LETTER MEN RECEIVE SWEATERS

Last week Coach White and the letter men of this year's basket ball squad were presented with beautiful sweaters as trophies for this season's work. Judge G. J. Henshaw made the speech of presentation, and gave encouragement for the continuation of the efforts of the high school student body and faculty in their athletic work. He especially commended all members of this year's squad for their tireless efforts to put into the field one of the best basket ball teams Sanderson has ever produced.

In presenting the letter men of the squad of this year with sweaters, Sanderson has followed the example of other schools of the state, and has taken a forward step in trying to interest all members of the high school in athletics, and to urge them to even greater efforts in the future in this great line of school work. These trophies are something to be proud of, and are something that will bind even closer all members of athletic teams of this school. The sweaters are in the school colors, black and orange. The sweater is black, with the emblem of the team, Eagle, in orange, and on the left sleeve are chevrons denoting the number of years of service of each player.

Next year Sanderson will have five of these six letter men back, Minton White being the only one of the squad to graduate. Around the other five, Joe Jansa, Malone Mitchell, Walter Grigsby, McDuffy Kessler and Kendrick Harrell, the team of next year should be equally as good as the one of this year. Besides these are other men who should prove of great value to the team, and some who will probably place themselves in the starting lineup. In Wade Harrell and John Landers, the next year's team have two excellent prospects for guards. The problem of the coach next year will be to find a forward to take the place of Minton White. This man played his last game with the local high school against Alpine in the final game of the tournament, and played with a brilliance born of several years of experience that could hardly be equalled by a man of less experience on the court.

TALK ABOUT POLITENESS

"Talk about politeness," said a well-known man of his community to the editor of his paper a few days ago, "it used to be, before the days of the auto that a young man would alight from his buggy and politely assist his lady friends into the vehicle. Now he sits comfortably back on the cushioned seat of his car and pulls a cigarette while his lady friend climbs in unassisted. Times have certainly changed."

Yes, and in the old days the young man used to hitch his horse out in front of the young lady's home and go in and sit awhile. He used to pay his respects to the young lady's mother and exchange a few pleasant remarks with the old man. Now he sits in his car and "honks" for her to come out, and her mother and father consider themselves lucky if they get a good glimpse of him until the day she comes dragging him in as their son-in-law.—Ex.

HOW TO KILL YOUR ASSOCIATION

For the following excellent diagnosis of one of the ailments that are sapping the life of many organizations we are indebted to the Live Stock Journal:

"Get offended if you are not appointed on a committee; but if you are, do not attend committee meetings.

"If you are asked by the chairman to give your opinion regarding some important matters, tell him you have nothing to say. After the meeting, tell everyone how things ought to be done.

"Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary; but when other members roll up their sleeves and unselfishly use their ability to help matters along, howl that the organization is run by a clique.

"Don't bother about getting new members—let the secretary do it.

"Keep your eyes open for something wrong, and, when you find it, resign.

"At every opportunity threaten to resign, and then get your friends to.

"When you attend a meeting vote to do something, and then go home and do the opposite."

A COVINGTON, KY., WOMAN Makes Remarkable Recovery

Mrs. Harry Ashcroft Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Severe Illness and Pain

MRS. HARRY ASHCROFT
632 BEECH AVENUE, COVINGTON, KY.
Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework as I could not stand because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen. I sat down most of the time and did what I could do in that way—as washing dishes, etc. One day a book describing Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine was put in my mail box. I saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength, but I certainly praise this medicine. Then I took Lydia E.

Pinkham's Blood Medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time. I would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat. I also used the Sanative Wash and I recommend it also. You may publish this letter and I will gladly answer letters from women and advise my neighbors about these medicines."
—Mrs. HARRY ASHCROFT, 632 Beech Avenue, Covington, Kentucky.
Mrs. Boyer Also Found Help
Gilman City, Missouri—"I was in such a condition that I could not eat nor sleep to do me any good and I felt draggy all the time. My head ached, my right side and back would almost kill me at times, and I could be on my feet only a short while at a time. I was irregular and so nervous, irritable and despondent that I thought I could not stand the strain much longer. I had been this way more or less for ten years, but the last two years was just terrible. I took medicines, but got little relief until I began to take the Vegetable Compound. I took three bottles before I could see any change at all. I have taken seven in all and am improving right along. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and take the Liver Pills. I can do most of my work now, and I live on a farm and there is lots of it to do. I wash, iron, hoe the garden, raise chickens and tend to the milk."—Mrs. T. M. BOYER, Gilman City, Missouri.

