ACTUAL FIGURES DEMONSTRATE THAT CAMPBELL SYSTEM PAYS

I will try to fulfill my promise to you to tell you and your readers how I came out this year in my little experiment with dry farming, or the Campbell method of farming and I want to say in the beginning of this article that it was a grand success with me. I did not test it as fully as it should have been done because I had my cotton planted before I ever thought of trying the new method, and will say that I was a little skeptical on the question myself.

I had two ten acre pieces of cotton on the same kind of land. In fact, they were side by side, divided by planting eight rows of field peas between them, so you see that nine steps could make no great difference in the land, in fact, if there was any difference at all, the ten acres that I cultivated as we usually do had the advantage of the other piece of ground. The ten acres that I call the Campbell patch was dry planted about the 10th of May and after the shower we had the 16th May I planted the other, so there was very little difference in the time of its coming up. That was when I concluded to experiment a little.

I harrowed both pieces twice and then plowed both with a cultivator. I gave it all a good deep plowing and then I harrowed my Campbell patch again. From that time on I plowed both pieces shallow, with four or five rows. I plowed the Campbell patch ten times, except twenty-four rows which I plowed eleven times.

The other piece I plowed five times. I quit cultivating the latter piece about the 15th of August. The Campbell patch I cultivated up to and did the last plowing in it, the 14th day of September, when I could see a few scattering bolls open.

As the result I have gathered from the Campbell patch 3,663 pounds of seed cotton; from the other piece I gathered 1,868 pounds of seed cotton I did not have it ginned separately, but have made an estimate of what the cotton from each piece would have brought if sold in the seed at $4.75 per hundred:

Campbell patch, 3,663 pounds
at 4 3-4 cents - - - $173.99
Other piece, 1,868 pounds
at 4 3-4 cents - - - 88.73

Difference - - - - $85.73
Quite a nice little sum I think, which very well paid me for the extra five plowings and one extra harrowing.

Now, a few words, Mr. Editor, to my brother farmers, and I will close this already too lengthy article:

I think this has been a very fair test. We surely have had it dry enough—at least I have, and as to the cotton, several men from around here, and some business men from Roscoe came out and looked at my cotton crop and expressed themselves as astonished to see the difference in the two pieces of cotton. I want to refer you to two men who live in Roscoe, and they do not know anything about me using their names, either. One is a business man, Mr. R. E. Harris, of the firm of Harris-

Johnson Hardware Co., and the other is a farmer, an old one, who knows what cotton is. Mr. Jas. R. Blanton. Ask them. They saw my crop in the driest and hottest time of the day. They can tell you how the two pieces of cotton looked better than I can write it.

It seems to me if we are going to make a success of farming in West Texas we will have to quit playing farming and follow a few suggestions made to us by men who are making a study of this question from a scientific standpoint. I think the sooner we heed their advice and experiment on our own farms and see whether there is anything in this new method or not, the better it will be for us as farmers and for the country in general.

I would like to discuss the question of conserving moisture in the soil by proper tillage, but this article is already too long, so I will wait until some other time. But I hope some other farmer, like myself, who is in the dry west, and don't want to leave, will help me this year to demonstrate to doubting ones that intensive dry farming is the salvation of the tillers of the soil in this semi-arid country.

BEST SHOW OF THE SEASON.

"The Man on the Box", a dramatization by Grace Livingston Furniss, of Harold McGrath's clever story, is the attraction at the opera house, Monday, Feb. 13th. Everyone who has read this book wants to see the play, and the general verdict is, that the play is as good as the book and that is saying a great deal. One of the most noticeable features of the play is that there is not a line or actor in it to cause offense to the most exacting. Clean, clear-cut comedy throughout, and a hearty laugh is guaranteed to all who attend. "All the world loves a lover", and the love story in the "Man on the Box" is told in a comedy vein that makes it irresistible. A young army officer masquerading as a groom to be near the girl he loves, is the principle character, and Mr. Bert Leigh as "The Man on the Box" wins hearty approval by his interpretation of the part made famous by Henry E. Dixie and Max Figman. The supporting company is a good one, and a well balanced show is the result of the management's painstaking efforts to make "The Man on the Box" a popular attraction. Seats on sale at Mahan's Music Store.

BANK ROBBERY ONE OF BOLDEST

Takes Place at Duncanville in Dallas County.

GUARD TELEPHONE GIRL.

Manager of a Hotel Also Covered With a Revolver, Vaults and the Safe Blown Open and Cash Secured by Bandits.

