Banks Biggest Agricultural Lenders In Texas

AUSTIN — Texas banks are providing farmers and ranchers with more credit and other financial services than any other lenders, C. Truett Smith of Wylie, president of the Texas Bankers Association, said today.

Based on the 32nd annual farm lending summary of the agricultural bankers division of the American Bankers Association, T.B.A. President Smith reported that at the beginning of 1973 Texas banks were helping farmers and ranchers with $1.509 billion in loans, or 25 percent more than a year previous. This total included $1.226 billion in production loans and $28 million in farm mortgages. At the same time $606 million in farm loans was held by life insurance companies $675 million by Federal Land Banks, $461 million by Production Credit Associations and $62 million in non-real estate loans, plus $11 million in real estate loans by the Farmers Home Administration.

About 70 percent of the production credit extended by lending institutions to Texas farmers and ranchers comes from banks.

Smith said that "bankers in Texas are conscious of the large capital investments required in agriculture today and are making a concerted effort through improved lending programs to meet these changing credit demands of the state's farmers and ranchers."

The increased use of credit by agricultural interests, Smith said, has been accompanied by substantial gain in total assets of farm and ranch families. Therefore, in the aggregate, the equity position of farmers and ranchers is being maintained at a satisfactory level. Nationally, farm families have $311 billion of their own funds invested in agriculture. This represents 81 percent of their total capital requirements.

The TBA president stressed the importance of farmers and bankers working closely together to improve farm financial arrangements. He reported that almost nine out of 10 insured banks throughout the country have agricultural loans outstanding, with 87 percent of the Texas banks extending credit to farm and ranch people.

Famed Longhorn Dies At Griffin State Park

ALBANY—Longhorn fans across the state, University of Texas rooters or not, have cause for sorrow.

Alas, the matriarch of the "Official State Longhorn Herd" was headed for that last roundup in the sky. "Hook Horn," better known as the mother of the University of Texas mascot "Bevo," passed quietly from

Forty-Four Percent Texas Schools Raised Taxes This Year

AUSTIN — Forty-four percent of the local school district officials responding to a recent survey indicated they had to increase local school taxes this year to balance their budgets.

Seventy-five percent of the respondents said they will have to raise local taxes in 1974-75 just to keep school programs at their present levels.

The Texas State Teachers Association sent a questionnaire or school finance to city and county superintendents in all 1,145 districts in the state, and got answers from 725 of them.

Twenty-nine percent of the respondents said they had to curtail some of their instructional programs this year, and 55 percent foresee program cutbacks in 1974-75.

this veil of tears while on a grassy knoll overlooking historic Ft. Griffin State Park, her birthplace and home for the past 23 years. Despite her advanced years and preferential treatment, she never became docile and was always approached with care because she would swing her horns at anyone who came near.

Parks and Wildlife Department personnel dubbed her "Hook Horn" because of her unusual horn configuration: one curved majestically into the air while the other drooped vampirishly in front of her face.

When parks personnel inquired of her health on Sept. 27, she was grazing like any dowager cow.

However, on the 28th, she was found lying on her side unable to raise her proud head.

A veterinarian was summoned to no avail and thus ended a chapter in the history of Texas' longhorn herd.

Fuels, Fertilizers for 1974 Fuels and fertilizers may be in short supply in 1974, says an economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The fertilizer situation is due to increased production with the release of set-aside acres and the strong foreign demand.

levels.

Other findings of the survey:

More than half the respondents said they are using reserve funds to meet 1973-74 budgets; two-thirds will do so next year; and many others said no reserve funds are available this year.

Thirty-two percent of the respondents indicated they had to cut back this year on the number of faculty members employed, and 68 percent said such cutbacks would be required in 1974-75.

Forty-two percent of the respondents predicted they would have to reduce local supplements of state aid for teacher salaries in 1974-75.

What One Person Can Do

Robert Jenkins

Detective

Robert Jenkins thinks he knows why many small boys in his Miami, Florida, district steal. "I'd ask them why," he explains, "and they'd tell me, 'Well, I don't have any clothes, and I don't have anything to eat.' I'd check our files, and it was true. The majority of the houses they'd break into, they'd take soft drinks, food, change."

Officer Jenkins quietly befriended the youngsters. He collected clothing from friends and used his own lunch money to buy sneakers for boys who would skip school rather than go to class barefooted.

"It hurts a boy's pride to be a charity case," he points out. "I collect good used clothes and take it to the boys myself. They accept things from me, because they know they can pay me back... They tell me things they'd tell no one else. That's why I've solved more burglaries than the rest of my detail combined."

