PICTURES OF 3,500 YEARS AGO

Reproductions of Photographs Taken in the Tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, in the Times Today

Have you ever tried to picture for yourself the civilization that existed before the time of David, second king of Israel? Have you tried to imagine the kind of clothes people wore 3,500 years ago, the kind of furniture they used.

Over in Egypt, in the valley of the Nile, there was recently opened the tomb of Pharaoh Tut-Ankh-Amen, the ruler of Egypt 3,500 years ago, and inside this tomb there was found vast quantities of things that picture the civilization of the ancient world.

It is a rare privilege for the Sanderson Times to present to our readers this week a series of pictures made from photographs taken inside this tomb, showing the many interesting objects which it contained. In these pictures you will see much of the story of that ancient civilization which passed away more than a thousand years before the birth of Christ, a civilization that ante-dates the pyramids by several hundred years.

In these pictures you will find much that is of intense interest, and you will add to your own interest in the subject by talking about them with your friends and neighbors.

PLAY POSTPONED

The play that was to be given by the Seniors of the Sanderson High School Friday night, March 9th, entitled "Deacon Dubbs," was postponed until Friday night, March 16th, at the School Auditorium, at 8 o'clock. Everybody is urged to come out and enjoy a few hours of laughter by Sanderson's future citizens.

Rev. McMillan Refuses Call to Del Rio

The decision of Rev. J. A. McMillan to remain as pastor of the Presbyterian church at this place, following an earnest call from the Presbyterian church at Del Rio to the pastorate of that church was sincerely gratifying to the local congregation and to his congregation at Sanderson. We believe the citizenship of the town generally are pleased that he will remain here, for he is appreciated both as churchman and citizen by all who know him. The Del Rio field is larger and more remunerative and would no doubt be a step toward even a larger work; but self-effacement is ever the lot of the consecrated minister.—The Alpine Avalanche.

So far as the Times has been able to learn, the decision of Rev. McMillan to refuse the Del Rio call and remain at his post, meets with the hearty approval of his Sanderson congregation. Mr. McMillan also has many friends here outside of his membership who are pleased to know that he will remain with his present charge.

W. J. Banner was in from his ranch on the Pecos Wednesday. He reported everything lovely in that part of the county. Mr. Banner has just finished kidding his goats, and stated that he had remarkable good success and the flock of kids were fine and healthy.

BODKIN-FLETCHER

At the home of the bride's parents last Sunday afternoon, March 3rd, at four o'clock, in the presence of relatives, Miss Cecile Bodkin and Mr. Horace Fletcher were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. Joe W. Bickley, pastor of the First Methodist Church officiating.

The bride is the winsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Bodkin. On the completion of her high school work here in 1921, she entered Tyler College from which place she graduated. For the past year she has been employed by the Sanderson Telephone Company as operator. Her winning ways and pleasant disposition has won for her a large circle of friends who wish her well on her journey through life.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fletcher of Valentine. For several years he has been employed by the G. H. & S. A. Railway Co. He is a young man of sterling qualities and of steady, industrious habits. By his congeniality he has made a host of friends who wish him success and happiness.

The Times joins with the many friends of the happy couple in extending congratulations and best wishes.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

Not any social affair of the year can surpass the Universal Social given by a committee of ladies at the Masonic Hall on Tuesday afternoon. At 4 o'clock the doors were opened revealing the tasty decorations of linens, flowers and crepe paper in the class colors of the honoree, Mrs. Leo Roy Grigsby, a recent bride.

After Mrs. Vadae McLymont favored the guests with several selections on the piano, two qu int colored ladies from down "darky town" arrived with a high basket of laundry to be delivered to the lady proving ownership as they had forgotten the owner's name. Finally on recognizing Mrs. Grigsby as the party to whom the laundry belonged, Linda and Liza requested the fortunate lady to check and examine the articles as they needed the money to pay railroad fare to the cotton fields in east Texas. Mrs. Beezley as Linda and Mrs. Harper as Liza were perfect actors and very genial ladies of color. Finding so many of the settlers wanted to send silver, cut glass, china and kitchen ware to the bride they very graciously "brought" the gifts along with the "wash." The happy honoree found every article in perfect condition, tho' couldn't claim the sox that Liza put in by mistake. The bride was speechless with surprise and many moments was spent examining the table of beautiful gifts the colored ladies brought, for they were of the nicest ever received by a bride.

Delicious refreshments of fruit jello with whipped cream, cake, and chocolate were served by Mesdames Newton Taylor, Ruben Mussey and Lillian Beezley. Thirty ladies were present and each voted the hostesses as royal entertainers.

The Bohlman Case

The damage suit of Mrs. W. P. Bohlman against the G. H. & S. A. Railway, asking $50,000 damage for the death of her husband alleged to have been caused by the explosion of an engine near Paisano about a year ago, and which suit was transferred from El Paso to Brewster county on a plea of personal privilege by the defendant railroad company, came up for trial at the recent session of the District Court at Alpine. The case resulted in a mistrial and the jury was discharged by the Court after having been out for two days. The Times has been informed that the jury stood 7 to 5 in favor of the defendant.

A NEW GALE

SYNOPSIS—Seeking gold in the desert, "Cameron," solitary prospector, forms a partnership with an unknown man whom he later learns is Jonas Warren, father of a girl whom Cameron wronged, but later married, back in Illinois. Cameron's explanations appease Warren, and the two proceed together. Taking refuge from a sandstorm in a cave, Cameron discovers gold, but too late; both men are dying. Cameron leaves evidence in the cave, of their discovery of gold, and personal documents. Richard Gale, adventurer, in Casita, Mexican border town, meets George Thorne, lieutenant in the Ninth cavalry, old college friend. Thorne tells Gale he is there to save Mercedes Castaneda, Spanish girl, his affianced wife, from Rojas, Mexican bandit. Gale "roughhouses" Rojas and his gang, with the help of two American cowboys, and he, Mercedes and Thorne escape. A bagman calls from the fort orders Thorne to his regiment. He leaves Mercedes under Gale's protection. The pair, aided by the cowboys, Chase Ladd and Jim Lash, arrive in safety at a ranch known as Forlorn River, across the border. The fugitives are at Tom Belding's place. Belding is immigration inspector. Living with him are his wife and step-daughter, Nell Burton. Gale, with Ladd and Lash, take service with Belding as rangers. Gale telling Belding the cause of his being a wanderer, a misunderstanding with his father concerning the son's business abilities.