One of the boldest robberies on record took place in the town of Duncanville, Dallas county. Victim was the Farmers' bank. Safe and vaults of the institution were blown open with nitro-glycerin and bills and silver to the amount of $2,000 stolen.

With a daring that demonstrated their mastery of the situation the highwaymen went about their work. Five or six distinct nitroglycerin explosions shook the business section while the robbers were in the bank and awakened the inhabitants. Over a dozen men, alarmed at the unusual midnight noises, rushed to investigate, but were met by a masked highwayman and decided that as it was after banking hours they would defer their visit to the financial institution. The manager of a nearby hotel was held under guard while the affair was in progress, and the telephone operator, Mrs. Mary Hood, was covered with a revolver and unable to send out an alarm.

After securing all the money they could lay their hands on the robbers boarded a Santa Fe railway hand car and left in the direction of Dallas. A hand car found near Dallas was identified as one taken from the Santa Fe tool house at Duncanville.

FAVORABLE TO LIGHTFOOT

House Committee Wants Him to Disburse Certain Sum.

Before a committee of the Texas house Attorney General Jewell P. Lightfoot took the position that he should be free to disburse the appropriations made for his department as he deemed best. This came up during the consideration by the committee of the bill appropriating $25,000 for the attorney general to enforce the land and other laws. Governor Colquitt was also invited to appear before the committee, but his official duties prevented.

Attorney General Lightfoot stated also that he did not want to antagonize the governor and that there were no hard feelings between himself and the state executive, but he believed he should have the right to spend this money without the sanction of the governor.

The attorney general had concluded the committee unanimously decided to report the bill favorably with the provision that the money shall be disbursed by attorney general without the sanction of the governor.

Lengthy Petition.

In the senate Warren presented a petition twenty-one feet long opposing the anti-drug vendors' act. Hume presented a bill making insanity ground for divorce.

WOMAN SHOT IN JAW.

Wife of Man She Walked With Is Arrested.

Mrs. Hattie Barter of San Antonio was shot and a jaw badly shattered as she was accompanying W. M. Burton of Cactus, Tex., to the International and Great Northern railway depot. Mrs. Etta Burton, wife of the man, was arrested.

Mrs. Burton met Mrs. Barter and Burton as they passed through the park of the depot and the shooting resulted. Wound is not believed fatal.

Mrs. Burton says she was married to Burton last April, the ceremony being performed in Mrs. Barter's house. She alleges many domestic difficulties.

Suloides Rather Than Roast.

Rather than be roasted alive, John Whitlaw, an express messenger, shot himself dead while pinned under the wreckage of a Grand Trunk railway passenger train near Paris, Ontario. Four trainmen met death in the crash.

Rebels Defeated.

ANTI-WHITE SLAVE BILL.

Optional Death Penalty Provision Eliminated.

Texas house passed finally the so-called anti-white slave bill after the adoption of amendments eliminating the provision of the optional death penalty upon conviction of over one offense.

House also passed finally house bill authorizing the county commissioners' courts to establish farm experiment stations when authorized at a special election.

Another measure passed by house was the house bill by Campbell making Oct. 12 a legal holiday, to be known as Columbus day. This measure was advocated by the Knights of Columbus.

House killed by striking out the enacting clause of bill prohibiting duplicate fees in criminal cases.

NEARLY SEVERS TONGUE.

Unusual Accident Happens to a Dallas Man.

With his tongue so badly bitten it was hanging by a thread a blacksmith helper named Frank Smith appeared at the Dallas emergency hospital. In sewing the all but severed end of the tongue back to its place it required several stitches by the internes. The injury was both peculiar and painful.

When the accident occurred Smith was engaged in clipping a horse. The animal knocked Smith down and then stepped on one of his feet. When the horse stepped on the prostrate man it caused him to clench his teeth together with such force as to nearly bite off his tongue.

More Testimony.

In the trial of the so-called peonage cases at Austin Postoffice Inspector Bass said he visited the Koppe farm and copied from the ledger a list of fines. In case of Charley Miller he found original fine was $16.75, but the costs brought the total up to $101.15.

Frank Steele, a negro, testified he was charged with fighting a negro woman, pleaded not guilty and fined $20.75. Was arrested second time on same charge, confronted by no witnesses and fined, but not told amount. Was held down by four men and whipped. Bloodhounds were set on him and he exhibited scars on his legs of dog bites. Newsom held the bat in his right hand and a pistol in his left while he was beating him. Orders were: "Wear them out." He was held two weeks in "spikes" bolted and riveted by a blacksmith. Some of the convicts were called vile names, he claimed, and were whipped more than six or eight times. They were not, he testified, brought into court, and did not plead guilty.

