Grilling Leslie Bacon About Capitol Bombs

SEATTLE (AP) — Leslie Bacon, the young peace activist, was questioned Saturday for the first time about the March 1 bombing of the U.S. Capitol during a federal grand jury investigation that was delayed one hour by a bomb threat.

Direct questioning about the Capitol bombing was reported by Miss Bacon's attorneys, who earlier had criticized government attorneys for conducting "a fishing expedition into anti-war activities" during the closed door proceedings. The 19-year-old girl took the stand Friday.

NO BOMB FOUND
The U. S. Courthouse was evacuated shortly after noon after a telephone caller said a bomb would explode in 90 minutes. No bomb was found during a search, police said.

The hearing resumed after the delay and, after hearing about 3½ hours testimony, recessed until 10 a.m. Sunday.

Under the ground rules of the hearing, Miss Bacon's attorneys are not permitted to accompany her before the jury. She leaves the hearing room after each question, repeats it and gives her proposed answer to the lawyers, and then returns to testify.

EIGHT HOURS
She spent nearly eight hours testifying Saturday.

After the evacuation, attorney Jeffrey Steinborn told newsmen Miss Bacon had been asked about the Capitol bombing in connection with which she is being held as a material witness.

Steinborn called the grand jury investigation "a clear attempt to deal with stopping anti-war activities."

Steinborn earlier said he was "unable to perceive" any relation between the bombing and questions directed at the girl.

"I'm concerned that the U.S. attorneys are not asking anything about the bombing but rather about anti-war activities. It's a fishing expedition into anti-war activities," said Steinborn.

He said the grand jury was being "led astray" by the questioning, which he termed "absolutely illegal" if it did not concern the bombing.

Saturday's session before the grand jury followed 2½ hours of testimony given by Miss Bacon the day before. The government has indicated she would be released from the current arrest warrant when questioning is finished.

FREE RIDE
Miss Bacon was flown to Seattle late Thursday after being arrested in Washington, D.C., and held under $100,000 bond as a material witness in the March 1 bombing.

The government announced Wednesday that Miss Bacon had been taken into custody as a material witness in the early morning blast that demolished a men's room, a barber shop and adjacent rooms in the Senate side of the Capitol.

Miss Bacon has not been named as a defendant in the bombing and the government has not explained why an investigation is being conducted by the Seattle grand jury.

Texas Doctor Kills Wife, Son, Himself

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A doctor who was under psychiatric care killed his wife, a son and himself Friday night. Earlier, he wounded another son, two daughters and his wife's mother, police said.

The dead were Dr. Lonnie Deadrick Jr., 40; his wife, Ruth, 39, and a son, Lonnie III, 10. The couple had been married 15 years.

DR. LONNIE DEADRICK

In critical condition with gunshot wounds Saturday were three other Deadrick children, Joyce Louise, 14, Constance, 7, and Paul Marcus, 8 months. Also critically wounded was Mrs. Veola Edwards, 56, Mrs. Deadrick's mother.

UNSIGNED
Friends said the doctor gave up his practice here to study psychiatry in Houston. Ironically, he had been under psychiatric care for more than two years, officials said.

Police said they found an unsigned note, apparently written by Deadrick, on a table in the doctor's home along with six pictures of Mrs. Deadrick—and two pairs of scissors.

One of the photographs had been shredded with scissors, officers said.

SEEMED UPSET
Neighbors said Dr. Deadrick did not seem upset when they saw him on the day of the slayings.

One friend, Skeet Gatlin, said he had talked with Deadrick many times in the past, but there was never an indication that he might do something like this.

Big Spring Week
... with Joe Pickle

Without fanfare, an oil boom of sorts may be building up southeast of Big Spring. G. E. Kadane & Son No. 1 Morgan Ranch is acknowledged to be a discovery, although it had difficulty with water in one section. Kadane No. 1 Flanagan, half a mile to the east gives promise of being a good well with pay in possibly two Wolfcamp zones the Leonard and the Spraberry. The same is true of the Champlain No. 1 Flanagan, two miles east of No. 1 Morgan Ranch. Although it has been drilled tight (no reports given out), unofficial information is that it has flowed at the rate of 15 barrels per hour.

Things were humming here over the weekend. The Suez Temple brought around 1,000 to town for the Spring ceremonial. About 350 area people frolicked in an area square dance conclave, and another 100 were on hand for the meeting of Gideons and their wives. So the welcome mat was out — and that's one carpet that improves the more it is used.

Adding to this influx of people should be hundreds of others today when the annual matched and jackpot roping contests of the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo is unveiled at 2 p.m. in Rodeo Bowl. Remmie Sewalt, who has won the last two years, defends his title against Glenn Franklin, three times a world champion.

Nixon Says Nation In Midst Of Strong Economic Upturn

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon said Saturday that demonstrators seeking peace abroad have no right to "break the peace at home," and he called some criticism of wire-tapping "political demagoguery."

He also said the economy is in a strong upturn although it can zig and zag.

In a far-ranging news conference on domestic matters, Nixon said in addition: he is likely to ask Congress to guarantee private loans to aid financially troubled Lockheed Aircraft Corp., very great strides are being made for black Americans in such fields as minority enterprise, he is against legalizing marijuana and he sees nothing to gain by calling a national conference on unemployment.

tion and answer session was on the lawn outside the entry to Nixon's home overlooking the Pacific. On a chilly overcast day with the temperature in the high 50s, the President appeared near a gnarled pine tree against a background of shrubs and a bed of blue flowers, in a blue sports jacket and darker blue slacks.

The chief executive said he has no plans to meet with any of the thousands of demonstrators who have threatened to disrupt traffic and shut down government offices in Washington next week.

"Now, with regard to the demonstrators," he said, "when I say that I will not be intimidated, and the Congress will not be intimidated, I am simply stating the American principle that while everybody has a right to protest peacefully, that policy in this country is not made by protests. Those who make policy must, of course, listen and then they must weigh all the other facts and then do what they think is right."

Mrs. Horace F. Jarrett, 413 Edwards, died at 9:30 p.m. Saturday at Hall-Bennett Hospital from injuries she sustained in a two-car collision on Hwy. 350 near the entrance to Mt. Olive Cemetery two hours earlier. This is the first traffic fatality this year on county roads.

In serious condition Saturday night as a result of the wreck were Horace F. Jarrett, 72, the victim's husband; Mrs. Mary L. Lawrence, 67; and James L. Harris, 51, Route 2.

Mrs. Lawrence and Jarrett are being treated at Medical Center Memorial Hospital for fractures, lacerations and internal injuries. Harris is being treated for similar injuries at Cowper Clinic and Hospital.

According to Texas Highway Patrolman Arvin Henry, investigating officer, all of the persons involved in the collision had to be freed from the wreckage of their automobile, with it taking some time to free Harris from his vehicle.

Harris was alone in his car at the time of the accident. Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Jarrett were passengers in the car driven by Jarrett, who was apparently attempting to turn from the highway into the cemetery entrance at the time of the accident, according to Patrolman Henry.

Rogers Opens Peace Mission With Visit To Saudi Arabia

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers began his Middle East mission Saturday evening with a message from President Nixon expressing U.S. willingness "to play any reasonable and useful role toward achieving a durable peace."

Flying into this desert kingdom capital from Ankara, Rogers spoke of the peace efforts that will take him on Sunday to Jordan, then to Lebanon, Egypt and Israel.

Rogers said at the airport on his arrival that the major aim of his visit is to advance the cause of peace and stability in the area "but no one can underestimate the obstacles that lie ahead."

tary police with machine guns mounted on jeeps.

ROYAL FUN
Rogers and his party stepped into royal hospitality which was cordial and warm as was the 93 degrees of heat.

Sunday papers barely mentioned Rogers' visit, however, and Rogers drove to the state palace virtually unnoticed.

The secretary of state is stopping here slightly less than 24 hours—mixing private talks with ceremonial functions in his honor by his lavishly hospitable royal host, Faisal.

Ways to narrow Israel-Egypt ian differences over reopening the Suez Canal are a main item in Rogers' discussions with Mideast leaders and the news out of Egypt indicated the road ahead is a rocky one.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt in a May Day Speech declared he had no interest in Israel's plan but "I am interested in the U.S. stand and I shall press Mr. Rogers to define it in frank, clear-cut terms."

Sadat emphasized that Egyptian forces must cross the Suez Canal to maintain sovereignty when Israel troops make a partial withdrawal.

PERSONAL LETTER
Rogers told Arab dignitaries, dressed in their traditional flowing robes, that he is delivering a personal letter of best wishes from Nixon to King Faisal.

"The people of the Middle East must find ways to achieve peace, a real and just peace and a durable peace," he said, "and the United States is willing to play any reasonable and useful role in helping to achieve those worth objectives."

"That is the message that President Nixon has asked me to convey to the Middle East."

Abilene Rock Festival Expected To Lure Crowd

ABILENE, Tex. (AP)—About 1,000 tickets had been sold by Saturday night for Sunday's rock festival southwest of Abilene.

Don Nicholas, promoter, said he expects about 2,000 people at the 15-band festival but said some estimates have run as high as 10,000.

The festival, in wheat fields off U.S. 77 just outside the city limits will be patrolled by more than 100 state and county law officers.

Narcotics agents also will be on hand.

"They (the officers) have advised me they will be there for the protection of the county and the state as well for me," Nicholas said.

The area where the bands will play covers about 30 acres. Another 90 acres have been set aside for parking.

Also on the site will be sanitation facilities plus several concessions.

The bands will perform on an 18 by 30 foot stage built on two flatbed trucks donated to the festival.

CAN YOU SPELL 'KALEIDOSCOPE?'

Maridene Margolis Can--And Wins

For the second time, the Howard County champion speller is also the winner of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Regional Spelling Bee.

Maridene Margolis, 13, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Margolis, spelled down champions from 20 other counties at Smylie Wilson Junior High in Lubbock Saturday afternoon, winning in the 20th round of the 19th annual spelloff.

She won an expense-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee finals in Washington, D.C. June 7-11.

COPS LOVING CUP
The only other time a Howard County entrant won the regional title was in 1965 when Don Hickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hickson, captured the loving cup.

At the county level, when she spelled down Scott Sullivan after a prolonged standoff, Maridene won a plaque Saturday she added the champion's loving cup for herself and a travelling trophy for her school, Goliad Junior High.

SCARED TO DEATH
"I couldn't believe it," said Maridene when she defeated Freddy Garbary, Lubbock, in the final round.

"I was scared to death when we started, and I stayed scared."

It appeared that she had the title wrapped up on the 19th round when Freddy stumbled on "panacea," but then so did Maridene. Under the rules, a new word is given and this time Freddy misspelled "chattel," which Maridene fielded with perfection, then went on to spell the winning word, "kaleidoscope."

BACK TO BOOKS
About Washington, Maridene was somewhat awed.

"I don't know," she mused, "but I've got a lot of studying to do."

Dr. Margolis, who with Mrs. Margolis, David and Glenn, were on hand to lend moral support to Maridene, said her victory presents a problem. The family had vacation plans set for a tour of New England after Maridene was to participate in the state U.H. music finals for flute solo June 11-12.

But, said Dr. Margolis, this is such a pleasant problem.

Maridene may find her experience something like Don Hickson's. Looking back, he said "my participation in the National Spelling Bee was one of the most memorable events of my life. The Bee gave me a goal to work toward, and helped me learn the value of perseverance. The things I remember most about the Washington trip were the excitement and competition of the Spelling Bee, and the opportunity to meet other boys and girls my age from all over the country, also, visiting with my congressman and seeing the Smithsonian Institute."

Don currently is a computer science major sophomore at the University of Texas and works part-time for the secretary of the state Senate.

Prior to the regional finals, Maridene was a guest with other contestants at a luncheon given by the Avalanche-Journal. She was welcomed by Dr. Cecil Green, director, and heard a recording by Rep. George Mahon commending all the contestants and inviting the winner to his office in Washington.

Pronouncer for the regional finals was Mrs. Bonnie McCutcheon, Lubbock. On the way to her title, Maridene spelled gimmick, carass, culprit, pallid, squallid, facial, cinnamon, limousine, sundry and jeopardy.

Webb Student Pilot Presented ATC Award

A student in undergraduate pilot training class-72-04 recently received the Air Training Command To Promote Safety (TOPS) Award.

2nd Lt. Terry A. Cannon received the award for his contribution to the base aircraft accident prevention program.

On Feb. 16 the lieutenant was performing duties of observer at mobile control on runway 17R. During that time, the pilot of a T-37 trainer aircraft on takeoff leg was unable to raise the landing gear. The aircraft was subsequently cleared for a closed pattern and an immediate landing.

Midland Job Funds Granted

AUSTIN (AP) — A $1,643,250 federal grant was approved Friday to operate the Economic Opportunity Development Program (San Antonio).

The addition of $100,000 in unexpended funds gives the agency $1,841,859 for programs through next March 31.

The programs include helping 3,000 youths acquire job skills and money for the planned parent-ent, which is working to reduce an infant mortality rate 45 per cent higher than the national average and an illegitimate birth rate of 8.5 per cent.

Other federal grants announced by George Taylor, director of the Texas office of Economic Opportunity, include:

- $328,983 for a legal services program in San Antonio.
- $42,897 for a head start program in Mineral Wells.
- $36,793 to continue anti-poverty programs in Marshall and Carthage.
- $32,900 for a neighborhood program in Midland which includes job training and job and welfare referrals.
- $18,878 for head start programs in Laredo.
- $29,561 for home management courses, job counseling and a well-baby clinic in Reeves County (Pecos).
- $25,318 for Pecos County (Fort Stockton) to maintain a neighborhood center, which includes a health clinic, club for the aged and nutrition and citizenship classes.
- $40,775 for a summer head start program in Marfa.

While the aircraft was on final, Lt. Cannon noted that the nose gear was cocked at a near right angle. He brought this observation to the attention of the senior controller in time to direct the aircraft to go around. Had he failed to detect the position of the nose wheel when he did, an aircraft accident and personal injury could have occurred.

Following the discovery, single runway operation was initiated, the runway was foamed, and the aircraft landed without further incident. In addition, during the course of single runway operation while T-37 aircraft were being recovered on another runway, Lt. Cannon assisted the recorder in monitoring these recoveries so that every aircraft was logged down properly.

Helms Sentence Due On Monday

BEAUMONT (AP) — The jury which convicted Billy Ray Helms of murder Friday in the 1969 shooting death of Mrs. Mary Montgomery will deliberate his punishment Monday.

Helms, 38, of Lubbock, was the second man convicted. Jimmy Howard Cross was sentenced to 20 years last year.

A third defendant, Charles Sykes Jr., 28, goes on trial Monday.

Mrs. Montgomery was shot and killed by a fusillade of bullets fired from a passing car as she stood on a Beaumont street.

CRMWD Grows With Demand And With Area In 20 Years

On a hot, dusty Sunday afternoon 20 years ago, hundreds of people gathered on the banks of the dry Colorado River near the Scurry-Borden line to symbolically turn the first earth for a dam, the key element in a new concept for West Texas water supply.

It was a year before the newly formed Colorado River Municipal Water District began delivering water, but in the intervening years a lot has happened.

For one thing, the district has pumped 186,345,284,000 (billion) gallons to its member cities and to other municipal and industrial customers. It has taken $36,100,531 in revenues. It has issued $61,150,000 in bonds payable solely out of revenues and has added to this $2,941,659 of its own earnings for improvements and extensions. It has put in reserve, as a safety factor required under the bond indentures, $3,625,000.

EXPANDS

Instead of the three member cities of Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder, the district now serves nine cities in the area, and it has, when supplies are available, 10 other customers — industries and oil field secondary recovery projects.

Obviously, the district has expanded from its original concept of a lake with pipelines to the member cities. With the completion of the latest enterprise designed to add 24 million gallons a day of well water to the system supply, the CRMWD will have 381.6 miles of pipeline, ranging from a short section of 12-in. pipe up to the 42-in. diameter from Lake E. V. Spence to Big Spring. The arterial network stretches 161.42 miles at its greatest length between Lake Spence near Robert Lee and to a point southwest of Monahans.

Besides this, there are 19.46 miles of pipeline in the well field gathering lines.

LAKE THRICE FILLED

Lake J. B. Thomas, which symbolized the start 20 years ago, has filled to overflowing three times in the intervening period, but an insatiable thirst of West Texas, plus a skein of drought years, has pulled the reserve to less than 10,000 acre-feet. Lake Spence, completed in 1969, has so far been the victim of drought and most of its modest catch of some 25,000 has been withdrawn. Lake Thomas has a capacity of 204,000 acre-feet; Lake Spence 488,000 acre-feet.

The water produced from all sources through Dec. 31, 1970, is equal to about two and a half times the maximum content of Lake Thomas.

The initial bond issue to build the lake and pipeline system to the cities was for $11,750,000 in 1951; the second $4,600,000 to expand the western end of the system in 1958; $2,750,000 in 1963 to build the line to Sun Oil in northern Coke County; $30,000,000 in 1966 and $4,500,000 in 1969 to construct Lake E. V. Spence, and pipelines and supply stations; $800,000 in 1970.

SUPPLIES

The district has two lakes — at the moment critically low — with the capacity of 692,000 acre-feet, or more than 240 billion gallons. Two well fields (Martin County and now Ward County), have an aggregate of 33,000,000 gallons a day capacity from 45 wells. (Wells in Odessa, Snyder, and near Big Spring annually add 350 million or more gallons in periods of peak demand.) Not included in the total are wells which supply 3,000,000 gallons a day of salt water to SACROC.

To deliver water through the system, CRMWD has 57 transmission pumps with a combined 31,400 horsepower located in 14 separate stations. These pumps can deliver 115,000,000 gallons a day.

To make operations more flexible and provide a margin of safety for the cities, the district has five lined earthen terminal storage reservoirs holding 205,000 gallons, plus eight on-line steel tanks holding 5,550,000 gallons. Recently, the district added Moss Creek-Lake southeast of Big Spring to its storage, and, with a raised spillway, it now has a capacity of 3,300 acre-feet or 1,075 billion gallons.

to construct the salt water well system to serve SACROC; and $6,750,000 in late 1970 to develop the Ward County well field and connect it with supply lines.

REPAY ONE FOURTH

The district has repaid $15,326,000 in bonds through 1970, leaving $45,824,000 outstanding.

During its first 20 years, the district has pioneered on several fronts. It managed to divert one watershed into another (Bull Creek into the Colorado River); it transferred 1,501,142,000 gallons of lake water into dewatered zones of a well field so water would be nearer the major point of peak demand in the summer. It spent $808,000 to intercept and dispose of highly mineralized water to insure better quality water in Lake E. V. Spence. It used micro-wave to control or automate most pump stations; it employed cathodic protection to the supply lines. It installed computer controls in the central station at Big Spring. It pumped water 1,000 feet uphill to serve thirsty cities, something most said 20 years ago was impractical. It has softened rates to the cities by using oil company revenues, while adding multiplied millions of dollars and protecting hundreds upon hundreds of oil-connected jobs.

WATER COSTS

Cost of water to the cities has averaged 16.59 cents per 1,000 gallons to Big Spring, 21.33 cents to Odessa; 16.05 cents to Snyder. The district also has contracts to serve Stanton, Midland, and San Angelo, and Rotan is served through Snyder and Coahoma through Big Spring.

J. B. Thomas, Fort Worth, retired president and chairman of the board of Texas Electric Service Company, and who conceived and midwifed the idea of a multi-city water supply, was asked last week what he estimated the cost of the water would be, had the cities developed it individually.

"What water?," he asked cryptically.

In light of severe rationing in 1951-52 (car washing was prohibited and yard watering severely restricted or banned), his question seems today a logical answer.

What lies ahead "none can say, but to quote Mr. Thomas again in address on the occasion of the 20th anniversary: "You're not through yet."

Meador Gets Nod As Chief

A. D. Meador, fire marshal, has been recommended by City Manager Larry Crow to fill the vacancy left by retiring Fire Chief H. V. Crocker. Crow announced his recommendation Friday afternoon.

"I also recommended Meador as fire chief to the city commissioners and the city manager in my letter of resignation," said former-Chief Crocker.

Meador joined the Big Spring fire department March 1, 1938, and earned the rank of captain.

He was promoted from that rank to fire marshal April 1, 1959.

"I was very happy to hear of his (Mr. Crow's) recommendation and so were the boys that I have worked with for so long," said Meador.

"I don't think we will have any problems," he added, "we have a fine department."

Meador also said that he and some department captains are scheduled to meet with Crow Monday.

"I feel that someone from the department will be named to replace me as fire marshal," said Meador. "Of course, all of this is subject to the approval of the city commissioners."

Perfect Score Racked Up By Student Pilot

For the first time ever at Webb AFB, a student in undergraduate pilot training has completed all evaluated courses in the academics program without missing a question. He is 2nd Lt. John W. Lieberherr, a member of Class 72-01.

S. W. LIEBERHERR

According to Maj. L. D. Eggen, chief of Academics, this is the first time the 100 percent score has been accomplished here.

"We thought perhaps it might be a first in Air Training Command," he continued, "but they say that one other student has scored 100. It is a formidable feat anyway you look at it," the major said.

"Lt. Lieberherr has answered 500 questions on 14 examinations without missing a one. This covers all the 13 evaluated courses of academics and includes 271 hours of classroom time."

Racking up first is not new to Lt. Lieberherr, however. He was the first student to take both the BS degree in mechanical engineering and the MS degree in aeronautical engineering at the same graduation ceremony at Stanford University. This outstanding achievement was accomplished in January, 1970.

Lt. Lieberherr completed officer training school at Lackland AFB, and entered UPT program here in July, 1970. He is married to the former Miss Weegie Lazear, a native of California.

A special certificate, commemorating his academic accomplishment will be presented to Lt. Lieberherr, Maj. Eggen said.

Local Committee At Workshop

Pointers for historical preservation were the subject of a workshop attended last week in Lubbock by members of the Howard County Historical Survey Committee.

Attending from Big Spring were Mrs. Floyd Mays, chairman of the survey committee, Mrs. H. C. Stipp, Mrs. Jimmy Morehead, and Mrs. Akin Simpson.

The workshop constituted the 1971 regional meeting of county historical survey committees for this area. Five professional staff members of the State Survey Committee in Austin touched upon virtually every phase of historical preservation work.

Speakers were Miss Diana Files, state museum consultant; Wayne Bell, restoration architect; and Bob Watson, director of field operations.

The workshop was closed with a presentation by Truett Latimer, executive director of the agency, on "Current Legislation on Historical Preservation."

Wheatly Student Freed On Bail

HOUSTON (AP)—A Wheatley High School pupil has been released from jail on bail after several hundred fellow pupils protested his arrest by staying out of class. James Coleman, 19, was arrested at the predominantly Negro school Thursday and charged with assaulting a police officer. He had been held on $1,000 bond but pupils at the school raised money for a bail bondsman's fee.

MIXED DRINKS IN TEXAS Border Booze Fears Fade

EDITOR'S NOTE: Several legislators and Governor, satisfied in a vote to legalize open saloons in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, are now looking for the first time since prohibition. On the premise that one man's meat is another man's poison, Associated Press Big Spring Valley Correspondent Gary Garrison surveyed border businessmen to see whether they see Texas' new permissiveness as a threat to the prosperity of merchants and restaurateurs who have long looked for volume to the border-crossing U.S. traffic with its element of thirsty Texans. Here is his report.

By GARY GARRISON
Associated Press Writer
MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP)—Happy-Hour will be just as happy in Mexico despite the upcoming availability of cocktails in Texas. That was the consensus of operators of bars and dining places in Matamoros and Reynosa on Texas' border in the wake of Gov. Preston Smith's signing into law a bill enabling cities to legalize the sale of liquor by the drink. Three out of four establishments surveyed say they believe in the long run their business will improve because of increased tourist traffic predicted in Texas as a result of open saloons.