CHAPTER V

A Desert Rose.

When Dick lay down that night he was fully conscious of pain and headache—that he did not feel well. Despite this, and a mind thronging with memories and anticipations, he succumbed to weariness and soon fell asleep.

It was light when he awoke, but a strange brightness seen through what seemed blurred eyes. A moment passed before his mind worked clearly, and then he had to make an effort to think. He was dizzy. When he essayed to lift his right arm, an excruciating pain made him desist. Then he discovered that his arm was badly swollen, and the hand had burst its bandages. The injured member was red, angry, inflamed, and twice its normal size. He felt hot all over, and a raging headache consumed him.

Belding came stamping into the room.

"Hello, Dick. Do you know it's late? How's the busted fist this morning?"

Dick tried to sit up, but his effort was a failure. He got about half up, then fell himself weakly sliding back.

"I guess—I'm pretty sick," he said.

He saw Belding lean over him, feel his face, and speak, and then everything seemed to drift, not into darkness, but into some region where he had dim perceptions of gray moving things, and of voices that were remote. Then there came an interval when all was blank. When he again unclosed his eyes the room was sunny, and cool with a fragrant breeze that blew through the open door. Dick felt better; but he had no particular desire to move or talk or eat.

On the next day he was very much improved.

"We've been afraid of blood poisoning," said Belding. "But my wife thinks the danger's past. You'll have to rest that arm for a while."

Ladd and Jim came peeping in at the door.

"Come in, boys. He can have company—the more the better—if it'll keep him content. He mustn't move, that's all."

The cowboys entered, slow, easy, cool. Kind-voiced.

"Shore it's tough," said Ladd, after he had greeted Dick. "You look used up."

Jim Lash wagged his half-bald, sunburned head. "Musta been more'n tough for Rojas."

"Gale, Laddy tells me one of our neighbors, fellow named Carter, is going to Casita," put in Belding. "Here's a chance to get word to your friend the soldier."

"Oh, that will be fine!" exclaimed Dick. "I declare I'd forgotten Thorne. . . . How is Miss Castaneda? I hope—"

"She's all right, Gale. Been up and around the patio for two days. She and Nell made friends at once. I'll call them in."

like a phantom of happier years, the sweetness of Nell's face was there, and infinitely more of beauty than had been transmitted to the daughter. Dick believed Mrs. Belding's friendship and motherly love were worth much striving to win, entirely aside from any more selfish motive. He decided both would be hard to get.

Toward evening Gale heard the tramp of horses and Belding's hearty voice. Presently the rancher strode in upon Gale, shaking the gray dust from his broad shoulders and waving a letter.

"Hello, Dick! Good news and bad!" he said, putting the letter in Dick's hand. "Had no trouble finding your friend Thorne. Looked like he'd been drunk for a week! Say, he nearly threw a fit. I never saw a fellow so wild with joy. He made sure you and Mercedes were lost in the desert. He wrote two letters, which I brought. Casita is one kind of a place these days. I tried to get your baggage, and think I made a mistake. We're going to see travel toward Forlorn River. The federal garrison got re-enforcements from somewhere, and is holding out."

"Do you think we'll have trouble here?" asked Dick, excitedly.

"Sure. Some kind of trouble sooner or later," replied Belding gloomily. "Anyway, my boy, as soon as you can hold a horse and a gun you'll be on the job, don't mistake me."

"With Laddy and Jim?" asked Dick, trying to be cool.

"Sure. With them and me, and by yourself."

Dick drew a deep breath, and even after Belding had departed he forgot for a moment about the letter in his hand. Then he unfolded the paper and read:

"Dear Dick—You're more than saved my life. To the end of my days you'll be the one man to whom I owe everything. Words fail to express my feelings. This must be a brief note. Belding is waiting, and I used up most of the time writing to Mercedes.

"I'm leaving Mercedes in your charge, subject, of course, to advice from Belding. Take care of her, Dick, for my life is wrapped up in her. By all means keep her from being seen by Mexicans. We are sitting tight here—nothing doing.

"If things quiet down before my commission expires, I'll get leave of absence, run out to Forlorn River, marry my beautiful Spanish princess, and take her to a civilized country, where, I opine, every son of a gun who sees her will lose his head, and drive me mad. Dick, harken to these glad words: Rojas is in the hospital. I was interested to inquire. He had a smashed finger, a dislocated collar bone, three broken ribs, and a fearful gash on his face. He'll be in the hospital for a month. Dick, when I meet that pig-headed dad of yours I'm going to give him the surprise of his life.

"Send me line whenever any one comes in from F. L. and include Mercedes' letter in yours. Take care of her, Dick, and may the future hold in store for you some of the sweetness I know now! Faithfully yours,

"THORNE."

While Dick was eating his supper, with appetite rapidly returning to normal, Ladd and Jim came in. Their friendly advances were singularly welcome to Gale, but he was still backward. He allowed himself to show that he was glad to see them, and he listened. It took no keen judge of human nature to see that horses constituted Ladd's ruling passion.

"Shore it's a cinch Beldin' is agoin' to lose some of them animals of his," he said. "You can search me if I don't think there'll be more doin' on the border here than along the Rio Grande."

"Look-a-here, Laddy; you can't believe all you hear," replied Jim, seriously. "I reckon we mightn't have any trouble."

"Back up, Jim. Shore you're standin' on your pride. There's more doin' than the raidin' of a few horses. An' Forlorn River is goin' to get hers!"

Another dawn found Gale so much recovered that he arose and looked after himself; not, however, without considerable difficulty and rather disheartening twinges of pain.

Some time during the morning he heard the girls in the patio and called to ask if he might join them. He received one response, a mellow, "Si, senior." It was not as much as he wanted, but considering that it was enough, he went out. In the shade of a beautiful tree, he found the girls, Mercedes sitting in a hammock, Nell upon a blanket.

