AND THIS IS IN TEXAS

Governor Roberts, the Old Alcalde, who laid the foundation for the University of Texas, should not turn over in his grave. Jealous guardians of the University's welfare continue on the watch tower. They have had to do some unusual mental gymnastics and spend many millions, but trust them to be equal to the occasion. Read this:

"The public will be admitted to the observation deck on the twenty-ninth floor level of the new administration-library building tower at the University of Texas. . . C. D. Simmons, acting comptroller of the University, has announced."

The dispatch is from Austin and the dots gloss over the hours of the day and similar minutiae, because the folks will not get down to Austin to take advantage of the unusual offer. 440 miles away, only the County Commissioners and Chamber of Commerce secretaries will ever have the chance to sunburn their tonsils looking up at the U. of T. tower, and even they won't know how to get in.

This tower of the administration-library building, for your information, was built out of oil money for higher education while plains folks prayed for rain, or wished the sand would quit blowing, according to their respective reactions to the things that are. And it all happened in Texas between 1930 and 1937. This is a big world and Texas is so big a part of it that all kinds of things happen in one end of the state the other end knows nothing about.

WHAT OF THE TEMPERATURE?

Note that if you take your mind off the temperature and put it on something in which you are much interested, the thermometer may boil and yet you hardly be aware of it. The same with other incidental things in life, a part of the seasons or the things that go along with nature's business.

High temperatures, low temperatures, rain wind, dust, thermometers, all are one and the same to the fellow with something he's shooting at.

But after two paragraphs of it, I'm still sweating, ain't you? Gosh, hasn't it been hot!

GIVE US THIS DAY

Several weeks ago The Hesperian advised the country people in Floyd County to watch the highbinders. Apparently, some of them have. Solicitors, collectors, salesmen, beggars and an assortment of whatnots have found the front door screens shut and latched and no sign of life about the place, when they got to many Floyd County farm homes in the past forty-five days.

This has been a sort of protective action to keep the gentry away that, greedily wanted to cash in on a combination of a big wheat crop and an easy-going type of people who like to be friendly. Even the Jews and Syrians have sent salesmen out to see the people.

A good joke on this newspaper has been the way some of the people have received a circulation man—a dandy young fellow at home for the summer who will not be available in the fall or later. West Texas born and reared, he has been cold-shouldered along with the rest of them, much to his chagrin and ours.

NOW IS THE TIME

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of—the constitutional amendments. I want this one passed you want that. We stir around trying to convince each other.

A year or two, maybe three, ago, this writer undertook to tell the neighbors the amendment taking officers out of the fee business and putting them on a salary, was all bunk. It has cost the state many millions, has gotten not more but less efficient service, if either. An amendment you'll vote on on August 23, will kill this amendment and we'll have things back somewhat like they were once more. Not ideal, but nearer the human nature of things and a lot less expensive to the pocketbook of Texas. Please vote for this amendment that is a sign of return to sanity in Texas.

FOR THE BLIND AND DESTITUTE

Two amendments this newspaper is supporting and which we hope voters will favor are:

(1) The amendment that will take cognizance of the fact that the blind of our state should not be thrown upon the mercies of a cold world, but should, instead, have recognition of their plight, which might be or might have been mine or yours but for the grace of God;

(2) The amendment that will see that the destitute orphans of our state have a chance at a home life instead of being forced to spend their time without the presence, the help and the care of mother or father.

Undoubtedly there is sufficient finances in Texas to provide for these.

The government and state say these come under the head of the Social Security Act. Already Texas has adopted seven of the nine points in the Social Security Act. We would wait to the last to take care of the orphans and the blind. They can't speak for themselves.

IT IS A NORMAL PROCESS

Investigation and re-investigation "is a normal process by which a social welfare program is adjusted to changing economic conditions." We are assured by a prominent state official. "Continuous re-investigations are an important part of any welfare program."

