CREDIT, WHERE DUE

In spite of the fact that the men who took part, will neither expect nor want any public recognition of their deed, I feel that I should at least acknowledge what they did for me, as represented by the deposit slip which was presented to me last Tuesday. This act of loyalty and kindness means a great deal to me under present conditions. And while I may not get to see each man personally, I hope everyone will consider this a personal thank you, that comes from the bottom of my heart. Those men are as follows:

Thomas L. DesLandes, Charles Downie, Ed Downie, F. K. Harrell, G. J. Henshaw, James Kerr, Joe Kerr, H. R. Laurence, L. H. Lemons, Alex. Mitchell, O. E. Schupbach, J. C. Stansell.

In addition to the above individuals, I wish also to acknowledge my gratitude to the two local Fraternal organizations that have aided me so much, and to four following additional men:

M. A. Cavender, W. A. Cochran, Dr. Robertson, Fred Savage.

These men have been faithful and loyal to the extreme. One of them, over whose protest this paragraph is being printed, has been a father and brother, he has been at our service night and day over a period of three months and is one among a thousand. There are a score of others, women as well as men, who have performed minor services, and Mrs. MacCalmont joins me in heart-felt thanks in our deepest and most sincere thanks to each and everyone.

J. E. MacCalmont.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The lawn in front of the Kerr Hotel, last Saturday afternoon, was the scene of a happy gathering of little folks to help Daisy Lee Corder celebrate her eighth birthday.

Various games and contests were played, one of which was a bean guessing contest. In this contest Novice White won the girl's prize and Billie Holland and the boy's for guessing to the nearest number of beans in a bottle.

Delicious cake and ice cream was served to the following guests: Mary Arrington, Beverly Franklin, Novice White, Lily and Emily Strange, Mabel Schupbach, Eugenia Jones; Buster and Billie Holland, Roger Franklin, B. T. Corder Jr., and the young hostess. Red toy balloons were given as favors.

John Edwards returned from Junction City, Texas Tuesday after being with his brother, Frank Edwards, who was hurt by a horse falling on him about 12 days ago and was thought to be at the time, seriously hurt, but John informs us when he left his brother he was doing fine.

SANDERSON BOYS WIN AND GIRLS LOSE

ZIP! BANG! this started the first game of basket ball of the season for the Sanderson Hi teams when they clashed horns with Marathon last Saturday. The first game started at 9 a. m., and was played by the girls team of Marathon vs Sanderson. Due to being larger girls and having better team work the Marathon girls were victorious without a struggle by the score of 41 to 3.

In the second game, boys, which started at 10:00 a. m. our boys showed excellent team work and training, and just naturally trampled all over Marathon by the overwhelming score of 54 to 4. The perfect shooting of baskets by Minton White and the forwarding by "Eph" Cavender were the features of the game. In the first 3 quarters of the afternoon game Sanderson's second team held the visitors down to 24 to 2 and the first team went in the last quarter making 2 more baskets, bringing the total score Marathon 2, Sanderson 28. The Sanderson teams will return the games at Marathon. Coach White is giving the boys some hard workouts and the girls need more team work and practise and it is hoped that they will bring home the bacon.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN

Those who failed to see the entertainment given at the School Auditorium last Friday evening missed a rare treat. To a crowded house children of the grade and high school kept the audience in merriment, by the various songs, readings, folk-dances, recitations and playlet given. It is hard to judge which number was best, as all were very excellent and Miss Gibson deserves credit in making the entertainment a success by her directing the children. This is just one of the numerous entertainments to be given throughout the year.

WEDNESDAY BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. Sims Wilkinson entertained the Wednesday Bridge Club with a delightful party at her home Friday of last week. Five tables were played, Mrs. H. R. Laurence having high score and Mrs. J. W. Happle second high. Delicious refreshments of chicken salad, olives, crackers and tea were served to the following: Mrs. H. R. Laurence, Mrs. J. W. Happle, Mrs. Max Bogusch, Mrs. John Green, Mrs. F. B. Carter, Mrs. John Stovell, Mrs. B. P. Franklin, Miss Sybil McKee and the hostess.

REBEKAHS OBSERVE THEIR ANNIVERSARY

A meeting of Sanderson Rebekah Lodge No. 279 was called September 29th for the purpose of celebrating their seventy-second Anniversary.

Quite a nice crowd was present, Lodge was opened and closed in due form. Then Sister Bodkin, master of ceremonies for the evening, had quite treat for us, some good readings had been prepared, which was very much enjoyed.

Slips of paper passed around and questions on the secret work and constitution were asked, which was quite a surprise to all present, however the papers turned in were not as blank as "we felt" at the beginning. We found quite a few very bright Rebekahs in our order. We believe it pure luck that first prize went to Bro W. A. Cochran, Sister Effie Harrell, being our latest member received the boobie prize, but she is not giving out just the nature of her prize.

We were then served delicious refreshments by Sisters Harrell, Parsons and Eldridge. All thanked Sister Bodkin for such an enjoyable evening.

Like Looking at the Sun

Looking into one of the huge rotary kilns where the raw materials for cement are burned into clinker is just like looking at the noonday sun.

The terrific heat required makes a glare of light so intense that the glowing flame would temporarily blind you.

But borrow the workman's colored goggles to protect your eyes while you take another look into the kiln. Then you will see a tornado of powdered coal—or gas or spraying oil—bursting into a sheet of sun-white flame.

Into the other end of the kiln flow the powdered limestone and shale [clay]—the raw materials for cement.

As the slowly revolving kiln tumbles the materials about, they are subjected to gradually increasing heat. During their three-hour journey through this inferno, moisture and gases are first given off. Finally as the powdered materials reach the sunwhite flame, they half melt into glass-hard balls called "clinker." This clinker, an entirely new chemical compound, when finely powdered is portland cement.

Portland cement kilns consume great quantities of fuel—30 pounds of coal or its equivalent for each 94-pound sack of cement. For the whole cement making process the consumption of coal is approximately 50 pounds a sack—more than half a ton of coal to a ton of cement.

BIG COTTON CROP IS NOW PREDICTED

The Forecast Is Based on Condition of Staple in September.

Washington.—A cotton crop larger by a million and a quarter bales than last year's forecast last week by the department of agriculture, which placed production at 11,015,000 bales. The forecast, the last of the season until the December estimate, was 227,000 bales more than indicated last month.

The forecast was based on the condition of the crop September 25, which was 49.5 per cent of a normal, indicating a yield of 137.7 pounds per acre. A month ago the crop was forecast at 10,788,000 bales on a condition of 54.1 per cent of a normal on August 5, indicating an acre yield of 134.8 pounds. Last year's crop was 9,761,817 bales.

