DUST THIS SPRING

From reports it begins to be apparent we are to have some more dust this spring, probably more than last. In the area known as the dust bowl a little moisture has fallen this fall and winter, with a few spots to make the exceptions.

This large area is going to sift quite a bit of dust into the air as the spring northers and westers blow, probably, more especially since the light moisture content of the top of the ground has frozen and powdered it up to flour fineness.

WHO WOULD GO CRAZY?

With the first test for deep oil in Floyd County now arriving at an interesting depth, speculation on what the reaction of our people would be to a good oil strike is interesting.

We predict that if oil is struck in reasonable quantities most of us will go "bug house," some trying to get rich and the rest wondering how. There is method in this oil madness the same as to any other, but few, very few, are ever able to master the technique.

BLACK LAND TURNED GREEN

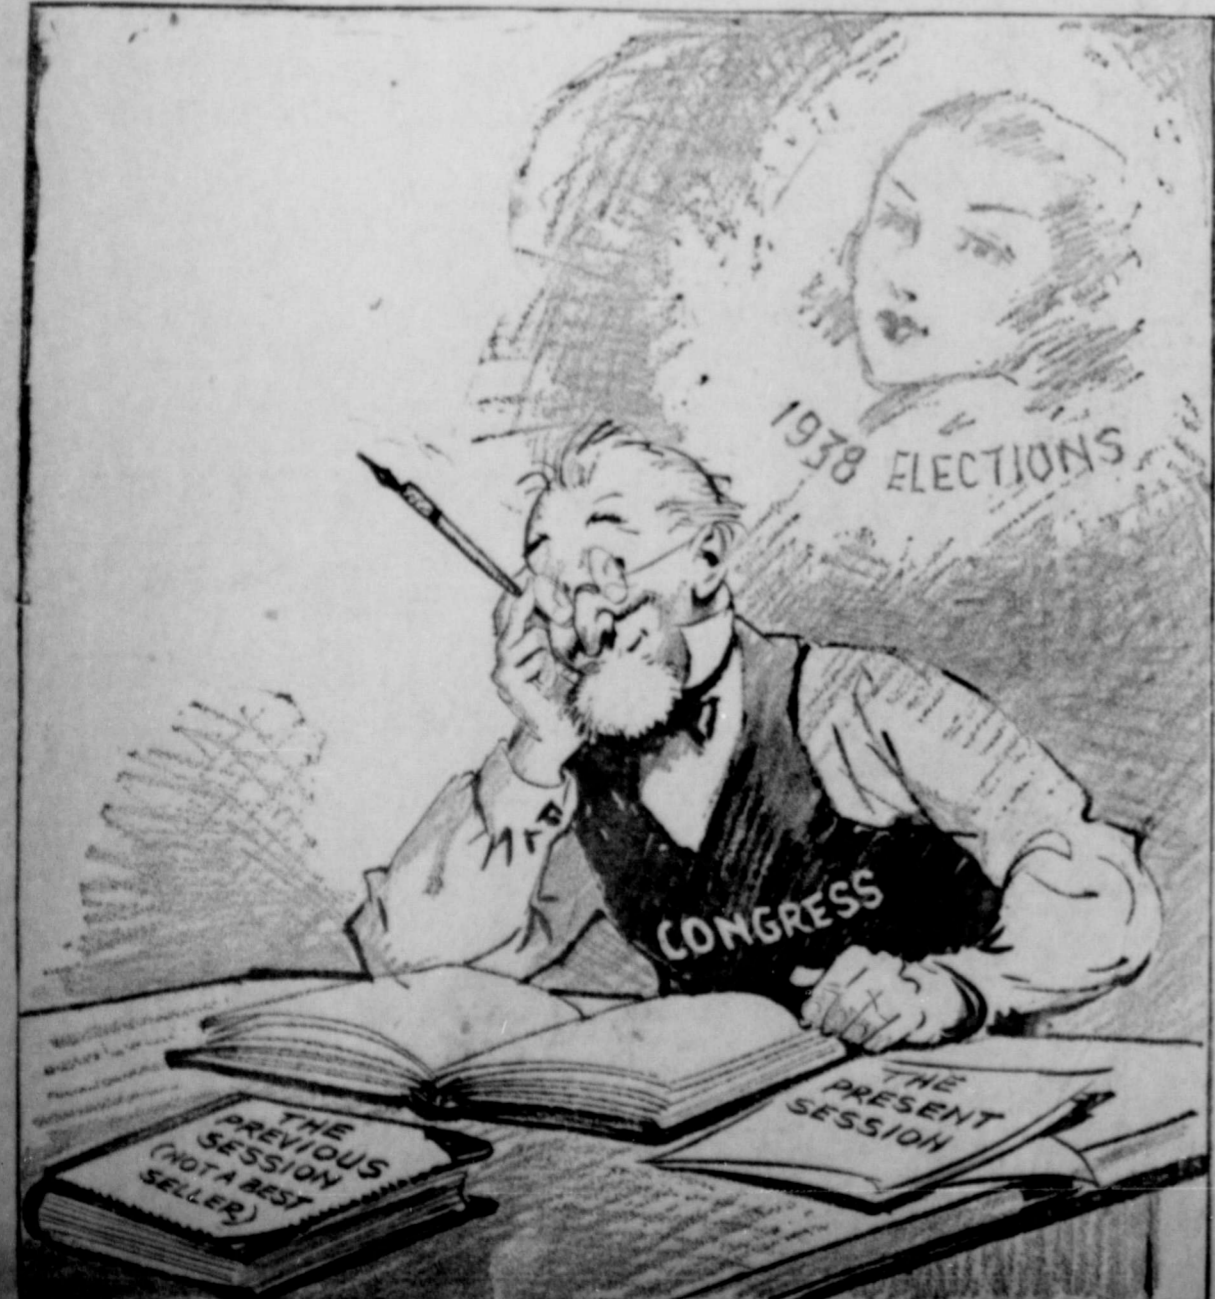

Down in the blackland belt of Texas and west as far as Abilene and Mineral Wells and points even this side there has been ample rainfall all winter long. In the blackland area they say so much water has fallen and stood around in spots that the ground has mildewed green. No harm in this except that anybody's land is not helped by leaching.

Further west and north the supply of winter rain has gradually diminished, but a check on Floyd County land in cultivation indicates a good depth of moisture from the very surface down. However, winter rain in the ground is so valuable to small grain growing that all are wishing another two or three inches would fall either as rain or snow before February is over. Freezes have kept the wheat from growing too fast, all ideal except that we could store some of that moisture that is falling down in the Brazos and Trinity valleys.

MORE SPEED AT LEAST

Eight years or so ago when the first program was undertaken to raise the farm income level, it was generally believed a proper program would be worked out only by trial and error. Intervening time has seen many things tried, others proposed and not yet tried, some ideas discarded as valueless and a thousand compromises reached as between different producing areas, and between producing and consuming populations. But no satisfactory program, generally agreed upon as wise, has been evolved. One thing that has been done, however, is to improve the technique of handling the vast amount of clerical and technical work so that whereas months were required to make benefit payments the time has been reduced to weeks.