IT'LL WEAR OFF
"I am sure our volume will decrease," said Alonzo Gonzalez who operates a bar at the San Carlos Hotel in Reynosa. "I think our business will decrease for a while," Gonzalez said. He went on to say business will go up again in Mexico once the "newness" of liquor by the drink wears off.

Gonzalez, who estimates 70 per cent of his business comes from across the Rio Grande said he has no certain plans about what to do to counteract liquor by the drink, but he said some places in Reynosa plan to renovate their establishments in an attempt to draw more business across the river.

Wade Terrell, manager of the McAllen Chamber of Commerce, said liquor by the drink will have some effect on local residents who might prefer to stay in Texas for dinner if they could get a drink.

DIFFERENT CROWD
Terrell said he believes any loss suffered in Mexico would be made up by increased tourism in Texas as a result of the new liquor legislation.

"Our area has always felt that liquor by the drink will help the tourist business," Terrell said. "I think it will bring a different kind of people into the Lower Rio Grande Valley—people who will spend more money," said Mrs. Tina Ortega, owner of La Cucaracha in Reynosa. The place is one of the most popular restaurants in Reynosa.

Mrs. Ortega said liquor by the drink will bring more conventions to McAllen and that would mean more business for her. Most conventions held in Texas in the Lower Rio Grande Valley include a night in Mexico for a dinner and a floor show, and La Cucaracha is one of the most popular spots for such events.

Mrs. Ortega estimates 75 per cent of her business is from the United States. Most of her business is food. She noted that several years ago when beer became legal in Texas "it hurt for a few months, but then business picked up again."

is certain the Valley will get a proportionate share of the increase. Bosio also said the business in Matamoros generated by area residents probably won't drop because of drinks in Texas. One observer noted that there will probably be no more places to drink in Brownsville after open saloons are legal because of the numerous private clubs now in operation.

"GOOD FOR US"
"We think it will bring more people into the Valley and what is good for the Valley is good for us," said Raul Melguiso of Los Dos Republicas Cantina in Matamoros. The cantina is near the Matamoros Market and is one of the most popular drinking spots in the border city.

Garza estimated 75 to 80 per cent of his business comes from across the Rio Grande. "We hope it will help," Melguiso said.

Melguiso said most of his business is from customers from Texas. "We have a good business the year around from Brownsville and during the tourist season our business is even better," he noted.

Bombers Strike Red' Ambushers'

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. B52 bombers staged new raids in the A Shau Valley sector in the north Saturday in an attempt to strike at North Vietnamese troops who ambushed an American patrol. Three of the high flying bombers struck a mile and a half north of the ambush site and three more hit two miles south of it. They unloaded 180 tons of explosives on suspected North Vietnamese troop concentrations and underground bunker complexes believed used as bases by the ambush force. Results of the raids were not known.

PRIME TARGET
In the ambush Friday, five U.S. soldiers were killed and 10 wounded while on a reconnaissance mission just east of the A Shau Valley. It is a major North Vietnamese operating base along the Laotian border 28 miles southwest of Hue.

The May Day B52 raids in the A Shau region were accompanied by two other B52 strikes in the northwest corner of South Vietnam.

This corner of the country, like the A Shau, has been a prime target for the saturation raids of the B52s for the past week. It is a section, just below the demilitarized zone, where outposts of the Ho Chi Minh trail feed into South Vietnam.

A fifth B52 raid struck in the central highlands near Fire Base 6, a South Vietnamese outpost that was the site of heavy fighting early last month.

On the ground, only small actions were reported by the allied commands.

The May Day holiday, a workers holiday observed in both North and South Vietnam, passed uneventfully for the most part.

Nixon Wallops Wiretap Raps

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP)—President Nixon said Saturday his administration has authorized one-half the number of wiretaps as existed in the Kennedy administration and accused congressional critics of the FBI of engaging in "political demagoguery."

Asked at his news conference about a charge by Rep. Emmanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, that the country is heading for a police state, Nixon asked, "Where was he in 1961? Where was he in 1962? Where was he in 1963?"

"Today," he said, "there are one-half as many taps" as during that period when John F. Kennedy was president and Robert F. Kennedy attorney general "and ten times as many news stories about them."

There were less than 100 taps authorized then, he added, and less than 50 now.

"This is not a police state," he said, nor is it becoming one. He suggested that some of the critics "take a trip, a trip abroad I mean," to see what a real police state is like.

BULLSEYE FOR AN ARSONIST? — Fire left only two walls of the former New Generation Club. Fourth and Gregg, standing Friday night. Fire Chief A. D. Meador said that the blaze, which also burned telephone cables with 1,300 pairs of wire in to, undoubtedly was the work of arsonists.

Arson Suspected In Fire That Destroys Club Site

Arson is suspected in the Friday night fire which destroyed the building that had housed the beleaguered New Generation Club at Fourth and Gregg.

"It looked like it had been saturated with something and set off," said A. D. Meador, fire chief.

"The building was vacant," he added, and had a concrete floor and tile walls. "The only thing that could burn was the ceiling."

"The fire department inspected the building about a month ago. Gas and water had been turned off and the wiring was in conduits in the ceiling. The electricity was on, but this definitely was not an electrical fire."

"A fire department unit went by on its way to a small fire at 11:30 p.m. Friday and saw no sign of a fire. At 11:50 p.m. when we got there we saw thick black smoke and flames throughout the building.

"It looked like an oil, kerosene or inflammable liquid fire. We couldn't get close to it."

FEW INJURIES

Three units with 21 men were called to the fire and they laid seven lines. One fireman had a nail puncture in his foot, a second had a glass cut and the chief bruised his wrist when falling telephone lines struck him. An Alert ambulance was standing by, but was not required. The fire was under control by 2 a.m. Saturday.

"It's a heck of a way to start a chief's job," said Meador, on his first day as fire chief. "I have fought bigger fires, but I hate to do it on the first day."

The New Generation Club was not the only building to be damaged by the fire. The First Assembly of God Church, directly west, had light fire, smoke and water damage.

BURNS PHONE LINES

The blaze also disrupted telephone service to 1,300 patrons after two telephone cables were burned into.

"One of the cables contained 900 pair of wires and the other 400," said Harry Sawyer, manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone. "The Luther area could communicate between phones on that exchange but were isolated from the outside."

Crews were rushed into help local forces, and by Saturday evening cable splicers had restored service to virtually all lines.

ILL-FATED CLUB

The building had housed the New Generation Club which until recently was much in the news. Two men had refurbished the building to open a club for teenagers, but were blocked because they had no dance hall permit. While their application, which drew protests from several ministers and others, was being processed, police entered the building after hours and charged one of the operators with making alcoholic beverages available to minors. The club never got opened.

THE WEEK

individuals not yet apprehended. Previously billed were Orville Davis and Wittmer Jean Ballard.

This is the big week of the citywide cleanup, but several groups couldn't wait and got in a few licks Saturday. Here's hoping that enthusiasm is contagious and that every householder and businessman will enter into the spirit of the effort this week.

There is a good prospect that the city commission will start an ordinance on its way this week to raise the water rates 30 cents on the basic 3,000 gallons, and five cents a thousand on excess. Last week Odessa raised its rate 50 cents on the basic and five cents on excess.

Earlier Snyder, the other member city of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, had increased its rates to compensate for higher costs from a district occasioned by development of new well sources to beat the drought.

Incidentally, Odessa hosted a big party honoring directors of the CRMWD past and present, for their efforts to provide water for this section of West Texas during the past 20 years. The Texas Senate adopted a congratulatory resolution (No. 1045), offered by Sen. Pete Snelson, praising the district for "building a $61 million organization . . . without the use of a single tax dollar . . . to provide a constant source of water."

H. V. (Burr) Crocker was honored by the city commission and by colleagues last week for 41 years of service in the Big Spring fire department. 23 of them as chief. Upon his retirement, Burr, however, was far from burned out. His successor, A. D. Meador, got a baptism of fire with the blaze Friday night that destroyed the building at Fourth and Gregg, and, in the process, disabled 1,300 telephones.

This building had been offered as a possible site for a youth center, which was advanced another step at a meeting of some 250 youths at the amphitheatre last Monday. Now finding a home for a center, and when it gets off the ground, can be added to the list of problems.

Volunteers gathered in around $3,500 (when all reports trickled in) last Tuesday for the local chapter of the American Cancer Society. Around a thousand more is needed to meet the chapter budget for the year, so mail your investment to Box 2121.

Big Spring schools were notified by Cong. Omar Burleson that the district had been approved for a $333,523 entitlement, of federal impact funds, of which $116,761 will be paid immediately. The district had figured its entitlement was $451,037, but it had only counted on $316,846.

Howard County was listed among counties approved for emergency funds to repair land damage from wind erosion. Alas, it was entirely too dry to plow, and the aid will be of little benefit until we get a rain.

The Rev. Harlan (Steve) Birdwell was honored by the American Business Women's Association last week as its "Man of the Year." It's good for a man of the cloth to be the man of the year.

Young people were being cited for honors, too. Leading her class at Fortson was Gloria Dodd (95.25), followed by Connie Dunagan (93.56). At Lamesa, it was Debbie Parchman (95) and Joe Bill Peterson (94). Rodney Hammack, Fortson, won first in the UIL finals.

LBJ BATHROOM TOUR No Telling Who Might Call . . . Or When

AUSTIN (AP)—A telephone in the bathroom? Why not, if you're the former president of the United States there's no telling who might call . . . or when.

A group of Texas legislators' wives took a bus trip to the LBJ Ranch and unexpectedly got a personal tour from Lyndon Johnson of both the ranch and the house.

Here is an account of the House tour by Mrs. Betty Hanna, wife of Rep. Joe Hanna of Breckenridge.

"The president's bedroom contains three television sets, side by side, and three telephones. He also has piped-in oxygen at his bedside, a precautionary measure carried over from his heart attack.

"Also in his bedroom are a massage table, and in one corner were some golf balls, a practice putting game, and other golfing equipment. Western pictures adorn all his walls, along with pictures of his wife and grandchildren. He has a well-filled closet of suits and other clothing, including two pair of fancy cowboy boots. He discards his cast-off socks in little wadded up balls, just like any other man.

"His bathroom also has a telephone, numerous manly cosmetics, and a set of heat-curlers. No one asked if they were left there by his girls or his wife, or if he uses them to curl his long white hair in his currently adopted page-boy style.

"Mrs. Johnson, who was absent at the time, sleeps on pink sheets, with a pink satin and lace coverlet on her bed. She has a beautiful collection of china and gifts in shelves on her walls. Her closets are neat and orderly.

"The president pointed out a picture on her wall, which he said he gave her on their 35th wedding anniversary. The picture, which was on loan to the White House when the Johnsons were there, was owned by Texas Tech University. President Johnson said he tried to buy it from them, but they refused to sell it, and instead gave it to Mrs. Johnson, who had told her husband, it was the only gift she had ever asked for.

Eula Mae Etter, on behalf of the minor children of Bobbie Dale Travis, deceased, is the plaintiff of a $551,250 damage suit against Steere Truck Lines, Inc. and Border Road Construction Co. The suit is in connection with an Aug. 25, 1968 auto-truck collision which resulted in the death of Travis.

The second civil case set for trial involves a $21,250 damage suit in connection with an Oct. 28, 1970 auto collision. Loyd Bingham filed the suit against Porter Roosevelt Briggs Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur R. Pope are asking $52,029.30 in damages in connection with an Oct. 25, 1969 car-motorbike collision which resulted in the death of their son, Randall Pope. The suit, which has been filed against James Otis Skinner, is the final case set for trial.

Protesters Plan Traffic Tie-Ups

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President warned Saturday against law violations and the military prepared to move in up to 10,000 troops as thousands of demonstrators planned massive traffic tie-ups for Monday in a bid to halt the Indochina war.

The Defense Department said it acted at the request of the Justice Department "in response to the determination by the federal government that illegal conduct, breaches of the peace, and attempts to close down government services will not be permitted."

Marine, Army paratroop and other regular units at bases as far away as North Carolina were placed on alert.

The statement said that any troops brought in will be kept on federal property, outside the main city and out of sight, unless and until they are needed.

President Nixon told a California news conference the right to demonstrate for peace abroad "does not carry with it the right to break the peace at home." He asserted also that there is illegal conduct "we are prepared to deal with it. We will arrest those who break the law."

The President reiterated that neither he nor Congress will be intimidated by the protesters. And said as he has before "policy in this country is not made by protests."

Organizers of the protest said the aim is to keep government workers from their jobs by blocking key intersections on routes from the suburbs. They profess belief that such tactics can force an early end to the Indochina war—a theory challenged by many critics of the war, in and out of Congress.

Storms Bring Welcome Rain, Unwanted Hail

By The Associated Press
Scattered thundershowers began in the upper Texas Panhandle about mid-afternoon Saturday but most of Texas enjoyed clear to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures.

Some thunderstorms in the Lower Rio Grande Valley earlier in the day brought unwanted hail and welcome rain to that far-south section of the state.

Although a tier of Panhandle counties was under severe thunderstorm watch until 10 p.m., no turbulent weather was reported.

Clowns, Cars, Ceremonial Spell Success For Shriners

The Shriners colorful spring ceremonial of the Suez Temple Friday and Saturday was a success for spectators and participants alike.

The temple's 21st ceremonial was dedicated to Ted O. Groebel, Big Spring illustrious past potentate. Presiding over the rituals and festivities was Joseph W. Burrell, Midland, for many years a Big Spring corporate executive and businessman, the present potentate of the temple.

Highlight of the activities was the presentation of awards. The coveted Shrine ring went to Walter Johnson, James L. Neeley and Millard R. Meek both received the Shrine pin after a tie was declared by Potentate Burrell. The final award was the Groebel Jewel to Wayne Tollett. The potentate presented his card and a personal gift to each new Noble.

CLOWNS, CARS
Clowns, cars, motorcycles and excited youngsters all combined Saturday to spark the Shriners' parade. Youngsters and grown-ups stood along the parade route as the Shriners wended their merry way through Big Spring.

The highlight of the parade was the Big Spring motor patrol whose members pleased the crowd by performing fast-paced intersecting figure-eights, while guiding their motorcycles through the streets.

'HIPSHOT' WALT
Walter Johnson, a bejeweled 'hipshot' with a weight around his neck, drew a laughing response from the spectators. Johnson, a member of the Big Spring police department, was a candidate for a valuable ring awarded by the Shriners.

Clowns in varied attire, and on foot, mini-racers or minibikes were a favorite with the youngsters. Some paused to joke with children and allow them to see a clown up close.

Past potentates and other Shrine officials led the parade and lowly novices, carrying a rope symbolizing the tail of the parade, marked the end.

After the parade the Shriners adjourned to the Shrine Club for a barbecue luncheon, while the ladies luncheon was held at the Big Spring Country Club. The ceremonial really got down to business at 1:30 p.m. in the Howard County Junior College auditorium.

The new Nobles who completed their initiation and awarded their fezzes are Walter Johnson; Kenneth G. Patrick, P. D. Ausmus; Clayton Hicks, Jerry Mancill, Earl J. Richard, S. R. West, Russell De Vore, Millard R. Meek and Dean H. Lagerstrom, all of Big Spring.

Also Paul Fulmer and Eddie Fowler of San Angelo, Lew E. Allison, Abilene; David E. Grant, Coahoma; James L. Leeley and Eugene A. Truitt of Lamesa; and Buford P. Osteen, Midland.

The day was climaxed by a hospitality hour at Cosden Country Club from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m., followed by the ceremonial dance until 12:15 a.m. when the traditional breakfast concluded the day's festivities.

Pride People Pile Up Junk In Big Spring

A small mountain of trash has been collected in the first day of "Give A Hoot Week."

The Pride People and local civic groups started at 9 a.m. and worked on US 80 and US 87 until late in the day — "Major Clean-up Day."

The collected litter will be displayed until Wednesday as a reminder to Big Springers of how much trash has been accumulating around the city.

An unexpected find by the Men's Garden Club was a woman's white billfold — sans money. It was found on West Fourth Saturday morning and turned into the police. The billfold contained a voter registration certificate for Mrs. James N. Clark.

The groups participating in the Saturday clean-up project are: DeMolays, Big Spring Optimists, Civitans, Class 72-01 (The Buzzards) from Webb AFB, Hi-Y, Tri-Hi-Y, Key Club, ABCUB, Men's Garden Club, and the Boy Scouts. The Boy Scouts are headed by Dr. Paul Koshi and are working on "Save Our American Resources" (SOAR), the Scout National 1971 Conservation project.

Activities of "Give A Hoot Week" planned for today include requests by local churches to their congregations to help clean up Big Spring.

The activities for the remainder of the week include "Let's Clean Our Alleys" day on Monday. Pride People are asking citizens to do their part in cleaning the alleys and garbage can areas around their homes.

Tuesday is "Litter Alert" day. Local radio stations will signal litter alerts every 30 minutes and ask citizens to stop and pick up litter around them and properly dispose of it.

Wednesday is "Service Station" day. Tommy Gage's 12 Fina stations will offer to empty litter bags and will provide bags if needed.

Thursday, plans for the 1971 yard-of-the-month contest will be announced.

Friday the Pride People will clean up a lot in the vicinity of Third and Birdwell.

Saturday is "Paint-up, Fix-up" day. Big Springers will be asked to brighten up their own property by building or repairing garbage can racks and doing other repair work.

Fed Spending Will Absorb 'Peace Dividend' Until '75

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rising costs of present and proposed federal spending programs will eat up all the revenue gained from Vietnam troop withdrawals and economic growth until 1975, a Brookings Institution study indicated Saturday.

When the long awaited "peace dividend" does arrive it will be small, the report said — only about $17 billion by 1975, as compared with the $30 billion forecast in President Nixon's budget message.

SOCIAL SECURITY
And since most of the margin — $15 billion of it — would be in the form of a surplus in the Social Security trust fund, Congress is quite likely to have spent it in advance by further increases in Social Security benefits.

The report, a 336-page volume titled "Setting National Priorities: The 1972 Budget," was written by a former budget director, Charles L. Schultze.

and three other staff economists of the nonpartisan, nonprofit research institution, Edward R. Riedel, Alice M. Rivlin and Nancy H. Teeters.

In a program-by-program appraisal of Nixon's $229.2-billion spending program, and his projections for future years, the authors concluded that:

—The Federal Highway Trust fund will be building up a multibillion-dollar surplus in the mid-1970s because highway tax revenues will outrun the presently scheduled rate of highway building by $1 billion to $1.5 billion a year.

NEW HOUSING
—The goal of 25 million new housing units in the decade 1969-1978 will be met. The authors foresee 23,380,000 new dwellings that amount would represent a major upgrading in the quality of the housing stock.

—Nixon's economic assumption underlying his "full employment budget" — that national output will reach $1,065 trillion this year — would require an estimated 9 per cent rise in the money supply; and so rapid an increase seems doubtful.

—If the production goal is attained, accompanied by a substantial decline in unemployment, the advance might renew inflationary pressures "and cause a noticeably larger increase in prices than the projected 4 per cent."

In its survey of transportation outlays, the Brookings team suggested that the excess highway fund accumulations will be larger than present outlays for mass transit and high speed rail transportation combined. It suggested that Congress should weigh priorities in the transportation area in deciding what to do with the accumulating funds.

Barnes Mulls Big Overhaul Of Welfare

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, indicating he plans to propose new changes soon in Texas welfare programs, says the state's welfare system must be overhauled.

Barnes said he hopes to announce next week a $25 million saving in the state budget because of welfare reforms he believes can be instituted at once.

Speaking at a regional session of the Texas Municipal League Friday night, he did not elaborate on the reforms.

Barnes offered to "take on the federal government" on welfare problems. "I'm mad at the Democrats and Republicans alike," he said, "because they built this system."

He asserted the federal government has built a welfare system that the country cannot afford "and which perpetuates recovery through the fourth generation."

Texas, Barnes said, should defund federal orders to provide welfare to households that have an employable male, "even if the U.S. government takes Texas off the welfare rolls."

He suggested the state should build child care centers where mothers on welfare could place their children while they train in state schools for jobs.

If the mothers refuse, he said, they should be taken off welfare.

Barnes said he favors the federal government taking over the welfare system.

That would set the stage for weeks of fruitless bargaining, and the session would automatically end May 31 with no revenue in sight to pay for new spending.

THERE'S A CHANCE
But now there's a chance the two chambers might get together on taxes without even requiring any formal compromise talks.

"That's a reasonable proposition," confirmed an aide of Speaker Gus Mutscher, who is having his staff analyze the Senate's tax bill over the weekend.

A House decision whether to accept the Senate's $684.6 million two-year tax bill in lieu of the $604 million tax and tuition package passed by the House could come this week.

When the House passed its tax bill, Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and several senators criticized it for being too tight on corporations and too heavy on consumers.

FRUITLESS TAX FUSSING? The Bigger They Are, The Harder They Squall

AUSTIN (AP) — Politicians have predicted for months that the "conservative" House and the "liberal" Senate would deadlock and maybe force a special legislative session over business taxes.

The House would pass a tax bill laden with consumer taxes, so the reasoning went, and the Senate would pass a corporation profits tax.

That would set the stage for weeks of fruitless bargaining, and the session would automatically end May 31 with no revenue in sight to pay for new spending.

THERE'S A CHANCE
But now there's a chance the two chambers might get together on taxes without even requiring any formal compromise talks.

"That's a reasonable proposition," confirmed an aide of Speaker Gus Mutscher, who is having his staff analyze the Senate's tax bill over the weekend.

A House decision whether to accept the Senate's $684.6 million two-year tax bill in lieu of the $604 million tax and tuition package passed by the House could come this week.

When the House passed its tax bill, Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and several senators criticized it for being too tight on corporations and too heavy on consumers.

INCOME TAX
But when Senators debated taxes Wednesday, two members of what had been considered a 17-member liberal majority voted "no" and killed all efforts to pass a corporation income tax.

The result was a bill that is just about as tough on the consumer as the House bill. The two bills have in common a sales tax increase from 3.25 to 4 per cent and a motor vehicle sales tax jump from 3 to 4 per cent. While the House included new "consumer" taxes on amusements, stock transfers and hotel rooms, the Senate imposed a 2 cents per gallon tax increase and a 3 cents per pack cigarette tax increase.

"We sent them a much more balanced tax bill than they sent us," Mutscher aide said.

As for direct business taxes, the Senate approved a $1.25 increase per $1,000 of assets, in the corporate franchise tax and a beer tax hike from $4.30 to $6 per barrel. House members favored a 50-cent franchise tax to boost a jet fuel tax and new taxes on shell dredgers.

The House, of course, wanted to double-state college tuition for residents.

BUSINESS LOBBY
The Mutscher aide said the business lobby is very strongly for the Senate bill.

Mutscher has long been friendly with the beer industry, but the beer tax increase—though viewed as an attempt to harass the speaker—is not a hang-up with him," the aide said.

The speaker said as much Thursday after the Senate passed its bill, declaring the beer tax would "not cause an impasse."

Mutscher went to Fort Worth that night to address the Wholesale Beer Distributors convention, where he said he felt the beer and gasoline tax increases were "unfair and unnecessary."

SO WHAT?
Revenue from the Senate bill would be cut by $60 million or $70 million if the House failed to approve it by the two-thirds majority needed to put it into effect July 1, Barnes said Friday.

"So what—why spend that much?" a House official said. House members have approved new spending totaling $604 mil-

Sentencing Scheduled For Ex-Mooney Execs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sentencing is scheduled for June 2 for two former executives of a Kerrville aircraft firm convicted of stock fraud.