NEW RULING GOVERN IMPORTS IN MAILS

Washington.—The treasury and post office departments have announced drastic new joint regulations governing importation of merchandise through the mails designed to prevent such packages from escaping tariff duties.

Among the rules which will become effective November 1 is provision that all sealed packages will be returned to the country of origin unless they bear indorsement that the seal may be broken for customs examination. Shipments "tainted with fraud" are to be confiscated.

Packages must contain an accurate invoice of the contents and if the articles are intended for resale, definite statements of their value must be included.

Revision of the regulations was made necessary, a statement said, by the "enormous increase" in imports coming by mail, and particularly by parcel post, and consequent delay under the present rules at important ports.

Texas News

The commissioners court at Brenham has decided to build a new jail, which will cost $40,000, on the site now occupied by the old one.

The Texas Cotton Palace Exposition at Waco opens this year on October 20 and closes November 4.

Completion of the east end seawall extension at Galveston from the end of the old wall to the south jetties is expected by October 31.

Hardin County, with three oil fields within its boundaries and ten saw mills in operation, claims oil and lumbering for its principal industries.

The attorney general Saturday approved $200,000 bonds for Magnolia Park, a suburb of Houston, the proceeds to be used in constructing a gas plant.

All records for exports were broken by the port of Houston in September. Cotton exports totaled 193,691 bales, as against $4,560 for the same month of last year.

A contract for the construction of two dormitories at the state colony for the feeble-minded at Austin was awarded Saturday by the state board of control for $69,389.45.

The year 1923 has proved to be the banner year for Galveston as the convention city of Texas. During this twelvemonth forty-four meetings and conventions were booked, with five to be held, three in November and two in December, nearly four a month.

The Texas coast produced 12,337 barrels more of oysters the fiscal year just closed than it did the preceding year, as shown by taxes collected by the game, fish and oyster commission, and collections on fish show an increase of some 200,000 pounds, with 329 more fishermen engaged in the business.

Establishment at San Antonio of a branch office of the state oil and gas division of the railroad commission was announced this week by R. B. Walthall, chief supervisor. S. W. Blount, Jr., of Ranger, was appointed deputy supervisor in charge of the office and will supervise operations in the Somerset and Luling and other Southwest Texas oil fields.

Noteworthy progress in agriculture over Jackson County is indicated in the use of more machinery and scientific methods of preparing the soil, an increasing acreage in farm lands and the more general use of intensive cultivation methods. The leading crops are rice, cotton, corn, sorghum, watermelons, broom corn, hay, figs and oranges. Considerable cabbage and other truck crops are also raised.

Fort Bend County is making considerable advances along with other progressive counties of the state in diversification in farming, education, improvement of highways and in addition has one of the busiest little manufacturing communities in the state. Two producing oil fields, Blue Ridge and Big Creek, also are located within her bounds and add to the wealth of the county. Particularly among the farmers are conditions improved and there is more money among this class of residents than at any time since 1918.

Washington County, of which Brenham is the county seat, is making progress in road building, and the work started in the last three years will serve well as the basis for one of the best systems of roads of any county in the state. A bond issue of $1,500,000 was voted three years ago and half of it has already been expended. The other half of the bonds were issued this year and is being used on present construction. State and federal aid received amounts to $525,000. Thirty-two miles of concrete highway have been completed and construction of forty more has already been started.

The attorney general's department in an opinion constructing the blue sky law specifically holds that electric interurban railway corporations come within the provisions of the law and are not included within the exceptions applying "to railroad corporations." This is in reply to the questions raised by J. F. Wolters of Houston, attorney for the interurban railroad of $2,000,000 capital stock to be built down the Houston ship channel to Seabrook, touching Harrisburg, Manchester and other industrial points on the channel.

East Texas is fast becoming recognized as the land of opportunity for the farmer. It was recognized as such by the early settlers of Texas, but since their day the call of the West and its promises of fabulous wealth have caused other generations to pass over unnoticed one of the choicest parts of the Southwest. For some reason East Texas has never lent itself to lurid stories of riches to be obtained for the mere scratching of the surface of the soil. Such stories are generally promulgated by the promoter of questionable land agent schemes, and such men have never found a very warm welcome in East Texas.

Farmers in Austin County, of which Belville is the county seat, have had a good season this year and as most of them own their farms, many of them will have a surplus of money on hand for improvements and additions to their stock. While the cotton crop has been cut short by the dry weather and some infestation of boll weevils, the corn crop is very good and the crop of foodstuffs more than sufficient for their own needs. Watermelons alone have proved a large source of revenue this year. A total of 246 cars were shipped.

OKLAHOMA SOLONS CALLED TO MEET

Both Houses of Legislature Asked to Convene on October 17.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—A call for a special session of both houses of the Oklahoma legislature on October 17 to investigate "the commission of impeachable offenses by the officers of the state subject to impeachment" was issued Friday by W. D. McBea, state representative from Stephens County.

The call was made under the alleged authority of a constitutional amendment approved at the polls last Tuesday by citizens of the state. The summons sets out that it was issued upon "written request signed by a majority of the members of the house of representatives asking that the legislature be convened pursuant to the mandate of the people."

The text of the call follows: "To the members of the house of representatives and the senate, constituting the legislature of the state of Oklahoma:

"Whereas, the constitution of the state of Oklahoma empowers the legislature to impeach and remove from office certain state officials who may be guilty of impeachable offenses, and contains no limitations as to the time of preferring and trying such impeachments, and

"Whereas, the people of the state of Oklahoma, at an election held in said state on October 2, 1923, by an overwhelming vote gave the legislature their mandate to convene for said purposes, and

"Whereas, I, W. D. McBea, now have in my possession a written request signed by the majority of the members of said house of representatives asking that the legislature of the state of Oklahoma be convened, pursuant to the mandate of the people, for the purposes authorized by article 8 of the constitution, and asking that I immediately issue a call for the assembling of the legislature for the purposes specified.

"Now, therefore, I, W. D. McBea, a member of the house of representatives of the state of Oklahoma, do hereby call the legislature of the state of Oklahoma, the house of representatives and the senate and the members of each body to meet, convene and assemble in their respective halls in the state capitol building in Oklahoma City, Okla., at 12 noon, on Wednesday, the 17th day of October, 1923, for the purposes of investigating the commission of impeachable offenses by the officers of the state subject to impeachment, and of preferring impeachments against such as may be found to have committed impeachable offenses, and of trying the same before the senate sitting as a court of impeachment, as provided in article 8 of the constitution of the state of Oklahoma.

"Dated this 5th day of October, 1923. W. D. McBEA, Member of the House of Representatives from the County of Stephens, State of Oklahoma."