Since both Hon. W. J. Bryan and Senator Bailey have been invited to address the Texas senate this month it has been suggested that an effort be made to have them meet in debate. Mr. Bryan has conditionally accepted the senate's invitation, but will have to name the date later. Senator Bailey has written that he will be unable to visit Austin during February because of pressure of matters at Washington.

How about the hotel proposition? Is the prospect good or bad for getting it out of that—"bag?"

Two hundred and ninety-six poll tax receipts for the city were issued by City Marshal Ashton. A slight gain over last year.

We hope sometime during this year to find out what is the population of Baird. The Census Department is the slowest thing in the wide universe, undoubtedly.

Tarrant and Dallas counties are entitled to all that is coming to them. The one for electing a pro senator and the other for electing an anti senator, who votes all the time with the pros.

Hon. Bert P. Maddox, of Palo Pinto county, is "amaized" at Gov. Colquitt's opposition to the socialist "recall" provision in some Texas cities charters. Too bad! The Dallas News is also "amaized" and is doing all it can to spread the "amaizement" of Representative Maddox over Texas, which is worse.

The House of Representatives in the 24th legislature, 1895, had twenty-two populist and had a bill embodying the initiative and referendum been introduced it would have received exactly twenty-two votes. A joint resolution the other day embodying these two populist principles, received 58 votes to 56 against. It looks like the populists have made considerable gains in the House in the last sixteen years.

Only 826 law abiding citizens in Callahan county with at least 2500 qualified voters. Say, don't that ir you? If Home and State's charge were true, it would be unsafe run passenger trains or any other d of trains through this county travelers would be held up every Some pros do not hesitate to er two-thirds of the people of county, it seems, in order to acture political thunder for de.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

The School Board met Monday night in regular session, the first meeting in two months. All members were present.

A number of accounts were allowed. The resignation of Ode Wagley, as janitor was accepted and Sam Hart appointed to fill out the unexpired term.

Mrs. J. F. Boren was elected supernumerary teacher in the Public Schools.

On motion a committee of one was appointed to confer with the Home National Bank, depository of the School District, to ascertain the exact status of the different funds of the District. C. S. Boyles was appointed. The Board, on recommendation of the State Superintendent, appropriated $25. to assist in paying Superintendent Green's expenses to the meeting of Superintendents of the United States at Mobile, Ala., on February 22d. It was estimated that the expenses of the trip would be about $50. to $60. and Prof. Green will pay all expenses above the amount appropriated. The leading educators of America will be at this meeting, and the School Board believed it would be highly beneficial to the Public School to have the Superintendent attend the meeting, but did not feel that the District was able to pay the entire expense.

The President and Secretary were authorized to sign notes for the overdrafts on building fund amounting to about $500. carried by the two banks.

Prof. Green reported that everything was moving along harmoniously in the schools, minus a few little things that arise occasionally in all schools. The members of the School Board expressed themselves as pleased that no complaints had been made to the Board this session about school matters. Teachers and Trustees are striving to give Baird the best Public School in Texas. Many unpleasant things arise in all schools at times, which is natural where any considerable number of teachers and pupils are gathered together, but so far the Board has not been called on to settle any differences of any kind. Only those who have served long time as trustee know what a relief it is to have no complaints about teachers and scholars to adjust, or kicking patrons to mollify.