Electricity From Glacier

The melting waters of Grassyhorn glacier, in Montana, are to be conducted through a 1,000-foot tunnel and a 10,000-foot wooden conduit to water wheel turbines, turning electric generators which will produce 15,000 horse power for cities and towns in the lowlands. The glacier gets its name from the millions of prehistoric grass hoppers buried in the blue ice.

Gases arising from heated asphalt roads are reported to have caused many deaths during the recent earthquake in Japan.

FOR THE FARMER

(By S. C. Hoyle, Editor of Extension Service Publications, A. and M. College of Texas.)

How About a Bee Transfer Campaign?
Did you know that bees get sick? Yes. And they have contagious diseases too, just as humans have scarlet fever and whooping cough. One of the worst contagious diseases that the bee-keeper has to guard against is foul brood. When it breaks out in a colony, it spreads from hive to hive, and if unchecked, may ruin the industry.

When there is a suspicion that foul brood exists among the bees of a neighborhood, they should be opened up at once and the combs carefully examined for evidence of the disease. It is well for the owner to open his hives occasionally and make sure that the bees are working as they should. He will thus be able to take necessary precautions to prevent the spread of foul brood as soon as it appears.

Have you seen bees kept in old box hives, or hollow logs, sawed off and boards nailed to both ends? Did you ever see the bees' home labeled "Soap, 99 44/100 per cent pure"? Or have you observed them laboring to fill an old nail keg with honey? If you have, the question doubtless arises in your mind now "How can the bees in such hives be properly examined for foul brood?"

They can't except as such hives are torn to pieces. But in a modern movable frame hive, they can. Certainly no one takes pleasure keeping bees in anything else, and everyone keeping bees in antiquated quarters will surely want to change. He will be benefited in securing larger yields. His neighbors will have a foul-brood menace removed. Everyone will be ahead. So why should not all get together and push for a general campaign for transferring all bees to better hives this spring? A campaign entered into with enthusiasm, where every body has the same object in mind, and the better informed beekeepers aid the less experienced ones in their problems, should go far toward eradicating foul brood in Texas completely.

Ton Litter Club for 1925.
Ton litter men made money during the past two years even though feed was high and the hog market was low. Ton litter projects pay the farmer not only from an economic standpoint but also advertise his hogs and give him a more thorough knowledge of economic feeding.

The indications point to a fourteen or fifteen cent hog market by next September which should prove of great encouragement to the farmers to market their feeds through the pork barrel route.

The Ton Litter Contests in the past have proved so valuable to the hog raisers of Texas and the results have been so satisfactory that arrangements are being made to offer something like $1000.00 in cash, also several medals for the 1925 Ton Litter Contest according to A. L. Ward, Extension Swine Husbandman and secretary of the Texas Swine Breeders' Association. He advises that the finance committee is not yet ready to report but that he feels confident that they will be able to raise over $1000.00 for cash premiums in addition to the gold, silver and bronze medals offered by the Swine Breeders' Association.

Litters farrowed between February and May 15th are eligible when ear marked by the county agent within ten days after farrowing. There will be no nomination fee. Full details and definite premiums will be announced later.

Now is the time to begin making preparations to be prize winner in the 1925 contest. Talk to your county agent about application blanks and further information or write to A. L. Ward, the Extension Swine Husbandman and secretary of the Texas Swine Breeders' Association, College Station, Texas.

Mysterious Vitamines Foods Needed.
The word "vitamine" is a comparatively new one in Webster's dictionary but it is one that is on the lips of many a housewife. The very word indicates that these substances found in some foods are vital to health and necessary to promote growth and ward off disease.

Certain foods contain vitamines in abundant quantities, according to the leading authorities. Vitamine A, which is important in building up a resistance to disease, is found in butter, cod liver oil, oranges, spinach, milk, cream, egg yolk, green cabbage, carrots, cheese, dandelion greens, kidney beans, sweet potato, Hubbard squash, tomatoes, peas, barley, soy bean, cauliflower, Swiss chard, cod fish, heart, herring, oats, peanuts, white potato, whole rice and whole wheat bread.

