DAVIS MOUNTAIN FEDERATION HOLDS SEMI-ANNUAL MEET AT MARFA

TERRELL AND REEVES COUNTY ARE ADDED TO DISTRICT.
(By Mrs. C. D. Wood.)

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by the Davis Mountain Federation was the seventh semi-annual meeting which convened in Marfa on November 18. It was held at the beautiful Christian Church, a new and modern structure of the mission style of architecture. Large floor baskets of chrysanthemums and brass bowls of American Beauty roses were placed in assembly room with true artistic effect.

The president, Mrs. J. W. Rotan of Fort Stockton, was in the chair. The reports of standing committees were constructive and showed progress. Mrs. Shipman, Marfa, had enlarged photographs of historical places, and had cuts of plates with which her committee expects to mark the historical spots of the surrounding country. Mrs. Rigby, Fort Stockton, reported on highways. Mrs. H. W. Morelock of Alpine, on Sul Ross loan fund; Mrs. Meade, Marfa, legislation; Mrs. Yates, Marfa, Mexican work; Mrs. Bird, Fort Davis, chautauqua.

Mrs. Stegall, Valentine, in offering her report, called on Mrs. Van Sickle, Alpine, as having done outstanding work on her committee. Mrs. Stegall said that Mrs. Van Sickle had tied with Mrs. Thurman of Ranger in the number of clubs federated for which the Sixth District had offered a prize. Mrs. Van Sickle then reported that she had assisted in federating five clubs since last February. El Progresso Club, Alpine; P. T. Study Club, Marathon; Study Club, Sanderson; Study Club, Shafter, and Delphin Club, Alpine. Three of the newly acquired clubs had good delegations present and prominent places on the program.

New Territory Added.

An important change in the constitution was made and the Federation voted to include Terrell and Reeves Counties along with Brewster, Presidio, Jeff Davis and Pecos Counties. With the extension of the borders of the federation, another important change was made. It was voted that all those present at the banquets given at federation meetings pay $1 for their plates, thus relieving the hostess clubs of some of the financial burden of entertainment.

The four-course turkey dinner was served in the church dining room and was a distinct success. At a large round table in the center of the room, State, district and D. M. F. officers and guests of honor were seated, 20 ladies being placed at this table. The centerpiece was an attractive arrangement of fruits and vines placed in, and overflowing from, a large pumpkin. Four other tables, all decorated with chrysanthemums, each seating 16 guests, were placed around the central table. Mrs. Brown, Marfa, very cleverly announced the numbers on the program arranged by Miss Frances Mitchell. The readings by Mrs. Ruth Bailey Starnes, a piano solo by a young lady whose name escaped the reporter, and several numbers by an orchestra from Marfa post. Charming young daughters and friends of Marfa club ladies served the dinner most efficiently.

From every angle the banquet was a great success and reflects added glory to the Marfa club ladies. After the dinner, the president called the meeting to order for a Memorial service. One of our members, a delegate from her club a year ago, Mrs. Charles Flint of Fort Stockton, has recently passed on. Mrs. Rotan eulogized the departed member, and resolutions of respect were passed.

Mrs. L. C. Brito reported on the Scenic Drive recently given by the D. M. F., and read letters of appreciation from officers of the State Federation.

One of the most interesting features of the program was the report of State Federation at El Paso given by Mrs. Spalding of Marathon. This report indicated close attendance at the meetings and good judgment in selecting material for reporting.

Two outstanding papers were given at the afternoon session, both of which merit more particular attention than is possible to give them in this brief report. Mrs. Floyd Reeves of Fort Stockton spoke on "The Value of an Educated Citizenship as a Factor for World Peace." The subject of the paper given by Mrs. George Livingston of Alpine was "Woman's Influence in the Life of Today." Many features of the program must necessarily be omitted from the report, but all who attended felt that this meeting in all its parts was one of the best the Federation has had.

