening in the old stadium at Tenth and State streets. The eighth grade teams play at 6 p.m. while the ninth graders come to grips at 7:30 p.m.

The Rannels eighth graders will be idle this week but the ninth grade team of that school will square off with San Angelo Lee there at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Both the ninth grade teams are undefeated. Rannels has beaten Sweetwater, 6-0, and Snyder Lamar, 22-6, in that order. Goliad has edged by Snyder Lamar, 8-6, and Andrews, 12-8, in that order.

The Rannels eighth graders, who do not play again until Sept. 29 in Sweetwater, are now 1-1. Goliad is winless in its only start on the eighth grade level.

The seventh grade contingents of the two schools, who limit their activity to games with each other, are booked to square off at 9 a.m. Saturday. This will be the season's opener for the clubs. They meet eight times over the year. The rules governing the seventh grade play is set up so that all boys out for football on that level will see action at some time or another.

Smith Lauds Team Spirit

In a talk made before members of the Quarterback Club Tuesday night, head coach Herman Smith said the Big Spring Steers had showed "real good" enthusiasm for their assignment against Snyder here Friday night.

Smith regaled the near-capacity crowd with the commentary he offered during the Plainview-Big Spring game film.

Smith referred to one aerial put in the air by Big Spring as a "community pass," explaining that everyone on both teams had a chance to get in on it and magnanimously credited coaching aide Cliff Patton, who sat in the press box calling down instructions over the telephone to the bench, with sending in the play that swung the issue Big Spring's way.

A progress report on Spike Dykes and the Belton Tigers

The former Coahoma mentor guided his Class AAA team to an impressive 20-0 victory over Class AAAAA Austin Lanier, although Belton was outweighed 50 pounds per man, on the average.

That win, coupled with Killean's 8-7 success at the expense of Lampasas, made Dykes and Belton look better than ever. (Belton had shut out Killean the previous week, 12-0.)

There's another Southall shaping up as quite a football player at Brownwood High School. He is Si, brother to Baylor's fabulous Terry, who threw two touchdowns passes in Brownwood's 32-6 win over Gatesville last weekend.

Big Spring's Albert Plerro watched from the sidelines at the University of Nebraska defeated TCU in that 14-10 thriller at Lincoln last week. Bob Churchill did all the quarterbacking for the Cornhuskers.

Two area boys, both sophomores, impressed TCU followers with their football savvy. One was Ross Montgomery of Midland High, who ran with the ball eight times for the Frogs and gained 44 yards for a 5.5-yard average. The other was Leslie Brown of Snyder, who lost 11 yards in his only running attempt but who caught one pass for 22 yards.

East Texas State lost its opener in the mud to ACC last weekend, 7-8. In the game, Big Spring's Benny Kirkland completed one of four aerials for 11 yards on behalf of the Lions.

In Atlanta's official NFL opener against Los Angeles recently, the ex-University of Texas All-American, Tommy Nobis, had himself quite a day.

Nobis was credited with 12 tackles and twice threw Roman Gabriel, the Ram passer, for losses. He also nailed Dick Bass behind the line twice on successive plays.

After the game, which Los Angeles won, coach George Allen of the Rams lavishly praised Nobis, comparing him favorably with Dick Butkus of the Chicago Bears. Allen coached Butkus in Dick's NFL freshman season last year.

Big Spring is ranked no higher than 80th among Class AAAAA football teams in the state by the Harris Rating System. (Midland Lee, by comparison, has been elevated to the 33rd spot, even though the Rebels were slaughtered by Amarillo Tascosa last weekend, 43-7.)

The unforgivable sin, in the eyes of the author of the rating system, is for a AAAAA team to lose to a AAA outfit.

Playoff Plans Are Worked Out In National League

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Should there be a two-or three-way tie for the National League pennant, representatives of the San Francisco Giants, the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Pittsburgh Pirates have worked out playoff plans.

It was all decided by flipping coins and drawing straws at Candlestick Park Wednesday.

If Los Angeles and Pittsburgh tie, the first game in a best-of-three series would be played at Pittsburgh, the remaining games at Los Angeles.

If Los Angeles and San Francisco tie, the first game would be played in San Francisco, the others in Los Angeles.

If San Francisco and Pittsburgh tie, the first meeting

Astros Seek Power Hitter

HOUSTON (AP) — Grady Hatton of the Houston Astros, the team's winningest manager, says an all-out effort will be made this winter to acquire a right-handed cleanup hitter and left-handed pitching help.

"We are going to talk to everybody . . . explore all possibilities," Hatton said Wednesday after signing a one-year contract as manager.

Hatton was named manager last December when General Manager Paul Richards was fired and Luman Harris was relieved of his duties as field manager.

Under Hatton's guidance the Astros have won 67 games this season with eight more to play, the best season in their five years in the National League. The previous high was 66 victories in both 1963 and 1964.

The Astros were the surprise team of 1966 through the first half of the season and were in fifth place through July 23. However, they went into a second-half tailspin mostly because of injuries to key personnel and steadily dropped to their current eighth-place position.

Roy Hofheinz, president of the Houston Sports Association, said Hatton was offered a multi-season contract but "he preferred to sign for just one year."

Hofheinz called Hatton "one of the finest managers in baseball today."

Hatton, 43, said he felt the club made solid progress this year despite the second-half decline.

"We were playing as a team instead of individuals and had real fine spirit that kept our momentum going until we got all banged up," he said.

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — Paul Bondeson took individual honors with a five-under-par 66 Wednesday in the pro-amateur competition kicking off the $50,000 Greater Seattle Open Golf Tournament at the Everett Golf and Country Club.

Bondeson's tally sheet showed three birdies, an eagle and one bogey. He tied the competitive course record set a couple of years ago by amateur Tom Storey.

He was one shot in front of defending champion Gay Brewer and Jacky Capit, who in turn had a stroke on Jerry Steel-smith, Dale Douglass, George Archer, Charles Coody and Bruce Crampton.

'Fashion' Pants Luncheon At Club Climaxes LGA Tourney

By JO BRIGHT
A luncheon Tuesday in the clubhouse climaxed the Webb Ladies Golf Association Invitational Golf Tournament, and the highlight of the afternoon was a showing of informal fashions presented by Mrs. Tommy Hutto, manager of "Fashion Pants."

Mrs. James L. Murphy, women's director of KWAB-TV, supplied the commentary and LGA members modeled the fashions as they strolled between the tables, pausing at intervals so that guests might better see styling of the garments.

Appearing first was Mrs. Chester J. Butcher, wife of the wing commander, wearing green linen stretch pants complemented by a bat-wing poncho of polished cotton in a bold print of blue and green shadings. Mrs. George E. Franks was next and showed bright orange stretch pants topped by a hip-riding overblouse showing a Japanese influence in its bold circular pattern of chartreuse, turquoise, orange, yellow and bold, bright blue.

An all-wool slack suit in smart black and white hound's tooth check was shown by Mrs. Larry L. Ledbetter. The double-breasted coat was emphasized by the jet black turtleneck underblouse, and the pants were cut to a tapered trimness. Mrs. B. F. Butler received approval for her teal blue stretch pants topped by a long-waisted, coat-sweater, V-necked to show the olive green shell worn underneath. The pattern was beautifully done in jacquard print with gold accent buttons.

Mrs. T. J. Rowland showed a coordinated suit marked with a Western influence. The fitted brown corduroy pants featured slash pockets bound in shiny leather, and the matching vest top had gold clamp closing emphasizing the masculine air. Completing the costume was a beige cotton Western underblouse. Mrs. J. M. Fitzsimmons picked her a plum of a pullover—in that color. It was a long-waisted coverup, styled with jewel neck and long sleeves, which she wore with pants in tiny checks of plum, blue and avocado wool.

Mrs. James J. Rouch walked among the tables wearing a casual but stunning combination of chocolate brown stretch pants with a floral velvet top in orange and green on a brown background. Accents were a tiny rolled collar and three-quarter, loose sleeves.

