Terrell County's Road Bonds Sold

$240,000 Issue Sold at Par and Accrued Interest to Coldwell & Co., of Nashville, Tennessee

BONDS TO BE DELIVERED SOON. HIGHWAY SURVEY IS ABOUT COMPLETED. WORK ON ROAD EXPECTED TO BEGIN ABOUT JUNE 1.

Monday, March 25th was an auspicious day for our little city, for that was the date that had been set by the Commissioners Court of Terrell county for receiving bids on the $240,000 worth of highway road bonds. And the bond buyers were on hand in great force, not quite a "dozen strong" but very near it, eight of them; some looking wise and some "otherwise."

When the Honorable Commissioners Court announced ready for business there was a lively scramble among the bond buyers like a bunch of boys at a circus trying to get a front seat. And when the bidding started there was some fun and fireworks too. While the big "financiers" were wrangling the Commissioners sat back and smiled; they knew that they held the trump card in the shape of $240,000 worth of gilt-edged bonds. They knew that there was no use for the mountain to go to Mohammed, for Mohammed would come to the mountain. The Court disposed of the bonds and, the Times believes, made a fairly good trade.

The lucky firm that purchased the bonds was Coldwell & Co., of Nashville, Tennessee, and they were represented here by Harry Dean of New Orleans and S. L. Austin of Austin, Texas. The price paid for the bonds was par and accrued interest from date of bonds to date of delivery. The bonds are to be delivered as soon as Coldwell & Co., is furnished with an opinion of Wood & Oakley, bond attorneys, of Chicago, as to the legality of the bonds; but as a favorable opinion from this firm has already been obtained by the county, it is believed that the bonds will be accepted and delivered in the next few days.

Now that the bonds have been sold, we may expect some definite results in the very near future. Every one is anxious to witness the completion of the Robert Lee Highway. Such an event will mean untold benefit to Sanderson and surrounding territory. Assurances have come from all over the Union, from New York to California, that the Lee Highway when finished will be patronized and patronized freely. This means thousands of people passing through our little city every year. A majority of these travelers will stop here for a day or two; a few of them may fall in love with the country and the people and buy a home here and become bona-fide citizens.

Also we may expect some immediate benefit from the actual building of the road itself. The work is going to give employment to men, and men will spend money. And a dollar once put into circulation will keep moving around the circle until nearly every one gets some benefit from it.

As soon as the bonds have been delivered the county will advertise for bids for highway construction. As everything looks now, June 1 will find actual work going on in Terrell county on the Robert E. Lee Highway.

REMEMBER THIS

Remember that next Saturday, April 7, is school trustee election day. The polls will open at 8:00 o'clock a. m. and close at 6:00 o'clock p. m. There is to be elected two common school trustees, one county school trustee for commissioner's precinct 1, and one county school trustee at large. The most important of these of course is the two common school trustees, for they have to do with the selecting of the principal and teachers, and in the management and conduct of the school. It is vitally important therefore that every man and woman in Sanderson should go to the polls next Saturday and vote for school trustees. And especially should every woman take enough interest in the election to go to the polls and vote her choice, for there is no one so deeply interested in children and schools as a woman.

In most places a school trustee election draws a large vote to the polls, but in Sanderson the vote is usually very small and no interest taken. Don't let this be the case next Saturday. GO TO THE POLLS AND VOTE, and prove to the world that you are heart and soul with the children and their schooling.

Wear made-to-measure clothes and you will always appear well dressed. Call at the Royal Tailor Shop and let us show you some of the "smartest" samples for suits you ever seen. The cost is low and satisfaction guaranteed.

EASTER SERVICES AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Joe. W. Bickley has announced he will be in Sanderson Easter Sunday and will deliver a Special Easter Service at 11:00 a. m., Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. as usual. In the evening at 6:30 an Easter Program will be given by the members of the Epworth League girls of the Sunday School. After the program the regular Sunday night services will be held.

Rev. Bickley extends a hearty invitation to everybody to attend all services and the program.

Moving to San Antonio

E. W. Hall left Saturday evening on No. 102, for San Antonio where he will make his future home. His daughter Gladys Hall went to San Antonio several weeks ago where she has opened up a gift shop. Mr. Hall had been with the Kerr Mercantile Co., as book-keeper for about 4 years and he and his daughter have many friends here who wish them success and happiness in their new home.

W. W. Young, known to all his numerous friends as "Fatty," dropped off of No. 101 here Tuesday evening just to shake hands with the folks and say "howdy." He was enroute west on business. Mr. Young was roundhouse foreman here for several years but is now located at Houston.

Don't forget, next Saturday is school trustee election day.

Mrs. Pollard Entertains

(Contributed)

Mrs. D. A. Pollard was hostess to about twenty of Sanderson's young people, on Saturday night, March 17.

Her home was beautifully decorated with shamrocks and green paper bows and as each guest entered he was given a green paper hat which he was requested to wear throughout the evening. The patron saint himself could not have asked for a more gay appearing crowd.

A "peanut hunt" started the young folks off in a burst of hilarity and fun producing games followed each other in rapid succession.

At a late hour the hostess served a delicious plate lunch of jello, which had turned green in honor of the day, topped with whipped cream, fruit and nuts, cake squares adorned with shamrocks and cocoa.

Ruby Mansfield won the prize of the evening, while Ross Martin received the "booby" a little green frog.

Each and all proclaimed many times over the good time they had had and it would be well if more of us took the interest in our young people that Mrs. Pollard does.

Easter Day All Fools' Day

THIS YEAR THEY COME TOGETHER

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

EASTER Day and All Fools' Day both fall on April 1 this year. This is bound to happen every now and then because of the fact that All Fools' Day always falls on April 1, while Easter bobs around on the calendar anywhere between March 22 and April 25.

At first the Christian Easter symbolized exactly with the Jewish Passover. This was rejected in the Western Church on the ground that the resurrection took place on the first day of the week after the Passover and should therefore be commemorated on Sunday. After much controversy the particular Sunday was definitely fixed in the Sixth century to be the Sunday between the fifteenth and twenty-first days of the moon in the first month of the Jewish lunar year, the computation to be made according to the tables of Victorius of Aquitaine which were introduced in 475 A. D. Followed another century of controversy. Then the matter of the date of Easter was finally disposed of at the synod held at Whitby, England, in 1064. After this date the clergy of the British Isles conformed to the general practice of the Western Church.

So now both Protestant and Roman Catholic churches observe Easter on the first Sunday after the full moon on or next after March 21. Thus Easter cannot fall earlier than March 22 or later than April 25.

Easter seldom comes as early as March 22. In fact it was away back in 1818, more than a century ago, that Easter last fell on this early date. The nearest approach was March 23 in 1850 and 1913. Between now and 1950 its earliest date will be March 24 in 1943.

Thus Easter may fall more than a whole month later some years than other years. For example, it fell on April 25, the latest possible date, in 1888. It will fall on the same date in 1943. It fell on April 24 in 1850 and on April 23 in 1905 and 1910.

Easter and All Fools' Day only occasionally fall on the same date. They coincide in the century 1850-1950, but six times—1806, 1877, 1888, 1923, 1984, 1945.

"Well, what of it? What difference does it make whether Eastern falls early or late—falls on March 22 or April 25?"

As a matter of fact many of our American holidays have a nationwide influence in many ways. Thanks giving and Christmas, for instance, create so great a demand for turkeys that thousands of people in turkey states like Texas and Missouri and Kansas bend all their energies to have their turkeys ready for the market at the psychological moment.

And when everybody wants turkey the general public eats less meat. Hence the butchers and market men have to keep a watchful eye open.

Now, as everyone knows, Easter is preceded by the Lenten season of 40 days. During Lent the American people eat less meat than usual and more fish and oysters and more eggs. So it makes a lot of difference to a lot of producers whether Lent begins in February or in March.

Then there's the climax of the demand for eggs at Easter. Besides, the demand for baby chicks is so great at Easter for advertising, display and gift purposes that many incubators the country over have to set their hatchings with Easter Day in mind.

