Kissinger Plans Trip To Peking

BUT SCHOOLS BRACING Cut In Funds Would Hurt

The Big Spring School District, like other school districts near a military base, will face the problem of replacing federal funds if the federal impacted aid is cancelled.

School officials here, who have been threatened annually for many years that the funds might be changed or cut off, have tried to maintain a sufficient cash balance cushion so that no tax raises would have to come about immediately if the federal impacted aid were ceased.

The instructions during the past year have varied concerning the program, according to officials here. Some indications have been that the district would be allowed to receive aid for children of military personnel who live on the base. In this school district, this would include around 400 children. This would leave around 1400 other children of airbase and government personnel that were not financed.

Other directives have indicated that a newly curtailed program might pay 90 per cent for students on the base and anywhere from 40-70 per cent for those off the base.

At the present time, the federal funding pays half the education cost for students on the base and one-fourth for those off the base.

The budget of the local school this year shows $350,000 in federal impact funds and so far there is no indication how much will be received.

Supt. Sam Anderson said the uncertainty of the funds poses a real problem to school book-keeping. "If we are completely cut off, they will have to be replaced by other funds, or else the program will have to be curtailed."

Don Crockett, assistant superintendent of business, said that for every $76,000 lost in funding to the school, if it were raised by additional taxes, it would mean a five cent increase for this amount, ten cents for twice this amount and so on.

"However, it is always possible to cut the program, or attempt to obtain funds from another source if you have time to do this. The cash cushion balance of the schools would probably and hopefully allow us this time."

The Abilene school superintendent stated there Friday that if their district loses federal impacted aid, the district will have to raise taxes by 20 cents or trim the present program by $500,000.

Reviewing the . . .

Big Spring Week

. . . with Joe Pickle

Return of crisp but fair weather brought a brisk resumption of the much-beleated cotton harvest. The volume reached 35,502 bales past mid-week, and there appeared to be so much yet in the fields that a few ginners were upping their estimates from 40,000 to 50,000 bales. Should the yield turn out to be one-fourth more than estimated, this could help offset the price losses on low-quality late cotton.

Death stalked area highways last week, and Howard County's first fatality occurred when a car left IS-20 six miles west Thursday and overturned several times. Mrs. Betty Joyce Robnett, 31, Imperial Valle, Calif., apparently died instantly, and her sister, Mrs. Cottie Darline Hogland, 17, Mesquite, the driver, was hurt seriously. Friday, 18 miles north of Sterling City, Dennis M. Lazar, 19, San Antonio, was killed when his car collided with the rear of a truck-trailer on US 87. Tuesday afternoon, a car carrying three Snyder teen-age girls overturned south of that city, killing Lisa Kay Falks, 15.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger will go to Peking for talks with Chinese leaders Feb. 15-19 after his Feb. 10-13 call at Hanoi, the White House announced Saturday.

Vietnam postwar arrangements will be discussed in Kissinger's sessions with Premier Chou En-lai and top Chinese Foreign Ministry officials, although the White House portrayed Kissinger's Hanoi and Peking stops as not related.

China is going to the 12-nation Indochina peace guarantee conference later in February, and Kissinger has made it plain that the United States wants the Communist superpowers "to behave responsibly in preserving the peace."

FOLLOW-UP

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler presented Kissinger's Peking parley as a further follow-up to President Nixon's summit agreement a year ago for periodic high-level visits by U.S. officials to develop relationships between the two countries.

Kissinger has already traveled to China once for this purpose. He met Chinese leaders in Peking last June 19-23.

Ziegler said Kissinger's full itinerary is not yet fixed, but between Hanoi and Peking he will probably make "a rest stop of one or two days somewhere in Asia."

Kissinger's midway stopover will not be at Saigon, Ziegler added.

The White House spokesman said no agenda has been set for the Peking discussion, and either side is free to raise what it wants to during the four days of talks.

"In the course of discussions, I am sure Southeast Asia and Vietnam will be brought up by one side or the other," Ziegler acknowledged under questioning.

BEGINS FEB. 12

The 12-nation peace guarantee conference, which includes major powers interested in Indochina as well as the parties directly concerned, is being convened as part of the Vietnam peace agreement signed Jan. 27. It is to begin at the foreign minister level on Feb. 26, probably in Paris.

The international parley will have a mission "to contribute to and to guarantee peace in Indochina," according to the war-ending agreement.

Postwar aid to Indochina from other countries is also an item of major interest to Washington.

U.S. officials suggested too that Kissinger might bring up at Peking the question of U.S. prisoners still missing and unaccounted for. The United States is dissatisfied with an incomplete listing received so far from Hanoi.

The establishment of formal Washington-Peking diplomatic relations with an exchange of ambassadors is still rated as some years off, mainly because of the disagreement over Nationalist China.

Man Confesses He Set Fire In Cafeteria

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A slight, well-groomed man who turned himself in shortly after a restaurant fire injured more than 100 diners Friday has been charged with arson, Miami Beach police reported Saturday.

The man was identified as Charles Cornell Reardon, 49, of Bal Harbour, Fla. Police said he was held on charges of second-degree arson and throwing a destructive device.

Officer Donald Gronberg said the man walked into a police station about 20 minutes after the fire was set in the crowded Concord Cafeteria late Friday.

"I've done something terrible. I made a lot of people scream," police sources quoted the man as saying.

Checks at four Miami area hospitals indicated at least 125 patrons of the Concord were injured, and at least 15 were listed as critical Saturday. Many were burned, or bruised and cut, as they rushed to escape the flames.

Police and witnesses said the man came in carrying a container shortly before 11 p.m.

"He sloshed it all over the floor, looked around with a smile on his face and set a match to it," said Tommy Britt, 16, a kitchen helper at the cafeteria. There was a gigantic "whoosh," witnesses said, and flames engulfed the seating area.

Screaming in panic, the diners — many of them elderly — stampeded for safety as thick, dark smoke made it difficult to see.

Police sources said a rented white panel truck the arsonist was believed to have been driving was found on the south end of Miami Beach. It contained flammable material, the sources said.

Gronberg and other witnesses described the suspect as about 5-foot-3 and thin, well-groomed with receding hairline. Police refused to say whether they were looking for a possible accomplice.

The cafeteria, popular with elderly low-income residents and tourists, was gutted.

"It was a terrible scene of panic, with people crying and screaming and asking us to help them," Miami Beach Fire Capt. Charles Chapman said.

CAFETERIA AFTER FIRE — Residents line the sidewalk to look in at the remains of a cafeteria on Miami Beach, Fla., Saturday morning after an arsonist touched off a flash fire. Police say a "cold-blooded" arsonist set the blaze that left more than 100 persons injured.

CONGRESS LAMENT

'We Get No Respect'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 93rd Congress, in session for a month now, has been trying to stand up to the President and show it really is a co-equal branch of the government.

This has been most evident in its efforts to challenge President Nixon's cuts in programs for which Congress has appropriated funds.

Legislation also has been introduced to curb the President's war-making powers and to prevent U.S. military forces from being sent into action again in Indochina without the consent of Congress.

FRUSTRATION

While the congressional frustration over continuation of the conflict in Indochina has faded or been muffled by the Paris accords for a cease-fire, the release of American prisoners and the withdrawal of U.S. troops, the controversy over control of the purse is still building.

The focal point is Nixon's impoundment of funds appropriated by Congress. This is a presidential practice dating back to Thomas Jefferson, but Nixon's critics charge he has carried it to a greater extreme than any of his predecessors.

Nixon has said Congress represents special interests and acts irresponsibly on appropriations. He has vowed to hold down spending to prevent higher prices and higher taxes.

He maintained at a news conference last week that his constitutional power to impound funds is absolutely clear.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D-N.C., chief sponsor of a bill to prevent impoundment of funds for more than 60 days without the approval of the Senate and the House, responded that not a single syllable in the Constitution supports the President's position.

Senate hearings on Ervin's bill are now in progress and have brought complaints not only that Nixon is usurping

Congress' power of the purse but also is cutting spending in the wrong places.

Many of the cuts have been in long-established social programs and have drawn heated protests from liberal Democrats. Farmstate legislators also have been aroused over agricultural programs hit by the holddown on spending.

Motion To End Airlines Service Is Protested

Texas International Airlines is serving notice to 13 Texas cities — Big Spring among them — of intention to file a motion with the Federal Aviation Agency to discontinue service.

Big Spring Chamber of Commerce and public officials immediately began plans to resist the proposal and perhaps to organize other points on contesting the motion, if filed.

A vice president of TIA notified County Judge A. G. Mitchell of the intention to move for permission to suspend service since the airport belongs to Howard County.

A meeting has been called for 1:30 p.m. Monday at the chamber office to consider the matter. George A. McAlister Jr., president of the chamber and Paul Meek, president of Cosden Oil and Chemical, and a past president of the chamber, voiced blistering protests to TIA.

Meek asserted that it was the same story of an airline pledging to provide commuter or feeder service in order to obtain certification, then, wanting to pull out of least profitable points and essentially provide trunk service only.

Texas International has served Big Spring as a successor to Trans-Texas Airways, which took over from the trailblazer, Pioneer Airlines, as a feeder airline connecting smaller Texas cities with regional centers.

HOBBS, N.M. (AP) — Texas International Airlines wants to discontinue its service to Hobbs and Carlsbad, Lea County Manager Leon Faris says.

Roswell and Albuquerque will not be affected by the order, Faris said he was told.

Texas International now has four flights daily through Hobbs, flying Convair 600 twin-turboprops with 40-passenger capacity.

Twelve Bodies Recovered After Blast

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa (AP) — The death count in a massive explosion and fire that leveled two buildings and damaged a third rose to 12 Saturday with the discovery of two more bodies, state officials said.

One other person, a cook at the Chatterbox Cafe, was missing and presumed dead.

Rescuers suspended their search at dusk Saturday, posted state troopers and National Guardsmen in the disaster area and said teams would probe the debris again Sunday.

The blast leveled the cafe and a hardware store and heavily damaged a jewelry store.

Phil Jorgensen of Cedar Falls, Iowa, who left the cafe just before the blast, said he had mentioned smelling gas to a waitress at the cafe. "She said, 'There's something wrong here. I hope the place doesn't blow up.' Three or four minutes later, she was dead."

The explosion, which hit at the dinner hour during the restaurant's regular Friday night fish fry, rattled buildings throughout this north central Iowa farm town of 4,489. It was heard at farms far out into the country side.

Three apartments were above the hardware store and cafe, one of them occupied by James McDermott. He said the only thing he had left after the blast was "what I've got on my body."

Viet Problems Dissolving

SAIGON (AP) — Vietnam's two peacekeeping commissions are meeting jointly for the first time Sunday amid reports of progress in resolving issues blocking an effective truce.

"A lot of work is being accomplished," said a spokesman for the International Commission of Control and Supervision. "We're overcoming problems one after another."

The commission, composed of Canada, Indonesia, Poland and Hungary, will formally notify the four-party Joint Military Commission at the meeting that it is sending observer teams into the field Monday, almost a week behind schedule.

Augmenting the control teams will be regional commissions of the Joint Military Commission made up of the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong. U.S. and South Vietnamese teams are already in place and are awaiting the Communist representatives. No specific date has been announced for the Communist representatives to move into the seven regional headquarters. One timetable mentioned is Monday.

IT'S EASY: JUST STAY ALIVE

Want To Know How To Live To Be 100?

By TOM HORTON
Copy Editor

Just when I'm wondering whether or not I'm going to make it to the end of the day — the bug, of course — those wonderfully cheery people, the American Medical Association, come along to ask if I am interested in learning how to live to be 100.

The medical chaps have been surveying centenarians to find their secrets to long life. Says AMA, "Most 100-year-olds seem to have these traits in common: An easygoing disposition, a quick sense of humor and a desire to keep as busy — physically and mentally as circumstances permit."

Most 100-year-olds have had another advantage over the rest of us. They have lived most of their lives without learning how so many of the things they were enjoying during life were actually killing them.

Today, we are informed anew almost daily of how something seemingly harmless, like coffee, is actually killing us.

MAY HELP

If you are feeling low, it may improve your outlook to know that there are nearly 7,000 men and women in America who have been around for more than 100 years. And things are looking up every year. Last year, there were only about 5,200 centenarians.

You won't find any easy guides to long life from studying the life habits of those who have survived for 100 years. There are the predictable ones, such as Augustus Grant in North Carolina, who says, "I never used alcoholic beverages, tobacco or carbonated drinks." But there are also the ones like Lee Greer of Virginia, who says, "I violated every rule of health I know and conformed to none."

John Parrish of Indiana says he made it to 100 because he lived his critical years in sunny California. Unfortunately, he doesn't say what the critical years are.

Alexis Ferm of Alabama says he made it because he never took a single drug, not even aspirin. Swan Johnson says he would never have lived to be 100 if he hadn't quit smoking. He quit when he was 97.

The AMA report on how to live to 100 sounds at times like something sponsored by the American Tobacco Co. They fairly crackle with good humor in noting that David Orso of Massachusetts uses his Social Security check to buy his pipe tobacco and stogie cigars. He also drinks wine with his meals.

I feel a little better knowing about the habits of 100-year-old Chief William Red Fox. He smokes 18 cigars a day. "But I don't inhale," says Chief Red Fox, citing the secret of every cigar-smoker's long life.

Statistics would show that cigar smokers live a lot longer than cigarette smokers.

ENCOURAGING

Being swamped every day with reports of what we shouldn't be eating and drinking because of our health, it is encouraging to hear from some stubborn old-timers who have somehow survived without following the health charts.

Surprisingly enough, the AMA failed to find any 100-year-old men or women who gave all the credit for their long life to following doctor's orders.

Mrs. Elizabeth Randall of Kansas says she still eats all the salt she wants on her food, which is a lot, in spite of doctor's orders against it. Charles Testard of Kansas says he eats meat and potatoes of any kind and hang the cholesterol. Mrs. Bessie Boon of North Carolina avoids beef and fish and gets along on fatback, collards, turnips and cabbage.

Leslie Carpenter of Indiana has a simple secret to his 100 years: Fat pork, "I love fat pork," he says. And Mrs. Adelheid Schunsted of Wisconsin says she lasted so long because she used to eat an average of a bag of potatoes a week.

Some of the women aged 100 have better secrets to long life than the men. Mrs. Lillie Pickle of Virginia credits dipping snuff. Mrs. Telka Skraba of Connecticut says a little wine and beer has kept her motor running all these years.

Of them all, I have to think John Bartol of Wisconsin has the most logical answer to the question of how do you live to be 100. "Pick your grandparents carefully," Bartol says. He had two who lived well past 100, and he just knew he would make it, too.

Actually, I'm not as interested in living to be 100 as I am in living happily by smoking cigars, drinking beer and wine, eating steak and potatoes and doing whatever else I enjoy without learning how everything I like is killing me.

Board members of the Howard County Hospital Authority in effect yielded to private efforts to develop a new hospital here. They voted Thursday to abandon a million-dollar Hill-Burton grant and release the Medical Center Memorial Hospital Foundation from its pledge to turn over its assets to the authority. Authority spokesmen said it could not construct the facility planned due to rising costs, dwindling time and growing space demands, thus freed the foundation to pursue private proposals.

There was almost a touch of spring Friday, which happened to be Groundhog Day. This, according to superstition means six more weeks of winter. More likely it means a warming trend after the unusually wintry January. That month produced seven snows, plus a lot of glazing, averaged 1.2 degrees below the normal minimums, 8.6 degrees below normal maximums, and had 47 degrees average — or nine points below normal. There were six straight days when the thermometer was constantly below freezing.

G. S. Rogers Is Honored

Grant S. (Brownie) Rogers of Sand Springs celebrated 40 years service with Mobil Pipe Line Company during January. Born in Perkins, Okla., Rogers attended high school in El Dorado, Kans. He became a member of the Masonic Lodge in Galva, Kans. and is a member of the Scottish Rite and Shrine in Wichita, Kans. A hunter, Mr. Rogers now confines his recreation to traveling and trailering.

Rogers began work in Mobil's then White Eagle division pipeline department at McPherson, Kans., as a pipeline in 1933. In six months he was promoted to truck driver. Three years later he became a field gauger and in 1953 he was promoted to assistant construction foreman transferring to Hill City.

In 1960 when Mobil's pipeline systems were reorganized into the then Magnolia Pipe Line Company, Rogers transferred to the Midland division in Texas. He served as pipeline construction inspector and was temporarily promoted to construction foreman in 1964.

When Mobil Oil was constructing a pipeline system and terminal in the Libyan Desert of North Africa in 1965, Rogers accepted an assignment as terminal operating supervisor. He returned to Andrews, in February, 1966 and in October of that year became automatic station operator at the company's Latah pump station in the Sweetwater district, where he is presently located.

He is married to the former Viola Walker at McPherson, Kans., and they have one son, Grant Jr. of Roswell, N.M., who has two children, Sandy and Wayne.

All police officers on duty Saturday afternoon at the police station stated that they did not know anything about the arrests or what officer was assaulted here.

Weinberger: Don't Rob Nixon Of Legal Right

WASHINGTON (AP) — Caspar Weinberger, outgoing director of the Office of Management and Budget, says it would be disastrous for the economy if Congress denied President Nixon the legal right to withhold funds and forced him to spend them.

"It would bring about a combination of more inflation and higher taxes," Weinberger said in an interview with The Associated Press.

He said, however, that if such legislation passed, it would still not resolve the basic Constitutional question, adding that the issue would probably wind up in the Supreme Court.

VIEW ON BUDGET Weinberger, nominated as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, gave his views on the fiscal 1974 budget, Nixon's request for a spending ceiling, and the impoundment issue. Questions and answers:

Q: There appears to be a lot of support on Capitol Hill for a bill to force you to free impounded funds. What would be the consequence if such a bill passed?

A: Depending on the success and legal interpretations of such a bill... if it were finally determined that the President had no legal authority not to spend everything appropriated by the Congress, I think the consequences of it would be disastrous. It would bring about a combination of more inflation and a need for much higher taxes.

Q: Then you agree that if such a bill passed, you would have to obey it?

A: I think a judgment of that kind would be prejudging whatever court decision might come of it. It seems to me, I'm speaking personally now, that if a bill of that kind passed, the basic Constitutional question of the separation of the powers and the responsibility of the executive would remain.

Kerner Trial Entering New Phase Shortly

CHICAGO (AP) — The trial of Otto Kerner enters a new phase this week with the former Illinois governor expected to take the stand to answer charges he manipulated horse racing in the state during his two terms as its chief executive.

During the first month of the trial, Kerner, 64, on leave from his post as a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, has reacted more like a judge than a defendant.

Trimly tailored, he rarely moves from his seated position at the long mahogany defense table in the 25th-floor courtroom of the Federal Building. He seldom speaks, even in whispers, to his lawyers or Theodore J. Isaacs, his codefendant and long-time friend.

Kerner's attitude matches the mood of the trial. It was expected that the indictment of a federal judge and former governor would create a tense court drama, but with few exceptions, the testimony of accountants and Internal Revenue Agents about the stacks of documents produced as evidence has been tedious.

Kerner often stares at the jury of seven women and five men, and they repeatedly glance toward the handsome, graying man charged with conspiracy, fraud, bribery, income tax evasion and perjury.

The prosecution rested its case Friday. At the center of its case is the purchase by Kerner and Isaacs of stock in Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises — CTE.