A youthful coordinated skirt and blouse was chosen by Mrs. David L. VanBruense. The light background blossoming with small blue and yellow flowers, and a narrow bone leather belt circling the waist. Comfortable and casual, the blouse had a rolled collar and push-up sleeves, and the mid-knee skirt flared into an A-line.

Mrs. J. W. Osgood made her entrance in a bold, burnt orange and avocado plaid pant teamed with a poor boy wool sweater in solid burnt orange with long sleeves for cool days or frosty nights.

Soft, supple suede cloth in gold was used to create the slacks suit shown by Mrs. Roger C. Blume. The smooth-fitting slacks were worn with a companion jacket—long, double-breasted and slightly fitted. Contrasting smartly was a black nylon high-necked pullover with bracelet-length sleeves.

STILL FEMINE
Fashionably feminine was the long line, cotton ribbed poor boy in white, sprinkled with tiny blue flowers, which Mrs. Terry Isaacson combined with blue stretch pants and soft, ankle top white boots. Smart as a snappy salute was Mrs. Robert Vega in a navy blue corduroy skirt and blue, petty officer oxford cotton blouse, complete with brass buttons. The A-line skirt was altered for action, and the blouse back featured military detailing. Tapestry pumps softened the severity of the ensemble.

In contrast, Mrs. R. W. Hunter liked a long line overblouse, pheasant-patterned in dacron silk and slashed at the neck. The loose-fitting top had three-quarter-length sleeves and was worn with burnt orange tapered stretch pants.

Mrs. R. L. Sandner, pert and pretty, went to extremes—contrasting her black stretch pants with a pure white, cable knit touched with black trim around the generous turtleneck, arms and hipline. She put her best foot forward—firmly—in white boots with a bit of black leather accent.

Bringing the show to a close was Mrs. T. B. Tompkins who modeled a very tailored slacks suit in green and orange watch plaid wool. The complete look was acquired with the casual, cable pullover in contrasting burnt orange and olive—hand-some with a high, rolled collar. Accessories for the show were footwear from Austin Shoe Store and jewelry from Blum's.

Bridge Series Scores Tallied At Country Club

Eight-week series winners were announced during duplicate bridge play Wednesday at Big Spring Country Club. Mrs. Rogers Hefley placed first and Mrs. Joe Herbert was second. Other winners were Mrs. A.

Six tables were in play Wednesday, and winners were Mrs. James Duncan and Mrs. R. H. Weaver, first; Mrs. Ward Hall and Mrs. R. E. Dobbins, second; Mrs. Floyd Mays and Mrs. Elviss McCrary, third; and Mrs. Truman Jones and Mrs. Charles Tompkins, fourth.

As district chairman, Mrs. Marr will be honored at a dinner and theatre party Oct. 11 during the national convention in New York.

A total of 885 active members and 57 associate members joined the NABW since last October, and the total membership is now 5,405, an all-time high.

Baptist Officers Installed Tuesday

Byron Orand, vice president; Mrs. James Stephens, secretary; Mrs. Tacoma Draper, treasurer; and Mrs. Bill Blaback, Girls' Auxiliary director.

Mrs. Anderson presented eight members with leadership cards, and prayer was led by the Rev. Byron Orand.

Mrs. Shirley Walker presided at a refreshment table covered with a white cloth, inset with lace, and centered with an arrangement of purple flowers which was presented to Mrs. Anderson. The cake was appropriately inscribed.

Club Holds Gardener's Workshop

The Hogarth curve and circular floral arrangements were studied during a workshop held Tuesday evening by the After Five Garden Club in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas Company.

Each member brought materials and containers to make arrangements which were valued by Mrs. D. S. Riley of the Big Spring Garden Club.

Mrs. John Hughes presided as plans were explained for the council flower show slated Nov. 5. Also, discussion was held concerning the club's project of beautifying the observation area near Webb AFB on Highway 80 west. Members were asked to report there for work every day this week at 5 p.m.

Refreshments were served to 13 by Miss Charlene Goins and Miss Leah Davis. The next meeting will be a workshop at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 18, in the Flame Room.

Casually Yours

By JO BRIGHT

My friend, Mrs. Ennis Cochran, is packing her bags for Boston and will be among seven from here making the trip. Mary will be attending a volunteer coordinator's meeting which will be followed by a mental health institute. Also attending from Big Spring will be Dr. Preston Harrison, Mrs. Claude VanVleet, Miss Kay Thaxton, Miss Shirley Barak, Miss June Stevens and Dr. Harry Davis. They'll be back next week.

George Oldham was supposed to be back from Dallas last night. He was there to attend a public relations-type seminar conducted by Dr. Joyce Brothers—and promised to take notes to share. Mrs. H. F. Merrell Jr. is back from San Francisco where she reports a wonderful three weeks getting acquainted with her new grandson, John Bruce, born to Lt. and Mrs. John Jensen at Travis AFB, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon McWilliams were in San Angelo over the weekend to visit her mother, Mrs. Pauline Richardson, and see how the old home town is doing.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Harris (Clorida) are back from a fishing trip to Ruidoso. They like it best 'between seasons' when the pace is not so hectic.

So nice to hear from Karen Skanchy. She and her captain husband, Craig, and daughter, Jill, are here temporarily. He'll be training later at McMill AFB in Florida prior to overseas duty next year.

The luncheon following the Webb LGA Invitational Tournament was informal fun—with Mrs. Tommy Hutto presenting styles in fancy pants from the Fashion Pants Shop in Highland Center. Among the town guests who participated in the play were Mrs. Jack Magee (always congenial), Mrs. Carl Marcum (always pretty) and Mrs. W. E. Ramsey (always a winner!). Mrs. Jim Zike told me that pert Pat Gilmore, the Snyder golfer, has a thriving answering service there and had to get a 'phone sitter' to make the tournament. Did pretty good for herself, too.

Mrs. Joe Gunning joined Mrs. Ivah Lou Ashley and I for a sandwich at Toby's the other night. Both used to live at Colorado City and found they had several mutual friends. Both have new jobs, also. Ivah is with the Texas Education Agency here, and Evelyn is doing what she likes best as manager of women's ready-to-wear department at Montgomery Ward.

Naturally, I'm gaining weight—but what better place in town to see people than Furr's Cafeteria? Among the diners Tuesday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rogan, the Ike Robb family, the L. A. Hiltbrunnners and the J. B. Apples. Glimpsed Lester Morton leaving, and think he had some youngsters with him. The Rogans haven't vacationed yet, but may continue their honeymoon elsewhere soon if the city's traffic lights will behave long enough. Mrs. Imogene Lloyd plays some nice, sentimental dinner music.

Four fellows who have made the same trip every year for the past eight or ten—did it again. Up to Pecos, N.M., to close the cabin were Boone Horne, T. B. Atkins, Gilbert Gibbs and Lulu King. Sure, they'll go back to open it in the spring.

Carr Club Told Of Cooking News

WESTBROOK (SC) — Mrs. T. A. Rees was hostess to members of the Carr Home Demonstration Club Friday at 2 p.m. Miss Janice Miller, HD agent, led prayer, and the devotion was by Mrs. Bill Rees, president. Roll call was answered with "What I would do the 25th hour: if there was one more hour in the day." Mrs. Miller spoke on what is new in cooking and refreshments were served. The next meeting will be at 2 p.m. Oct. 7.

PROPOSAL COULD COST ABOUT $1 MILLION

Exams Loom For 'Ham' Operators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, concerned about the caliber of the nation's quarter-million amateur radio operators, may re-examine most of them.

The proposal could cost the ham operators about $1 million. The rule change was suggested by the American Radio Relay League, an organization representing about 85,000 hams.

NO INTEREST
In its request for the rule changes—now in the final stages of preparation—the league said there is "increasing concern... as to whether the basic purposes and objectives of the amateur radio service, particularly those relating to technical qualifications and proficiency," are being achieved.

In short, the league is concerned because more and more hams have no great interest in radio technology. Many of them, as an FCC official said recently, "just go out and buy their equipment, plug it into the light socket, connect the antenna and operate."