"What a beautiful tree!" he exclaimed. "I never saw one like that. What is it?"

"Palo verde," replied Nell.

"Senior, palo verde means 'green tree,'" added Mercedes.

Little by little Dick learned details of Nell's varied life. She had lived in many places. As a child she remembered Lawrence, Kansas, where she studied for several years. Then she moved to Stillwater, Oklahoma, from there to Austin, Texas, and on to Waco, where her mother met and married Belding. They lived in New Mexico while in Tucson, Arizona, in Douglas, and finally had come to lonely Forlorn River.

"Mother could never live in one place any length of time," said Nell. "And since we've been in the South-west she has never ceased trying to find some trace of her father. He was last heard of in Nogales fourteen years ago. She thinks grandfather was lost in the Sonora desert. . . . And every place we go is worse. Oh, I love the desert. But I'd like to go back to Lawrence—or to see Chicago or New York—some of the places Mr. Gale speaks of. . . . I remember the college at Lawrence, though I was only twelve. I saw races—and once real football. . . . Mr. Gale, of course, you've seen games?"

"Yes, a few," replied Dick, and he laughed a little. It was on his lips then to tell her about some of the famous games in which he had participated. But he refrained from exulting himself. There was little, however, of the color and sound and cheer, of the violent action and rush and battle incidental to a big college football game that he did not succeed in making Mercedes and Nell feel just as if they had been there. They hung breathless and wide-eyed upon his words.

Some one else was present at the latter part of Dick's narrative. The moment he became aware of Mrs. Belding's presence he remembered fancying he had heard her call, and now he was certain she had done so. Mercedes and Nell, however, had been and still were oblivious to everything except Dick's recital. He saw Mrs. Belding cast a strange, intent glance upon Nell, then turn and go silently through the patio.

Dick was haunted by the strange expression he had caught on Mrs. Belding's face, especially the look in her eyes. It had been one of repressed pain liberated in a flash of certainty. The mother had seen how far he had gone on the road of love. Perhaps she had seen more—even more than he dared hope.

CHAPTER VI

The Vaquero.

Toward evening of a lowering December day, some fifty miles west of Forlorn River, a horseman rode along an old, dimly defined trail.

This lonely horseman bestrode a steed of magnificent build, perfectly white except for a dark bar of color running down the noble head from ears to nose. Sweated dust stained the long flanks. The horse had been running. He was lean, gaunt, worn, a huge machine of muscle and bone, beautiful only in head and mane, a weight-carrier, a horse strong and fierce like the desert that he had bred him.

The rider fitted the horse as he fitted the saddle. He was a young man of exceedingly powerful physique, wide-shouldered, long-armed, big-legged. His lean face, where it was not red, blistered and peeling, was the hue of bronze. He had a dark eye, a falcon gaze, roving and keen. His jaw was prominent and set, mastiff-like; his lips were stern. It was youth with its softness not yet quite burned and hardened away that kept the whole cast of his face from being ruthless.

This young man was Dick Gale, but not the listless traveler, nor the lounging wanderer who, two months before, had by chance dropped into Casita. The desert had changed Gale, and had drawn him into its crucible. The desert had multiplied weeks into years. Heat, thirst, hunger, loneliness, toil, fear, ferocity, pain—he knew them all. He had felt them all—the white sun, with its glazed, cooling, lurid fire; the caked split lips and rasping, dry-puffed tongue; the sickening ache in the pit of his stomach; the insupportable silence, the empty space, the utter desolation, the contempt of life; the watch and wait, the dread of ambush, the swift flight; the fierce pursuit of men wild as Bedouins and as fleet, the willingness to deal sudden death, the pain of a poison thorn, the stinging fear of being drawn into its cruel trap.

Ladd's prophecy of trouble on the border had been mild compared to what had become the actuality. With rebel occupancy of the garrison at Casita, outlaws, bandits, raiders in rioting bands had spread westward. Many a dark-skinned raider bestrode one of Belding's fast horses; and, indeed, all except his selected white thoroughbreds had been stolen. So the job of the rangers had become more than a patrolling of the boundary line to keep Japanese and Chinese from being smuggled into the United States.

On this December afternoon the three rangers, as often, were separated. Lash was far to the westward of Sonoyta, somewhere along Camino del Diablo, that terrible Devil's road, where many desert wayfarers had perished. Ladd had long been overdue in a prearranged meeting with Gale. The fact that Ladd had not shown up miles west of the Papago well was significant.

Gale dismounted to lead his horse, to go forward to the next waterhole. He had ridden thirty miles since morning, and he was tired, and a not entirely healed wound in his hip made one leg drag a little. A mile up the arroyo, near its head, lay the Papago well. The need of water for his horse entailed a risk that otherwise he could have avoided. The well was on Mexican soil. Gale distinguished a faint light flickering through the thin, sharp foliage. Campers were at the well, and whoever they were, no doubt they had prevented Ladd from meeting Gale. Ladd had gone back to the next waterhole, or maybe he was hiding in an arroyo to the eastward, awaiting developments.

Gale turned his horse, not without urge of iron arm and persuasive speech, for the desert steed scented water, and plodded back to the edge of the arroyo, where in a secluded circle of mesquite he halted. The horse snorted his relief at the removal of the heavy, burdened saddle and accoutrements. Gale poured the contents of his larger canteen into his hat and held it to the horse's nose. "Drink, Sol," he said.

It was but a drop for a thirsty horse. However, Blanco Sol rubbed a wet muzzle against Gale's hand in appreciation. Gale loved the horse, and was loved in return. They had saved each other's lives, and had spent long days and nights of desert solitude together.

The spot of secluded ground was covered with bunches of grama grass upon which Sol began to graze. Gale made a long halter of his lariet to keep the horse from wandering in search of water. Next Gale kicked off the cumbersome chaparreros, with their flapping, tripping folds of leather over his feet, and drawing a long rifle from his saddle sheath, he slipped away into the shadows. In the soft sand his steps made no sound. The twinkling light vanished occasionally, like a Jack-o'-lantern, and when it did show it seemed still a long way off. Gale was not seeking trouble or inviting danger. Water was the thing that drove him. He must see who these campers were, and then decide how to give Blanco Sol a drink.