The government contends they bought the stock in 1966 for $50,000 at a time when it was worth $300,000, which the prosecution says amounted to bribery. Kerner and Isaacs later sold their racing stock and made more than $100,000 profit each.

Thomas Bradley, former chairman of the Illinois Harness Racing Commission, testified that Kerner gave him a direct order to change certain racing dates and that he forced Bradley to resign when he refused to do so.

Bradley's testimony was intended to prove the perjury charge which stems from Kerner's answers to a federal grand jury in June 1971. Kerner said the panel he never interfered with racing board decisions.

City Almost Became Rail Center

By MARJ CARPENTER
STANTON — Stanton at one time almost became a railroad crossing point.

This is according to a tale told by John J. Peters, born in 1891 in Marienfeld, later called Stanton. He told the story in 1968 to Jim McCoy who sent it to be recorded in the transportation section of a San Antonio museum.

Peters recalled that in addition to the Texas and Pacific Railroad which goes through Stanton, that back in 1904 or 1905, the Santa Fe Railroad started laying a branch line from San Angelo to Sterling City in Sterling County with full intention of joining this line with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe at Lubbock.

In 1905 and 1906, a man came to Stanton named "Mister Durant." Nobby seems to recall his first name. He told the citizens that the railroad was to come from Sterling City to Garden City in Glasscock County, cross the T&P at Stanton and continue north to Lubbock.

NOT SERVED

The purpose of this railroad was to have been to handle the movement of the many thousands of cattle which were being trailed into Stanton for shipment from as far north as Brownfield, Seminole, Lamesa and Andrews. Seminole and Andrews have never been served by a railroad to this day.

"Mister Durant" told the Stanton area people that if they would raise $200,000, he would build the end of the line from Stanton to Lubbock.

According to Mr. Peters, the money was raised and was to be paid to Durant "if and when the material was laid on the ground in Stanton." The cross ties were unloaded as promised and the rails were to come later.

About this time, a Mr. O'Donnell, after whom the town of O'Donnell near El Paso was later named came down to Martin County and convinced the backers of the railroad that "Mister Durant was a crook and a liar and that if they turned their $200,000 over to him, they would never get a railroad built."

LEAVES QUICKLY

Mister Durant quietly disappeared. Then Mr. O'Donnell brought in his engineers, equipment, a crew and many horses and mules and set up camp at the west edge of town. He proceeded northward constructing the railroad dump which still can be seen in several places between Stanton and Lamesa, even today.

But for some reason unknown to Peters, who was telling the story, when Mr. O'Donnell had almost reached Lamesa, the Offices Of GOP Are Transferred

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Republican Party is moving its state headquarters from the downtown Littlefield Building to the Penthouse Apartments, two blocks west of the Capitol.

"Since the constant focus of Republic Party activity in 1973 and 1974 will be winning the governorship, having the state Capitol building in full view right out the window seems appropriate," says a GOP newsletter.

The Republicans will be in suite 1001, a converted apartment which has a kitchen that will be used for storage.

project suddenly stopped. By then the rails had arrived in Stanton via the Texas and Pacific but were never unloaded. Both the cross ties brought in by Durant and the rails brought in by O'Donnell were eventually sold to the Texas and Pacific.

The money collected by the backers when the equipment arrived never did get put into the railroad. No contract was ever let on the projected railroad from Sterling City through Garden City to Stanton. Had the road ever been completed it would have passed through Sterling, Glasscock, Martin, Dawson, Lynn and Lubbock counties.

Mr. O'Donnell went "West, young man" and Mister Durant simply went. And the railroad became one more railroad "that never was."

Writer Freed In Bet Probe

VICTORIA, Tex. (AP) — A federal jury has convicted seven men of conspiracy to operate and operating a gambling business, but it found Houston Chronicle sports writer Bill McMurray innocent.

Punishment will be set at a later date after the late Friday jury decision.

McMurray testified that he gave his opinion to anyone who called about sports events and said he did not know the other principals in the case nor did he know they were gamblers.

Three other sports writers said they also gave information to callers.

Twelve men were charged in the case but only eight were tried before U.S. District Court Judge Owen B. Cox. Two of those not tried testified for the prosecution, while two others were ill.

Convicted on the 15-count indictment were Johnny Joseph of Austin; Richard Dick, Earl M. Altek and Victor Ganem of Victoria; Mickey Kothman of San Antonio; Bryan Roberts of Haltom City near Fort Worth; and James Winningham of Hurst between Dallas and Fort Worth.

Some facts about bad vision and fatigue.

Did you know that it normally takes about 25% of all your physical energy just to see?

Obviously, if your eyes must strain in any way to do their job, the percentage will increase. And you'll get tired a lot faster.

But most people don't link faulty vision with fatigue. Maybe that tired, blah feeling at the end of each day is just part of life. Or maybe those persistent headaches, nervousness and bloodshot, itching or burning eyes are only caused by air pollution. Or just maybe your vision needs checking.

At TSO your eyes will be examined internally for evidence of disease or defect, then for visual abnormalities. Should corrective lenses be required, they will be fitted for clear, comfortable vision.

Guard against eye disease, eyestrain, and poor vision with an eye examination at your nearest TSO office.

Stop in soon and see.

Private Dies, NCO Charged At Fort Dix

FT. DIX, N.J. (AP) — An Army staff sergeant has been charged with mistreatment in connection with the death of a private who collapsed midway through a five-mile hike during basic training.

The Army said the charges against S.Sgt. John D. Layton, 34, of Enfield, Conn., will be investigated to determine if a trial is warranted.

The charges — announced Friday — were made by 1st Lt. Francis T. Drury, the Army said, after the death of Pvt. John Ostergren, 22, of Norwood, Mass., on Jan. 15.

Ostergren was pronounced dead on arrival at Walsen Army Hospital here about a half hour after he was stricken during the training march.

The Army also announced Friday that "an extensive detailed autopsy could not establish cause of death. The patient probably expired from a disturbance of the conducting system of the heart but this is speculation and cannot be proven by autopsy," the Army said in a statement.

Rep. Edwin D. Eshleman, R-Pa., instituted his own investigation of the death after a soldier from his district claimed in a letter to the Lancaster New Era that someone had ordered Ostergren to be physically abused. After visiting the base, he said he would await official Army findings on the case before drawing any conclusions.

In a statement on its preliminary investigation, the Army said Ostergren had fallen behind his unit during the march and was assisted by other trainees.

Service And Out-Of-Town Trade Keep Dealers Busy

By MARJ CARPENTER STANTON — Three separate car dealers have seen agencies survive around a quarter of a century or more in this small West Texas community of 2,500 persons.

Wheeler Buick will celebrate its 25th year of operation next year. The late Stanley Wheeler owned and operated the facility and after his death, his son Jimmy and his wife, took over the dealership.

Jimmy recalls that his father used to say that when he arrived in 1949, two other dealers bet that he wouldn't last six months. "At the end of the six months, he was kind of discouraged and might have left except that he wanted to prove them wrong."

"We think that the secret of success in a car agency is service and customer relationship," Wheeler stated here. He added that his dad, who later became mayor of Stanton, came to Stanton because he thought it was a good spot to "be an independent businessman." Wheeler recalled that he emphasized "taking care of the customer after the sale." The agency gets a lot of customers from the rural area around Stanton and also has many repeat customers from Big Spring and Midland.

HE WAS RIGHT One dealer in Odessa recalled recently that at a company convention, the late Mr. Wheeler completely hushed up an East Texas dealer by telling him calmly, "I have the largest dealership between Midland and Big Spring."

B. F. White, who became a car dealer in Stanton the same year that Wheeler did — in 1949 — also stresses customer service. He operates the White Ford Agency which is the oldest car agency in Stanton and has been there since 1922. G. A. Elland operated it for many years and sold it to White, who had worked for a Ford company in East Texas while going through college.

White had taught school for 11 years in Badgett. He also served eight years as Martin County judge at one time.

"Fair trade and honesty keep customers coming back," White maintained. He also claims many customers from Big Spring and Midland as well as the area around Stanton. "You'd be amazed, but car dealers in this little town sell seven or eight hundred vehicles a year," he added.

Roadrunner Chevrolet was from 1940-72. Aisup Chevrolet until G. W. Aisup recently retired. It too does a thriving area business and has for 33 years.

GET ALONG "We car dealers here in Stanton honestly like each other and if we can't sell it, we'll try to send the customer to one of the other ones."

There are some car dealers that haven't survived in Stanton. Over near old Highway 80 is a forlorn empty building that looks like it was once a big operation. It was a Pontiac dealer.

There's another building that sells farm equipment and handles equipment auctions that has an old Rambler sign outside. Nobody seems to recall when the last Rambler was sold there.

But the three long standing agencies all plan to stay. After all, why give up a good thing after a quarter of a century of success.

Unnecessary Surgery Claims Many Lives

Unnecessary surgery claims the lives of 10,000 people every year, according to consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

"Incredible amounts of unnecessary surgery are going on," warns Dr. John Knowles, president of the Rockefeller Foundation. Some of this unnecessary surgery is reportedly performed by what one authority calls "a small minority of knife-happy, incompetent and greedy surgeons." Some is performed because an inexperienced doctor or surgeon makes a wrong diagnosis — and removes a healthy appendix or tonsils. Even authorities who dispute the 10,000 figure used by Nader admit that there is a lot of "inappropriate" operating going on.

"Ralph Nader said that some two million unnecessary operations are performed each year, leading to 10,000 deaths," said Dr. Cyril Rollins, a director of the American College of Surgeons, in an interview. "That figure is for headlines only. We have no idea what criterion he was using and it's a little bit hard to be dealing with shadow figures like that."

POOR JUDGMENT "But no one is saying that a certain amount of inappropriate operations aren't being done. Some of it is poor judgment, some for less defensible reasons."

"The only figure we have — and it's a highly controversial one — is that 11 percent of our members thought that some surgery with questionable indications are being done in their areas fairly frequently."

No matter whom you believe, unnecessary surgery can be avoided. But, with the federal government steering clear of this controversial area, it's up to you.

Quake In Rome Creates Panic

ROME (AP) — A mild earthquake jolted sections of Rome early today. Thousands of persons awakened by the rumbling fled their homes in panic, but there were no reports of injuries or damage.

Police, firemen and the Red Cross said they had received scores of telephone calls from Romans who feared there had been an explosion.

TO A BETTER LIFE? Exodus Keeps Up In Appalachia

MORGANTON, W. Va. (AP) — Appalachia's mountain residents began during World War II an exodus to northern cities in search of jobs. The emigration continues today and has taken more than 800,000 persons from West Virginia alone.

Some 1,700 males were interviewed in Cleveland's suburbs and its so-called Appalachian ghetto, as well as a random sample of West Virginians, including migrants who returned to the Mountain State.

Thirty-two per cent of the suburbanites and 254 per cent of the ghetto dwellers had been coal miners when they moved, Dr. Photiadis says, but they quickly acquired other skills when they moved to Cleveland.

Of the suburbanites, 32 per cent had become skilled workers, along with 11 per cent of the ghetto residents.

Some 57 per cent of the people gradually moved out of original areas of concentration to the suburbs where they now live in nice, moderate priced homes that are well-kept and comfortable.

But the research of a West Virginia University sociologist indicates much the opposite.

"With few exceptions," Dr. John D. Photiadis says, "these people gradually moved out of original areas of concentration to the suburbs where they now live in nice, moderate priced homes that are well-kept and comfortable."

"This improvement has continued without any demands or expectations for assistance, but through plain hard work and the use of the conventional avenues that our society provides," he adds.

He has conducted an extensive research project since 1967 in Cleveland, Ohio, and in West Virginia. The work man financed by the WVU Appalachian Center and the U.S. Department of Labor.

Alternative, Not Absolute

Are we about to create an illicit market for methadone that could become as troublesome as that for heroin?

This question has been raised by Dr. Paul Cushman Jr., director of Methadone Maintenance Treatment at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, and assistant professor of medicine at Columbia University, writing in a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal. The source of his concern was a Federal Food and Drug Administration order issued in December and effective in March, which imposes sharply restrictive rules on methadone treatment by physicians.

The rules provide three steps which Cushman finds objectionable: (1) Clinic medication visits for all new patients will be six days weekly (2) visits to the clinic can never be less than twice weekly, with no more than a three-day supply allowed out of the clinic, and (3) a ceiling of 120 milligrams a day for clinic doses and 100 milligrams on all daily take-home methadone is imposed on physicians.

There may be professional objection of a physician to any bureaucratic attempt to prescribe for patients, but Cushman is persuaded that the restrictions will expand greatly the nascent underground supply of methadone. This cannot but damage the promising experiments that have been undertaken to substitute methadone for heroin, he believes.

The substitution of one narcotic for another is always controversial. It approximates the treatment of a symptom rather than the disease. It raises questions of morality and ethics.

But in this imperfect world few absolute choices are available. The choice in this case is not heroin or no heroin — the vast profits in the market will produce a supply, no matter what the cost. The choice therefore becomes one between the lesser of two evils.

Methadone as a substitute for heroin permits the average person to get and keep a job, relieved of the necessity for stealing in order to support a very expensive habit. The cost of a tablet of methadone at wholesale is about 4 cents. In the black market the tablet sells for about $5, as contrasted with the cost of $35 a day or more for heroin maintenance.

A case can be made for stricter control of manufacturing and distribution of methadone. But no good case has been made for restricting its use by physicians in methadone maintenance programs.

Your Best Investment

Today marks the beginning of the observance of Scout Week, an occasion for re-examining our priorities.

Scouting has no monopoly on worthy service to youth, but it does have experience spread over more than three score years. Its program, conceived in the days of wide-eyed innocence, is still devoid of cynicism. The notion that individuals ought to feel a tinge of pride in being part of the fatherland, should put certain things first like performing duties to God and country; should help other people constantly; and then to do those things for themselves which promote morality, intelligence and health. If these virtues are corn ball, God grant us an appetite for corn.

Thus, as with all good youth movements, Scouting starts with a sound program. Certainly it needs money to function, but the biggest need of all is adults who will give time, energy and good example to boys and girls. Any adult who hasn't invested either with money, and more particularly through volunteer service, is ill equipped to raise a voice of criticism. If you want to really do something for America, work with a boy or girl.

Persian To-Ugh!

Around The Rim

By Walt Finley

Remember the now almost forgotten opening for most television newscasts:

"It's 10 o'clock. Do you know where you're children are?" I know what happened to it. The announcer found out where his children were, and he's sorry he asked. (No, not you Murphy Martin).

SOUTHPAW J. O. Shied, man of many talents, asks:

"Do you know that nearly every telephone call made now in Iran is Persian to Persian?"

Think good thoughts.

IF YOU'RE on the wagon as a result of a New Year's resolution, you might find this yarn from my drinking cousin, Bobby Harris, amusing.

A constant drinker found himself in a small West Texas town on Sunday night, and there was no way for him to find a drink. So he went to bed, feeling miserable.

He slept fitfully and the next morning he awoke with a bad case of London flu. His head ached. He had a high fever. He had to hold onto furniture to get to the bathroom, where he retched miserably.

Finally, pulling himself together, he looked in the mirror and said:

"If I'd a-known I'd feel this good, I'd a-quit drinkin' years ago."

DON ROLAND, who opened the first TG&Y store in Tulsa in 1946, writes to let me know the chain — which started in Kingfisher, Okla., in 1927 — bears the initials of its three founders, named Tomlinson, Gosselin and Young.

A Big Spring woman recently wrote a check at a local TG&Y store to Tomlinson, Gosselin and Young — and the cashier, I'm told, called the manager before cashing it.

MY FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR, Ted Ferrell, sent me a birthday gift, which he calls "A genuine Walt Finley pencil."

It has an eraser on both ends.

Good ol' Bill Factor saw a sign on an Ardmore motel:

SOIL EROSION

The Great Terrain Robbery

Oliver Cofer, the ad man, asks:

"Did you hear about the Aggie who thought a relief man was a sketch showing the route to the rest room?"

MY CALCULATING cousin, Jimmy Ladd, Los Angeles, is in with another horrible pun (although I'm inclined to believe "horrible pun" is redundant in that the horrier they are, the more the pun aficionados like them:

"The conductor of the Boston Pops orchestra has now been implicated in the Howard Hughes affair, and someone is writing a book about him."

"It's called 'A Fiedler on the Spool.'"

MY CHUNKY UNCLE'S wife, Margaret Rose, consulted the family doctor on a common problem and he advised her: "Don't try to bring your husband out of his TV football trance too quickly. The conversion might be fatal."

My Answer

BILLY GRAHAM

I am a habitual smoker of cigarettes, and have tried time and time again to quit. My failure to kick the habit has filled me with guilt feelings, and I am beginning to feel inadequate as a person. Am I locked into this for life? W.L.

No, you aren't. In fact, I believe the Bible teaches we don't have to tolerate any bad habit, if we're willing to let God's power drive it away. (Luke 13:27)

This has been a frequent subject in my column, but perhaps the best answer is to quote from a letter recently received: "I was 22 years old when I started smoking. It began by lighting cigarettes for my husband, when he didn't feel like getting up. About three years ago, just before Lent, I wanted to give up something which would really benefit me, and at the same time, be a Christian act of self denial."

"Billy, it was not hard to do at all. People offered me cigarettes, but I refused. I didn't even buy any. I realized it was with the help of God. By the time the six weeks of Lent had passed I couldn't stand even the smell of them."

"I always felt unclean when I would take Communion, but no more. I'm praying that He will give me strength never to start again, because I know 'with God, all things are possible.'"

The Surgeon General can say that smoking is harmful to health, but it's only Christ, as King of Kings in our lives, who can blast the habit. Remember this, Christianity only gets exciting when we let it become so revolutionary and practical.

About The Budget

William F. Buckley Jr.

Concerning the President's budget message, a few observations:

1) THE THRUST of it is surely the most refreshing thing ever done by the Nixon Administration. Mr. Nixon has proved that he is not an ideological creature, given to spastic antagonisms based on political catechisms. It was he, for instance, who quite ardently proposed a guaranteed annual wage. But, in the current budget proposals, he is saying, very simply: What is the purpose in continuing social programs which are manifest failures? It was to be expected that he would be criticized for social insouciance — because, in the same budget, he called for an increase in military expenditures.

2) THOSE WHO accept too readily the notion that Mr. Nixon is easy prey to the military lobby should stop to analyze the military budget. True, it would rise by $4.2 billion. But more significantly, Mr. Nixon plans a 55,000 reduction in military personnel, 56 fewer ships for the Navy, two bomber squadrons less than we had before, and other targeted reductions. The dollar increase is the result of the transition, finally, into an all-volunteer army.

Now suddenly the war is (for purposes of this discussion) over; and a great hue and cry arises about the increased military expenditure. For years and years, analysts have pointed out that however desirable a volunteer army, inevitably it would mean that we would have to pay the soldiers and the officers more money. They would have to be seduced by marketplace mechanisms.

So we are headed in the right direction, even though the dollar cost is higher. Viewed in perspective, and taking into account price inflation, the 1974 defense budget is — in constant dollars — virtually identical to what it was in 1964, though personnel costs will now account for 55 per cent of the total costs, compared with 49 per cent a decade ago — though at the time, we had almost a half million more military personnel.