A federal jury returned the conviction verdict Friday night against Hal Francis Rachal of Midland and Edward B. Hunnicutt of Kerrville. The trial lasted six weeks.

Rachal was the founder and former president of Mooney Corp., a holding company, and Mooney Aircraft, Inc., a manufacturing firm. Hunnicutt was the former secretary-treasurer.

The jury found the men guilty on 13 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

The first four counts alleged they engaged in a scheme to defraud in the sale of Mooney stock.

Each faces up to five years in prison or a $5,000 fine or both on each count.

For four counts of selling unregistered securities, a maximum of five years or $5,000 could be assessed.

The 13th count charged them with conspiracy to violate the law in connection with the first 12 counts. That charge has a maximum punishment of five years or $10,000.

Rachal and Hunnicutt, expected to appeal, remained free on $50,000 bond each.

They maintained that they were innocent and denied that Mooney stock was subject to registration with either Texas or federal agencies.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE A COMPLEX PROBLEM

High pressure can mean anything from a local weather report to a persistent salesman. But when you insert the word "blood" in-between, it takes on its most important meaning—a sign of a disorder of the body's cardiovascular system. The effects of high blood pressure and certain of its causes produce injury to the heart, the blood vessels and the organs they supply.

There are a great many prescription medicines that a physician can prescribe to help relieve this condition. Very little is known as to what is the actual cause in many cases. If you have an elevated blood pressure follow your doctor's advice very carefully.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

From Kensett To Washington--Wilbur Is King

KENSETT, Ark. (AP) — In one of Wilbur Daugh Mills' two worlds, he is "Mr. Chairman," the personification of congressional power, a man who takes it for granted that he's on equal terms with presidents.

The capital of Mills' other world is Kensett, population according to its city limits sign, 905. Here in Kensett he is Wilbur; everybody knows him and he knows everybody.

But the Mills-watchers in Washington and those who grew up with him in Kensett give the same sort of baffled answers to the questions everybody asks about Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

How did he acquire his enormous prestige among his fellow congressmen, so that a Mills bill passes almost automatically?

Why has he had no serious opposition in Arkansas since his first congressional election in 1938? What inspires Arkansas to name a school, freeway and park after him — and to launch a dead serious "Mills for President in 1972" movement one that the honoree publicly laughs off?

Washington likes to say Mills is an enigma, or, as one admirer put it, "the most tightly buttoned-up man in Congress."

But few men are strangers in their home town which might be a likely place for Mills-watchers to start.

In Kensett, too, the home-towners fall back on platitudes. Roger Mills, the brother who stayed home to mind the family store, was as explicit as anyone when he told a visitor: "Wilbur never brushes anybody off."

To brush someone off in Kensett could result in being labeled arrogant. Wilbur Mills is not arrogant. But neither does Mills, as meticulously tailored on Main Street as on Pennsylvania Avenue, belong to the Southern political school that equates popularity with one-gallon foolishness.

Kensett today has a gently deteriorating look about it, not surprising in a town whose main asset was a railroad stop, and which today lacks a super highway to bigger centers, such as Little Rock, 60 miles away. It may survive by becoming a suburb of its once-hated rival, Searcy.

Facing the railroad tracks is the big plain storefront boldly lettered "A. P. Mills." It shares the block with a beauty salon, a cafe "temporarily closed," a recreation center and other small establishments, most of which could use some paint. A block away is the bank, weathered brick outside, ornately barred teller's windows within, also connected with the family.

Inside the big store, the stock is an updated version of what Wilbur's and Roger's father must have laid in when he set up shop in 1908. The hardware still includes horseshoes and pigs' nose rings, but also power tools and heavy farm gear. There are dresses, meats, canned goods, drugstore-type sundries. In one unpartitioned corner, Roger Mills presides at a well-worn desk behind which an antique safe stands open, revealing stuffed pigeonholes.

His pencil tickers almost as fast as a computer's relays over ledgers, stock lists and records from the cotton gin, another segment of the family business. The Millses, as everyone knows who has heard Wilbur explain a tax bill, are good at figures.

And they work. No, Roger said, he doesn't often get to see Wilbur in Washington. The store ties him down, sometimes 15 hours a day.

Across the tracks, a quarter of a mile away, are a modest brick bungalow and an even less pretentious white frame house, the homes respectively of the Millses' mother and of Wilbur Mills. Mother Mills, 85, retired two years ago from regular work at the store. But even now, Roger said, despite some handicaps of broken and mended bones, "Sometimes she takes a notion to walk over here

— although I've asked her a hundred times to let me come get her when she wants to come."

So Wilbur took a work ethic with him to Washington. He lives for his job there, and a very occasional baseball game, ignores the cocktail circuit and once declined a White House invitation to stay home and play with visiting grandchildren. Presiding over welfare reform legislation, he insists above all else on provisions that any recipient who can work must take a job.

His frequent visits home are hardly relaxing. Usually they mean back-to-back appointments at the Searcy and Little Rock district offices, speeches and interviews.

On a recent Sunday, Mills made a round trip by air from Washington to attend the dedication of a park named after him in Saline County. The area is not yet part of his district, but will be under a revision now in progress. Characteristically, he appeared before the home folks in the company of Richard S. Reynolds Jr., board chairman of Reynolds Metals, which donated the 80 acres. They were on an easy first name basis.

During his few hours in town, Mills made a speech, taped a television interview, found time also for the visiting press, and shook hundreds of hands at a civic reception in Bryant, the municipality that got title to the park. He never stopped moving through the crowd, but he never hurried. With most of his constituents, old and new, he could exchange neighborly chat. For the others, he had a standard brief introduction and handshake. First, always, hat off if there was a lady in the group.

There had been some obvious hankering among state officials for the federal funds that would come Arkansas' way under President Nixon's revenue-sharing proposal. But when Mills came out firmly against the plan, the state Senate promptly adopted a resolution condemning the idea and commending Mills for opposing it.

ation for Bumpers.

Jerry Scretton, a former secretary, said "Wilbur was never a prima donna. He is an organization man."

He recalled how young congressman Mills, once rebuffed in a try for membership on the Ways and Means Committee, endeared himself to Democratic leaders by standing aside at the next opportunity to help them carry out a difficult commitment. Thereafter, he was a protégé of the late Speaker Sam Rayburn and marked for advancement.

Sent to the Searcy High School because it was academically stronger than Kensett's, Wilbur took some kidding as a country boy. But he finished as valedictorian of his class.

He went on, as did Roger a few years later, to Hendrix College in Conway, Ark., a private institution of considerable regional prestige.

From Hendrix, Mills went to Harvard to study law for three years. When he came back the Depression was deep and cruel. Among those threatened by it was the town bank A. P. Mills, one of the few citizens who could, came to the rescue, exchanging cash for stock and for paper held by the bank, and becoming its president. The bank weathered the storm, the investment turned out to be a good one, and the elder Mills continued as president until his death 13 years ago. Now Roger is vice president and a large minority stockholder.

A Kensett bank president's sons were expected to work, and since there were no outside jobs, Wilbur and Roger put in time both at the store and the bank. Roger displayed business ability his elder brother speaks of with admiration. Wilbur had his eye on politics. His opportunity came in 1934. In a campaign old-timers say was marked by some down to earth politics on the part of local organizations friendly to the Millses, Wilbur defeated the incumbent county judge to become at 25 the youngest judge in the state.

Mills' campaign promise for the county judgeship was to get the county out of debt. He backed legislation that whacked expenses, among other moves reducing his own salary from $3,600 to $2,000 a year.

"And I promised to go without salary my second year if I didn't clear up the debt," he remembers. "That put it up to me; I needed that salary."

He had married a Kensett girl, Clarine Billingsley.

The debt was cleared up. Mills won a second two-year term and then in 1938 ran successfully for the seat the district congressman had vacated to run for the Senate. He says his father insisted on financing his campaign, so he could go to Congress under no obligations to any contributors.

The move to Washington, among other things, took him off the courthouse softball team, where he played first base. But not even the intricacies of taxation and the exhilaration of jousting with presidents have wholly displaced baseball with Mills. He remains an ardent fan.

He remains, too, the enigma Washington and Kensett continue to find fascinating.

"The Millses owned Kensett, what there was to own," a former fellow-townsmen and longtime friend said. "There wouldn't have been any point in Wilbur pretending, even if he wanted to, that he wasn't from the richest family in town. Everybody knew it."

"He keeps in touch with the people," said Truman N. Baker, an automobile dealer in Searcy, a former chairman of the state Highway Commission and a close political friend.

The Wilbur D. Mills Park joins the Wilbur D. Mills High School and the Wilbur D. Mills Freeway, both in Little Rock, among physical monuments. Arkansas state senators constructed one of a different kind as impressive in its own way.

Baker says a determined and growing group of Mills admirers is entirely serious about pushing a presidential candidacy for him at next year's Democratic convention. A complimentary, favorite son candidacy?

"No, sir. A serious candidacy. Look at the others who are being talked about. Can't we do better with Wilbur?"

"Not a chance," Mills says when asked about a presidential candidacy of any kind. He has also been quoted as telling a friend privately, "You don't need the title to run things in Washington."

Constituents are awed, in proud sort of way, but the obvious power that Mills wields. One told of turning to the congressman in a desperate case that involved transferring a patient to a veterans hospital whose waiting list pointed to weeks of delay. The morning his letter arrived in Washington, Mills telephoned him for full details. By noon the transfer was effected.

If Mills has a talent for pleasing voters he also shows a knack for avoiding what might alienate them. During the years of strained race relations, for example, he voted pretty much like his Deep South colleagues. But, unlike some of them, he never agitated the issue with speeches or publicly assumed attitudes.

He stays out of district Democratic politics. At most, associates say, he may give advice, well behind the scenes, to a personal friend.

But Arkansas is no longer a one-party state. This development has taken some of the wraps off Mills, described by Baker as a "stomp-down" Democrat whose district contains many of Arkansas' Republicans.

The 1970 gubernatorial race was three-cornered. Candidates were the incumbent Republican, Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller; Dale Bumpers, who had come out of obscurity to win the Democratic nomination; and Walter Carruth, running on the ticket of George Wallace's American Independent Party. Wallace carried Arkansas in 1968.

Democrats arranged a pre-election television panel of prominent office holders to speak their piece for Bumpers. Several did so politely and the same was expected of Mills when his turn came. Instead, he swung into a frankly partisan exhortation, aimed straight at Democrats who had strayed into the third-party fold. The speech caused a sensation that still reverberates in Arkansas, along with arguments as to whether Mills swung the election for Bumpers.

Jerry Scretton, a former secretary, said "Wilbur was never a prima donna. He is an organization man."

He recalled how young congressman Mills, once rebuffed in a try for membership on the Ways and Means Committee, endeared himself to Democratic leaders by standing aside at the next opportunity to help them carry out a difficult commitment. Wilbur Mills was puzzling people not many years ago after he was born in Kensett in 1909. A former neighbor remembers seeing a photograph of Wilbur as a little boy, wearing an oversize necktie. He refused to be photographed without a tie, the friend said, so one of the adults came up with one.

KING-SIZED HOUSING HEADACHE IN BONN

No Place To Put Visiting Monarchs

By ROON LEWALD
Associated Press Writer

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany's federal capital has a king-sized housing headache.

Six crowned heads of state are expected to pay ceremonial visits in coming months, the most impressive parade of royalty since England's Queen Elizabeth stayed here in 1965.

Yet the government has no guest house for VIP visitors permanently at its disposal.

"You may have to bring your own caravan house trailer to live in," President Gustav Heinemann joked to Holland's Queen Juliana last year when he invited her to visit.

The jest goes too close to the bone to amuse government officials responsible for housing royal guests.

The first arrivals will be King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola of Belgium. They will spend the first day of their April 27-29 German state visit in Bonn.

Perhaps the most anxiously awaited couple are Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako of Japan. The emperor arrives Oct. 11 during a European junket which will be the first venture in history outside the land of the rising sun by a reigning Japanese monarch.

A fortnight after his departure, Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands are due Oct. 26.

No dates have been set for anticipated visits by Swedish King Gustav V Adolf, King Frederik IX of Denmark and Norway's King Olaf V.

The Belgians — and probably the Dutch and Japanese royal couples as well — will have to make do with the "chancellor's bungalow," the residence in the grounds of the Palais Schaumburg where Chancellor Willy Brandt has his office.

The residence housed Brandt's predecessors Ludwig Erhard and Kurt Georg Kiesinger but no important state guests have ever stayed there.

Brandt prefers to live in the house he occupied as foreign minister, allowing the chancellor's bungalow to be used for receptions. But his successor might decide to live there.

The house is being refurbished but it remains too small for an entire royal party.

When the Belgian royal couple arrived, their immediate followers will stay in the so-called Palm House in the grounds of President Heinemann's Villa Hammerschmidt. Other staff members will be put up in various hotels.

"The situation is regrettable," a Foreign Ministry protocol spokesman admitted.

The chancellor's bungalow is an adequate temporary solution but nobody pretends it is ideal. That's why something better will have to be found.

There was no housing problem for visiting VIP's in the years when the historic Hotel Petersberg, was still a going concern.

Millionaire businessman Ferdinand Muelhens of "4711" eau de Cologne fame built the palatial spa hotel 50 years ago on the highest peak in the Seven Mountains, giving it an eagle's eyevue of the Rhine Valley in which nearby Bonn lies.

Pre-war British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain was the hotel's first state guest. He stayed there in 1938 while he and Hitler discussed the fate of Czechoslovakia.

From the end of the last world war until 1952, the hotel was the residence of the three Allied High Commissioners of occupied West Germany.

First post-war chancellor Konrad Adenauer was called to the hotel in 1949 to sign the Petersberg Agreement, the occupation statute which formed the basis of war-ravaged Germany's reconstruction.

The Muelhens "4711" dynasty took it over again in 1954, refurbished it and rented it to a Duesseldorf hotel concern.

The government housed its most important guests there from 1955 to 1969. The long list included England's Queen Elizabeth, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi and Queen Soraya of Iran, former Indian prime minister Pandit Nehru and daughter, Indira Gandhi — later to follow in his footsteps — General Charles de Gaulle and the Greek and Thai royal couples.

The burgers of Bonn still speak with awe and pride of lavish entertaining by such visitors as Queen Elizabeth, who had six tons of royal silver flown from Buckingham Palace for her three-day stay.

The hotel was listed among Germany's nine best by the prestigious Michelin guide of France. Despite its reputation it proved too expensive to run for the few private guests who could afford to stay there between state visits.

The hotel celebrated its closing in classic style. Leaseholder Georg Linsenmeyer invited the hotel czars of Europe from Cesar Ritz of Paris to Otto Horcher of Madrid to a grand farewell banquet.

Then workmen nailed the revolving doors of the "Hotel for the Prominent" shut in November, 1969. Like some abandoned feudal castle, the empty building now gathers dust on its isolated hilltop.

Since then state visitors have been accommodated in various Bonn hotels, which worries security police because they cannot be guarded as easily as the lonely Petersberg.

CHINESE FORSAKE POLITENESS FOR REBELLION

Tinsel Doesn't Hide The Shabbiness

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Behind the tinsel tourist trappings of San Francisco's Chinatown, thousands of youngsters are rebelling against a system they contend gives them an inferior education and forces their parents to live in one-room cubicles and work seven days a week to survive.

The rebellion by both immigrant and American-born youngsters is marked by skyrocketing juvenile delinquency, gang wars and a sincere effort to improve Chinatown's shabby living and working conditions and end discrimination against the Chinese.

The youngsters contend that their parents' traditional silence has done nothing. So, they are bypassing the established Chinese-American community and taking their demands for better housing, jobs and education directly to City Hall and other agencies.

Establishment leaders — primarily professionals and owners of Chinatown's numerous shops and restaurants — counter that they are aware of the problems, and are working quietly to help solve them.

As realtor Steve Jeong put it: "The young people are too impatient and want too much from the government. You've got to work for yourself. You can't expect everyone to give you everything on a silver platter."

San Francisco's Chinatown — the largest Chinese community in the United States — is a densely populated 17-block area bounded by the downtown financial district and Broadway's topless and bottomless clubs.

The 1960 census listed 9,329 residents living in the heart of Chinatown with an additional 43,000 in the surrounding area. But city officials expect a big hike when the 1970 figures are compiled because of the 1965 immigration law that did away with the old "quota system" for Chinese.

The crux of Chinatown's problem is money — and in the current era of strapped budgets, there is virtually none for the new housing, recreation facilities and English language classes desperately needed in the area.

Albert Cheng, executive director of the North Beach-Chinatown Youth Council, said juvenile delinquency has risen 600 per cent in the past six years. He explained that in years past, Chinese students were known for being quiet and easy to control, "so many teachers came to Chinatown to retire, not to teach."

Few bilingual courses are available, he said, noting that Galileo High School, which is 70 per cent Chinese, has eight Latin courses and one Cantonese, which nearly all the immigrants speak, or in Chinese history.

Ray Fong, 16, a Galileo junior, said another problem is that "a lot of parents work long hours and are never home. Their wages are low and the rents are high and they live in one-room apartments with a lot of kids."

"There's no room in the apartment to study and the libraries in Chinatown close early, so the kids drop out and try to find a job. They have no diploma and they can't get jobs, so they have no way to support themselves. So, they go out on the streets and steal or hustle."

Jeffrey Chan, head of the Asian-American Studies Department at San Francisco State College, contended that the traditional strict obedience of Chinese children is a myth, primarily because there were only men for the first 50 years of the Chinese in California.

When women finally arrived, he said, they were forced to work and "even today, men with families are working and their children are on their own, which is why there are so many problems in Chinatown."

The survival problem in Chinatown is reflected in these statistics from the 1960 census: —The density rate is 885 persons per acre, 10 times the city's average and one of the highest in the country. —More than two-thirds of the adults have less than an eighth grade education and the last new school in the area was built in 1925. —Two thirds of the housing units are rated substandard and one-half the units in the 17-block core consist of single rooms. —One-third of the families earn less than the federal poverty level, a problem compounded by high unemployment and job discrimination.

The youngsters blame the city's white business and city leaders for letting the conditions in Chinatown deteriorate — but their wrath is equally vehement against the Chinatown establishment, particularly the Chinese Six Companies.

The Six Companies, officially known as the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, was formed about 100 years ago to fight discrimination against the Chinese. It's leaders are business and professional men representing numerous family and district organizations from mainland China.

Jim Yee, 22, said the Six Companies "are not interested in the problems of the people of Chinatown. They're just interested in their own selfish games. The way they come out, there isn't any problem in Chinatown."

Countered attorney George Chinn, a member of the Six Companies 57-man board of directors: "If the elders are accused of turning a deaf ear to youth, on the other side you have the youths who shout obscenities and accuse businessmen of being exploiters. Fight away, there's a lack of communication."

Franchise Biz Leads To Grief

AUSTIN (AP) — Leaping too quickly into franchise business deals can lead to all kinds of grief, a House study committee has warned.

The committee specifically proposed new laws forbidding multi-level distributorships or "pyramid plans" where big profits are promised for persuading persons to sell or distribute a product.

The committee feels that the marketing of multi-level distributorships is inherently deceptive and that this marketing device has victimized many citizens in lower and middle income groups," the report said.

Also recommended was legislation enabling the state securities commissioner to regulate the sale of franchises.

HELLO, OPERATOR

Serviceman Gains Wife With Right Connection

By LINDA CROSS
 "Ma Bell" and a local justice of the peace joined forces Saturday to unite a young couple in marriage — by long distance.
 U.S. Air Force Sgt. Charles Mull and Naval E-5 Mary Jane Duncan decided to have their wedding via telephone since they could not be together. The wedding was held shortly after noon Saturday in the home of Peace Justice Walter Grice.
 Telephone weddings pose a special set of problems. First of all, the bride, who is stationed with the information office at the headquarters of the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet, Pearl Harbor, was not in the appointed place at the appointed time to receive her wedding phone call.
COLD FEET?
 A check at her barracks showed that time conflict was the culprit — not last minute cold feet. It was noon in Big Spring, but 7:15 a.m. in Hawaii.
 After a feminine protest over being married while still in pajamas, the long distance ceremony was under way.
 Peace Justice Grice began the recitation of the vows and the bride and groom heard the other's responses through the courtesy of the telephone company.

 Capt. Regina McGuiness, information officer at Webb AFB and Mull's boss, substituted for the bride during the ring ceremony. She also assisted Mull with the forms to obtain the license.
SIGNED SOMETHING
 "Every time I signed something, I kept asking if they were sure I was signing in behalf of Mary or if I were signing my life away. The standing-in during the ceremony wasn't so bad, but I really worried every time I signed something," joked Capt. McGuiness.

 "It'll be possibly December before we can see each other," said the somewhat dazed Mull, following the ceremony. "We had thought that she could get out of the Navy sooner. I'm going to try to get leave to see her in August."
 According to Mull, he talked to his bride Wednesday "at $10 for five minutes" to finalize plans for the wedding. Miss Duncan, now Mrs. Mull, was to be in her office to receive the call, and her boss, the naval public information officer was to stand in for the groom during the ring ceremony.

 "Only we thought it would be 8 a.m. in Hawaii if it was noon here," said Mull. The time difference caused a snafu in the arrangements, but the ceremony itself was accomplished without any problems, not even a wrong number.

'HELLO... I DO' — Sgt. Charles Mull, Webb AFB, center, who is stationed at Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor. The ceremony was performed by Peace Justice information officer, stood in for the bride during the ring ceremony.

Ceylon Rebs Surrendering

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Authorities said more than 250 ultraleftist rebels surrendered to security forces Saturday as a four-day amnesty proclaimed by the government began.
 Other rebels, determined to make a last-ditch stand in their month-old struggle to overthrow the government, gathered in the Sinharaja forest, a dense impenetrable jungle in mountainous country.
 Earlier in the week, the Ceylon army overpowered insurgent forces at Deniyaya in the tea-growing country below Enschwatte.
 A platoon of infantrymen using two-inch mortars drove the rebels into the jungle.
 Rebels throughout Ceylon have been told the surrender in unarmed groups of less than five or face a full-military offensive Tuesday.

City police were called to investigate a spate of burglaries Friday and Saturday. In most, either minor items or nothing was taken.
 It'll Do Lounge No. 2 was the target for yeggs in the early morning hours Saturday. Vending machines were broken into and some money taken, but no amount was reported. The break-in was reported to police at 2:05 a.m. Saturday.
 Thugs took advantage of the confusion generated by the fire at the former Next Generation Club and attempted to burglarize the Settles Package Store. Mrs. J. R. Davis notified police that she had not determined what, if anything, had been taken.
 Light bulbs and a chamois were all that thieves netted in a burglary of the Hwy. 87 Truck Stop during the weekend.

THEFTS

Eddie Pierce, 423 Hillside, reported to police the theft of a motorcycle from his home. He reported the machine missing at 5:22 a.m. Saturday.
 Mrs. Ruth Tabor, Gall Route, reported Saturday to the county sheriff's office that a power lawn mower had been taken from her home.