There will be several new trustees to elect in May, as some of the present Board express a desire to retire. It would probably be best for all concerned to do this and let others "enjoy the honors." All the present Board except Mr. Blackburn and Judge Russell have served continuously for many years, and under very trying conditions at times. This writer has served so long that we have forgotten when we began our last term. For the best part of thirty-five years in Brown county and in this county we have served as school trustee. We have always tried our best to build up the Public Schools wherever we have lived, and perhaps half of the twenty-three years we have lived in Baird have served as school trustee. The time has come when we are going to quit and let some younger man go on with the work. We feel that we can do the Public Schools just as much good on the outside as a member of the Board. What is here said is only to call attention to the fact that unless they change their minds, at least three of the present Board will retire in May. Every member of the present Board and members of the Board in the past have labored honestly and faithfully to build up the Public Schools and we hope as many of them as can be induced to remain will be reelected. However, this is a matter for the people to pass upon, but from long experience we know it is no easy matter to induce the best citizens to serve as trustees. Undeserved, hostile criticism often deters many from serving in the most important positions in the community, that is school trustee. No community can prosper without a good school and no community can have a good school without a board of trustees that is willing to give a great deal of their time to the public without anything in return except a conscientious ness of duty honestly and conscientiously performed. With a good Board of Trustees and honest capable teachers, the last named really the most important after all, there is no reason why any community cannot have a good school if they are willing to pay for them. The Board of Trustees in Baird for the past eight or ten years certainly have no room to complain that the people have not stood by them loyally. It took many long years to bring this about, however, and without boasting the writer feels that he did his part in arousing public interest in the public schools of Baird. Twenty-three years ago public sentiment in Baird was not any too enthusiastic as we had reason to learn, but we never faltered, and gradually the change came and now few can be found who are not warm supporters of the Public Schools, but in selecting trustees no man not known to be heartily in favor of the Public School should be chosen. An indifferent, luke warm school trustee can do much to retard the Public Schools, and a Board of that kind would choke the life out of the school. Think about this as the time will soon be here when you will have to elect two or three, maybe more new trustees. Possibly one or two members whose time expires in May may agree to serve. If they do, elect them, for every member has been faithful and true. This is not said in fulsome praise of them as individuals, but because it is the truth and is said for the benefit of the Baird Public Schools, that we all want to see grow in numbers and efficiency. Above all things do not let petty politics, or church matters enter into the selection of trustees. Such a thing, if persisted in will surely injure the schools. The present and past members of the School Board for many years have absolutely ignored politics and church matters in selecting teachers, and to keep it that way the people should ignore these things in selecting trustees. Without calling names, we will remind the people that rivalry between the churches in an effort to control the schools at Baird seven-teen or eighteen years ago, last us one of the best principals the school ever had and caused many to lose interest in the schools. Don't let anything like this happen again. Let the politicians run party affairs, and churchmen run church affairs, but don't let the partisans of either control the schools. We do not wish to be misunderstood. Church membership has never been a barr in selecting teachers by the present Board, neither has church membership controlled, that is no one has been selected because they happened to belong to any particular church. All we required was that teachers must present testimonials of good moral character and efficiency. While all teachers, since the writer has been on the Board, were members of some church, with one or two exceptions, no inquiry was made as to what church they belong to and all members of the present Board who have served during the last few years know that a very large majority of the principals and teachers were elected without a majority of the Board knowing what church they belonged to or what political party they affiliated with. Keep it that way and your school will prosper. Depart from this long established rule and religious and political dissensions will likely greatly injure, if not destroy your school. These reflections may seem to some as out of place and uncalled for, but to those who have had long experience as school trustee and teacher, they are justified. All Public Schools must have the united support of all churches and political parties to make them a success, and any attempt of any church organization or political party to control the Public Schools will most assuredly do more harm than almost anything else.

Editor Gilliland's anti friends are disqualified from serving on juries because they are not in favor of law enforcement. He did it very delicately and neatly, but this is really the point that Judge Blanton's reply makes against the editor's position.—Home and State, state prohibition organ.

Does Judge Blanton indorse this construction of his article in THE STAR of December 30th? The direct charge is here made that the anti of Callahan county, without exceptions, are a lawless class.

PROSPECTS FOR LIGHT PLANT.

Messers Ward, Johnson and Graham, of Comanche, spent two days here this week consulting with our people about putting in a light plant. W. D. Boydston, President, of the Commercial Club informs us that he believes the prospects good for a new plant. Other parties both in and outside of Baird are also figuring on the proposition, and some of them will probably put in a plant.

BURNT BRANCH LOCALS.

Feb. 2.—Dear Star: We are dry in these parts, local optionally speaking, and as an old Christian friend of mine once said in a prayer for rain, "Good Lord send down refreshing showers, we are needing rain."

Gran shows the effects of the dry weather and it is nearly corn planting time and no rain in sight.

Stock are doing well, but all the feed they get we give them. No grass, and the fellow who has hay or other feed to sell is "in the swim." The county of Ross is a dead issue We revere the name of Ross, but blamed if we want any namesake of his in the shape of a new county as proposed.

Jones & Wilson at Dressy, say will make prices with the R. R. establishments in the way of feed and mill products, delivered at Cross Plains from the car. See them, but remember this is spot cash.

We learn that Charley McDermott R. P. Odom, Squire Drewey and others, have bought property in the "city of the woods."

O. D. Morrow and Willis Saddler are doing tank work for Mr. Ayers, a settler of recent date in the Johnson Pasture, said lands being owned and sold by T. E. Powell et al.

School at Victoria, we learn, will close this week. A short term indeed. More kids needed.