3) AS THE Wall Street Journal has trenchantly pointed out, there is a psychological sense in which the big spenders always begin on the offensive. The original budget figure for 1973 was $246 billion, and that was up $10 billion from the previous year. Congress, whose advocates are now so busy talking about Executive usurpation, raised the $246 billion dollar figure to $261 billion. The cost of that increase was: inflation, pure and simple. In recognition of this, Mr. Nixon tried to hold the actual spending figure down to $250 billion, for which he has been roundly denounced by people who do not spend much time denouncing inflation.

Now we have the President asking for a budget of $269 billion, up $23 billion from the proposed budget of a year ago. "Since 1969, the average increase in actual federal spending has been about 8.1 per cent a year," writes the Wall Street Journal. "Now, the economy does not grow at 8.1 per cent a year over any sustained period of time. Thus the federal government is currently consuming 29 or 21 per cent of the Gross National Product, compared to 18 or 19 per cent in the early 1960s. If the trend is to be continued, somehow the money must be raised." How?

4) WHY, BY higher taxes, is the answer, off the cuff. But the overhead-of-government these days is running close to 35 per cent, if you throw in state and municipal taxes, and that is a very large percentage of the work week. It means, approximately, that everyone is working every Monday and every Tuesday for the government.

Administration Sees Great Year

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Nixon administration officials took several occasions this past week to proclaim excellent economic and business prospects for the balance of 1973.

But there was the accompanying assertion, from the President himself as well as some of his top economic aides, that whether it becomes a great year or merely a very good one hinges on holding down inflation.

Nixon set the theme in a message to Congress in conjunction with the annual report of his Council of Economic Advisors:

"The general prediction is that 1973 will be another very good year for the American economy."

CONTINGENT ON BRIDE

If the federal government keeps spending to the level proposed in his $269 billion budget, Nixon said, it could develop into a great year.

The council report spoke optimistically of holding the year's rate of inflation to 3 per cent, but said that attaining a figure that low depends on keeping federal spending within the limits proposed by Nixon, and on turning the rate of food prices increases downward.

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz told a group of New York business and financial leaders on Thursday that prices of raw agricultural products would be no higher at year's end than they were at its start, although there might be a period of higher levels in the interim.

INTEREST TO RISE

—Meanwhile, commercial lenders continued to post increases in short-term interest rates, prompting speculation that major banks would act very soon, despite administration pressure, to raise their prime rates — the interest fees they charge on loans to their most credit-worthy customers.

—Pan American World Airways decided to drop its options to purchase seven Concorde supersonic airlines, and Trans World Airlines said a short time later it intended to cancel the six options it held. The controversial needle-nosed plane is manufactured jointly by Aerospatiale of France and the British Aircraft Corp.

—Gulf & Western Industries disclosed it had acquired 4 per cent of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. through stock purchases and said it would seek to buy an additional 15 per cent through a tender offer of $20 a share. There was no immediate comment from officials of A&P.

The Week's Business

- Radiant forecasts hinged to ability to check inflation
- Spokesmen say hold line with only $268 billion spending
- Prediction of only 3 pct. rate, but food prices a worry
- Major airlines parachuting out of options to buy Concorde
- Gulf & Western Industries seeking to buy into A&P tea company

Hung Up On Mothballs

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you tell me anything about mothballs? My neighbors are wonderful people but they have a "thing" about mothballs. Their house reeks of it. Their food tastes of it. Their clothes smell horrible.

I can't go there because twice I have been there for social gatherings and I was violently ill the next day.

Is it my imagination that I feel ill being near that smell, or can it be harmful living in or near it all the time? — A. S.

Some folks are easily made ill by strong or offensive odors — this may or may not be imagination at work.

However, mothballs can be poisonous if swallowed. They are one of the familiar types of child poisoning. Toddlers think they are "candy," and the consequences can be serious. Even fatal.

The active ingredient is naphthalene, a form of benzene, which is a hydrocarbon, and hydrocarbons (ranging from kerosene or gasoline to some of the more volatile ones) have to be treated with respect. They are dangerous.

How strong the fumes from the mothballs are in this home you describe, I can't say. The strength, as opposed to the sheer odor, would be the important question.

As you doubtless know, cleaning fluids and such materials have to be used in well-ventilated areas to be safe. If too much concentration of fumes from the mothballs accumulates, liver or kidneys could be affected, and there is a possibility of proper blood formations being disturbed.

I am not implying that an occasional visit to the house would cause these serious types of trouble. It is more likely that it is the smell that bothers you.

However, I can't help taking a dim view of keeping a house so loaded with mothballs that the whole house smells so pungent. There could be, it seems to me, a chance of absorbing enough naphthalene over an extended period to cause some genuine physical damage.

And I'd certainly be worried about having such quantities of mothballs around if any young children ever visit. They are a real danger to small children.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that the peellings of tomatoes are not to be eaten for they don't digest but cling to the intestines. Therefore tomatoes MUST be peeled. Is there any truth to this? — Mrs. T. H.

No, no truth to it. Just somebody's imagination running wild. It is true that the skin may not be digested, but it does not "cling to the intestine." It's just cellulose fiber, like the roughage fibers of any other fruits or vegetables.

High blood pressure can be controlled. To find out what causes high blood pressure and what can be done to treat it, get "Controlling Your Blood Pressure" (Hypertension)" by Dr. Thosteson. To obtain a copy of this helpful booklet, write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope.

Back To Normal?

Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON — One of the more unfortunate presidents, Warren Gamaliel Harding, gave currency at the end of the first World War to the dubious word normalcy. Now in the wake of the longest war in our history the danger is that we will sweep the tragic lessons of that war under the rug and rush back to the free-wheeling days of the past.

THE WORD from the Kissinger apparatus is that the post-truce fighting was expected. Intelligence reports, those captured enemy documents, predicted a North Vietnamese-Viet Cong offensive to shut the main arteries to the principal centers in South Vietnam once the cease-fire was signed. That is already being countered and the fighting will soon simmer down.

THE PRESIDENT'S prediction in his economic message that 1973 will be the best year of our lives has the cheerful sound of normalcy even though the stock market hasn't as yet got the message. There is a crumb of consolation for Sen. Henry M. Jackson and the Boeing Aircraft Co. It is a request for $28 million — anything in the millions is a crumb in this era of billions and trillions — for research and development into the environmental problems of the supersonic transport. The SST was killed after a stiff fight in the Senate led by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who contended that the super-sonic plane would be almost entirely subsidized by the government for the benefit of a very small number of passengers.

AT THE TIME of the controversy two years ago the SST, on which a total of close to 1 billion had already been spent, there was testimony about noise and a threatened increase in ultra violet radiation. Meteorologists testified that the exhaust of the SST at 70,000 feet would damage the layer of ozone that acts as a barrier against radiation. According to specialists from the National Cancer Institute, this would greatly increase the incidence of skin cancer.

In addition to the sonic boom the side-line noise at takeoff and landing, some estimated to be equivalent to that of 50 subsonic jets. Another witness, a specialist in sound patterns, told the committee that every house within a radius of nine miles of New York's Kennedy Airport would have to be soundproofed at a cost of $6,000 a house.

PROXMIRE CALLS the new budgetary requests, with $14.5 million for SST development in the Federal Aviation Administration on top of the $23 million for research to be conducted by NASA, a long step toward reviving the disputed plane. He noted the uncertain future of the Concorde, with only nine firm orders there far as a warning.

Au Revoir Francais

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The French, in an effort to purify their language, have officially expelled 350 English words from the French vocabulary including "hit parade," "zoning," "bypass," "tanker" and "container."

THE CAMPAIGN against "Franglais," as these English words were called, was ordered by President Georges Pompidou, who set up a commission to find French equivalents for English words that had managed to get into a Frenchman's vocabulary.

It is regrettable at a time when nations are trying to understand each other better that France would purge itself of English words. If she persists, England and the United States may have to retaliate by eliminating all French words from the English language.

This letter has just been sent to President Pompidou:

DEAR PRESIDENT POMPIDOU: It is regretful that at a time of detente in world affairs, France would decide to eliminate English words from the French language.

As a Francophile and a connoisseur of your great country, I feel that you are appealing to the potpourri of cliché elements in French that for years have been a bias about the importance of bringing our two great cultures closer together.

THE THINKING here in Washington is that the French are losing their sangfroid over Franglais, and are au courrant as to the desire of most people to break down language barriers and understand each other.

Your campaign has a deja vu ambience about it.

It seems for years the French have protested the encroachment of English on their language. But the elite Franc Academy, which is supposed to guard the culture of the country, has sat on its derriere for 50 years and has done nothing about it.

In the meantime, France has encroached on the English language, but no one has complained.

To Make Chief Guinea Pig In Her Research On Sex?

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The Department of Social Affairs called today for an official investigation of Wyn Sargent, the American anthropologist who married the chief of a Stone Age tribe in a West Irian jungle.

A statement by the department charged that Miss Sargent married Chief Obaharok to make him a human guinea pig to satisfy her adventurous nature in her research on the sex life of the Mullia tribespeople, who still live like their ancestors did thousands of years ago.

Miss Sargent was reported to have said she would shed her Western clothes and dress in the strings and straps of the natives after her marriage to Obaharok.

"If Miss Sargent sheds her clothes then her method of approach to the tribes is not correct," the department's statement said.

The government is spending $720,000 on a two-year program, to be completed by the end of this year, to civilize the West Irian tribes by clothing them and teaching them to speak, read and write Indonesian.

The department says she had harmed this program.

The 42-year-old explorer and journalist from Huntington Beach, Calif., who has a teenage son from her marriage to a pilot who was killed in an air accident, married Obaharok on Jan. 8. She paid a dowry of 11 pigs and five sets of native headresses.

Senator Raps Student Fees

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Walter Mendgen of Houston introduced a measure he said would "prevent mandatory students fees from funding militant student groups, homosexual dances, and other activities that are repulsive to most students who do not want their money going for such purposes."

Mendgen's bill would make student service fees at state colleges and universities voluntary.

"This legislation will also stop compulsory student fees from paying radical speakers such as Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin, or Julian Bond," Mendgen, a Republican, said.

The senator said his bill would let students pay for only those services they wanted. The bill also would prohibit building or student union use fees from funding campus guest speakers.

"Those students who are interested in anti-American speakers and militant activities can have them by paying for them," Mendgen said.

"Likewise, those students who do not wish to participate in such antics should not be forced to financially support them."

MILITARY PENSIONS STANDARDS TIGHTENED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has tightened military disability retirement standards to avoid what members of Congress complained were unwarranted tax breaks for generals and admirals.

Secretary of Defense Elliot L. Richardson issued new guidelines. Pentagon officials said they are intended "to cut substantially" the number of officers leaving the services with disabilities.

To a retiring officer or career enlisted man, a disability can mean that all or a major part of his pension is tax free.

Abuses in the military pension system came to light last year during a Senate investigation of unauthorized bombing raids on North Vietnam and Gen. John D. Lavelle. Lavelle retired from the Air Force on an annual pension of $27,000 and, because he was granted a 75 per cent disability, nearly all of it is tax free. He was granted the disability even though he passed his flight physical a few weeks before retiring.

The new retirement guidelines require that a serviceman be found physically fit for active duty and able to perform his job until retirement time.

"If the member has performed his normal duties until his time of separation, it will be presumed that he is fit for duty" and thus be unable to claim disability, the Pentagon said.

If not judged fit for duty, he will be forced to retire.

Unclaimed Beauty

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

UNMET: (Q) I am 15 and I guess I am quite popular. At least I have a lot of friends, including boys. I am also one of the prettiest girls in my school. But I do not have a boyfriend.

That is why I am writing. Our sophomore dance is coming up and I have to invite a boy to take me. The boy I want to invite is 18 and he does not know me. I have known him for two years. I don't know him to talk to, but I have been observing him very closely and I am sure that I know him very well.

I do not think I would really enjoy going to the dance with any other boy. Also, I am paying for the tickets so it wouldn't cost him much. Please tell me what to do. — Eager in Ohio.

Slade Returns For Exhibit

David Slade, American scene painter, will be back in Big Spring at the Hobby Center starting today to set up an exhibit of his works.

Classes will begin Feb. 12. Anyone interested should contact the Hobby Center.

Slade resides in Albuquerque and paints many western scenes. He was raised in the Deep South and likes to do old South scenes. He had also lived in Colorado and paints scenes from that area.

He often displays paintings in Taos, N.M., which has a big art market for persons from Dallas and other portions of the state.

Slade emphasized the upsurge of interest in amateur art when he was last in Big Spring. He shows his art regularly at the Coronado Gallery near Albuquerque, the Aspendace at Ruidosa and the City National Bank in Fort Worth.

Plane Hijacker Gets 20 Years

DALLAS (AP) — Billy Gene Hurst, 26, the man charged with the hijacking of a Braniff jetliner last May, has been sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The sentence was pronounced Friday by U.S. District Court Judge Sarah T. Hughes.

Hurst held the Braniff crew hostage for more than seven hours last May before backing the plane during a flight from Dallas to Houston.

(A) Invite a boy you have talked to and been friendly with. Do not try to invite this boy you have never met. I think I understand, but he wouldn't. Do try to work out a way to meet him soon. Possibly you could find a mutual friend who could introduce you. Or maybe you could join some group he is interested in.

IN PRISON: (Comment) I'm in prison. I lost my girlfriend because I was sentenced to eight months. I saved a girl from getting raped, but I was carrying a gun at the time and I had a previous record, so I ended up in prison.

I was kind to my girl and never hurt her, but she sent me a Dear John because I am a prisoner and she does not want a prisoner boyfriend.

I am trying to lead an honest life. It isn't easy here. People don't want to help an inmate. I am young and willing to straighten out my life, but I have no one out there to cheer me or help me. — Sad in Florida.

(A) Thank you for writing. Teenage readers can get three messages from your letter: (1) A first mistake can lead to other mistakes. (2) Prison is not the only punishment for taking the wrong road.

(3) The honest life is the only way, although it's hard. You seem to have learned about honesty, but protest that it is hard for a convict to be government, you might try to be honest.

Commissioner Dale Farabee said it will speed financial, clinical and drug information.

Told To Cut Discharges

HOUSTON (AP) — The Rohm and Haas chemical plant has been ordered by a federal judge to slash its ammonia discharges.

The discharges had been running about 8,500 pounds a day and the order by U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton says that they be reduced to 405 pounds daily by the end of 1974.

The company had proposed a 2,000-pound daily discharge into the Houston Ship Channel by that date.

In issuing his decision in a pollution suit tried last November, Singleton also ordered the plant to reduce its outflow of cyanide, chromium, nickel, suspended solids, chemical oxygen demand (COD) and biochemical oxygen demand (BOD).

John Parrott, a Rohm and Haas official, said "it looks like a very rigorous order."

"Until we have digested the order further, I couldn't say whether we will be able to comply with it," Parrott said.

Chief Asst. U.S. Atty. Jack Shepherd and Asst. U.S. Atty. Stephen Bice, who tried the case, said they were "very pleased" with the ruling.

LOCAL FRONTIER SCENE PAINTED—Lloyd Claxton (right), a distribution clerk who says he spends all of his spare time painting, donated this frontier scene to the Post Office. Accepting was Postmaster Frank Hardesty. A horseman carrying U.S. mail is being pursued by Indians south of Signal Mountain in the painting. In return for a leather cover for a Bible, Mrs. Mary Raley gave Claxton art lessons about 15 months ago. Since then, Claxton has created 73 oil paintings, including miniatures. He has exhibited with the Big Spring Art Association. His hobby does not cost much, he said, because he makes his own frames.

Peace Officer Assaulted; Three Men Are Arrested

COLORADO CITY — Three men were arrested here Friday for allegedly trying to free a traffic code violator and for an assault upon a Colorado City police officer.

City Patrolman Pete Upshaw, 46, was in Root Memorial Hospital here Friday with lacerations about the head and double fracture of the jaw. His physician said his condition was fair.

James Lee Green, 19, was charged with aggravated assault and bond was set at $1,500. William Tyrone, 18, was charged with aggravated assault and bond set at $2,000. Charles Edward Green, about 20, was charged with assault with intent to murder and bond set at $5,000.

All three remained in Mitchell County Jail late Friday. Dan Bradshaw, Upshaw's patrol partner, said their police unit received complaints of a car being driven with a loud muffler in the College Street area in east Colorado City. He said they pursued a car driven by a man off College Street and then stopped in front of a residence on Front Street.

Bradshaw said he and Upshaw were prevented from arresting the man by a group of Blacks in front of the residence. He said while he was trying to pursue the driver of the car on foot, he saw Upshaw being kicked by members of the crowd.

Bradshaw reported that he then radioed for help. Later, Assistant Chief Jim Latham arrived, followed by Mitchell County Deputy Sheriff Perry Ruddick.

The crowd then dispersed, according to Bradshaw. Bradshaw and Ruddick then entered the residence and arrested James Lee Green.

Five other persons were later taken into custody but three were released.

Land Reclamation Is Being Studied

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The state has undertaken a $500,000 study of surface mining, aided by Appalachian Regional Commission funds.

SOME PEOPLE TAKE GREAT PRIDE IN ANCESTORS

How Far Back Can You Trace Family Tree?

By JOHN EDWARDS

For several Big Spring families, the history of America means more because they can trace their family back through its history. These are their stories.

Living in the past of Bill Steagald, 905 E. 16th St., are five direct-line ancestors who fought in the American Revolutionary War, two in the War of 1812 and a Union colonel in the Civil War.

After about five years and 500 letters in addition to other research, the electrician employed by Cosden, knows eight generations ago the first of his father's direct-line came to America from Holland in 1732. John Steagald came as part of the Palatine Immigration and evidently was a metal worker.

His son, also John Steagald, fought with the Lunenburg County Company Virginia Line in the Revolutionary War. He participated in the Battle of Guilford, Courthouse in North Carolina and the Battle of Kings Mountain.

UNDER PEARSON

Absolum A. Steagald married the former Catherine A. Crain who was the great-granddaughter of another Revolutionary War veteran. Private John Crain served under Gen. Pearson's Brigade from Massachusetts.

Crain fought at Princeton, N.Y., and at Trenton, N.Y., which means he crossed the Delaware River with Gen. George Washington.

Pleasant Haley, another ancestor in the paternal line, served with insurgents in the American Revolutionary War.

One John Steagald served as a private in the North Carolina Militia during the War of 1812.

Before the Civil War, John J. Steagald owned 42 slaves and 70,000 acres of Tennessee river-bottom farm land. But he chose the Union. Col. Steagald led the 2nd Tennessee Mounted Infantry, Union.

Col. Steagald was the only son in the family to fight for the Union. The rift was so deep he changed the spelling of his name from the original Steagald to Steagall. From 1864-74, Col. Steagald represented three Tennessee counties at the state legislature.

All of both Steagald and Carroll families lived in middle Tennessee. In 1819, the Steagalds floated down the river from the North Carolina and Virginia area to middle Tennessee. In 1821, the Carrolls crossed through the Cumberland Gap en route to their new home in the Hickman Lewis County area.

The Carroll line dates back to Colonial Virginia in the early 1600s.

John Carroll of Mecklenburg County, Virginia was a captain in the Virginia Line during the Revolutionary War. His four years and nine months of service included participation in the Battle of Guilford Courthouse.

John Hale, another ancestor on Bill's mother's side, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, also.