DAM RIVER TO STOP FLOOD

Barrage Type Constructed in South Africa to Prevent Collecting of Mud in Reservoir.

After seven years of building, a dam that stops a 40-mile river in South Africa was recently completed. A barrage type was chosen to prevent collecting of mud and earth in the reservoir and to avoid flooding of private property on the river banks. In the average year enough dirt is carried down this river to cover 720 acres a depth of six inches. Passing through tanks and filters and being treated with chemicals clears the water. Thirty-six sluice gates control the huge barrage, 1,400 feet long. When full, the depth of the water will be 25 feet. At the formal opening a British prince officiated.—Popular Mechanics.

What! Another? Actress—I'm delighted to see you again. Allow me to introduce my husband. Manager—Ah! Always a pleasure to meet any husband of yours.

Election in Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Opponents of Governor J. C. Walton scored a sweeping victory Tuesday in the most spectacular election ever held in Oklahoma. By a decisive majority a constitutional amendment was passed empowering the state legislature to meet on its own call to consider impeachment charges against the governor. Despite the executive's proclamation postponing the election, and his threat to block it by armed force, opposition was negligible and the halting proceeded peacefully, except for minor instances, throughout the state.

Accidents Take 73,000 in Year.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Accidents in the United States during 1922 exacted a toll of approximately 73,500 human lives, an increase of nearly 2000 over the estimated number for the previous year, a committee report declared Thursday at the National Safety Congress.

Lloyd George in America.

Free from the burden of carrying on the British government, the former prime minister comes to discover America anew, and to impart his views from the platform to the American people.

Auto Ads Take Freak Shapes.

For advertising purposes the wild business getter has never overlooked the possibilities of the automobile. Many are the cars with big painted signs on them proclaiming the advantages of some one's particular flour or the merits of so and so's cheese. They attract considerable attention, but in no way nearly as much as those freak-bodied automobiles designed to resemble a bottle or a shoe, or some such thing with the driver's compartment carefully concealed inside. Most of these are familiar sights, but it remained for a most novel of all—a miniature house on wheels. Perfect in every exterior detail, it represents a suburban residence, and when first sighted coming around a corner is startling.—New York Sun and Globe.

To tame the tongue, the thoughts have to be tamed first. Think pleasant ones.

Why take the risk?

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyright Dodd, Mead & Company)

CHAPTER XIV—Continued.

"I want a repeat of that telegram that was sent to Tuppence at the Ritz. Sir James Peel Edgerton said you would be able to manage that for me. One last thing—please have that house in Soho watched day and night. Yours, etc.

"THOMAS BERESFORD."

"He seems confident," mused the prime minister.

A half smile came to the other's lips.

"And it is this—who will defeat the master criminal of our time?"

"This—boy, as you say! But I sometimes fancy I see a shadow behind."

"You mean?"

"Peel Edgerton. I see his hand in this."

There was a pause, then Mr. Carter continued:

"I asked him to come round here. Not that we'll get anything out of him he doesn't want to tell. His legal instincts are too strong. But there is no doubt he can throw light on one or two obscure points in young Beresford's letter. Ah, here he is!"

The two men rose to greet the newcomer. A half whimsical thought flashed across the premier's mind.

"My successor, perhaps?"

"We've had a letter from young Beresford," said Mr. Carter, coming to the point at once. "You've seen him, I suppose?"

"He rang me up."

"Would you have any objection to telling us exactly what passed between you?"

"Not at all. He thanked me for a certain letter which I had written to him—as a matter of fact, I had offered him a job. Then he reminded me of something I had said to him at Manchester respecting that bogus telegram which lured Miss Cowley away. I asked him if anything untoward had occurred. He said it had—that in a drawer in Mr. Hershelmer's room he had discovered a photograph." The lawyer paused, then continued: "I asked him if the photograph bore the name and address of a Californian photographer. He replied: 'You're on to it, sir. It had.' Then he went on to tell me something I didn't know. The original of that photograph was the French girl, Annette, who saved his life."

"What?"

"Exactly. The discovery was a providential one. Of course, from the moment that the girl in Manchester was proved to be a plant everything was altered. Young Beresford saw that for himself without my having to tell him. But he felt he couldn't trust his judgment on the subject of Miss Cowley. That brought us back to the telegram."

"Yes?"

"I advised him to apply to you for a copy of the original wire. It had occurred to me as probable that, after Miss Cowley flung it on the floor, certain words might have been erased or altered with the express intention of setting searchers on a false trail."

Carter nodded. He took a sheet from his pocket, and read aloud:

"Come at once, Astley Priors, Gatehouse, Kent. Great developments—TOMMY."

"Very simple," said Sir James, "and very ingenious. Just a few words to alter, and the thing was done. And the one important clue they overlooked."

"What was that?"

"The page-boy's statement that Miss Cowley drove to Charing Cross. They

"Somehow I do. I may be wrong, of course."

The other two asked no questions. They had an instinct that it would be mere waste of breath.

"But what I don't understand," said the prime minister suddenly, "is how that photograph came to be in Mr. Hershelmer's drawer?"

"Perhaps it never left it," suggested the lawyer gently.

Two days later Julius Hershelmer returned from Manchester. A note from Tommy lay on his table:

"Dear Hershelmer:

"Sorry I lost my temper. In case I don't see you again, good-by. I've been offered a job in the Argentine, and might as well take it.

"Yours,

"TOMMY BERESFORD."

A peculiar smile lingered for a moment on Julius's face. He threw the letter into the waste-paper basket.

"The damned fool!" he murmured.

After ringing up Sir James, Tommy's next procedure was to make a call at South Audley mansions. He found Albert discharging his professional duties, and introduced himself without more ado as a friend of Tuppence's. Albert unbent immediately.

"Things has been very quiet here lately," he said wistfully. "Hope the young lady's keeping well, sir?"

"That's just the point, Albert. She's disappeared."

"You don't mean as the crooks have got her?"

"They have. By the way, have you by any chance an aunt, a cousin, a grandmother, or any other suitable female relation who might be represented as being likely to kick the bucket?"

A delighted grin spread slowly over Albert's countenance.

"In on, sir. My poor aunt what lives in the country has been mortal bad for a long time, and she's asking for me with her dying breath."

Tommy nodded approval.

"Can you report this in the proper quarter and meet me at Charing Cross in an hour's time?"

"I'll be there, sir. You can count on me."

As Tommy had judged, the faithful Albert proved an invaluable ally. The two took up their quarters at the Inn in Gatehouse. To Albert fell the task of collecting information. There was no difficulty about it.

Astley Priors was the property of a Dr. Adams. The doctor no longer practiced, had retired, the landlord believed, but he took a few private patients—here the good fellow tapped his forehead knowingly—"balmy ones! You understand!" The doctor was a popular figure in the village, subscribed freely to all the local sports—a very pleasant, affable gentleman."