New Officers Chosen.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. C. H. Bird, Fort Davis; vice-president at large, Mrs. E. H. Stegall, Valentine; first vice-president, Mrs. Louis Ritchey, Marathon; second vice-president, Mrs. Homer Moorman, Alpine; third vice-president, Mrs. McCracken, Marfa; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Hicks

W. M. U. HAVE SOCIAL MEETING.

The W. M. U. held their monthly social meeting on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Druse. The program was on "Jews," which was ably discussed by the program leader, Mrs. T. L. Williams. Several other interesting numbers on the program were well given and very much enjoyed. There were twenty-two present.

Following the social meeting a short business session was held and the committee discussed the bazaar. Refreshments of sandwiches, cocoa, cake and prune pudding with whipped cream were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Black and Mrs. Druse.

The next meeting will be held on the second Monday in December for Bible study at the home of Mrs. Gayle Mussey. —Reporter.

Auxiliary Meets.

The Ladies of the Presbyterian Auxiliary held their regular business and social meeting at the home of Mrs. Clyde Griffith Monday with Mrs. Jessie Lochausen and Mrs. Lee Van Zandt as joint hostesses. The bazaar committee gave their report and quite a nest sum was realized to the joy of the members as money is needed to carry on our work. Our Christmas party was planned and will be held at the home of Mrs. P. F. Robertson the first Monday in January.

Our missionary lesson was "Brazil." An interesting program had been prepared by our leader, Mrs. Lochausen. Papers of interest were by Mrs. J. W. McKee, Mrs. P. F. Robertson and Mrs. Lochausen. Business was closed with prayer by Mrs. Robertson.

The hostesses served cake and chocolate to 23 members and three visitors.

The next meeting will be Bible study, Monday, December 12, at the home of Mrs. Fred Yeates. —Reporter.

Night Bridge Club.

Mrs. H. R. Laurence was hostess to the members of the Night Bridge Club at her home last Saturday night.

Following several interesting games of bridge scores were added. Mrs. L. H. Lemons made high score for the ladies and was awarded a colonial powder jar as the prize. The men's high score prize, a box of handkerchiefs, went to Sims Wilkinson.

Refreshments of creamed chicken, fruit salad, pie and coffee were served.

RATTLE OF THE RAIL.

The annual inspection party, composed of four cars, spent Monday night here.

E. H. O'Neal is now firing out of here west to Valentine. Fireman E. H. Sterrett of El Paso has been assigned to a freight run out of here.

T. B. Moseley has returned from El Paso and has resumed his passenger run on the El Paso division.

Boiler Inspector Downum was here from El Paso Monday.

Fireman T. R. Vaughn has been assigned to a switch engine at El Paso.

Fireman C. J. Pollock is now working out of Del Rio.

Fireman G. M. Medlock and J. D. May from Del Rio are now working out of here.

A new time table went into effect here last Sunday, November 27. No changes were made in local schedule of passenger trains here.

Mrs. A. C. Clatfelter and children returned Sunday from San Antonio where they spent the Thanksgiving holidays.

Mrs. Ray Caldwell left Wednesday for San Antonio and Lytle where she will visit Mrs. George Chapman.

Gray, Fort Davis; parliamentarian, Mrs. Hill, Shafter; press reporter, Mrs. Harry Harris, Fort Stockton; board member, Mrs. Bernal Slight, Alpine; board member, Mrs. G. L. Mitchell, Fort Stockton.

The president, Mrs. Rotan, asked the new members to come forward as their names were called by the secretary. Presenting the new officers, the retiring president made a graceful speech of appreciation of the past and hope for the future.

An invitation to come to Fort Stockton for the spring meeting was extended and accepted.

"Mother may I go out to flirt?"
"Yes, my darling Jen, Stay out 'till midnight if you like, But don't go near the men."

Are You Left-Handed?