In short, it seems a truism that holidays, whether of festivity or fasting, patriotism or prayer, are reflected in the busy marts of the country. And one of the most far-reaching in influence is Easter, with its month-long variation by dates.

Easter is the principal festival of the Christian church, commemorating the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

Nevertheless, Easter has an origin far antedating the resurrection of Christ—one that goes back to the early days of man.

Easter's original significance was the celebration at or near the vernal equinox of the beginning of a new year. It celebrated the end of winter and the approach of spring—the coming of light and heat—and life.

At Rome the sacred fire in the temple of the Vestal Virgins was kindled anew on March 1, which was the beginning of the new year. A corresponding ceremony is still common in various parts of Europe. Bonfires are lighted from a flame originated by the priests on Easter eve. These fires are kindled every year on the same hill, which usually is given the name of "Easter Mountain." The significance is this: As far as the light of the bonfire reaches the fields will be fruitful and the houses safe from fire and disease. As the flames die down, men, women and children leap through them as a protection against disease.

When Christianity came to the front it adopted the pagan holiday of Easter. It explained that the extinction of the bonfire fires on Easter eve symbolized the darkness of Calvary and of the grave. The lighting of the new fires symbolized the resurrection.

It seems incongruous, at first thought, that Easter—the principal festival of the Christian church—and All Fools' Day—a day of practical jokes and horseplay—should fall on the same day—and on Sunday at that.

On second thought, however, there is nothing incongruous about it, excepting the fact that All Fools' Day should fall on Sunday—and that is the fault of our fearful and wonderful calendar.

Both Easter and All Fools' Day had their origin, away back in the beginnings of the race, in delight at the approach of spring. It may be easily understood that the winter was a hard season for many of the primeval peoples and that the increasing warmth of the sun and the springing up of vegetable life meant literally a renewal of life. So the vernal equinox celebration of primeval peoples was largely expressed in actions of exuberant joy.

Even after the coming of Christianity Easter was celebrated with games, songs, dances and dramatic shows. In the Middle Ages it was the custom at Easter for the people to listen to amusing tales from the pulpits of the churches. Special cakes were baked—our modern equivalents are hot-cross buns and stannel cakes. Brightly-painted eggs were presented to friends.

So there was originally little difference in the celebration of the two days. In fact, the modern celebration of All Fools' Day is probably a survival of the less serious features of Easter day.

Anyway, All Fools' Day, is apparently just as old as Easter. The Scotch call the victims of an All Fools' Day joke a "gowk" or "cuckoo." The French name for him is "un poisson d'Avril"—April fish. The Romans celebrated the Feast of Fools on February 17. The Hindus have their Huli festival on March 31.

So it is likely that the popular celebration in this country of "April Fool Day" is the survival of some pagan festival of the ancient world largely devoted to horse play and the playing of jokes in sheer exuberance of spirit because of the coming of spring.

The pictures show three phases of the celebration of April 1, 1923. One shows a crowd of worshippers going into St. Thomas' church on Fifth avenue, New York city. Another shows a survival of prehistoric days—the egg-rolling on the White House lawn by children on Easter Monday. The third suggests the pranks of All Fools' Day.

Antedates Lauder

It is not true that the Scotch language was invented for Harry Lauder. "Whether you call it a dialect or a language, the Scotch tongue is a thing whose history entitles it to be cherished by those to whom it belongs." Professor Craigie, the well-known Oxford philologist, told the Vernacular Circle of the London Burns club.

"The elements of the Scotch tongue as it is now known," the professor said, "came over to the country with the Angles in the Fourth or Fifth century. It is now substantially the same as the tongue of the Scottish borderers in the Seventh and Eighth centuries."

A Well-Guarded Secret.

He was rich and close. The woman had known him since childhood days. The other day she said to him, as they met at the same table at a downtown restaurant:

"Why don't you spend some of your money—live better, enjoy yourself more?"

"Because if I do," he said, "people will expect something of me. If they don't know I'm well off they will expect anything of me and they'll do for me. So, I keep my private affairs to myself." And then he added, as though the woman might be one of those who expected him to pay for her lunch, too:

"And, besides, I'm not so well off as you think."—New York Sun.

VARNISH HARMED IN WASHING CAR

Improper Methods Are Sometimes Worse for the Finish Than None at All.

TEMPERATURE OF WATER

Cleaning Solutions Containing Ammonia or Any Kind of Lye Soap Should Be Avoided—Loosen Mud and Dirt Gently.

The purchaser of a motorcar, proud of its resplendent luster, is prone to make many commendable resolutions pertaining to its frequent washing and cleaning and then actually do more harm than good in the zeal with which these operations are carried out.

If one could watch the minute care with which the final surface is built up at the factory, where coat after coat of expensive material is deftly applied and carefully rubbed, the car owner would be more specific when he gives instructions to have the car washed.

Do Not Use Brush.

He would make sure that the water is no warmer than 60 degrees, for no varnish will withstand sudden application of hot water. No matter how much mud or dirt is on the car, it should not be scrubbed off with a brush. Cleaning solutions should be avoided, especially if they contain ammonia or any kind of lye soap. And the practice of removing mud and dirt by a harsh water blast is decidedly detrimental because the blast drives the grits of dust and mud into the finish.

The integrity of the varnish is impaired by every scratch it receives. Because these scratches often are so small that they are not apparent to the eye does not lessen their danger to the finish. Examine a car with the aid of an enlarging glass after it has received a thoughtless "rush" washing and the apparent glasslike surface is found to be actually broken up into countless cuts and scratches. The process need be continued only a comparatively few times when these scratches will be worn through the coats of finishing varnish, allowing moisture to seep into the undercoats, and the finish will begin to check, crawl and disintegrate.

Right Water Pressure.

When running water is used the pressure should be just sufficient to keep the water moving six inches from the open hose. Then the mud and dirt should be gently loosened with a soft, clean cloth or sponge. If soap must be used, it should be pure castile. When the car is clean it should be showered with cool but not cold water, especially if warm water has been used at the beginning of the work or if the car is to be run out into cold weather. It is advisable to wash one section at a time, drying with a good chamois. In using the chamois the motion should be in straight lines rather than circular. The chamois should be kept clean throughout the operation, washing it out frequently with soap and water and rinsing thoroughly with clean water. Do not rub a varnished surface after it is dry.

Every time the car comes in after a muddy trip it should be washed before the mud has a chance to set or harden.

PLAN TO CLEAN UPHOLSTERY

Many Automobile Owners Make Mistake by Using Gasoline—Plain Water is Favored.

Many automobile owners make the mistake of trying to clean leather upholstery with gasoline. This method cracks the leather and destroys the good appearance of most leather. Just plain water, mixed with a little ammonia, is recommended by those who have had experience in cleaning upholstery. After this has dried, the leather should be rubbed with a soft cloth in order to get a polish. Service stations will recommend good prepared leather dressings.

MASCOT FOR ENGLISH AUTOMOBILES

The famous sketches of a dog in the London Daily Sketch is reproduced as a mascot and decoration for the radiator of automobiles. This noted figure, which is known the length and breadth of England, is mounted on a cap, and rides triumphantly on the hood of the car. It was first introduced at the London automobile show in Olympia hall, and now is the most popular thing abroad.

RAIN WATER FAVORED FOR AUTO RADIATORS

Its Use Is Recommended as Less Scale Results.

Driver Should Remember That Proper Supply Is Just as Important as Supply of Gasoline and Oil—Keep Close Watch.

There is always a day of reckoning for those who neglect details in the care of their car, and that day is likely to come when you least expect or desire it. What you think you have saved by neglect will be spent in expensive roadside repairs. Attending to details is three times cheaper, and, what is more, relieves future worries.

And one detail of your car which you should watch carefully is your radiator. Trouble is sure to come unless it is kept full at all times. Form the habit of inspecting and refilling the radiator before the car is taken from the garage. When on long tours, especially if you have been doing considerable hill climbing, keep a weather eye peeled toward the water supply.