BIG CHANGE
This is a big change from only a decade ago when most hams built at least part of their equipment.

"One can truthfully say that the percentage of licensees who are the true tinkerer or technical types has been dropping," an FCC source said.

Now, with more money, most hams are able to buy fine, commercially built equipment.

Although hams still are required to pass tests in international Morse code and basic electronics, some FCC officials feel they have not progressed as far as might be expected, considering the developments in electronics and communications.

NEW RULES
The result: The FCC picked up the league idea and began formulating proposed new rules. The changes, if approved by the seven-man commission, would be the biggest overhaul of amateur rules in 15 years.

A new license grade would be established. To retain all their present operating privileges, most hams would have to take new, stiffer tests in code and radio theory, at a cost of $4 per exam, pass or fail.

FAILURES
Those who fail would still be allowed to operate on all frequency bands—or groups of frequencies—which they now use. But they would be permitted only on certain segments of these bands.

There already is one special amateur license—known as the extra class—but it conveys no extra privileges. Of 270,000 hams in the United States, fewer than 5,000 go extra class. They would be exempt from the new exams. One FCC official said the extra class exam is about as difficult as tests for top grades of commercial radio licenses.

VALUABLE
Part of the FCC concern over the status of hams is related to the allocation of precious radio frequencies. Other services—maritime radio stations, aeronautical radio services, and international broadcasting—all would like to take over the valuable amateur frequencies.

There is some feeling that the justification for reserving these frequencies for hams hinges to a considerable degree upon the value of the radio amateur to the country.

FCC officials point out that hams have been valuable. Since World War I, hams have been a big source of semi-trained personnel for the armed forces. Amateur radio also has been the first training ground for many young scientists.

HAMS HELP
Hams also help the public in times of emergencies. And where international regulations permit, they handle messages between members of the armed forces and the folks back home. But if hams do not perform these services and do not continue to upgrade their skills, then officials fear that they will have no basis for reserving large blocks of frequencies for hams.

Pressure has come from many new countries—especially those in Africa—for more international frequencies. In many an emerging nation, an international broadcasting station has become a status symbol and a means for disseminating its views to the world.

Producer's Home Real Showplace

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie - TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It looks like — well, like a set from a Ross Hunter movie.

Hunter is the boyish producer of "Pillow Talk," "I'd Rather Be Rich," "Madame X," and other documentaries of life in the upper classes. His films have the glossy, sumptuous look that has seldom been seen on the screen since Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford turned in their Adrian gowns at MGM.

Thus you might expect that Hunter would erect an elegant showplace when he set about to build his own home. He has. With taxes and business manager now overruling the local economic scene, the producer's house could well be the last of the Hollywood palaces.

TWO BEDROOMS
The cost? He would rather not think about it, much less talk about it. Estimates for house, lot and furnishings run in the neighborhood of $600,000, which is a pretty rarified neighborhood for a two-bedroom place.

Before taking off on a business trip to Europe, Hunter conducted a tour of the newly finished house. It is in the upper reaches of the Trousdale Estates, a hotbed of opulence nestled between the Sunset Strip and Beverly Hills.

Although he has lived in the house only a few weeks, the grounds give the place an established look. "That's my instant landscaping," he explained. "It was all planned in one day, including the large trees. Even the lawns were rolled out like carpeting."

INSIDE VIEW
The view from inside the massive front door resembles a Roman villa. You look through the marble hall to the marble pool on the terrace below; it bubbles with the flow of three massive fountains. Beyond is the urban sprawl of Los Angeles, smog-shrouded as usual.

Hunter headed for the dining room. "The crystal chandelier is from Ireland, the China pieces are from Carol Channing," said the producer, referring to a star of his most recent film, "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

SILVER CLOSET
He continued to the silver closet, lined entirely in tarnish-proof cloth to eliminate polishing, and the gadget-filled kitchen.

The producer pointed out other aspects of the house's 9,000 square feet: a railing from a Spanish church; a mural, "The Mummies," executed by Douglas Riseborough; the veranda with overhead heating for use in any weather; the bridge room where he plays weekly with Burt Lancaster, Richard Conte and others; the projection room "with the same equipment of Grauman's Chinese."

LEMONS
The decor is beige, white and yellow. "I have this 'thing' about lemons," said Hunter, whose bedroom is replete with ceramics, sculptures and paintings of lemons, including a Matisse.

"When I came out here as an actor in 1944, I rented a room at the Plaza Hotel for $60 a month," Hunter said.

"This house is not a status symbol, but a place I can enjoy. I'm at the studio at 5 or 6 in the morning and I don't leave until 8 or 9 in the evening. Why shouldn't I have a comfortable place to come home to?"

House Okays Big Bill On Public Works

Interned Chinese Stone TV Crew

MEDAN, North Sumatra, Indonesia (AP) — Troops fired over the heads of some 3,000 interned Chinese after the Chinese stoned a National Broadcasting Co. television crew Wednesday.

Two policemen guarding the crew were injured by rocks and one of the NBC team was hit twice by stones.

The Chinese, confined to the grounds of a school, are waiting to be deported. Indonesia is deporting all non-Indonesian Chinese.

As they stoned the television crew, they shouted "Crush America!"

Harlem School Battle Looms

NEW YORK (AP) — Civil rights leaders today threatened to turn a controversial Harlem showcase school into a "national battleground" after pickets protesting its white principal clashed Wednesday with police.

New demonstrations were expected today and a Police Department spokesman said extra men were on call.

"This has ceased to be a local issue," said Roy Innis, chairman of Harlem's Congress of Racial Equality. "It is now the stage for a national battleground."

THREAT
A similar threat came from Stokely Carmichael, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, who warned the Board of Education that his group "was prepared to mount a major direct action campaign against the New York City school system and authorities."

One Negro threw himself in the path of Stanley Lisser, the school principal, Wednesday and others broke through wooden barriers and tussled with police as they tried to block Lisser from entering the new $5-million building. Five demonstrators, including one woman, were arrested.

RESIGNED
Lisser had resigned from the post Monday in line with community demands for a "black principal" but was reinstated 24 hours later when the school's integrated teaching staff struck in protest against the transfer.

The clash between pickets and police in a rainstorm outside the school was described by Innis as "only a brief skirmish — a prelude to war."

'BLACK POWER'
Neither Innis, nor Carmichael, who popularized the "black power" slogan of the militant wing of the civil rights movement, would specify what steps they planned to take.

Pledges of support for the demonstrators came from a cross section of Harlem's most outspoken Negro organizations including the Black Muslims, the Black Panther party, the Organization of Afro-American Unity whose founder was the late Malcolm X, and the Peking-Oriented Progressive Labor party.

The groups have backed the demands of parents who want the community to set school policy and pick the staff. The Board of Education has agreed to confer with them on some points, but has refused to turn over its decision-making powers.

Carr Says War Is Not Issue
HOUSTON (AP) — Conduct of the war in Viet Nam will not be a Texas campaign issue if Republican Sen. John Tower keeps on supporting the President's policies in Southeast Asia, Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr said Wednesday.

Carr, the Democratic nominee opposing Tower's re-election, said he and the Texas senator hold pretty much the same view on this matter.

The United States should press its war effort but nevertheless must continue searching "for honorable ways to peace," the attorney general said during a tour of the Houston vicinity.

Carr expressed a belief that the Democratic party "is more unified today than it ever has been to my knowledge."

'Stage 67' Is Fighting Top Lineup

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV - Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The final hour of prime network time on Wednesday nights this season promises to be the most difficult period of the week for the viewing audience. The 10-11 (EDT) spot is a time of agonizing decision.

The question, of course, is whether to tune in on the antics of CBS' Danny Kaye and company. Or to sample the offering of ABC's anthology series, "Stage 67" which is the network's most ambitious effort of the season. Or to enjoy the cloak and dagger adventures and repartee of NBC's "I Spy."

'I SPY'
This viewer chose "I Spy" Wednesday night as it returns a hit for its second season. And it was a good night for a visit — Bill Cosby was the co-star who was carrying the love interest.