Tommy felt doubts. Was it possible that this genial, well-known figure could be in reality a dangerous criminal? Suppose it was all a gigantic mistake? Tommy felt a cold chill at the thought.

On the first evening Tommy, accompanied by Albert, explored the grounds. They reached a shrubbery near the house quite unobserved. The blinds of the dining room window were up. There was a large company assembled round the table. It seemed a normal, pleasant company.

Again Tommy felt that cold chill of uncertainty. It seemed impossible to believe that these people were other than they seemed. Had he been fooled once more?

Tommy slept badly that night. The next day Albert brought the first piece of hopeful news. There was a French young lady staying in the house. Tommy put his doubts aside. Here was confirmation of his theory. But time pressed. Today was the 27th. The 28th was the much-talked-of "Labor Day," about which all sorts of rumors were running riot. Newspapers were getting agitated. Sensational hints of a labor coup d'état were freely reported. The government said nothing. It knew and was prepared.

Tommy felt that, thanks to Mr. Carter, he understood the position fairly accurately. With the fatal document in the hands of Mr. Brown, public opinion would swing to the side of the labor extremists and revolutionists. Failing that, the battle was an even chance. The government with a loyal army and police force behind them might win—but at a cost of great suffering. But Tommy nourished another and a preposterous dream. With Mr. Brown unmasked and captured he believed, rightly or wrongly, that the whole organization would crumble ignominiously and instantaneously. The strange permeating influence of the unseen chief held it together.

"This is a one-man show," said Tommy to himself. "The thing to do is to get hold of the man."

That evening he and Albert once more penetrated the grounds of Astley Priors. Tommy's ambition was somehow or other to gain admission to the house itself. As they approached cautiously, Tommy gave a sudden gasp.

On the second floor window some one standing between the window and the light in the room threw a silhouette on the blind. It was one Tommy would have recognized anywhere! Tuppence was in that house!

He clutched Albert by the shoulder.

"Stay here! When I begin to sing, watch that window."

He retreated hastily to a position on the main drive, and began in a deep roar, coupled with an unsteady gait, the following ditty:

I am a Soldier
A Jolly British Soldier;
You can see that I'm a Soldier by my feet . . .

It had been a favorite on the gramophone in Tuppence's hospital days. He did not doubt but that she would recognize it and draw her own conclusions.

Presently an unimpeachable butler, accompanied by an equally unimpeachable footman, issued from the front door. The butler remonstrated with him. Tommy continued to sing, addressing the butler affectionately as "dear old whiskers." The footman took him by one arm, the butler by the other. They ran him down the drive, and neatly out of the gate. It was beautifully done—soberly and with perfect decorum. Anyone would have sworn that the butler was a real butler, the footman a real footman—only, as it happened, the butler was Whittington!

Tommy retired to the inn and waited for Albert's return. At last that worthy made his appearance.

"Well?" cried Tommy eagerly.

"It's all right. While they was a-running of you out the window opened, and something was chucked out." He handed a scrap of paper to Tommy. "It was wrapped round a letter-weight."

On the paper were scrawled three words: "Tomorrow—same time."

"Good egg!" cried Tommy. "We're getting going."

Tommy retired for the night in a state of some elation. He had elaborated a careful plan for the following evening. About twelve o'clock, however, his calm was rudely shaken. He was told that some one was demanding him in the bar. The applicant proved to be a rude-looking carter well coated with mud.

"Well, my good fellow, what is it?" asked Tommy.

"Might this be for you, sir?" The carter held out a very dirty folded note, on the outside of which was written: "Take this to the gentleman at the Inn near Astley Priors. He will give you ten shillings."

The handwriting was Tuppence's. Tommy appreciated her quick-wittedness in realizing that he might be staying at the inn under an assumed name. He unfastened it.

"Dear Tommy:

"I knew it was you last night. Don't go this evening. They'll be lying in wait for you. They're taking us away this morning. I heard something about Wales—Holyhead, I think. I'll drop this on the road if I get a chance. Annette told me how you'd escaped. Buck up."

"Yours,

"TWOPEUCE."

Tommy raised a shout for Albert. "Pack my bag! We're off!"

"Yes, sir. The boots of Albert could be heard racking upstairs.

Holyhead! Did that mean that, after all—Tommy was puzzled.

The boots of Albert continued to be active on the floor above.

Suddenly a second shout came from below.

"Albert! I'm a d—d fool! Unpack that bag!"

"Yes, sir."

Tommy smoothed the note thoughtfully.

"Yes, a d—d fool," he said softly. "But so's some one else! And at last I know who it is!"

you will be so kind as to come to the point?"

"I guess that won't take a minute," drawled Julius. Then, with an abrupt change of manner: "Hands up—or I shoot!"

For a moment Kramenin stared blindly into the big automatic, then, with almost comical haste, he flung up his hands above his head. In that instant Julius had taken his measure. The man he had to deal with was an abject physical coward—the rest would be easy.

"This is an outrage," cried the Russian in a high hysterical voice. "An outrage! Do you mean to kill me?"

"Not if you keep your voice down. Don't go edging sideways towards that bell. That's better."

"What do you want? Money?"

"No. I want Jane Finn."

"Jane Finn? I—never heard of her!"

"You're a damned liar! You know perfectly well who I mean."

"I tell you I never heard of the girl."

"And I tell you," retorted Julius.

And I Tell You, Retorted Julius, "That Little Willie Here Is Just Hopping Mad to Go Off."

"That Little Willie here is just hopping mad to go off."

"You wouldn't dare—"

"Oh, yes, I would, son!"

Kramenin must have recognized something in the voice that carried conviction, for he said sullenly:

"Well? Granted I do know who you mean—what of it?"

"You will tell me now—right here—where she is to be found."

"I don't. You ask an impossibility."

"Afraid, eh? Of whom? Mr. Brown? Ah, that tickles you up! There is such a person, then. I doubted it. And the mere mention of him scares you stiff!"

"I have seen him," said the Russian slowly. "He is a man to fear."

"He'll never know," said Julius. "He knows everything—and his vengeance is swift."

"Then you won't do as I ask you?"

"You ask an impossibility."

"Sure that's a ploy for you," said Julius cheerfully. "But the world in general will benefit." He raised the revolver.

"Do not shoot. I will do all you wish."

Julius lowered the revolver.

"Where is the girl?"

"At Gatehouse, in Kent. Astley Priors, the place is called."

"What about the other girl, the one you decamped away over a week ago?"

"She's there too," said the Russian sullenly.

"That's good," said Julius. "Isn't it all panning out beautifully? And a lovely night for the run!"

"What run?" demanded Kramenin, with a stare.