Remember that the proper amount of water is as important as your supply of gasoline and oil. It is not a bad plan to examine the water supply every time you stop for gasoline or oil. Use clear water, and if rain water is obtainable employ it, as less scale and deposit will result.

The cellular openings always should be kept clean. Keep mud from remaining in them, as it cuts down radiation and prevents proper cooling. You should occasionally flush the entire circulating system. This may be done by disconnecting both the upper and lower hose connections and allowing fresh water to enter the filler neck and flow down through the radiator and out the lower hose. The motor water jackets can be flushed out in the same way.

ADAPT REAR-SPRING SYSTEM

Said to Act in Capacity of Shock Absorber in Lessening Effects of Hard Jolts.

A new rear-spring system for light-weight cars is said to act in the capacity of a shock absorber or snubber in lessening the effects of a jolt when one of the rear wheels drops into a depression or strikes an obstruction, as well as to serve the primary function of the usual spring which it replaces. It consists of two separate cantilever springs, the ends of each being attached to the rear axle and frame in such a way that they cross at the center of the rear cross member of the frame, which they support at that point by means of a sliding bearing.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AUTOMOBILE FINISHERS

An emergency cotter pin can be made from a common hairpin by a few twists of the pliers.

It is not advisable to use a nonskid tire on one rear wheel and a plain tread on the other.

It is necessary to have a rather light-bodied, free-flowing oil when the splash type of lubrication system is used.

Don't turn the hose on your car in order to wash it. Water, forced out in this way, gets into impossible-to-reach places and doesn't improve the car.

There is a much heavier movement of cattle by the dipping vats than ever before, according to Raymond Beard, inspector of dipping vats. The Milam County Cattlemen's Association has been actively pushing the work since the commissioners court reinstated the appropriation.

Produce dealers at Corpus Christi have estimated the damage to the cucumber crop in that section by the freeze last Sunday and Sunday night at $100,000. There were about 750 acres planted to cucumbers, every acre of which is said to be a total loss. Prospects were bright for the growers of this section as the cucumber crop in Florida was badly damaged by a freeze two weeks ago, produce men said. Some of the growers will make a second planting.

Forty new airplanes, some of them of a type for use in experiments, have been allotted to the air service primary flying school at Brooks Field. It was made public Saturday. The machines will be delivered at San Antonio within the next three months, making a total of seventy-five planes received at the local flying center since Jan. 1, 1923. New classes in the first stages of flying will be pushed through the courses at Brooks Field as soon as the present one is graduated, which will probably be by April 30.

A municipal election has been ordered at Jewett for April 3.

The bond election held at Wallis for $100,000 for highway and bridge improvements was carried by a vote of 179 to 62. The state and federal governments will add $50,000 more to the precinct assessment.

"I LOVE NELL"

SYNOPSIS—Seeking gold in the desert, "Cameron," solitary prospector, forms a partnership with an unknown man whom he later learns is Jonas Warren, father of a girl whom Cameron wronged, but later married, back in Illinois. Cameron's explanations appease Warren, and the two proceed together. Taking refuge from a sandstorm in a cave, Cameron discovers gold, but too late; both men are dying. Cameron leaves evidence, in the form of the covery of gold, and personal documents, Richard Gale, adventurer, in Castia, Mexican border town, meets George Thorne, lieutenant in the Ninth cavalry, old college friend. Thorne tells Gale he is there to save Mercedes Castaneda, Spanish girl, his affianced wife, from Rojas, Mexican bandit. Gale "roughhouses" Rojas and his gang, with the help of two American cowboys, and he, Mercedes and Thorne escape. A logie call from the fort orders Thorne to his regiment. He leaves Mercedes under Gale's protection. The pair, aided by the cowboys, Charlie Ladd and Jim Lash, arrive in safety at a ranch known as Forton River, across the border. The fugitives are at Tom Belding's home. Belding is immigration inspector. Living with him are his wife and step-daughter, Nell Burton. Gale, with Ladd and Lash, take service with Belding as rangers. Gale telling Belding the cause of his being a wanderer, a misunderstanding with his father concerning the son's business abilities, Mercedes goes word to Thorne of her safety. Dick also writes to his parents, informing them of his whereabouts. Nell's personality and her kindness, attract Gale. Belding, the range, Gale falls in with a party of three Mexican raiders encamped at a water hole. Watching his opportunity to oust them, he sees two Indians ride into the camp. One of them, a Yaqui, is evidently badly wounded, and the Mexicans seek to kill him in a cruel way. Dick drives them off, conveying the wounded Yaqui to Belding's ranch. The Indian, because of his ardent admiration, Gale's admiration for Nell increases, Belding's horses, the price of his life, are run off by the Mexicans. Gale, with Ladd, Lash and the Yaqui, pursue the raiding party, finally cornering them.

The other rangers saved the reins of plunging steeds and whirled to escape the unseen battery. Gale slipped a fresh clip into the magazine of his rifle. He restrained himself from useless firing and gave eager eye to the duel below. Ladd began to shoot while Sol was running. The .405 rang out sharply—then again. The heavy bullets streaked the dust all the way across the valley. The raiders spurred madly in pursuit, loading and firing. They shot ten times while Ladd shot once, and all in vain; and on Ladd's sixth shot a raider toppled backward, threw his carbine and fell with his foot catching in a stirrup. The frightened horse plunged away, dragging him in a path of dust.

Ladd had emptied a magazine, and now Blanco Sol quickened and lengthened his running stride. He ran away from his pursuers. Then it was that the ranger's ruse was divined by the raiders. They hauled sharply up and seemed to be conferring. But that was a fatal mistake. Blanco Sol was seen to break his gait and slow down in several jumps. Then square away and stand stockstill. Ladd fired at the closely grouped raiders. An instant passed. Then Gale heard the spat of a bullet cut in front, saw a puff of dust, then heard the lead strike the rocks and go whining away. And it was after this that one of the raiders fell prone from his saddle. The steel-jacketed .405 had gone through him on its uninterrupted way to hum past Gale's position.

The remaining two raiders frantically spurred their horses and fled up the valley. Ladd sent Sol after them. The raiders split, one making for the eastern outlet, the other circling back of the mesquites. Ladd kept on after the latter. Then puffs of white smoke and rifle shots faintly crackling told of Jim Lash's hitting in the game. However, he succeeded only in driving the raider back into the valley. But Ladd had turned the other horseman, and now it appeared the two raiders were between Lash above on the stony slope and Ladd below on the level. There was desperate riding on part of the raiders to keep from being hemmed in closer. Only one of them got away, and he came riding for life down under the eastern wall. Blanco Sol settled into his graceful, beautiful swing. He gained steadily, though he was far from extending himself.

Some few hundred rods to the left of Gale the raider put his horse to the weathered slope. He began to climb. Zigzag they went up and up, and when Ladd reached the edge of the slope they were high along the cracked and guttered rumpart. Once—twice Ladd raised the long rifle, but each time he lowered it. Gale divined that the ranger's restraint was not on account of the Mexican, but for that valiant and faithful horse. Up and up he went, and the yellow dust clouds rose, and an avalanche rolled rattling and cracking down the slope. It was beyond belief that a horse, burdened or unburdened, could find footing and hold it upon that wall of narrow ledges and inverted, stanting gullies. But he climbed on, sure-footed as a mountain goat, and, surmounting the last rough step, he stood a moment silhouetted against the white sky. Then he disappeared. Ladd sat astride Blanco Sol gazing upward. How the cowboy must have honored that raider's brave deed!

Gale, who had been too dumb to shout the admiration he felt, suddenly leaped up, and his voice came with a shriek: "Look out, Laddy!"