Detective Jenkins spends a lot of his off-duty hours in Miami's inner-city area, too. "If I see a group of them on a corner," he says, "I stop the car and get out and talk with them. The most important thing, when you're driving down the street, whether or not you're in uniform, whenever you see a group of kids, wave at them. It makes them feel they belong. That's all they want."

In 1972, Officer Jenkins was named Dade County's Outstanding Man of the Year. It was the first time the honor had gone to a police officer.

Robert Jenkins says, "If you catch kids when they're young and talk to them, you can save one and then another. When the younger ones see the older ones confide in you, they know they can trust you." Anyone can generate that kind of trust. Are we willing to begin changing the world one youngster at a time.

Another advice columnist keeps insisting I am "sick." She says: "Thousands of people are written asking me where they can get help. They must consider themselves twisted, and I am making for help. Occasionally I hear who are at peace with themselves, but I am far between. I believe the majority of people would be straight if they were really free to be so."

Dear Abby? L. A. TIMES READER

OK: I say if a heterosexual had been told that his preference for the opposite sex was a problem, and a disgrace to himself, he would ask for help on how to "straighten out." Is a problem because an unenlightened person is a problem, but I have received letters (not just "occasionally") from gay people who wouldn't be straight if they had a choice. It is to be allowed to love in their own way, the charge that they are "sick" and need help.

I am a 57-year-old grandfather, happy in my life, which, tho turbulent at times, has lasted for 30 years.

Comment on a letter you printed about this man who was a widower and objected to sleeping in a bed which he slept with his former wife, now married. He is disturbed by the memories her husband had of her. You approved of her getting rid of the bed and that new wife are out of your minds. What man himself? Were not his lips, his arms, his hands also used in making love to his first wife?

Look at this wonderful old love-filled bed out there. It is used merchandise and yet sleep with the used merchandise? The female mind I shall never understand.

ANK: Move over. Freud admitted that he was a bit of a nut. But I'll bet a lot of women would understand it.

As of this treatment should get the message. "Stuck" couple, and you'll soon be [as my wife]... "UNSTUCK"

FLOYD PHILOSOPHER

Expound On The Constitution Without Benefit Of Scholarship

Editor's note: The Floyd Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm gets into some deep matters this week, more or less.
Dear editor:

This is not only out of my field but also over my head but for the past few days I've been struggling over how we can use our Constitutional scholars.

According to what I've been reading in the newspapers, there is a great division of opinion in Washington and around the country over what the Constitution says on such matters as whether or not the President has the right to withhold his tapes even if they might contain evidence in a criminal trial, or over the question of whether a Vice President can be indicted before he's impeached.

Some Washington officials say yes to both questions, others say no, so what do they do? They call in outstanding Constitutional scholars. And what do the scholars say?

Some say yes, some say no.
In other words, after a lifetime spent in studying the Constitution, the scholars can't come any closer to a unanimous agreement than the rest of us, most of whom have never read the Constitution all the way through in the first place.

I'm not going to say that the scholars have wasted their time, but I suspect they've been given the wrong questions. You don't have to memorize the Constitution to know it doesn't say anything about tapes, but if you got as far as the 8th grade you know it says all men are created equal, not necessarily in talent and brain power but equal before the law, and it doesn't excuse even Presidents and Vice Presidents from this splendid treatment of the human race.

I didn't intend to get so serious. I just wanted to point out that when you consult more than one scholarly authority on any subject you're likely to come out with more than one answer. If you want to know what the Constitution says on most issues, figure out what would be fair and you'll find that's what it was trying to say.

I don't think the Constitution says anything about this, but after a lifetime of scholarly studying of the matter, I've noticed that in the long run you wind up tired-er than in the short run.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The Thief In The Church

"I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot, I would thou were cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth. Rev. 3:15-16.

The crime and sin of stealing seem to be as old as the human race. The Decalogue, which is the oldest or one of the oldest codes of law for the government of man, contains the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal." Our newspapers are filled today with the activities of robbers and bandits. Occasionally we hear of carpet Communionware, Bibles or other things taken from the House of God. The loss of these things is usually felt keenly, not always because of the intrinsic value of the stolen articles, but because of their memorial and sentimental attachments. It is deplorable that stealthy hands should invade the Temple of the Most High.

But the thief that we have before us says, I care not for any of these things. Yet I work day and night. I never weary. My morale and my spirit are kept up because the fruits of my labors are many. I work among the rich and the poor, the high and the low. I am no respecter of persons. Wealth and position count naught with me. Men and women of every station and walk in life are the prey of my intrigue. The victims of my depredations are found in every community, though in some places there are more than in others who set no safe-guard against my coming. There are even some who embrace me with open arms. Yea, they who have felt my hand laid upon them are legion.