Without this vitamin, there is a weakening of tissue, diminished appetite, loss of weight, and sometimes death results.

The second vitamin, termed B, is essential for people of all ages to encourage growth, stimulate the appetite and to prevent the disease known as beriberi. This substance is found in varying amounts in beans, cabbage, pancreas, spinach, tomatoes, yeast, apples, whole barley, brazil nuts, whole wheat bread, cauliflower, celery, cheese, coconut, dandelion greens, fibbers, grapefruit, hickory nuts, kidney, lemon juice, liver, milk, oats, onions, oranges, peanuts, peas, potatoes, rice, rye, rutabaga and walnuts.

Safety Device Will Be Hailed by Pedestrian

Making the street safe for the pedestrian is the object of a newly invented safety fender for automobiles patented by M. Laurenceau in France. His invention works on the principle of the cowcatcher of a locomotive and is simply a steel net with arms which operate automatically in picking up any obstruction in front of the car. The car stops automatically when the catcher operates and the driver is forced to pay some attention to his unexpected passenger. If a man is standing when he is hit he is seated abruptly on the frame. If, however, he is knocked down the device acts as a cot holding him comfortably until the car stops and he can be disengaged. This invention is said to be practicable for any size car from a small one to the largest and most powerful cars built. M. Laurenceau, designed it primarily for use on taxicabs.

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. ### Feminine Amenities

Two young women were lunching together.

"There goes George Featherston-hugh," said the first. "What a flatterer he is!"

"Why?" asked the second girl. "Did he say you were pretty?"

"No," the first answered; "he said you were."

Fish That Bark

E. F. Knight, in "The Cruise of the Falcon," writes: "The fish we caught were all very fierce, biting everything they came across when landed on our deck, and barking like dogs."

He that places himself neither higher nor lower than he ought to do exercises the truest humility.

Veracity is the heart of morality.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

But fate destined otherwise. With increased sense of desolation and hopelessness, she foresaw the trails looming in front of her—the misery she must cause, the lack of understanding she must face alone. Only the desire to reach Mrs. Field had reconciled her to this return; now that was crushed. Bewildered with conflicting emotions, with burning throat and aching head, she crouched, shivering in a corner of the carriage while Hugh wrapped his traveling rug round her knees. The train rushed through the wintry darkness. An elderly clergyman dozed in one corner of the compartment; two girls carried on a low-voiced conversation, interspersed with bursts of laughter. Hugh discussed upon all the little mundane happenings in Darbury during her absence, and she was grateful to him.

Thus, amid prosaic surroundings, hidden under unemotional exterior, life's tragedies and comedies work out their scenes. The two girls, absorbed now in their magazine stories, were oblivious to the living drama, full of tragedy and bitter irony, being enacted but a few feet away. When ever Barbara looked at Hugh, the ironic misery of this false situation was increased. To him, at present, things seemed only vaguely unsatisfactory. This he had accounted for in the obvious way; therefore, worrying was futile.

III

Mrs. Rochdale gave an annual local dinner quiet before Christmas every year, over which she presided like a good-natured hen—clucking, with her Buff Orpington smile, upon the chickens pecking at the good things provided for them. Everybody who was anybody in the neighborhood received an invitation, so that the parties bore a singular similarity.

A Severe Chill Had Kept Her in Bed.

Fresh interest was aroused this year, owing to the expected presence of Barbara. So far, she had been seen by few. For a week a severe chill had kept her in bed, invisible to the curious eyes of those who buzzed around Lake cottage. The more persevering, after her arrival downstairs, spread interesting reports of the extraordinary change wrought in her looks and behavior.

To the girl, weak in health and tortured in mind, everybody and everything seemed unbearable. Perceiving the suspicious curiosity around her, she instinctively cloaked herself with reserve, throwing no intimate side-lights upon the vital point causing so much conjecture.