Two On Death Row Shot Down

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) — Two convicted murderers on death row at the Colorado State Penitentiary were shot to death on the east wall of the prison during an escape attempt Saturday, prison authorities said.
 The two were identified as Ernest Leroy Alsip, 24, and Michael John Bell, 35.
 Warden Wayne Patterson and Deputy Warden Fred Wyse said they thought the two were attempting to drop off the wall onto a garage, and then to a street nearby, where several hundred high school band members were preparing to march in the city's Blossom Festival Parade.
 Patterson said the two men were seen creeping along the top of the 25-foot high wall by guards in two towers. The guards, armed with rifles and shotguns, began firing simultaneously, Patterson said, killing both men.
 Wyse said it was not determined how the two got on the wall. They had been taken to an exercise yard with two other death row inmates earlier.
 The other two remained in the yard, the prison officials

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Catherine M. "Kate" Webb, United Press International bureau manager held captive for 24 days by Communist-led troops, said Saturday she was treated "extremely well, under the circumstances."
 Believed dead after an ambush on Highway 4 southwest of Phnom Penh April 7, Miss Webb was released along with Toshiichi Suzuki, a Japanese cameraman, and four Cambodian drivers and interpreters near Trapeang Kralang, 40 miles southwest of the capital.
 The 28-year-old New Zealander told fellow correspondents she was terrified of being killed by her captors or by government air and artillery strikes during the days of wandering through Cambodia's bush and jungle country.

Amtrak Rail System Makes On-Time Debut

By The Associated Press
 The Amtrak rail system made an on-time debut Saturday with a maximum of celebration and a minimum of confusion, while 178 other trains passed into the history they helped make.
 "As far as we know, things are going smoothly," said a spokesman at Amtrak offices in Washington. "We've gotten some reports in and things seem to be going fine."
ANY SNARLS?
 Asked if there were any snarls, he said, "not that we know of."
 VIP inaugural runs arrived generally on schedule, although there were some delays—usually because of celebrations along the route.
 Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe was among passengers on a special, nonstop Washington to New York run that arrived at Penn Central right on time, two hours and 40 minutes after it left the capital. Volpe predicted Amtrak would bring "a new era in intercity railroad passenger service throughout the United States."
 "For the first time, a single corporation will hold itself responsible for the total travel experience of passengers on trains and in stations throughout the nation."
TRAINS DROPPED
 The National Railroad Passenger Corp. was created by Congress to try to restore the industry to financial health. The 20 member railroads in the Amtrak system will run 182 trains serving 314 cities and towns.
 Another 178 trains were dropped in the consolidation, drawing protests from cities left out of the new network and from railroad buffs who mourned the passing of such sentimental favorites as the Nancy Hanks and the Federal Express.
 "Around the country, Amtrak went into effect with varying degrees of fanfare."
 The first Amtrak train between New York and Hartford, Conn., arrived 10 minutes late, delayed by ceremonies at stops along the way. There were further ceremonies after the train's arrival, during which station master Ted Swanson predicted, "People will come back. Equipment is getting better. We're running pretty much on time."
FAIR LOAD
 In St. Louis, Amtrak passenger representative Edwin Hawkins reported, "So far, everything seems to be going all right."
 He said the first Amtrak train to leave the station—the 8 a.m. for Chicago—departed on schedule and "there seemed to be a fair load on it."
 The first Amtrak trains through Indianapolis were reported on or near schedule and a spokesman at Union Station said business was the same as on a usual Saturday—sparse.
 There were celebrations in Boston for the start of Amtrak, with Mayor Kevin H. White, a representative of Gov. Francis W. Sargent and other officials on hand as the 9:45 a.m. train departed for New York and Washington.
SAD FAREWELLS
 About 400 passengers showed up for the first Chicago to New Orleans run under the Amtrak system. A spokesman said the crowd was "a little more than normal."
 There were mournful farewells for the trains doomed to

WELL-REHEARSED SOLIDARITY

May Day In Red Square

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of Soviet citizens trooped through rain-soaked Red Square Saturday, shouting slogans and carrying flags and banners, in a well-rehearsed demonstration of "solidarity" with workers around the world.

Light rain fell steadily as a wave after wave of factory workers, collective farmers, gymnasts, taxi drivers and children paraded before Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and other members of the ruling Politburo standing atop Lenin's Tomb.

Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgorniy and other top Soviet officials trumpeted up the staircase to the top of the low, red granite tomb just before 10 a.m.

HOLIDAY OF PEACE
As the bells in the Kremlin's Spassky Tower struck the hour, Brezhnev greeted the assembled marchers huddled in overcoats and raincoats and delivered a brief, low-key speech.

"It can rightly be stated that our May Day is a holiday of peace," he said, "a day of struggle against the evil designs of imperialism against the forces of war and aggression."

Brezhnev's only specific remarks on foreign affairs contained a pledge of "continuing support for the just cause of the heroic peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia and the people of the Arab countries in their fight against aggression and suppression."

GIRLS SHAKE
The mild speech was in keeping with the generally peaceful, spring-like tone given the parade the past three years. Up until 1969, rockets, missiles, tanks and other weapons paraded through the square along with the workers.

Girl gymnasts shivered in brief leotards as they ran through well-drilled mass exercises with white hoops, very much like the hula hoops popular in the United States in the 1950s.

After a colorful spectacle of acrobatics and precision flag-waving, the square was given over to factory and farm delegations who marched to patriotic music blaring from loudspeakers all around the square.

Most Muscovites spent the dreary day at home, watching the official festivities on television, partying or just relaxing.

TODAY AND TOMORROW
—CARROL RIGHTER

SUNDAY
GENERAL TENDENCIES: A wonderful Sunday for you to begin the week right by thinking in terms of just what you can do to make a bigger name for yourself and to have more of the good things of life. Please others by complimenting them.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You have planned certain activities with kin, and there is no better day for them than now. Your life far happier by right thinking and right acting. Stop brooding.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to sit down leisurely with associates and dine while making better plans for the future. Do not neglect services, visiting with friends. Get to bed early tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Think big and you can make plans for increased income in the future. Sit down with financial experts who are at leisure and get good ideas from them. Show tact.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to be with people you really like for recreation. Take the time to improve your appearance so that you make a big hit with everyone. Make this a delightful day, p.m.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) There are promises you have made that need to be kept today, or chores that must be done, so get on them. Use vision in planning the future. Your intuitive faculties are working very efficiently now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Ideal day to enjoy the company of friends you like and admire. Repaying some social obligation is good so that you are extended further invitations in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) A good day to sit with some bigwig you know and get the advice, data, and vision you need—some civic work today could prove to be most helpful to you and the community. Avoid one who is acting erratically.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Any interest you may have in some modern way of living can be investigated now and the best of such adopted. Good day to plan some little trip, you have your heart set on "Travel light."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do those things that bring you added favors from those who are of great assistance to you. Show that you are appreciative of their goodwill. Beach a true understanding with mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can come to a better understanding with associates in your own home today than you can in the office tomorrow. Do just that. Confer those who want to work your life in the days ahead, also. Control your temper, though.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) There is some work you can get done today that should not be put off until another time. Those around you can be most helpful. Avoid one who wants to waste your time talking too long on the telephone, or other ways.

MONDAY
GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when it is wise to be polite, considerate and thoughtful with all whom you come in contact. Make a point to show you realize that taking chances of any kind today or tonight could put you in a difficult situation. Avoid those who are unreliable.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep busy on personal tasks and projects. There could be arguments, if you become too involved. Do some reading during spare time. Avoid gossip.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Making sure to carry through with promises made at home is important. Try not to criticize. Get at the root of any trouble and clear the air. Show, that you are an intelligent person.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you take risks, you could get into trouble. That is best avoided. It could be called in motion, word of mouth, or thoughtless deed. Keep pleasant and poised and get routine work done well.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Much care must be exercised whether in monetary matters or in talks with others or there could be a loss for you. Double-checking paper work is important. Avoid costly errors.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Control your temper where a personal affair is concerned. Try not to be extravagant tonight. Keep calm, no matter how troublesome are the conditions. If you have a liquor problem, do something about it.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Control your tongue and avoid work involving associates with those who are unable to pay. Take the time to improve appearance. This will help you to get ahead faster.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Don't take any chances with an unkind word and jeopardize the friendship of others you now enjoy. A new contact could get too much information out of you, if you aren't careful. Do more listening, less talking.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) Follow every law and regulation that applies to you and you avoid trouble now. Don't try to force things on others or they will resent it. Use diplomacy and all will be fine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Although your ideas are good for advancement and improvement, this is not a good day to take on more responsibilities. Don't bother higher-ups who are in an irate mood. Do more studying.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) While you are anxious to get new ideas working, try not to be demanding with others. Do more investigative work. Not a good day for expansion. Keep working on plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are tempted to go back on a promise you have made, but this would get you in trouble with the very persons you want to make a good impression on. Don't disappoint mate, either.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Control your temper and do what is necessary to improve relations with a partner so that it can be a very successful association in the future. Don't make comments on the activities of others. Wait until tomorrow to express your views.

ABA Series Upcoming

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (SP) — The Utah Stars, who outlasted Indiana in a seven-game series, have to guard against a mental letdown against the Kentucky Colonels in the American Basketball Association final playoffs starting Monday night in the Salt Palace.

They also must stop Kentucky rookie Dan Issel, a 6-9 245-pound center, who was the league's leading scorer this year.

Those were the opinions of Stars' coach Bill Sharman and General Manager Vince Boryla as the Stars worked out Saturday. Another practice was scheduled Sunday.

"Issel had a tremendous series against Virginia," Boryla said. "He's improving rapidly."

The Indiana Pacers, who fell 108-101 to the Stars Wednesday night in Indianapolis, almost to a man picked the Stars to romp over Kentucky.

The defending champion Pacers had been down 3-1 in the series.

Local Kegler Fires 300 In Competition

J. M. Ringener, who competes in four different bowling leagues here, Thursday night put together a 300 game at the Bowl-A-Rama while competing in the Mixed Trio Scratch League.

It was the first time the ten-year veteran had ever achieved the perfect game. The last previous 300 game reported here occurred back in November.

Ringener wound up with a sizzling 715 series for the evening.

His previous high game in sanctioned play was a 279.

Ringener carried averages of 200, 200, 206 and 184 in the four leagues in which he competes. He becomes eligible for several awards as a result of his 300 game.

Krisher, who gave pro football a whirl after leaving college, now resides in Richardson, Tex. He is credited with being a gifted speaker.

In the handicap division of the tournament, Carl Foulds and Mike Glover toured the course in 65 strokes to take a one stroke advantage over Willie Graham and John Krocza.

Thompson and Shepperson were one shot better than par at the end of nine and were able to pick up three strokes on the back nine. Playing with the Raider duo were Big Spring High School golf coach Royce Cox and Bob Waters. They came in with a 69 also.

On the 495-yard par five 15th hole, all four were on the green in two, putting for eagles. Shepperson was able to sink his putt for the eagle but the other three had to settle for birdies.

JC Track Team Is Busted

By TOMMY HART

It's been hard to distinguish between boxing and burlesque in recent years but the lines of demarcation would have all but disappeared, had Muhammad Ali and Wilt Chamberlain been allowed to climb into the ring against each other. One observer says Wilt had no more business in a boxing ring with Ali than Martha Mitchell has as a centerfold in Playboy Magazine. As far as Chamberlain goes, I fancy he thought it was a joke that got too out of hand. Of course, the boxing game has trotted out some real turkeys in the past. Floyd Patterson vs. Pete Rademacher (in his first pro fight) and Joe Frazier vs. Buster Mathis (for the so-called Heavyweight championship, mind you, when Frazier was fresh out of the amateurs. Midland Lee made reservations at Austin in advance for the State High School Golf tournament, then offered them to Big Spring when the Steers sidelined the Rebels in the recent Regional tournament at Odessa. That Mesa, Ariz., JC track and field team likely won't be contending for the National title in Garden City, Kan., this year — 15 members of the team were recently busted for drinking alcoholic beverages and smoking pot on the team bus not long after a dual meet with John Charles, recently acquired by the Houston Oilers in a trade with the Denver Broncos, was in the same defensive backfield at Minnesota with Big Spring's Charley West last season. Victory in the Masters tournament may have meant a million to such golfers as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player but Texan Charles Coody, the most recent winner, likely will realize much less from it. No one rushed to book him for exhibitions after his victory at Augusta. They say he played a practice round prior to the recent Tournament of Champions and his audience consisted of Bruce Cramp-ton, two caddies, a sports writer and two women looking for the powder room. Max West, a fine major leaguer in his day, died far from the madding crowd in Houston recently. Western Texas JC of Snyder will upgrade the Western Conference, since the facilities it will have available rank with the best anywhere. The Snyder school and HCJC should develop a tremendous rivalry. Baseball buffs in the San Francisco area are already envisioning a Bay Area World Series, with the Giants and the Oakland A's both prospering in the early stages of the 1971 big league races.

HARRY WALKER

Snyder's Freddie Walcott, the Olympic hurdler, was the only athlete in history ever to win high point honors in the Southwest Conference track and field meet three years running. Harry (The Hat) Walker, manager of the Houston Astros, expressed the sentiments of a lot of people when he said of peripatetic Curt Flood: "Why would anyone, like Flood, want to rap-baseball? He never had anything before he got into the game. How can he sound so dissatisfied with a life that has projected him into a $100,000 salary bracket? How can players complain about anything? We get $18 a day meal-money, fly in the best jets, have all our baggage handled for us, get top wages. What about the pension system? In another two-three years I can draw $14,000 a year from that alone and when I was a kid I never thought I'd see that much money, let alone be getting it as an annual income." One must conclude that Flood listened to bad advice, offered by people who lust to shake up the Establishment but who never could make much of an impact themselves. Linden-born Don Buford, now with the Baltimore Orioles, is probably making a bigger splash than any other Texan in the big leagues this year. Big Spring Runnels JH coach Bobby Zellars, now a golf zealot, recently fired an eagle on the difficult 18th hole at the Myny course. Bill Holstead of Wichita Falls, the reigning Texas Amateur golf champion, plays right-handed but puts from the left side. He converted after getting the "yips" in a match several years ago. Because this year's 5-AAAA track and field meet had to be moved to Odessa, Big Spring will go nine years without serving as host. Speedster Walter Jordan may become one of the finest ball carriers in the BSHS football camp but he'll have to work on his catching technique, if he hopes to become a top-flight receiver. He has trouble holding onto the ball. The Houston Astros offered "nickel-beer" as a promotion for a recent night game and the sale of suds tripled over the average night. The thirsty crowd consumed 9,300 gallons of the liquid. Grizzled George Blanda recently berated Texans and more specifically the Houston Oiler management for giving him a bad shuffle when he was with the club a few years ago. Blanda said the front office insisted that Don Trull, the Baylor ex, be given first crack at the quarterback position just because he was a native. "I don't have much respect for Texans," Blanda remarked.

San Angelo Lions Oppose Cardinals Here In Pair

The Big Spring Cardinals play host to the San Angelo Lions in a twin-bill at Steer Park today. The first game is set to begin at 1:30 o'clock. In four contests between the two teams last season they broke even with two wins each. Probable starting lineup for the Cards today will include Felix Martinez, shortstop; Andy Gamboa, center field; Jesse Zapata, left field; Billy Pineda at third; Benny Marquez Jr., right field; Jesse Olague at second base; Pano Rodriguez at first; Abel Ramirez, catching and Jody Florez on the mound. Rookie sensation of last season, Orlando Olague, is slated to do the pitching for the Cards in the night cap. The Cards will be out to snap a losing streak. They dropped a pair of games in Lamesa Sunday, 2-1 and 11-0.

Drills Will End ABILENE — The McMurry College Indians conclude spring football training next Friday night with a spring game in Indian Stadium. Kickoff time will be 8:30 p.m.

Jim Perry Vanquishes Sox After Early Woes

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Perry, whacked for three quick runs by his Boston "cousins," settled down after the shaky start and pitched and batted the Minnesota Twins to a 7-3 victory Saturday, cooling off the surging Red Sox. Perry, the 1970 Cy Young Award winner with a 26-13 lifetime record against the Red Sox, was in danger of being lifted as leadoff batter Luis Aparicio and Reggie Smith hit consecutive homers and the Red Sox added another run for a 3-0 lead. However, the veteran right-hander allowed only five hits the rest of the way, finishing with a strong eight-hitter and hiking his record to 4-2. Perry also played a major role on offense, getting three consecutive singles, scoring three runs and driving in one while helping send Boston southpaw Gary Peters to an early shower. Peters was charged with six runs in less than five innings against the Twins, who have beaten him 16 times while losing only three in his career.

Sunland To Offer Fattest Purse In Today's Feature

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. — The biggest purse in Sunland Park history will be on the line in today's dramatic finals of the $153,700 Sun Country Quarter Horse Futurity. Ten finalists will travel 350 yards in a blistering speedburst which carries considerable prestige and a giant paycheck. The winning owner will collect $53,795. This is by far the fattest purse ever awarded at Sunland Park. The rich futurity run will top a 12-race program which gets moving at 1:30 p.m. "We're extremely pleased by both the size of the purse and the caliber of horses the Sun Country has attracted," commented Art Johnson, Sunland general manager. "The Sun Country has already become established among the nation's top quarter horse events. The future potential is outstanding. We fully expect next year's edition of the Sun Country will reach $250,000."

Pioneers Set Two Records

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The Philadelphia Pioneers shattered meet records in the 440- and 880- yard relays and three other marks fell Saturday in the wind-swept 15th annual Quantico Relays. Excessive trailing winds wiped out what would have been a record-tying performance in the open 100-yard dash and an American record-equaling 100-meter hurdles run in trials, to determine the U.S. women's team for this summer's Pan American Games. Tom Randolph, Orin Richburg, Bill Hurd and Ed Roberts made up the Pioneer quartet that ran the invitational 440 relay in 40.7, edging Penn Relays winner Norfolk State, and the 880 relay in 1:24.4, beating Kentucky State and Norfolk State. Kentucky State earlier won the open 440 relay.

Van Horn Athlete Headed For SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Joe Nobles of Van Horn, an outstanding high school football and basketball player, has agreed to enroll at Southern Methodist University, Head Coach Hayden Fry of SMU said Saturday. Nobles, who made the second team all-state in football, will sign an inter-conference letter with SMU Wednesday, the earliest day permitted, Fry said. During his four years on the Van Horn team, Nobles, who weighs 195 pounds and is 6 feet 2 inches, played end on offense and linebacker on defense. Nobles won four letters each in football, track, and basketball and also played on the tennis team.

Johnny Dee Quits Notre Dame Post

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Johnny Dee, who took Notre Dame basketball teams to five post-season tournaments in his seven years as head coach, resigned Friday. Dee said he will leave coaching and return to his law practice in Denver, his home.

SMU Selects Co-Captains

DALLAS (AP) — An offensive and a defensive signal caller have been elected to captain the 1971 Southern Methodist University football team. They are Gary Hammond of Port Arthur, quarterback, and Sherwood Blount of Dallas, linebacker. Hammond, who gained all Southwest Conference honors as a split end in 1969 and as a tailback in 1970, was shifted to quarterback during the recently-concluded spring drills. The former Port Arthur Thomas Jefferson star holds the all-time SMU record for sophomores in the number of yards gained on passes caught. As a sophomore, he ranked fourth nationally in kickoff returns. As a junior he led the southwest conference in tandem offense with 1,386 yards and ranked ninth nationally in all-purpose running. For the second year he was the conference's No. 1 pass catcher. Blount led the Mustangs in defensive statistics last year when he was credited with 155 tackles.

Shaffer's Hit Spurs Steers To 3-2 Win

By TOMMY HART
Big Spring left a record 17 runners on base and lost two outfielders after a first inning collision chasing a fly ball but still managed to topple Abilene Cooper in a 13-inning District 5-AAAA baseball thriller here Friday, 3-2.

A two-out smash into left center field by catcher Pete

Shaffer, which arrived in a bases-loaded situation and plated pinch-runner Orlando Olague, provided a dramatic ending to the tense struggle and sent the fans home happy.

David Englert went all the way in the 3:43 hour struggle, surrendering only four hits and yielding no earned runs. Cooper suffered concussions and took a battering at the eyes.

Roy Longacre singled and Doug Huddleston walked to set the stage for Cooper's first and only runs. Englert suddenly found himself in a rocky situation, loading the bases before he could retire a batter. A double play started by shortstop David Carter helped eliminate the problem, however, after Longacre and Huddleston had scored.

Englert, who fanned 11, didn't give the Cougars much of a look-in after that.

Big Spring cut its deficit in the first when Roddy Caffey, who had worked opposing hurler Huddleston for a free ticket, came home on Englert's one-baser.

JAPANESE EMPEROR'S TRIP IS HISTORY-MAKING

On 70th Birthday, Accomplishes Another First

TOKYO (AP) — Punctually at 10 o'clock each morning, the small, shy man doffs his hat to his bowing wife and leaves the house. Halfway down the lane he turns instinctively to catch her bowing again. With a smile he waves his hat and is gone.

It is a domestic scene duplicated daily in millions of homes across the main islands of Japan. But in this case the husband is the emperor and the wife the empress of Japan.

The house, situated within the moated palace grounds in central Tokyo, is a 10-minute walk from the bright new $37-million palace with its burnished copper roof, banquetting and reception halls and imperial offices. There the little man who reigns — but does not rule — puts in a working day which would stagger many of his notoriously-industrious countrymen.

These days, Nagako, the 69-year-old empress, often accompanies her husband as far as the palace gate. They have much to talk about. Like hundreds of thousands of their countrymen in a now-affluent Japan, they are planning a trip — her first overseas and his second.

Beginning Sept. 27, they will make state visits to Britain, Belgium and West Germany, stop informally in The Netherlands, Switzerland, France and Denmark. Both at the start and on their return Oct. 14 they will pause, while their plane refuels in Anchorage, Alaska.

The trip will make history: never in the annals of the chrysanthemum throne — which legend says goes back 2,631 years — has a reigning emperor ever left Japan.

Back home the glow will hardly have faded before they plunge into plans for another royal first: the visit, expected in 1973, of a reigning British monarch, Elizabeth II.

For Hirohito, the trip is something of a national birthday present. He becomes 70 on April 29. It also is the fulfillment of years of yearning and nostalgia stirred by his last journey to England and the Continent half a century ago.

Then, he was a youth of 20, the first Japanese crown prince to go abroad. It was an imperial progress which lasted six months. In Cairo he was the guest of British Field Marshal Allenby and had the exquisite pleasure of living through a sandstorm. At Malta he met Prince George, later to be George VI. In England he was captivated by the free-wheeling Prince of Wales. Bluff King George V — Victoria's grandson slapped him on the back in his dressing room and apologized for the absence of geishas. The great Pavlova danced for him. He played golf and sat for a portrait by Augustus John. He ate snails, forgot to give the conductor his ticket on the Metro and toured the World War I battlefields with Marshal Petain in France.

Returning from his 1921 trip, he sought to emulate the ebullient Prince of Wales' life style and threw a party for his former classmates.

But after being read a stiff lecture on the heavy duties of the throne and the pitfalls of frivolity, the young crown prince apologized. It was his last fling. From that day onward he was smothered by the chrysanthemum curtain of protocol and tradition drawn around his life.

The fact was that though Hirohito's constitutional powers seemed enormous, he was little more than the facade behind which the true rulers of Japan maneuvered.

Hirohito himself never believed the legends. His scientific education made it impossible. In 1946, he publicly asserted he had never considered himself a god.

Quiet, reserved, scholarly, the idea of war was abhorrent to the young Hirohito. So strongly did he feel that on his coronation in 1928 he chose "Showa" as his reign name — "The era of enlightened peace."

An uncomprehending world was taken aback when this shy peace-loving young man next appeared before it on a white charger reviewing victorious Japanese troops. What they did not know was that like his imperial forebears, Hirohito was only a symbol, reflecting whatever fate Japanese policy happened to be wearing at the moment.

In 1945, the Americans altered the course of Japanese history, giving it a new, more democratic constitution which, besides outlawing war as an instrument of foreign policy, spelled out in precise terms the emperor's symbolic status.

This done, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the American Occupation chief, undertook to democratize the imperial family. With his encouragement, Hirohito emerged from behind the spiritual remoteness of his moated palace to demonstrate that he was as human as his subjects.