A big horse, like a white streak, was bearing down to the right of the ranger, Blanco Diablo! A matchless rider swung with the horse's motion. Gale was stunned. Then he remembered the first raider, the one Lash had shot at and driven away from the outlet. This fellow had made for the mesquite and had put a saddle on Belding's favorite. In the heat of the excitement, while Ladd had been intent upon the climbing horse, this last raider had come down with the speed of the wind straight for the western outlet. Perhaps, very probably, he did not know Gale was there to block it; and certainly he hoped to pass Ladd and Blanco Sol.

A touch of the spur made Sol lunge forward to head off the raider. Diablo was in his stride, but the distance and angle favored Sol. The raider had no carbine. He held aloft a gun ready to level it and fire. He sat the saddle as if it were a stationary seat. Gale saw Ladd lean down and drop the .405 in the sand. He would take no chances of wounding Belding's best-loved horse.

Then Gale sat transfixed with suspended breath watching the horses thundering toward him. Blanco Diablo was speeding low, feet as an antelope, fierce and terrible in his devilish action, a horse for war and blood and death. He seemed unbeatable. Yet to see the magnificently running Blanco Sol was but to court a doubt. Plain it was the raider could not make the opening ahead of Ladd. He saw it and averted to the left, emptying his six-shooter as he turned.

Blanco Sol thundered across. Then the race became straight away up the valley. It was a fleet, beautiful, magnificent race. Gale thrilled and excited and yelled as his horse settled into a steadily swifter run and began to gain.

The gap between Diablo and Sol narrowed yard by yard. All the devil that was in Blanco Diablo had its running into the downward stretch. The strange, cruel urge of bit and spur, the crazed rider who stuck like a burr upon him, the shots and smoke added terror to his natural violent temper. He ran himself off his feet. But he could not elude that relentless horse behind him.

Then, like one white flash following another, the two horses gleamed down the bank of a wash and disappeared in clouds of dust.

Gale watched with strained and smarting eyes. The thick throb in his ears was pierced by faint sounds of gunshots. Then he waited in almost unendurable suspense.

Suddenly something whiter than the background of dust appeared above the low roll of valley floor. Gale leveled his glass. In the clear circle shone Blanco Sol's noble head with its long black bar from ears to nose. Sol's head was drooping now. Another second showed Ladd still in the saddle. The ranger was leading Blanco Diablo—spent—broken—dragging—riderless.

CHAPTER IX

An Interrupted Siesta.

No man ever had a more eloquent and beautiful pleader for his cause than had Dick Gale in Mercedes Castaneda. Nell lay in the hammock, her hands behind her head, with rosy cheeks and arch eyes. Indeed she looked rebellious.

Dick was inclined to be rebellious himself. Belding had kept the rangers in off the line, and therefore Dick had been idle most of the time, and, though he tried hard, he had been unable to stay far from Nell's vicinity. He believed she cared for him; but he could not catch her alone long enough to verify his tormenting hope. He had long before enlisted the loyal Mercedes in his cause; but in spite of this Nell had been more than a match for them both.

Gale pondered over an idea he had long revolved in mind, and which now suddenly gave place to a decision that made his heart swell and his cheek burn. He went in search of Mrs. Belding, and found her busy in the kitchen.

The relation between Gale and Mrs. Belding had subtly and incomprehensively changed. He understood her less than when at first he divined an antagonism in her. If such a thing were possible she had retained the antagonism while seeming to yield to some influence that must have been fondness for him. Gale had come to care greatly for Nell's mother. Not only was she the comfort and strength of her home, but also of the inhabitants of Forton River. Indian, Mexican, American were all the same to her in trouble or illness; and then she was nurse, doctor, peacemaker, helper. She was good and noble, and there was not a child or grownup in Forton River who did not love and bless her. But Mrs. Belding did not seem happy. She seldom smiled, and never laughed. There was always a soft, sad, hurt look in her eyes. Gale often wondered if there had been other tragedy in her life than the supposed loss of her father in the desert.

Mrs. Belding heard Dick's step as he entered the kitchen, and, looking up, greeted him.

"Mother," began Dick, earnestly. Belding called her that, and so did Ladd and Lash, but it was the first time for Dick. "Mother—I want to speak to you."

The only indication Mrs. Belding gave of being startled was in her eyes, which darkened, shadowed with multiplying thought.

"I love Nell," went on Dick, simply, "and I want you to let me ask her to be my wife."

Mrs. Belding's face blanched to a deathly white. Gale, thinking with surprise and concern that she was going to faint, moved quickly toward her, took her arm.

"Forgive me, I was blunt. . . . But I thought you knew."

"I've known for a long time," replied Mrs. Belding. Her voice was steady, and there was no evidence of agitation except in her pallor. "Then you— you haven't spoken to Nell?"

Dick laughed. "I've been trying to get a chance to tell her. I haven't had it yet. But she knows. I hope, I almost believe Nell cares a little for me."

"I've known that, too, for a long time," said Mrs. Belding, low almost as a whisper.

"You know?" cried Dick, with a glow and rush of feeling. "Mother! You'll give her to me?"

She drew him to the light and looked with strange, piercing intensity into his face. Gale had never dreamed a woman's eyes could hold such a world of thought and feeling. It seemed all the sweetness of life was there, and all the pain.

"Dick Gale, you want my Nell? You love her just as she is—her sweetness—her goodness? Just herself, body and soul? . . . There's nothing could change you—nothing?"

"Dear Mrs. Belding, I love Nell for herself. If she loves me I'll be the happiest of men. There's absolutely nothing that could make any difference in me."

"But your people? Oh, Dick, you come of a proud family. I can tell. You've become a ranger. You love the adventure—the wild life. That won't last. Perhaps you'll settle down to ranching. I know you love the West. But, Dick, there's your family—"

"If you want to know anything about my family, I'll tell you," interrupted Dick, with strong feeling. "I've no secrets about them or myself. My future and happiness are Nell's to make. No one else shall count with me."

"Then, Dick—you may have her, God—bless—you—both."

Mrs. Belding's strained face underwent a swift and mobile relaxation, and suddenly she was weeping in strangely mingled happiness and bitterness.

"Why, mother?" Gale could say no more. He put his arm around her. In another moment she had gained command over herself, and, blessing him, she pushed him out of the door.

"There! Go tell her, Dick. And have some spunk about it!"

Gale went thoughtfully back to his room. Then remembering the hope Mrs. Belding had given him, Dick lost his gravity in a flash, and something began to dance and ring within him.

He simply could not keep his steps turned from the patio. Every path led there. His blood was throbbing, his hopes mounting, his spirit soaring.

"Now for some spunk!" he said, under his breath.

Plainly he meant his merry whistle and his buoyant step to interrupt this first languorous stage of the siesta which the girls always took during the hot hours. But neither girl heard him. Mercedes lay under the pale verde, her beautiful head dark and still upon a cushion. Nell was asleep in the hammock. Her sweet, red lips, with the soft, perfect curve, had always fascinated Dick, and now drew him irresistibly. He had always been consumed with a desire to kiss her, and now he was overwhelmed with his opportunity. It would be a terrible thing to do, but if she did not waken at once—No, he would fight the temptation. That would be more than spunk. It would—She stirred—he feared she would awaken.

He had dropped back erect when she opened her eyes. They were sleepy, yet surprised until she saw him. Then she was wide awake in a second, bewildered, uncertain.

"Why—you here?" she asked, slowly.

"Large as life!" replied Dick, with unusual gaiety.

"Just long have you been here?"

"Just got here this fraction of a second," he replied, lying shamelessly.

"I thought—I was—dreaming," she said, and evidently the sound of her voice reassured her.

"Yes, you looked as if you were having pleasant dreams," replied Dick. "So sorry to wake you. I can't see why I came to do it. I was so quiet. Mercedes didn't wake. Well, I'll go and let you have your siesta and dream."

But he did not move to go. Nell regarded him with curious, speculative eyes.

"Isn't it a lovely day?" queried Dick. "Yesterday was finer, but you didn't notice it."

"Oh, yesterday was somewhere back in the past—the inconsequential past."