Mrs. Field's letter, full of the large-hearted, far-seeing sympathy so vital a part of her nature, brought a grain of comfort. Full of genuine grief and affection for her cousin, which she took for granted was shared now by the girl, there was no discreet avoidance of the matter. Being his nearest relative, she was kept informed of all proceedings concerning the recovery of the De Borceaus, with their possible fate, was, she said, causing renewed anxiety. She urged Barbara to use the "House on the Moor" and its library, whenever she wished, as usual.

unwise, for many reasons. For one thing, we had to play upon their superstitions to insure our own safety and obtain any influence at all. It needed great warieness. "But surely," he remonstrated pedantically, "at the risk of one's life one should carry on the Gospel? Missionaries have to risk—"

"We were not missionaries!" she reminded him sharply. She looked impatiently at his self-complacent, horrified face and short-sighted eyes. "We tried to encourage them in cleanliness, gentleness, and consideration. Isn't that all part of the Gospel's real meaning? To have stuffed entirely new doctrines down their throats would have been ridiculous."

Quick startled glances were directed upon her from all directions; the "Negatives" present flushed uncomfortably; Mrs. Stockley tried, ineffectually, to fix her with a stony eye. "Apparently your success was not very great," she observed tartly.

"I hope," remarked Miss Davies, not much liking her tone, "you made them wear decent clothing?"

"Most of them were naked," said Barbara; "some wore a little matting." Everybody rather hurriedly went on eating. Hugh hurried himself into the silence, thinking to change the subject.

"What did you do about clothes, Bah? Did your own last out?"

"Fairly well. I made some breeches, and more than a few shirts."

The vicar coughed; Mrs. Stockley refused her favorite game in her embarrassment. Mrs. Rochdale remarked tactfully: "Dear, dear! Isn't it all like a novel? If you had been there, Hugh, it would have been really romantic!"

Hugh laughed. "I shouldn't be much good on a desert island," he observed modestly. "Must have been heavily uncomfortable."

"I bet Bah often wished you were there!" smiled old Mr. Rochdale, in his genial way. "Only she won't own it. Now, Hugh, make her confess!"

But Hugh's glance had fallen upon the girl's left hand, and he did not reply.

Barbara felt like one undergoing slow torture; her nerves seemed lacerated. It was the constant repetition of little drops of water which sent the condemned man mad.

"Bah," asked Hugh, "whatever are you wearing in the shape of a ring? Where is mine?"

Everybody craned forward, and she hastily withdrew her hand. It seemed as if curious hostile eyes were peering at something sacred, the only thing of value to her now in life.

"I—have lost your ring, Hugh. It was left on the island with everything else."

"And you are wearing that instead? I must get another at once. What is it? A key ring?"

"Yes," remarked the vicar, rising from his oblivion, "I had the case of a wedding party forgetting the ring; and I married them with a key ring!"

"Really?" asked Miss Davies. "I suppose it is quite legal?"

Refused to "Fall" for Bishop's Second Scheme

A western minister tells a story, according to the Kansas City Star, showing how a bishop, accosted in a Chicago street by a neat but hungry stranger, derived profit from the encounter. Now the bishop took a fancy to the needy one, took him to a hotel and shared a good dinner with him. Yet, having left his episcopal wallet in the pocket of a different episcopal jacket, he suddenly faced the embarrassment of not having the wherewithal to pay for the dinner.

"Never mind," exclaimed the guest. "I have enjoyed dining with you, and I shall be charmed to pay the price. Allow me."

And the stranger paid for the two. This worried the prelate, who insisted: "Just let me call a taxi and we'll run up to my place, where I shall have the pleasure of reimbursing you." But the stranger met the suggestion with a smile.

"See here, old man! You've stuck me for a bully good dinner, but hanged if I am going to let you stick me for taxi fare!"

Railway Success Based on Judicious Combination of Deeds and Words

By C. H. MARKHAM, in Railway Age.

Railway success today and for the future must be based upon a judicious combination of deeds and words. The big thing, of course, is performance, for the railroads exist only to give service. Nothing must be allowed to conflict with adequate service to the public. The most important problem with which the railroads are now confronted is that of keeping up with the growth of the country. Recently they have been doing that fairly well. The record traffic of late 1924 has been handled satisfactorily.