Will Spencer is at Camp Colorado feeding and tustling with his poor cows. Stick to them, Will, grass will come bye and bye, provided it rains, and it always comes to meet our various needs.

Will Cutbirth, the rustler, buyeth the dogie in great numbers, to the joy of the average granger.

Jack Aiken and the boys are batching on the home place, and purpose making a big crop, the Lord willing, cotton and plenty of feed.

Some peach and blum trees in full bloom. Look out for late freezes. JUAN.

SEASON'S BRIGHTEST COMEDY.

It will doubtless be of unusual interest to the Theatre-goers of Baird to learn that Manager Mahan has added to his bookings for Monday, Feb. 13th "The Man on the Box" with Bert Leigh in the title role. Mr. Leigh as the man on the box is in one of the best and original roles as he succeeds in reaching the innermost recesses of their hearts by his simplicity and naturalness. He plays the part with proper droll spirit of mixed fun and seriousness, and touches it at every point with with the highest kind of art. The part becomes alive with wit and humor and keeps the audience in a roar of laughter all through the action of the play. It is the season's greatest comedy. Tickets on sale at Mahan's Music Store.

Plans for the university have yet been decided upon, but it is not as occupy a commanding site over the city, and will, at its best, looking an elevation equal to the heights of Praetorian building.

Man Registers Negress in Hotel as His Wife.

Registering in a hotel at Dallas on the business district as man and wife, a white man and a negro woman were arrested by Patrolmen Bentley and Ellis and fined $10 each in the corporation court.

The woman was heavily veiled when the two entered the hotel and it was impossible to distinguish the color of her face. She was about six feet in height.

"That looks like a man to me," remarked Bentley to Ellis, and they at once proceeded to investigate. The officers confronted the couple. Said one of them to the man: "Is that your wife?" "It is," was the reply.

About that time Bentley happened to cast his eyes downward and saw the hands of the woman. The face was a face of mystery, but the hands were the hands of a negress, and their arrest followed.

NEWSOM ON STAND.

Manager of the Koppe Convict Farm Testifies.

R. S. Newsom, manager of Koppe convict farm and one of the four defendants in the peonage cases on trial in the Federal court at Austin, testified. He stated he had treated all the convicts humanely, and even liberally, and that he kept accurate records, which tallied with those of the county judge. By agreement with the county judge, Newsom said, he had paid the costs accruing in the Somerville cases monthly in advance to Constable Houston, also a defendant. He testified that within a few days after the delivery of each prisoner on the farm the county judge furnished him with the data concerning the amount of the fine to be worked out, etc.

He said he had punished many of the prisoners, but never with severity, and that he never stripped a white boy when he whipped him.

Newsom stated that while no commitment accompanied the prisoner when turned over to him, he later received a statement from Constable Houston of the Somerville precinct.

Landry Causes Sensation.

A sensation was created in the lower house of the Texas legislature when Representative Landry of Beaumont made a statement that there were lobbyists on the floor and he wanted them removed. This caused a stir and the speaker at once ordered the lobbies cleared of all persons not entitled to the privilege. Speaker Rayburn said that if any violations of the anti-lobby law came under his observation he would have to take drastic measures in the premises. At the request of Representative Kennedy the rules of the house touching on this subject were ordered read.

OTHER TEXAS EVENTS.

An amusing scene occurred in the court of Justice Oliver at Beaumont when his honor seized a strap and gave John Ratliff, a little negro, a whipping. The boy was charged with theft and by agreement of all concerned the punishment was administered. John's mother, a typical old "black mammy," however, did not think the judge had "done the subject justice," and at her special request she was allowed to plant a few licks where she felt they would do the most good.

W. A. Florence, a Georgia contractor, met at Cleburne a few days since with Pat Cleburne chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and closed a contract for a monument on courthouse square in honor of Confederate soldiers of Johnson county. The extensive work being done upon the bank of the Rio Grande river opposite Brownsville has changed the course of the river and the water is cutting into the bank on the Texas side. Already a wide strip of bank at the foot of Levee street and extending into Fort Brown has cracked and dropped about three feet. Several of the government buildings at the fort are near the river.

Colonel W. J. Bryan has accepted the invitation to deliver an address at the unveiling of the monument to Sam Houston on the San Jacinto battlefield around April 21. Colonel Bryan also stated that if he addressed the Texas legislature it would be on a date after that time.

Stillwell, president of the system, who with five of the former engineers inspected the five-mile stockhold and also witnessed the end of the line of construction in Mexico of the work.

TERRIFIC BLOWUP AT JERSEY CITY

Explosion Shakes Business District of New York.