Nell's sleepy eyes opened a little wider. She did not know what to make of this changed young man. Dick felt gleeful and tried hard to keep the fact from becoming manifest.

"What's the inconsequential past? You seem remarkably happy today."

"I certainly am happy. Adios. Pleasant dreams."

Dick turned away then and left the patio by the opening into the yard. Nell was really asleep, and when she had fallen asleep again he would return. He walked around for a while. Presently, as if magnet-drawn, he retraced his steps to the patio and entered noiselessly.

Nell was now deep in her siesta. She was inert, relaxed, untroubled by dreams. Her hair was damp on her brow.

Again Nell stirred, and gradually awakened. Her eyes unsealed, humid, shadowy, unconscious. They rested upon Dick for a moment before they became clear and comprehensive. He stood back fully ten feet from her, and to all outside appearances regarded her calmly.

"I've interrupted your siesta again," he said. "Please forgive me. I'll take myself off."

He wandered away, and when it became impossible for him to stay away any longer he returned to the patio.

The instant his glance rested upon Nell's face he divined she was feigning sleep. Dick dropped upon his knees and bent over her. He wanted more than anything he had ever wanted in his life to see if she would keep up that pretense of sleep and let him kiss her. She must have felt his breath, for her hair waved off her brow. Her cheeks were now white. Her breast swelled and sank. He bent down closer—closer. But he must have been maddeningly slow, for as he bent still closer, Nell's eyes opened, and he caught a swift purple gaze of eyes as she whirled her head. Then, with a little cry, she rose and fled.

CHAPTER X

Rojas.

No word from George Thorne had come to Forton River in weeks. Gale grew concerned over the fact, and began to wonder if anything serious could have happened to him. Mercedes showed a slow, wearing strain. Thorne's commission expired the end of January, and if he could not get his discharge immediately, he surely could obtain leave of absence. Therefore, Gale waited, not without growing anxiety, and did his best to cheer Mercedes. The first of February came bringing news of rebel activities and bandit operations in and around Castia, but not a word from the cavalrymen.

A dozen times Gale declared he would ride in to Castia and find out why they did not hear from Thorne; however, older and wiser heads prevailed over his impetuosity. Belding and the rangers and the Yaqui held a consultation. Not only had the Indian become a faithful servant to Gale, but he was also the craft of his class, and superior intelligence. His knowledge of Mexicans was second only to his hate of them. And Yaqui, who had been scouting on all the trails, gave information that made Belding decide to wait some days before sending anyone to Castia.

It was upon Gale's coming from this conference that he encountered Nell. Since the interrupted siesta episode she had been more than ordinarily elusive, and about all he had received from her was a tantalizing smile from a distance. He got the impression now, however, that she had awaited him. When he drew close to her he was certain of it, and she experienced more than surprise.

"Dick," she began, hurriedly. "Mercedes is dying by inches. Can't you see what this is for?"

"No, I feel as badly as you about her. I wanted to ride to Castia. Belding shut me up quick, the last time."

Nell came close to Gale, clasped his arm. There was no color in her face. Her eyes held a dark, eager excitement.

"Dick, will you slip off without Dad's consent? Risk it! Go to Castia and find out what's happened to Thorne—at least if he ever started for Forton River."

"No, Nell, I won't do that."

She drew away from him with passionate suddenness.

"Are you afraid?"

"This certainly was not the Nell Burton that Gale knew."

"No, I'm not afraid," Gale replied, a little nettled.

"Will you go—for my sake?" Like lightning her mood changed and she was close to him again, hands on his, her face white, her whole presence sweetly aching.

"No, I won't disobey Belding," protested Gale. "I won't break my word."

"Dick, it'll not be so bad as that. But—what if it is? . . . Go, Dick. If not for poor Mercedes' sake, then for mine—to please me. I'll—I'll . . . you won't lose anything by going. I think I know how Mercedes feels. Just a word from Thorne or about him would save her. Take Blanco Sol and go, Dick. What rebel outfit could ever ride you down on that horse? Why, Dick, if I was up on Sol I wouldn't be afraid of the whole rebel army."

Gale could only stare at this transformed girl.

"Dick! Listen! . . . If you go—for my fetch some word of Thorne to comfort Mercedes, you—well, you will have your reward. Dick, will you go?"

"No—no!" cried Gale, in violence, struggling with himself. "Nell Burton, I'll tell you this. To have the reward I want would mean pretty near heaven for me. But not even for that will I break my word to your father."

She seemed the incarnation of girlish scorn and willful passion.

"Gracias, señor," she replied, mockingly. "Adios." Then she flashed out of his sight.

Gale went to his room at once, disturbed and thrilling, and did not soon recover from that encounter.

The following morning at the breakfast table Nell was not present. "She's in one of her tantrums lately," said Belding. "Wouldn't speak to me this morning. Let her alone, mother. She's spotted enough, without running after her. She's always hungry. She'll be on hand presently, don't mistake me."

Notwithstanding Belding's conviction, which Gale shared, Nell did not appear at all during the hour. Perhaps half an hour afterward, as Gale was leaving his room, he saw the Yaqui running up the path from the fields. Gale wondered what was the matter. Yaqui ran straight to Belding, who was at work at his bench under the wagon shed. In less than a moment Belding was following after her. Ladd and Lash were not far behind.

"Right out then Nell swore she'd go after Thorne."

Charms of Music.

"Sarantha, what's the chime the orchestra's playing now?" asked the old farmer, who was attending a concert for the first time in his life.

"Sarantha, his wife, looked long and earnestly at her program.

"It's by a fellow called Chopin," she replied.

"Well, maybe," was the reply. "But it sounds a deal more like sawin'."—London Answers.

A Near Guess.

"I'm improving in drawing, mother," said the little girl. "Are you, dear? That's good!" "Yes, I drew a cake on my slate and Bessie guessed it was an oyster. He knew it was something to eat, anyway, didn't he?"

BILLIE BROWNIE'S WALK

Billie Brownie was back once more in Fairyland which as you know includes Brownie-land, too.

Everyone wanted to hear of the walk he had taken, for he had been on a long one. He had worn an invisible suit, so he had not been seen, though he had seen everything there was to see.

Of course, some of the little bird people had seen him, for Mother Nature had made his robe so that he could turn it about so it would be invisible no longer.

And often out in the country he would wear it this way when he was stopping to chat with the birds.

"Oh, I had a splendid walk," he told everyone in Fairyland. "I enjoyed everything and everyone I saw. It is such fun to me to wander about. I don't have to wait for an enormous sight or view in order to have a good time—almost everything I enjoy."

"First of all I saw a child, and the child was sitting upon a curbstone and he was wearing a freeman's hat and he did look so fine. Well, I can tell you that was a sight worth seeing."

"He was dressed in a white fuzzy suit which looked as though it had been made of lamb's wool."

"I paid a hurried call on Peter Gudde's little friend Lucy. She was playing with a big doll. The doll was so big that she looked like a little girl. She was able to cry and to walk, and she had a pink dimple in her cheek."

"Her curls were real and Lucy dressed her in a pink hood with lavender ribbons, and fixed the hood so that one curl was left out on either side."

"The doll wore a pink dress upon which was embroidered a lavender dog."

"What!" exclaimed the Brownies and the Fairies.

"Yes!" answered Billie Brownie. "That is the truth. The dress the doll wore was just as sweet as it could be. And it was embroidered or decorated with lavender touches, and one of these touches was an embroidered dog—embroidered in lavender silks."

"The dress also had dear little pockets in it. I don't think I've ever seen so lovely a costume for a doll."

"The doll's knees were pink and dimpled and she wore little patent leather shoes. Her socks were of pink, and she wore little gold pins in the back of her dress."

"Lucy took her to call on all the neighbors."

"Then I went to see the little bird who belongs to the little girl named Katharine. You know the little girl's last name is Byrd and they call her bird the Byrd bird. Whenever Katharine comes in the house the bird always answers her when she calls out."