Gradually, what had once been awe for the imperial name turned into personal popularity. In 1963, his subjects dared rank him 19th among the world figures, they most admired. But by 1968, he was third among the Japanese most widely respected in the past century.

He begins his day at 7 a.m. — he is awake earlier but doesn't get up for fear of disturbing his household. Leaving his Western-style bedroom, he scatters soap and sponges untidily around the bathroom, leaves his night clothes in a heap on the floor.

After poring over the Japanese newspapers he joins the empress in watching television, then sits down to a breakfast of bacon, eggs, toast and coffee, a taste he acquired during the 1921 tour. Most of his countrymen breakfast on pickled vegetables, rice, eggs, seaweed and bean curd soup.

At the palace he tackles his work with gusto, painstakingly reading every document he is required to sign.

His working day lasts until 5 p.m., but like his countrymen he often puts in overtime. By 10 p.m., after a refreshing Japanese ofuro bath, he is ready for bed.

Life in the imperial palace is sedate and quiet, a far cry from the free spending, luxurious ways of other monarchs. Since the occupation cut the imperial staff from 7,000 to 1,200 and confiscated the family's vast wealth — estimated at $100 million — he and the empress, their brothers and children have had to make do on a $200,000-a-year stipend. Thrift and frugality are the emperor's watchwords. He frowns on ostentatious display, has to be coaxed into buying a new suit once every three years. At work, he makes do with a stubby pencil.

Peacetime has given him a chance to resume his scientific studies. Now, three times a week he pores over his microscope in his study or devotes himself to gathering biological specimens. Internationally recognized as a marine biologist, he has published 11 books, all designed by the empress.

This picture of well-ordered domestic life suits the family-oriented Japanese.

The empress, motherly, talented and self-effacing, enhances the image.

She wills his table with roses every day from the 200 imperial rose bushes and hovers over the emperor, monitoring his diet — he cannot eat hot or spicy food — and fussing like any other wife about his appearance.

If the emperor and empress personify the homely virtues, their children are of a more modern cut. The crown prince, Akihito, 37, already is a more liberated man than his father. He broke tradition in a big way in 1959 by marrying the sports-loving daughter of a commoner. More than that, he chose her himself.

The crown princess, Michiko, weighed down with protocol and tradition, now seems content to be a radiant mother for her two sons and a daughter.

Two of Hirohito's five daughters are dead. Two of the remaining daughters live quiet lives; one is a widow, the other a housewife.

The lively youngest daughter, the former Princess Suga, escaped from an existence which depressed her by marrying a commoner and living with her banker husband for several years in Washington.

The ultrarightists who dominated prewar and wartime politics in Japan no longer are in power. Their cause, however, has been dramatized by the November, 1970, ritual suicide of the noted young author, Yukio Mishima.

The act epitomized the disarray of Japanese youth both on the right and the left. The rightists resent the fact that the emperor has been reduced to a symbol in the U. S. — inspired constitution and that the self-defense forces occupy an ambiguous position.

The leftists ironically are the new constitution's chief defenders, primarily because it curbs the military, minimizes the role of emperor and stands for peace. They fear that continued military ties with the United States will bring them closer to an unwanted war with China.

Japan's middle-of-the-roads are as strongly opposed to a return to militarism as are the left wingers. Strongly pacifist and, after the World War II atom bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, deeply allergic to nuclear weapons, they would resist any move in that direction.

Part of a widening middle class, they are content to share in the burgeoning prosperity resulting from a gross national product second only to that of the United States in the non-Communist world. They work hard, play hard and expect to live into an even brighter future.

The symbol of their peacetime prosperity is Hirohito, who already has presided over two great international events — the 1964 Tokyo Olympics and Expo '70 in Osaka. Their eyes now are on the Winter Olympics which are to be opened by Crown Prince Akihito in Sapporo in 1972.

'We Can Hold This Base As Long As We Desire'

Gitmo: A Dagger Driven Into The Heart Of Cuban Territory

By BEN FUNK

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP) — In the spooky darkness of the Cuban hills, a flare sabs into the night, a dog barks, a gunshot cracks — and a U. S. Marine standing guard on a lonely outpost tightens the grip on his rifle.

Was it only a training exercise by Fidel Castro's militia manning the heights surrounding this U. S. Navy base? Did it mean that another Cuban refugee had died in a dash for freedom?

Or could it mean the start of an incursion against a hated Yankee base that Castro calls "a dagger driven into the heart of Cuban territory?"

From the tumbled brown foothills of the Sierra Maestra, frowning down on this isolated base from three sides, the noises are heard often in the night, firing the imaginations of young troopers. On the fourth side, Russian military ships prowling the Caribbean with increasing boldness.

It is an eerie, almost unreal life — a life of constant waiting for an enemy who never comes but who is always out there and who might, in some angry, emotional moment, decide to risk a strike.

"It's weird at first, looking across the fence and knowing they're over there," says Nancy Conway, secretary to the base commander, Rear Adm. Brian McCauley. "But in time you get used to it."

Inside the 14-mile fence cordoning off the base from Castro land, a community of 9,050 military and civilian residents bustles with normal activity. Children go to school and play Little League baseball. Wives shop at the commissaries and visit hairdressers. Marines and sailors swim in the blue Caribbean, fish, play golf, ride horseback trails and play football, baseball, basketball and soccer. Every night, a dozen movies play around the base.

But it is not a normal life. It is a never-ceasing vigil by riflearmed Marines, fighter and helicopter pilots, artillery gunners, warships and tanks. "So long as he remains rational, I don't feel there is any chance that Castro will attack," said McCauley, the base commander since June 23, 1970.

"But when you have dependents in a hostile country, you do all you can to guarantee their safety."

There is always concern that Castro might stage a diversionary assault to take the minds of his people off a staggering economy in which food shortages have become a way of life.

To be ready for instant action in any contingency, defense exercises are staged every six weeks. These are the only exercises by any U. S. military post in which women and children participate.

At the sound of a siren, bars and commissaries close. Wives rush to their homes where bags are kept packed and ready for immediate evacuation. Children are sped homeward in a fleet of school buses. In case of actual attack, the buses would take them directly to the pier to board ships standing by in the harbor.

Troops man foxholes, trenches and bunkers. Tanks rumble over brush-hidden trails to a staging area for deployment. Combat ships steam out to sea and stand by to lend fire support. Planes take to the air.

"If Castro does come," says Marine Col. Van D. Bell Jr., "he knows he will have to come in superior numbers. We can hold this base as long as we desire."

"Gitmo," as the base has been known to generations of sailors since it was wrested from the Spanish in 1898, is a major strategic asset controlling the Caribbean and the Windward and Mona passages to the Panama Canal.

Protected from the elements, navigable by the biggest ships of the fleet, and with a 14,000-square mile area of deep Caribbean waters free of major sea and air traffic, Guantanamo Bay is considered the best natural location for shipboard training in the world.

But, perhaps most of all, it is a psychological emblem of U. S. power and prestige thrust into the hide of the Sierras — the same mountains that sheltered Castro as he goaded Cubans into the rebellion that was to lead them behind the Iron Curtain.

Last Feb. 16, on the anniversary of a treaty giving the United States perpetual claim to the base, Castro was quoted by Havana Radio: "We will never disclaim that piece of land, and we will never cease claiming it until it is returned to our country."

He called the base a center of corruption and sinister plotting, a refuge for criminals, a center for counterrevolutionaries, and "the only remaining symbol of Yankee capacity and aggression against the Cubans."

But, Castro added, "We are not going to take it away by force." McCauley agreed: "We're not about to leave it."

"It's the Russian Navy sailing all around that bothers us, not Castro," McCauley said. "In the current Russian maneuvers, this base is a very important enclave in Cuba. The people of the United States need to realize that we still have a stronghold in this very strategic spot."

Before Castro, duty at Gitmo was widely sought by sailors. The gates were wide open to the happy island of Cuba. Men on leave flocked to Pope's Place in nearby Caimanera and the Arizona Bar in Guantanamo City. Friendly Cuban girls came to the Saturday night dances on the base.

But in November, 1958, as the Castro revolution against Fulgencio Batista flared, Cuban territory was declared off-limits to military personnel and the gates closed.

The last physical connection between the base and Cuba — two pipelines delivering water daily from the Yateras River to Guantanamo — was severed in 1964 by orders from Rear Adm. John D. Bulkeley.

A seawater desalting plant was hastily assembled and in six months Gitmo was a self-sufficient operation. But what had been a great duty base was now a hardship post for the single man.

For men with wives, a tour still can be rewarding. There are no expensive restaurants or jewelry and clothing stores. They can save money.

On leaves, sailors and Marines take rest and recreation in nearby Jamaica, Haiti and Puerto Rico, and in the States when transport is available.

After 1964, tight security was clamped on the base. Newsmen were not encouraged to visit and those who came were closely restricted in their movements. For four years, Gitmo was almost a forgotten base.

Now the bars are down. Reporters tour the perimeters by jeep and helicopter and are given access to all areas.

Forty-five posts ring the fence on the U. S. side, some manned by day, some by night, and some around the clock. Steel and concrete bunkers are surrounded by the largest known mine fields in the world. In the event of a filtration attempt, floodlights can illuminate key areas of the fence like Yankee Stadium.

The 45-square-mile area of the base consists of one-third water, one-third salt marshes and one-third highlands. If attacked, Bell said the 1,400-man Marine detachment would pull back into rugged hills in the southeast corner, giving the enemy the swamps. "We'll still be there," he said, "when help comes."

Last year, when Castro failed in a frenzied effort to achieve a goal of 10 million tons of sugar, Bell expected a rush of sugar cane cutters trying to get into the base from fields to the north.

At the height of last year's harvest, the Cubans started building a new fence barrier around the base, with watch towers like those between East and West Germany. There is a triple fence in the center of a 300-yard wide strip cleared of all vegetation. The open area gives militiamen clear shots at fleeing refugees.

"Fewer Cubans get in each year," one Marine said. "Castro is getting better at catching them. Only the most desperate try it now."

Under orders from the State department, nobody talks officially about the refugee problem. Reports from Cuban sources, however, indicate that fewer than 400 reached this haven last year, about half of the 1969 total. And a majority of these came by water rather than through the Cuban fences, land mines and border guards.

These sources estimate that 4,000 Cubans have reached the States through Gitmo and that at least as many have been killed in the attempt. Only 360 Cuban workmen still commute from jobs on the base to homes outside. Some have died or are believed to have been imprisoned at home. As their ranks thin, more than 1,000 Jamaicans have been brought in to replace them.

In the early days of the Castro regime, the commuters were threatened and bullied by Castro militiamen in sight of the gate as they were forced to exchange their U. S. dollars for Cuban pesos. Now the "search house" is hidden behind a hill. To reach it, the aging workmen must climb more than a mile up a steep slope through a fenced "cattle chute."

The pesos are virtually worthless because there is little to buy in Cuba. The workers try to save enough of them to buy tickets for loved ones on flights to Mexico.

Merchant ships including Russians and those of U. S. allies, are allowed to enter the bay, passing through a water gate to the sugar-loading port of Boqueron under escort.

Just over the fence, Caimanera sits like a ghost town. Castro had trumpeted that he would turn it into a showplace but the project soon bogged down. A large, Russian-type apartment building stands like a gaunt skeleton, abandoned with walls in place. The harbor is silted up and useless.

An evil-looking 16-foot shark lurks at the water gate and all around the mist-shrouded peaks of the Sierras glower down on this democratic bastion in a Communist land. "When we first built this base," says Marine Capt. George Kleas, looking ruefully up at the hills, "those were friendlier over there."

UNOFFICIAL MASCOT Legendary Mongrel Pet Is Mourned

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Dodo is dead.

The tiny black and brown mongrel dog who wandered dripping wet out of a summer storm one night five years ago and into the hearts of the U. S. Naval Academy's 4,000-man brigade, was discovered ill in the academy yard recently and died soon afterward.

His past was murky and his ancestors unknown, but Dodo fast became a legend in his own time, outranking Tecumseh and the famed Navy goat in Academy tradition.

Although he was never accorded recognition by academy officials, he was that tiny touch of home to new recruits and a symbol of independence once known to upper classmen.

Dodo never spent two consecutive nights in the same room, fastidiously avoided favoritism, and the disdain with which he held commissioned officers brought secret delight to the hearts of his human roommates. Wherever the brigade went, Dodo was there.

He slept in Bancroft Hall, ate in the mess hall, trotted happily alongside the midshipmen at parades, including the fabled June Week Color Parade, and regularly attended classes.

It was not unusual to see plebes (freshmen) snap to attention when Dodo sauntered into their room.

So important was he to the brigade that various plebes were assigned to keep a log of his activities.

A sample entry reads: "Midshipman dog was seen returning from chapel this morning. A glow of humility was noted in his eyes and he was obviously in penance to atone for missing morning meal yesterday. He decided to anticipate this morning's formation and arrived 17 minutes early."

Dodo became the official brigade mascot — although, ignored by the administration — at a pep rally preceding the Navy-Syracuse football game several years ago. He was presented with the gold "N" on top and gold letters reading "Bite Army" on either side.

He trotted at the sidelines at every Navy football game.

Newsom (right), son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Newsom of 416 Dallas St., meets with another Texan, Jerry Grote of the New York Mets, before the annual Army exhibition game with a major league team. The two were the starting catchers in the April 15 game, which the Mets won, 8-0. Cadet Newsom was hit on the hand in the fifth inning by one of Met pitcher Nolan Ryan's fast balls and missed more than two weeks of the season with the resulting bruise. He batted .333 in the cadets' first eight regular games. A graduate of Big Spring High School, Cadet Newsom played high school baseball and football.

It marked the third time in the series that a game was decided in overtime.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City chased Baltimore's Dave McNally after four innings with a rash of doubles and went on to a 5-2 victory Saturday, the Royals' second straight over the Orioles.

The Royals, who had lost 23 straight games to Baltimore before winning Friday night, broke through McNally, 4-1, with three runs in the fourth inning. Amos Otis and Lou Piniella doubled for one run and one out later Paul Schaaf doubled for another. Schaaf scored on a single by Carl Taylor.

BALTIMORE (AP) — For the first time since he started playing basketball more years ago than he cares to remember, Oscar Robertson sipped the sweetest taste of success.

LITTLE LEAGUE Battle And Moore Shine In Victory

Dick Battle struck out 13 hitters and Gary Moore banged out three base hits as the Cardinals blasted the Lions 12-1 in National League action Friday night.

The Cubs and the Sparks battled to an 8-8 deadlock in National League action here Saturday morning.

The Cubs came up with six big runs in the second frame to ice the contest, after the Lions had taken a short-lived 1-0 advantage in the top of the first.

Oscar, still unstoppage at 32 years of age and giving perhaps the finest defensive effort of his career, pumped in 21 of his 30 points in the first half of the nationally televised finale as the Bucks surged ahead 60-47 by intermission, and never looked back.

Losing hurler Bobby Doe had a perfect night at the plate for the Lions with three hits in three trips.

Steve Eastland and David Trim had doubles for the Ponies while Joe Edmiston accounted for the only hit, a single.

The Cabots came behind with two runs in the top of the sixth to take a 9-8 decision over the Jets in American League Little League play Friday night.

The Mustangs are 1-0-1 in the standings while the Firebirds are 1-1.

The winners outdid the Jets, 12-5, with Bill Arencebia, Robinson, K. Wheeler and R. Trawick pacing the Cabots' hitting attack.

Alcindor, too, who has worked hand-in-glove with his fellow superstar to make the dream possible, had nothing but praise for his running mate.

The Blacks mauled the Greens 14-1 in American Little League competition Saturday morning. The winners collected five hits.

After wiping out first San Francisco and then Los Angeles each in five games, the Bucks stormed past the Bullets by no less than eight points in any of the four games to win a playoff pool of $212,000, which will come to about $15,000 per man.

In a contest called after the fourth inning because of the 10-run rule, the Sabres blasted the Comets, 14-1, in International League competition Friday evening.

Gerald Withrow spun a two-hitter and gave up just the lone tally in going the route for the Sabres. He and rightfielder Richard Cox shared hitting honors for the Sabres also with two hits apiece.

Only Thora proved to be the only horn in Withrow's side as he picked up the two hits for his nine.

The Sabres remained unbeaten in league competition and the Comets suffered their first loss in two games.

Jim Robinson picked up the win Friday night as the National League minor league Colts romped to an easy 16-1 victory over the Astros.

Gerald Withrow and Charlie Bennett, T. Viera and M. Viera.

For the winners Steve Milhouser had two for two with a double and triple and Buddie Collins added a two-bagger.

Tommy Rodriguez, on the hill for the Blacks, fanned ten of the 14 batters he faced. The game opened the season for both teams.

Harper's line drive into the right field seats was his first homer of the season and the fifth hit off Bahnsen, 1-3.

Collis Jones Is Signed By Chaps

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Chaparrals of the American Basketball Association announced Saturday the signing of 6-foot-8 Collis Jones of Notre Dame.

Jones, a first-round draft choice of the NBA champion Milwaukee Bucks and a fifth round ABA choice of Texas had been eagerly sought by both teams.

Terms of the contract were not released. Among the reasons Jones offered for choosing to sign with the Chaps over Milwaukee were "a very fair contract and the opportunity to make an immediate playing contribution to the team."

Jones played high school basketball at St. John's prep in Washington, D.C., and went on to establish an all-time record at Notre Dame by playing in 85 consecutive varsity games.

During his consecutive game streak, he became the fifth-leading scorer in Notre Dame history and twice led the Irish in rebounds.

Pirates Edge Padres, 5-4, In Eleventh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gene Alley punched a run-scoring single in the 11th inning Saturday, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 victory over San Diego that stretched the Padres' losing streak to six games.

Rookie Bill Laxton walked. Bob Robertson to open the Pirates' 11th and Manny Sanguillen sacrificed before Alley singled to center, scoring Robertson to snap a 4-4 tie.

Jim Grant, the fourth Pittsburgh pitcher, stopped the Padres over the last two innings to pick up the victory.

Older Brown's run-scoring single in the Padres' seventh had tied it.

Don Mason led off the inning with a single but was forced at second by Larry Stahl, who then stole second, continued to third on a wild throw by catcher Sanguillen and tallied on Brown's hit to right.

Johnny Jones had two doubles and drove in three runs for the winners. Valencia batted out five of the Tigers' 17 blows.

Clem Sanchez, on the pitching rubber for the winners, surrendered but two hits. Those were by Ricky Ross and Frank Dutchover.

Longhorn Gridders Set To Launch Workouts

Upwards to 120 boys, 70 of them in the top three grades, will answer coach Clovis Hale's call to spring football workouts here Monday.

The Longhorns will likely scrimmage about ten minutes Monday and engage in their first intra-squad drill at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

On Saturday, May 15, the Bovines will line up against the Seniors. Present plans call for the annual spring game the night of Friday, May 21.

Hale said the Steers would again work a great deal of time on defense.

Mike Adams, a senior-to-be, will be at the controls for the Steers. Mike opened at that position for the Steers in 1970, due to the illness of all-district QB Dave Duncan.

Adams will be backed by junior Alan Davis, junior Scott Carlisle and sophomore Tom Sorley.

VETERANS
Letterman due back with the Steers include center Pete Shaffer, 175, who was injured much of last season; tackle Rondel Brock, 195; end Cal Lowery, 175; running back Ricky Steen, 175; fullback Arthur Trevino, 170; and defensive back Gatlin Jones, 160.

The starting left end could well be Nate Poss, a 170-pounder who is a whiz at catching the ball. Chris Duron will back him up.

Joe Pesina, 220, up from the JV unit, will be available for one guard spot on offense while Jan Whatley, 170, will likely play the other guard position.

Sharing duties with Brock at tackle will be D. W. Powell, 200. Rob Lawlis, 165, and Jeff Murdock, 195, are other candidates for tackle positions while Mike Urban, 175, and Craig Brown, 180, will be competing for guard jobs.

Mike Williamson, 170, will spell Shaffer at center.

Dick Conley, 205, bids fair to make somebody hustle for the running back position. At flanker, the Steer coaches likely will have Mike McCormick, 150, and Arthur Guess, 155. Barry Truett, 170, and fleet Walter Jordan may fit into the secondary somewhere. J. T. Smith, a running back, could wind up at flanker.

AT CORNERBACK
Brown looms as one of the better linebacks in camp. Brock will also, back the line. Soph Earl Reynolds, a tremendous prospect, will fit into the defensive secondary somewhere if he doesn't break into the lineup on offense. Mike Tredaway and Darrell Brunson are candidates for the cornerback spot. The rover is likely to be Truett or Vin McQueen. Mike Parker will likely play at defensive left end, until Jerry Knoepfel beats him out.

Scott McKnight has come along well this spring and could go at one of the linebacker's spot. Mike Risetter will book playing time at defensive tackle.

Coaches who will work with the team include John Varnell, offensive line; Buster Barnes, receivers; Bill Moore and Bill Narrell, offensive line; Tommy Fambrough, backfield; Oakey Hagood, offensive backfield; Garland Braun, backfield; and Tim Smith, offensive end.

On defense, Braun will toil with the secondary. Moore the tackles, Smith the cornerbacks, Narrell the linebackers and Barnes the ends.

The Steers will compare favorably in size with last year's club, with the line being just a bit larger.

This year's team will boast 22 seniors. The Steers open at home against Lubbock Monday the night of Sept. 10.

PROS ARE RAPPED McConachie Sees Help For Preps

L. W. McConachie, Executive Vice-President of the Texas High School Coaches' Association, is optimistic that a new law will prohibit professional football from using Friday and Saturday in competition with the high schools and colleges.

The House and Senate at Washington have been asked for the new rule and it will be decided between now and the summer.

The nation's high schools have asked Congress to close the "loophole" that allowed clubs not included in the national television of playing each other at the same time as the high schools and colleges.

It hasn't yet involved Texas, since no Pro team in this state has gone against the rule, but it can be done unless the new law is passed. Fourteen games were played in the Friday and Saturday dates for television, according to information passed on to McConachie from over the nation last year.

He has been working for the rule with the rest of the nation's high school leaders. He is a consultant with the National High School Association and has found that all congressmen from Texas favored the new rule.

J. Jake Pickle of Austin has worked hard to help the high school leaders as have all other House and Senate members in Texas.

It was the National High School movement that caused the optimistic change in the rule with McConachie. He thinks sufficient interest in Congress is large enough to put the new plan over. When the rule was first passed it left the "loophole" open. The Commissioner of the National Football League and the American Football League make up the schedule for the teams that go on the television contract. But other teams have made their own agreement on who to play. Even the time is Friday—night—or Saturday starting the second week in September and continued until the second week in December.

Texas High School leaders will go to Kansas City to hear about more plans from the NCAA.

"The law must be passed or it will hurt the colleges too," said McConachie. The Pros can use five nights in the week and certainly we deserve the Friday and Saturday opens for our benefit. Otherwise, it will cut down materially on high school and college games."

run of the season in the third for the Astros' final run.

Houston (AP)—Larry Dierker fired a five-hitter, retiring the first 11 batters and another string of 14, and Joe Morgan provided the hitting spark as the Houston Astros defeated the New York Mets and Tom Seaver 3-1 Saturday night.

The only hits of Dierker, 4-0, through eight innings were two-out singles by Dave Marshall and Cleon Jones in the fourth inning as the Mets' five-game winning streak came to an end. Ed Kranepool popped up for the inning's final out.

Houston jumped on Seaver, 4-1, for two runs in the first inning on Joe Morgan's one-out double, Jim Wynn's RBI single and Bob Watson's single which scored Wynn, who had taken second on the throw to the plate. Dennis Menke also singled before Seaver got out of the inning.