"Down to Gatehouse, sure. I hope you're fond of motoring?"

"What do you mean? I refuse to go."

"Now, don't get mad. You must see I'm not such a kid as to leave you here. You'd ring up your friends on that telephone first thing! Ah!" He observed the fall on the other's face.

"You see, you'd got it all fixed. No, sir, you're coming along with me. This your bedroom next door here? Walk right in. Little Willie and I will come behind. Put on a thick coat, that's right. For life! And you a Socialist! Now we're ready. We walk downstairs and out through the hall to where my car's waiting. And don't you forget I've got you covered every inch of the way. I can shoot just as well through my coat pocket."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Jumping to Conclusions.

We had recently moved from a large city, where no one thought of calling on his new neighbors, to a small town infested with peddlers and agents. Upon answering a knock at the screen door I came face to face with a woman carrying a large hand-bag.

She greeted me with a friendly "How-do-you-do," and then waited for me to invite her in, which I did not do. I finally broke the silence by asking, "Well, what are you selling?"

She was one of our neighbors who had come to pay a friendly call—no change.

PLAN WAY TO HELP AMERICAN FARMER

President Coolidge Making Study of Agricultural Situation.

Washington.—President Coolidge, continuing his study of the agricultural situation through conference with farm organization representatives, received and took under consideration recently a proposal that as a means of relieving the farmers of the country, the war finance corporation accept settlement made by foreign buyers of American farm products.

The proposal was presented to the president by the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation, which, like the executive committee of the national grange, was received by the president, called by invitation of the executive.

As laid before the president, the plan contemplated no additional explanation or action by congress. It merely would have the war finance corporation take over settlement received by farmers co-operative organizations for grain sold for export, the corporation paying from its funds to the co-operative organizations the amounts involved. Authority for such action is contained in the act creating the war finance co-operation, and the plan, in the opinion of the Farm Bureau Federation, could quickly be put into effect.

Another proposal, similar to that made by the Farm Bureau Federation, is under consideration by the president, and has been subject of conferences held by him with war finance corporation members within the last few days. It involves organization privately, but, with the assistance of government funds, of an export corporation to deal in farm products. The president has not committed himself to the plan, but is thinking over a suggestion that either Managing Director Meyer or Director Mondell of the finance corporation visit the central northwest to discuss it with the wheat growers.

President Coolidge Friday set in motion a plan designed to ameliorate agricultural depression. He designated Managing Director Meyer and Director Mondell of the War Finance Corporation to proceed into the Northwest immediately and assist in the formation of co-operative marketing associations, promotion of which the president believes will result in direct benefit.

NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL WEEK WILL BEGIN ON NOVEMBER 18

Washington.—President Coolidge issued a proclamation Saturday calling for observance of the week beginning November 18 as national education week.

"Every American citizen," the president said, "is entitled to a liberal education. Without this there is no guarantee for the permanence of free institutions, no hope for perpetuating self-government.

"Despotism finds its chief support in ignorance. Knowledge and freedom go hand in hand."

Education week is held each year under the joint auspices of the National Education Association, United States bureau of education, and American Legion, co-operating with more than a hundred other national organizations, the purpose being to bring the people closer to their schools.

Will Select Delegates.

Washington.—Democrats in 17 states will select their delegates to the national convention next year by direct vote in a series of primaries beginning in March. A tabulation of the dates of these primaries has been made public by the democratic national committee.

To Fight Wage Increase.

Chicago, Ill.—Twenty-two carriers running west of Chicago have appeared before the United States railroad labor board prepared to oppose requests for increased wages presented by the American Train Dispatchers' Association.

Cotton Pickers Needed.

Washington.—From 8,000 to 10,000 cotton pickers are needed in West Texas, according to a review made by the farm labor bureau of the United States employment service. It is expected that picking will continue until about Christmas time.

Farmers Gathering Corn.

Gonzales, Tex.—Some of the farmers have stopped picking for a while and are gathering corn which had been to rot in some sections of the county. The corn crop is far below normal and a few scattering loads have been selling for 90 cents per bushel.

Pecan Crop Short.

Smithville, Tex.—With the crop now opening to some extent it is discovered that the pecan yield in the Smithville section will not be over 50 per cent of normal, due to the ravages of insects, which caused many of the half-grown nuts to fall off.

Prisoners Make Escape.

Dusseldorf.—Sixty criminal prisoners overpowered their guards and escaped from prison Sunday after the rioting in the city had subsided.

Change of Modes, Word from Paris

The autumn openings in Paris have revealed the beginning of a fashion dispute which promises considerable interest to the amateur as well as to the professional of fashion, writes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times. One camp desires the restoration of the tailored suit to its prewar position of elegance and usefulness. The opposing party seeks to restore the former elegance through the medium of lines expressed in the two and the three-piece costumes. Patou, among those couturiers most favored by Americans, has come out strongly for the abolition of narrow and tailored costumes generally. On the other hand, old and well-recognized houses like Caré and Toulman have introduced long, narrow, semi-fitted tailored suits, which by their new features are exciting much interest.

Guided by the expressed preference of their chic clientele, most of the houses that have opened are showing gowns following the straight slim line that women have decided the most youthful and generally becoming.

There is a very effective three-piece costume in rough suiting with a tiny shepherd's plaid in black and white. The coat is a useful straight sack with a touch of green at the collar and showing in the lining of the sleeves that widen at the wrists. The plastron front of the bodice is just the size and shape of the stiffened part of a man's dress shirt. It is of heavy green serge in a dark emerald shade, and is fastened down the center with some domed steel buttons. The green is continued round in a small yoke under the straight high collar, and there is a double line of it at the waist.

The always popular black velvet is used in another suit for more dressy occasions. This suit is studded with small steel clasps in an effective design. Black fur furnishes the material for the collar and is used as a finish for the sleeves which, like the majority shown this fall, widen at the wrists. The somberness of this costume is lessened by a lame blouse in silver made without sleeves. And the skirt is appliqued onto this blouse in a series of velvet circles of graduated sizes. There is a touch of rose-colored embroidery at the waist.

Evening Dresses Rich in Color.

A serviceable dress in this collection and an attractive one, too, is a little blue serge, quite straight in line, that opens down the side with a narrow gold galon. This galon widens to suggest a pointed pocket just below the waistline, which is defined by a narrow belt. The high collar is also bordered with the gold and a touch of emerald green, both of which are repeated in the cuff of the long straight sleeve.

Evening dresses are rich in color and material. Velvet is seen in bright

There is, too, the usual surprise in store for the beholder of Poiret's creations. A white dress shows a back of unrelieved black. A black velvet three-piece suit has a front of pomegranate red.