The Left-Handed Man has Highly Honored in Those Days

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ARE you left-handed? If you are, do your friends look upon you as being well, just a bit "queer" because you're different, even in this little respect, from the rest of humanity? If you are, and they do, don't let it bother you. For, instead of left-handedness being something to be concerned about, it's something over which you can be just a bit proud. Here's one reason: away back in ancient times a left-handed man was considered "the darling of the gods" and he was frequently honored with high office for no other reason than that he was one of these "darlings of the gods," the evidence of which being the fact that he was left-handed. So, although you may not believe in gods, as did the ancients, if you have any faith in Lady Luck, or any of the other members of the modern pantheon which we know by a variety of names, all having to do with luck or chance, you might well allow yourself to believe that these modern gods will smile upon you because you're a "south paw," even as the ancient deities did in the olden days.

And you can tell your friends, too, that you have illustrious company in your left-handedness. The Pharaohs are said to have been left-handed, as were the greater Caesars—and they were rather important people in their times. Alexander the Great, who conquered the world, did it with his food—not right but left arm, for his history records that he grasped his trusty sword with his left hand. Then there was Charlemagne, the patron of scholars, who, when he did any writing at all, grasped his pen in his left hand. Surely these are notables with whom you wouldn't be ashamed to claim left-handed kinship!

But to get down to more modern times—which would you rather be, one of the host of right-hand pitchers in the major leagues or one of that more exclusive group of diamond stars, such "port-wheelers" as Willie Sherdel of the St. Louis Cardinals, one of the heroes of the 1926 world's series, or Herb Pennock, the hero of the 1927 championship battle, or Babe Ruth, who was a left-handed pitcher before he deserted the slab to become the "Sultan of Swat"? Of course, one of the earliest of the great south-paws, "Tub" Waddell, is still remembered as one of the "queerest" players in baseball history. But the fact remains that he was one of the truly great slab artists of all time, so it doesn't matter whether he was "queer" because he was left-handed or left-handed because he was "queer."

As a matter of fact a lot of this belief about the "queerness" of left-handed people is mere superstition, that every other family is just as happy as our own.—Lieut. Belvin W. Maynard in Boys' Life.

after all. To get at the explanation of left-handedness and some of the phenomena, such as the so-called "mirror" or reversed handwriting, connected with it, it is necessary to go back to the earliest days of the genus homo. In the day of the cave man neither right nor left hand had preferred usage and modern excavations have brought to light just as many implements fashioned for left-hand use as for right-hand. When the cave man desired to set down his thoughts in picture writing, it was done with either hand.

More than that, the writing was from right to left quite as often as it was from left to right. And this survived to a much later day for a form of writing, called "boustrophedon," used in early Greek and Latin inscriptions, often showed every other line written right to left in mirror fashion, that is, it would resemble left-to-right writing if reflected in a mirror.

The increasing usage of the right hand in preference to the left came about as primitive methods of warfare developed. The left hand and arm were used to hold the shield over the heart to guard it from a fatal thrust and the sword or spear was wielded in the right. Since the nerve fibers which govern the right arm and right leg (you remember from the study of physiology in school, of course, about this "crossing over" in the nervous system) are located in the left side of the brain, that side of the brain, being more active, became highly developed and the right side of the brain, accordingly became less highly developed. So as time went on men became not only right-handed and right-legged and right-footed but right-eyed as well (that is to say, the vision in the right eye became keener than in the left). The skin also became more sensitive on the right side and the senses of touch, taste and smell became more acute on that section.

Along with this greater development on the right side there began to grow up a certain amount of superstition. It included the old pantheistic custom of putting the right Roman foot forward at the beginning. From that custom originated the saying, which persists to this day, about "putting your best foot forward," the best foot being, of course, the right. This superstition is responsible also for the fear which many people have of entering a room with the left foot forward.