Morgan hit his third home run of the season in the third for the Astros' final run.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—Rice's Owls stormed to a climatic victory in the mile relay Saturday night to stun defending Southwest Conference track champion Texas A&M, which suffered a costly blow when world 400 record holder Curtis Mills fell with a leg injury in the 220 yard dash race.

Rice captured the title by a mere one-half point 60 1/2 to 60 as the Aggies placed second in the last event before a dazed crowd.

The Rice running order in the mile relay was Lange Bingham, Denny Dicke, Steve Straub, and Chip Grandjean. The Owl quartet turned in a 3:09.3 to a 3:10.8 for the Aggies running without Mills.

Mills suffered a muscle cramp as he buzzed around the first turn in the 220 that was eventually won by Joe Pouncy of Southern Methodist.

"It went dead on me right at the turn," Mills said. "Lange one is a tough lane to run in the 220. It has such a short turn. That is where it hit me."

Mills tried to come back for the mile relay but Aggie Coach Charlie Thomas wouldn't allow it.

A gutsy second place finish in the 3-mile run by Paul Stansberry of Rice gave the Owls four vital points. Stansberry staggered across the finish line in 14:16.4 just nipping A&M's Frank Ybarbo, who was third. Stansberry was vomiting on the Astroturf at Kyle Field as the mile relay teams brought home the narrow victory for the Owls.

Logan Stollenwerck, 69, Ex-Grid Great, Is Dead

IRVING, Tex. (AP)—Logan Stollenwerck, 69, one of the greats at Southern Methodist University, died Friday of a heart attack at his home here.

Stollenwerck played high school sports in Hillsboro and Waxahachie and entered SMU in 1921.

He quarterbacked the Ray Morrison-coached Mustangs and led them to the school's first Southwest Conference football championship in 1923.

Stollenwerck's passing helped the conference gain national status and the quarterback himself won national notice.

He was principal of Otis Brown Elementary School in Irving. He had been with the Irving system since 1956 after being superintendent at Forney.

Raiders Sew Up Third In SWC

LUBBOCK (AP)—Bob Geurin scattered seven hits and went the distance in his first start of the season Saturday as Texas Tech clinched third place in the Southwest Conference baseball race with a 6-1 victory over Texas Christian.

Dave Hazzard slugged two triples and Cecil Norris hit a solo home run in the fifth inning to highlight Tech's 8-hit attack.

Larry Grinland went three innings for TCU and got the loss.

Houston Confident But Problems Loom

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—The University of Houston contingent arrives today for a crucial meeting with Southwest Conference faculty representatives who will decide whether to admit the Cougars as the ninth member of the league.

Harry Fouke, Houston athletic director, said he foresees no major problems in getting a needed six votes from the eight conference members.

However, everything will not be all cut and dried. There is talk that Arkansas possibly could abstain.

Several schools—such as Baylor—are dead set against the Cougars playing for the basketball championship until their current freshman crop graduates.

Scheduling problems make it impossible for Houston to play for the football championship until 1976.

Also, a number of members would the round-robin scheduling. However, everything will not

Wedding Ceremony Performed Saturday

Miss Jo Annette Sturdevant and Travis Neill Conaway exchanged wedding vows at 4 p.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church of Westbrook. The Rev. Frank W. Hodnett performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with baskets of palms and bouquets of white gladiol and chrysanthemums.

MRS. TRAVIS CONAWAY

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sturdevant, 615 McEwen; Big Spring, and Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Conaway Westbrook.

Traditional wedding music was provided by Mrs. Charles Ranne, pianist, and Louis Loveless, vocalist.

The bride was attired in a floor-length, peau de soie gown with short, puffed sleeves. Beaded pearl bands accented the front panel and trimmed the sleeves of the princess-style gown. Her elbow-length veil was held with a cluster of flowers and she carried a cascade of white gladioli.

ATTENDANTS
Miss Linda Massey of Big Spring was the maid of honor and wore a formal-length, Empire gown of pink chiffon. Her pink shoulder-length veil was held with a velvet bow. William Conaway of Westbrook served his brother as best man. Ushers were Jerry Hancock and Phillip Hancock of Midland.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. The refreshment table was covered with a white net cloth and accented with an arrangement of mixed pink and white flowers. The three-tiered wedding cake was topped with miniature wedding bells.

Serving were Mrs. Andrew Hancock of Midland, sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Charles Porch of Big Spring. Mrs. Larry Harp of Lubbock presided at the guest register.

WEDDING TRIP
Following a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Westbrook. The bride is a graduate of Big Spring High School and attended Howard County Junior College. She was formerly employed by West Texas Compress and Warehouse Company.

Conaway graduated from Westbrook High School and also attended HCJC. He is presently engaged in farming and ranching with his father.

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Rowden, 1607 Oriole, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Deborah Diane, to George William Ebersole, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Ebersole, 110 Ashwood Way, Harrisburg, Pa. The couple plans a late May wedding at the Webb AFB Chapel.

Bride-Elect Honored At Shower

Miss Vivian Pierson, bride-elect of Capt. Andrew W. Gambardella Jr., was honored with a bridal shower Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. J. D. Cauble, 1701 W. 14th.

Hostesses were Mrs. Robert Lake, Mrs. Jack Magee of El Paso, Mrs. Arthur Williams and Mrs. Cauble.

The honoree was attired in a lavender and green A-line dress, and was presented with a lavender carnation corsage. The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a miniature bride, encircled with assorted flowers in Miss Pierson's chosen wedding colors of yellow and green.

Miss Pierson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene W. Pierson Sr., Eugene, Ore.; and Capt. Gambardella is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Gambardella Sr., Rosedale, N.Y. The couple plans a May 8 wedding at the Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church.

'ROUND TOWN

BY LUCILLE PICKLE

Had you noticed how the little roadside wild flowers are expressing their gratitude for the little rain? They are making the tourists' way a bit brighter by blooming as profusely as only the gay, yellow buttercups can and they are joined at intervals by the colorful Mexican Hat. To add to the gaiety there are pretty purple daisies and their bright yellow cousins, that are of the same strain, but I haven't a name for them. Add to these those bountiful roses that are in bloom all over the city, and the stately jonquils, and we have a pretty good May Basket.

Various members of the W. L. (Squeakie) THOMPSON family are having their problems. MRS. W. L. (Cookie) THOMPSON, JR., underwent knee surgery at a Lackland AFB hospital in San Antonio Wednesday. Anyone wishing to send her a card or letter may send it in care of Lt. Col. Lillian Parrish, Rolling Ridge Sq., Apt. 215, 5335 NW Loop 14, San Antonio, 78229. Mrs. Thompson will be in San Antonio for 10 days, and will come here for possibly three weeks before going back for a change of cast.

On Friday the Thompson's daughter, MRS. MARVIN (Martha) SIMMONS, underwent back surgery for the second time. She is at Gaston Ave. Hospital in Dallas where she will probably be for four weeks. Her home address is 2018 Wedgewood Lane, Carrollton, 75006.

Mrs. Thompson planned to go to Carrollton this weekend to see after her granddaughter, Cathy, if Squeakie was well enough. He's been feeling a little weak since his recent discharge from a local hospital after a bout with pneumonia.

It took 20 years, but MRS. ROBERT BOADLE's mother and stepfather, MR. and MRS. ROY M. SMITH, finally got down from Brattleboro, Vt., for a visit. The two have now returned to their home but during their stay here they were taken to El Paso and over to Juarez, Mexico, and also toured the Carlsbad Caverns.

While they were in Carlsbad they were witnesses at the April 15 wedding of MRS. RUBY BRUNS and EVERETT HILL.

Other Big Spring visitors to El Paso and Juarez during the past week were MRS. W. G. WILSON and her son, W. W. WILSON, who is vacationing here from his work in Lima, Peru.

Odessa threw a fine party for the board members of CRMWD, and one that I am sure was appreciated by the member cities. Some showed their appreciation more than others but nevertheless it was fun to attend. We especially enjoyed a good visit with MRS. E. V. SPENCE who came up from Corpus Christi for the occasion. She is as charming as ever and thrilled by the affair for the water district, for which her late husband was first general manager. Also we had a lot of words to swap with the PETE TALLEYS who lived here for many years before moving to Odessa.

This is the week that MRS. R. D. CAUDILL has been looking forward to almost since she returned from a European tour last year. Wednesday she is going over again with her good friends of Abilene. MRS. CLARA CRAIG, MRS. TROY STRICKLIN and MRS. FLOY CHOATE. The four will go to Little Rock, Ark., where they will join the touring group for a flight to New York and will then fly to Amsterdam, Holland. The tour is planned to begin right at the start of the flower blooming season in Amsterdam and they should follow the flowers just about everywhere they go. They will go through Belgium and France, then down to Spain where they will board the huge USS Rotterdam for the cruise of the Mediterranean. Incidentally, it doesn't take up much space on the map, but the women are thrilled with the prospect of visiting Monaco. Also the cruise will include stops in Turkey and Greece and a number of other islands. Bon Voyage, You all!

MRS. J. C. PICKLE and MRS. ARTHUR PICKLE returned Thursday from El Paso where Mrs. J. C. Pickle attended the state garden club convention and her mother-in-law visited her grandson and his family, MR and MRS. DON PICKLE.

Odors Disappear With Soda Mix

Help keep baby fragrant by wiping up accidental spitups with dry baking soda and by rinsing out rubber pants regularly in a baking soda solution. Because soda is a food product, it also makes a good safe cleanser for all areas with which baby comes in touch, including crib bumpers, playpen rungs, the highchair, the interior of the carriage and toys.

Students 'Give A Hoot' At Kentwood School

There's no age limit on the 'Give A Hoot - Don't Pollute' campaign. The second and third grade students of Mrs. Doris Peters and Mrs. Ray Cantrell at Kentwood Elementary School recently began a program to keep the grounds of the school neat and clean. The project spread to vacant lots where several of the children now go to pick up country, and they are now composing slogans about ecology.

Men's Slacks In New Materials

Many of the new slack ideas for male fashions this spring make news with fabrics. Velvets and canvas are some of the more distinctive fabrics. The newest look in slacks is the high waistband style. Low slung hip huggers still will be popular, and flared bottoms continue as a favorite.

The Convent That Became A Home

By JO BRIGHT
"All that remains of what once was a flourishing educational and religious institution known as the Convent and Academy of Our Lady of Mercy is a large two-story structure of adobe and weatherboard located on a hill overlooking the town of Stanton, Martin County."

Giving little hint of the fascinating story she was to unfold, Franchelle Moore thus began the compilation of a history of the convent which became her home. The story, ten pages of West Texas history, is contained in the December, 1963, issue of the Texas Periman Historical Annual.

It is the account of a brave experiment — a record of the small band of magnificent women who journeyed far to live, and some to die, in the "dreary wasteland" of Texas. On a wind-swept hill, within sight of the former convent, lie the graves of five of the nuns.

The events which led to their coming have been gleaned from official records and the writings of Texas historians.

FOUR MONKS
In 1881 when Stanton was known as Grelton, a station on the Texas and Pacific railway which included a telegraph office and pump house, there arrived five men — four monks and a laybrother — to establish a German Catholic colony and to found a Carmelite monastery. They caused the name of the station to be changed to Mariensfeld ("Field of Mary") in honor of the Virgin Mary. Two tents served as the men's first shelter, but by the fall of 1882, a two-story adobe monastery began to take shape. By 1887, a parochial school had been erected, and it was placed under the supervision of the Sisters of Divine Providence of San Antonio.

The devastating drought of 1886-87 caused many of the pioneer settlers to leave the area, and in 1897 the Carmelite Fathers sold their property to a small group of Sisters of Mercy who had arrived in Stanton from San Francisco, Calif. The nuns reopened the school, and the monastery became the Convent of Our Lady of Mercy. The academy was formally opened that year with an enrollment of 61 pupils. Approximately 3,000 pupils, including boarders from other states, would attend classes there before it closed its doors.

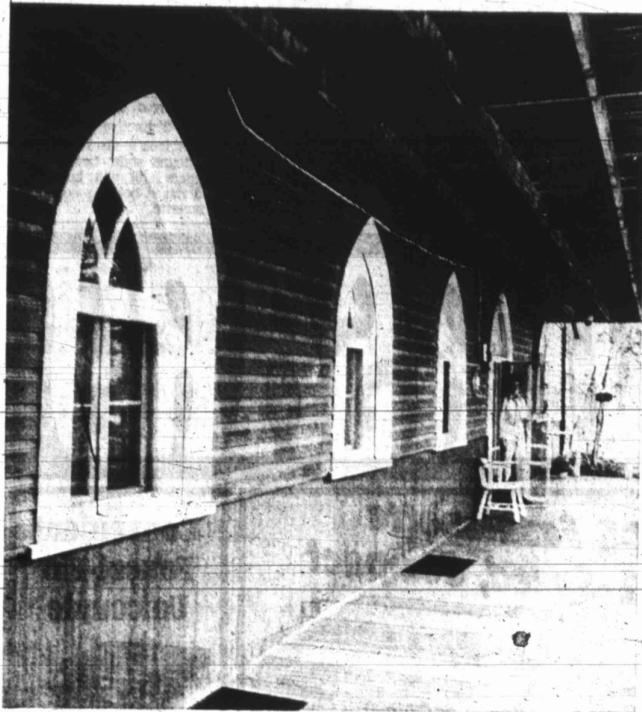

The tornado struck on June 11, 1938.

At that time, according to Miss Moore, the institution included an adobe brick church, St. Joseph's, the convent (which is the remaining building), a boys' dormitory, girls' dormitory, laundry and recreational buildings, barns, windmills, cisterns and other out-buildings. The three main buildings formed a quadrangle.

The spring semester had ended May 30, so only eight sisters and one boarder remained at the academy when, after a very sultry afternoon, ominous clouds began to form in the southwest. The fury of the funnel collapsed buildings, toppled windmills and blew away the roof of the center building. Then came the rain — and the adobe bricks began to disintegrate.

NO LIFE LOST
Miraculously, no human life was lost, but the academy would never recover from its wounds.

Sister M. Aloysius DuBronz, superior of the convent and academy on that day, celebrated her 50th anniversary with the order in 1968 and is now assigned to Mercy Hospital DOORWAY TO THE PAST — Miss Franchelle Moore stands at the front door of her Stanton home, formerly the Academy and Convent of the Sisters of Mercy. in Slaton. The first superior, and foundress of the academy, was Sister M. Berchmans Kast who, at the age of 94, died Dec. 8, 1940, and is buried at Slaton.

No longer able to serve its purpose, the convent property was sold, eventually being acquired by James E. Kelly, publisher of the Stanton Reporter, and his wife, Cora. They remodeled and redecored some of the interior of the convent, making it their home, but did not change the original lines of the architecture. During these years, the building was divided into several apartments which the Kelleys shared with military families during World War II. Following their deaths the property was inherited by the Kelleys' grandchildren, James W. Moore Jr. of Midland and Miss Moore, who, in recent years, has made her home in the convent while commuting to Midland where she carries on the family's journalistic tradition as women's editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

The property, which includes approximately two acres of land, has greatly increased in value over the years, but although Miss Moore has been approached by prospective buyers, she shows no interest in giving up her unconventional and historic home.

SERENITY
"There's something about it — this place," she mused. "Perhaps it's the serenity, the tranquility. I don't know. But, after the day, it's quietness refreshes me."

That does not mean the house is always quiet.

Miss Moore, pretty and unpretentious, is a woman who appreciates good books, classical music and stimulating companions.

And she has plenty of room to entertain.

Visible evidences of the property's past begins with the original iron fencing and gates. Inside the house, the rectangular living room (part of which was once the chapel) is divided by an archway, at the base of which stands a hand-carved wooden pedestal holding a statue of Jesus as a child.

Miss Moore said that the statuary, which has not been moved since the sisters departed in 1938, includes one of the Virgin Mary standing in a window on a stair landing, and two angels which still flank a pump organ which the sisters brought from San Francisco. There are desks and prayer benches in various rooms, as well as a church pew and circular altar railing on the downstairs porch.

"The small picture of Christ with an inscription in German was evidently set in the wall by one of the monks," explained Miss Moore, who has not been anxious to change the atmosphere of her home.

The entire upper porch, which circles three sides of the structure, was replaced in the interest of safety, but the original columns were retained. The downstairs porch was cemented.

"I painted every inch of this building myself," smiled Miss Moore, ruefully observing that it seems about time to repeat the task.

Other than that, the building remains very much as it was in earlier days. There is one notable addition — near the front door hangs a Texas Historical Building Medallion.

SAYS GOVERNOR'S MOM

'My Turkeys Helped Him Through College'

By JEAN FANNIN
LAMESA — Texas No. 1 mother is just an ordinary ex-farm wife. She doesn't like living in town, she still makes her own quilts and her own clothes and she raises most of her own vegetables in a small garden behind her modest one-bedroom home.

However, there is one extraordinary thing about her. She is the mother of the governor of Texas.

Not that being the governor's mother overly impresses her — it doesn't.

She skipped her son's last inauguration because she didn't have anyone to look after Missy — her minuscule brown Chihuahua puppy.

She is prouder of the fact that her distinguished son has a college education than that he is governor of the second largest and fourth most populous state in the union.

"When he was about six years old, Preston told me, 'Mama, I'm going to make something out of myself.' And I guess he did," Mrs. Effie Smith said of her eldest son.

"I've got two sons with college degrees, I guess that's pretty good for a dirt farmer," she said.

She was born Effie Strickland in 1888 in Anderson County near Palestine. When she was 15 her father packed his family up and moved them to Williamson County on the advice of his doctor.

At 19 she met and married her husband, a widower with five children between the ages of 2 and 6. She later had seven children of her own to add to the happy brood.

"I had six boys and six girls, and we had a good time. I was just a kid with them," she said.

In 1923 the family moved to West Texas, and she has lived in this area ever since.

"When my kids were in school I planted and plowed. I did everything a man could do, except climb the windmill. I just didn't like getting up on that thing."

"We farmed until Mr. Smith was 76, and then we hired a man to farm it for us. Finally we had to move to town so he could be near the doctor," she said. "But he died about three months after we moved to town."

"Sometimes when I get to thinking about the old days, I wish they were back," she said.

"I don't like living in town, and I never did learn to drive a car."

"I like to raise chickens and turkeys. I sent Preston through college on my turkeys. Of course, he had to work too."

"He used to tell us about how he'd have to get out in the snow and fix a flat and then maybe get a quarter for it."

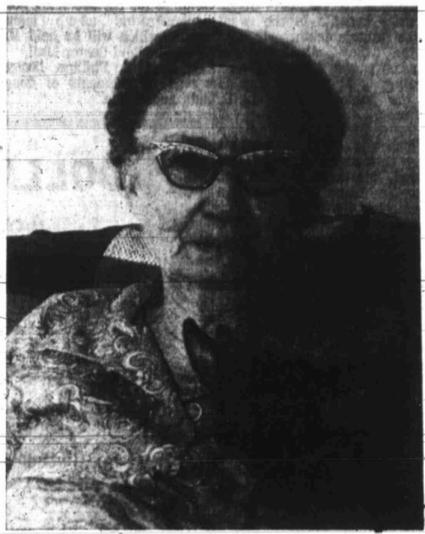

"There was one time he got robbed. Somebody got in his room and stole his books and everything. He came home, and we fixed him up a big bundle of groceries so he could eat until he could make some money."

Even though she liked living on the farm, she can clearly remember the dangers it involved.

"You could sit on the porch at night and hear the snakes rattlin'," she said.

"One time the man who came to fill the butane tank came in and asked my son Johnson if he knew there was a big old rattlesnake out by the tank. Johnson said sure, he knew it, that was one of our pets. That old man sure got out of there in a hurry."

"We also used to have an old cat who'd bring 'em to the house alive, and then just be as pleased as punch about what she'd done. One day we were about to leave for town and I went through the house to shut the front door. There was a big old rattlesnake coiled up on the front porch and that old cat was just walking around and around that snake. He had him so confused he didn't know where to strike."

"Another time I was going out to the garden and I came upon this rattler about five feet long and as big around as my arm. I just took my hornet off and laid it down and went back and got Mr. Smith. You know, if you'll just lay down a bonnet or a coat or something that old snake will stay there waiting for it to move and you can get away from it. And it will still be there if someone comes back to kill it."

"We also had more polecats than you'd ever hope to see. Those old skunks would burrow down in the cellar and kill my chickens."

"You also had to keep an eye on your turkeys and chickens because the coyotes and wolves would come right up and get them."

One thing moving into town has done for her is to get her back into the Methodist Church.

"I was born a Methodist, and I've been a Methodist all my life, even though I had to go to the Baptist Church for 30 years. When I finally moved back to town I went to the Methodist Church and told them that I wanted back in even, though I never had joined the Baptist Church and felt like I was still a Methodist."

Concerning politics, Mrs. Smith has little to say. "About an hour before he died Mr. Smith told Preston he wished he'd get out of politics. Course it's Preston's life."

City Women Are Fashion Guides

Watching the women of New York is as good a guide as any to what the American female has decided about skirts and the answer is pretty obvious. Girls in the coed class, particularly those with slim and shapely legs, would rather die than give up their miniskirts, despite occasional flings with mild or maxi fashions.

But their mothers, and even older sisters, are wearing longer skirts. Anything goes from midknee on down.

A LOVELIER YOU Pretty Hat Will Be Valuable Accessory

By MARY SUE MILLER

Spring hats reflect spring clothes — the classic, romantic and workman moods of fashion. Could be your most effective accessory will prove to be a new hat.

Let us say that you will step into spring with a classic navy reefer over a white crepe shirt-dress. How better could you accessorize than with a swishy red milan, classic of brim and floating a chiffon scarf? Well, milady, you couldn't.

Of perhaps your choice of costume runs to a sweet, gentle dress of yesteryear: a sunny yellow dimity, sashed and ruffled around the ankles. It follows that your hat will be a wide-brimmed leghorn, ringed around with buttercups larger than life.

Those newsy work inspired outfits, the denim and ticking jumpers, jumpsuits, overalls, and safari suits, capture teen hearts. Right in the groove are hats to match the jobs from trainmen's caps to hunters' topees.

Pants? The fashion continues and looks new when topped off with a natural panama or planter's straw, banded in gayest of prints. Actually, all fashion puts on a color show as if to brighten the world. Clean clear shades bring sunshine to a besogged sky. To a Lovely's own atmosphere.

Leg Watching Is Easy Sport Now

"The most spectacular boon to leg watchers will be the saucy crop of short, short city pants," says Betty Curry, a fashion director. "Some of the new genre of city pants are so abbreviated, they make the micro-mini seem conservative." To meet the challenge of these more revealing-than-ever styles, one company has a new all sheer panty hose style.

Marriage Legislation Explained To Clubs

Four Howard County home demonstration clubs met last week with two clubs having a program on current Texas marriage laws. One club heard the program concerning nutrition and the heart, while the fourth group studied types of household cleaners.

CENTER POINT CLUB
The heart is the most remarkable part of the body, said Mrs. Delaine Crawford, Howard County home demonstration agent, speaking to the Center Point HD Club Tuesday in the home of Mrs. A. F. Gilliland, 1010 E. 12th.

In her program, "Nutrition and the Heart," Mrs. Crawford said that the heart is like a mass of muscles and should be exercised according to the person's vocation, age and health.

"The gradual change of blood is performed by the heart in a rotary motion of about half work and half rest," said Mrs. Crawford. "During a life span of 70 years, the heart rests about 40 years."

For maintaining a healthy heart, Mrs. Crawford suggested less hard fats in the diet, daily exercise and following a doctor's advice completely.