Sterling Carroll was under Gen. William Carroll, an uncle and commander of the Tennessee Brigade, during the War of 1812. He saw action during the Battle of New Orleans among other places. The uncle later became governor of Tennessee.

KEPT PRISONER

After four years with the 48th Tennessee Infantry of the Confederacy, John Sterling Carroll was captured in Chattanooga and kept prisoner in Rock Island, Ill., the last year.

The present day Steagald said he does not investigate any except direct line unless he notices something particularly interesting.

For example, moving laterally, he found an ancestor who helped relieve remnants of Custer's command at Little Big Horn.

A daughter, now Mrs. Janice Steagald Grant, of Daytona Beach, Fla., is a member of the Daughters of the American Republic, Nathaniel Davis Chapter, Odessa, and United Daughters of the Confederacy, Gen. Ector Chapter, Odessa. Bill Steagald, himself, owns membership in the Sons of the American Republic, Permian Basin Society, Midland, and Sons of Confederate Encampment, Jackson, Miss.

"I think it's tragic so many people let their family history just go," Steagald said.

YANKEE DOODLE, BANG

A Black man was sitting on his gate and insolently whistling "Yankee Doodle Dandy" right after the Civil War near Paris, Texas. So Jack Helm, listed as a deserter from the 9th Texas Calvary, shot him.

Although Mrs. Dale Smith said Helm, one of her ancestors, apparently came from a well-respected family, he had to leave town.

In South Texas, Helm gained employment with Able Head (Shanghai) Pierce. Then, he served as one of four captains in the Texas state police. But two of his subordinates killed a couple of men and he lost that job.

He served as one of four captains in the Texas State Police. At the same time, he was sheriff of DeWitt County.

As a law enforcement officer, "he did a lot of hanging," Mrs. Smith said. In addition, he farmed and patented two inventions. One was a cultivator.

On May 17, 1873, the 33-year-old sheriff was working on the second invention — a cotton worm destroyer — in a black smith shop in the now ghost town of Albuquerque, Texas.

The Taylor-Sutton feud was raging, and John Wesley Hardin and Jim Taylor were looking for Helm. The two pursuers stopped at the black smith shop and were talking to some local men when Helm emerged with a knife in his hand, according to the annual.

Hardin peppered Helm's chest with buckshot. Helm jumped up and slashed at Taylor, someone yelled and Taylor turned, shooting Helm through the head.

Mrs. Smith has tracked the Helm line back to Franklin County, Va. where John Jacob Helm Sr. was living in 1754. Helm, who came from Rotterdam, Germany, was one of the first colonists to locate on the James River.

feel like he knows you're doing this," she said.

COLONIAL SHELTER GIVEN

"I don't have any horse thieves or sheriffs either," Mrs. John Damron said. "They were just plain ole people."

Until recently, all were farmers. A family in one line came over from the province of Mannheim, Germany and found a home in Frederick, County, Md. in the 1740s.

The brother of one of John Damron's ancestors gave Sir William Berkeley, governor of colonial Virginia, sanctuary during Bacon's Rebellion. That was around 1676.

One relative had Indians named as slaves in his will when he died in the late 1600s.

One distant grandfather and two brothers, as teenagers rode a flatbed barge from Pennsylvania to south of Natchez, Miss. Here, they settled with land grants of 500 acres each.

DIED IN CAMP

A beginner in genealogy, Miss Bernice Caon has learned her great grandfather, Jeremiah W. Caon of Alabama, was captured in August and died in the prison camp at Bowling Green, Ky., Jan. 29, 1862 of pneumonia.

Mrs. Smith said she has been researching her past only since August, 1971 and has made several lucky discoveries.

Working with a camera, tape recorder and jeans to protect herself from cemetery burrs, she visits persons, places and county clerk's office.

"You've got probabilities, possibilities and lies," she says of the problems.

But she likes the feeling delving into her past gives her.

When she discovered Sheriff Helm's grave, she had the not uncomfortable feeling that he was standing behind her. "You

Her grandfather once had to throw all his fresh meat away to appease panthers on his long trip home from town. When that failed and all the meat was gone, he rattled the wagon's connection to the horse to scare them away. "That's how wild it was," she said.

Mrs. Cm G. Barnett has traced her family lines directly back to an ancestor born in 1455 in England. Her sister is a member of the Colonial Dames of the 17th Century.

Two other direct line ancestors signed the deed for about 18 square miles obtained at Fairfield Connecticut from Sasqua Indians in 1661. The price: 13 coats, two yards apiece, and Wampum.

One of these men, Nathan Gold, presided over witchcraft trials as chief justice of the supreme court in 1712. He was one of 19 signing the petition for a charter for the colony. Gold also served as town clerk and deputy governor of Connecticut.

At 14, Samuel Wire of Milford, New Haven was the youngest in the regiment of Col. Talmage. So they would not discharge him because of age and height, he stood on tiptoe when the troops were reviewed.

An apprentice, he had entered as a substitute for John Downs, who was "draughted."

Steer Coach Is Busy Man—In More Ways Than One

By JACK COWAN
Herald Sports Editor

Bob Burris is not exactly what you'd call the typical "coach in a hurry." But then, he's not really just standing around, either.

The new head Steer arrived in Big Spring Thursday night, and aside from the fact that he hasn't purchased a complete gold and black wardrobe, you'd never know he had less poop on his team than any seventh grader in San Angelo.

Right now he's got house-hunting and grade schools on his mind more than split formations or defensive tackles, and he's having enough trouble just finding the high school. Still, he's starting to build his own momentum.

And don't get concerned if he can't tell you next week what type offense and defense his Steers will run next year. He hasn't decided.

"I don't want to come in here and just have the kids throw a way everything they've already learned," the former Oklahoma football star said. "I have some things that I'd like for us to do and we'll try to incorporate these things with what the boys already know. It's a lot easier for us as coaches to change than it is for 60 or 70 kids."

Burris, who led Midland Lee out of the football wilderness five years ago, said he's glad to be returning to football after a year's layoff, and this is really the logical place to be.

"There's no doubt that the best football programs in the United States are right here in West Texas, and this is by far the best district in the state," the 33-year-old Burris said without flinching.

And he's probably as much an expert on this as anyone. After seven years of coaching, one as an assistant at North-eastern State in Tahlequah, Okla., five at Pauls Valley and one at Hobbs, N.M., Burris became a Texan the hard way.

He accepted the head position at Midland Lee, where winning football games wasn't exactly an everyday occurrence and the schedule read like an NFL slate.

"I sort of had my eyes closed when I went to Lee," he admitted. "We went 1-9 that year and I thought it might be time to head back to Hobbs, but we turned it around the next couple of years."

After that not-so-outstanding 1966 season, which included nine straight losses, Burris' Rebels posted back-to-back 7-3 years, finishing in a tie for second and in third place in 1967-68. Then it was back to Oklahoma—this time as an assistant at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater.

But even as a college coach in Oklahoma he couldn't keep away. He had West Texas and Dist. 5-AAAA as his scouting area.

And now he's got a task ahead of him again. He will be expected by the multitudes to take a team that has won eight games in three years and turn it into a contender in the toughest league around.

"I feel like we'll be able to compete," he said. "I don't know how many games we'll win or lose, but I don't think that's something that you can see in the record. The boys will know when they walk off the field whether or not they've competed."

"Right now we're just looking for prospects. I understand we've got a pretty good throwing quarterback, but we won't really know what we have until we see them work out." Spring training will probably begin either May 5 or 7, he said, with the Spring Game to conclude drills May 25.

Burris said he preferred a multiple-type offense with "quite a bit of throwing." Defensively, the coach likes a 5-2 arrangement. "I like a forcing-type defense. I don't believe in sitting and waiting for the offense to dictate what will happen."

Burris has another thing working in his favor. He has the excitement of a new coach returning to his favorite game after watching from the stands a whole season.

"I think some people must have the wrong idea about college coaching," he said. "I spent less time with my family my last season at OSU than anywhere I've ever coached. I enjoyed the recruiting, but not the hours."

And when a business opportunity in home building and land development came up last year, Burris grabbed at it. Just like he grabbed at a chance to get back into coaching after he discovered he "missed it."

"I missed working with young men, but I didn't want to get back into the recruiting wars." Maybe it's the challenge, or maybe it's even the climate. But whatever the reason, Burris and Big Spring have entered each other's picture.

Tardy Namath Angers Mays

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP)—Willie Mays got mad at Joe Namath Friday and started to walk out of the American Airlines Golf Classic but agreed to stay in when he was assigned another partner.

The swinging quarterback of the New York Jets kept Willie waiting at the first tee for 40 minutes, and steam started coming out of the ears of the New York Mets' all-time All-Star slugger.

"I don't give a damn who it is—I warmed up and was ready to play," Mays fumed. "My partner ought to be ready, too."

Mays and Namath were paired in the annual tournament in which major league baseball stars team with players of the National Football League in a 54-hole, best-ball competition for $30,000 in prize money, $10,000 to the winners.

Broadway Joe apologized that starting times had not been stipped under his door, as promised, and that he didn't get a wake-up call. Three other players also said they didn't get wake-up calls.

Mays was assigned Donny Anderson, running back of the St. Louis Cardinals. Namath went out with Steve Blass, pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

On Thursday, Namath kept his partners—John Meyers, publisher of Sports Illustrated; Joseph Schroeder, clothing manufacturer, and columnist Buddy Martin of the Gannett newspapers—waiting for close to two hours in the preliminary pro-am.

The tourney continues today with Del Unser and Leroy Kelly in the lead. Unser, an outfielder with the Philadelphia Phillies and Kelly, a running back with the Cleveland Browns, teamed for a best-ball score of 57 on the 5,780-yard Conquistador golf club Friday.

Tour Youngster Maintains Four-Stroke Bulge In Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP)—Youthful Tom Watson birdied three holes in a row down the stretch Saturday for a four-under-par 68 and maintained a four-stroke lead through three rounds of the $200,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

The 23-year-old Watson, who missed a five-foot putt on the 18th hole for a fourth consecutive birdie, had a 54-hole total of 201, a whopping 15-under-par on the 7,154-yard Waialae Country Club course.

That put him four strokes in front of non-winning tour veteran John Schlee, who finished a 67-205.

Orville Moody, a sad loser in a playoff a week ago in the Bing Crosby tournament, was alone in third after a 68 for 206, five strokes back.

"I'm still fightin' it, that's all I can do," said Moody. "Just keep fightin'."

Former Masters champion

Gay Brewer and longshot Joe Carr followed at 208. The 40-year-old Brewer had a 68 in the weather that alternated from drizzling shower to bright sunshine. Carr had a 69.

J.C. Sneed had a 68 and was alone at 209 while Japan's Junbo Ozaki, in second after two rounds of this chase for a $40,000 first prize, blew to a 73 and dropped back to a big group at 210, a distant nine strokes off the pace.

Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino were out of it, 13 strokes behind Watson at 214. Palmer had a 69 and Trevino a 70.

Watson, a tour sophomore and a Stanford University product, saved his big move for the holes that were covered by national television, starting at the 15th.

Schlee, 33 and still seeking his first title after eight years on the tour, had crept to within two strokes of the front-running Watson when they reached the TV holes. Watson quickly regained a four-stroke margin. He rolled in a 20-foot birdie putt on the 15th and Schlee, his playing partner, made a bogey for a two-stroke swing.

Watson broke into a big smile—and it broadened even more on the 16th when he made another birdie, this from about 30 feet.

"It was almost like I could see a trench from my ball to the hole," he said. "And I had a real good feeling on the next one. I almost knew I was going to make it."

He did. This time, on the 17th, it was from about 25 feet.

JORDAN ACCEPTS 'HONOR' — Ralph "Shug" Jordan, Auburn University football coach, accepts his award as Bonehead of the Year in Dallas Friday at a luncheon meeting of the Bonehead Club of Dallas. Jordan won the honor for not informing his "ragamuffin" team of 1972 that they (according to the experts) were supposed to lose — not win — 10 games.

Mirage, Matra Lead Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A Gulf Mirage and a lone Matra carrying the colors of France winged far ahead of the field Saturday during the early hours of the Daytona 24 Hour sports car race.

The Mirage, a hybrid prototype put together by championship builder John Wyr of England, was being driven by Mike Hallwood of Britain and John Watson of Ireland.

Just 30 seconds behind and running easily was the Matra, a machine similar to the one that triumphed in the 24 Hours of LeMans. Its was being manned by Grand Prix stars Francois Cevert, Henri Pescarolo and Jean-Pierre Beltoise.

During the first two hours, the two lead cars had completed 63 laps around the 3.81-mile Daytona International Speedway course that includes the four 31-degree banks of the speedway proper and a series of curves and short straights in the infield.

The average speed was just over 110 miles per hour. In third was Wyr's other Mirage, which Britain's Derek Bell had qualified for the pole position at a near record 129.995 m.p.h. Bell, whose co-driver is New Zealander Howden Ganley, was running three laps back of the leader. His car had been forced into an early pit stop to correct a minor malfunction.

Hallwood had put his mirage into the lead a lap after the 3 p.m. start, putting the Matra into the position of having to play catch-up.

A stiff breeze, gusting off the nearby Atlantic Ocean at about 12 m.p.h., greeted the drivers as they roared off on their twice-around-the-clock journey at 3 p.m.

The survivors of North America's longest and most prestigious sports car race will be flagged to a halt at 3 p.m. Sunday.

SPORT FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By JERRY METCALF

Do you know who holds the all-time college basketball record for getting the most rebounds in one season of play... It is not any of the big super stars you might think of first like Wilt Chamberlain or Lew Alcindor... Answer is Walter Dukes who set the record when he played for Seton Hall in the 1952-53 season with 774 rebounds.

If your favorite basketball team wins a few games in a row, you get excited... If they win 10 in a row... that's really something... If they would win 75 in a row... well, that seems almost unbelievable... But what about a team winning more than that... 100 in a row?... 150 in a row?... Impossible?... Well, do you know a basketball team once won the amazing total of 159 games in a row?... That's the all-time record for any organized team in either high school, college or pro sports... This record was set by the Passaic (N.J.) high school basketball team... Between 1919 and 1925 they won 159 consecutive games!

I bet you didn't know... That we sold Goudd® Batteries as low as $19.95.

FOLLOWING BOUT WITH CANCER

Littler: He's Coming Back To Par

Copley News Service
 After his experiences of this last year, Gene Littler isn't easily surprised, yet he wasn't quite prepared when he had an opportunity to win a golf tournament so soon.
 In the final round of the Phoenix Open, the second event of the new year, Littler found himself within a shot of the lead as he walked to the 14th tee.
 "I guess I choked a bit," he reflects with a faint smile. "I didn't know how to handle it."
 He meant the pressure of winning and he wasn't being entirely facetious. When he survived cancer surgery last spring and returned to competitive golf, Littler had developed a fresh perspective.
 This was the sort of thing that can reorder a man's priorities and he vowed not to become despondent again over the failures and frustrations of golf.
 "I had become too intense," he recalled. "I was letting it bother me. I told myself that would never happen again."
 So much for that New Year's resolution.

"I'm afraid it's not working out very well," says Littler, sheepishly. "You can't do very well in this game without being intense. I'm still trying to find a happy medium — I want to give it the best I can and not worry about it."
 When he looks about him, the golfer Littler most envies is Jack Nicklaus — not so much for his talent as for his disposition.
 "You wonder if Nicklaus ever worries about anything. I look at the man and I can never tell if he's six over par or six under. This isn't something he has learned through experience. In that respect, he's unchanged since his rookie year."
 "I don't think I've ever seen him give up and say, 'All right, I'll get you on the next hole.'"
 Recently the Bobby Jones (for distinguished contribution to golf) and Ben Hogan awards (for grace under pressure) went to Littler in landslide votes and he appreciates the compliments. But, as he has said, he does not like to be honored because he got sick. He will be pleased when people again think of him as a golfer, not as a golfer who survived cancer surgery.

 "I had dreaded the interviews, the questions about my health," he said, "but it really hasn't been so bad. In every town there's always a guy who wants to do a piece about my operation, but that's about the size of it. In another few weeks it will be all forgotten."
 Along with the chic people who gather annually on the Monterey Peninsula for the Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur, Littler has arrived at Pebble Beach in search of some answers. He is a man who has played professional golf since 1954, a man who has won 25 tournaments, including the 1961 U.S. Open.
 When he was awaiting the pathologist's report after cancer surgery, Littler knew pressure that makes the tension of tournament golf seem trivial. Yet that ordeal hasn't made him philosophical about missing a four-foot putt.
 He thought he would be content to score respectably, to demonstrate he can still perform with professional confidence, to place high among the money winners. But now he's had a taste of the old excitement, and he wants more of it.

 "I came back on the tour figuring that winning would be frosting on the cake," he says. "I just wanted to see how well I can play. Then, in Phoenix, I got in position to win a tournament and that told me something."
 "I discovered that winning is definitely a possibility. Maybe it's less of a hurdle than I had imagined."
 The effects of surgery on Littler were physical, not spiritual. Nerve and muscle damage in his left side has shortened his tee shots, but not his ambition.
 Yet golf has never offered more pleasure — or great challenges.
 "After a year's vacation, it's nice to be back," he says. "It's good to get back to work. I'll need some time; I've been playing for a lot of years but I feel like I have to get my experience all over again."
 And isn't it lovely that he has the opportunity?

Top Of Head' Frazier's Spot

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Maybe it won't go down in history alongside Lou Nova's "cosmic punch," but Archie Moore says he advised George Foreman to use a "slaughterhouse punch" that helped Foreman win the heavyweight title.
 Moore, the former light heavyweight champion, helped train Foreman for his heavyweight title bout with Joe Frazier, and was in Foreman's corner in Kingston, Jamaica, last month when he knocked out the previously unbeaten champion in the second round.
 Sometime before the fight, Moore said in an interview, he and Foreman had the following dialogue:
 "Hit him on top of the head," Moore said.
 "That sounds crazy. Why?"
 "George, have you ever been to a slaughterhouse?"
 "Yes."
 "Where do they hit the steers when they kill them?"
 "On top of the head."
 "Do you think you could knock down a steer by hitting him in the jaw?"
 "I see what you mean," said the 24-year-old Foreman.

Net Funds Mounting

Members of the Big Spring High School tennis team are still plugging away — with encouraging success — on their bottle collecting-project to raise funds.
 The first few days of effort resulted in raising $126 toward financing the team at the San Antonio meet, but about twice that much more is needed. If you have pop bottles which you can donate to the team, call 263-3673, or after 6 p.m. weekdays 263-2566 and team members will make the pickup.
 Funds are on hand for sending a pair of boys and girls to the invitational meet, but the goal is to send six boys and six girls.

Simplicity Sought For '76 Olympics

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — American and European winter sports officials are rivals this weekend in a "back to simplicity" campaign to stage the 1976 Winter Olympics.

A delegation from Lake Placid, N.Y., faces the executives of the International Olympic Committee Sunday to present a hastily-drawn plan for holding the games.

Three rival contenders from Europe are also due to be interviewed. They are Chamonix, France; Innsbruck, Austria, and Tampere, Finland.

Chamonix, leading a group of 16 communities in the Mont Blanc area, set the pattern for a return to simplicity in the Winter Olympics.