Stooping low, with bushy mesquites between him and the fire, Gale advanced. The coyotes were in full cry. Gale heard the tramping, stamping thumps of many hoofs. The sound worried him. Foot by foot he advanced, and finally began to crawl. The nearer he approached the head of the arroyo, where the well was located, the thicker grew the desert vegetation. He secured a favorable position, and then rose to peep from behind his covert.

He saw a bright fire, not a cooking fire, for that would have been low and red, but a crackling blaze of mesquite. Three men were in sight, all close to the burning sticks. They were Mexicans and of the coarse type of raiders, rebels, bandits that Gale had expected to see. A glint of steel caught his eye. Three short, shaly carbines leaned against a rock. A little to the left, within the circle of light, stood a square house made of adobe bricks. This house was a Papago Indian habitation, and a month before had been occupied by a family that had been murdered or driven off by a roving band of outlaws. A rude corral showed dimly in the edge of twilight, and from a black mass within came the snort and stamp and whinny of horses.

Gale took in the scene in one quick glance, then sank down at the foot of the mesquite. He had naturally expected to see more men. But the situation was by no means new. This was one, or part of one, of the raider bands harrying the border. They were stealing horses, or driving a herd already stolen. Gale revolved questions in mind. Had this trio of outlaws run across Ladd? It was not likely, for in that event they might not have been so comfortable and carefree in camp. Were they waiting for more members of their gang? That was very probable. With Gale, however, the most important consideration was how to get his horse to water. Sol must have a drink if it cost a fight. There was stern reason for Gale to hurry eastward along the trail. He thought it best to go back to where he had left his horse and not make any decisive move until daylight.

With the same noiseless care he had exercised in the advance, Gale retreated until it was safe for him to rise and walk on down the arroyo. He found Blanco Sol contentedly grazing. Gale carried his saddle, blankets and bags into the lee of a little grass-covered mound, from around which the wind had cut the soil; and here, in a wash, he raised building a fire. By this time the wind was piercingly cold. Gale's hands were numb, and he moved them to and fro in the little blaze. Then he made coffee in a cup, cooked some slices of bacon on the end of a stick, and took a couple of hard biscuits from a sand-bag. Of these his meal consisted. After that he removed the halter from Blanco Sol, intending to leave him free to graze for a while.

"A crippled Vaquero! Why the h— I did you saddle yourself with him!" roared Belding.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE FLOUR'S COMPLAINT

"I can't help but think it is a pity," said the flour in the flour barrel.

Its cover was off and it was talking to the apples in another barrel near by.

"What is the trouble?" asked one of the apples.

"Well," said the flour, "I heard some people talking and one of them said: 'Oh, I saw the first little spring wild flower today, how it did rejoice my heart.'"

"Now that made me feel quite angry. And I don't think it is fair. In fact, I am sure it is not."

"Why not?" asked the apple. "Why not?"

"Because," said the flour, "here they were praising this little wild flower as they called it and making such a fuss over it, and here am I, tame and gentle flour and they don't make a fuss over me."

The apple nudged some of its family and together they all rolled about a little and chuckled in their apple fashion.

"What's the matter, apples?" asked the flour.

"It was very mean to make so much of a fuss over a little wild flower," the flour repeated, "when I'm so good and well-behaved."

"Is that all the credit one gets for being good? To have creatures rave over something wild and dreadful and not say a kind word for the good, sensible stay-at-home flour which is satisfied with its home barrel and doesn't go about losing its head because it is springing?"

"I don't hide and then appear, wild as can be, as this flower evidently did."

"I'll explain," said the first apple, "for truly you are very foolish."

"In the first place the wild flower the people spoke of was a flower of a plant—a growing flower, something which had come up out of the earth or which had appeared from a bud upon a bush."

"I don't know what kind of a flower they meant but it was something different from what you think it is."

"You see we've been on trees and we know something about the out-of-door world and flowers and leaves and so forth."

"And when they spoke of it as being a wild flower they did not mean that it was naughty. They meant that it was a flower which was to be found in the woods or along the roadway or in a field or by a brook."

"They did not mean that it had been hiding naughtily and then, had suddenly appeared."

"They meant that it was the first one to put in a spring appearance for you know the winter time is not the time for flowers in most parts of the country."

"Then you see they spell their family name differently—these flowers of the gardens and the woods, from the way your name is spelled."

"A flower which is not a wild flower is a garden flower or a hot-house flower, one that has been cultivated, but a wild flower doesn't mean a naughty or a bad flower. Dear me, no! Never that."

"And flour, you're appreciated. They like you when they put you in cake and biscuits and bread and pancakes and pie crusts. Of course they do! They think you're just the thing for dumplings."

"But you're not flowers of the out-of-doors, you're flour for cooking. You're very useful in your own way."

"Don't be discontented because a dear little brave flower which comes up in the early spring receives some praise. It took courage for that little flower to dare come up for snow may still flurry about and cold winds may still come."

"Yet the little flower came to say to the people, 'Spring is here! See, I bring you the message of the early spring!'"

"You are safe from harm and cold and frosts and snow in your good strong barrel, so be not harsh on the little flower which is praised, for the little flower deserves the praise."

"And remember there is all the difference in the spelling of the two names."

"Ah," said the flour, "now we understand many things and we will not complain any more. We quite understand."

And the flour helped to make most delicious dishes after this that showed that it wanted to do its best and that it was contented.

NERVOUS WOMAN COMPLETE WRECK

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Indianapolis, Indiana.—"Now I want to tell you just what induced me to take your medicine. It seemed that I had some kind of weakness so that I could not carry a child its full time. The last time I was troubled this way I had a nervous breakdown and was a complete wreck. The doctor thought I would not live, and if I did that I would never be well and strong again. But I told them I was going to get well, but I was not going to die just then. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took six bottles of it. I soon got strong again and had three more children. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound ever since, and if you could see me now you would think I had always been well. Mrs. MARY F. HERRICK, 234 Detroit St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire reproductive system, so that it may work in every respect effectually as nature intends.