Accordingly, we suggest to our aged friends that, since they desire and need the help of the state, they spend a wee bit of their next check for a walking cane and some faded out, second-hand looking sort of curtains for the widows, and practice humping over somewhat as though racked with pain and hunger. Also if there are any grandchildren in the family, healthy, happy, vigorous youngsters, shush them if a strange man drops around.

Help the investigators, and especially the re-investigators. If they seek squalor, let them find it. The ordinary people should cooperate with the wise men who have been to college and other places and know all the things.

A fool defends himself when he knows he is wrong.

As A Farm Woman Thinks

Nellie Witt Spikes

The weather has been so warm, one would think East Texas was crowding farther west. When we do not have to have some cover before morning, we surely howl about the heat. There is no water for the garden. It hurts to watch the garden and flower beds burn. We still hope for rain.

A turtle dove is calling outside. It makes me think of a day long ago. It was hot. We had been gathering plums in a little sandy draw. The children were under the wagon in the shade. Mother was cooking dinner, biscuits were moulded out and put in the dutch oven. Bacon was sliced and put in the skillet. Father opened corn and peeled the cobs that would be sliced and put in the pot of potatoes boiling on the fire. A syrup bucket held the fragrant coffee. (The little children were allowed to drink coffee when we were camped out.) The hot sun was making sun grins on mother's face. Turtle doves were calling near. A stillness was over the canyon. Heat waves danced on the hills that were so cool and pleasant when the sun rose over the canyon hills. Tubs and sacks of ripe red plums were in the wagon. Soon mother would lift the lid of the oven and we would begin a feast. These scenes and days never left the hearts and minds of children that lived in the west in early days.

"You children quiet down," the memory of my grand father's voice comes down the years to me. We would play after we went to bed. Grandmother would warn us that we had better stop our giggling and talking. But we did not heed her. Grandfather would then take the matter in hand. "Quiet down," quaint old fashioned word. How we need it today. Quit our rushing and striving after the things that do not matter. Take time to quiet our souls. Our forefathers learned the value of calm.

We have sold the old car. A new shiny one is in the garage. I miss the old car as I miss a friend that has been near and dear to me. The car took me to church, to town, picnics, the club and to my neighbors homes. I knew its faults and its good points. This new car is a stranger to me. When I look at it I think "You are not going to be any better than I am. You can take me to places and help me do things that will make the world better or that will make for more misery. You can be a bringer of swift death. You can carry me to the lands of beauty. Swifter than the winged horses of old you can go." In time this new car will be like a friend to me.

Editorial Briefs From Other Newspapers
Texas got her name, according to legend, from a visit of Spanish to East Texas in quest of the French whom they sought to destroy. Capt. De Leon was in command. Spiritual leader was Fra. Massanet. Upon asking the Indians the name of their tribe, the spokesman replied, "Tejas," meaning friend. This branch of the Caddos was henceforth known as Tejas to the Spanish. The meeting took place is said to have been on the Navasota river late in 1690. —Donley County Leader.

Do you have a job for yourself and your family the year round? A job that is directly productive? Figure the amount of labor in your family and plan work to keep them busy. Children can milk a few cows, attend to a few chickens or hogs before and after school and work hours in the field. You cannot discharge or "fire" them so why not find something productive for them? —The Redland Herald.

High consideration for others' property is good for the race. Tillers of the soil today only have a temporary interest. This land will be owned by many others after he has passed on. By following good farming practices today the operators will leave for others to follow a productive soil. Exploitative farming is immoral because it is bad for the race. —Redland Herald.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Homer S. Cummings probably will go packing off for that long delayed rendezvous with his wife in Europe, now that the President's Supreme Court plan has collapsed. It was Cummings' idea in the first place, and he persuaded Roosevelt both to launch the plan and to keep it secret from everyone else, including his other advisers, until the White House broke the sensational story. The original draft of the President's message to Congress on the court plan was written by Cummings and Donald Richberg.