Despite the fact that most people are right-handed, approximately one out of every twenty-five is a "throwback" to the primitive days when all were ambidextrous and these four per cent persist in being left-handed. Just why they are left-handed science has never yet been able to explain satisfactorily. One of the curious evidences of this "throwback" is the tendency toward the so-called "mirror" or reversed writing, although not all left-handed persons have that tendency. A short time ago one of the news pictures which was widely published in this country was that of Willie Cozens of London, Eng., a six-year-old boy who was described as "suffering from a rare ailment. He is physically normal, but because of a peculiar development of the brain he writes backwards, beginning at the right side of the paper and writing all the letters the wrong way round." As a matter of fact Willie's habit of writing his name "snezoc malliw" (only the letters themselves are also reversed) is not a "rare ailment" at all. It is rather common, as the testimony of Dr. Robert Kingman of Brooklyn, N. Y., a physician who has made a special study of "mirror" writing, will show. He says:

In nearly every school there are several left-handed first graders who will annoy their teachers and alarm their parents by insisting on writing words backward, as "elppa" for "apple." They may also copy numbers backward, as "24" for "42." Unfortun- ately there are many teachers and parents who stigmatize such a child as "feeble-minded" or "queer." They ridicule him and force him to write with his right hand only. Many girls and boys are afflicted with stuttering and other nervous disorders from just such coercion. If allowed to use their left hand they could learn to write the conventional way and later be- come ambidextrous.

Ambidexterity is advisable as a means to promote symmetrical develop- ment of body and mind. Bimanual dex- terity is of practical advantage to ball players, carpenters and surgeons. The hero of the western movie, thriller always saves his fair lady with two- handed gun play, and there seems sound reason for the belief that two- handed facility would serve equally well in real life.

As a matter of fact, mirror writing is the easiest and most natural movement for any untrained person who holds a pen in the left hand. This is true because outward move- ments are easier than inward move- ments to know personally of many cases where adults of high intelli- gence reverted to mirror writing un- consciously at some period of their life.

According to Doctor Kingman, there are two different centers for the act of writing as for all other muscular movements. One is parti- ally suppressed by modern habit and often tries to work at the same time as the other. When the child tries to learn a skilled movement with the right hand he cannot prevent the left hand from following with the same movement. So the left hand when it produces mirror writing uses muscle movements that are natural because the brain centers for mirror writing unconsciously are formed symmetrically with those for the right hand. Because our system of educa- tion is one-sided the mirror-writing centers in the right brain are sup- pressed but they are potentially available just the same. They crop out in the left-handed person but that is not a sign of "queerness" at all. If your child is left-handed, don't try to "break him of it," encourage him to use his right hand more, to become ambidextrous, thus promot- ing that "symmetrical development of body and mind" of which Doctor Kingman speaks.

It has any defect. Fathers cherish the reputation for the perfection to preserve it; mothers are snobbish and filled with false pride. It is far bet- ter to face one's defects honestly. To be a hypocrite is to be a liar.—Win- throp D. Lane in Delineator Magazine.

Troublesome Weed
The hawkweed, introduced from Eu- rope into Canada and the New Eng- land states, has become one of the most troublesome weeds in grass lands.

Christmas Presents and Things That Can Be Made

ONE of the annually recurring problems of the Christmas season is: "What unusual and attractive gifts are simple and inexpensive enough for the children to make?" Here are a few suggestions:

Among the easiest is a lovely per- former made by sticking an apple with cloves until it is completely covered, and appears to be a brown ball. It will last for years, lending a delicate fragrance to lingerie or handkerchiefs.

The hostess who entertains often will welcome a scrap book of party ideas, games, refreshments, etc., which may be clipped from the newspapers and magazines. These may be grouped as to seasons—Christmas, Halloween or Thanksgiving. How-to-do-some- thing items and recipes also make good collections. The latter may be either arranged as menus or classed as soups, vegetables, etc. These books should preferably be of the loose-leaf type, and in any case, the pages should be numbered and the items indexed.

A dainty pinholder may be made from six empty match boxes, pasted together to form a chest of drawers. Cover the front and back of each in- ner box, glue the outer boxes together, and paste a colored cover around the top, bottom and sides. If cloth is used, unless it is exceptionally heavy, it will be necessary to paste a cover of white paper on first, so that the print- ing on the match boxes will not show through. To each drawer attach a hook, snap, button, pin, etc., to serve as a handle and to indicate its con- tents.