"After that I saw a cat and the cat told me that he was always playing pranks on his master and mistress and would get in their bed and rumple up the blankets and pull down the sheets and settle down, and that it was hard for them to get him out of the way and get the bed to rights later on in the evening. He was always so sleepy then, he explained."

"I saw the dog named Tams who belongs to a children's hospital. The hospital is in a very poor part of the city, and there are other dogs about, poor, rather forlorn looking dogs."

"During the summer when the hospital matron had plenty of water for Tams at all times and gave him cooling showers, Tams was not popular in the neighborhood."

"The other dogs thought that Tams was superior to them and felt that he was better than they were, and they would not play with him then!"

"But when winter came along they forgot all this and felt he was one of them again and played with him!"

"I saw another cat who said he always tried to sleep everywhere else besides his big basket, not that his basket wasn't comfortable, but because he liked to try all beds every evening."

"First he would get on one sofa for the night and the family would chase him off that, and then on another sofa and then he would roll up in a shawl and try to sleep, but at last he would go back to his basket."

"He had had a grandfather who had never been willing to sleep where he was supposed to sleep. In fact the grandfather had run away for good when he was not given the bed and quilt he wanted."

"Oh yes, I had a most interesting walk. There is always so much to see in this fine world!"

AFTER THE FLU

If the Flu Left You Weak, or You're in Need of a Tonic to Build You Up, Take This Advice.

Houston, Texas—"I was in a terribly run-down condition of health after a siege of pneumonia poisoning, and then the influenza. I could not seem to regain my strength and was really not able to do my housework. I knew I needed a good tonic and builder and remembered how my folks used to regard Dr. Pierce's remedies in my girlhood days, and then I decided to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking the second bottle I found it was doing me a world of good, strength returned rapidly and I felt better in every way. I am glad indeed to recommend the medicine that did me so much good and do not hesitate to give this statement."—Mrs. Gertrude Sell, 1236 Rutland St.

Schools Unconsciously Implanting a Spirit of Lawlessness in Pupils

By NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, Columbia University.

The report of the American Bar association's committee on law enforcement mentioned the year 1890 as significant in the history of the development of lawlessness in this country.

Until about 1890 the ruling notion in American education was that there existed such a thing as general discipline, general knowledge, and general capacity, all of which should be developed and made the most of by co-operation between the home and the school.

It would surprise a great many excellent persons to be told that the schools upon whose maintenance they are pouring out almost unlimited sums raised by public tax, were, quite unconsciously, doing all that they reasonably could to implant a spirit of lawlessness in those who come under their influence.

Sanity, Soundness and Fundamental Nature of Co-operative Marketing

By C. C. MORGAN, American Cotton Growers' Exchange.

It seems to me that the recent council of co-operatives at Washington undoubtedly accomplished a great deal both for the co-operative marketing movement itself and from the standpoint of bringing to the attention of official Washington the entire sanity, soundness and fundamental nature of the movement.

It demonstrated the clarity of mind, the vision and the devotion of big men from every part of the country to the cause of co-operation, after having been convinced by intelligent and careful consideration that the farmer himself, under efficient leadership, can by co-operation solve most of his economic problems.

It showed the faith of these men in the fundamental institutions of America and their intention to place the farmer, through proper co-operative organization, in position to fit in with the established business groups and to co-operate with them as well as each other.

Large Groups of Foreign-Speaking Peoples Whose Assimilation Is Slow

By REV. DR. D. D. FORSYTH, M. E. Home Missions Board.

The most stubborn and critical situation confronting American cities is the presence of large and congested groups of foreign-speaking peoples whose assimilation has been slow.

In others great colonies have been developed, known as Little Italies and Little Polands, where the ideals and standards of the Old World are prevalent.

These people are crowding into our schools, colleges and universities in great numbers. They are in every field of commercial and professional life. They constitute the great body of American toilers.

While a surprisingly large per cent of these people is not Protestant, a large per cent is not Catholic and not Jewish. They have broken with every faith.

We Must Not Forget Some Credit Is Due to Him Who Lives for His Country

By JUSTICE F. E. THOMPSON, Illinois Supreme Court.

In contrast to the men of learning and vision and high principles of the early years of our national life we now find infesting the halls of congress and polluting other high places, counterfeit patriots, demagogues and hypocrites.

There is just one remedy for this evil, and that is that every citizen become a politician. We have too many political slackers in this country, too many voters suffering from dry rot.

It is glorious to die for one's country and all praises to him who makes the supreme sacrifice. But in our praise for the dead we must not forget that some credit is due him who lives for his country.

Portland Lady Fell Off 40 Pounds, but Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully.

"For nine years," declared Mrs. Ella Wagenaar, 288 Graham St., Portland, Ore., recently, "I was almost a nervous wreck and never knew what it was to feel well."

"I was suffering from a general breakdown and, oh, it's just impossible to describe the pain and misery I endured. My stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a morsel of solid food. I lost forty pounds and was so weak I tottered like an infant when I walked. Many nights I never slept a wink, and I had weak spells, when I fainted dead away."

"After spending over a thousand dollars trying to get well, my husband finally persuaded me to take the Tanlac treatment. Well, that was the turning point, for all my troubles are gone now. I have almost regained my lost weight, and I've never enjoyed finer health. I will always believe Tanlac saved my life, and I'm so happy and grateful that I just can't help praising it."

JANE THOMAS SANDMAN STORY

HENPECKED ROOSTER

ONE day Mr. Rooster said to his wife, "My dear, I am going on a little excursion with Mr. Drake. He said he will show me a bit of the world I have not seen."

Mr. Rooster Went Along.

and when to keep silent, but this was one of the times she felt she must speak.

"I would not go far away with Mr. Drake, my dear," she said. "You know you cannot stand the weather as he can and it looks to me like rain."

"Oh, bother," crowed Mr. Rooster, "can't you see the weather is fine, and besides Mr. Drake is a man who is sure to be a fine day and he ought to know; he is older than we are."

"It may be a fine day for ducks," replied Biddy, "but not for hens and roosters. Better not go far away."

"Come along, don't let your wife boss you, Mr. Rooster," said Mr. Drake, who had just waddled along. "I never let my wives tell me what to do, and I have had several; it is going to be a fine day, I tell you."

Mr. Rooster lifted his head higher and strutted off with Mr. Drake down the road; the sun was shining and there were plenty of worms and bugs to be found, and though the sky did look dark once in a while Mr. Drake assured him that the weather was sure to keep fine, so Mr. Rooster went along where Mr. Drake led him.

The first thing he knew he was in the woods and the rain was pattering on the leaves. "Guess I better run home," he said.

"Oh, this is fine weather," said Mr. Drake. "Don't be frightened by a little rain. You rest under this tree and I will take a swim in the pond. I do love a swim when it is raining."

So off went Mr. Drake, leaving Mr. Rooster all dripping wet under the tree and feeling very unhappy, and he wished very much he had listened to his wife and stayed near the barnyard.

By and by the lightning flashed and the thunder rolled and down came the rain as if poured from a pail.

Mr. Rooster started for home soaked to the skin, and when he crept under the barnyard gate his wife, who was peeping out from under some bushes, saw him. "What did I tell you?" she said. "I knew just how it would be. Now you come right into the house and dry those wet clothes and get into bed."

"I'll put your feet in hot water and give you ginger tea and wrap you up in a blanket and the next time Mr. Drake wants to go on an excursion tell him to take some one that likes wet weather," and she gave him a sharp peck to let him know she meant it.

Biddy talked so fast that Mr. Rooster could not get in a word edgewise, and he didn't have anything to say anyway, so he meekly obeyed, and that was how he became a henpecked husband, for after that when Mr. Rooster started to do anything his wife did not like she had only to say, "Remember your trip with Mr. Drake," and give him a peck with her bill and the question was settled the way Mrs. Biddy wanted it.

It is a bad plan that admits of no modifications.—Folbino Syrus.