Headed by Assistant Attorney General Joe Keenan, Department of Justice men carried on the administration liaison work with Congress. These men had the job of working with the late Senate leader, Joe Robinson.

The opposition was headed by such shrewd old heads as Borah and Hiram Johnson, and was well-financed for a campaign to stop the bill. The sidown strikes and the wage-hour bill helped bring in new opposition recruits. After the court handed down the favorable Wagner Act and Social Security decisions, many advisers urged the President to put the fight off and bury the bill in committee.

But Van Devanter's resignation brought demand—from all but the progressive element—that Joe Robinson be appointed to the court. Roosevelt implied to Robinson that he couldn't put him on the court without adding a couple of liberals at the same time. That appointment was a long-time ambition with Robinson, and he went into action.

Expert observers here believe that two months ago it would have been comparatively easy to pass a compromise bill, adding one more judicial circuit to the nine now existing, with a justice from each circuit on the Supreme Court bench, making 11 in all, with the chief justice at the head.

But years ago, the circuits were so gerrymandered that the eighth circuit, which includes Robinson's state of Arkansas, also includes Justice Pierce Butler's state of Minnesota. Butler wasn't going to resign, so Robinson couldn't get an appointment to represent the eighth circuit.

Robinson then insisted to the President that if he were allowed to handle the Senate bargaining on a personal basis, he could get a bill satisfactory to Roosevelt. At one time he said he had 54 senators pledged to the Hatch amendment, which would have given Roosevelt three court appointments by January. But when Robinson died, many of his purely personal pledges died with him.

Garner entered the picture in conferences on the train returning from Robinson's funeral, and he is supposed to have told Roosevelt that he could get the best possible compromise if authorized to deal with the Senate in his own way.

Other incidents, such as Governor Lehman's well-timed letter, helped defeat the court bill, but it has been obvious since Garner's return that the vice president would be well satisfied if he could keep his party intact and exert his leadership, though it meant an unsuccessful end, almost overnight, to the long, desperate administration fight.

BITS O' PHILOSOPHY

Making something out of nothing is the problem of God, not the educator.

The wise give advice cautious the foolish give it freely.

The biggest ideas are usually pressed in the simplest words.

Rapid Development of Trained 'Seeing Eye' Proving Invaluable as Guide for Blind

THE heavy, swirling traffic of a large city, forever a source of fear and danger to the blind, need no longer hold the terror it does for those unfortunate who are doomed to spend their lives in temporary, partial, or even permanent darkness.

And the reason for this is the "seeing eye."

The "seeing eye" is nothing more than a German shepherd dog—more familiarly known in America as the police dog—and is becoming more and more frequently used as a guide for the blind.

For years dogs have been used for this purpose, but it has been only since the World War that the "seeing eye" movement has been adopted from a scientific viewpoint, studied, and brought to the position it now occupies.

So many men were blinded during the war that the safety problem for those so afflicted became acute. A German organization at Potsdam was the first to train dogs on a large scale. The movement spread rapidly. Today four organizations in the United States carry on this work. They are the Seeing Eye in Tennessee; the New York Association for the Blind, with training grounds in Princeton, N. J.; the La Salle kennels in Minnesota, and the Wilson kennels in Michigan.

BECAUSE they are less easily distracted, female dogs are used for the most part. Each dog is subjected to a rigorous training for a period of several weeks. She must learn to stop when she comes to a curb, must learn the commands "forward," "left," and "right." The dog must learn not only to obey, but to disobey as well, should her master give the wrong command and unconsciously lead himself into danger.

With the blind man holding onto a rigid, handle-like leash, two feet as a rule walks about two feet ahead, picking her way through crowds and avoiding telephone poles and other obstacles. The animal serves as eyes for the blind master so well that it needs no command to quicken the pace, or slow it down because of congestion.

But the blind person, also, must undergo a period of training before he is ready to cooperate with his guide. To begin with, he should like dogs and understand them as much as possible. He must develop his hearing so that he can sense changes in traffic direction in order to be of assistance to the dog when traffic lights change color.