BODIES HURLED IN RIVER

Occurs on a Jersey Central Railway Dock Just Across From the Manhattan Island Side and Huge Buildings Sway.

A terrific explosion of dynamite or powder took place on a Jersey Central railway dock just across the river from the southern end of Manhattan island, spread terror in a great area, rocked the skyscraper district of lower New York and caused a panic throughout the metropolis.

Great showers of glass from many windows in buildings of the financial district pelted pedestrians on Broadway, Church and Cortland streets.

About the railroad dock dead and dying were scattered, while a number of bodies were hurled into the Hudson river. Police and fire boats from both sides of the river soon began taking dead and wounded from the water.

Damage to government immigrant station on Ellis island resulted. Windows were smashed and many of the employees injured by fragments of flying glass.

The Catherine C., a boat, leaving her pier, adjoining the Jersey Central railway pier, was demolished, the pier completely wrecked and other boats nearby damaged.

There was much excitement in the tall Singer building. Persons in the tower at the time say they felt a perceptible sway. Several windows in building were blown in. After the explosion there was a rush for the elevators and for a time the cars were taxed to their capacity.

It was fortunate no immigrants at the time were being landed at station, as three holes, ranging from three to fifteen feet, were torn in the hall where the immigrants are inspected.

The concussion set off many fire alarms and the shrill whistles of the fire engines added to the confusion.

Father O'Reilly of Jersey City, who was near the docks, said he administered the last rites of the church to five men and one headless corpse near the pier.

The dynamite boat Catherine C. was unloading at the Jersey Central railway pier when the explosion occurred. Dead number thirty; hundreds hurt.

LEAPS WITH BABY.

Lady Does This to Escape From White Man.

Leaping from a window at her residence in Orange, Tex., with her baby clasped to her bosom Mrs. J. A. Hernandez escaped from an unknown white man, who, with a drawn razor, attempted to assault her.

The man, about thirty years of age, well dressed and carrying a magazine in one hand, knocked at the front door, and when it was opened by Mrs. Hernandez pushed his way into the room and began to ask some impertinent questions.

Learning the lady was alone in the house, save for the baby, the individual drew a razor from a pocket and attempted to approach her. Grabbing up her child Mrs. Hernandez leaped from a window. She gave the alarm, but the man succeeded in making his escape.

Finally Adopted.

July 22 next the people of Texas are to have an opportunity to vote on an amendment to the state constitution providing for statewide prohibition. By vote of 21 to 6 the senate finally passed the house joint resolution providing for the submission of the issue. Peeler sought to have adopted an amendment providing that the words, "For prohibition" and "Against prohibition," be changed to, "For statewide prohibition" and "Against statewide prohibition," but this was defeated, 21 to 9. Senators who voted against the measure on final passage were Hudspeth, Kaufman, Paulus, Peeler, Watson and Hume.

Governor Sends in Message.

In a special message to the legislature Governor Colquitt states that of the $25,000 appropriation made by the legislature two years ago about $7,000 is left, and that Attorney General Lightfoot has been using this fund to pay stenographers' hire in his office for general work. The governor contends that this appropriation cannot be spent for this purpose and that the attorney general is spending this fund contrary to law. The executive also asks for money for pay of stenographers in the pension department.

Fifty Carloads of Bear Grass.

H. M. Horton, who has a ranch a few miles southeast of Midland, Tex., has made a contract in St. Louis to deliver at various stations along the Texas and Pacific railroad fifty carloads of bear grass. It will be put in 100 pound bales. It brings $12 a ton ready for shipment. Grass is wanted for its strong fiber.

BATTLE NEAR JUAREZ.

Riderless Horses Dash In After the Engagement.

The first clash between the insurgents and the Mexican troops sent out from Juarez occurred between there and Samsa uca. Federals retreated to Juarez, bringing along their wounded. They admitted two were killed, due to exploding dynamite in wrecking a bridge. A number of riderless horses entered Juarez, however, which disproves this statement. Federals say the insurgents' losses are fifty. Federals say they met the insurgents on their way to Juarez and exploded dynamite beneath a bridge, wrecking the locomotive and killing fifty of the insurgents on board.

James Garfield, former secretary of the interior, was one of the passengers on the train which arrived at El Paso after being marooned three days when insurgents tore up the tracks. When the train was marooned food gave out and the insurgents fed them from their commissary and slaughtered beves. The insurgents had a number of wounded on board and the passengers ministered to their wants, sheets being torn up for bandages. Rebels disembarked thirty miles from Juarez and commenced preparations to attack that city.