Flavoring Roquefort Cheese. Holes in Roquefort cheese are placed there by machinery to admit air and enable the mold to grow, thus giving the desired flavor.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician, but also a profound student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great remedial qualities, especially for weaknesses of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, while many other so-called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for its phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Pierce's high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the illa peculiar to women.

Treasures in Tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen of Egypt

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with Earl of Carnarvon.

Opening of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the "heretic" king of the Eighteenth Egyptian dynasty, at Luxor, has revealed an unexampled storehouse of treasures. This photograph gives a view of the antechamber looking west. Among the articles shown are a box containing the king's undergarments and other things; a large gilt couch with supports in the form of lions; a couch with supports in the form of "hat-hor" cows; numerous boxes containing mummified meat; a painted red box containing jewelry and ornaments; a papyrus rush-work stool, much decayed; the king's stool; another couch; four alabaster unguent vases of unique type and beauty; a semi-circular veneered box having minute detail of inlaid ivory.

Here are the wheels, bodies, poles and other parts of four chariots as they were found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt. They are made of various hard woods, covered with stucco gilt, leather and inlaid ivory. The fencers are of hide, in one case of leopard skin. Embossed gold panels on one represent the king's prisoners of war.

FINAL BLOW DEALT THE SHIPPING BILL

Death of the Administration Measure Came Quietly Without Discussion.

Washington.—The administration shipping bill died Thursday just a year to the day after it had been born. On Feb. 28, 1922, President Harding, appeared at a joint session of congress, urged enactment of legislation designed to build up an American merchant marine through government aid, and identical bills embodying the views of the administration were introduced in the senate and house. Thursday the bill then introduced, after having passed the house in the meantime, met its death in the senate through adoption of a motion to lay it aside.

The end of the legislation, which the president has advocated with all the powers at his command, leaves the administration where it was a year ago, in dealing with the three-billion-dollar investment in war-built ships. The task of liquidating this investment already has been made the subject of study and the plans under consideration are to be announced after congress adjourns. The death of the shipping bill came quietly and without the bitter discussion which marked its hectic career. The senate proceeded to vote on the motion of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the acting democratic leader, to send the ship measure back to the committee. Administration leaders, including Senator Jones, republican, of Washington, who has been in charge of the legislation in the senate, had indicated their opposition to this course and the motion was voted down, 48 to 26.

The final blow then was dealt the bill, which was given up as lost by its supporters after a four-day filibuster.

Senator Ladd, republican, of North Dakota, moved that it be laid aside in favor of the filled milk bill, and the motion was carried 63 to 7, the republican leaders voting with the majority.

The action meant the death of the shipping measure.

The action also was taken to mean the end of such legislation in the near future, for President Harding had let it be known that the administration plans no attempts to obtain consideration for the bill at the next regular session of congress.

Withdraw Ships From Smyrna

London.—Britain has extended the olive branch to Turkey. In order to aid Ismet Pasha to overcome the opposition of the extremists in the Angora national assembly England has ordered all her warships, with the exception of a light cruiser, to withdraw from the Smyrna harbor. The government believes that its action will be instrumental in promoting better relations between Britain and Turkey, and will perhaps result in the calling of another conference to complete the work of the Lausanne parley.

Houston Shipping Shows Increase

Houston, Tex.—Statistics show that forty-eight vessels arrived and forty-eight sailed from the port of Houston during February. Last February the figures were twenty-eight arrivals, thirty departures. In February, 1921, there were thirteen arrivals and fifteen departures. The increase between 1921 and 1922 was more than 100 per cent and between 1922 and 1923 more than 60 per cent.

LENGTH OF DAY IS BIG FACTOR

Useful in Determining Whether or Not Alfalfa Seed Is of Suitable Variety.

EXPERIMENT IN GREENHOUSE

Peruvian, Turkestan and Grimm Have Own Peculiar Reactions When Grown Out of Season—Avoid Argentine in North.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The peculiar reactions of plants to a change in the length of day to which they are accustomed is being found useful in determining whether or not alfalfa seed is of the variety recommended and whether it is adapted to conditions in the sections of the country where it is being sold. By growing the seed in greenhouses in the late fall and winter the United States Department of Agriculture has been able to determine the suitability of alfalfa seed from Argentina to conditions in this country. As a result, it has been determined that this seed is not adapted to the northern part of the United States. Most of it should not be grown any farther north than Kansas-grown seed.

Tell Different Groups.

By growing the seedlings for a short time in the greenhouse it is possible to tell to what group they belong. For instance, Peruvian, Kansas-grown common, Turkestan, and Grimm have their own peculiar reactions when grown out of season in the greenhouse or in the open in the fall. If started in the spring the various kinds cannot readily be distinguished until they have grown to considerable size. In the fall and winter when the hours of daylight are shorter the seedlings of these various groups develop characteristic differences in height, erectness and branching. As a result of the discovery of the effect of the length of day on the performance of alfalfa plants, the ability of this crop to endure cold will not be the only factor to be considered in selecting varieties for the parts of the country with rigorous winters. The number of hours of daylight will have something to do with their selection. In the Southwest, Peruvian alfalfa starts earlier in the spring, and keeps going later in the fall than other varieties. It is able to make better growth during short days than other alfalfas, and is not particularly benefited by long periods of daylight, but the plants suffer considerable winter injury this far north. Northern varieties, on the other hand, do not adapt themselves to the short days of Arizona. This shows why varieties of one section, even though they may be hardy enough, cannot be used successfully in some other localities.

Not Suitable in North.

If you buy Argentine seed you can be sure that it is not suitable in the north. It should be grown at least no farther north than Kansas seed. Large quantities of seed are being imported from the Argentine; in fact most of the imported alfalfa now comes from that country. From July 1, 1922, to January 15, 1923, approximately 8,320,000 pounds were received from that country and only 281,000 pounds from other countries.

WOODCHUCKS DAMAGE CROPS

Unusually Large Number of Complaints Received From Many Sections Last Year.