Mrs. J. R. Petty presided. A clothing leader training session will be held at 2 p.m., May 10 in the agent's office. Members attending will be Mrs. W. L. Eggleston, Mrs. C. T. Lindley and Mrs. Gilliland.

Mrs. Travis Melton and Mrs. W. D. Barth announced that articles to be displayed at the arts and crafts exhibit May 13 in the Highland Center Mall, should be at the mall by 11 a.m.

The attendance prize was won by Mrs. Jack Smith. Guests were Mrs. Florence Rhoten, Mrs. H. E. Hall, Miss Nancy Martinez and Mrs. Crawford. The women will meet at 11 a.m., May 11, in the home of Mrs. Petty, 1013 Sycamore, and go from there to the Comanche Trail Park for a picnic lunch.

KNOTT CLUB
Mrs. Joe Myers discussed old and new marriage laws for the Knott Home Demonstration Club Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Dalton Wright.

Possible new laws concerning common-law marriages will allow parents of boys aged 16 and girls aged 14 to annul such marriages if done within 90 days, according to Mrs. Myers. She also said that proposals are being brought before the courts to provide some means of registration.

Club Sews Quilts For Charity

Members of the Sew and Chatter Club worked on several quilts which will be sold with the proceeds going to various charity projects, Thursday, in the home of Mrs. F. C. Appleton, Coahoma.

Mrs. Tom Rosson presided. The refreshment table was covered with a printed beige and green cloth, centered with an arrangement of African violets.

Mrs. James Coates of Coahoma was a guest. The next meeting is at 3 p.m., May 12 in the home of Mrs. C. Y. Linkscales, 705 W. 18th.

Moisture Needed

Window and door frames may shrink in a house that is extremely dry, thus allowing cold air in. A humidifier can add the right amount of moisture to indoor air.

Piano Auditions Will Start Here Monday

Local piano pupils, numbering 135, have registered as candidates for membership in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians, sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers. The pupils, representing 13 teachers, will play in the national piano playing auditions which will begin here Monday and continue through Saturday.

The auditions will be held this year for the first time, in the Music Building at Howard County Junior College instead of the auditorium as in past years. By participating in the event, the pianists will be striving for a local district, state, national or even international honor.

The sponsoring organization will confer the honors according to the number of standard classic, romantic, and modern pieces chosen from the masters of piano-forte literature each student can creditably perform in the presence of an examiner of note.

From coast to coast over 60,000 piano pupils will participate in this national event which will be held in 600 music centers. The auditions began at Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene, in 1929, and national headquarters are maintained in Austin.

Teachers who have pupils entered in the local auditions are Mrs. S. T. Cheatham, Mrs. William Rau, Mrs. Robert Lee, Mrs. Chester Barnes, Mrs. Chesley Wilson, Mrs. Fred Beckham, Mrs. J. P. Pruitt, Mrs. Fred Haller, Mrs. Dana Schafer of Garden City, Mrs. Sidney Long of Gall, Mrs. R. L. Woods of Coahoma, Mrs. Dick Mitchell of Garden City and Mrs. Ann Gibson Houser, who is serving as chairman for the event.

FOCUS ON FAMILY LIVING

Adequate Diet Determines Children's Growth Patterns

By Catherine Crawford
County RD Agent

School years are important ones nutritionally for the child. The child is exposed to new food patterns when he begins eating meals away from home. Group acceptance becomes increasingly important, and food preferences may be influenced by the group to which a child belongs.

Outwardly, the child between 6 and 10 is growing slowly. However, the child should be storing adequate nutrients for the period of rapid growth in adolescence. A well-balanced and adequate diet is essential during the school years.

Growth for girls usually becomes more rapid around 10 to 11; for boys, the growth spurt begins later, about 13 to 15. An adequate diet is needed throughout the school years to provide building materials for growth and energy for vigorous physical activity.

A child needs the same foods as adults but in different amounts. More of the same health giving foods eaten during the preschool years are needed to supply additional nutrients and calories for the growing child. The size of servings gradually increases during the elementary school years to meet the needs of growing bodies.

MEAL GUIDE
A good guide to follow in planning the child's meals as well as the family's meals is the Daily Food Guide. This guide is composed of four food groups:

1. The Milk Group. It supplies calcium for strong bones and teeth.

2. The Meat Group. It supplies protein which helps build strong, healthy muscles, promotes growth, and helps resist infection.

3. The Fruit and Vegetable Group. It supplies vitamin C necessary for healthy tissues. And, it supplies vitamin A for maintaining healthy skin and good eyesight.

4. The Bread and Cereal Group. It supplies energy. Enriched bread and cereal products supply iron which helps maintain healthy blood. They also supply the B-vitamins which function in maintaining a good digestive tract and help the body use energy from food.

Most school children are in a hurry and may not like to take time for meals. Breakfast, especially, is often skipped, or if eaten, is an entirely inadequate meal. It is best if the child has a fairly routine schedule for meals.

Breakfast is often considered the most important meal of the day. Breakfast really means "breaking a fast" as the body has been without food for 12 hours or more. Studies have been conducted on the effect of breakfast on school-age children. These studies indicate that children who eat breakfast make sharper decisions, become less tired and work and play longer than children who omit breakfast. Children perform better in school if they eat a good breakfast.

A good breakfast furnishes about 1/4 of the day's intake of calories and nutrients. It should contain a source of vitamin C (citrus fruit), a protein food, milk and sufficient other food to supply energy. The imaginative parent can offer a variety of foods at the morning meal. Children may not choose to eat what their parents consider to be typical breakfast foods.

Fold Sweaters, Keep In Drawers

Here's a good grooming tip for the sweater set: Don't hang knit sweaters on a hanger in a clothes closet. They will stretch and lose shape. Fold sweaters loosely and arrange them in a drawer. Place white or light-colored garments on one side, dark-colored garments on the opposite side to avoid lint transfer.

Pharmacy Facts

By Bob Knight, R. Ph.

The search of medical scientists for the causes of disease was dependent on the development of the microscope. When Anton van Leeuwenhoek first observed microbes by means of microscopes he made himself, around 1675, a new era in medicine dawned. Today, scientists have the electron microscope, developed in the 1930's, which uses streams of electrons rather than light rays. With this remarkable instrument, a dime appears to be about a mile in diameter and a human hair over 40 feet in diameter. Even with this spectacular magnification, certain disease-causing viruses are still invisible, which qualifies them as probably the smallest things alive!

Mrs. Wade Choate Given BSP Award

Mrs. Wade Choate was named "Woman of the Year" by the Beta Sigma Phi chapters at the sorority's 40th anniversary Founders Day banquet Thursday at the Webb AFB Officers Open Mess. The affair was sponsored by the BSP City Council.

Mrs. Horace Raakin, Xi Mu Chapter, was the mistress of ceremonies, and Mrs. Clifford Hale, Beta Omicron, gave the invocation.

"Girl of the Year" awards for each chapter went to Mrs. Joe Smith, Alpha Beta Omicron, presented by Mrs. Jack Parrott; Mrs. Bill McIntosh, Beta Omicron, presented by Mrs. Hale; Mrs. Tom Warren, Mu Zeta, presented by Mrs. Robert Knight; Mrs. Clay LaRochelle, Phi Zeta Omega, presented by Mrs. Byron Hedges; and Mrs. Jerry Snodgrass, Xi Mu, presented by Mrs. Oscar Johnson.

"Pledges of the Year" for each chapter were Mrs. Parrott, Alpha Beta Omicron; Mrs. Bill Truette, Beta Omicron; Mrs. James Clevenger, Mu Zeta; and Mrs. Rick McKinney, Phi Zeta Omega. The pledge awards were presented by Mrs. Smith, Mrs. McIntosh, Mrs. Jack Hall and Mrs. Wayne Stroup.

Chapter resumes were read by Mrs. Hedges, Mrs. Jack Owens, Mrs. Knight, Mrs. Melba Smith and Mrs. Johnson. The Founders Day pledge was read by Mrs. Gariand Braun, and a message from BSP international headquarters was read by Mrs. Joe Schalk.

The Big Spring High School stage band provided the program under the direction of Bill Bradley.

Mrs. Choate, awarded the council's highest honor, resides with her husband and two children, Kyle, 11, and Melody, 7, at 2324 Brent Drive. They are members of St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Choate has been active in Beta Sigma Phi since 1959, being a member of Beta Omicron Chapter and Xi Mu Chapter. She has held the chapter offices of treasurer, vice president and president, as well as being chairman for numerous committees and serving on BSP City Council for 11 years. In 1969, she was appointed by that chapter to the post of advisor to Nu Phi Mu Chapter of Phi Zeta Omega, which was organized by the international office.

Sorority awards include the Program of the Year, 1965; Outstanding Girl of the Year, 1966; and Valentine Sweetheart, 1967.

In other clubs, she is currently president of the 1953 Hyperion Club, a member of the Market Challenge Club, a member of the ways and means committee of the Friends of the Library, active on the heritage museum and a past member of the After Five Garden Club.

Her civic activities include a three-year term as trustee for the Howard County United Fund, three-year board member of the Howard County Chapter of the American Cancer Society and a volunteer worker for the YMCA membership drive and March of Dimes. During the last United Fund campaign, she was chairman for the Women's Division. Also, she is a member of Kentwood Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. Choate serves her church as a member of the Altar Society and St. Monica's Guild and teaches Sunday school for seventh-grade students. She was chosen to be listed in the 1968 edition of Outstanding Young Women of America.

PLEDGES OF YEAR—These four young women were honored as their individual chapter's "Pledge of the Year" during the annual BSP banquet Thursday evening. Seated is Mrs. Rick McKinney of Phi Zeta Omega, and those standing are, from left, Mrs. Billy L. Seeking Entries For 'Miss Black Texas'

The Miss Black Texas beauty pageant committee is enthusiastic about the possibility of a young, Black Texas woman winning the title of Miss Black America for 1971-72.

"We know," says Geno M. Isaiah, general chairman, "that Black Texas women have the beauty, talent, intelligence and projection; all the desired qualities, to win this year."

Isaiah went on to say that it is time for Texas to be officially represented at the Miss Black America Beauty Pageant.

"It is time," he said, "for a Texas beauty, be she black, bronze, sepi or in between, to represent Black women all over America."

The primary function of the Miss Black Texas beauty pageant committee is to ensure every young woman who is a potential contestant the opportunity to compete in the preliminaries to the Miss Black Texas Beauty Pageant. This is the first step leading up to competing in the finals scheduled for June 19 in Houston.

"Initial reaction to the Miss Black Texas Pageant has been favorable," reports the chairman. "This is a contest which allows Black beauty to be praised on its own merits. It is a pre-requisite that Black beauty should be judged by Black judges using Black standards, and not the standards of white, middle-class America."

It was further noted by Isaiah that a pageant of this scope allows the entire community (both black and white) a chance to participate. Since contestants are not required to pay anything, any expenses or fees must be borne by a sponsor. This allows civic groups and social clubs, commercial establishments, community organizations, church or religious oriented organizations, and individuals a chance to help a young, Black Texas woman "achieve her dream of dreams."

"A talented and intelligent Miss Black Texas could very well become the next Miss Black America," said Isaiah.

Potential contestants and sponsors may obtain additional information by calling the following number: (AC-713) 526-1237 or by writing to the Miss Black Texas Beauty Pageant Committee, 4906 LaBranch, Suite 101, Houston, Texas 77004.

Buy Washer To Fit Peculiarities

Before you purchase a washer, ask yourself if there are any conditions peculiar to your home which might cause washing problems. For example, if your home has low water pressure, be sure the washer you select has a pressure-fill system so it will fill properly before washing and rinsing.

THANKS FOR SERVICE — Roy Watkins, (left), newly elected president of the board of trustees for the Big Spring Independent School District, and S. M. City Crews Shining Up Public Parks, Facilities

With summer just around the corner and spring already here, the city parks and recreation department has begun to make the public city parks ready for the sun-lovers and picnickers.

Rejuvenation of the Comanche Trail swimming pool is underway with the old paint already having been taken off the walls of the pool. City employees are now in the midst of painting the pool, and work will begin shortly on the bath houses.

"We calculate the whole cost of the project at the public pool will cost in the neighborhood of $600 with the paint alone costing $400," said Roy Anderson, assistant city manager.

"We are also going to repair the roof in the bath houses and repaint the walls in the concession stand and dressing rooms," Anderson said.

City workers also have been busy repairing tables, benches and other facilities in the Comanche Trail Park and other public parks in the city.

"Most of the work at the other parks across the city has been purely maintenance work and not the type of complete rejuvenation as at the swimming pool," Anderson explained.

Mowing has started on the grass in the parks and workers have cleaned the major portion of all fence lines in the parks and done minor repairs to some of the equipment.

"We have not had a great deal of vandalism in the parks, but there has been some, especially at the 'big spring.' We also had to take the plumbing fixtures out of the new rest rooms at the Birdwell park behind the high school due to vandalism to the facilities," said Anderson.

The Comanche Trail swimming pool will not be officially opened until the day after school is out for summer vacations which will be approximately June 1.

"We will have the pool available for end-of-school parties and picnics as soon as the facilities are complete," said Anderson.

'Rattlers Getting Warmed Up'

Snake Bite Victims Should Be Treated Immediately

By STEVE HULTMAN
More persons die of snake bite in Texas than in any other state. Many of the persons bitten are small children playing at home.

"This is the time of year when rattlesnakes start getting warmed up and active," said Paul Gross, county agent. "Now is the time for people to start looking out for them."

Snake bites can be reduced if homeowners will clean out the snakes' favorite hiding places, said Gross. The Diamondback rattlesnake common in Howard County favors rocks, trash and lumber piles, fallen tree limbs, tree stumps and similar debris to hide in, he said.

Contrary to any old cowboy tales, rattlesnakes will crawl over a horsehair rope, and even the best snake fences are not perfect, Gross said. The best defense is to be alert and to look where you are going, he said.

"The most important action to take is to get the victim to a hospital as fast as possible so that he can be immobilized and treated with anti-venom," said Dr. John R. Scott, Cowper Clinic.

"The person should not incise the wound," he said, but "he can apply a tourniquet between the bite and the heart and place ice packs on the bite."

Treatment for a rattlesnake bite includes anti-venom, intravenous fluids, and blood to prevent shock, and treatment for infection and tetanus.

The anti-venom is used to counteract the effects of the rattlesnake toxin. The toxin contains enzymes which dissolve the lining of blood vessels and capillaries, allowing the tissues in the area of the bite to absorb red blood serum and swell, Dr. Scott said.

This swelling can later spread to any part of the body. Most permanent damage that occurs is the result of the swelling damaging muscle tissue and nerves. Permanent damage is not common, he said.

The anti-venom is given in the muscles and intravenously, usually stabilizing the snake bite symptoms within 24 hours. The victim will have to have hospital care for up to 10 days for an average bite.

There are five grades of bite, starting with grade 0, a dry bite with no evidence of swelling or hemorrhage. Grade one has swelling and hemorrhage around the fang marks gradually extending up the limb during the first 12 hours.

Grade two has fairly rapid development of the swelling and pain within the first one to two hours following the bite. Grade three has development of symptoms within the first 15 minutes with evidence of shock. Grade four, the most serious bite, has involvement of the whole limb with shock within minutes following a bite.

The amount of anti-venom given depends on the grade of the bite. A grade one gets one vial, a grade two gets two to four vials, a grade three gets five vials and a grade four gets 10 to 20 vials.

It is never too late to get anti-venom — even if several hours have passed since the bite.

Although rattlesnake bites are serious, very few persons die from the experience, according to national statistics. If a person gets to a hospital, he has an excellent chance of survival, said Dr. Scott.

Student Nurses Visit VA Here

Senior nursing students from Angelo State University will visit the Big Spring Veterans Administration Hospital Wednesday and Thursday for a program on cardiovascular accident (CVA).

The program will be presented by Dr. William J. Freitas, D.O. He will lecture on etiology and prevention. Etiology is the theory of the disease.

Mrs. Woodine Winn, R.N., will lecture on nursing care. Miss Faye Wells, R.N., and Miss Mazie Roberts, R.N., will present CVA patients.

The group will then go with the patients to the physical medicine and rehabilitation service where Mrs. Bea Zinn, coordinator; Miss Janet McCall, occupational therapist; Danny Bonnett, corrective therapist; and Richie Arnold, corrective therapist assistant, will demonstrate the types of therapy involved with each patient and the results desired.

Natural Gas Processors Meet

The Natural Gas Processors Association Permian Basin regional meeting will be held Wednesday and Thursday at the Inn of the Golden West in Odessa, Tex. A seminar on industrial noise will be held Wednesday afternoon, May 5, and will be followed by an all day technical meeting Thursday.

The meeting will be highlighted by the principal speaker Joseph C. Caldwell, deputy director, office of pipeline safety, Washington, D.C. — NGPA — Vice-President LeRoy Curbertson, Phillips Petroleum Co., Bartlesville, Okla., will open the meeting with "Energy in Engineering."

Give A Hoot-Please

This is the week for giving our town a thorough spring house cleaning.

For weeks, even months, the Pride People section of the Chamber of Commerce has been pointing toward this concerted challenge to do something about our common appearance.

There is even a catchy slogan — "Give a Hoot—Don't Pollute."

Well, only you can answer these things, and upon your answer will hinge the success of the campaign.

We earnestly hope that you will enter into the spirit of the occasion not only for your immediate premises, but even to the extent of helping clean alleys and vacant lots adjacent and nearby.

This spirit of the extra mile, the good conscience of doing what someone else won't do, this business of acting instead of sitting in abject frustration will turn the trick. In the end, we will all have a safer city, a healthier city, and a city which reflects pride in its appearance.

Give a Hoot? Please—

Only Acceptable Way

Saturday was observed as law day in this country, and the theme was "Channel-Change through Law and Reason."

When you get right down to it, there is no acceptable alternative to law and reason as means of effecting change.

It may be that the right of peaceful assembly and petition will have to be used to dramatize a position or command attention, but this does not include violence and unlawful seizure or obstruction.

If and when change is needed, one of the best weapons of all is a clear concept of what needs to be changed and what it should be changed to. Blind negativism and destructiveness will not accomplish reform; they can only breed anarchy.

Minimum Wage

Around The Rim

Bob Whipkey

It says here that the politicians are thinking of putting the minimum wage to $2 per hour. This would be good news for some people, bad for others.

Let's see now. That might represent, say, a 100 per cent increase over the first wage I drew.

If memory hasn't gone awry, it was 10 cents an hour that Mrs. Gustine, an aging gentlewoman who lived across the street, offered me to chop the weeds around her place.

THERE WERE enough weeds around our own house, and the prospect of more such manual labor didn't particularly appeal to me.

But Mama gently persuaded me to help our neighbor. What she actually said was, "You go on over there and cut Mrs. Gustine's weeds. You ought to be happy to make ten cents an hour."

Mrs. Gustine lived on a normal-size country town lot, but it appeared to me to be about four acres in size. Besides, it was hot as the hinges of you-know-where that early summer.

BUT AS A TAD I manfully wielded the hoe, at least for a couple of hours, when the sympathetic neighbor suggested that I might take a break.

It was during this recess that I ran into my pal J. W. Sheppard, who at the time was cutting weeds for a neighbor of his family. J. W. rather proudly told me that he was getting 15 cents per hour for his labors.

J. W. JUST couldn't have been that much better a weed-chopper than I was, and it seemed nothing more than right to relay to Mrs. Gustine the information that the going price was way above what she was paying.

Mrs. Gustine didn't sit down at the bargaining table with me, but as I recall it, she suggested that I had used a lot of time filing the hoe blade, and that it seemed that every time she looked out the window, I was resting on the handle and mopping my brow. She said something about the laborer being worthy of his hire.

A YOUNGUN doesn't argue over such things with his elders, but Mrs. Gustine could see that I was in an unhappy mood. (I couldn't strike, because of Mama's orders).

Mrs. G. said that she would deliver, at appropriate times, some cookies and a glass of milk, and that was "something extra." Neither Mrs. Gustine nor I labeled this as a fringe benefit, but surely that's what it was.

ANYWAY, late that afternoon, I checked back with J.W., who was just as tired at 15 cents per hour as I was at 10 cents. Sure enough, his neighbor-employer had offered no refreshments.

J. W. and I debated the comparative merits of our jobs, and agreed that it would be better to have both the 15 cents, the cookies and milk. But that's as far as we got. Couple of days, and the weeds had been chopped and we turned to more interesting things, such as playing catch all morning. To this day, I don't know whether J.W. had a better deal than I did.

Drugs In Vietnam

Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON — A dispatch from Saigon not long ago described the roadside stands along the highway from the South Vietnamese capital to Bien Hoa, the giant American Army base.

Neatly dressed young Vietnamese girls of 12 or 14 had set up the stands to attract motorists in the almost-continuous stream of traffic, most of it American military traffic.

What were they selling? They were selling vials of heroin at $4 or $5 a vial which, by standards in this country, was practically giving it away.

THIS TOUCHING bit of free enterprise underscores what many are coming to feel is the most disastrous consequence of a disastrous war.

Rep. Robert H. Steele, R-Conn., a new member of the House Foreign Relations Committee, returning from a survey of the drug traffic in Southeast Asia and its ramifications in the U.S. military forces, came up with startling figures.

He says that high-ranking officers in the American command verified estimates he had independently arrived at — that 35,000 to 45,000 Americans, 15 to 20 per cent of the total complement in Vietnam, were addicted to heroin.

of opium and its derivatives. What is known as the opium triangle where the borders of Laos, Thailand and Vietnam meet is a principal source. An estimated 50 per cent of the heroin comes from Laos and the balance from Thailand and Hong Kong.

AN ACCOUNT in The New York Times describes Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport as a smuggler's paradise, American advisers who have tried to supply guidance in correcting the wholesale smuggling operation are themselves spied on and their presence in the airport tipped off by a walkie-talkie.

Much of this operation involves drugs, notably heroin, sent into American military channels.

Americans in Vietnam, whether on the military or the diplomatic side, seem powerless to check the corruption or to prevent the spread of drug addiction.

THE URGENT need for leadership at the highest level to face up to the spreading problem of drugs here at home is all too apparent. The addicts from Vietnam will bring a new dimension, conditioned as they are not only to drugs but to violence.

The present drift, with a hodgepodge of state and Federal laws, will mean a drug culture with its roots deep in American life.

Critical Pupils

NEW YORK (AP) — At a recent seminar students of Traphagen School of Fashion expressed a desire to change a lot more than just the style of garments worn by women.

They attacked today's poor workmanship, the designing of way out items for the sake of promotion and clothes that are styled to look well only on size eight models.

My Answer

Billy Graham

I am engaged to a girl who is not a Christian. All my friends think I should break our engagement but I'm afraid that would ruin her only chance of being saved.

Your problem is tied up with two of the most important decisions we have to make in life. The most important is that your fiancée finds Christ. Then there is your decision as to a future helpmate for life.

Should your fiancée prove antagonistic to Christ and the Gospel, you would do well to consider the Biblical reminder, "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" Many a marriage has ended in tragedy because Christ was not made the head of the home. I trust you will make Him preeminent.

fer about your own decision? Have you talked over the Bible's steps to salvation? Does she know what she is missing as a non-Christian? Have you been living a joyful, radiant Christian life in her presence? Christ wants to use our lives as instruments in the salvation of others.

Should your fiancée prove antagonistic to Christ and the Gospel, you would do well to consider the Biblical reminder, "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" Many a marriage has ended in tragedy because Christ was not made the head of the home. I trust you will make Him preeminent.

A Devotion For Today...

"These words which I command you this day shall be upon your heart; and you shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house." (Deuteronomy 6:6-7, RSV)

PRAYER: We thank Thee, O Lord, for Christian homes. Grant that they may be strengthened in the faith that we may have more of the spirit of Christ in the closeness of the family circle. Amen.