In the past the amount of business carried on in this country has increased at a rate greater than that of the population increase, due to the growing per capita requirements of our own people and the increased volume of our foreign trade. Nothing is more certain than that the amount of business carried on will continue to grow. The demand of the future places upon the railroads an obligation to equip themselves not only with cars and locomotives, but with additional trackage and other facilities, including grade revisions, that will make possible the more economical and more satisfactory transportation of the business offered.

Only the railroad that is making money is the railroad that can afford to keep its plant up to a standard well in advance of the needs of its patrons. The net earnings of the railroads will govern their ability to expand their facilities to take care of the country's growing commerce, but it is the state of public opinion which first determines the net earnings which the railroads shall be allowed to realize. It follows, therefore, that the creation and maintenance of a favorable public opinion is essential to railway success. It is in this connection that it becomes necessary for the railroads to translate their deeds into words.

An important part of every railroad's work should be the cultivation of public confidence by the recital of achievements made and the promise of progress in the future. That work, I believe, will come to take rank with the work of running trains. In the final analysis, public confidence is the fuel that keeps the trains running.

"Everything That Is Came From Something That Was Before That"

By ERNEST FREMONT TITTLE, in Rocky Mountain News.

Slowly, but surely, the conviction is gaining ground that the fact of evolution will have to be accepted. In "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the delicious and irrepressible Topsy blandly announces that she never had any parents, she just grew, but we are now in a position to affirm that there is nothing in all the world that never had any parents.

Everything that is came from something that was. Everything that was came from something that was before that, and before that, and before that. No man or mountain, no lion or lichen, no fish or flower was ever created outright. Everything has evolved, higher forms of life from lower forms of life, and these lower forms from other forms lower still.

That is the belief of increasing numbers of men who have devoted a lifetime to the study of the evidence. And so the conviction grows that, however little we may yet know about the method of evolution, the origin of species, the fact of evolution will have to be reckoned with by intelligent persons.

It Was the Men Who Fought the Revolution Who Wrote the Constitution

By SENATOR UNDERWOOD, Speech in Senate.

You must bear in mind that it was the men who fought the War of the Revolution who wrote the Constitution of the United States, and one of the battle-cries that they followed on the Revolutionary battlefields was that taxation without representation is unjust. Therefore, when they wrote the Constitution of the United States they provided in the limitations of that instrument that all bills affecting revenue must originate in the house of representatives; and why? Because that body more nearly represented the mass of the American people who pay taxes. We may today pay a portion of our taxes measured by the standard of wealth, but we had no income tax in the days of the Revolution. We collected our taxes largely per capita; we collected them on the food the man ate, or the clothes he wore, or on some service rendered. Therefore we placed in the Constitution of the United States a limitation that provided that if you were going to tax him the taxing power must originate in the house, primarily representing the mass of the American people.

"The Rash Idea That in a Few Hundred Years Man May Become Blind"

By DR. E. F. GLASER, California State Board of Health.

Because so many people now wear glasses, the fallacy has arisen that the human eye is deteriorating, and one unscientific man has ventured the rash idea, that perhaps in a few hundred years the human race may become blind. This is far from the truth. Just as the average human life has lengthened so the eyes have become more efficient organs of vision.

The last census showed a decrease in the number of blind in the United States, and the schools for the blind are showing each year fewer eligible blind pupils. This has been brought about by the great amount of preventive and educational work, and by better understanding in the care and hygiene of the eyes—not only the wearing of glasses, but the proper care and the proper use of the eyes to keep them strong and well, and the proper and immediate diagnosis and cure of disease.

Our Belittling the Assistance That France Gave to the Colonists

By SENATOR DILL, Speech in Senate.

For my own part, I can see nothing to be gained at this time by our belittling in any way the assistance that France gave to the colonists in the days of trial in their trouble with England. I agree with the senator from Maryland that without the aid of France the Revolution would have failed or, if not, it would have been prolonged for many years. Her service and her help to us were almost as valuable as our service and our help to her during the late war.

Neither can I see anything to be gained on the part of France by belittling the assistance that we rendered in the World war to her, for, as suggested yesterday, we did help to save her life.

Let me add that I agree absolutely that France has waited all too long and that she ought to make a proposition for settlement of the debt and make it now in order that the talk of repudiation may be stopped for all time.