This season, it appears, the two merry intrepid agents will be operating in new territory. Last season it was the Hong Kong-Tokyo area. Wednesday night the show opened with the stabbing of a nuclear scientist in Paris and wound up with the usual hand to hand combat on the outskirts of Las Vegas.

INTERPLAY
Quite often, because there is usually a pretty white girl involved, the romantic parts go to co-star Robert Culp.

The easy interplay between the two actors, the casual approach and the adventurous theme of the well-produced hour makes the show, this season as well as last, one of the most entertaining hours of the schedule. Which is why this viewer among many devoutly wishes ABC could have found some other spot for its anthology series which deserves attention, too.

NAIVE
CBS' "Gomer Pyle," back for a third season, faces some formidable competition this season even for a company of Marines. The military comedy has been pulled out of its comfortable Friday evening spot and placed opposite ABC's "Peyton Place."

The Jim Nabors show still relies completely on the relationship between an irascible and conniving sergeant, played at top voice by Frank Sutton, and the naive, and literal Gomer.

COMMUNISTS CALL STRIKE IN INDIA
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A leftist-called general strike for more food and government action against inflation paralyzed Calcutta, India's biggest city, and the rest of West Bengal State today.

City officials halted local trains and streetcars to prevent their destruction by mobs as the 48-hour strike began.

Indian Airlines and the British Overseas Airways Corp. curtailed service to Calcutta, a city of seven million.

The strike was called by the Communists and supported by nine other leftist parties.

Personalized Rock Tosser To Explain It To Court

The 11-year-old boy who threw a rock through a store window and then wrote a note admitting the deed and giving his name, will have to explain his reasons to the juvenile judge.

Bob Wakefield, county juvenile officer, said the boy has not been before the court on any prior occasion. He described him as being small for his age and from a family in extremely poor financial condition.

"We couldn't put an 11-year-old in jail," Wakefield noted. "So we took him home and will bring him before the court for action when Judge Porter (Lee Porter, juvenile judge) gets home."

Wakefield said the boy told two or three stories but finally agreed that one in which he told of picking up a convenient rock, standing near to the north entrance show window in the C. R. Anthony store and crashing the rock into the plate glass was the true one.

"He said he had a piece of paper in his pocket and a pencil so he wrote the note 'I did it' and signed his real name," said Wakefield.

The juvenile officer said that he saw no way the child or his parents could pay for the damage. His mother is a widow and is on county welfare.