Maurice Herzog, mayor of Chamonix and a former French minister of youth and sports, is expected to tell the IOC executive today. "We conceive these Mont Blanc Games as a return to the sources of inspiration, that is to say to the Olympic spirit and to the simplicity of the mountains."

"The perilous trend followed at present would be radically altered and, in consequence, the survival of the Winter Games assured."

Chamonix wants to stage the Olympics over a region, each event being centered on a village resort. This line could appeal to some members of the IOC who are concerned about the commercial growth of the Winter Olympics and the loss of the intimate charm that once was part of them.

Hawks Nudge Chaps

LUBBOCK — The Howard County Jayhawks scored their fourth straight victory here Friday night, slipping past the Lubbock Christian College Junior Varsity 68-67.

Again it was a sparkling performance by 6-6 freshman Taylor Williams that paced the victory. Williams hit 26 points, giving him a total of 112 for the week in which he led the Hawks past New Mexico Military Institute, Concordia Lutheran, Hardin-Simmons Junior Varsity and the LCC JVs.

Aiding the Jayhawk cause was Leroy Lumzy with 12 points, while Herbie Lee, Bobby Beall and Mike Randle hit eight apiece.

For the Chaps, Charles Farrell was tops with 22 and Dale Gannaway added 18.

The victory puts Jayhawk coach Harold Wilder within one game of his 20th win. A victory over Odessa College in Western Conference action in Odessa Tuesday would mean the eighth straight 20-win season for Wilder, a streak which extends back to his high school coaching years at Abilene High.

Lubbock Christian led at the half, 40-39, mostly on the shooting of Gannaway, who hit 13 of his 18 points in the first 20 minutes. Williams and Lumzy were hot for the Hawks in the first half.

Late Free Throws Trip Steers, 62-54

DeBerry New State Hiway Engineer

AUSTIN — The Texas Highway Department has a new top hand, B. L. DeBerry is now State Highway Engineer.

DeBerry, a 35-year veteran with the department, moved up from the No. 2 post with the retirement of J. C. Dingwall. Dingwall has reached the department's mandatory retirement age of 65.

DeBerry is only the third chief administrative officer the highway department has had in the last 33 years. D. C. Greer, now a member of the Texas Highway Commission, held the top post from 1940 until 1968 when Dingwall took the helm.

DeBerry served as district engineer in a largely rural area (Lufkin) and in a highly urbanized area (Dallas).

For the last five years as assistant State highway engineer, he has had a statewide overview of the highway program in Texas and has gained keen insight with national highway problems and issues. He recently has been named to the design committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials.

Dingwall has been recognized as a nationally respected spokesman for the states in highway matters during his tenure as boss of the Texas Highway Department. He served last year as president of the prestigious American Association of State Highway Officials. Dingwall, an implacable enemy of useless paperwork and bureaucratic delays, appeared before a congressional committee and unrolled an 11-foot-long "flow chart" showing the dozens of time-consuming steps needed to get a highway project underway. Not long afterwards, Congress took first steps toward trimming some of the red tape.

Moppet Told No One Exempt

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) — Jason Cardy was so surprised the first time a traffic warden threatened to give him a ticket that he burst into tears. Jason is 3 years old.

The snappy red Italian sports car he was driving was only a battery operated toy, with a top speed of 2 1/2 miles per hour. And Jason was only driving on the sidewalk outside the store here where his mother was buying groceries.

"I came out of the shop to find Jason in tears with a traffic warden standing over him," his mother, Cynthia Cardy, said today. "The warden insisted that unless I carried the car home he would issue me a ticket. At first I thought he was joking, but he assured me he wasn't."

She managed to get home carrying the car in one hand and the groceries in the other, with an unhappy small boy in tow. Then she protested to police.

Police explained that traffic warden John Dalrymple was indeed serious. It may have been news to the Cardy family, but to the warden, the toy gave Jason for Christmas qualified under Britain's 1972 Road Traffic Act as a motor vehicle.

The toy, which cost about $80, has two gears forward and reverse. But the driver has to supply his own brakes by putting his foot down — on the ground.

A police spokesman said the warden was concerned "only with the safety aspect for the child driving such a vehicle on the road."

Legally, the sidewalk is part of the road. Mrs. Cardy, however, remained unconvinced that her son's motoring habits were a danger either to himself or to society at large.

"Jason often accompanies me to the shops driving his car," she said. "We've passed lots of policemen but they have never batted an eyelid."

A traffic warden is a meter man or meter maid who gives tickets for parking violations. He works for the local police department but has limited duties and powers, all of them connected with traffic.

Study Of Handwriting Has Become A Science

Capley News Service

Dorothy Haynie and Carol Dahl say they can tell you a lot about a person without meeting him.

They describe up to 2,000 personality traits by studying how a person dots his i's, crosses his t's and forms letters, words and sentences.

"You can recognize people you have never met before after you've analyzed their handwriting," said Mrs. Haynie. "Personalities — even bodily movements — show up."

St. Valentine Recalled For Heart; He Lost Head

Valentine's Day is the day when one traditionally loses one's heart to another.

The two men for whom the day is named, however, lost their heads — literally.

One St. Valentine was a priest who lived in Rome during the reign of Emperor Claudius II. Jailed by the Romans for aiding persecuted Christians, Valentine reportedly cured the jailkeeper's daughter of blindness. But about 270 A. D., the Romans beheaded him on Palatine Hill.

The other St. Valentine was a bishop of Terni, about 60 miles from Rome, who was, some say, persecuted for converting a Roman family to Christianity. He was beheaded in Rome about 273 A. D. Some historians believe, however, that there may have been only one St. Valentine who inspired two legends.

Romans of ancient times celebrated Lupercalia as a lovers' festival for the young, with men and women selecting partners by lot and then exchanging gifts. Many such encounters ended in marriage, according to the World Book Encyclopedia.

The feast of Lupercalia honored Faunus, a rural deity, who later became identified to Feb. 14 and called it St. Valentine's Day.

It is believed that the English celebrated the holiday as early as 1446. In that time, young people chose their valentines by writing names on slips of paper, then drawing them by chance.

This continued as late as the 1700s, with a modification: After drawing lots, each young man wore the paper with his lady's name on his sleeve for several days. This is perhaps how the expression "wears his heart on his sleeve," was born.

Originally, fine gifts were exchanged on Valentine's Day, but gradually the sending of sentimental messages replaced the gifts.

It was not until the Civil War era that Valentine's Day was popularly celebrated in the United States. Then, it was a festival second only to Christmas, and many handpainted cards were exchanged.

Mrs. Dahl said mood often affects a person's writing. Happy moods may be noted by an upward swing of letters and strokes. Depression often shows up in a downward swing.

The women assure persons who find themselves writing in different ways at different times that this is normal and doesn't indicate a schizophrenic nature.

Fundamental indicators to personality remain the same — no matter the mood or writing condition, they said.

CHART EMPLOYED

The women employ a chart called a psychogram — to plot personality characteristics. The upper half charts values such as aspiration, imagination and intellect; the lower half shows the material side of life and sensual satisfaction.

A graphic picture of a person's supposed character is charted by scores derived from personality indicators in handwriting samples. These are scored from 1 to 5. The higher the score — the stronger the trait.

VERY OLD

The study of handwriting as a key to the personality is thousands of years old. In recent years, it has begun to be recognized as a science with use in counseling, therapy, marriage and vocational guidance.

The women insist there is nothing mystical about it.

"It works because you write the way you feel... people who have their hands cut off and have to write with their mouths also form character-revealing words and letters," Mrs. Haynie said.

"Your hand does what your

Everybody Loves A Sweetheart

By JO BRIGHT

There may be detours, but most travelers on the royal road to romance eventually reach their destination — "The Land of Cupid."

Everyone has been there, at one time or another.

It hasn't changed, and never will. It's still pink clouds, blue skies, stary nights, hearts and flowers. Someone to hold your hand. An unexpected kiss.

This year, members of Beta Sigma Phi have undertaken another civic project. They've signed up as Cupid's helpers and will offer assistance to lovers who are looking for the path to paradise.

"The Land of Cupid" will be recreated Saturday evening at Cosden Country Club when the local Beta Sigma Phi City Council hosts its annual "Sweetheart Ball". The Versatones will provide music for dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., and the ball is open to the public. Tickets are $6 per couple in advance or $7.50 per couple at the door. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Westside Community Center.

During intermission, Mike McCrary will serve as master of ceremonies, introducing each local chapter's sweetheart, as well as those from chapters in other cities.

Don't know how to please your Valentine? Take her candy. Take her flowers. And take her to the "Sweetheart Ball."

MRS. RUBEN FUENTES (Curley's Studio)

MRS. DOMINGO R. PENA (Curley's Studio)

St. Joseph's Catholic Church Scene Of Double Wedding

The sanctuary of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Stanton, was the setting Saturday afternoon for a formal double wedding ceremony performed by the Rev. Reinhold Schmitt.

Miss Mary Salgado became the bride of ES Domingo R. Pena, of Floresville, and Miss Elodia Salgado became the bride of Ruben Fuentes of Stanton.

A prelude of nuptial music was played by Victor Esparza, organist, and the wedding party stood before an altar enhanced with arrangements of white gladiol and greenery. Pews were marked with rouge and white carnations with streamers.

The brides are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Salgado of Stanton. Pena is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Pena of Floresville, and Fuentes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodolfo Fuentes of Stanton.

Both of the brides were attired in formal gowns of hand-clipped Chantilly lace over crystalline. Miss Mary Salgado's gown featured a fitted lace bodice styled with high, ring collar finished with scalloped lace. The full bishop sleeves were of lace and were gathered to a pointed cuff. The bouffant silhouette was emphasized by lace-edged ruffling on the skirt, and her train-length mantilla was made entirely of lace. A sparkling headpiece of azares, with matching bouquet, completed her costume.

Miss Elodia Salgado wore a gown designed with molded bodice overlaid with lace and sprinkled with seed pearls and sequins. The long, lace sleeves were puffed and gathered to the wrist with a wide cuff, and scalloped lace formed the square neckline. A full, ruffled skirt extended to form a chapel train with lace edging, and her fingertip-length veil of silk illusion cascaded from a Juliet cap decorated with pearls. She carried a bouquet of azares imported from Mexico.

ATTENDANTS
Miss Carol Towns of Kermit, cousin of the brides, served as matron of honor for both women. Best man for Pena was Tony Gonzales of Odessa, and best man for Fuentes was Audon Ruiz of Stanton. The flower girls were Rebecca Porras, niece of the brides,

Mrs. David M. Yeats Honored At Shower

Mrs. David M. Yeats, the former Caren Crockett, was honored at a bridal shower Saturday afternoon in the Wesley United Methodist Church parlor.

The honoree, wearing a floor-length dress of orchid and white, was presented a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. Joining her in the receiving line were her mother, Mrs. Don Crockett; her grandmother, Mrs. W. B. Crockett, Colorado City; the bridegroom's mother Mrs. Tom Yeats; and his grandmother, Mrs. M. F. Bryant. They received white carnation corsages.

Guests were served from a table covered with a floor-length white chiffon cloth and Edilia Rodriguez. The ring bearers were Joe Ortiz Jr. and Charlie Salgado, the latter a nephew of the brides.

Groomsmen for Pena were Joe Guevara, Paul Aguilar, Domingo Salas, Fortino Pinones, Willie Castillo, Miguel Lopez, Frank Salgado, Joe Salgado Jr. and Alfonso Flotte.

Serving as groomsmen for Fuentes were Manuel Prado Nino Guevara, Lupe Morales, Florencio Garza, Johnny Hernandez, Carlos Lopez, Roger Gutierrez, Santiago Tercero and Willy Salgado.

The ushers were Gilbert Towns, Carlos Towns, Robert Torres and Oscar Rodriguez.

Miss Elodia Salgado is a graduate of Stanton High School, and Miss Mary Salgado attended the Academy of Hair Design, Big Spring.

ES and Mrs. Pena will reside in Killeen where he is stationed with the U.S. Army at Fort Hood. Mr. and Mrs. Fuentes plan to make their home in Big Spring. Both couples planned a wedding trip to San Antonio.

RECEPTION.
After the wedding, the couples were honored with a reception in the Cap Rock Reception Hall where traditional wedding cake and punch were served from tables covered with floor-length white cloths and appointed with crystal and silver.

Presiding at the refreshment tables were Mrs. Margaret Leyva, Odessa; Mrs. Barney Arguello, Mrs. Santos Guevara and Mrs. Martin Gonzales Sr.

GUESTS.
Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Towns, Kermit; Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Salgado, Lampasas; Mr. and Mrs. Filiberto Chapa, Kaplan, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Blas Salgado, Alamogordo, N.M.; and Mr. and Mrs. Steve Pena Jr. of Floresville.

Survey Will Discover Older Citizen's Needs

The Howard County Council on Aging is conducting a survey of local citizens 55 and over in order to learn more about their needs.

The survey will be undertaken during the first 10 days of this month, with approximately 3,500 of the two-page survey questionnaires being distributed through local churches, while additional forms are available at other locations.

Survey sheets may be obtained at Furr's Cafeteria, Coker's Restaurant, Downtown Tea Room, Woolworth's, and at all pharmacies in the city.

Local Girl Ranks High In Contest

Marie Boadle, a Big Spring High School senior, has won second place in District 25 of the Voice of Democracy competition sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and its ladies auxiliaries.

The announcement was made at a meeting of the local auxiliary Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. Homer Petty, 707 N. Gregg. The announcement was made by Charles Walden, commander of the VFW post in Andrews where district competition was held.

Miss Boadle will now enter state competition to be held in Austin. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Boadle, 2505 Fisher. Winners in the state competition are eligible for the national contest in Washington, D.C., and a $10,000 scholarship will be awarded to first place winner.

In other business, Mrs. Sophie Corcoran was named auxiliary chairman to send cards to the sick. Mrs. G. C. Broughton presided, and refreshments were served by her and Mrs. Louise Horton.

including Gibson's Wright's, Bell's, Carver's, Cunningham-Phillips, Leonard's, Mort Denton's, Bennett's, Knight's and the Settles.

All information given on the forms will be treated confidentially, and those filling out the sheets may choose whether or not to sign the sheets.

After the questionnaires are filled out, they should either be handed in where they were picked up; sent to the County Home Demonstration Office, Howard County Court House; or dropped in the Jaycee's Community Suggestion Box located in the 200 block of West Third Street.

Howard County Council on Aging is a part of the Governor's Council on Aging, and statewide responsibility for such groups has been given to the state extension service. Local advisor to the group is Miss Sherry Mullin, county extension agent.

All persons in Howard County, who are 55 years of age or older, are invited to participate in any HCCA activities. They include monthly potluck luncheons and games on the third

Wednesday of each month, beginning at 10 a.m. in the county fair barn. (You're welcome even if you can't bring a dish.)

Also, the annual Talent Fair for senior citizens will be held Dec. 1, 1973 in Highland Center Mall. At this event, any senior citizen may display and sell items that they have made. There is no entry fee, and the exhibitor keeps all the money from sale of the items.

This month, a monthly newsletter is being started, and it will carry many items of interest to older persons. Soon, a telephone service will be established so that a person living alone may be sure of receiving a friendly phone call each day from someone checking that he or she is all right.

For more information on any HCCA activity, persons may call the County Home Demonstration office, 267-2469. This number should be used, too, if the caller would like to be added to the newsletter mailing list; if a ride is needed to a luncheon; or if he or she is willing to help other senior citizens in planning activities and in meeting each other's needs.

Sweet Tooth Itchy? Cookies Are Coming

More than 3,000 girls in the sixteen-county area of the West Texas Girl Scout Council are preparing for their 22nd annual cookie sale.

Troop meetings are being devoted to discussion and preparation for the sale. Skits are fun and informative, as the girls play act their sales approach. They learn to handle money and to be business-like. They also practice good manners and good grooming.

The ethical code (Promise and the Law) becomes relevant to the occasion and the times — a Scout will do her best to be honest, to be fair, to help where she is needed, to be cheerful, to be friendly and considerate, to be a sister to every Girl Scout, to respect authority, to use resources wisely — (don't eat the cookies!), to protect and improve the world around her, and to show respect for herself and others through her words and actions.

Dates of the sale are Feb. 9-17. Cookies come in family-size boxes of assorted sandwich, chocolate mint, butter shorties and peanut butter. They sell for $1 a box.

New Twist To Nuptial Party

Jan Narden, 23, of Amsterdam, Netherlands called off his wedding because of the bridesmaids.

"They're too ugly," he said. "Elly picked them because she's jealous of me and pretty girls. This is no way to start a marriage."

Now the wedding is on again. "Jan is selecting the bridesmaids, and I'm picking the best man," declared Elly Breen, 26. "That is, the best man next to my future husband."

Hints From Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I recently started to crochet a large bedspread made up of smaller squares. And I decided to make the inside of each square in different colors so I purchased 16 different colors and placed them in a shopping bag and started to crochet.

Within a short time all the colors were mixed up and in such a tangled mass that it was impossible to continue crocheting.

This aggravated me so I tried to think up a solution. This is what I came up with:

Around the rim of the shopping bag I punched 16 holes. Through each hole I inserted one strand of yarn. When completed the 16 strands were all untangled and my problem was solved, plus the bag really looks adorable.

I hope this idea can be useful to others. It certainly kept me from utter frustration. . . Mrs. Linda Mandel.

You have certainly proved a point that I've been selling for, these many years.

When something starts to become a chore, stop and give it a little thought. Analyze the situation.

There is bound to be an easier and better way of doing that job and, more often than not, you'll come up with it.

And gals, when you do, don't forget to pass it along. Just jot down all the pertinent facts and send on to me in care of your local newspaper. We'll be waiting. . . Heloise seals, then two coats of white shellac — for a pretty salad set!

Salad oil went in one bottle, vinegar in the other. With a squirt, squirt of oil and a squirt, squirt of vinegar, my salad is ready in no time! . . . Cherie

Dear Heloise:

Maybe someone can benefit from my hint.

Since I live in an apartment, I couldn't hang my young son's plastic pants outside, and I was tired of seeing them draped all over the bathroom.

I took one of those skirt hangers (the type that holds five or six skirts) and clipped one pair to each clip by the leg opening and hung it on the rod behind the shower curtain.

Now they are really out of sight! Keep up your good work! . . . Trudi Smith

This column is written for you . . . the housewife and homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of the Big Spring Herald. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer all individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

A LOVELIER YOU
Live Love As Well As Talk About It

By MARY SUE MILLER

Young people go about advising the populace to "love one another." Yet many destroy property and the looks of it by scribbled graffiti. The message has nothing to do with love.

Older people often scoff at the idea of etiquette, but decry the lack of good manners. Well, that seems an example of lax thinking. Etiquette and manners spring from a common ground of self-respect and consideration for others. The sole purpose is to smooth life's path in ways that are understood and accepted by the majority.

Courtesy begins in the family circle. When family members treat each other with consideration, home is a happy haven. Children respond in kind to the treatment accorded them. The course of adult relations is far pleasanter. The most difficult persons, unless entirely witless, eventually are won to civility.

Of equal significance is the fact that homegrown attitudes carry over into public actions. Members of mannerly families are polite and considerate of outsiders. It comes naturally to them to say Please, Thank You and Excuse Me . . . to avoid such public annoyances as littering the streets, let's say, or talking in the tones of a blatting transistor at soda fountains.