YOU'RE PROBABLY EXEMPT

The likelihood is that most small farmers who made a reasonable sum of money last year from wheat and other operations, will be exempt from income tax, what with interest and whatnot. However, it is not only desirable to be in position to prove it, but also actually to prove it. Income tax officials have to know about the good fortune that came to the south plains this year, and Floyd County's name got into the papers too much not to have a pretty fine comb used on us.

You're probably exempt from a tax, but yes or no, do not take too much for granted.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS FIGHT

The fight on infantile paralysis, scourge of healthful youth, has been made a cheerful, happy sort of battle instead of a doleful one, as though American people are determined to meet and overcome one of the country's dread diseases in spite of its seeming insurmountable advantages.

Early approach of the president's birthday reminds us of this fact. The date (January 29) has come to be observed as a benefit occasion for whatsoever type of ball, party, or gathering that seems to appeal most to the respective communities the nation over. Building up a research foundation as well as carrying on the immediate fight is the goal. Hardly a community in the land but has been hit by infantile paralysis, to give an idea of the far-reaching good that will redound from these efforts.

TO OWE OR NOT TO OWE

High pressure salesmanship, condemned by President Roosevelt as a menace to the welfare of the less financially able, it is charged is responsible for many of the debts that cannot be paid.

To owe or not to owe is an important matter. We go into debt too thoughtlessly. Our business, the welfare of a whole family for a generation, sometimes suffer for one lapse, for one bit of carelessness in this respect. When one has to go into debt he has to do it. Often, however, the prospect is all too easily "shoved under."