Time To Look Ahead

David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — News has sometimes been defined as "a report on things unusual." Occasionally, however, an unusual development gets scant attention.

Rep. Stratton is convinced also that the American people do not want to see our troops withdrawn in a manner which would guarantee that the Communists will be able immediately to take over full control of South Vietnam, with the result that everything we have fought for "just automatically goes down the drain."

MR. STRATTON urged that Democrats should "concentrate our brains and energies instead on what is the real problem of the middle 1970's, how best to help the non-Communist countries of Asia — once our military involvement is over in 1972, as it will be over — to achieve stability, prosperity, and a reasonable degree of democracy."

Rep. Stratton has served in the House of Representatives since 1959, and was re-elected last autumn by a vote of nearly two to one. He said in his speech:

THE ONLY THING our potential presidential candidates seem to be doing so far is vying with one another in the intensity of their fervor in putting full blame for the Vietnam War onto the Nixon administration.

MR. STRATTON asserted that if his statement seems like "political heresy," an examination of the facts will disprove it. He pointed out that a "get out of Vietnam" deadline for December, 1971, is "already legislatively unrealistic" and ought to be moved back to July 1, 1972.

Generation Gap

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Everyone talks about the problems parents have with their children, but no one is aware that grandparents also have trouble identifying with their grandchildren.

A friend of mine, whom I shall call Zachary Danbury, decided to take his 16-year-old son to see Zach's mother who was in a nursing home.

Mrs. Danbury, in her 80s, was happy to see both of them.

"MOTHER," said Zach, "this is my son, Bobby."

"She's very beautiful," Mrs. Danbury said.

No, Mother. Bobby is a boy, not a girl.

Mrs. Danbury nodded. A few minutes later she said, "Bobby, I hope you don't let boys get fresh with you. They lose all respect for a girl if she's considered easy."

"THAT'S GOOD," Mrs. Danbury said. "Make all the boys come to you. Never chase them."

"Yes, Grandma."

"I'd like to do something nice for you, Bobby, since you came to see me. Here's $20."

"What for?" Bobby asked.

"Buy yourself a pretty dress," Mrs. Danbury said. "I don't have any objections to you wearing pants, but I think you should have one pretty dress in your closet for some special occasion."

"THAT'S NICE," said Mrs. Danbury. "You'll never get in trouble if you go out with girls."

"Mother," said Zach. "You don't understand. Bobby is a boy. That's why he goes out with girls."

Mrs. Danbury absorbed this and then nodded. "I see you wear pants, Bobby. You know, when I was a girl we weren't permitted to wear pants."

'MAN-NOW THERE'S A COOL UNCLE SAM'

Has Economy Turned Corner?

By JOHN HENRY

NEW YORK (AP) — A spate of sharply higher first-quarter corporate earnings reports during this past week provided fresh evidence that the economy is on the road to recovery.

And perhaps equally significant, many companies said they looked for second-quarter results that would match or surpass those in the first period.

Underlining the breadth of the upsurge in corporate profits was a Wall Street Journal survey showing that first-quarter earnings rose an average of 8.4 per cent from a year earlier among 573 companies reporting.

Net income for the nation's largest manufacturer, General Motors Corp., soared 75 per cent from a year earlier to $610 million, the third highest quarterly earnings in the auto-maker's history.

Other earnings up: United States Steel Corp., the No. 1 steelmaker, said its earnings in the last quarter rose 14.7 per cent to $40.7 million even though sales were virtually unchanged from a year earlier at $1.18 billion.

Second-ranking Bethlehem Steel Corp. reported its earnings jumped 17 per cent to $33.1 million on a 1.6 per cent advance in sales.

011 companies disclosing higher profits included Texaco, Inc., up 15.3 per cent; Phillips Petroleum Co., up 13 per cent; Marathon Oil Co., up 10.2 per cent; and Getty Oil Co., up 35 per cent.

Further improvement in second-quarter profits was predicted by companies in a number of industries including steel, chemicals, railroads, aluminum, oil and building products.

Bright as the earnings picture was, it was clouded by some profit declines.

Eastman Kodak Co.'s first-quarter net income declined 18 per cent on a 1 per cent drop in sales. National Steel and Republic Steel reported earnings declines of 20 per cent and 29 per cent, respectively.

INDEX GAINS

Another sign of economic recovery this past week was the news that the government's leading economic indicators advanced in March for the fifth

- First quarter profits up by average 8.4 per cent
- Big industries show hefty gains, few exceptions
- Outlook for second quarter said to be equally good
- Economic index shows 6 per cent gain in March
- Gulf Oil fights off dissident libs and ecologists straight month. The gain in the index of leading indicators was un-

Harold C. Passer, assistant commerce secretary for economic affairs, said the advance suggested strongly that "a balanced and broadly based economic expansion is developing."

The federal government will have to guarantee loans in the range of $250 million to financially troubled Lockheed Aircraft Corp if that company is to survive, Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said this past week.

MAY ASK CONGRESS

He emphasized, however, that the Nixon administration hadn't decided whether it would seek congressional authorization for such a guarantee.

The survival of Lockheed, the nation's largest defense contractor, is understood to depend on whether it can get additional spectacular — 6 per cent. But funds to finish its TriStar air-bus project. The program was threatened when the supplier of the engines for the airbus, Rolls-Royce Ltd., collapsed last February.

Many corporate annual meetings were held during the past week and in most of them management apparently encountered little opposition from the floor.

Among the exceptions was the meeting of Gulf Oil Corp., where dissidents assailed the company's involvement in Portugal's Angola, its attitude toward women and its number of black executives.

Proposals to bar investment in colonial-ruled areas, to enlarge the board and to provide for disclosure of charitable gifts were defeated by Gulf stockholders.

F-111s Grounded Once More As Crash Causes Are Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has grounded all its F111 swing-wing fighter-bombers for the fifth time in three years.

The action was taken Friday after an investigation of the 18th crash of an F111 showed a flaw in the pilot-escape system. Two crewmen were killed in the April 23 crash near Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Air Force officials said the ball-out capsule separated properly from the plane, but a metal door on the recovery parachute compartment failed to blow open. The reason for the bailout is undetermined.

The grounding was described as temporary pending completion of tests, possibly by Monday, to determine why the explosive system that knocks off the chute door failed to operate.

The F111, originally the TFX, has been plagued for years by production and operational problems and discontent in Congress over cost overruns.

The Air Force has accepted 257 of the planes from General Dynamics, the manufacturer, at a cost of about $9 million each, compared with original estimates of $2.8 million. The original plan to purchase 2,411 of the planes has been cut back to 552.

In all, the F111 has been involved in 22 major accidents since January, 1967, with loss of 17 planes and nine crewmen.

All F111s were grounded in December, 1969, when a wing fell off one in flight over Nevada and two crewmen were killed.

The jets were returned to operational status only last July after a long series of stress tests.

Seniors Decide On Trophy Case

By KATHLEEN THOMPSON
The seniors met this week to resolve the problem of the senior gift. The gift in discussion is the purchase of a trophy case. Several problems had to be worked out and voted upon by the senior class.

The prospective cheerleaders for school year 1971-72 tried out in front of the underclassmen of the student body Friday afternoon during seventh period. Each group of girls did two yells—one picked from the standard varsity yells and one all the girls did. Three seniors and two juniors compose the varsity squad while the junior varsity squad is made of four sophomore girls. Competing for places on the varsity squad were Denise Bryant, Tricia Cherry, Toni Gautreaux, Jamie Langley, Kae McLaughlin, Pam Picquet, Marcia Stags, Connie Torres, Lisa Gautreaux, Lori Fort, Dana Mancill, Cindy Morris, Nancy Smith, Brenda Thomas and Patty Womack. Voting for the junior varsity were Cheryl Cannon, Sue Duncan, Mickey Fletcher, Amy Gee, Terry Morris, Mavis Ray, Cindy Taylor, Madine Teague, Ann Thomas and Debra Williams.

New calendar girls elected were Denise Bryant, Key Club Sweetheart; Kelly Thames, Miss September; Sue Duncan, Miss October; Kae McLaughlin, Miss November; Nancy Smith, Miss December; Nancy Smith, Miss January; Marianne McLaughlin, Miss March; Karen Crockett, Miss April and Jamie Langley as Miss May.

GOLIAD

Election Held At Assembly

By MELANIE HAYWORTH
An assembly was held Thursday in the Goliad gym at which time nominees for a student council gave campaign speeches.

Three representatives were chosen by the eighth grade to serve during the 1971-72 school year. They are Kelly Green, Matt Carl and Joe Matthews. The three alternate winners are Jan Bledsoe, Kathy Meek and Dori Crocker.

This past week girls physical education classes completed basketball intramurals. The eighth grade winner was from sixth period. Members of the team were Christine Solland, Kathy Meek, Shawn Cannon, Debbie Nikolai, Karen Jenkins, and Amber Jones. The fourth period class won second place. Seventh grade winners were from the third period. Team players were Paeca Ford, Chris Davis, Carol Sifton, Jenell Williams, Sandy Kelley, Antie Murphy and Hoylene Nix. Second place was won by the second period class. All physical education classes have now begun track.

The National Junior Honor Society banquet will be May 14 in the high school cafeteria. All NJHS members are invited.

The 1971 annuals arrived last Tuesday and were distributed Wednesday. During the last three periods of school, an annual signing party was held.

Goliad welcomes one new student this week. He is Charlie Price from England.

On Friday morning a program was presented by Jim Anderson, who is a musician, ventriloquist and minister. He was assisted by Leigh Rocke who travels with Mr. Anderson to provide musical entertainment.

Final Preparation Made For Playday, Elections

By JUDY MAXWELL
The Student Council met Monday to plan for the annual playday and election day. Each member of the council is involved in some phase of these annual events. Jeff Williams and Phillip Medlin were chosen as candidates for next year's council president.

All members of the junior class had their group picture made Tuesday at the Big Spring Country Club for the inside cover of next year's yearbook.

The annual playday for high school was held Thursday and the elections were held on Friday for Student Council president and cheerleaders. The results of the elections were withheld until the Community barbecue held Friday evening.

The Junior-Senior Banquet was held Saturday evening at 8:00 in the Big Spring Country Club. Pictures were taken prior to the affair.

All of the playday rules and different events of the day were explained, and the various events included girls' and boys' pool, ping pong singles and doubles, tennis, golf putting, and volleyball. Two basketball games pitted the non-athletic girls vs. the women faculty members, and the senior boys vs. next year's basketball team.

Points gained from these events plus the highest percentage of participation in dress-up day determined which class won the $15 prize.

Athletic and Literary awards were presented during the evening, including:

FOOTBALL — Tommy Brumley, Phillip Medlin, Jacky Willis, Jeff Williams, and Ricky Klahr, all-district; Will Morgan, honorable mention all-district; Jeff Williams, outstanding line-man; Jacky Willis, most valuable player and Black Mamba; Ricky Klahr, Black Mamba; Jacky Willis, North all-star selection.

Beware Of Busty Secretaries

LONDON (AP) — A Scot who claims to be an expert on the subject has advised businessmen to keep a close eye on "busty secretaries." They might be spies.

Willie Hamilton, a former schoolteacher who represents Fife in the House of Commons said in a statement he conducted a personal investigation into industrial espionage.

He found "professional secretary bird spies are becoming a menace to British industry. In British slang a "bird" is a girl.

One of their devices, he reported, was a minibus sewn into their bras.

Of all the pictures of our senior class trip to New York City, this is everybody's favorite. Not just because the kids like Tom and Donna, but because it says something.

Clearer than a thousand words, it shouts our interest in anything that speaks of peace among nations.

And not just nations — we pray that within our country men of every color, age and interest can learn to build and work together to make a brighter future.

Sure, we're young and idealistic and have a lot to learn. That's why it's important for our parents and teachers and leaders to have good, strong values and to live by them.

My parents do. To them the Church is the backbone of our country and Christianity the key to the future. That's why they go to church each week and take us with them.

THEY SHALL BEAT THEIR SWORDS...

Lost Her 'Gifts'

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For five years, Tex (not his real name) accepted expensive gifts, hundreds of meals and a lot of money from me. Also my love and devotion, which he said he wanted for the rest of his life. He said marriage was out because he had been hurt by a former wife. I accepted that.

Suddenly Tex turned up married! He explained that several months prior he had gone to Las Vegas with a woman and she suffered heavy gambling losses, which his female traveling companion made good. Soon she began pressuring him for repayment. Having no funds, he offered her marriage and she jumped at the chance.

Since he was heavily indebted to me, too, I demanded payment, whereupon he went to the county attorney and informed him that since I was a consenting female over 21, that he (Tex) did not "twist my arm," and was not indebted to me for anything. Thus he cleared himself.

For me to have been publicly condemned as an immoral person by one who had taken everything a woman could give was indeed a humiliating experience. I am not asking for advice or consolation, Abby. I have learned my lesson. I just want to pass it on to other women who may find themselves in the same situation. "USED."

DEAR USED: There are two lessons to be learned here. A gift is a gift, and a loan without an "I. O. U." may as well be a gift. Also, she who sleepeth with dogs shall get up with fleas.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you've heard everything by now, so this won't shock you. I am a 23-year-old woman—last year I took all my savings and had an augmenting mammoplasty—a breast implant of silicone.

I was sick of being flat-chested and wearing padded bras. I have no regrets, as I now feel so much more womanly and self-assured. I see nothing wrong with people having their noses bobbed, or wrinkles removed if that's what makes them happy. Same for silicone breasts.

I am now engaged to a wonderful man. I fear that he would feel gyped if he knew my breasts were filled with silicone. He is sure to find out because they are very hard and some scars remain.

Is there any way to have the scars removed? Or should I swallow my pride and confess before we're married?

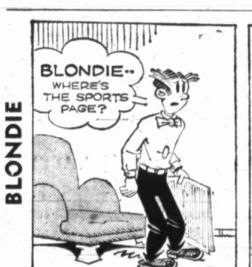

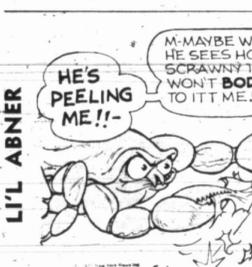

MARRIAGE OR BUST DEAR MARRIAGE: Confess. And get the opinions of several top notch plastic surgeons with regard to the scars. Some scars can be removed.

Henry Fonda Says He's Proud Of Daughter's Work

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Henry Fonda says he's proud of his daughter Jane's activist work but doesn't agree with all her methods.

"It's a sincere involvement, and she's totally dedicated," the 65-year-old actor said of his 33-year-old actress-daughter. "I don't think it's necessary to overthrow the government to achieve some of the things she's after."

For Jane to be such an activist that she clenches her fist and puts it up and says, "I'm a revolutionary," she's turning a great many people off," he said Thursday in an interview.

Food For Aged

Your Good Health
Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother is 90 and doesn't get too much exercise. We have to give her baby food because her dentures are in poor condition and we feel she is too elderly to go through having new ones made, and she probably couldn't adjust to them.

The following is the menu we give her. Is it adequate? Your suggestions will be appreciated.

At 7:30 when she wakes, black coffee and sugar.

8:30: Cup of cooked cereal made with milk and grated cheese and milk topping.

10:30: Glass of grape juice and she takes a digitalis pill.

Noon: Jar of junior baby food, lamb, beef, veal, chicken, mashed potato; half junior jar of vegetables; glass of grape

3 p.m.: Piece of cake with whipped cream; regular coffee.

5 p.m.: Jar of baby food (meat); half jar of vegetable (fruit); half jar of vegetable and grape juice.

When she goes to bed, we give her two aspirin tablets (prescribed for arthritis) and a sleeping pill—F.C.

Sounds to me, really, like a pretty good feeding pattern, and while I have a suggestion or two, I'd say you had worked things out pretty well. Trying to break in new dentures at 90 would probably be rather hard on her, and I agree with your decision on that.

Now as to the diet, that's pretty well balanced, with protein (the cheese, milk, meat), two servings of vegetables (I presume you try to provide some variety), and moderate carbohydrate.

My suggestions: It probably is a bit shy in vitamin C, and it might be wise to substitute orange juice or tomato juice for one of the grape juice servings. In fact, a daily mixed vitamin capsule is usually a good precaution for older people.

You don't mention egg, which is an excellent source of protein. Soft boiled, poached, or as egg nog, it's easy to eat. If she'll eat a little more at breakfast, an occasional egg could give her a little more nourishment to carry her through the day. Or an egg could at times be substituted for a meat serving.

Finally, the aspirin on a fairly empty stomach at bedtime might (or might not) irritate the stomach. If at that time she'll take a glass of milk, or part of one, that can protect against irritation. Indeed, some warm milk may also be calming and reinforce the effect of the sleeping pill.

None of these suggestions is meant to be critical, but they might be useful improvements.

What are ulcers? How should they be treated? What can you do to help rid yourself of ulcers and stay rid of them? For answers, read Dr. Thosteson's helpful booklet, "How To Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep Them Healed." For your copy write to Dr. Thosteson in care of The Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

007 Role Via 'Darby O'Gill'

It was Sean Connery's role in Walt Disney Productions' "Darby O'Gill and the Little People" that eventually won him the James Bond parts which have made him so famous.

Albert Broccoli, co-producer of the James Bond pictures, was his discoverer.

"We were looking at all the film we could lay our hands on featuring new actors," Broccoli says. "One of the pictures was 'Darby O'Gill,' when I saw Connery in that I thought we had our man. But to make sure I sent for my wife, Dana."

When Mrs. Broccoli looked at the film she was adamant.

"Well, that is James Bond," she said, and her opinion clinched the decision to get Connery for the role. The scene was 1962 in the Goldwyn Studio. "Darby O'Gill" is the live-action tale of an Irish storyteller who vies with the Leprechaun and comes off second best. Connery played a starring role as Michael McBride, the young man who comes along to take Darby's job as caretaker of a grand estate and wins the hand of his daughter, too.

Shirley Does Tough Stunt

Few Hollywood stars would undertake a dangerous stunt for a film scene, and few directors would allow it. The consequences if the trick went wrong and the star were injured would be too costly to both. Spunky Shirley MacLaine did just that for her starring role opposite Clint Eastwood in "Two Mules For Sister Sara," starting today at the Jet Drive-In Theatre.

On location in Mexico, where the film was shot, director Don Siegel was faced with a problem when the script called for Eastwood to be injured, forcing Shirley to take his place and climb a 50-foot high railroad trestle over a rock-strewn gorge to plant a charge of dynamite.

Siegel needed a close-up shot of Shirley scaling the structure. If this were being filmed in Hollywood, a stunt double would be used and Shirley would appear in a section of the trestle built on a stage for the close-up. Since the scene was filmed on a distant location, there was no other solution than to have the valuable star do the stunt herself. Adding to the difficulty, the star had to make the climb in the voluminous skirt of a nun's habit.

'Hoss' Star Of Comedy

Dan Blocker, "Hoss" of the long-running TV series "Bonanza," and Nanette Fabray co-star in Universal's hilarious comedy in Technicolor, "The Cockeyed Cowboys of Calico County," now showing at the Jet Theatre. They are ably supported by a bevy of comedy players from television and theatrical films including Jim Backus, Wally Cox, Mickey Rooney and Jack Cassidy.

Written and produced by Ronald MacDougall, and directed by Tony Leader, it is the story of a six-foot-seven, 265-pound blacksmith in an early western community who fears the ridicule of the townspeople when his mail-order bride does not arrive on schedule, and the fanciful, imaginative lengths to which his friends go to prevent him from being hurt. As a result, the

Chimp Yarn Based On True-Life Tale

Although the basic premise on Walt Disney Productions' "The Barefoot Executive" in which a TV-oriented chimp proves to have the ability to pick the highest rated shows, seems incredible, it is actually based on fact.

At the Yerkes Primate Research Center on the sylvan campus of Emory University near Atlanta, Georgia, the 136 resident gorillas, orangutans and chimps were getting bored. Bringing in television sets to amuse the primates seemed to be the answer. By all indications, the experiment is a huge success. In short, the apes have all gone bananas over television. They spend hours totally involved in it and have favorite types of shows. The sets remain on daily from 9 to 5.

One chimp named Dobbs was a ready-made fan by virtue of a year's residence at the home of a Santa Barbara woman. He got hooked on westerns, the more violent the better.

"Dobbs can even tell the bad guy," Dr. Geoffrey Bourne, the director of the research center, related. "He associates the bad guy with violence and often begins jumping up and down before the bad guy starts anything rough."

Least anyone doubt the effects of TV on impressionable minds, Bourne told of one incident when an animal show depicted two chimps making a shambles of a house. "The next day Dobbs tore up his room," Bourne said.

The greatest contribution of TV comes when it is necessary to isolate an animal for long periods to conduct metabolic tests, Bourne explained. "They're locked away by themselves for months at a time and used to get terribly lonely before we introduced television."

'Midnight Cowboy' To Return To Big Spring

British director John Schlesinger, who has won a wide and appreciative following among American film-goers with his English productions, now faces his U.S. fans on their home grounds with his first American-made motion picture, "Midnight Cowboy," which is now at the Ritz Theatre. The cast is headed by Californian Dustin Hoffman and New Yorker Jon Voight.

Asked what qualifications he, an Englishman, had for interpreting the American scene, Schlesinger said, "Some of the best movies about England were made by Americans or Poles or other foreigners to that country. Perhaps being from another country brings a fresh viewpoint."

"Midnight Cowboy" was shot on such typically American locations as New York's Times Square, Fifth and Park Avenues, Miami Beach and the small Texas town of Big Spring.

Schlesinger came to the U.S. with a solid reputation resting on his highly-rated English films, "Billy Liar," "A Kind of Loving" and "Darling."

'Monday Man' To Be Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Stanley Kramer has acquired the motion picture rights to "The Monday Man," a first novel by 26-year-old Ronny Pearlman, which will be made for Columbia Pictures.

Pearlman, a winner of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences award for new young writers, has been signed to write the screenplay.

Bronte's Novel Depicted In Film

A new film of "Wuthering Heights," one with which today's young audiences could identify, has long been a pet ambition of producers Samuel Z. Arkoff and James H. Nicholson.

They had in mind the kind of youthful approach, and casting, which Zeffrelli gave his film "Romeo and Juliet." And the result of their efforts makes its debut locally when American International's "Wuthering Heights" opens at the Cinema Theatre on Wednesday.

They had planned, originally, to cast established major star names in the roles of Heathcliff and Catherine, the young lovers whose violent, extraordinary love-hate relationship is what "Wuthering Heights" is about. But subsequently Nicholson and Arkoff changed their minds.

"It suddenly dawned on us," they declared, "that a story so well-known, and one of such explosive force did not need the booster-aid of big names. It already had this dynamic built-in power of its own. What it needed simply was a carefully hand-picked cast of first-rate and highly-gifted performers."

Arkoff and Nicholson said they were aware that the roles of Heathcliff and Catherine were powerful enough to make stars of the actors who portrayed them, as had happened in the 1939 version. So, why not give the much-coveted roles to two deserving "unknowns"?

Said the producers: "After seeing Timothy Dalton's brilliant portrayal of the young King Philip of France in the multiple-award-winning 'The Lion in Winter,' we did not have to look further for our Heathcliff.

Film Crew Encounters Meaning Of Wuthering

The word "wuthering," as used by Emily Bronte for her masterpiece, "Wuthering Heights," has been described in the book as "a significant provincial English adjective descriptive of atmospheric tumult in stormy weather."

The filming crew shooting on the Yorkshire moors in mid-winter learned its significance first hand when they were hit with a combination of four seasons in one day, suffering rain, hail, sleet, snow and finally sun before wrapping up for the evening.