Juarez police arrested Rafe Escobedo, assistant superintendent of terminals of the National Railways in that city, and Gaspar Vela, night telegrapher. No reason was assigned.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES.

Stretching out her hands toward those who had gathered at her coffin Mrs. Jane Pitcock, an octogenarian, caused a panic at her "funeral" in Gamaliel, Monroe county, Ky. The funeral sermon had been delivered and the lid of the coffin removed to permit relatives and friends to take the last look at what they believed a corpse. It was then that Mrs. Pitcock regained consciousness. She remained alive several hours.

In an address at Oakland, Cal., before the students of the University of California on "College Men I Have Men in the Slums and Prisons of New York," C. E. Mercer, special secretary of the Association for Colleges of North America, said: "There are 12,000 college-bred men in New York down and out through liquor and fast living. There has been a marked decrease of the proportion of graduates who fall since the prevalence of college athletics, amounting, I estimate, to 50 per cent."

Retrenchment orders of Postmaster General Hitchcock issued three months ago have been countermanded, insofar as the Cincinnati district is concerned. The order had the effect of throwing all substitute carriers, railway mail clerks and other employees of the post-office out of work. About 200 substitutes who were affected by the order return to work at once.

A Story For Young Men About to Be Married.

By EDWARD B. KNIGHT
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Sam Martindale and Theodora Trask had been engaged a week. There had been more billing and cooing and kissing in that one week than there would be in five years of the married life before them. Then Sam called a halt to look practically at the future. He was not a man to drift through life; he preferred to prearrange everything. It seemed that there was a great ocean ahead of him and Theo, of comfort or suffering, of anxiety or discord, of contentment or unhappiness, and across this ocean it became him as the head of the house, the pilot, to steer their bark. Before taking a voyage does not the mariner familiarize himself with the areas of probable storm and sunshine, of navigable water and sunken rocks? Why should not be as commander lay down on a chart the exact course the family ship should sail?

To begin at the bottom, was he to be the commander? The very fact of his asking himself the question shows the depth of his understanding. If a general is to conduct a campaign it is necessary that his word be the law for his army. Martindale realized at once that if he were to pilot the family bark he must have no interference.

Having thus settled the matter by deliberation, Martindale concluded to broach the subject to his fiancée, merely as a preliminary reconnaissance in order to feel the enemy.

"Theo," he said gravely, "since you and I are to pass our lives together it may be well for us to come to an understanding on one important point. In every government, every business, every family, in order that the wheels may run smoothly, there must be one head. I would like to know how you feel about the matter."

"It seems to me," said Theo after thought, "that we should both be head."

Martindale was not prepared for what he considered flying right in the face of the fundamental principles of order. What was the family but a miniature state? And the idea of a state having two governors! Absurd! Theo saw by the expression of his face that she had assumed too much. So she hastened to say: "Why, dearie, don't you know that a woman just loves to lean on a man for guidance? You're to be head, of course."

This was a great relief to Sam. He took his fiancée in his arms, kissed her and said:

"Sweetheart, you have no idea how happy you've made me by saying that. Our future happiness depends upon it. There must always be a head to a family. And how hard it would be for both of us if you had a disposition to usurp the husband's place."

"I would never think of such a thing."

He gave her a dozen kisses and left her, filled with joy that the basic principle of married life—in his case—had been settled without a word of dispute. Indeed, it eliminated all the rest of the problem, for since he was to be undisputed captain he had no doubt that he could guide the family bark safely.

The couple were married. There was a big wedding—gifts galore, rice throwing, a trip and at last a settling down in a home of their own. During the engagement Theo had never expressed an opinion, much less made a decision, that would have interfered with Sam's position as heir apparent to the sovereignty of the family.

Theo had long been connected with a charitable association of which she was the secretary. One morning a fortnight after the couple's return from their wedding trip she woke up with an aching of the bones. In a feverish condition and in other ways indicating that care must be taken to avoid a severe illness, perhaps death. But there was to be a meeting that day of the charitable society, and the secretary was expected to be there. Sam was astonished to see his wife preparing to go out in a storm, already ill and with the probability of coming back to face pneumonia.

"What do you mean by even thinking of going out?" he exclaimed.

"Why, dearie, they can't get on without me."

"They will get on without you. I forbid your going."

"Oh, I couldn't possibly stay at home. I'll wrap up well, wear my rubbers and keep dry. There's not a bit of danger."

Martindale sat with his morning paper on his lap, looking fixedly at his wife, while she continued to put on her belongings with as much sang froid as if she had not heard the command of her lord and master. When she was ready she took up an umbrella, bent over her husband, kissed him and went out.