An interesting black velvet suit has the fashionable bell-shaped coat and sleeves which so many couturiers in Paris are using. But Poiret with a bold stroke adds a rather tight-draped skirt instead of the bell-shaped one favored by Patou and other designers, thereby showing the deference to the popular taste for slender lines. At the same time he raises his banner in defense of the new silhouette in the width he gives to the bottom of the three-quarters coat. The scarlet cloth and gold braid with which this coat is trimmed can easily be replaced by a trimming of less startling shade, thus making the costume one which the conventional-minded will find more to their taste.

Modeled in Several Sections.

In the four-tiered skirt of the white satin evening dress Poiret apparently sets his stamp of approval on the new fashion of modeling the skirt in several sections, a fashion seen in daytime costumes as well as in the dressier ones for evening wear. The dress is unrelieved with the exception of the large chon of black velvet at the left side, the ends of which sweep the floor.

Another of the younger houses in Paris, Paul Caré, also favors the straight line, showing a few hooped skirts for the "coming out" wardrobe of the young girl. Many of his dresses are made without a belt, the waist being defined by drapery finished with a buckle, and this designer also favors the many tiered skirts, usually three. His skirts are longer than last year, but are still a comfortable walking length.

A Paul Caré evening gown called "La Dame en Rouge" is an example of the 1880 outline, once more becoming popular, with a finely plaited flounce from the knee in front. The straight corseage is finished with two slanting bias basques, in front, and curves down at the back, where it is the starting point of two panel trains each plaited from the knee downward to match the flounce in front. Vivid sealing wax red georgette is the material used for this "new" old-fashioned gown.

But out of all the gossip of fashion salons and the more reliable gossip of couturier's work rooms one gathers that there is a strong tendency to differentiate sharply between the lines of street clothes and leisure-time clothes. The tailored suit is being revived, that is certain. Semi-rigid costumes are coming to the fore for daytime, or at least for morning wear, and those who remain faithful to the tailored frock will find that it has become more tailored and less limp as autumn advances.

In direct opposition to this inanity of street costumes is the femininity of afternoon and evening dresses.

Eighteen Century Styles.

At the recent Grand Prix ball in Paris Eighteenth century styles were much in evidence and marked the long step fashionable women have taken in the direction of puffs, ruffles and frills. Circular skirts and skirts which flare from the knee level toward the feet stress the femininity of modern styles.

All this is quite in line with Patou's theory that lovely woman must not reveal too much. Therefore he bans the straight, tight tailored fashions and champions the voluminous skirt, whose fullness he harmonizes with the modern idea of slenderness by making his skirts of soft materials which fall gracefully toward the ground.

New Street Suit of Black Velvet Is Trimmed With Scarlet Cloth and Gold Braid.

rose and jade green with diamante embroidery on gowns of straight lines. Diamante is also used with great effect on black velvet, a jet embroidered black crepe de chine being the one unrelieved black dress in the collection. Gold lace is embroidered with fine chenille on the apron front and shoulder cape of another evening dress, and the Chinese influence is shown in a blue printed velvet in Chinese design.

Paul Poiret gives us the picturesque in dress with sometimes startling but always original results. His long skirts reach the ankle even in tailor-made suits, and this season he is giving a medieval touch to his dresses with long-waisted corseages fitting tightly to the figure. Poiret still uses the heavy padded rope at the waistline or carries a frill of the skirt material over the belt, giving width to the hips through accentuating the smallness of the waist.

"And It Is This—Boy Who Will Defeat the Master Criminal!"

were so sure of themselves that they took it for granted he had made a mistake.

"Then young Beresford is now?"

"At Gatehouse, Kent, unless I am much mistaken. Any more facts about that American chap for me?"

"The afraid not. Is it important to find out who he was?"

"Oh, I know who he was," said Sir James easily. "I can't prove it yet—but I know."

"Well?"

Carter shrugged his shoulders.

"I couldn't get much. Young fellow about thirty-five—poorly dressed—face very badly disfigured. He was never identified."