President Roosevelt's signature on the bill permitting "seeing eye" dogs to accompany their masters on railway coaches and street cars opened the way for scenes such as shown above, where a handsome police dog looks on alertly as her blind master, A. W. Lohler of Pittsburgh, hands his ticket to the conductor.

But above all, the blind must develop confidence in the animal in front of them. This is accomplished by easy stages, beginning in sections with little traffic, going on to more crowded areas, and then finally to the heavily traveled districts.

THERE is no end to where the dogs might go or what they might do with their masters. One dog attended classes daily at the University of Pennsylvania, where his master was a student. Another took rides in a canoe while her blind master paddled leisurely around the lagoon.

Recently President Roosevelt signed a bill making it legal for blind people to take their "seeing eye" dogs into the coaches of railroad trains, where heretofore they were forced to put the animals in the baggage cars. Street cars also will be compelled to admit canine passengers.

A cartoon illustration. At the top, a man in a hat and vest stands in a field, holding a sign that says "FARM LOAN INTEREST BILL PASSED OVER PRESIDENT'S VETO. PRESENT LOW INTEREST RATE WILL CONTINUE." He says "THAT'S GOOD!" and "THE THOUSANDS OF BORROWERS". Below him, a man sits at a desk with a sign that says "FARM LOAN INTEREST BILL PASSED OVER PRESIDENT'S VETO. AN INCREASE IN THE RATE OF INTEREST ON FARM LOANS WOULD HAVE ADDED $40,000,000 TO THE TREASURY." He says "THAT'S TOO BAD!". To the right, a large metal safe labeled "U.S. TREASURY" is open, showing it is empty. A sign inside says "THAT BIG EMPTY SPACE".

"THE STREAM-LINED HORSE-COLLAR CO."

asks for a Loan

In 1850, a bank loan to finance the manufacture of horse-collars might have been thoroughly good. In the 1930's it might still be good. But the banker would have to study the application more carefully. Why? Because in this motor age the market for horse-collars is a limited one.

In making any loan the banker has more to think of than the character of the borrower and the quality of the product. Before he favors any proposition, he must first ask whether conditions, also, favor it. For, then he knows that the borrower will be more certain to be able to repay the loan.

means giving the mileage

It's up to me to make this business go, because it's mine. I never did a smarter thing than featuring Conoco Germ Processed oil, with all its long mileage for you. Talk doesn't make mileage or customers, but I can tell you what does . . . Oil-Plating your engine with Germ Processed oil. The patent Germ Process makes oil actually take hold of every working part and keep it coated with a durable Oil-Plating . . . entirely extra to the regular moving type of oil film. Oil-Plating backs up the oil film while the car is running, and never drains down during hours of parking. Then you'll never start up without lubrication. And at the end of your longest run on a hot day, your engine will still have its full safe plating of Conoco Germ Processed oil. The way it lasts gives me a right to be called Your Mileage Merchant.

Football Dope Being Peddled

By Bill Hams
Football is in the air. It may seem early to the average person for people to begin to talk football as it will be some time before football "northers" sweep across gridirons over the Panhandle and South Plains, and the thud of body striking body and the boom of long sailing punts echo across the high school stadiums.

Already Coach Leo Jackson of the Flomot aggression has announced that his bunch of "hog-hide rasslers" will go to Fort Sumner, New Mexico for a ten day fall encampment beginning August 10, to get toughened up for the coming campaign.

Murmurs of the coming football possibilities of the Floydada High school are already circulating over town. "Whatta we got?" is the most asked question. "When is this bunch going to camp?" ranks a second place.

Coach Odell Winters is at present in Abilene but is expected to arrive home near August 13. If such happens, there seems to be a strong possibility that the Floydada footballers will go to training camp about August 16. All this is unofficial but that is the general understanding that is going about.