IT HAS been said that decorative flowers are even more important in the arrangement of the dinner table than the knives and forks, and true it is that the wise hostess takes as much thought in arranging her centerpiece as in seeing that the silver is freshly polished and properly arranged.

A fat pocketbook is not the only thing needed to make a tasteful floral arrangement on the dinner table. In fact, one need have very little money to spend in order to make an attractive and tasteful arrangement. An over-elaborate arrangement is no longer in good taste. Towering floral structures that really look like nothing so much as the "set pieces" that the florists prepare for far less joyous occasions are really quite bad, and the careful hostess does not leave the matter to the florist, but makes sure that something very simple in arrangement is selected. Except for a children's party or a dinner that is to be given in a spirit of extreme informality, paper decorations are not in good taste either. A cluster of roses or any other noisome or garden flowers attractively arranged in a glass or silver vase is a charming selection. The addition of ferns or similar adds to the effectiveness. The vase may be placed either on a bit of embroidered or lace-trimmed linen or on a mirror that reflects the flowers and candles so as to add to the general effectiveness of the arrangement.

A short time ago some of the shops offered for sale rather splendid-looking centerpiece devices that combined a vase placed at the center of a silver standard and little bonbon or salted nut baskets that were hung up on the silver brackets that came out from the standard on all sides. This was rather a clever arrangement, but it was not in the best taste, for nowadays we do not use the food as part of the centerpiece, as was the case when wonderful centerpieces were made of spun sugar and pastry. The only exception to this rule is in favor of choice flowers occasionally combined with the flowers.

There the house of Orange derived it and it became known in Germany and was brought to England in its full popularity by the good queen of George III. It gained sentimental vogue and an international fame through Goethe, who chose the name for his heroine of "Werther."

The first Carolina was evolved in Italy, but was quickly adopted by southern Germany and in turn brought to England by the wife of George II, who made it extremely popular among the nobility. America received it first through the Carolinas (North and South), and its fame and popularity as a feminine proper name spread rapidly.

Caroline has numerous derivatives and contractions. England calls her Charlotte, Lotty, Chatty, Caroline and Carrie. In France she is Carolina, Charlotte and Lottie. Carlotta and Lola are purely Spanish and Carlotta and Carolina are the Italian versions. Germany preserves the original preference for Charlotte, Carolina and Lina.

VIRGINIA AND OHIO URGE BETTER SIRE

Two States Have Been Active in Improving Stock.

Nebraska, Kentucky, Washington, South Carolina and Vermont Are Also Actively Engaged in Drive to Improve Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For more than a year the states of Virginia and Ohio have been unusually active, as shown by United States Department of Agriculture records, in improving their live stock by the use of purebred sires. At the end of the calendar year 1922 Ohio showed a total of 2,293 persons who had pledged themselves in writing to use purebred sires for all classes of live stock raised. Virginia's total was 1,930. Early in January, Virginia filed with the department 104 additional pledges in one day, thus passing the 2,000 mark and narrowing the margin considerably.

Other states similarly active in this organized drive to improve their live stock are Nebraska, Kentucky, Washington, South Carolina and Vermont. Current progress of the work in these and other states is shown by a report, just issued by the bureau of animal industry, and is obtainable on request.

TO MEASURE FARM INCOMES

Nation-Wide Survey Being Made to Discover Results of Farm Operations.

A nation-wide survey to discover the dollars and cents result of farm operations for the country as a whole in 1922 is now being made by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The survey, giving the facts of receipts and expenses, is the first of its kind ever attempted, and is part of a permanent project to determine the trend of incomes from farming, currently from 1922 forward, and backward, so far as available data will permit. The survey will show acreage, farm value, method of operation, production, receipts and expenses on individual farms. Compilations will be made by sections of the country and also by commodities.

In addition to a general questionnaire distributed among 60,000 of the department's crop reporters, a detailed broadcast questionnaire will be sent to all farmers in counties where the department has already made farm business analysis studies. This year the special county work will include 16 areas, ten by mail and six covered personally by department representatives.

TURKEYS IN HIDDEN PLACES

Hens Often Steal Nests in Patch of Weeds or Tall Grass—Best Plan to Confine Them.

Turkey hens are wont to "steal" their nests in hidden places, such as a patch of weeds, tall grass or thick brush and often wander a half mile or more from home before they find locations that suit them. To find these stolen nests often proves to be a long and tedious task, the usual method being to follow each turkey hen as she separates from the flock and starts toward her nest, care being taken that she does not know she is being followed. A much easier and quicker method than this is to confine the hens early some morning soon after they have come down from nest and let them out late in the afternoon. Those that are laying will then head for their nests in order to lay the eggs they have been holding.

If many turkeys are kept, the use of a breeding pen will be found a great convenience. This pen should cover a sufficient area to allow the turkeys some exercise, an acre for fifteen birds being none too large. A hogtight wire fence three feet high will hold most turkeys, and if any persist in flying out, the flight feathers of one wing should be clipped. Nests should be scattered about the pen.

SHIP ONIONS LONG DISTANCE

Important That They Be Properly Matured, Cleaned and Graded Before Packing.

If properly matured, cleaned and graded, onions may be shipped long distances. If they are shipped to points outside of your state, they have to be graded according to the standards adopted by the United States Department of Agriculture. Before shipping, you should know the financial standing of the person or firm you are dealing with.

PROFIT MADE IN LAMBING SEASON

Little Extra Care by Shepherd at This Critical Period Will Be Repaid Later On.

GRAIN FEED CAUSES TROUBLE

Use of Small Individual Pens Prevents Other Sheep From Injuring Young Animals—Prevent Chilling in Cold Weather.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The lambing season is a busy time for the shepherd, as the percentage of lambs saved affects the profitableness of the flock. Extra work at this period will be well repaid, as a little care given at the right time will result in the saving of many lambs, and even of some of the ewes that would otherwise be lost, and will often thus greatly increase the amount of profit from the flock, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Ewes which have been well cared for and which arrive at this season in good condition will give very little trouble during lambing. It should be remembered that only a small amount of grain, approximately one-quarter to one-half pound per head per day, should be fed to the ewes just before lambing, as heavy grain feeding at this time will often cause udder trouble. Even in flocks which have received the best of care, it is usually necessary to help some of the ewes deliver their lambs. When assistance is needed the hands should be thoroughly cleaned and rubbed with oil to prevent infection and irritation to the ewe.

Ewe in Individual Pen. Just before or immediately after she has lambed, each ewe should be placed in a small individual pen. The use of these pens prevents the other sheep from injuring the lambs and gives the ewe a much better chance to "mother" her lamb.

As soon as the lamb is delivered the shepherd should cleanse the phlegm from the lamb's mouth and nostrils.

Ewe and Lamb in Individual Pen.

Some lambs when dropped, while apparently normal in every way, will fail to start breathing but oftentimes their breathing may be started by blowing into their mouth and nostrils.

The first few hours of the lamb's life is the most critical period through which it passes. In cold weather care is required to prevent the newborn lamb from chilling. In case a lamb becomes slightly chilled it may usually be revived by wrapping in dry cloths or by being placed near a warm fire for a short time. If badly chilled, however, it may be necessary to immerse the lamb for two or three minutes in water which is as hot as the hand can bear, after which it should be wiped as dry as possible, wrapped in dry cloths and placed in a warm room.

Lambs which are unable to stand and suckle, and those which have been chilled, should be helped to secure a fill of milk as soon as possible. After they have suckled two or three times and become thoroughly dry and warm they will stand considerable hardship.

Ewes Disown Lambs. If individual pens are used for the ewe and lamb, and the ewes are in good condition so that they have sufficient milk for their offspring, very few of the lambs will be disowned. Young ewes with their first lamb, and those in poor condition, give the most trouble in disowning their lambs. In case a ewe refuses to own her lamb it often helps to draw some of the milk and rub it upon her nose and over the lamb. If she has lost her lamb she may be induced to adopt some disowned one or a twin lamb by taking the skin from her own lamb and fastening it over the one to be adopted.