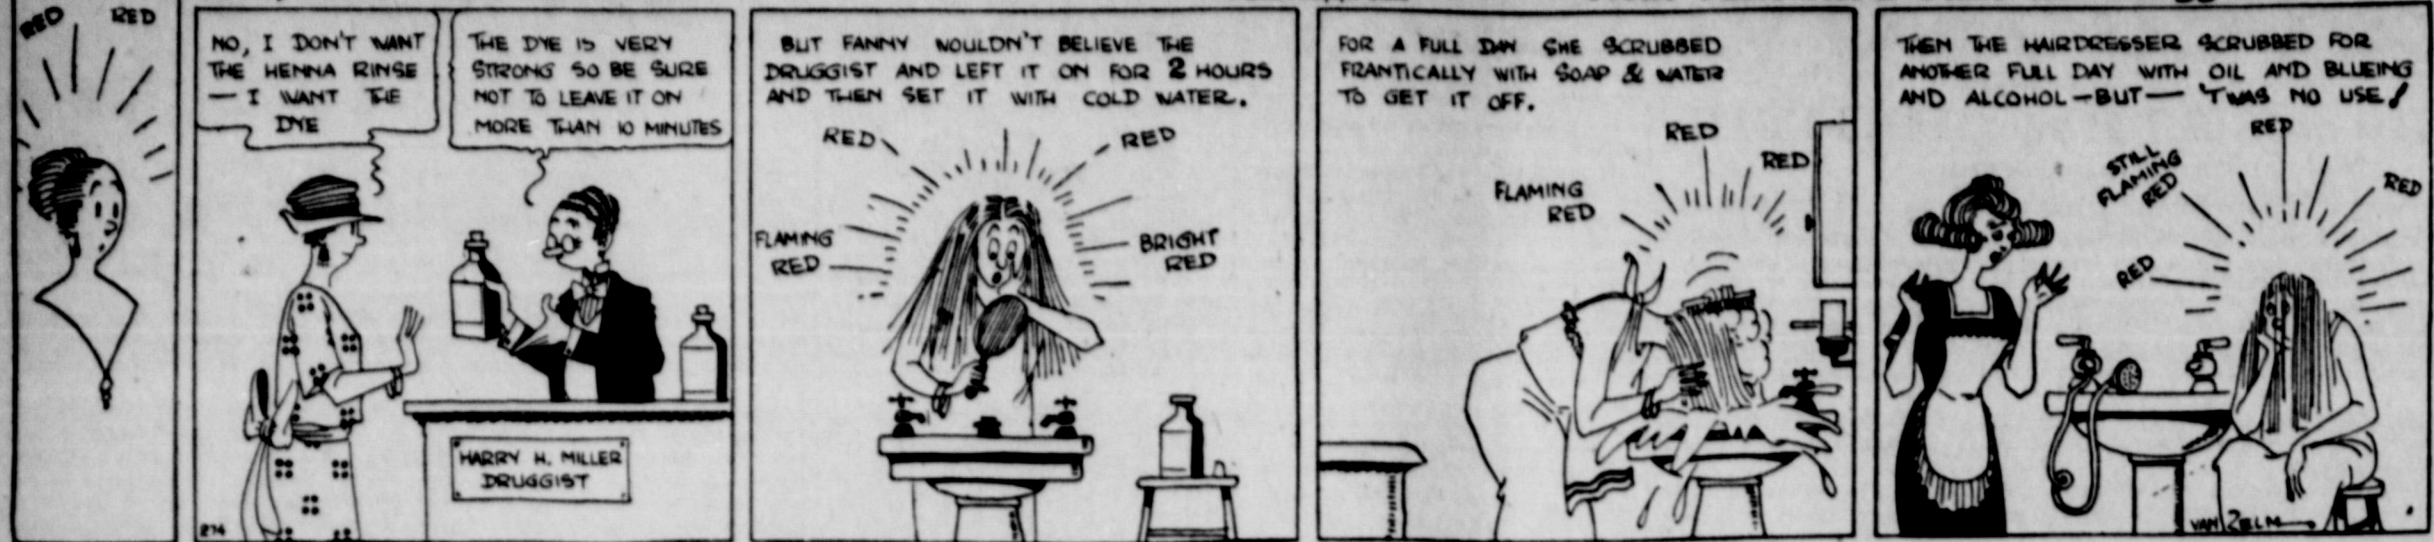

"And you fancy that the two matters are connected in some way?"

Great Importance of Good Breeding

Statistical Studies of Meat Yields of Food Animals Show Wide Variations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Statistical studies just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture, showing meat yields of various classes of animals in proportion to live weight, bring out clearly the importance of good breeding. In the work conducted, all the principal kinds of market live stock were included, the grades varying from common stock to animals slaughtered in the carcass competition of the International live stock exposition. Figures were obtained from a number of government sources and from the packing industry.

Good Breeding Shows Its Value.
The difference in dressing yield for various grades of cattle ranged from 48 to 66 per cent, meaning that that proportion of the animal was the dressed carcass. For sheep and lambs the dressing yield varied from 42 per cent for common market ewes to 58.3 per cent for International show wethers. The figures for swine show dressing percentages ranging from 75 to 85.3 per cent. The relatively high figures for swine are due in part to the fact that the skin and head commonly remain on the carcass. The International show animals in each case are chiefly pure breeds, fed specially to produce an ideal carcass.

The results, in the judgment of specialists in the bureau of animal industry, are clear-cut evidence that the types of animals shown and recognized as best by judges of live stock are much superior to poorly bred stock from a meat standpoint.

The practical side of the study just completed is shown by the following statement by John Roberts of the bureau of animal industry, who made the compilation:

Steer Carcasses Compared.
"The difference in dressing yield between a 'good' and a 'common' steer, according to the figures collected, is 6 per cent. For a 1,000-pound steer this would mean 60 pounds more of marketable meat. Nor is this all, since the meat of the higher-class animal is superior in quality throughout, as well as being better distributed among the choicer cuts. In other words, the well-bred steer makes a more profitable use of his feed than the inferior one. These things are taken strictly into account by the experts who price the animals in the stockyards; they are, indeed, the factors that determine the market value of one class as compared with another.

"What happens when two such steers are sold in the open market is of interest. Consider a 'good' and a 'common' steer raised on the same farm and fattened together in the same feed lot. Assume that each steer weighs 1,000 pounds and they are marketed at Chicago during the first week of July, 1923. The result of the sale would have been as follows:

	"Good" Steer	"Common" Steer
Weight at market (lbs.)	1,000	1,000
Selling price per 100 lbs.	$ 16.01	$ 7.12
Sale value of steer	160.10	71.20
Increased value of "good" steer	$ 88.90
Per cent of increase	55.5