FOR A HOME, YES

If a man buy or build a home within his reasonable expectations of paying and has a high resolve to meet his payments as they become due, such a debt is one most any business man will say is a good one for the average person to undertake.

There are many residents of Floydada, and all around over the county for that matter, who ought to be in homes of their own instead of rented homes. For such we suggest, the cost of financing home building is now lower than it has been in a generation. The building materials and the labor bills are not all the costs that go along with home ownership, you are reminded.

Liberal education develops a sense of right, duty and honor; and more and more in the modern world, large business rests on rectitude and honor as well as on good judgment. —Charles W. Eliot.

As A Farm Woman Thinks

Nellie Wilt Spikes

The Sale as I saw it: A clear, cold day. Cars with trailers and more cars with trailers. Unusually crowded with eager faced men an here an there, a woman. Two big pots of coffee, the fragrance mingling with the scent of burning pine, the candy man, with sweet candies, golden oranges, red apples. Two auctioneers, standing on a wagon, the men crowding close, bidding on this horse collar, or that set of harness. The man with the butcher knives, "Yes mam, I made them myself, they are made of the very best metal." The whinnying of horses, wondering what the curious crowd of people meant. The bawling of cows, separated from their calves and waiting to go to the green wheat fields.

Good natured people, jostling and crowding to get to the sandwiches, and to buy a good home made country pie, sold by the ladies of the neighborhood. The shouts of little children, too young to be in school. The music of a radio. The whirr of an aeroplane, sailing over our heads like a hugh hawk. Frightened white leghorns hens in a coop. Little pigs squealing and grunting. Friends meeting friends, people making new acquaintances.

But the men interested me most. Men enjoying the sale as a woman enjoys shopping in town. The men, big-men little-men farmers dressed in blue dinnin with brown jackets and carduroy caps. I would not tell my own husband until I looked him in the face, there were so many dressed like him. Men from town dressed in overcoats and hats.

I like a sale. Don't you?

A washing machine turned dirty clothes in hot foamy suds. A wringer pressed the water from clean white clothes. While I washed, Mrs. Poindexter of McCoy kept me company. We laughed like a couple of school girls when we told each other of Chivarries we had been to. Talked of school and of church, and told me of another of her children. Thank you Mrs. Poindexter, for your delightful company, while I washed.

Yesterday, Old Mother Nature gave us warning that she still had wind stored away even if she hasn't used much of it in the last few months. Warned us that she could turn the wind loose and fill our eyes and houses with dust and dirt. Gray sticky dust from Kansas, red dirt from Colorado and just common West Texas soil.

My husband has bought some queer looking ducks. They are black with white feathers on their heads and breast and a white feather or two in their wings. They have red bills and red rings around their eyes. They are the largest ducks I ever saw. Fill up on grain and they will sit for hours in the sun.

I have looked everywhere in cook books, asked most of my friends but not until the other day, did I learn how old time Chess pies were made. "Ask Mrs. Oran Wheeler, a friend told me, "she knows." They are delicious as the old time delicacies and Mrs. Wheeler knows how to make them.

When a child, a chess pie was indispensable for a big dinner. The yellow checked table cloth with fringe and the memory of chess pies will linger, sweet as fragrance of the wild plum blossoms, in my memory.

CHESS PIES

Yolk two eggs, 1/2 cup sugar, butter the size of an egg, vanilla flavor. Mix slightly eggs, sugar and butter. Bake in a pie crust. Brown quickly and reduce heat til pie is set. Whip white of eggs and put on top.

Just In Fun

Release of a captured French soldier from a German prison, and delayed awarding of medals, indicates nations are finally cleaning up World War affairs, probably to clear decks for the next conflict.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON—It seems likely that the wages and hours bloc in the House will succeed better this season than in the special session than in getting action on another wage-hour bill.

In a close vote of 216 to 198 the House Labor Committee bill was re-committed recently. Its champions were pretty discouraged, but Christmas week increased optimism among progressives.

During the holidays, many congressmen discovered that their opposition to the bill did not match the sentiment "at home."

The pro-New Deal fight talks with Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, and Secretary of Interior Ickes, enticed the holidays were followed by Roosevelt's message to Congress stressing the interdependence of agriculture and labor. This evidence that defeat will not make the President forsake New Deal aims is a spur to so-called left wing congressmen.

It is expected that the power of example will be enough to convert many congressmen who previously voted to bury the wage-hour bill, and that example was provided in the Alabama elections where Lister Hill, campaigning on a New Deal platform and strongly endorsing the wage-hour bill, won the senatorial race against ex-Senator Tom Heflin.