If only more of us planted seeds of good conduct, the rudenesses we suffer and complain about in public life today would fade. Courtesy breeds courtesy.

Wedding Ceremony Held Friday Evening

Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Velinda Diane Burcham and Noel David Bethea at seven o'clock Friday evening in the Anderson Street Church of Christ.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Burcham Sr, 807 Aylford, and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bethea of Glen St. Mary, Fla.

The bride's father, minister of the Knott Church of Christ, performed the ceremony as the couple stood before a heart-shaped archway decorated with greenery and flanked by candelabra with white tapers. Centered in the background was a sunburst arrangement of white gladioli and red carnations.

A choral group from Fourteenth and Main Church of Christ featured Miss Jerri Reed as soloist.

The bride wore a formal gown of white satin faille fashioned with an A-line skirt. The empire bodice, bishop sleeves and front panel were of acetate and nylon lace, and dainty seed pearls accented the bodice and scalloped neckline. The gown featured a full chapel-length train. Her tiered illusion veil fell from a Camelot caplet, and she carried a cascade of white camellias, lily of the valley and white hearts, tied with long satin streamers.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, David Burcham.

Mrs. James M. Conner served her sister as matron of honor. Another sister, Miss Tammi Burcham, served as bridesmaid with Miss Glenda Jones.

ATTENDANTS

The attendants wore floor-length red satin gowns which featured A-line skirts. Soft gathers extended down the front of the gowns. The bridesmaids, served as ring bearer, with Jay Burcham as her escort. Altar tapers were Miss Debbie Williams and Miss Barbie Wise, attired in matching red satin dresses.

A reception honored the couple in the Pioneer Gas Flame Room following the ceremony. The bridegroom's table was covered with red linen and edged with wide red lace. Silver candlesticks holding red candles centered the table and chocolate cake and coffee were served. Silver appointments were used.

Kimmy Aberegg of Coahoma was flower girl. She was attired like the bridesmaids and carried a basket of rose petals. John Burcham was her escort.

Michelle Herm, also dressed identically to the bridesmaids, served as ring bearer, with Jay Burcham as her escort. Altar tapers were Miss Debbie Williams and Miss Barbie Wise, attired in matching red satin dresses.

A reception honored the couple in the Pioneer Gas Flame Room following the ceremony. The bridegroom's table was covered with red linen and edged with wide red lace. Silver candlesticks holding red candles centered the table and chocolate cake and coffee were served. Silver appointments were used.

Red satin also covered the bride's table and was overlaid with white. The tiered cake was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom. The centerpiece was a vase of red carnations and love birds. Crystal appointed the table. Serving were Mrs. Billy Piew, Miss Julie Jones, Miss Karen Kiser, Miss Sandra Kiser and Miss Jacquelyn Minchew. Presiding at the guest registry was Mrs. Skip Burcham, the bride's sister-in-law.

NEW MEXICO
Following a trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple will reside at 1811 State Street. Mrs. Bethea is a graduate of Big Spring High School and employed at Goliad Junior High School as a cashier. Bethea graduated from Baker County High School and Lake City Junior College in Florida. He also attended the University of Alabama prior to entering the Air Force.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding other than the bridegroom's parents, were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brannon and daughter, Rusk; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. North, Mablevale, Ark.; and Mr. and Mrs. Myrl Click, Burlington.

FOCUS ON FAMILY LIVING

HD Clubs Offer Fun, Facts And Fellowship

By SHERRY MULLIN
County Extension Agent

Interested in getting the latest information for your home and family? Then try joining a home demonstration club.

During the month of February, the nine home demonstration clubs in the county will be making contacts to Howard County homemakers to see if they'd like to become a member of a home demonstration club.

In a home demonstration club, everyone has a chance to get involved. Members learn how to do things they want or need to know. They meet with other homemakers for facts, fellowship, and fun. They get the latest information about how to take care of their families and homes.

The Extension Service of Texas A and M University sponsors the clubs as part of a statewide educational effort to bring the latest information to all families. Local clubs focus on the needs of homemakers in that particular county.

Members decide what their group will study. They participate in discussions and community projects sponsored by the club, plan recreation and even teach lessons.

Dues aren't required, so cost is minimal. The major investment is time to learn and share new information.

New information covers discovering what's new for your home and family, learning the "how to's" of homemaking plus exploring what you're interested in. Information also comes from educational and research resources of Texas A&M University, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and other universities, agencies and industries through the extension office.

Anyone may join a club. Any person interested in improving home and community life is eligible for membership. If there's no club in your area you may start one or join one in another part of town. Homemakers don't have to belong to a club to join learning activities. Short courses, workshops, tours and meetings at area, precinct and county levels, are open to the public.

Or you can get the latest information from the Extension Service through mailouts, newspapers, television or radio, or by simply contacting the office.

If interested in joining a home demonstration club, contact the local County Extension Agent (Home Economics), Sherry Mullin, at Box 700, Big Spring, or call 267-8469.

Cards are being mailed to all homemakers in the county. Return yours or call if you would like to participate in a club or receive the latest information through the mail.

BETROTHED — Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Noble, 3716 Hatch, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Mary Dee, to Pvt. Johnnie Jay Sevey, U.S. Marine Corps. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Mildred Sevey, 4216 Muir, and John Sevey of Big Spring. An April wedding is planned in Trinity Baptist Church with the Rev. Claude Craven officiating.

Don't Take Chances With Wiper Blades

Don't Take Chances with Wiper Blades.

Replacing windshield wiper blades is a low cost service, and yet many people wait until they fall off before replacing them.

Check your windshield wiper blades often, and replace as soon as they appear worn or brittle.

Most blades lose their cleaning ability after about a year, causing the smearing of road dirt over the windshield instead of wiping it clean.

If the blade exposes any metal part of the wiper on the windshield, serious scratching of the windshield surface can result — causing permanent damage, not usually covered by your insurance policy.

It's so much better to replace those windshield wiper blades before such damage occurs.

Cut Old Legs To Change Furniture

Looking for ways of changing furnishings you already have? Try cutting the legs down or off old pieces of furniture. This will not only create a new piece, but it may also give the furniture a new production.

IN SEARCH OF YOUTH?

Middle-Aged Men Go For Flashy Plummage

By HUGH THOMPSON
Capitol News Service

Middle-aged men are among those most enjoying "the exciting changes in male attire," according to a Michigan State University professor who has expertise in the sociology of clothing.

Dr. Arthur M. Vener, professor of social science at MSU, has a fairly complex explanation of the current vogue of colorful attire for men. He sees the new trend as created by masculine responses to:

1. Women's Liberation attitudes and the changing roles of men and women.
2. The shorter work week that allows more time for leisure and recreation.
3. The growing permissiveness of society.
4. The affluence of Americans generally.
5. The emphasis in society on youth with the concomitant fear of being or becoming old or obsolete.

The clothing industry, Vener reported in a recent interview with an industry publication, is taking advantage of all these factors. Vener has made an intensive study of American clothing habits.

CAR SUBSTITUTE?

"Part of the explanation of why middle-aged men are the strong supporters of the changes in menswear," Vener said, "is just a variation of the old middle-aged delight in buying flashy cars."

"But, more importantly, the older men get, the more they want to look and feel young. Being young is out of reach, but they try to look it anyhow, and the new clothing is very cheering. This fear of being and becoming old is certainly new in the degree of intensity."

Vener defined present trends according to age and societal categories.

A adolescent "unisex" clothing is worn alike by young men and women. The somewhat older men and women who continue use of such clothing are in a "moratorium" period in which they are actually mature but disinterested in assuming the conventional societal responsibilities such as jobs and marriage.

The new styles are followed by young people who are eager to succeed in employment or by older people wanting to shed the sense of impending age.

MALE PLUMAGE—Colorful clothing for men, such as this sporty outfit with the layered look, indicates a desire to remain young, according to a sociology expert.

And, always, there are those who just follow popular styles.

Vener would like to see the term "middlescence" adopted to fit the trauma smiting those who are shifting from being adult to being old, much as the term "adolescence" conventionally covers the shift from being a child to becoming an adult.

The new male plumage, he thinks, is a panacea for "middlescence." It does nothing to solve the basic problems of being or feeling older, but at the moment it lifts the spirits of the middle-aged man.

TROUBLED AGE

"Many of the problems besetting men of any age today," he said, "are tempestuous ones. Not only is youth the leitmotif of the times; the whole concept of careers and success in careers is being re-examined. Once you got an education and it served you the rest of your life; today's education, if it is highly specialized, can be obsolete in five years."

Societal links between the present male clothing styles and the temper of Britain's Restoration period and France's court of Louis XIV are seen by Vener.

"There's a whole male plumage mentality to go with it," he said, "and it's not explained simply by the male preening and strutting to reclaim the attention of the female."

It's Men's Turn To Take Plunge

Now it's the men's turn to take the plunge. Sporan Sportswear is cutting a deep, V front in an all-cotton knit vest. It's designed for beachwear or as a vest to wear over other garments. The V is sleeveless and ends at the waistband in a close fit, like a cummerbund.

Book Sale Scheduled At Library

Friends of the Library is sponsoring its third annual book sale Feb. 23-24 to be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the basement of Howard County Library.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to buy new books for the library. New furniture was just recently purchased for the library, and it is hoped that money can be raised which will enable the library to buy prints of contemporary and old pictures. The prints could be checked out like books.

Individuals with books to donate will find collection barrels at the following points: Montgomery-Wards and Furr's Cafeteria in Highland Center, TG&Y Store at College Park, the BX at Webb AFB, Forsan Post Office and the Little Sooper Market at Coahoma, as well as the library.

A great variety of books is needed, including paperbacks. The books will be sold for 25 cents an inch, except for sets of encyclopedias, which will be sold by sealed bids.

On Feb. 13, at 7:30 p.m. at the library, the Friends of the Library will present Mrs. R. L. Akins of Brady who will review the book, "The Devil and Aunt Serena", by Ester Kellner. This humorous and entertaining book can be enjoyed by the entire family. The book reviews are offered as a free service to the community, and the sponsors hope the public will turn out in large numbers "for a pleasant evening."

According to a spokesman, the Xerox copier at the library is receiving much use. The copier is available to the public during library hours for 15 cents per copy, with all over 50 copies being 10 cents each.

AT OWC LUNCHEON 'Unisex Styles Won't Go Far' Predicts Male Hairdresser

"Hairdressers are trying to bring in the unisex look this year," said Gary Don Carey, guest speaker Thursday for Officers' Wives Club at Webb AFB. He is owner of La Contessa Salon.

Carey said the unisex look is shorter on the sides and features a gradual tapering in length to the back. He expressed doubt that the look "would go far."

"You all probably keep up with the latest fashions in clothes," continued Carey, "but many of you forget about your hair. Hair is a very important part of your make-up."

The speaker used his wife, Donna, to demonstrate ways of managing wigs and wiglets, and showed the versatility of newer hairpieces in offering several styles.

Carey said many women mistreat their hair and that even healthy hair cannot take excessive stretching and pulling in an attempt to remove tangles. He said backcombing is "here to stay" as a means of providing a soft cushion on the skull. Long hair, according to Carey, will also be around for a long time, but he said the vast majority of men like women's hair with a slight wave and curl in it.

"West Texas is hard on hair because of the wind, and I cannot stress enough the importance of using a conditioner," said Carey. He also advised that concentrated shampoos are harsh and more likely to damage hair.

Mrs. W. B. Dickinson volunteered to allow Carey to cut her long hair, and in a short time Carey had completed a "gypsy" hairdo.

Mrs. Fred Wertz presided and introduced new class representatives to the OWC board. Mrs. A. W. Jorgensen, Mrs. A. N. Haid, Mrs. J. B. Cooper, Mrs. Kirby Killian, Mrs. James Schultz and Mrs. Johnny Roberts.

Mrs. Harold Hanson, second vice president, extended welcomes and farewells. Newcomers at the base include Mrs. Debbie Simmons, Mrs. Nancy Schmidt, Mrs. Barbara Peterson, Mrs. Carolyn Williams, Mrs. Lynn Elwell, Mrs. Carolyn Courington, Mrs. Pat Overcamp and Mrs. Judy Farmer.

Guests were Mrs. Eleanor Burleson, Mrs. Marga Palmer, Mrs. Doris Cutler, Mrs. Lynette Linzey and Mrs. Sherri Bernhut. Those members who will soon be leaving Big Spring are Mrs.

Larry Funk, Mrs. Michael Karaffa, Mrs. Art Krull, Mrs. Dohrman Crawford, Mrs. Joseph Coffman and Mrs. Leonard Morrissey.

Mrs. Doug Bevon, third vice president, announced the OWC is sponsoring gourmet cooking classes, beginning with Mexican and Spanish Cuisines. Classes will be for two hours weekly for six weeks, at a total cost of $10.

In other announcements, the monthly hi-bee coffee will be at 10 a.m., Feb. 22 at the club. The annual arts and crafts luncheon will be March 1.

Mrs. Whitcomb Jones was general chairman for the Valentine luncheon. Tables were covered with white linen cloths and highlighted with heart-shaped boxes of candy and red packages. The head table featured a large arrangement of red mums and white poms interspersed with greenery. Red candles in black holders flanked the bouquet.

Assisting Mrs. Jones with the luncheon were wives of the Logistics Squadron, Mrs. Daniel Brinkman, Mrs. Daniel Brinkman, Mrs. Brian Dickinson, decorations and door prizes; Mrs. Fred Wertz, decorations; and Mrs. John Klappmuss and Mrs. Marion Hagan, publicity.

His Ulcer Hurts

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am wondering about a young man who called me up, saying he got my name from the La Leche League — an organization to which I belong that provides mother's milk for babies. This man said his wife had died in childbirth and his baby needed mother's milk. Being a nursing mother for the La Leche League, I agreed to help him out. I expressed the milk out of my breasts by hand and put it in jars, and the man stopped by to pick it up. After a few weeks, he broke down and confessed there was no baby, and he had been drinking the milk himself because he has an ulcer and had heard that mother's milk would help relieve the pain. Then he had the nerve to ask me if I would let him nurse direct! I told him I couldn't go along with that.

Should I report him to the police or what? I told him "no" several times, but he keeps calling me. He said he isn't interested in sex, only milk. Is this possible?

DEAR ANDREA: It's possible. Tell him goat's milk is also good for ulcers, so he should find another goat!

DEAR ABBY: My brother, Bob, was adopted by my family when he was a small baby. Bob is now over legal age, and was just informed that his real mother is an Indian living in Alaska and he is getting money from her oil rights. Bob says it is all like a dream, because he never knew he was adopted. He is trying to make up his mind whether to go to Alaska to collect the money. He doesn't know what to say to his mother, who is still living, because he has always considered the mother who raised him his one and only mother.

Would you ask your readers how adopted children and real mothers feel after meeting each other after being separated for over 20 years? Is it a good experience or a bad one? NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I would guess it's almost always a tearfully joyous reunion, but I'll ask Readers?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I decided to will our bodies to a university medical school because we understood they were needed in their teaching program. So far, we have been turned down by FOUR medical schools.

The last turn-down came from Yale Medical School. We received what appeared to be a form letter stating in part: "Because of the extremely generous response to our Willing Body Program, we are currently at a maximum of our needs and therefore this program is now temporarily closed. We shall place your name and address in our file of prospective donors. When we are able to reopen this program you will then automatically receive the necessary documents for donation of your remains to the University."

Is this the case all over? "ALL DRESSED UP AND NOWHERE TO GO"

DEAR DRESSED: I suggest that anyone interested in leaving his remains to a medical school get in touch with the one nearest him and inquire.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that friends think they are doing you a favor by not telling you about a cheating husband?

Now I realize that for years all my friends knew that my husband was cheating on me, but nobody ever told me. I would have considered it a favor.

I recall my aunt telling me that on her way to church one day she saw the husband of a friend kissing and hugging another woman in a parked car. The husband then met his wife after church, and off they went together! My aunt called the man all sorts of names and said the wife was foolish to put up with it. But when I asked my aunt if she had told the wife what she saw, she said, "Oh, no, I couldn't bring myself to tell her!"

Why? WANTS TO KNOW DEAR WANTS: Because deep down, your aunt knew it was none of her business.

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with that woman whose mother-in-law keeps repeating the same long, drawn-out stories over and over again because my husband, who is a very dear man in every other way, does the same thing.

Here's how I handle it: When he starts one of those familiar stories, I look him in the eye and tune him out and start to plan my meals or think of something else. I do throw in an occasional "Oh, really" or "Is that so" when he pauses, just to let him know that I am "listening."

He's pleased because he thinks he's telling me something new, and I'm pleased because I get some thinking done.

I can see one built-in danger to this. If he ever suspects what I'm doing and slips in the story of "The Three Bears" where he usually tells me how many shots it took his brother to win a turkey, I may be in serious trouble.

BRUSSELS, Belgium — There were so many hitchhikers on the highway leading south that even pretty girls could not pick up rides.

Irene Leterman and Alice Wayne, two California coeds, solved the problem. Irene stopped motorists with her sign "Expert Mechanic!" Alice wrote one that read: "I Change Tires!"

'Quotable Women'

"You know, if a lot of women would listen to their husbands more, they'd stay out of a lot of trouble. They had to believe in him when they got married. I've kind of left everything up to Mooney," Singer Loretta Lynn, Country Music Association's "entertainer of the year."

"The war is not over, and will not be over until the United States stops aid to Gen. Thieu. This aid is used to continue the U.S.-supported repression of all opposition to Thieu's dictatorship. It is a means by which the United States, after withdrawal of the military forces, hopes to maintain control of South Vietnam." Alice Ansara speaking for Citizens Against the War.

"A phone call can make such a difference in your life. The kids are still afraid. We've had our hopes up so many times, but now we are beginning to believe he's coming home." Kay Perkins, after announcement of her husband's impending return from a prisoner of war camp.

"He always wanted to fly. He got his pilot's license at 17 and figured this was a good way to get his flying in." Mrs. Dal Pozzo, speaking about her son, WO Anthony Dal Pozzo, 22, a U.S. helicopter pilot; the first American killed in Vietnam since the cease-fire went into effect Sunday morning.

"I'm going to cry, I'm going to laugh, I'm just going to go crazy." Mrs. Aran Teller said when she and her husband found out that their son, Marine Sgt. Dennis A. Teller, was among the American POWs who would be coming home.

New Horizons Are Opening For WACs

By TRIM LEMM
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — The director of the Women's Army Corps says she does not envision a combat role in the near future for the 13,000 WAC troops.

Brig. Gen. Mildred C. Bailey says that in the final analysis "the public will decide the role of women in the Army."

"I've never heard the women ask for combat duty, but then I've never heard them say anything against it."

"We'll do what America wants us to do," Gen. Bailey said during the field visit to the 73 WACs stationed at Ft. MacArthur in suburban San Pedro.

She said the phase down of troop strength in Vietnam and Army troops at large has not caused a reduction of the WAC strength.

"Under the modern, all-volunteer Army concept we need more women than ever," Gen. Bailey said.

The personal general also unveiled a prototype of the newly redesigned WAC uniform which she said is expected to attract more women to an Army career.

She said the new uniforms, coupled with "job satisfaction" and the "unlimited adventure" of an Army career, should help attract an additional 3,500 women by the end of the fiscal year.

Gen. Bailey said additional recruiting under the modern volunteer Army concept is hoped to boost the WAC strength by 25,000 in the next six years.