The ewes should be given all the water they want immediately after lambing, and care should be taken to cut down on their feed, particularly

INCREASING EGG PRODUCTION

Poultryman Should Make Use of Trap Nest and Employ Systematic Method of Breeding.

The poultryman who would increase the average egg production of his fowls should employ the trap nest, at least to some degree, practice careful selection always, and put into effect a systematic method of breeding which will result in a more efficient strain, grain, for the first few days.

Unhappy Mother's Day

An Indianapolis youth, just out of college, has recently become enamored by a pretty middle-aged widow. He went to his dad in whose office he works and asked him for a raise, so that he could buy furniture and get married. His father eyed him mildly for a few minutes and then said: "Oh, I'll tend to your furniture. They're having a sale at the Johnson home today. I'll go down there and pick up some of their—"

Not Such Good Luck. Youngwife—"It was just by luck that I was able to get this steak." Young husband—"It was sure tough luck."

Opportunity sometimes looks pale gray, because embracing it means so much hard work.

WAS HERE BEFORE COLUMBUS SURELY HAD A BUSY DAY

Claims Put Forward That Danish Navigator Landed on the American Continent in 1476.

Several months ago Dr. Sofus Larsen of the University of Copenhagen reported having discovered among old Portuguese and Danish documents, evidence that John Scolvo or Sculf, a Danish navigator, reached the American continent and landed there in 1476, 16 years before Columbus sailed.

According to Doctor Larsen's account, the Portuguese prince, Henry the Navigator, after his twentieth attempt to reach India by sailing around the lower end of Africa had succeeded, conceived the idea that ships could reach another part of India by sailing northward across the Atlantic. He got in touch with Christian of Denmark, his brother-in-law, and asked him to assist in dispatching an expedition from Denmark in search of a northwest passage to India. Christian fell in with the plan and chose John Scolvo, an experienced, competent sailor, to pilot the ship. Finally the ship reached the coast of Labrador in safety, and found a harbor in what is now called the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

It's pleasanter to be hopeful; that's why so few of us are pessimistic.

Novelist Must Have Been Kept Fully Employed, Judging From the Result of His Labors.

"English novelists are effete. They go in too much for style. There's a lack of red blood in their work. At a dinner in a country inn where we were staying together, I said one evening to an English novelist:

"Well, I dashed off 8,000 words today. What did you do?"

"Oh, I was immensely busy," said he. "I corrected the proofs of my new essay."

"Make any changes?" I asked. "I made one very important change," he said. "I took out a comma."

"I couldn't help giving a disgusted laugh. 'And is that all you did all day?' I said—'take out a comma?'"

Married Life. "Well, how's married life? Does your wife judge you harshly?" "I'm on probation most of the time."

Moving Verse. "I wonder why that poem keeps running in my head." "Exercising its feet, I suppose."

Just think what you've been missing!

MANY people deny themselves the comfort of a hot drink with meals, because they find coffee and tea detrimental to health. For many, the drug element in coffee and tea irritates the nerves, retards digestion and often prevents natural, restful sleep.

OUT WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

(By Arthur Chapman)

Out where the handclasp's a little stronger,
 Out where the smile dwells a little longer,
 That's where the West begins;
 Out where the sun is a little brighter,
 Where the snows that fall are a trifle whiter,
 Where the bonds of home are a wee bit tighter,
 That's where the West begins.
 Out where the skies are a trifle bluer,
 Out where friendship's a little truer,
 That's where the West begins;
 Out where a fresher breeze is blowing,
 Where there's laughter in every streamlet flowing,
 Where there's more of reaping and less of sowing,
 That's where the West begins.
 Out where the world is in the making,
 Where fewer hearts in despair are aching,
 That's where the West begins;
 Where there's more of singing and less of sighing,
 Where there's more of giving and less of buying,
 And a man makes friends without half trying,
 That's where the West begins.

In a few days Ollie will go to the A. B. Dyer ranch to assist him with his flock of goats.

MOHAIR AND THE GOAT

In talking with some of the leading goat raisers of Terrell county, a reporter for the Times learns that a majority of the goat men are endeavoring to breed up their flocks with the main idea of getting a goat that will produce a heavy greasy wool.

This is a very good idea and is to be commended, provided however, that the principle is not carried too far. For instance, a careful study of the records of the goat industry of this and foreign countries shows that the heavy greasy wool is invariably short in length and never brings as high a price as the longer staple. Also that the life of the greasy wool covers a period of only a few years and then the goat is covered with a light short wool. And again, rains can wash the grease out of mohair.

Breed up your flocks for greasy wool, by all means, but don't neglect to breed for the lengthy fleece along with it. The long mohair will always bring a fancy price, its life extends over an indefinite period, and rain does not affect it.

Breed up your flocks, but watch your step.

4 TIMES Around the World with ONE OILING 100,000 Miles Without Stopping for Oil

An inventor who could develop an automobile, a railroad car or any other conveyance on wheels which would perform such a feat would be considered a wonder. But such is the record of regular accomplishment by the Auto-oiled Aermotor during the past eight years in pumping water. Did you ever stop to think how many revolutions the wheel of a windmill makes? If the wheel of an Aermotor should roll along the surface of the ground at the same speed that it makes when pumping water it would encircle the world in 36 days, or would go four times around in a year. It would travel on an average 2 1/2 miles per day or about 30 miles per hour for 9 hours each day. An automobile which keeps up that pace day after day needs a thorough oiling at least once a week. Is it marvelous, then, that a windmill has been made which will go 50 times as long as the best automobile with one oiling? The Auto-oiled Aermotor after 8 full years of service in every part of the world has proven its ability to run and give the most reliable service with one oiling a year. The double gears, and all moving parts, are entirely enclosed and flooded with oil all the time. It gives more service with less attention than any other piece of machinery on the farm. To get everlasting windmill satisfaction buy the Auto-oiled Aermotor, the most efficient windmill that has ever been made. For full information write

The Store That Serves Ten Counties
 DEL RIO, TEXAS

(An Editorial Clipped From The Val Verde County Herald)

The Medical Practice act passed by the last legislature was signed by Governor Neff last Saturday and becomes effective next June. This new law operates to bar the chiropractors and the Christian Science healers from practicing in Texas and forces the ailing public to depend entirely upon the medical practitioners for relief from bodily ills, whether the public wants to or not. Efforts have been made in every legislature for a number of years to have this law repealed but heretofore a majority of the law makers have been men that could not be controlled by gifts of free whiskey and small donations of cash, so it became necessary to wait until the law making body should happen to be principally composed of cheap grafters and mental nincompoops, as was doubtless the case at the recent term. The law will be repealed at some future session of the legislature, but for a time it will serve to put the chiropractors out of business and retard the development of a science that is destined to render a wonderfully great service in righting physical wrongs and relieving suffering humanity of bodily ills, as it is even now doing to a limited extent. Christian Science healing will not be so seriously effected by the law, as the operators in this science are permitted to practice where no charge is made for service and these operators do not, as a rule, charge a fixed fee. It is not thought that the legitimate, capable and honorable medical practitioners and surgeons of Texas wanted this law passed, nor did as many as ten per cent of the public want such a law, but a few grafters with money and a good supply of booze managed to put it over and the Governor failed to veto it because of a lack of knowledge of the situation.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Lowry went to El Paso Thursday on account of sickness of their son, Pat.

GOOD TIMES AHEAD

Another good rain this week! One can hardly realize the amount of rain that has fallen in this section during the past few months as the rains have for the most part been slow and steady. So far we have not had any of the heavy floods that usually come during a rainy spell. The water has soaked well into the ground and a good season is ahead of the stockmen of this vicinity. Although some cold accompanied the last rain it was not severe enough to do any amount of damage to the sheep and goat flocks, although a great number of them had been freshly sheared.

For Sale--Five room house, cement walled cistern, good grassy lawn, two lots. Good home nicely located and for a reasonable price. For particulars write Box B, Sanderson, Texas.