I have been especially active in churches, for churches that are true to their task are my most inveterate and relentless enemies. But in spite of their efforts to thwart me, I make repeated and unexpected inroads upon their plans and programs.

With the help of some of my trusty associates I have even succeeded in closing the doors of many houses of worship, some of which are left to stand as mute witnesses of a better day. Sometimes they are torn down or converted into places of industry, business, amusement, not always in keeping with the higher ideals of their former usage. Whenever we succeed in closing the doors of a church we laugh, and there is revelry and boisterous rejoicing in our den.

I believe that I can claim without fear of being accused of usurpation that I am the most damning and deadening influence with which the leaders of the Christian church have to contend. I have sapped many congregations of their vitality and their spirituality, so that they have ceased to be much of a power for good in their respective communities. I think that I have scored quite a number of points toward victory when I can get an elder or a deacon or a number of them to work with me and for me.

Pastors hate me, but even some of them are entrapped by my cunning. I often reduce their influence by more than half; I pride myself greatly when I can reduce it to almost nothing. Ministers who take their tasks seriously spend many anxious hours and use up much precious energy in efforts to devise ways and means whereby to hinder me in my work. Still I go on and rob them of what they most need to make them successful. I deprive them of having churches filled with expectant, responsive, worshipping people.

What? You ask me my name? Do you mean to say that I have been stalking in your midst everyday for years and you do not know me? Well then, I must tell you who I am: I am INDIFFERENCE.

And what is indifference? It is the spirit of "I don't care." It is the lack of concern. It is the attitude expressed in the words, "What is that to Me? See thou to it." The priest and levite manifested indifference when they "passed by on the other side," when confronted with a case of dire human need.

Indifference is being neither cold nor hot. "I know thy works that thou art neither cold nor hot, I would that thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth. Rev. 3:15-16.

Station Scientists Eyeing Control For Whiteweed measures for the profit-robbing plant.

"The whiteweed has always been in the West Texas area because of its tolerance of arid conditions," he points out. "But only within the last decade has the plant become predominant among the weed pest problems."

"The increase mainly is due to three main factors," says Abernathy.

"First, preplant incorporated herbicides commonly used in cotton do not effectively control whiteweed seedlings."

"Second," he adds, herbicides drastically reduce the whiteweed's competition, annual weeds.

"Third, the old reliable but costly farming practices of cultivation and hand-hoe-ing have been greatly curtailed with farmers' increased reliance upon herbicides. This change has allowed deep-rooted perennial weeds to escape, since regular herbicidal applications do not control them."

Whiteweed roots, says the research, may penetrate the soil to depths of as much as eight feet, with the weed growing from the previous year's roots.

The weed itself contributes to the problem by producing a large supply of seed which helps to spread the plant into new areas, he adds.

Different herbicides have been tested for control of whiteweed, the scientist explains. One of the biggest obstacles to finding the solution is that the chemicals which have the best control also burn or kill the upper portions of the cotton plants.

Reports Abernathy, "As for this year's growing season, some growers obtained effective whiteweed suppression with a mixture of diuron and MSMA applied as a spot treatment."

"Also, a new compound known as Roundup was very effective in giving season-long control when applied as a postemergence spray. However," he added, "the Roundup herbicide is still in the experimental stages and is not yet on the commercial market."

Another promising technique for season-long control, the researcher adds, is an application of a preplant herbicide such as Treflan about six to eight inches under the soil surface prior to cotton planting. The application is made with a specially designed plow with spray nozzles mounted beneath large sweeps," he says.

"These chemicals are broadcast beneath the soil surface, providing a protective herbicide layer against the whiteweed root's upward growth. If the herbicide is applied correctly, the weed is suppressed during the entire growing season."

The weed control research program is being conducted at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center just northeast of Lubbock and in several commercial fields within a 100-mile radius of Lubbock.

Same Game, New Rules For Ag Producers

COLLEGE STATION — "Who's on first, what's on second?"

"Some farmers and ranchers may be in a quandry over the present state of affairs, but the ball game hasn't changed — just the rules," says Cecil Parker, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"For the first time in a long while, agricultural producers find themselves in a situation where both costs and prices are rising. In recent years, production costs have risen while prices received for agricultural products remained generally stable. But now prices are also moving up and producers are finally seeing the outcome of the ball game in a different light."

The Texas A&M University System economist points out that farm prices, costs and demands for farm products have reached a new plateau during the first half of 1973. But how long will this situation continue?

Parker expects present conditions in the farm economics picture to continue until at least 1975.

"Record crops are expected this year and in 1974 and there should be no drastic change in domestic and foreign demands for agricultural commodities during the next two years."