She added the number of women in the Army is "expanding more rapidly than anticipated."

"Inadequate housing is the No. 1 priority in the Army," the general said.

She said Ft. McClellan, near Anniston, Ala., the WAC training center, is bulging at the seams.

"There's just no space to spare," Gen. Bailey said.

She said several military occupational skills training schools at the fort had to be closed to make way for increased housing needs.

Gen. Bailey said because of increased enlistments, a second training battalion will be operational at the fort within 30 days.

And a third battalion is expected to be ready by the first of the year, she added.

Gen. Bailey said all but 48 of the 482 military occupational specialties have been opened to the WACs, with the exception of the infantry, field artillery and combat engineering.

Gen. Bailey said the women's Army Corps has undergone tremendous changes since it was first initiated 30 years ago.

One of those changes has been WAC uniforms. "We're looking for a much more womanly, feminine design that will move well and sit well."

"We're looking for comfort and wearability. It doesn't improve your efficiency to have a uniform that's hard to take care of. That's one reason we're exploring doubleknits," Gen. Bailey said.

She said the uniform doesn't have to be a skirt and blouse, but could be a dress with a short jacket.

The general's loosely fitted Army green dress was fitted with a light green shirtwaist and a darker green shorty jacket.

The ensemble had a half belt in the back and an ascot collar effect around the neckline.

She was wearing white wrist-length gloves and black patent leather pumps.

Gen. Bailey said WACs have been authorized to wear white gloves, patent leather pumps and carry a smaller, plain leather clutch-type handbag.

A sporty new cap was modeled by the general. The cap is also optional to WACs desiring the headwear.

Miss Kay Williams Heads Rainbow Girls

Miss Kay Williams was installed as worthy advisor of the Order of the Rainbow for Girls. Big Spring Assembly No. 60, Saturday evening in a ceremony held at the Masonic Temple. She dedicated her term to her sister, Cindy Williams, who holds the office of Grand Reorientant from New Jersey to Texas, Grand Assembly of Texas.

KAY WILLIAMS

Miss Williams chose as her theme "Friendship," and her scripture Proverbs 17:17. Her flower is the carnation in pink and red. Each officer carried a white basket filled with pink and red carnations.

In front of the podium, which was draped with red satin, stood a large white basket of pink carnations. The officers entered the hall through Grecian columns on which were arrangements of pink and red carnations. The installing officers were presented pink carnation corsages with red ribbon.

Guests were registered by Cynthia Smith and Kim Kingsley, both of Fort Worth, at a table covered in pink and centered with a white basket filled with pink and red carnations. Members of the DeMolay served as ushers.

Following the entrance of the present officers, the invocation was given by the Rev. Kenneth Patrick. The installing officers were introduced by Mrs. W. C. Fryar, mother advisor. Miss Cindy Williams presided as installing officer. She was assisted by Mrs. Todd Veeza, chaplain; Ayn McGlothlin, marshal; Sherry Alexander, musician; and Sandra Dickenson, recorder.

Officers installed were Zina Johnston, worthy associate advisor; Jodi Grant, charity; Della Nobles, hope; Rhonda Riley, McGlothlin and Mrs. Carmey Dickenson.

The Bible presentation to Rhonda Riley, faith, was made by her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Riley. The ravel presentation to Della Nobles, hope, was made by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Bobby J. Nobles. Mrs. W. C. Fryar presented the Most Outstanding Member award to Dianna Pinkin.

Miss Williams introduced her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Williams, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Apple and Mrs. W. C. Williams. Also introduced as honored guests were Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Norman Kingsley of Fort Worth, past grand worthy advisor; Miss McGlothlin, past grand worthy associate advisor; and Miss Cindy Williams, grand representative from New Jersey to Texas, Grand Assembly of Texas.

Miss McGlothlin gave an address on "Friendship." Miss Cynthia Wheeler sang "I Quietly Turned to You" from the "Alpit musical, "Celebrate Life." Mrs. Roy Hester, aunt of the worthy advisor, gave the benediction after which a reception was held in the fellowship hall. The serving table was laid with a pink net and taffeta cloth, and appointments were musical and silver. The centerpiece was a white basket filled with pink and red carnations.

As is customary, the assembly will attend services today at the worthy advisor's church, the First Baptist.

Open House Set At Center

The open house and dedication of the Horace Garrett Memorial Building will be held from 3 to 5 p.m., Feb. 11 at the Westside Community Center, 1300 W. 4th St.

The open house is being sponsored by the center's board of directors, headed by Mrs. Caleb Hildebrand, president.

Mrs. Horace Garrett will be an honored guest, along with all volunteer workers at the center. The dedication ceremony will be held at 3 p.m., with Mayor Wade Choate and Mrs. Hildebrand participating. The Rev. Caleb Hildebrand is chairman of the building committee.

Mrs. Don Wiley and the Rev. Jim Collier have worked with the teenage girls in planning refreshments, and the girls will be in charge of preparing the table and serving. Children who frequent the center will be on hand to help conduct visitors on a tour of the facilities. Mrs. Teresa Bauch, director, will assist.

Members of the women's sewing class will display clothing they have made, and other arts and crafts work will be shown.

The public is invited and urged to attend the open house which will climax many month's work in upgrading the community center and obtaining the new building.

His Umbrella Pays Dividends

A daring raider dressed as a "city gent" — a businessman in the financial district of Glasgow — hooked a money bag containing $720 from behind a bank counter using his rolled umbrella.

Three accomplices chatted with the teller while the raid was carried out. The gang strolled out of the building before the theft was discovered.

NUPTIALS — Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Englert, 1102 Grafa, announce the engagement of their daughter, Rulene, to Cecil Kent Pearce, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Pearce, Box 64, Garden City. The couple is planning an August wedding.

Bald Head? Its' Sign Of Sexiness

Beware the long-haired male if you want a long-lasting, satisfactory marriage. That was the word of marriage consultant Frieda Metzger, 39, in her talk to single office girls.

"Baldness is the price that men have to pay for being sexy and warm," she added. "It is the result of an increased flow of male sex hormones." Then she added: "Do not pick a husband by the package in which he is wrapped. First, find what's really inside."

Is Woman Legislator Mrs., Miss, Or Ms.?

AUSTIN (AP) — What do you call a woman legislator — Mrs., Miss, Ms.? Or does it make any difference?

The answers are given Tuesday by the six women lawmakers varied as widely as their political philosophies and backgrounds.

Sen. Betty Andujar of Fort Worth, a Republican, said she prefers that newsmen call her Mrs. Andujar in second and subsequent references in their stories.

"I don't use Ms. at all. I don't object to other people using it, but I've always fought for my Mrs. and I'm going to try to keep it," Mrs. Andujar said.

Rep. Kay Bailey of Houston, the only Republican woman representative, said either "Miss" or "Rep." would be fine with her.

"Anything but Ms," Miss Bailey said. "I just don't see any reason for it — belaboring a point that is not worth belaboring. I don't see any reason to change the tradition for addressing people."

Reps. Eddie Benice Johnson of Dallas and Senfronia Thompson of Houston both said they did not care what form of address was used in second reference but indicated "Mrs." was acceptable.

"It just doesn't matter to me," Mrs. Johnson said, adding: "I've been accustomed to being called Mrs. all my married life, and my maiden name was Johnson."

"It makes no difference to me. I'm just Senfronia Thompson," Mrs. Thompson said.

Opting for "Ms." were Reps. Sarah Weddington of Austin and Chris Miller of Fort Worth.

Ms. Miller, a divorcee, said the standard "Mrs." often puts her in what she said was an "embarrassing" position of receiving invitations addressed to "Rep. Chris Miller and husband."

Ceremony Performed In Home

Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Mary Margaret Murdock and Dwight Carlton Hood at 7 p.m., Friday in the home of Mrs. C. A. Murdock Sr., 1205 Rannels, grandmother of the bride.

The Rev. John R. Beard, pastor of First Christian Church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Murdock, 2406 Robb, and Hood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hood Jr., 2303 Alabama.

The bride wore a street-length gown fashioned in embossed blue knit with an empire waistline and A-line skirt. The bodice featured a rounded neckline and long full sleeves. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations and blue and white daisies.

Miss Sandi Neece and John Norton served as attendants for the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Hood were honored with a reception in the Murdock home immediately following the ceremony. The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of pink carnations. Crystal candelabra holding pink tapers flanked the centerpiece, and crystal and silver appointments were used.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Wayne McCombs and Miss Karen King.

The newlyweds will reside at 1502-A Lexington. Mrs. Hood is a graduate of Big Spring High School, Howard County Junior College and South West Texas State University. She is currently employed by Cosden Oil and Chemical Company.

Hood graduated from BSHS and HCJC. He now works for Bill Hanson Trucking Co.

You can braise beef short ribs in the oven if you use a tightly covered Dutch oven (or similar utensil). At a moderate temperature the ribs will take about 2 to 2½ hours to cook. A cup of water (or other braising liquid) should be enough for about 2½ pounds of ribs.

Museum Exhibit Continues; Book Sale, Concert On Tap

The "Young Americans" weren't exactly sleepers on the Community Concert Series, but they exceeded even expectations. Considering that they came in on the heels of Campus Revue '73, which is somewhat of the same format, the young troupe had to be too flippant or fizzle. That standing ovation at the end was evidence they did anything but fizzle. You may want to make a note that the next on the concert series is Justin Maynard, organist, and if memory serves us right, this will be in the First Methodist sanctuary Feb. 25.

"Step up and sign — and commit treason," advised John Hancock to the delegates to the Continental Congress. This is one of the highlights to the Midland Community Theatre presentation of "1776" the delightful musical which ran 1,217 performances on Broadway and captured honors as best musical of the year. It opened Friday and will continue throughout the month at the theatre, 2301 W. Indiana. The ticket box office is Box 4847, Midland, 79701.

Heritage Museum will begin next weekend, Feb. 10-11, a policy of being open on the weekends. Gerri

Atwell, curator, and Edith Gay, assistant, will alternate to keep the doors open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Of course, regular hours are maintained during the week. School groups are encouraged to visit. The current spotlight on the T&P railroad continues to grow. Last week, Mrs. Andy Brown brought in an 1816 merchaun pipe brought by Steve Tamsitt, who, with his brother, George, came here in the early days of the T&P. She also had three watches, one an 1855 product which winds from the back and still runs, and two gold railroad watches. These items were passed on to J. O. Tamsitt and then to his son, the late Guy Tamsitt, to whom she was married. Her son Dr. Jimmy R. Tamsitt, is interested in the museum in Toronto, Ont., Canada, where he lives.

Also, the museum came in for two badly needed items during the week when Mrs. G. T. Hall gave a typewriter and two filing cabinets, one a legal-sized one. W. C. Cole added to the railroad display with an old caboose wash basin, plus a collapsible coal scuttle, and several cross-tie nails used to date the ties. Added to the sustaining membership list was Miss Gay.

That book sale by the Friends of the Library is set for Feb. 23-24. There is a novel way to pay for your selections — stack them up and they rate 25 cents an inch. Meantime, if you have books you are not using, give them to the library for the sale.

The third Lubbock Symphony concert of the season will feature a gifted young pianist, Robert de Gaetano, at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 26 in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium. Mr. de Gaetano was "discovered" only three years ago, but he's taken the country by storm since then. Tickets may be had from the symphony office at 1416 Ave. Q (or by calling 866-762-4707, or at the door.

The 10th annual Alamo Kiwanis Western Art Show and Sale is set for Feb. 9-18.

Ball Plans Completed By BSP

Final preparations for the annual Beta Sigma Phi Valentine Ball were made at a BSP council meeting Thursday evening in the Chamber of Commerce conference room.

The dance will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., Feb. 10 at Cosden Country Club. Cost is $6 per couple for advance tickets and $7.50 per couple at the door. Dance theme is "Land of Cupid." Half of all proceeds will be given to Westside Community Center.

Go Ahead, Mom, Rest A Little

New baby in the family? Mother needs pampering, too. While baby naps each day, bathe leisurely, brush hair, apply makeup, cream hands, splash on cologne and rest a bit. When baby awakes refreshed, so is Mother!

It will be in the Dairy Barn at the San Antonio Stock Show and Rodeo. Perry Schoenfeld, director, said there will be more than 1,200 objects to see and buy.

"George Washington of Virginia" will be the topic of a slide-illustrated talk by Ford Mitchell, Lubbock television personality and American history buff, at the South Plains Genealogical Society Thursday. The event, a covered dish affair, will be at the Municipal Garden and Arts Center, 4115 University, Lubbock. Members and guests planning to attend are asked to bring a covered dish and be at the center by 6:30 p.m. The program, open to the public, will be at 7:45 p.m., said Mrs. Harold L. Russell, president.

Dr. Clifford B. Jones, early booster for Texas Tech and later its president, left two delightful surprises in his will. One was a Tech stadium $100,000 revenue bond (which he ordered cancelled); the other was a valuable Western painting by the late J. Young-Hunter which Dr. Jones had acquired for the museum. It will hang in the museum.

"The Phenomenon of Peter Max," an exhibition at the Museum of the Southwest through March 4, is proving a favorite to all age groups. Peter Max had an impact on the 1960's through his bold, whimsical style on a variety of media. Included in the 75 works on display are drawings, paintings, greeting cards, bed sheets, pillows, games, eye glasses, towels, ties, belts, books and buttons. The museum is at 1705 W. Missouri, Midland.

At Hardin-Simmons University, tickets for the Fred Waring appearance March 1 are now on sale ($2.50-$4). Also, H-SU announced its school of music will be spotlighted during home coming festivities Feb. 16-17 when the world famous Cowboy Band will observe its 50th anniversary. The choir opens with a concert the evening of Feb. 16, and the band holds sway with concerts and reunion the next morning at Behrens Chapel, then at the new band hall in the afternoon.

Shirtwaist Is Still Popular Fashion

The shirtwaist dress is not going to give up. Women just won't permit it.

Many of this year's creations exaggerate the shirt sleeves into graceful fullness or change them entirely into dolmans.

Some waistlines are belted, but the newest are accented with drawstrings, elasticized shirring or easily looped shashes.

Gathered skirts, when they are seen at all this year, are modified into slender lines. Pleats usually replace gathers. Sunburst pleats swing from the waistline, while most of the box and knife pleats are stitched over the hipline to break at about the top of the thighs. For evening glamor, long shirtwaist dresses are fashion-ioned of such luxury fabrics as chiffon, satin, lace and jersey.

Six Boys In Troop 8 Gain Coveted Awards

The highest honor a boy may earn in the Scouting program is that of Eagle.

Less than five per cent of the boys in the program ever reach the top of the ladder, but recently six boys in Troop 8, sponsored by the Coahoma Lions Club, were presented with their Eagle badges simultaneously. Their scoutmaster is Don Myers.

To qualify for the Eagle badge, a boy must have progressed through the other basic ranks including tenderfoot as the first step, second class, first class, Star, and Life.

At the tenderfoot level, a boy learns the basic tenets of the Scout oath and law, with emphasis upon his pledge to do his best for God and country and to help other people. In fact, he is not truly a scout until he has completed his tenderfoot requirements, usually recognized by a colorful investiture ceremony.

In second class, he learns more about Scouting skills and camp craft, as well as other things which will make him more self-reliant and a better boy citizen. The first class is an intensification and a broadening of the second class development, with more exploration into things which might interest him as a career.

Then comes the merit badge program, fundamentally a career or hobby exploration, although there are many things such as first aid, life saving, civics (government) which help a boy to be especially qualified to serve in society.

When a boy has earned five

Set Of Stamps Honors Scouts

Sixty-five years ago, Lord Baden Powell founded the Boy Scout movement, which has reached into the four corners of the earth to help make better young men. Recognizing this fine organization on its anniversary, Grenada has issued a colorful eight-value set of stamps.

The stamps depict the following: Boy Scout saluting, Scouts knotting ropes, Scouts from different parts of the world shaking hands, a portrait of Lord Baden Powell. Three of the values have duplicate designs. All the stamps bear the official Boy Scout emblem as well as a portrait of Queen Elizabeth II.

A souvenir sheet was also issued featuring a 60 cent stamp showing a portrait of Lord Baden Powell on a brown background and a 70 cent stamp illustrating Scouts shaking hands on a mauve background.

Dining Hall Is Enlarged By 40 Pct.

Capacity of the dining hall at the Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains has been increased 40 per cent, which means that the ability to handle a given number of boys at one time has been increased by the same ratio.

The project was made possible by donations of cash, materials, and labor.

The original dining hall, given by Mrs. Paul Moss and the late Paul Moss of Odessa, has been enlarged to accommodate 350 instead of the previous 250. It has a completely new exterior and room.

Equipment includes evaporative cooling and central heating a new kitchen with a new dishwasher, a commissary storage wing that will double food storage.

The J. E. and L. E. Mabee Foundation of Tulsa, Okla., made a large cash gift, and they were joined by Mrs. Paul Moss, Odessa, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dean, Midland, the Howard McCarrall Lumber Co. and the Glenn Pine Construction Co. of Midland, the Trans-Pecos Materials Co., Odessa, and the Order of the Arrow in bringing about the improvements valued at $75,000.

Lone Star Is Close To Top

The Lone Star district, consisting of Howard, Sterling and Glasscock counties, was one of the top districts in the Buffalo Trails Council in 1972 on a composite rating basis.

Using the rank in eight categories, this district tied with Chaparral of Midland.

Lone Star was first in rank advancement by Scouts and in the percentage of top unit leaders trained; second in the percentage of the boy crop served, in the number of units (packs, troops, posts) per 100 boys, in national standard units, and Boys' Life subscriptions; and fourth in Cub rank advancement and in net unit growth.

This district had 595 Cubs to advance, or 32 per cent of the potential; 163 per cent of Scouts, or 30 per cent of the potential.

It enrolled 52.8 per cent of the boys in Cub age, 42.2 per cent in Scout age and 7.0 per cent in Explorer age. It has 497 boys subscribing to Boys' Life, or 39 per cent of the membership.

As for leaders trained, 76 per cent of Cubbers qualified, 81 per cent of the scouters and 67 per cent of Explorer advisers.

Emphasis On Camping, Conservation Heavy

In this day when ecology is a dominant public interest, Scouting's emphasis upon camping and conservation is once again in the spotlight.

From the beginning Scouting has stressed camping, or getting out doors. One of the axioms for a successful unit has been to "put out into Scouting."

The Buffalo Trail Council has stressed the importance of a long-term camping experience for every boy. Not every boy avails himself of this opportunity, but last year 1,638 did in the form of attendance at the Scout Ranch camp in the Davis Mountains. From the local district 215 boys took part, or 53 per cent of those eligible. Eleven troops were at the ranch, or 61 per cent of the units.

The council operates the rugged mountain camp from early June through July for Scout units. At other times it is open for various groups such as Explorers, for the Order of the Arrow (a camping and service fraternity), and other groups. This vast preserve spreads over several square miles and is made up of valleys, canyons, peaks and meadows. Except for the core structures such as the kitchen and dining hall, the infirmary, chapel, trading post, and swimming pool, and area is maintained in its native state.

Boys and leaders use the base camp as a point from which to take hikes over many trails, one of them leading to an upland timbered valley known as the Park. Another high spot is the Needle Rock, named after a majestic and slender rock column which stands alone.