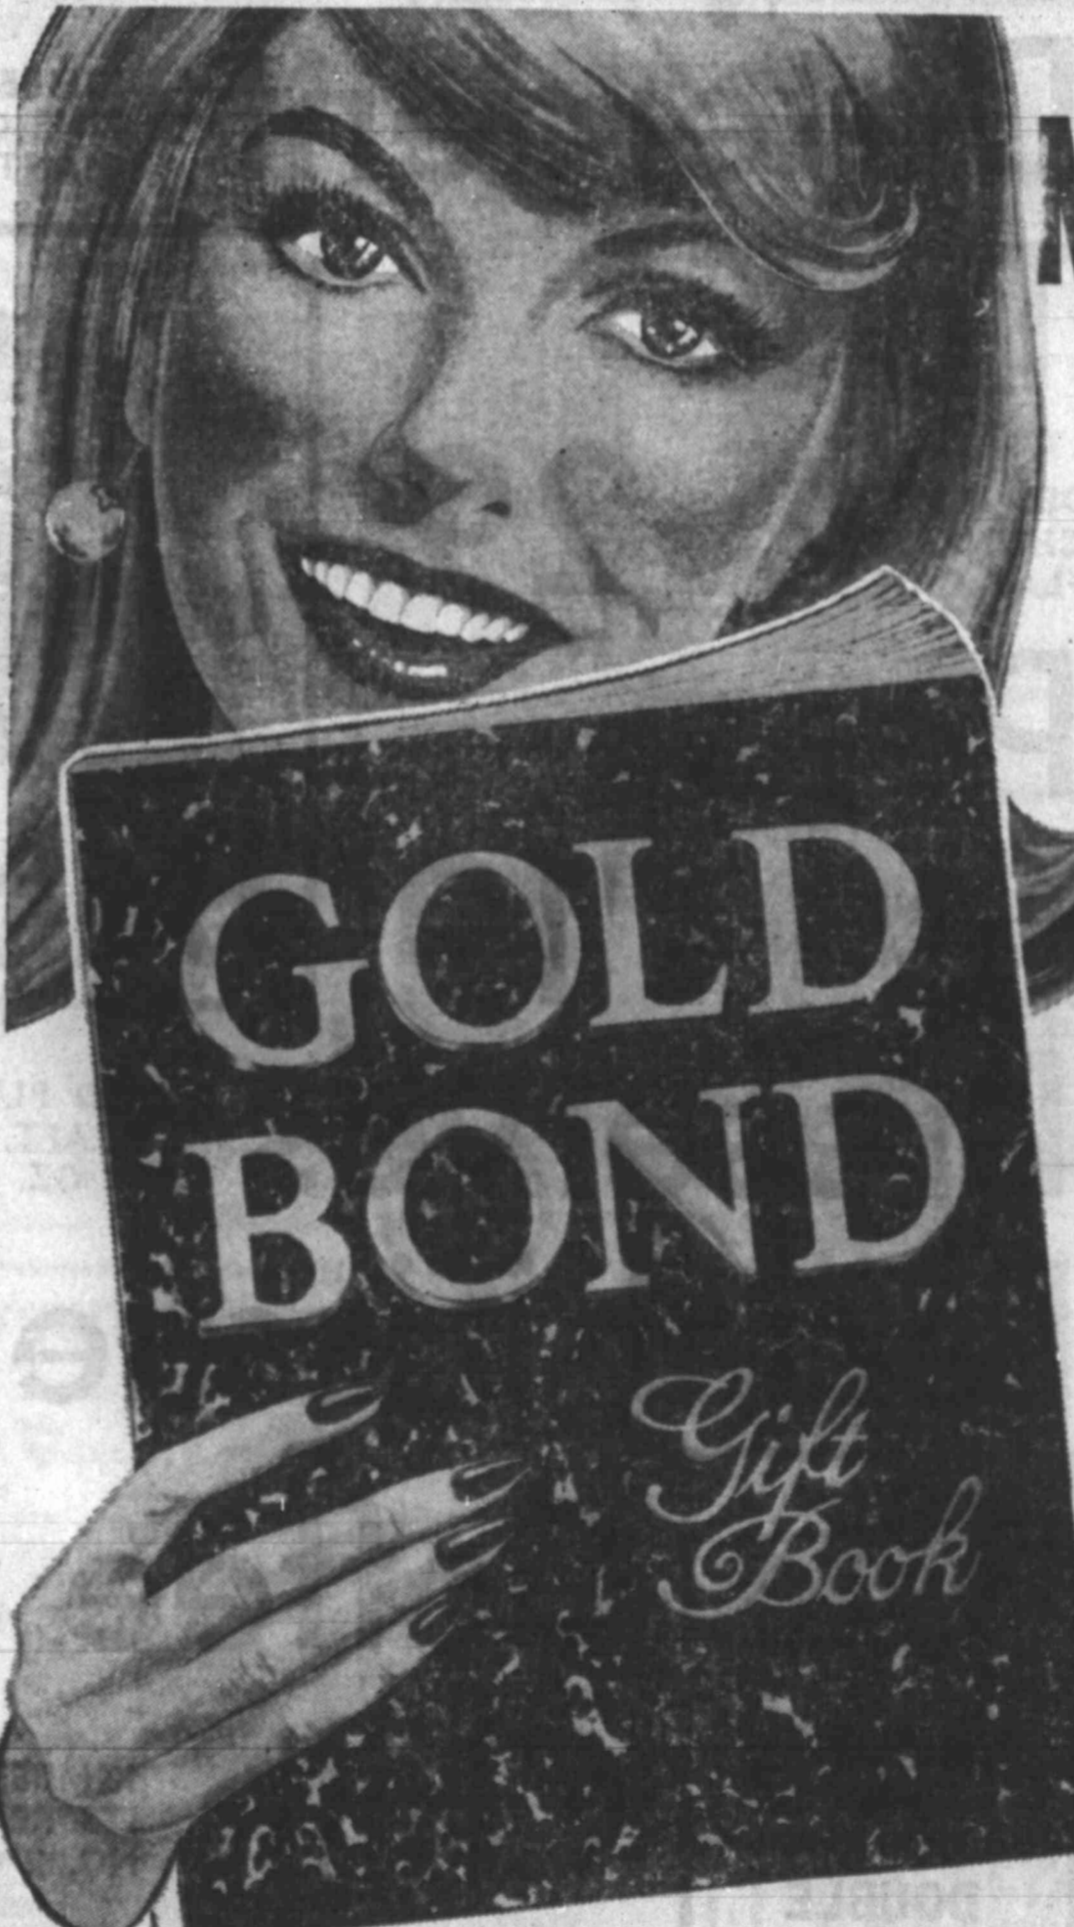

Cuin Grigsby, manager of the C. R. Anthony store, told Wakefield it will cost $150 to replace the window.

SERVICES HELD FOR BROTHER OF MRS. W. F. TAYLOR
Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Taylor, accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. G. B. Cave, Roby, and son, John L. Taylor, and Mrs. Taylor's sister, Mrs. J. R. Caldwell, Boerne, returned Wednesday from attending funeral services for J. T. Claggett, 85, in Cuero.

Mr. Claggett is the brother of Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Caldwell. He died Sunday at Burns Hospital in Cuero after a month's critical illness. Services were held Tuesday at Grace Episcopal Church in Cuero, where he was buried. Mr. Claggett leaves his wife, Mrs. Hermine Claggett; a son, E. B. Claggett, Chicago, Ill.; and four sisters. He was a retired insurance man, and he and Mrs. Claggett had moved to Cuero about six years ago from California.

Dear Abby

Time To Separate!

DEAR ABBY: My wife and my mother don't get along. Mother lives with us but she is no trouble to my wife as we have a lovely modern home and hired help to do the work. Mother is in her early sixties, dresses well, is immaculately clean and in good health. I admit mother likes to argue, and has to have the last word, but my wife could "handle" her better if she wanted to. Mother sometimes speaks her mind about the way we are raising our children. My wife calls this "meddling."

Another thing, mother doesn't drive, and my wife makes a federal case out of having to drive her somewhere. My wife is well strung and yells a lot. My mother says my wife is sick and needs help. I'd like your opinion on how to get some peace around here.

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: It is possible that your wife is not "sick" — she's just sick of your mother. Give them a vacation from each other by sending one of them on a little trip. When two women can't live peacefully under one roof, they generally raise it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old bachelor who needs some advice. I recently met an attractive young woman in whom I could be very much interested. There is only one thing wrong with her. She talks all the time. I can't seem to get a word in edgewise.

I like so many things about this girl, but I don't think I could stand to live with such a talkative person.

She is 29 years old. Do you think there is a chance of slowing her down, or breaking her of this annoying habit? I don't want to take any chances.

INTERESTED

DEAR INTERESTED: An otherwise attractive and eligible young woman would (or should) appreciate being told how she could improve her chances for marriage.

Tell her, and give her a chance to overcome her handicap. If she's hopeless, seize the first opportunity to get a word in edgewise. And make it, "good-by."

Chaos In Space Certain Until Laws Are Written

EDITOR'S NOTE: The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed on a sort of informal Magna Carta for outer space, but there's still a lot of law to be written before men land on the moon. Things like contamination, piracy, military uses and even the basic question: where does space begin?

By MAX HARELSON
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — As the space age nears the end of its first decade, the world's diplomats are still moving at a Model-T pace in writing laws to cover the many problems of this new frontier.

"The simple fact is," as Chief Justice of the United States Earl Warren put it, "that law has not kept abreast of science."

There have been points of friction between the United States and the Soviet Union, but up to now space has not been plagued with the lawlessness which followed men's exploration of new frontiers on earth.

BIG POWERS
This is partly due to the fact that the big powers have agreed on a number of basic principles which serve as a sort of informal Magna Carta for space and which may eventually be expanded into a binding legal code.

There are many other legal questions which are becoming more pressing with each new space launching by the United States and the Soviet Union.

One of these is the regulation of traffic in the increasingly busy highways of space. This includes rules governing so-called space garbage that might eventually prove harmful to astronauts.

REGULATION
Legal authorities also have stressed the need for laws to prevent contamination of celestial bodies by either manned or unmanned space vehicles and, equally important, to make sure that returning space vehicles do not contaminate the earth.

Another major problem, which will become more acute with passing time, is the regulation of space communication. With the increasing use of space satellites for communications, lawyers see the possibility of jamming, pirating of broadcast materials or other injurious uses of space — such as interference with communications between an astronaut and ground control — unless international agreements provide for licensing and regulation.

Actually, there have been few events which brought complaints from either of the space powers. One of these, during the first Soviet Sputnik flights, concerned Sputnik broadcasts which interfered with the broadcast of time signals by the U.S. Bureau of Standards. Others involved some U.S. experiments which brought Soviet complaints. The so-called Argus project was a series of high-altitude nuclear detonations over the South Atlantic in the summer of 1955, designed to create an artificial radiation belt.

The Westford Project in 1961 involved the release of 75 pounds of copper dipoles, or tiny needles, that were supposed to disperse into a narrow band for possible use in long-range radio communications.

QUESTIONS
The disagreements over the early incidents were not long lasting and have not been repeated.

More important to the future are a number of broad questions which have been widely discussed but not resolved:

Should space vehicles be permitted to gather military intelligence data and what is meant by "military use of space?"

Should private corporations be permitted to explore space? —What is the demarcation line between air space and outer space?

Although these and many other important questions remain unanswered, the areas of agreement on space principles are surprisingly extensive in view of the East-West standstill on other earthly problems.

"SOFT"
The bulk of the progress up to now has been in the law of accepted practice — common law — and in "soft" law based on U.N. resolutions and joint U.S.-Soviet declarations. One unwritten law, for example, began to take shape the very day Sputnik I was launched Oct. 4, 1957.

Arthur Larson, law professor and former aide to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, noted this in these words: "The basis was laid for one of the most important principles of space law — that of freedom of space — when the first Russian satellite passed over the territories of all the nations of the world without protest."

"soft" law was made in 1963 when the U.N. General Assembly adopted a declaration of legal principles on the exploration of space. These do not have the mandatory effect of a treaty, but they had the support of both big space powers as well as all other U.N. members and they have never been challenged.

TREATY
Some of these principles are included in the draft treaty now being discussed by the U.N. legal subcommittee on space in Geneva. One effect of the treaty, if approved and ratified, would be to formalize into statutory law principles already accepted universally.

One of these is that outer space and celestial bodies are free for exploration and use by all states on the basis of equality and in accordance with international law. Another is that space and the celestial bodies are not subject to national appropriation by claim of sovereignty or by other means.

ASTROS
Other principles agreed upon include the following: —Governments are liable for damages caused by space objects to property or individuals in a foreign country. —Governments shall regard astronauts as envoys of mankind and shall render them any assistance possible in the event of an accident or an emergency landing on foreign territory.

In another step to restrict the use of space for peaceful purposes, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed in 1963 that weapons of mass destruction should be banned from outer space. The U.N. Assembly took note of this agreement in a resolution and both powers pledged their compliance. Both the United States and the Soviet Union now are urging the inclusion of this provision in the proposed treaty on space.

'PEACEFUL USES'
One question which has produced some controversy between the space powers involves the definition of "peaceful uses" of outer space. The Russians took the position that this means a ban on the use of space for military purposes. The United States, on the other hand, says there is nothing wrong with using space for military purposes as long as it is not used for aggressive action.