To answer the question "Whatta we got?" the football fans will have to wait until Coach Winters makes his return and makes an announcement of some nature. Certainly there are a lot of opinions concerning the whirlwind's chances of coming out on top of the district scramble ranging from "not a chance" to "we'll do okay."

To fix up a dope bucket and get it all set for a good upsetting from one source or another, the majority of opinions favor Flomot to annex the district title "hands-down." It may be another tale when November rolls around though.

Baird Bishop Returns From 20-Day Vacation

Baird Bishop returned Wednesday night from a 20-day vacation trip that covered 5,500 miles and included two countries and nine states. Bishop left July 8 with Mr. and Mrs. H. M. McLamore of Lubbock. They drove through Colorado to the Yellowstone park, then visiting the falls and the geysers, Old Faithful, which performs every 52 minutes.

From Yellowstone the party drove to Seattle, arriving just as the fleet "was in." Twelve battleships were in the harbor. A trip was made by boat from Seattle to Victoria, Canada. The island boasts that 22 millionaires live there, the greater number of which are retired Englishmen.

A deep sea-fishing trip was made at Garibaldi, California. And "Believe-it-or-Not" fish half the size of a man were caught there. Continuing down the western coast a visit was made to San Francisco, and the worlds highest and longest suspension bridge.

Los Angeles, Hollywood, and Long Beach were in the line of travel. A trip was made to Catalina Island from Long Beach. The return trip was made by way of El Paso. A hurried visit was made to Juarez in order to make the trip include two countries.

Bishop said that the entire trip was perfect. However he was catching up on the crop situation since he came back, he said he had been unable to obtain a hint of what was going on down here while he was gone.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. McIntosh and two daughters made a two day trip to Portales, New Mexico, visiting his brother Jack McIntosh and family. They returned home Sunday evening.

International Sunday School Lesson August 8, 1937.

GOLD FEEDS A PEOPLE
Golden Text—Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father, James 1:17.

Lesson Text—Exodus 16:1-17:7. Printed Text—Exodus 16:11-20; 17:3-6.

11 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, I will send thee down from heaven bread from heaven, and thou shalt eat thereof.

12 I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel; speak unto them, saying, At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the Lord your God.

13 And it came to pass, that at even the quails came up, and covered the camp; and in the morning the dew lay round about the host.

14 And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoarfrost on the ground.

15 And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, This is manna; for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat.

16 This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded. Gather of it every man according to the number of your persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

19 And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank; and Moses was wroth with them.

Ex. 17: 3-6

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst? 4 And Moses cried unto the Lord, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone me.

5 And the Lord said unto Moses, Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, where-with thou smotest the river, take in thine hand and go.

6 Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

The momentous march of the Israelites from bondage to liberty was one of the most famous in history, and the symbolism of the promised land and God's guidance to the children of Israel is in every detail of that journey.

Here in our lesson is the story of the quails and the manna, with the teaching that the Lord will provide for those who hear His word and obey His call.

Bread from heaven was this manna, and we are apt to forget, in the intricacies of modern life and in the abundant productiveness of our modern world, exploited with all the wonders of mechanical machinery, that all bread comes from heaven.

Man cannot create so much as a loaf without the help of the mystery of nature, and the miracle of the manna is, after all, no more wonderful than the miracle of our daily bread. It is a miracle simply of a somewhat different sort and different emphasis, and possibly it requires a different sort of apprehension and belief.

Moreover, the symbolism reaches very deeply into the realities of human responsibility. Manna was given only for the day. It was not some miracle by which everything was provided for man with no responsibility resting upon himself. If he did not do his part in gathering the manna while it was fresh, there was none left over for the only because we choose to call it a miracle that we can explain according to usual experience of laws; but the conclusions of our experience and our laws do not explain things or account for sources of power and of blessing.

The mysteries by which the wants are supplied are none the less mysteries because we choose to call them "natural" and "miracle."

The lesson of the story of God feeding the people in the wilderness and of satisfying their thirst is all along the journey of life, a vision of His grace and the rich vision of His grace are available to man.