The administration hopes to see enacted into law a wage hour bill as nearly as possible like the Senate bill of last year.

Wage-hour bill partisans in the House are plugging hard to get a new bill out of the House Labor Committee soon. If the House Rules Committee again sits on a bill of

Making Money Is Just a Routine Job for Employes in United States Mint

Pouring bar metal. Cutting dollar slugs. Electric dies strike off coins.

HOW would you like to make lots of money? Hundreds of persons are doing just that every day, making thousands of dollars. But not for themselves—for the government, as employes of United States mints.

Fortunes in coins pass through their hands daily, not only in American money, but in foreign coins as well, for many foreign nations buy their coinage at the Philadelphia mint.

Increasing demands for small change, especially pennies, attributed largely to state sales taxes, have swelled the output of the mints in recent years. Depression-taught lessons of "cash basis" living, and of saving also have increased the circulation of coins in United States.

SEVERAL of the processes through which silver or copper metal passes, before emerging as a "coin of the realm" are shown in the accompanying pictures made in the Philadelphia mint.

Molten metal is poured into bars in the smelting room after proper alloys have been made. The metal is then flattened into thin strips, the thickness of the coin, and the slugs are punched out.

After the edges of the silver coins are milled, or cut with minute markings to prevent persons from filing them down, they are struck with electric dies, for each particular design, and carefully examined for imperfections.

Annealing or hardening, by special processes, comes next, and the money is loaded into cases. Both finished coins and scrap metal are weighed frequently during the process. Perhaps the expression "a bucketful of money" originated with the mint workers, who literally pour the change out of big buckets.

Women workers subject each coin to another careful inspection before the money is finally sent to the counting machines, where it is stacked for distribution to banks.

PRODUCTION on such an extensive scale dwarfs the humble beginnings of the U. S. coinage system, first inaugurated under President Washington by the production by the original Philadelphia mint of a few hundred silver half-dimes, 145 years ago. A former distillery housed the first U. S. mint.

Today mints at Philadelphia, Denver and San Francisco, operating with the latest of electrical machinery, supply the demand for coins. In contrast to the few sidemars carried by the first watchmen are the machine guns, tear gas and armored cars now protecting each daily shipment.

But unlike the early colonial days, the penalty for theft from the mint has been reduced from death to a long prison term, and since all employes are bonded, thefts are rare.

FLOYD COUNTY 14 YEARS AGO

News items taken from files of the Floyd County Hesperian, published in Floydada fourteen years ago.

(ISSUE OF JANUARY 24, 1924)

Work on highway No. 28 through Floyd County, which is being done by the county preparatory to turning it over to the State Highway Department, under an agreement reached by the commissioners and the highway department ten days ago, is progressing with as much speed as possible.

The work is in charge of R. C. Covington.

When the Clark-Wood Dry Goods Company this week changed their location to the White building on West Side, the Hall Millinery also moved to the same location, and is now installed on the main floor with them at the new location.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Dooley entertained with a "tacky party" at their home of Floydada a week ago. The evening was spent in games and prizes were awarded Mrs. J. M. Gambin and W. M. Merriott for the "tackiest" costume.

Refreshments were served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Snodgrass, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gambin, Mr. and Mrs. John Hainie, Mrs. T. B. Triplett, Miss Mary Elizabeth Triplett, and Messrs. John Keagan and W. M. Merriott.

The boys basket ball team of the Floydada High School played the Plainview High School team at the Wayland Gym, last Thursday evening. The score was 16 to 12 in favor of Plainview. The game was witnessed by a large crowd and a number of Floydada fans attended.

Mrs. E. P. Nelson left Tuesday morning for the millinery market in St. Louis and Kansas City.

The first colored couple ever to wed in Floyd County were married Monday night in Floydada. The dusky couple gave their address as Plainview. They were married in the Tax Collector's office Monday night.

J. Pat Horton, pastor of the Baptist church, officiated.

THE GREAT AMERICAN HOME

GRANDPA, YOU SAY YOU HAVE HAD A BEARD SINCE YOU WERE A YOUNG MAN? DON'T YOU EVER WONDER HOW YOU LOOK??

The dealers whose messages you read in The Hesperian are greatly pleased when they find you have read their advertisements with interest. And you can confer a favor on us if you'll say "I read it in The Hesperian."