An unusually large number of complaints of an abundance of woodchucks and damage by them have been received by the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture, during the past year from points in the Eastern states. These animals have also continued to be destructive in the Northwest to alfalfa and cultivated crops. One farmer reported that they entirely cleaned up 40 acres of wheat and ten acres of alfalfa and took newly seeded corn out of two acres of ground. Demonstration by the biological survey of effective methods for destroying the animals has enabled landowners greatly to reduce the losses. After a demonstration in which one ounce of strychnine alkaloid was used to poison green alfalfa tops, 81 dead woodchucks were found.

GOOD AUTOMOBILE DRIVER KEEPS HIS EYE ON ROAD AHEAD OF HIM

A Bit of Evidence That Proves That a Street Car Runs on Rails and Can't Dodge Automobiles.

The good driver runs his car at a nearly uniform speed, preserving an almost straight course with scarcely perceptible deviations when the street is straight, avoiding obstructions such as small holes and stones on the surface, as if with good luck more than intention, and never getting into traffic jams that demand dexterous movements to prevent collisions, or scraped mudguards. It isn't luck, it's headwork!

On the other hand, there is another kind of driver who dodges every little hole, stone or bit of glass with a short, snappy turn of the steering wheel which results in the tonneau passengers being shifted about like shuttlecocks. He slows up and starts with annoying frequency, and is repeatedly treating his passengers to thrilling incidents of suspense and anticipation as he dodges pedestrians and wagons.

A Play on Emotions.

You meet the good and bad driver every day. And it is a delight to ride with one just as it is torture to ride with the other. You may be unconscious of the reasons that give you confidence in the good driver, but the feeling is there. Possibly the secret lies in the fine points of driving a motorcar—or the distance ahead of the car at which the good driver focuses his gaze.

You want to become a good driver? Of course! Then watch the road in advance of your car—as far, in fact, as the road is visible. On a straight level road this may be several miles, on a winding road as far as the next turn; on a hill to the crest of the next rise, and on city streets as far ahead as the state of traffic permits.

If you adopt this practice all bad spots and small objects on the surface of the road will be seen long before you come to them and are almost unconsciously avoided. The wheel action begins so early that your movements will be practically imperceptible to passengers and you won't find it necessary to keep your eyes fixed on the hole or stone.

You have assured yourself that it will not be struck by the wheels and so continue to keep your eyes ahead. Thus you avoid dropping your eyes to watch near objects and raising them again to the focusing point, a practice that becomes tiresome and gives rise to the unexpected.

Watching the Road Ahead.

The fellow who doesn't care concentrates much of his attention on the road directly in front of his wheels and does not see obstructions far enough in advance to gradually avoid them. The human eye is like a camera, for when focused only two or three rods ahead, the background is very indistinct.

And so the driver who watches the road at the point of disappearance discovers that the foreground takes care of itself—that is, he subconsciously handles the car without any distraction of his attention from what is coming farther on. And his car follows a straight course.

Even more important with this method of driving is the total elimination of emergencies. When watching the point of disappearance of the road it is impossible for any other car to emerge around a turn, or shoot out from a crossroad without your being immediately aware of it.

You always have ample time to reduce the speed without a sudden jouncing on of the brakes, and to decide upon your course of action. Thus you preserve a more uniform rate of speed and find few occasions for gear changes and using your brakes, all of which things wear upon your nerves.

You are able, with this system, to cover a greater distance in a given time and do it without the need of making short dashes at top speed.

DRIVING ADVICE FOR CAREFUL MOTORIST

Gasoline Tank Should Be Cleaned Out Every Month.

Expensive Matter to Fit New Bearings and They Should Be Treated Carefully—Do Not Let Spare Cover Up License Plate.

Make it your practice at least once a month to remove the strainer in the gasoline line and clean out all foreign matter that has lodged there, says Motor Travel, the Automobile club of America monthly. In spite of the best care some dirt is constantly getting into the gasoline tank and it always stops at the strainer. This will eventually clog it, shutting off the gasoline and stopping the engine. As this is a troublesome occurrence it is best to avoid it by cleaning the strainer occasionally. There is one where the feed pipe enters the vacuum tank and sometimes another one where the gasoline enters the carburetor.

When going up a steep hill do not crowd the engine to see if you can possibly get to the top without shifting gears. When running very slowly (loping) the sudden blows of the explosion, acting against the resistance of the slow-moving crank-shaft, tend to flatten out the bearings, shortening their life, wearing them out, and making the engine knock long before it should under proper use. As it is an expensive matter to fit new bearings, this is an important detail to attend to.

A relief cock with a handle that is up when the valve is closed is apt to work open if the plug loosens through wear or the spring breaks. The best remedy for such a trouble is to buy a new one with the hole set in the proper direction, so that it is closed when the handle is pointing downward. Another method is to fill the hole in the plug with a piece of brass carefully fitted and to drill a new hole in such a position that the handle will be pointing downward when the hole is closed.

Be careful that the spare does not hide all or part of the rear license plate. Recently the police of some of the towns and cities have paid more attention to this matter, so it may save you a fine to adjust matters correctly in advance.

They are also becoming more particular about the rear plate being sufficiently lighted at night. This plate should be illuminated by a white light making it legible at 50 feet. If this is not done the driver is subject not only to great delay but there is every possibility of a fine.

HANDBOOK OF DAIRY STATISTICS WANTED

Necessary to Print More Copies to Meet Popular Demand.

Circulars Show Trend of Cattle, Butter and Cheese Industries and Form a Basis for Their Future Development.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An additional printing of 10,000 copies of the Handbook of Dairy Statistics which was issued a few months ago by the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture, has been found necessary in order to meet the demand for information of this kind.

The handbook is of pocket size and contains 135 tables giving statistics on dairy production and trade throughout the world. Three circulars have also been published illustrating the material contained in the handbook by means of graphs and charts which show the trend of the dairy cattle, butter, and cheese industries, respectively, and form a basis for the development of these industries.

Department Circular 7, Trend of the Dairy Cattle Industry in the United States and Other Countries, shows in graphic form the imports and exports of cattle by the United States for the last 70 years; shows the kind and quantity of new blood in the form of importations of purebred cattle that has been used in developing the cattle of the United States during the last 33 years, and presents a series of charts showing the increase in the number of dairy cows in the United States in proportion to the total number of cattle, compared with the relative progress made in other countries.