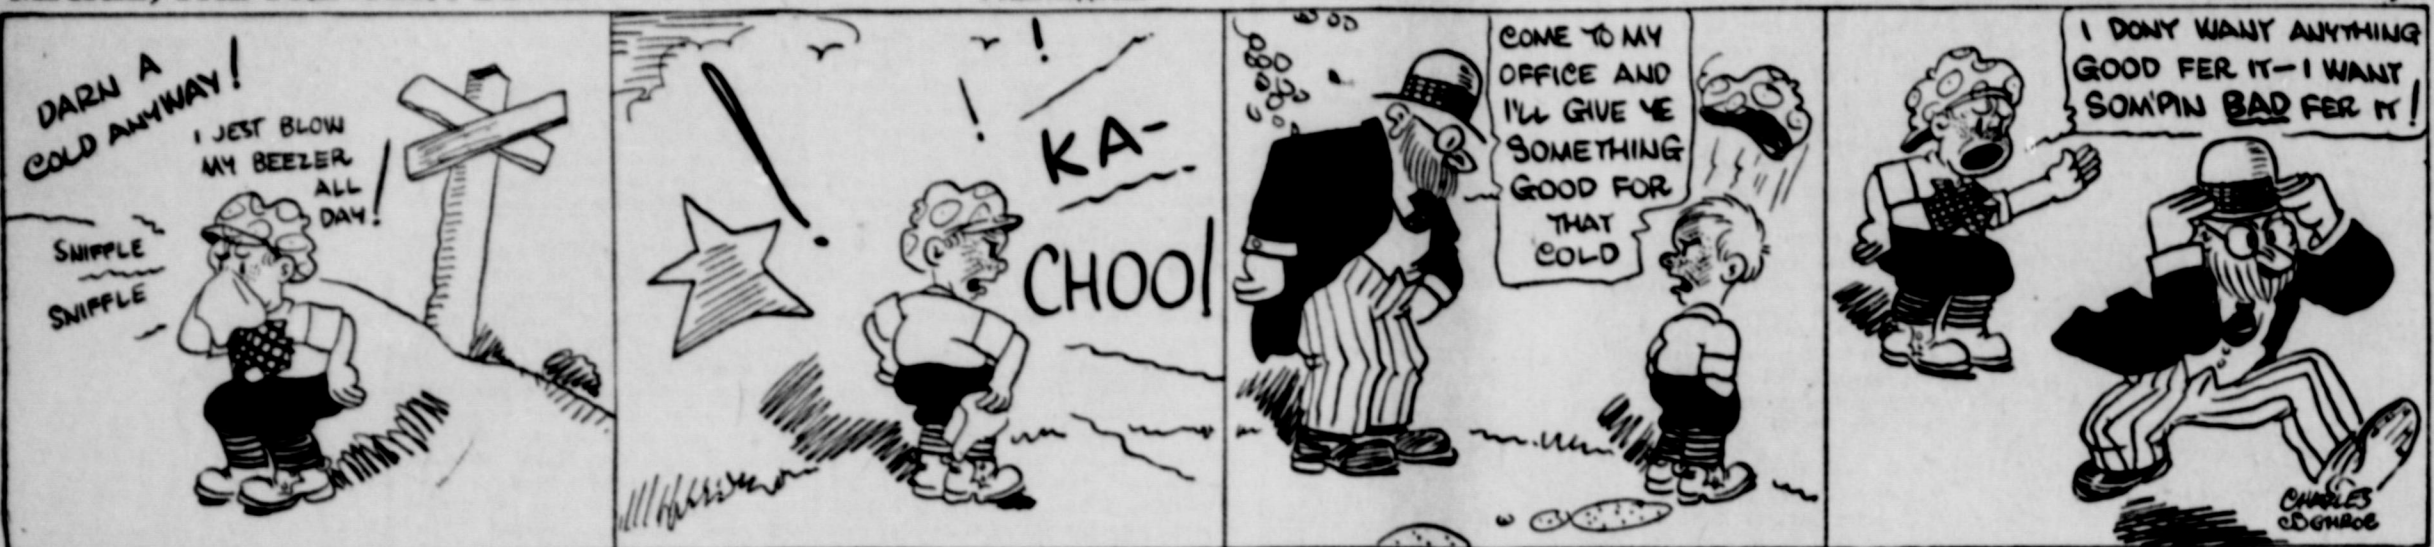

Market prices from "Weather, Crops, and Markets," July 14, 1923, page 39.

"Considering the early-maturing qualities of better-bred beef cattle, it may well be assumed in the above cases that the common steer was a year older than the other, and so would have to be charged with an additional year's keep."

Carefully Remove Even Sprouts of Barberries

Removal of the original bushes of the common barberry is not by any means all of the warfare planned against this ally of black stem rust. Those in charge of the anti-barberry campaign are sending word to every property owner who has had the bushes on his land removed to check up the former location of the pest for any sprouts which may be coming up.

"This work should be done before the leaves appear," says L. W. Melander of Minnesota university farm, who is representing the government in the anti-barberry campaign, "as the sprouts are very susceptible to rust and cause an early infection. Destruction of common barberry bushes is of no avail unless their former sites are checked thoroughly several times each year for sprouts. Indeed, it may be necessary to watch for sprouts for several years.

"The United States Department of Agriculture and the state university authorities ask the co-operation of every one in the eradication of a pest which causes millions of dollars of damage every year."

Adopt Improved Methods to Raise Better Wheat

Improved methods of growing wheat, to produce better grain and grow it more economically, advocated by agricultural extension workers, were adopted on over 90,000 farms in 1922, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. One and a quarter million bushels of seed wheat were treated by farmers for smut in this connection.

Rob's Calomel of Nausea and Danger

Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity,—purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water,—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs. —(Adv.)

CHICAGO DRAINAGE CANAL

The Chicago Drainage Canal ranks well to the fore among the great engineering feats of modern times.

The purpose of its construction was twofold. Primarily to purify Chicago's supply of drinking water, which is obtained from Lake Michigan, by reversing the flow of the Chicago river so that the sewage from the city, instead of being dumped into the lake, would be carried off into the Des Plaines river, which in turn empties into the Illinois river. Ultimately, to provide a ship canal from Lake Michigan to the Gulf of Mexico.

Commenced in September, 1892, and formally opened in January, 1900, this so-called canal is approximately forty miles in length, has a minimum depth of twenty-two feet, varies in width from 100 to 200 feet at the top, and has a capacity of about 300,000 cubic feet of water per minute.

Four major operations were involved in this huge task. First, the Chicago river had to be both widened and deepened for more than five miles; next the digging of a canal for twenty-eight miles; then the river had to be diverted from the old to the new channel and finally the building of a tail-race and a new channel for seven miles.

Grave fears were entertained by many that the cities past which this diverted sewage must flow and which obtained their supplies of drinking water from this stream would be visited by an epidemic of water-borne disease, particularly typhoid. Again the question as to whether the taking of sufficient water from Lake Michigan to flush the canal would adversely affect the interests of the states and cities bordering on the lake, through the lowering of the surface of the water in the lake, and in turn interfere with the navigable capacity of the rivers which flow into the lake, was long and seriously discussed.

Intensive scientific examination and investigation failed to substantiate the threatened dangers from disease; the imagined damage to the navigation interests of the Lake Michigan region failed to materialize.

That Chicago has benefited immeasurably from a sanitary standpoint there is not the question of a doubt, according to the reports of the health department. When the locks in the Des Plaines and Illinois rivers, which connect the canal with the Mississippi river are increased in size and the fixed bridges which span the canal in the Chicago zone are transformed to swinging or lift bridges, it is expected that barges and light-draft river craft will move in large numbers from Chicago, through this man-made channel, to New Orleans.

OLD GRANARY BURYING GROUND

Within the confines of the older (eastern) states of this Union there are many ancient, quaint, and hallowed burying grounds, most of which closely surround or adjoin a much-loved chapel or meeting house. Among the most interesting of these is that precious plot of ground known as Old Granary Burying Ground, near the present business center in the city of Boston.

The town granary once stood on this site—hence this peculiar name. The burying ground was established about the year 1640.

Within this well-kept enclosure which is surrounded by an imposing protective fence, lie the remains of three signers of the Declaration of Independence, nine governors, Peter Faneuil, that public-spirited individual who presented the city the famous hall which bears his name; Paul Revere, that patriot who, on April 18, 1775, warned his country of the marching of the British troops towards Lexington and Concord, and other notables of their time.

Probably the most conspicuous headstone that graces the shaded covering of the departed is that erected by Benjamin Franklin, the most important literary man of his day, in loving tribute to the memory of his father, Josiah, and his mother, Abiah.

An outstanding feature of the plot are a number of almost-a-century-old elm trees which cast their shadows over this resting place.

The epitaphs on many of the stones which mark these ancient graves are quaint, indeed, and peculiar in the light of present-day custom. An unusual one reads:

Here lieth ye body of John Downing, aged about 52 yrs. died April ye 18 1664.

I bawled with Christ for room below. He grants a mansion in his upper story. Thus God gives more than we do ask or know. Instead of grace uninterrupted glory.

Another:

Here lies interred the body of Mr. Thomas Crawford, who departed this life, Aug. 20, 1773, Aged 56.

Slip here my friend and rest an eye. As you are now, so once was I. As I am now, so you must be. Prepare for death and follow me.

A good name is better than precious ornament.