Facts about Child-birth

It has been proven conclusively that much of the suffering, pain and dread experienced during pregnancy, as well as at child-birth is entirely unnecessary. An eminent physician, Dr. J. H. Holmes, reports in his science that produced the great remedy "Mother's Friend," which aids the muscles and tissues to expand more easily, during the constant readjustment, month after month, right up to the climax of child-birth. "Mother's Friend" is applied externally. It is a few generations of expectant mothers have used it. "Pains disappeared in two days after using 'Mother's Friend,'" writes a user. He Wanted Revenge
By ORVILLE LEONARD
(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

HIRAM VAN WART was dying—the doctor had given him two weeks more. Another of those cursed attacks, brought on by news that had caused the blood to suffuse his face and sent him back, gasping, into the depths of the big easy chair which he rarely left. For Van Wart was forever getting phone messages that sent angry blood into his face.

And, though Hiram Van Wart's tone and manner were not nice, he was usually obeyed instantly and with deference, for he had a very large bank account.

Of his many interests and valuable holdings, the apple of his eye was the beautiful estate in the middle of which he now sat, for a thousand acres of hill and dell, streams, waterfalls, forests and gardens rolled about him.

When he and his boyhood companion, Jake Lont, had swum, fought and played hooky in these very woods he now owned they had both sworn to own them some day. Van Wart and Lont had grown up together, and about the same time had gone to the city and worked hard. Van Wart had made his pile—first and then, quietly—tract by tract—had bought up all that wonderful bit of unspoiled country.

Lont did not find it out for some time, for he had been occupied in amassing a far greater fortune than his old schoolmate; but when he concluded that he had saved enough millions to last awhile his thoughts turned to Dutch Corners, and he went out there to see Hiram Van Wart.

Hiram sneered at him. "Beat you to it, Jake."

"Yes, Hiram," Jake had answered evenly, "but when we were boys we were going to get rich and buy it together—member?"

"Just a boy's dream, Jake."

"All right, Hiram. I'm disappointed, of course, but let that go. Now I'll tell you what I'd like. There is a little patch of heavy woodland where the Dutch Corners road and the Frenchtown pike come together—about ten acres. You paid only about fifty thousand dollars for the whole thousand acres, I know, but I'll give you five thousand for that ten-acre wedge—want to put up a little shack in the old home place. It has been the dream of my life to settle down here when I got enough."

"Not a d—n inch do I sell, Jake," said Van Wart, smiling disagreeably, for success had made him like that.

Jacob Lont had left him without further words, but since that day no big deal of Van Wart's, no cunning, deep scheme of his but had been fought—often thwarted, often put through after tremendous and needless expense. And Van Wart had traced his enemy to Jacob Lont.

And now, as he lay back, gasping for breath, all these things racing through his mind, the phone jingled. A sharp, businesslike voice spoke over the wire: "Mr. Van Wart, the new suburb—railroad is going to cut off about ten acres of your corner at Dutch Corners road and Frenchtown pike. Can't go round it. Road's miles away yet, but the lines have been run. At what price do you hold it?"

"Won't sell," growled Van Wart.

"Then condemnation proceedings will be started in thirty days," the voice was crisp and cold, "and you won't get more than a hundred an acre for it."

Van Wart slammed the receiver on the hook. Slowly he put out his hand and, again lifting the receiver, called Jacob Lont's number in the city. After a long wait the quiet, firm voice came over the wire: "Jacob Lont talking."

"Hello, Jake! This is Hiram Van Wart. I'm enshin' in, Jake, an' I want to part friends with you. Doc says I can't live two weeks. If you want that ten-acre corner and will put through the deal now you can have it for five thousand dollars. I'll fix the papers up to give you possession tomorrow."

Then Van Wart rested a moment with closed eyes, before he called a number: "Come over now, Sharpe. Want to make a new will. Doc gives me two weeks at most."

Two minutes later a high-powered car raced up the drive and Van Wart's lawyer alighted, accompanied by a notary.

"Lo, Sharpe! Took you a long time," Van Wart growled. "Will's there in the safe. Stands as she was—everything goes to Jacob Lont—old boyhood friend—got more'n he can take care of now. But change this: this place, with every stick on it, goes to the Dutch Corners Lunatic asylum, except ten acres on the corner of Dutch Corners road and Frenchtown pike. I'm selling that ten-acre tract tomorrow to Lont. And, Sharpe, and Van Wart gazed at the lawyer, "see that you make that codicil hog-tight!"