While the principles approved so far stress the term "peaceful uses" rather than non-military uses, the United States and the Soviet Union both want to be more specific in the proposed treaty. Both would ban the establishment of military fortifications and the carrying out of military maneuvers on the moon or any other space body.

Hearing Set On Nun's Garb

BOERNE, Tex. (AP) — An Oct. 7 hearing has been set on two Catholic nuns and their flowing dress which three men, including a Baptist preacher, say violates a constitutional church-state separation.

Dist. Judge Marvin Blackburn ordered the hearing Wednesday. Besides the minister, two retired Army colonels have asked the court for permission to take depositions from the nuns pertaining to their religious beliefs.

The nuns are Sisters Mary Thekla Goertz and Henrietta Marie Kallus of the Benedictine order. They teach in junior and senior high schools here.

At issue are the flowing habits and headpieces they wear in classes.

School Supt. Roy Liesman said the sisters were hired because no other teachers were available.

Pat Maloney, their lawyer, said in an answering petition that questioning the nuns about their religion would violate state law.

Head Start Program Grant Approved For Local Schools

Approval by the Office of Economic Opportunity for a nine-months Head Start grant to the Big Spring Independent School District was announced today by Sen. Ralph Yarborough and Rep. George Mahon.

The grant for the pre-school program for economically disadvantaged groups and those with language and other barriers is for $143,964.

The Head Start program has been in operation under various smaller grants since mid-1965, but this is the first nine months grant administered here.

Supt. Sam Anderson said Tuesday afternoon that he was pleased by the OEO's decision.

"We will now be able to continue the Head Start program in Kate Morrison School for some 200 children," he said.

The pre-school program for youngsters has been very successful here, we feel."

The Head Start program operates for those underprivileged children in a specified target area. The Head Start program now serves children from Cedar Crest, Bauer and Lakeview schools, and a few from Airport and several rural areas who can provide their own transportation.

Keith Swim, program director, said that it will take a few days to work up an in-service training program for the teachers involved in the Head Start program.

"We will be able to set a definite date for the Head Start opening in one or two days," Anderson said. "It will take us this long to have final confirmation on the program and to make last-minute plans."

Birth Of Oryx Brings Rejoicing

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The birth of a female oryx has brought rejoicing at the Phoenix Zoo, which says the animals are the only ones of their kind in captivity outside Saudi Arabia.

Because the climate and terrain at Phoenix are more nearly like the native habitat of the oryx, a type of antelope, a herd of eight was established here.

Mahon was chief of amendments man of the Senate committee for the $50 million program for the 1967-68 fiscal year which the

Draft Debate Lost By Fighting Texan

By TEX EASLEY
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. George Mahon of Texas argued eloquently... but lost.

The Texan captained the fight in the House for acceptance of a Senate-approved amendment to give the President authority to call individual members of the military reserves to active duty without declaring a national emergency.

But the House refused to go along, siding instead with Rep. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

WENT TO BAT

Mahon was thrust into the role of chief spokesman for the amendment because he is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. As committee chairman, he was floor manager for the $58 billion Defense Department appropriation bill to which the Senate had added the call-up authority. And since he favored the Senate amendment, he went to bat for it.

The chamber was packed as debate surged over the call-up provision. The question was not over the big money bill, but whether to accept the bill as amended by the Senate. The House previously had passed the $58 billion bill.

WONDERING

Rivers opposed the amendment on grounds that writing such a legislative provision into an appropriation bill was irregular procedure and that the Senate amendment was a military matter that should be handled separately by his committee.

Late in the day, before the vote came, the Lubbock area congressman was recognized once again to speak.

"As I sat here amidst the eloquence and the oratory of the afternoon," he told his colleagues, "I found my mind wandering to Viet Nam, and to the boys in the mud and the rain and the heat who are giving their lives there for their country."

"I wondered what the boys in Viet Nam would have gotten out of this debate. What would they conclude? Have the previous speakers been in favor of giving the President of the United States the chance to call up reservists if it is in the national interest for them to serve in a war?"

GIS DYING

"They would say, 'We are fighting and dying and we could not care less about parliamentary matters. Are you for or are you against it?'"

"It is perfectly true that the President could declare a national emergency. I would assume that he is probably correct in his decision not to declare a national emergency... it may be that he does not want to call up the reserve units as such, because if he declared a national emergency and called up reserve units, he would be calling up reservists who have already served in the war in Viet Nam."

BIG THING

"The primary thing that seems to be troubling the House is the matter of legislation in an appropriation bill."

Then Mahon said: "Mr. Speaker, it was announced over a year ago that the President was not going to call up the reserves under the conditions then existing. The demand for admission to the reserves accelerated rapidly."

"Mr. Speaker, 133,000 men are in the reserves today who have not had a day of active-duty training. There are those who feel that these men should be considered for call into active duty."

RIVERS WINS

"Now, the question for you to decide is, whether or not we should act on this proposal and give the President the right to determine whether or not there is a 'draft' haven in the reserve establishments and give him the opportunity to call up certain people who may be needed in the war in Viet Nam without destroying reserve units."

PAID OFF DEBT AT 50 CENTS A PAYMENT Ex-Carpenter Builds Bankroll

By JOHN CUNIFF
 AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wallace Johnson describes himself as "the only man in captivity who paid off a $400 debt at the rate of 50 cents a payment." He hasn't forgotten.

In the 1920s, when he ran up the $400 debt to a lumber company, Johnson was a knockabout carpenter in a small Mississippi town. "I was a little old peckerwood boy," he said. Now he has built 25,000 homes, Loans come easier.

YES LATER

"I've told bankers who turned me down, 'Someday I'll be you'll say yes.' John Hancock — life insurance company — turned me down four times for a Holiday Inn loan but now I borrow from them.

"I never saw off the limb. I might get angry when I'm turned down but I always leave the room to get back and talk to them."

Johnson is huge, jowly, serious, homespun, evangelical — both in his business and religious outlook. He's a teetotaler, a nonsmoker. Unimpressed with himself — "I've had no success but I'm working at it" — he nevertheless seldom questions his goals.

GOALS SET

"I knew at 16 what I wanted to do and I never varied from it." This is a pattern, he says, that most people unfortunately do not copy.

"Most people arrive at my age, 65, and still have made no money in this, the richest nation in the world." The reason, he believes, is that people don't set goals and plan toward the goals.

With Johnson was his wife, Alma, a full partner in most of his enterprises. Gracious in the soft, southern delta manner, she speaks her mind about saving millions in the same way many housewives talk about saving "cents off" coupons. She and Johnson frequently keep in personal touch with stockholders.

CHIEF HERE

"I keep a list of 18,000 stockholders with me at all times," Johnson said. "If we go to Columbus, Ga., we know we have at least 17 stockholders there. We call them up. This is the president of your company," I tell them and we talk."

Johnson hopes to place 500 medicenters throughout the country, using some of the methods used in spreading Holiday Inns.

"The hospital field is going to be one of the greatest bets in America," he said. "Hospital and nursing home growth will be similar to the growth of the motel industry."

Johnson isn't as optimistic about the near future of the housing business. Activity, he feels, will be at its lowest point in the spring of 1967.

Teamsters Back Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Informed sources say the Teamsters Union is giving all out support to Rep. Adam Clayton Powell in his battle with other Democrats on the House Education and Labor Committee.

"The teamsters are putting everything they've got behind Powell," one informant said.

The rest of the labor movement, principally the giant AFL-CIO headed by George Meany, is officially keeping hands off the effort to strip Powell of some of his power as committee chairman.

But the AFL-CIO, which has clashed frequently with the Negro congressman, has a big stake in the outcome and is privately rooting for Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., leader of the faction fighting Powell.

The AFL-CIO and the independent Teamsters Union have held opposing views about Powell ever since he became committee chairman in 1961.

The teamsters' support of Powell is reportedly on orders of the union's president, James Hoffa.

Most of the legislation vital to organized labor goes through Powell's hands. Meany at best has shown only testy tolerance for the New York congressman.