Department Circular 70, Trend of the Butter Industry in the United States and Other Countries, brings out the interesting fact that the United Kingdom was the market for more than half the butter moving in international trade, before the war; while Denmark and Russia furnished more than half of the butter on the international market.

Department Circular 71, Trend of the Cheese Industry in the United States and Other Countries, shows the great change that has taken place in the cheese industry of the United States since the year 1880, when this country was the greatest cheese-exporting country in the world. In 1918 there were five countries, each of which exceeded the United States in exports.

All these publications on dairy statistics may be obtained without cost from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as the supply lasts.

DIPPING VAT IS GREAT HELP

Community Arrangement in South Dakota Checked What Promised to Be Serious Epidemic.

A community dipping vat, built in Jerauld county, S. D., in September through the efforts of agricultural extension workers in the county, successfully checked in its beginning what promised to be a serious outbreak of scabies, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. Over 1,200 cattle were dipped during the two months following the completion of the community dipping vat.

AVOID DANGER OF FREEZING

Tomato Baskets Placed Over Young Plants With Handful of Soil on Top is Favored.

Putting tomato baskets over the young plants when frost threatens is not in itself a new form of protection; many gardeners, however, do not know that if a handful of soil is placed on top of each basket there is less danger of freezing the young plants. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends that this be done.

Quack Cures for 3 Days

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply and it gets to its good work right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. Just apply Musterole with the fingers. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster without the blister.

Musterole is a clean white ointment made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of all sorts. Seldom fails to deliver results. 35c and 65c, tins and tubes, hospital size, $3.00.

ABSOLUTELY HEARTLESS

"What is the title of this picture?" asked the wealthy old codger.

"I call it 'A Soul in Travail,'" replied the impetuous artist, "but if you will buy it you may call it anything you like."

"Umph! I can do that without buying it. It's a chromo."

Flapper Fairy Tales.

Ludwig—Would you like to have the engagement ring my mother had or shall I go to one of the Fifth avenue stores and get a $500 sparkler for you?

Georgette—Oh, I'd much rather have your mother's; it would be so much more romantic!

Out of Style.

"Mother, I trust you will not weep at my wedding."

"But, my dear daughter, I shall not be able to help it."

"But you must. It is no longer fashionable to shed tears at a wedding."

Continuous Performances.

"Man is born to sorrow," mourned the good deacon.

"Guess that's right," agreed the unregenerate backslider. "About the time our parents leave off spanking us experience begins."

Speaking Right Then.

"My brother," said John J. Meddling, "do you look on life as a blessing or a bore?"

"At the present moment," replied Mr. Grumpson, eyeing his questioner with strong disapproval, "it's 100 per cent boredom."

Select.

"These are select apples. Twenty-five and 50 cents a dozen."

"Whaddye mean 'select'?"

"If you select them, they're 50 cents a dozen. If I select them they're 25."

—Farm Life.

Brainy Bluebelle.

Bluebelle's girl chums often go to her for information. One of them was asking her to explain the single tax.

"It is a tax on men for remaining single," said Bluebelle. "I'm for it."

Must Dissemble.

Wife—Now, Tom, the Boreleighs are calling tonight, and I want you to appear pleased when they come.

Hub—The difficulty will be not to appear too pleased when they leave.

More Up to Date.

"They say that in Spain the new bull fighters enter the arena in automobiles."

"Then I suppose the torreadors should be called motoredors."

Mixed.

"Jack, dear, I made you believe I wasn't in earnest when I told you I didn't mean what I said, didn't I?"

"I believe so."

"Well, I'll take it all back." — London Tit-Bits.

In Extremis.

Doctor (at bedside)—I fancy he is about ready for the kingdom of heaven.

Ministering Wife—Will you be quiet and him so good a Republican!

Knitted Jacquette-Sweater; Pretty Dress Accessories

WHENEVER one looks in on a fashionable, outflowing throng, there is one thing that impresses itself on the mind above all others, and that is the number and diversity of knitted garments worn. There are knitted frocks, knitted suits, including jackets and skirts or sweaters and skirts, in fabrics of wool or silk or fiber silk. From the warm camel's hair to lacy Shetland, there are fashion centers attention on them or fails to see them.

PAISLEY COLORINGS USED IN THIS SWEATER

sports clothes of wool, and in silk and silk fiber dresser models, of the sports type, prove to be quite the most fascinating things worn.

The jacquette, having made a triumph in other directions, was to be expected among sports clothes, taking the place of sweaters or sweater-coats. With the vogue for white and plaided skirts, the pretty new jacquette-sweater seems to be called for, to make a chic combination.

One of these jacquette-sweaters is shown here of organzine silk, developed in glowing paisley colorings. It is a smart, loose blouse, gathered into a plain, snug-fitting hip-band, fastening at the side with two round velvet-covered buttons. Long straight sleeves end in plain, tight cuff bands ornamented with two buttons. A narrow, fancy knitted band finishes the edges of the jacquette, and it is of a character to invite the addition of a dainty lace collar or the neck opening. With knitted fabrics by the yard, georgette, but are shown attached to their bracelets, in several sheer materials. One of them is included in the picture of accessories given here.

The canteen and the vanity case continue to flourish, the canteen increasing in size until it resembles a toy trunk. A vanity case is pictured to which metal brocade in a Chinese pattern adds a bit of oriental splendor.

There are myriad strands of crystal beads, in all colors, all sizes and many shapes, combined in long or short necklaces and variously designed, so that the quest for one to finish off a toilette is always interesting. The shops are gay with these beads and they are matched in variety by earrings. Fashion still smiles on the latter—and they are now made in real as well as mock jewels.

But the star of any collection of accessories just now is most likely to be the Desauville 'kerchief, which is worn at the neck or waist, or on the hat. One of these is shown in the picture, taking their places among woven fabrics, we shall see more jacquette-sweaters and frocks and a greater number of two-piece suits this summer than we have ever before.