Then Hiram Van Wart closed his eyes and decided to have his telephone disconnected on the morrow—for his work was done.

Reading Too Late
The little boy's family really saved his life. They had given her such a lovely bracelet as a reward—made of real gold. She had known or thought of a reward. Perhaps that was why she enjoyed the reward so much!

Then she wondered whether it was more fun to read late and have all that pleasure, even though she was sleepy in the morning, or whether it was better to be fresh for games and play in the morning and go right to sleep at night.

Sometimes when the family had gone out she had sat up just beyond bedtime and had only just turned out the light before they had come in. Then the globe of the light was still warm. Even a silent thing like a light globe could be a tantalizer.

But of course that was reading too late. And then she was so fearfully sleepy in the morning.

She wondered whether it was more fun to climb over the great chests in the linen room and have that as a playroom where she could make up all sorts of games, or whether it was more fun where all the toys were and the games were all in readiness.

She wondered, too, whether she liked the country better than the seashore.

At the seashore there was the sand and there were rocks and there was a lovely salty taste to the air.

But in the country there was a sunny warmth and lovely, lazy feeling, and there were more flowers.

In the country was the old attic, too, where she could dress up in clothes that had belonged to her great-grandmother.

They were torn and shabby, but they had been worn to splendid receptions.

Winnie used to dress up in these on rainy days and make low bows, pretending to be the different handsome gentlemen and beautiful ladies who had been to the receptions where these had been worn.

She wondered whether she liked the winter better than the summer.

In the winter sometimes the streets got so slippery that the coasting was really thrilling, and there was skating, too.

She had even been ice-boating, which was quite the most thrilling thing in the world.

But in the summer the bathing was such fun, and to go out in a boat along the shore and pretend to throw out mail as the boat passed each little cove. That was a glorious game.

Then in the summer there were such nice games to play and one didn't have to bundle up.

In the summer the woods were so lovely and cool and the shadows danced so prettily with the sun and the trees.

But in the winter, on the other hand, there were sleigh rides and steaming hot suppers afterward.

Yes, Winnie wondered.

And then her wonders began to go and she was puzzled no longer.

She liked lots of things—you didn't have to decide what you liked best when you could like many things a great deal.

So she didn't waste her time wondering what she liked best or what was best or second-best.

She just enjoyed each thing in turn, and when she could be of great help to some one it was well known that Winnie was the one to be relied upon.

It was so nice to have this all clear at last!

Staggering Thought
"What would a nation be without women?"
"A stagnation, I guess."—Mercury.

She Could Dress Up
In the winter she sometimes danced so prettily with the sun and the trees.

But in the winter, on the other hand, there were sleigh rides and steaming hot suppers afterward.

Yes, Winnie wondered.

And then her wonders began to go and she was puzzled no longer.

She liked lots of things—you didn't have to decide what you liked best when you could like many things a great deal.

So she didn't waste her time wondering what she liked best or what was best or second-best.

She just enjoyed each thing in turn, and when she could be of great help to some one it was well known that Winnie was the one to be relied upon.

It was so nice to have this all clear at last!

High School Notes

Although Sanderson lost the district championship (by one point), three men of the team were chosen on the all-star team for the district. These were Minton White, forward; Joe Jansa, guard and McDuffy Kessler, center. These men well deserved a selection on this mythical team, for they played consistently and well throughout the tournament, and easily showed their superiority over other men in these places. The other two men selected for a place on this team were Carter and K. Allen of Alpine. Although Carter played a guard's position, he was selected as a forward because of his point getting ability. There might be some doubt in the minds of all those who saw all the games of the tournament as to the choice of "Big Red" Allen as the other guard. There were several men in the tournament who would push him in playing his place on the team, but he is a good consistent player and would make a good fifth man.

The total enrollment of the high school this year reached 63, which is the greatest enrollment in the history of the school. The graduating class of this year is very small, having only four members, but the senior class of next year should be much larger, as this year's junior class has 14 regular members. The incoming seventh grade will be much larger than those leaving school because of graduation, and consequently the enrollment in the high school next year should even be larger than that of this session, possibly as many 75.