Dallas To See Kennedy Film

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A showing of the film, "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums," was set here Thursday night for what sponsoring Dallas Democrats called charitable purposes.

The film deals with the life of the late President John F. Kennedy, who was assassinated in a Dallas motorcade, Nov. 22, 1963.

Rep. Albert Quie, R-Minn., who said he had learned profits from the Dallas showing would be split between Dallas Democratic candidates and the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington, asked President Johnson to halt the showing here.

Dallas Democrats denied any money would be used to support candidates.

A first showing of the film was held Wednesday night at the Festival Theater and sponsored by the Dallas United Nations Association. It begins a public run at the same theater on Oct. 7.

The U.S. Information Agency produced the film for overseas use, but Congress voted to allow showings on a non-partisan basis.

Myron Hauser, president of the Greater Dallas Democratic Club, said all residents, not just Democrats, were invited to see the $5 benefit showing Thursday night. The club directors, he said, would decide later what charities will benefit.

Congman Picks On Wrong One

NHA TRANG, Viet Nam (AP) — A knife-wielding Viet Cong guerrilla picked the wrong man when he tried to kill special forces Capt. William D. Maples, leading a combat patrol on the island of Phu Quoc.

The patrol had made contact with an enemy unit when a guerrilla, hidden in the underbrush, sprang at Maples and the two battled out of view from the rest of the patrol.

Maples suffered a slight wound but overpowered and killed his assailant.

Katzky Rents His New Uniform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, slated to become undersecretary of state, has no striped pants, the traditional garb of diplomats.

As attorney general, he wore striped pants and cutaway coat when he appeared before the Supreme Court.

"I rented them," he confided to a reporter one time.

Good Buys Include Cheese

You'll see a lot of Swiss cheese at your market now, for this is the peak supply season, points out the Agricultural Marketing Service.

The United States produces as much Swiss cheese as Switzerland itself produces — more than 100 million pounds a year. It ranks second to Cheddar in total U.S. Cheese production.

More than a hundred years ago — about 1850 — Swiss immigrants produced the first Swiss cheese in this country. Some of their descendants are still producing Swiss cheese.

Often called "King of the Cheeses," Swiss cheese is one of the most difficult kinds to make. Control of the quality and composition of the milk, propagation and use of the essential bacterial starters, and the details of manufacture are complicated procedures. They require the services of a skilled cheesemaker. Also, its successful manufacture requires special equipment.

There are only slight differences between the manufacture of Swiss cheese in the United States and in Switzerland.

Much of the cheese made in the United States is marketed after curing for three or four months. The minimum is two months.

Most of the cheese exported from Switzerland is cured for six to 10 months and has a more pronounced flavor.

You can identify Swiss cheese easily by the large eyes — a half to an inch in diameter and from one to three inches apart.

The eyes begin to form when the cheese is about three weeks old. Eye formation is controlled to some extent by regulating the temperature of the curing room.

Swiss cheese is high in protein, so good to keep your energy going in hot weather.

Crab And Rice Become Dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Travelers bring back good recipe ideas! A friend of ours, vacationing in San Juan, enjoyed a seafood, rice and tomato sauce dish that was on restaurant menus.

When she came home, she tried this combination using canned king crabmeat for the seafood and sent us directions for her version.

Nothing more than crusty bread, good butter and a salad is necessary with this crab and rice combination. After that, serve a delicious dessert and you'll be all set.

Our traveling friend tells us that in Puerto Rico this seafood dish is often served in individual ceramic caseroles. But lacking these, we find the six-inch-wide glass individual pie plates serve well.

SPANISH-STYLE CRAB AND RICE
3 tps. olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, crushed
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup long-grain rice

MRS. JACK PERRYMAN AND CHRISTINE

Kitchen Utensil Aids German Cooking Time

By JO ANN PHINIZY

In the opinion of Mrs. Jack Perryman, 2511 Larry, a pressure cooker is the handiest thing since apron pockets.

As she explained, "They're fabulous; there's nothing you can't cook in one, and they save countless kitchen hours."

Mrs. Perryman, who is from Worms on the Rhine, Germany, not only keeps her own pressure cooker within easy reach, she sent one to her mother. It wasn't long before her mother reported that it changed her pattern of cooking.

"In Germany," Mrs. Perryman said, "it takes hours to prepare even the simplest of meals. For example, Mother always has boiled meat and dumplings for Sunday dinner. Cooking the meat usually takes about three hours and constant watching.

SAVES TIME

"With the pressure cooker, Mother now cooks the meat in the time between Mass and church. And it takes no time at all for the vegetables."

Mrs. Perryman came to West Texas in 1956 and discovered several other differences between Texan and German cooking. On a planned Christmas visit, she is going to introduce some pure Texas cooking to her European relatives.

"It isn't customary to fry chicken in Germany," she said. "Over there, it's always stuffed and baked. And for some reason, they have never thought to eat fresh blackeye peas; instead the peas are dried first and cooked next year."

"And my parents don't know it yet, but there's an easier way to cook pinto beans. They've always made a bean soup using ham hock, vegetables and a flour thickening. I'm sure they will like the Texas version."

FAIR EXCHANGE

The Christmas trip the Perrymans are planning will be a fair exchange of cooking techniques.

Mrs. Perryman says that there is no German cooking like her mother's. She is especially looking forward to eating Sauer-Braten and Potato Dumplings.

Perryman, manager at Firestone Stores, agrees with his wife and says his only defense is to go on an extensive diet before they arrive in Germany, and another when they return.

For four-year-old Christine, this will be the first time she has seen her grandparents. Besides eating real German food, she will enjoy having her stocking filled by St. Nicholas and the family dinner and gifts on the night of Christkind.

Mrs. Perryman, vice president of the International Wives Club, says that fishing and water skiing are the perfect ways to spend a family weekend.

In selecting her recipes, Mrs.

Pumpkins Enliven Day

Canned pumpkin is available all year round, and you may have some in your freezer. If your small fry like pumpkin pie, they'll probably enjoy this pudding.

¼ cup milk
1 tsp. butter
¾ cup mashed cooked pumpkin
¾ tsp. each cinnamon, nutmeg and ginger

Beat egg slightly; slowly stir in the hot pumpkin mixture. Turn into 4 small custard cups placed in a pan of hot water; have water come to level of pumpkin mixture. Bake in a moderate (350 degrees); oven until knife inserted in center comes out clean — 30 minutes. Cool. Serve with whipped cream.

New Cookie Surprises Company

There's nothing more fun than a plate full of crunchy cookies that appears out of nowhere, when guests drop in.

Apricot Chews are a marvelous combination of America's favorite foods — rich, fruit laden preserves — apricot flavored, in this case — butter, peanut butter and rice cereal.

The apricot preserves, which lend a genuine fresh-from-the-orchard flavor, are warmed and blended with the butter and peanut butter. The cereal is then gently stirred in. The mixture is packed into a pan and chilled, to be cut into squares and served when desired. Twisted or woven candy strings add a dainty and decorative top knot.

Sound like fun? You can bet it is. Apricot Chews are delicious, too. Try serving them to your teenagers and receive the unbiased approval of the In-crowd.

APRICOT CHEWS

¾ cup apricot preserves
½ cup peanut butter
2 tps. butter
4 cups crisp rice cereal
Heat together, stirring constantly, the preserves, peanut butter and butter until well blended. Stir in cereal. Pack into a buttered 8x8x2-inch pan. Chill until set. Cut into squares.
Note: Decorate top with braids made from candy strings.

CELEBRITY RECIPES

Kennedy Compound Provides Cookies

JOAN KENNEDY

Joan Kennedy, wife of Senator Ted Kennedy, has a shelf full of recipes for cakes, pies, cookies and other goodies with which to surprise her husband and two children. And when the Kennedy cousins come visiting, oh, boy, the run on sugar and spice and everything nice is phenomenal.

All Kennedys love children. Involved as they are in the deadly serious business of world affairs, they relax best when surrounded by their broods, when sharing the happy moments that only children know how to give.