According to the economist, U.S. farmers could realize a gross income of about $85 billion this year. This would be a 23 percent, or $19.5 billion, increase over 1972. Of course, production expenses have also shown a record increase and could be up about $12 billion by the end of the year.

During the first six months of 1973, costs of farm-originated production inputs—feed, seed and feeder cattle—averaged 35 percent above the first half of 1972.

At the same time, production inputs of non-farm origin—fertilizer, fuel, equipment—increased only 7 percent during the first half of 1973 compared to the same period last year.

What do the coming months hold as far as farm costs are concerned?

"Record crops this fall should lower feed costs somewhat," believes Parker.

FARM REVIEW

Soils Information Available For Disposal Systems

A septic tank can either give satisfaction or be a disaster, depending on the soil type. Rapid expansion in the suburbs and a new emphasis on rural living has greatly increased the number of septic tanks being installed. Although septic tank disposal systems have been in use for several decades in both rural and suburban communities, many costly and avoidable mistakes are made.

The normal system is one in which the sewer line leads to an underground septic tank in the yard and the overflow disperses over a large area through drain tile or perforated pipe. The tile or pipe is laid in trenches or in a seepage bed and covered with soil. The soil is planted to grass, and no part of the system is visible.

Such a system should function well for many years if properly installed and maintained and if the soil in the disposal area is satisfactory. If the soil is not satisfactory, the sewage disposal systems will not work properly regardless of how well it is installed.

In planning a septic tank sewage disposal system, first find out if the soil can absorb the liquid sewage, or effluent, that flows from the tank. Some soils absorb effluent rapidly, others slowly.

A soil survey can help in planning a disposal system. This survey, made by SCS, includes descriptions of soils, interpretations for soil use, and maps showing the location and extent of each kind of soil. In some places, the soil changes within the distance of a few feet.

Soil surveys point out the limitations of the soils and the hazards in using them for different purposes. Surveys published in recent years give information useful in planning non-farm soil uses, including septic tank disposal systems.

Further information is available in agriculture Information Bulletin 349, "Soils and Septic Tanks," available from Soil Conservation Service offices.

When Will We Import Water To West Texas?

"The question is no longer can we import water to West Texas? The real question is when will we import water to West Texas?"

That was the summation of Water, Inc.'s statement to the West Texas Water Resources Council at its initial meeting in Lubbock, a statement that updated the benefit/cost ratio of the water import plan to demonstrate that when calculated on the basis of current prices, such a plan could well be economically feasible.

Tommy Swann, Water, Inc. staff economist highlighted a study he has just completed showing a benefit/cost ratio with benefits totaling almost three times greater than federal agency ratios developed for the plan to import water to West Texas and Eastern New Mexico from the Mississippi River. Explaining that the federal agencies used average 1965-69 prices received and paid by farmers in developing benefits and compared them to 1972 construction costs, Swann substituted current prices for developing both sides (benefits and costs) of a new ratio, showing possible benefits as high as $2.88 for each $1.00 cost. (Swann used the same formulas and computations for developing his study as those used by the federal agencies, substituting only current prices for those used in the original study.)

Water, Inc., cited two major stumbling blocks in the way of importation of water to the area, both at the federal level. One was the need for realistic federal standards for evaluating proposed projects, standards that recognize all levels of benefits, and the other the final report of the National Water Commission recommending that the federal government virtually remove itself from the field of water development.

Grain Sorghum Producers To Host Foreign Buyers

U.S. grain sorghum is attracting the interest of increasing numbers of buyers from around the world. The market promotion work of Grain Sorghum Producers Association and Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board is showing returns with substantially larger exports of grain sorghum.

GSPA-TGSPB will host nearly one hundred foreign buyers of grain in October and November of this year. Teams of feed company representatives and government officials from Taiwan, Japan, Germany and Korea will be touring the grain sorghum production area of West Texas.

Elbert Harp, GSPA executive director said, "We are always happy to have these teams visit us. It is a wonderful opportunity to show them what grain sorghum is, since it is not as well known in other parts of the world."

Tours of the High Plains production and feeding area have been arranged for these visitors. Conferences with animal nutritionists at Texas Tech University will be held for the purpose of acquainting these potential customers of U.S. sorghum with its feed grain value.

GSPA is a member of the U.S. Feed Grains Council, through which it overseas market development work is conducted in virtually every part of the world.

When the Association's foreign market development work began, little grain sorghum was being exported.

The first foreign visitors to arrive this fall were eight members of a team from Taiwan which arrived in Lubbock Sept. 30. They will be followed by a 20 man team from Germany, Oct. 3, consisting of mixed feed manufacturers and livestock producers. A high level government team from Japan arrives Oct. 4.

Additional teams from Japan and one from Korea will be visiting later in October and November.
