

Filing Estimates of 1945 Income Next Tax Task

Taxpayers of the United States no more than get rid of one headache when another appears. They have just passed the deadline for filing final estimate of income for 1944 and are now faced with the task of filing the first estimate on this year's income. These estimates must be filed on or before March 15.

Nothing Is Next
Deal of OPA in Ricing Field

Edward R. Gholson, District Director of the Office of Price Administration, Lubbock, today made the following information available: "I said we have faced four months ago our difficult task of curbing inflation. I said that we had again repeat—that the OPA has to make many adjustments to meet the public's need for public understanding.

One of the most serious problems, we are now about to make a series of important steps. It is that of apparel, quality, and supply. Millions of consumers are being misled by the unfavorable comment—part of it knowingly wrong as to facts, perhaps a small part of it deliberately and irresponsibly.

What the average family income the nation has increased considerably there are millions of white workers and families with little or no income who have little or no buying power. There are service men's families living on meagre wages. The increased cost of living is working a great hardship on these groups.

We are sure you will agree that with the rise in clothing prices, with quality deteriorating rapidly, with less available, and with insufficient textiles to meet civilian demand, any program to remedy this situation cannot be mild. For two years now we have tried mild means. I am sure that the time has come when we must act with courage—and with a full sense of our responsibilities to the public.

Wool Vest Fitted as Medical
Kit Saves Lives of Flyers

Ten lives have been saved and possibly thousands of others will be because of a wool vest designed by an Air Force intelligence officer and sewn together by his wife in their Kansas apartment.

Behind the story of the vest is a saga of incredible heroism which followed the crash of a B-29 in the ocean off India, of torn and mangled men being literally eaten alive by sea crabs, and of ten surviving the ordeal because of the vest.

How the idea of Lieutenant Louis Jones of New Orleans, designer of the vest, resulted in saving the ten men from frightful deaths beneath the pitiless Indian sun is told in a recent magazine article.

When Lieutenant Jones, former Tulane student, read in Intelligence reports that half the men who bail out of planes, lost or forgot their first-aid equipment, he began thinking of a garment that would be right when you bailed out.

When completed, the vest contained sulfanilamide, bandages, a morphine syrette, pocket knife, fishing tackle, flashlight, maps and a book on survival. He explained to his wife what was in his mind and she sewed the vest according to his directions, finishing it just before he left for India.

Jones did not go on the first mission of the B-29 but gave the vest to Second Lieut. Joseph E. Phalon of La Crosse, Wis. Returning from their mission over Bangkok, their fuel transfer system burned out and they were forced to ditch the plane in the Bay of Bengal, about an hour's flying time from India.

Ten lives have already been saved and additional thousands may be spared because of the medical-kit vest designed by Lieutenant Louis Jones of New Orleans, shown above as pictured in the January issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

Wounds of the more seriously injured and succeeded in keeping the malive until the mate land and received help from natives.

And because of the way in which the vest proved its value, Lieutenant Jones has been directed by Brigadier General La Verne Saunders to report to headquarters to develop the idea of his vest for submission to Washington.

A brake will have been put on a dangerous inflationary trend. I know that you have been aware of this serious situation for some time.

Mr. J. A. Krug, Chairman of the War Production Board, and I have discussed this matter thoroughly. We are in complete accord. We join in hoping that we can count on your assistance. These undoubtedly are stringent measures. But I believe you will agree that none of us can afford to temporize with such a critical war time problem.

Ship-Air Cargoes
At 1000 to 1 Ratio

Although air transportation had had a phenomenal rise since the outbreak of the war, the total cargo carried by air is in no way comparable to the total carried by sea, according to the American Merchant Marine Institute.

For each pound and a half of cargo carried by air, America's fleet of freighters is carrying 2,000 pounds, and for every passenger, military or otherwise, flown overseas, the Merchant Marine is transporting one thousand.

Noting that on the cross-Himalaya air route from India to China a plane leaves every 12 minutes, the Institute disclosed that one Liberty ship a month could deliver as much material as all these planes.

According to Lt. Langdon P. Marvin, Jr., USNR, Chairman of the Air Cargo Priorities Committee of the War Production Board, the total value shipped by air was 6.42 per cent the value of all cargo transported by sea. However, the unit value of air transported cargo is 99 times that of material shipped by sea.

That sea and air transportation supplement each other, was indicated by the Institute when it pointed out that all fuel and nearly all supplies for the airlines is hauled by sea. This natural affinity is another reason why American steamship lines hope to maintain air services to supplement their surface routes.

Nine shipping companies have already filed application with the Civil Aeronautics Board for post-war services. (Continued from First page) men want to do to contact the people is in line, said Mr. Glover, and added:

PERIL IN SOLID PLANTINGS

Cities and towns should not "put all the eggs in one basket" in planning post-war programs of tree planting to beautify streets and parks. "No section of a city or suburb should be planted solidly with a single species or variety because of the danger of total loss if a serious disease appears," Dr. Curtis May of the U. S. Department of Agriculture suggested recently. The advice is timely, he thinks, when many such plans are under consideration. It is not difficult to imagine the nightmare appearance of a village planted entirely to chestnuts in the years after the chestnut blight struck, or the complete loss of entire city plantings of London planetrees because of the canker disease. Similar destruction might follow solid plantings of almost any other kind of tree.

RECORD CONVOY

The world's largest convoy, which crossed the Atlantic this past fall consisted of 167 ships and covered an area of nearly 26 square miles. After a seventeen-day crossing, the convoy arrived safely in Britain. The ships carried 1,019,829 tons of cargo, or about seventeen pounds for every living person in the United States. Cargo carried included grain, sugar, lumber, oil, molasses, steel, road vehicles, tanks, locomotives, explosives machinery, general military equipment and foodstuffs. The vehicles alone numbered more than 10,000.

G. I. Rights At The Grass Roots

Some sections of the G. I. Bill of Rights apply to veterans who will want to "turn their swords into plowshares," their machine guns into mowing machines. In particular this applies to Government guaranties of farm loans made to veterans. Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, has named the U. S. Department of Agriculture as cooperating agency in determining whether such a guarantee should be made in each individual case. Charles F. Brannan, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, is acting for the Department.

Gen'l MacArthur a Bit Too Daring, Says Togo Thomas

E. A. (Togo) Thomas, seaman first class, thinks General MacArthur was a wee bit too daring when the Yanks struck Leyte. MacArthur was off the boat and out on the beach about the same time the second wave of Americans hit, something like an hour after the first units had gone in. The outfit could use a general pretty good right at the time and Togo thought the head man exposed himself too much under the circumstances.

The Floydada seaman arrived at home last week-end on a 30-day leave, about 21 days of which he will get to spend at home with his wife, Virginia, and his father A. W. Thomas. He has been with the South Pacific fleet about two years, assigned to a cruiser that has been much in the headlines during that time. The fact that it is now in a home port indicated by Thomas' presence in Floydada and so the name of the ship is not given. Suffice to say it was the battleship on which the General and his staff rode into Leyte for the jump-off.

Togo and General MacArthur didn't exactly hold any long conversations and go over the situation together but they did rub shoulders, so to speak, on the trip, and Thomas saw all the business of the Leyte landing and took part in the navy's part of it.

Chow on the big ships like he is on is always satisfactory. They have ample room for it. Crews on the smaller ships and shore parties are the ones which you usually hear from about the poor food, he said.