The Scout Ranch is populated by wild game such as deer. On rare occasions small black bear have been spotted. The council maintains a corral at base camp so that boys can ride horses on the trail, or have the experience of loading a pack mule (more accurately a burro).

At the senior level girls as well as boys are members of the Scouting program.

At least one Explorer post here is co-ed.

Explorers are those who are 14 and over who join a post, which generally is oriented toward some career interest. This may be medical, auto mechanics, aviation, public service, or almost any other field of interest.

Boys and girls, with the counsel of an adult advisor, largely map their own programs and activities. In contrast to the uniforms of Cubs and Scouts, Explorers dress into the teenage scheme with smart blazers, etc.

Scouting Relies On Institutions

Boys can't have the Cub, Scout and Explorer experience unless some adult individuals, institution, or organization sponsors them.

When units such as Cub packs, Scout troops, and Explorer posts are created, they literally belong to the institution which sponsors them.

Although the institution employs the Scouting program, developed over 60 years of experience, it is the institution which sets the policies under which the unit operates. It also accepts the responsibility of providing adult leadership, a meeting place and to see that the boy has a chance for a good experience. This is why, on a council-wide basis, you will find an adult in the background for every three or four boys in the program.

Council Eyeing Golden Milestone

When the Buffalo Trail Council, which serves 18 counties in this West Texas region, has its annual meeting in 1974, it will mark the 50th anniversary of its founding.

The council was one of the first to organize in the country, but it disbanded after a couple of years, then in the mid-twenties resumed a continuity of operation.

A CUB SCOUT? ... HE TRIES TO DO EVERYTHING RIGHT

Written by a cub in 1965

A Cub Scout is too little to be a Boy Scout and too big to be a plain boy.

He is a boy that has talked his mother or somebody else's mother into letting him and his friends meet at their house once a week and make a mess.

He gets to go to pack meetings where they have refreshments and sometimes carry the flag.

He gets to make clay ashtrays and rocket ships and key holders and yardstick covers.

He gets to camp out overnight and cook stew and burnt scrambled eggs.

He learns laws, rules, and earns badges like wolves and bears.

He tries to do everything right, and if he does some day he'll be a scout and go to camp.

And he tries to do a good turn daily even if he doesn't want to. Good turns are many times something he doesn't want to do and he does it anyway. And then he feels good.

Membership Gains Made In Scouting Last Year

Membership gains were recorded in the Cub, Scout and Explorer programs of the Buffalo Trail Council last year.

Bernard M. (Bruno) Hanson, council president, reported that there was a 4.5 per cent gain in boy membership, and a corresponding 4.6 gain in the number of units which serve these boys. At the end of the year, there were 4,911 boys in Cubbing, 4,110 in Scouting, and 724 in Exploring. This makes a total of 9,745 boys, barely under the 10,000 mark.

In addition, there are approximately 4,000 adults who are serving as volunteers to make the program available to and mean something to boys.

The council operated on income of $177,694 during the year. Of this amount, $116,950 came from United Way campaigns, another $14,434 in independent campaigns in communities which do not have United Way efforts. Sustaining members from people who make a plus investment in Scouting, accounted for $25,471.

Miscellaneous income generated from such things as camp sustenance fees was $20,838.

The council serves the West Texas area from Scurry and Mitchell counties on the east to Presidio and Brewster in the Big Bend. Eighteen counties are included.

SCOUTING
LOT MORE THAN

Learning The Skills Of Living

In order to progress as a Scout, a boy is required to learn new skills — all of which help him to become a more competent human being as well as a better neighbor. A Scout must be tested on several new skills each time he moves up in rank. His options include exercises in Community Living and Conservation, Camping, Hiking, Citizenship, Swimming, First Aid, Family Living, Cooking, Communications, Physical Fitness and Environment. Distinct from merit badges, Skill Awards demand completion of several different projects in the particular field. Result: achievement!

Scouting. It Knows No Limits

There are no city limits or county lines in Scouting. A boy is a boy, whether he comes from a metropolis or a farming community. His interests may differ, but his high goals, never vary — working to better the community or working at developing a personal skill. He will give his all to achieve good sportsmanship as well as to conservation. He is a realist who deals honestly with himself on all counts. Bright, alert and proud of what he stands for, the only limit he might strive for is the sky. We think he'll make it.

Religious Faiths Promote Awards

One of the prime duties which boys pledge to perform as Scouts is that to God.

It therefore is only logical that the Boy Scouts of America grants several awards to various religious faiths.

These are known by various names such as Ad Altare Dei for Roman Catholics, God and Country for Protestant and other non-Catholic groups; Duty to God for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; "Ner Tamid" for Jewish boys; "In the Name of God" for those in the Islamic faith; Pro Deo et Patria for Lutherans, and so on.

These have religious emblems — not Scouting emblems — because they are earned by boys working within their chosen faith or church under the supervision of the priest, minister or rabbi. Scouting furnishes the award, but only a religious group can confer it.

Mims Joins Elite Group

Each year the Buffalo Trails Council recognizes a small group of adults for outstanding service to boyhood by presenting the Silver Beaver, the highest award that it can make. Over the years 20 of these have been conferred on Big Spring men. This year Billy G. Mims, veteran scoutmaster of Troop 16 and himself an Eagle Scout when he was a boy, earned this high honor.

Starting with C. S. Holmes (x), father of Scouting in West Texas and founder of Troop No. 1, Big Spring, which is the oldest continuously chartered unit in the state, they are: B. Reagan (x), Dr. W. B. Hardy, Carl Blomshield (x), W. C. Blankenship (x), Nat Shick, Charlie Watson (x), Joe Pickle, George Melear (x), Sam McComb (x), Sherman Smith, Dr. W. A. Hunt, Carl E. Campbell (x), R. L. Tollett (x), C. Eugene Campbell, E. Don Campbell (x), Burton (Bert) Andries, Lee Roy Wright, Jack R. Alexander and Dr. Clyde E. Thomas Jr.

Interestingly, three sons of the late Carl Campbell (Don, now deceased, Gene and Carl, who came from St. Louis, Mo.) all received their Beavers at the same meeting. This likely was the first time (and perhaps the only time in the history of Boy Scouts of America) that three brothers received this honor at the same time. In a sense it was a fitting tribute to their father, Carl Campbell Sr., who died shortly afterwards, one of the few men at that time who had received the national 50-year Scouter award.

(x) Deceased.

Council Seeking Bobo Successor

Gene Bobo has resigned as field executive of the Buffalo Trail Council serving this, the Lone Star District.

Arnold Marshall, district chairman, said that the council is working through the regional office at Dallas to interview applicants for a successor.

In the meantime, Jim Armstrong, Midland, field director for the council staff, will service the Lone Star district, said Marshall. Bobo came here last summer after the retirement of Monty Stokes.

Oath Claims Full Spirit

Whatever else Scouting has, its heart and soul are the oath and law, or, in the case of Cubs, the Cub Promise.

The Scout oath captures the full spirit when it required a boy to take this three-part pledge:

"On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

The law has 12 points in which a boy obligates himself to be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, cheerful, obedient, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent. The motto is to "be prepared," and the slogan is to "do a good turn daily."

There is a program of activity for boys at three basic age levels, but these are all means to the end of living the spirit of the oath and the law — to develop character and train boys for citizenship.

Mess Watcher

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Incarnate Word College has enlisted some impressive help in keeping its cafeteria free of litter.

A sign on the cafeteria exit says:

"Did you pick up your mess? God is watching."

Group Works To Interest Area Youth In Scouting

Responsibility for seeing that boys in the Big Spring area have the opportunity for being Cubs, Scouts and Explorers rests in the hands of the Lone Star district committee, headed by J. Arnold Marshall, chairman.

Marshall, former mayor and long-time worker in youth groups, has as his right-hand men Vice Chairman Tom Locke, and District Commissioner Ernie Boyd.

Under the chairman are 10 committees responsible for some particular phase of the program. Their chairmen are:

Ralph Beckham, activities; Garrett Paton, camping; W. W. Brown, health and safety; Ben Johnson Jr., advancement; Bill Prieb, training; Reeves Moren, organization and extension; George Zachariah, finance; Bill Fryrear, Exploring; Dr. Paul Koshi, conservation; Joe Pickle, public relations.

"I know I speak for all the chairmen and their committees when I say that our sole goal is to help boys become good men," said Marshall. "We feel that this is one of the most urgent needs of the nation today, if our nation is to be what it can and ought to be tomorrow."

"Scouting is a program which from the beginning has upheld the heritage and the virtues of integrity, duty to others and self-reliance upon which our nation was founded. It is still these that we try to weave into and citizenship training.

"We need help — mostly the help of good men and women who still believe that the boys and girls are the most important things in life. We need them to serve on the district committees, but more importantly on the pack, troop and post committees, and most of all to work directly with boys as unit leaders."

"Scouting, like any human movement, may not be perfect, but it certainly is aiming in the right direction when it aims at helping boys become all that they might be. You can't make a better investment of your time, if you really love your country, than to work with boys hands and hearts with us."

SCOUT EXPOSITION—One of the project highlights of the year for Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers is the district exposition. This year it is scheduled for March adjacent to Highland Center (or in the mall if the weather is bad). More than a score of packs and troops will put on displays and demonstrations in the day-long event, which will be under direction of Garner Thixton, according to Ralph Beckham, camping and activity chairman. Above, Pat Daniel and Bill Murphy work on an exhibit last year, and below Steve Evans and Bill Arencibia examine their display on a timely subject.

A smaller increase was noted for heroin possession, from 211 last year to 258 in 1971.

The Harris County district attorney's office has indicated it will not prosecute first offense marijuana cases. However, Renois said his men will continue to "arrest anyone breaking the law."

Hollywood Composer Says Escape No Longer Wanted

By PETER MUCCINI
LONDON (AP) — Dimitri Tiomkin, the veteran Hollywood composer who won four Academy awards for his music in such films as "High Noon," shook his head and sighed: "Hollywood is dead. The dream is over."

Tiomkin, a naturalized American citizen born 73 years ago near St. Petersburg, the imperial Russian city that is now Leningrad, never thought of Hollywood as a town during all the years he worked there.

"It was a state of mind," he said in an interview at his London home. "It offered escape and dreams to millions who were hungry for them."

ESCAPE NOT WANTED

"Nowadays nobody wants to escape," he added. "Don't ask me if that is a good or a bad thing. I am no philosopher — only a lousy musician — but the Hollywood I knew is dead. The big dream factory has closed down."

The man who filled the screen with sweeping melodies and the sound of heavenly choirs in more than 140 movies began his career as a student at the St. Petersburg Conservatory of Music. His teacher was the Russian composer Alexander Glazunov. Later Tiomkin studied in Berlin under Ferruccio Busoni, the Italian composer, conductor and pianist.

Tiomkin went to the United States in 1925 as a concert pianist. He gave the first performance of George Gershwin's Piano Concerto. Tiomkin and Gershwin became close friends during the 1920s. Tiomkin introduced the American composer's symphonic music to European audiences who had previously known Gershwin only for his popular hits like "Crazy Rhythm" and "Swanee."

INNOCENCE GONE

"Hollywood was a wonderful place when I first went there around 1933," Tiomkin recalled. "It was like some new marvelous invention to be experimented with. The central idea was the little man. I remember instructions given at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios that films had to be concerned with 'the democratic approach to what people like to dream about.'"

"It was a bright dream about a beautiful democracy in a world under the shadow of tyranny," Tiomkin said. "I suppose we were fakers and phonies, but I can't help thinking there was an innocence which has now vanished."

Not all the dreams died, however. The greatest of them survived — the Western.

"The Western is the perfect illustration of the Hollywood I'm talking about," Tiomkin said. "It has adventure, legends, heroism. Sure, there was violence, too, but the violence was tempered by the grandeur of the theme. And the whole concept was rooted in the little man, the plain folk who opened up the West."

Tiomkin helped spin the Hollywood dreams with music for a long string of films which won him 24 Academy award nominations apart from bringing him four coveted Oscars.

There were Westerns like "Duel in the Sun," "Friendly Persuasion," "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral," "The Alamo" and the masterpiece "High Noon."

Other major successes were his scores for "The Old Man and the Sea," the film version of the Nobel prize-winning American author Ernest Hemingway starring Spencer Tracy, and "Giant," the screen version of Edna Ferber's novel starring James Dean and Elizabeth Taylor.

DREAMS FORGOTTEN

A wry grimace puckered the composer's benevolent features. "I'm afraid much of it is lost for me," he said. "Once Hollywood forgot the dreams and got down to reality it failed, in my opinion."

"I may be a stupid old man," Tiomkin went on. "But I find many movies now full of lies, propaganda and intellectual crap. I detest some of these Hollywood heroes who are tough, ruthless, sadistic and grab everything they can. Films today have such a cynical view of human relationships, especially sexual ones. And I hate what I consider the commercial exploitation of perversions like homosexuality."

MUSIC FOR RUSTLIN'

"I'm no Beethoven or Brahms," he said. "I could never sit down and compose a sonata. Even if I did, it would be lousy. But I love writing for the screen. Give me a scene where a rustler is stealing a cow and I reckon I'm one of the best guys to supply the right kind of music to go with it."

COMPOSER

His big problem is to avoid writing music that resembles the work of another composer too closely.

"How the hell can you be original when you have written music for more than 140 movies," he said, pointing to a shelf full of fat, scarlet-bound volumes of his scores. "I have to be extremely careful that I have not unconsciously plagiarized another composer's work."

'STINKY' MUSIC SELLS

Despite occasional references to his own music as "stinky," Tiomkin readily admits that his work has brought him a fortune. His white mansion in Highgate, within sight of the broad wilderness of Hampstead Heath, is filled with art treasures from all over the world.

One room is a kind of Hollywood memorial. The walls are covered in signed photographs of dozens of great stars and personalities such as Rogers and Hammerstein, Gershwin, Gary Cooper, Maurice Chevalier, Frank Capra and Nat "King" Cole.

On the floor lay a clutter of cans containing film. It was Tiomkin's latest movie, a biography of Tchaikovsky. He wrote the background music for it, and also produced it.

Tiomkin made the film earlier this year in Russia. He said he had not seen "The Music Lovers," a controversial version of Tchaikovsky's life by the British director Ken Russell.

"I've met Mr. Russell and he was extremely kind to me," Tiomkin said. "But I didn't see his movie because I did not want to be influenced in my own approach to the subject. Sure, Tchaikovsky was a homosexual, but that side of him does not interest me. The man I have portrayed was a true revolutionary and a composer of genius."

CISCO KID'S RIDING IS OVER—Actor Duncan Renaldo, 68, who was the Cisco Kid of films and television, poses at his Santa Barbara, Calif., home with Diablo, the faithful horse of Cisco. Renaldo filmed his last screen episode 17 years ago and doesn't ride anymore as he lives quietly in retirement.

'Wilderness' Gives Close Look At Game

"American Wilderness" is an absorbing, eye-filling, scenic, wildlife documentary, the handwork of a 16 millimeter nature-outdoorsman turned showman. Arthur R. Dubs (rhymes with cubes) is a Medford, Ore., architect-contractor. He's come up with some of the best wildlife footage seen in recent years and mostly outside the realm of Disney and the other professional filmmakers.

The film, now showing at the Ritz Theatre, is reported the result of six years of stalking and trekking, the 115 minutes being culled from over 30,000 feet of 16m, edited, scored, narrated and converted to 35m. Film has been around commercially for some months, but there has been no film trade screening. It is distributed by Dubs' own organization. It follows the four-walls deal pattern of various wildlife of animal-hero releases of recent seasons, several having done well and nearly all purchased by "amateur" westerners.

There's a thin story framework. Footage deals with hunting of greathorn sheep, roams the Mexican desert, Bighorn Mountains and also concerns the hunting of a giant polar bear. Film has comparatively little bang, bang. Emphasis is more on the preparation, the trip, camping and outdoor wonders.

Several action-filled sequences spell the beauty-rough camera, notably two wild rams butting each other senseless over an indifferent ewe, wild stallions tearing at each other, a bull elk rounding up his harem of cows when danger is sensed, steelheads on the hook, mule deer of eastern Oregon bounding over the mountainous terrain. These are what the family trade comes to see.

Technically, the film has much merit in the stunning scenes of wildlife seldom seen but made clear with the telephoto lens. There are shortcomings which might be expected of a one-man production. A frequent device is to place the camera on a tripod with pre-set exposure and then for Dubs & Co. to walk into the scene. It beats bringing along an extra cameraman but it also results in some over-close-ups which might have been better edited. Some long shots also are blown up to grainy effects. Some sequences evidently are inserted for their cuteness effects — bear cubs tugging, sailfish skinning the bay, the Dubs' daughters frolicking in the Rogue River.

And some tighter editing would get the film down 10 minutes for a lift in pacing.

Scouting Exists At Three Levels

The Scout program operates at three levels.

The first is for boys 8-9-10 years of age and is known as Cub Scouting. This is a parent-boy program which functions largely through dens presided over by a den mother at weekly den meetings. Once a month the dens come together for a pack meeting for recognition and awards.

The second level is Boy Scouts, primarily for boys 11-12-13, although boys may continue — as many do — to be Scouts beyond this age. Troops meet weekly as a general rule and are broken into small groups known as patrols. The emphasis is on developing Scouting skills such as first aid, camping, knowledge of the nation's heritage, etc.

The third level is Exploring. This is for boys and girls 14 years and above. The emphasis here is career interest as well as other activities geared to teenagers. Cubs have blue uniforms with gold trim, beanie cap and neckerchief; Scouts have light khaki colored uniforms with red trim and with overseas caps and varying neckerchiefs which represent their particular troop. Explorers have smart blazers with a simple monogram with a circle pierced by an arrow point.

Lunar Scouts Prophesized

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former astronaut Neil A. Armstrong says he'd like to return to the moon someday with a Boy Scout troop.

Armstrong, the first man to set foot on the moon, addressed a banquet of scout leaders here Thursday night and predicted lunar scouts probably would be the next new program for the ever-changing Boy Scouts of America.

"Back when I visited there a few years ago, I thought it would make a great place for a camporee," Armstrong said. "Now people are dropping in all the time. They even have cars there — abandoned cars. It is just not the same place it used to be."

A former Eagle Scout, Armstrong said a scout troop would have a unique situation on the moon. He said a good breakfast would be a must because the days are 700 hours long, not 24 hours. Armstrong is now a professor of electrical engineering at the University of Cincinnati.

Equipment Here For Net Center

Electrical equipment has arrived and work will begin immediately on the lighting portion of construction on the tennis courts at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center.

Electrical work on the center will be done by Boss-Linam Electric Inc. City commissioners awarded the firm a $15,400 bid at the last commission meeting.

City manager Harry Nagel said the electrical equipment arrived sooner than the city had expected which will probably move the completion date up several weeks to April.

KEY WORD IN DENTISTRY
"PREVENTION"

No longer is the old saying "Brush your teeth after every meal and see your dentist twice a year" the ruling factor in dental health. Now the new concept is prevention and dentists start by motivating their patients to learn how to control plaque. At the beginning there may be frequent visits until the dentist has thoroughly instructed the patient in the technique. Then, a visit every four months is encouraged.

Not too long ago, lots of cavities, chronic gum problems and other dental ills were accepted as an everyday part of living. But now, prevention is helping to change all this.