There are a thousand and one pretty dress accessories—little Jim-cracks which we could live comfortably without—but youth is not so much interested in comfort as in beauty. To make a list of the unnecessary but engaging belongings of women, is to be amazed at their number and wearied of the task. Leading off with gloves, handkerchiefs, bags and things that are somewhat useful, and therefore taken for granted, there follows a world of trinkets and fancies—more or less in the limelight, as in printed paisley silk, with border of plain georgette, and the manner of knotting it about the neck is illustrated on the form.

The group is completed by an example of numberless ornamental combs for the coiffure. These are made of celluloid imitating tortoise-shell, amber, ivory and other things, and designed in many graceful shapes and sizes. Some of them are enormously large, but few women can carry off these extremes, and the popular combs are those in familiar sizes.

ENGINEER SAYS IT IS WORLD-BEATER

"My Digestion Is Sound as a Dollar Since Taking Tanlac," Declares Buffalo Citizen.

"There is no doubt about it, Tanlac does all they claim it will do—and more," was the positive statement made recently by Richard H. Lawson, well-known engineer, of 1007 Elmwood Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I used Tanlac for a combination of troubles and it put me in splendid condition all the way round. First, I had a bad case of stomach trouble, was simply chock full of sourness and gas, had a general distressed feeling and a burning pain in my stomach that I couldn't get rid of. With my appetite wrecked and digestion gone, I became awfully weak, nervous and run down and could get scarcely any rest or sleep at all.

"Tanlac answered every demand made upon it in my case and today my digestion is sound as a dollar. I have an immense appetite, and with every ache and pain gone, I am sleeping fine and feeling strong and energetic as of old. Tanlac is 100% good."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Baby Was Pale and He Did Not Seem to Grow

If the baby's stomach is out of order he does not assimilate his food and stops growing. This was the trouble with Mrs. A. L. Williams' baby. Mrs. Williams lives at Hapepond, Ga., and writes:

"My baby never seemed to grow and was pale and sallow. My sister told me to give him Teethina, as she gave it to her baby, who is as fat as a pig. I took her advice, and in a week my baby was completely changed. His complexion cleared up and he started growing."

Teethina corrected her baby's stomach trouble so he could digest and assimilate his food, which is absolutely essential to baby's health and growth.

Teethina is sold by all druggists, or send 30c to the Moffet Laboratories and get a package of Teethina and a wonderful free booklet about Baby.—Advertisement.

Business Foresight.

Overheard at the drugstore: "John," said the druggist to his assistant, "how is the stock of lint and bandages?"

"Got plenty, sir," replied John.

"And arnica—got plenty of that?" continued the druggist. "Yes, sir, plenty," returned the clerk. "Our stock of salves, lotions and broken-bone remedies is complete, is it not?"

"Yes," said John, "we have a good stock of all of them."

"Very well," concluded the druggist, "it looks as though it would freeze tonight; you had better go out and wash down the steps."

Dr. Brander Matthews, the famous critic, said at a Columbia tea: "The school of French novelists that is passing—the school of Anatole France, and Loti and Mirabeau and Maupassant—was very brilliant, certainly, but its philosophy wasn't cheering."

"Those men remind me of an anecdote. A young chap had proposed to a beautiful girl. The girl, blushing and weeping a little, had accepted him. He folded her in his arms, pressed his lips to hers and whispered: "Dearest, is this the first time you have ever loved?"

"Yes," the girl sighed, "but it's so nice that I hope it won't be the last."

THE HIGHWAY.

Big Days Ahead For Terrell County. Highway From New York to San Francisco

Dr. S. M. Johnson, general director of the Robert E. Lee National Highway Association, addressed a meeting of business men in El Paso Tuesday night.

Mr. Johnson is on a tour from New York to San Francisco, raising funds for marking the highway and publically advertising it. Dr. Johnson said the two great highways that would be first built are the Lincoln across the north and the Lee across the south, the two names linking the history of the country and honoring two of the nation's greatest men. Dr. Johnson said that within two years the Lee Highway would be completed, over 3700 miles long, from New York through Washington to San Francisco, by way of San Antonio, Sanderson, El Paso, Phoenix and San Diego; and that for most of the distance the road would be hard surfaced.

Dr. Johnson pointed out that the Lee Highway is the only route open all year and free from snows in winter; that it traverses the most historical and scenically beautiful sections of the country and in every way should draw more travel than any other highway.

Just imagine how many tourists will pass through Sanderson every day in the year when the Lee National Highway is completed from New York to San Francisco, 3700 miles in length and traversing the romantic and historical Mexican border.

Harvey Hughes who was given the death penalty for murder about a year ago in Brewster county, lost his insanity plea in the district court at Alpine last week. It will be remembered that Hughes is the young man who broke jail at Alpine a few months ago and was re-captured several days later. At the time he broke jail Hughes' case was before the Court of Criminal Appeals, but his jail breaking forfeited his rights to appeal, and so Hughes then set up a plea of insanity; but a jury having declared him sane, Hughes must pay the death penalty unless Governor Neff commutes his sentence to life imprisonment. But we hope that the Governor will not do so. The crime that Hughes committed was brutal, cold-blooded murder, and a jury of 12 good men having heard the case and assessed the death penalty, the law should be allowed to take its course without interference by the Governor.

NUPTIAL SHOWER

One of the most pleasant social events given lately was a surprise shower at the home of Mrs. Harry Newton on March 1, by Mesdames Qualtrough and Newton, in honor of Miss Cecile Bodkin.

The reception room and dining room were attractive in appropriate decorations of yellow and white, together with numerous pot plants and flowers.

As the honoree entered she was met at the door by Mrs. Jack McKee who escorted her to the dining room, where she was "toasted" and presented with numerous gifts. In the midst of examining the gifts and many congratulations being extended, the prospective groom was spied. Mrs. McKee then gave a toast to him and presented him with numerous gifts. Mrs. Ray Caldwell then sang "End of a Perfect Day," by Carrie Jacobs Bond, accompanied by Mrs. Vance McLymont on the piano. This was followed by a reading, "Honest John Tompkins," given by Mrs. J. E. MacCalmont. The rest of the evening was then spent in pleasant conversation and well-wishing to the bride and groom.

Refreshments consisting of fruit salad, cake and coffee, were served to some thirty-six guests. At a late hour the guests departed thanking the hostesses for a pleasant and entertaining evening.