"Well, by Jove! I like that!" exclaimed Sam to himself as soon as the door was closed behind his wife. It would be impossible to give an adequate description of the disappointment, chagrin, mortification and forebodings the young husband experienced at this utter disregard for his word of command as captain of the family ship. He carried out the simile thus: In the face of a storm he had ordered precautions, whereupon the crew had crowded on sail to wreck the vessel.

What was to be done?
Fight it out to a finish, conquer now or never.

When Mrs. Martindale came home from the meeting her husband was not there. He had gone to business. Time came for him to return, but his key did not rattle in the lock of the front door. He had gone to his club and was sitting with the evening paper before him, trying to persuade himself that he was reading it, but really in a mental turmoil. The question of the domestic supremacy had come up for settlement, and it must be settled—his way.

He ordered his dinner at the club and when it was served went into the dining room and ate it alone—that is, he ate a few mouthfuls; he couldn't eat any more. His wife would know where to find him, and if she wanted him very badly she would telephone for him. Then he would insist on an apology and a promise never to do so any more. After that he would go home and forgive her. It might be a good lesson for her if she would be very ill in consequence of her stupid, obstinate defiance of his order not to invite pneumonia. At one moment he almost wished this would happen: at the next he was in terror lest it should.

Dinner over, he sauntered out into the cafe, lit a cigar and—suffered. Several men he knew were there, but when he saw one of them advancing to speak to him, pretending not to see him, Sam turned and walked the other way. He hoped every minute to be called to the telephone. Whenever a waiter came toward him he looked at the man anxiously, and when the waiter passed him without the summons he desired he crushed back a moan.

But he wouldn't yield. By 9 o'clock he was in despair. He concluded that if he didn't get a message from Theo before 10 he would go home and upstairs to a room by himself without paying any attention to his wife. Meanwhile his actions had made it apparent to every waiter in the club that he was eager for a telephone message. At 9:55 he went into the coat room for his hat and coat, and when he emerged a waiter ran into him, shouting:

"You're wanted at the telephone, sir!"

Martindale ran to the booth, knocking down another waiter who was hunting him to tell him he was wanted there, brushing by three more who were making dives for him from different directions to give him the same news. Inside the booth he took up the receiver and heard in a faint, husky woman's voice:

"Is that you, dear?"

"Yes."

"I thought you must be at the club. I just called you up to say—I'm talking from the phone next the bed—that the doctor has been here to see me and said I had a high fever. That was about 6 o'clock. Since there was no one here to take care of me but the cook he telephoned for a trained nurse. I knew you must be having a nice time at your club with all your old friends, and I didn't like to spoil your fun. But nurse says that I'd better try to get some sleep now, and I preferred to tell you about it before doing so. Don't hurry home; have a good time."

"I told"—He was about to give her the usual "I told you so," but checked himself, saying instead that he would be at home as soon as he could get there.

"You were very unreasonable this morning," the voice continued, "but I have forgiven you, and you needn't trouble yourself about that at all. But don't make a noise when you come in. I don't believe I shall get any sleep, but—"

There was a click, followed by a ring, and a different woman's voice said:

"Mr. Martindale?"

"Yes."

"I'm speaking to you from the lower hall telephone. Your wife is very ill; threatened with pneumonia; temperature 104 degrees."

"I'll be there in five minutes. Why the devil didn't you?"

He dropped the receiver and bolted for the street door.

Mrs. Martindale fortunately escaped a long illness, but she was for several days in a condition not warranting her husband bringing up any other subject than toast, tea, temperature and time to take medicine. During the danger period he was in an agony of fear lest he should lose the woman who would surely dominate him through life, for this first episode bearing on the balance of power in his family had opened his eyes. It was too late to go back and choose some other woman who would permit him to assume his position as head of the family, and he wouldn't have done so if he could. He quietly made up his mind, as many another man has done before him, that in the case of woman certain laws that regulate the universe are suspended. His wife had disobeyed an order he had given her for her own good, thereby showing a perversity for which he as well as she had suffered. And for having brought upon them both this suffering, including a fifty dollar doctor's bill, she had—forgiven him!

Sam Martindale has joined the innumerable throng of married men who joke with one another about their position as head of the family and take their orders from their wives dutifully as become obedient husbands, their wives the while, or many of them, not doubting in the least that they are themselves willing slaves.

But one year brought him revenge. A small lump of flesh came who could neither walk nor talk. He hadn't even a tittle of the sense Mrs. Martindale possessed, but he assumed command of the whole household.