And stuffing yourself, and every child within reach, full of spicy gingerbread sweets every occasion. Try Joan Kennedy's own special way with this old favorite and see for yourself:

JOAN KENNEDY'S GINGERBREAD

Start by greasing a 9x9x2-inch pan and lining the bottom with waxed paper, and heating the oven to 350 degrees.

Sift together two-and-a-half cups of flour, one-and-a-half teaspoons of soda, a teaspoon each of cinnamon and ginger, half a three-fourths teaspoon of salt.

In a large electric-mixer bowl, at medium speed, mix half a cup of shortening and half a cup of sugar. Add one egg and continue beating until the mixture is light and fluffy. Then add a cup of molasses.

With the beater at low speed now, beat in alternately the flour mixture in fourths and a cup of hot water in thirds, beating just until smooth.

Turn into the pan and bake 50 to 55 minutes. Cool the cake if you can stand to wait that long, then stand out of the way of the stampede.

Tips Given In Thawing Meat Cuts

Frozen meats can be cooked starting while they are still frozen, but, how long will it take to thaw them if you want to cook them after they have thawed or defrosted?

Defrosting in the refrigerator will take a large roast four to seven hours per pound. A small roast will defrost in the refrigerator at three to five hours per pound. An inch-thick steak will take 12 to 14 hours.

Faster defrosting can be done at room temperature. It will take two to three hours per pound for the large roast. For the small roast, allow one to two hours a pound. That inch thick steak will thaw in two to four hours.

LBJ Finds News Formula Suited To His Personality

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one doubts it, President Johnson has fixed upon a semi-informal pattern for news conferences that offers something for everyone. Finding the formula best suited to his personality and talents has been a lengthy and often taxing chore for Johnson. From all accounts, he approached the ideal Wednesday at what was officially labeled as press conference No. 74. Everyone seemed to come away at least partly satisfied — the reporters who cover the White House daily, the newsmen who drop by occasionally and the radio and television networks.

MORE FORMAL
 President John F. Kennedy preferred more formal, televised news conferences, usually held in the State Department auditorium. As a practical politician, Johnson knew such sessions suited Kennedy down to the shoelaces. But he did not think — and perhaps rightly so — that the same formula would work for him.

Johnson's first inclination, as demonstrated at his first presidential news conference in December 1963, was to meet with the regular White House reporters in his oval office, perhaps over coffee cups, to "bat the breeze."

That was fine with newsmen covering Johnson on a full-time basis.

HOP SCOTCH
 But the idea met with less than enthusiastic approval from the many reporters who must hop scotch all over town each day — and who aren't likely to be at the White House at the precise moment the President decides to have a coffee hour.

The format also was resisted by the television and radio networks, accustomed since the Eisenhower administration to beaming news conferences live into homes all across the land.

COMPLAINTS
 For more than two years, Johnson experimented — and weighed the complaints. He tried so many different types of news conferences in so many different settings that it seemed nothing remained untested. However, Johnson arranged a conference that differed in one or more respects from all those that came before — and it did offer something for everyone.

The setting, to his taste, was relatively intimate — the Cabinet room which was spacious enough because the big coffin-shaped table had been removed for refinishing.

'BRIEFING'
 Also, there was an advance announcement so any accredited reporter could attend. The White House insisted the session be billed ahead of time as a news "briefing" rather than a conference. But the official transcript labeled the session as a "press conference."

Johnson touched other bases, too. He permitted live radio broadcasts, which did not intrude inasmuch as technical equipment was set up out of sight in a nearby corridor. Moreover, the President granted a concession to television. One film camera was set up squarely in front of his rostrum. This recorded the entire proceedings for delayed broadcast.

HOME GROUNDS
 From the standpoint of television viewers, this posed only one objectionable feature. The camera was focused always on the President and — for all they could see — no one else was in the room.

With all the difficulties, the semi-intimate news conference seems here to stay during the Johnson administration.

The time may come, and perhaps not far off, when live television cameras can operate unobtrusively in front of the presidential desk — along with live radio microphones.

But, whatever happens, Johnson has decided he wants to meet the press on his home grounds — not the State Department auditorium favored by Kennedy. From that, there will be no turning back.

Rusk Planning To Sound Out Red Policy

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk plans to sound out Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko tonight for any signs of change in Kremlin foreign policy on Viet Nam and other outstanding issues.

Some U.S. experts believe Moscow may feel freer to deal with the West now that Red China's purge is damaging Peking's standing in the Chinese-Soviet rivalry for leadership of the Communist world.

According to this theory, the Soviets have been locked into a rigid position toward the United States in recent times because of Chinese charges that Moscow is conspiring with communism's enemy — the United States. Now that the Kremlin's star is rising in the Red camp, these experts feel, Soviet leaders should feel less restricted by Peking's challenge.

SOFTENING
 Gromyko himself has shown no public softening since his arrival Sept. 18 for the U.N. General Assembly. He and other Communists have accused America of aggression in Viet Nam.

Rusk's meeting with Gromyko tonight, at dinner in Rusk's Waldorf Tower suite, was the first opportunity for such a high-level canvassing of views by representatives of the two governments since the two met here a year ago. At that time massive U.S. military action in South Viet Nam was relatively new and China's Red Guard rampage was still in the future.

INDICATOR
 One indicator of the importance Rusk attached to the meeting was a strict secrecy edict. The secretary of state, who sometimes equates successful diplomacy with quiet diplomacy, told aides and newsmen nothing would be given out on the substance of the talks, publicly or otherwise.

The advance opinion by the U.S. delegation here is that Gromyko will not press the Viet Nam issue to the point of linking it to all other items. The Soviets are expected to give their usual avowal on behalf of Hanoi — and go on to discuss other matters.

INTEREST
 A sign of Soviet interest in talking over a broader range of topics is that Gromyko reportedly favors a second session with Rusk before the U.S. foreign affairs chief leaves New York at the end of the week. Rusk was expected to urge Gromyko to promote peace talks on Viet Nam. Moscow has rebuffed past efforts along this line.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣

Our current offering produced some surprising results when it was dealt in a recent team of four contest. South—despite the fact that he did not have a single face card—became the declarer at a slam contract after the opponents had opened the bidding.

North held the equivalent of a demand bid and when West opened ahead of him with one heart, the only way that he could announce his strength was by overcalling in the opponent's suit. The cue bid of two hearts forces partner to keep the bidding open until game is reached.

East had nothing in the way of defensive values and since he was loaded in West's suit, he decided to make it difficult for the opposition to get together by jumping directly to four hearts. Our objection to his strategy was that the vulnerability conditions were unfavorable for a profitable sacrifice should the opponents stop to double.

South was gratified at being relieved of the obligation to bid, however, his partner was unwilling to abandon the contest and he repeated his cue bid—this time at the five level. Despite his powerful holding, North's action was not warranted since he was virtually catapulting the partnership into a slam without knowing a thing about South's hand.

When South dutifully replied by bidding five spades, North persisted to a small slam and the auction subsided.

West opened the ace of hearts. Declarer ruffed in dummy and cashed the ace and king of trumps. When both opponents followed, the queen was permitted to remain at large.

The ace-king of clubs were played, followed by the ace of diamonds. A small club was ruffed by South with the five of spades, and when the suit divided three-three, North's long clubs were established. A diamond was led and the jack was finessed. When this play succeeded and the diamonds responded favorably, declarer claimed his contract — announcing that he would lead high diamonds and clubs until the defenders ruffed with the queen of spades. The trump trick was his only loser.

Altogether North and South were gratified to score a 980 point profit, it subsequently developed that they wound up with a net loss on the deal. When the hand was replayed at the other table, their teammates — holding the East-West cards—ended up in a contract of four hearts doubled by North.

The bidding had proceeded in an identical manner until East bid four hearts. North elected to try for a sure profit by doubling and South found no reason to disturb his partner's decision.

The defense took two spades, two diamonds, two clubs, and a club ruff to record a four trick defeat and an 1,100 point profit which more than offset the value of the slam contract at the other table.