Not alone women, but men, too, ap- preciate handkerchiefs. Some are made of crepe de chine or georgette and edged with lace. Colored threads may be drawn in them, although this work is easier in pongee or linen. To make them exceptionally distinctive and personal, in place of an initial or monogram, trace and embroider the signature of the person for whom they are intended.—Helen Galsford.

The Postman Was Loaded With a Burden of Love

"WELL, John Tracy, you look like old Santa, himself!" called Postmaster Briggs to John Tracy, the veteran mail carrier of the Heights section of Midbury.

"I not only look like one but I feel decidedly so, for a funny thing hap- pened today!" Tracy's face was wreathed in smiles as he walked across to his locker and dropped his cargo of mysterious looking packages within.

The gang was all curiosity, but he kept them guessing while he took his time locking up the steel cabinet and seating himself for a moment's rest.

"My customers," as he always termed his patrons or the community which he served, "planned a job on me. They appointed a committee, I understand, to interview every family on my route. They asked that every- one refrain from mailing one thing this morning, that I would be empty handed unless it be a present for me. For a couple of blocks I didn't know what to think, but at almost every house I found a package for me, and then I began to get wise. So—to make a long story short—I carried nothing back with me but things addressed to myself. But, Briggs, it sure was a burden of love! Gosh, I didn't dream folks thought that much of only THEIR POSTMAN!"—L. B. Lyons.

Counting the Chickens

"Have you finished your Christmas shopping yet?"

"Heavens, yes! I've already fig- ured out what I'm going to receive and how many exchanges I'll make."

Singing Christmas Carols

The old custom of singing carols in the streets was revived in 1917. In 1918 thirty cities co-operated. It is expected that carols will be sung this Christmas eve on the streets, in the parks, as well as in the churches, schools and public institutions of communities.

Tree Decorations

In spite of glittering decorations, the Christmas tree would only remain a dark pageant, were it not for the many colored electric lights which are deftly fastened all over it, and which, when lighted up, make it for the young people a thing of beauty and a joy- ful sight for that night at least!

The GREEN CLOAK

By YORKE DAVIS

CHAPTER I

Doctor McAllister has often told me that I take life seriously because I am young. That may or may not be the reason, but I am convinced that I know the reason why he takes it so light-heartedly. It is not because he is old, but because he has already won from life all the reward he wants. In his own department of science—applied psychology—he has achieved about as high a place as it is possible for a man to reach. In this field his reputation does not have to lower its colors to any other in the world; and if in his periods of relaxation he chooses to be frivolous, no one can afford frivolity any better than he. I suppose that the very idea of frivolity used in connection with Prof. Ronald McAllister's name would make most people laugh because of the grotesque unfitness of it; and the people who know him only as a gaunt, gray old bachelor, with a rugged, homely, deep- ly lined Scotch face and a big rough voice, would be right to laugh.

But I am more an adopted son of his than a mere assistant, and after spending the daily number of hours in his laboratory, watching him work his miracles, I see his great mind relax, and find that he is just a boy, more of a boy than ever I was in my life.

He likes the daily papers—the yellow- iver they are, the better; and he de- vours a perfectly incredible number of detective stories, good and bad. His delight over a good one is almost pathetic.

So when I read the headlines in the morning papers that day, I knew pre- cely well that when work was over and we met at our special little table in a corner of the brilliant dining room of The Meredith, I should be regaled with a thrilling and enthu- siasm account of the Oak Ridge murder.

It was easy indeed to prefigure the whole scene. Similar ones had been enacted so many times before. I didn't altogether relish the prospect, for I hate to see people smiling and nod- ding behind my old chief's back, peo- ple who, intellectually or socially, or in any other way, aren't fit to tie his shoes. He doesn't mind their smiles, and the light-hearted emptiness of their lives has a mysterious sort of attraction for him.

And when I see him across our lit- tle table, his twinkling gray eyes glow- ing with excitement, his long gangly arms and expressive hands working away in enthusiastic gesticulation, his big voice booming out the story of some sensational crime, I can't really wonder that a good many people nod and wink and giggle.

The thing I did wonder at some- times was, that Wilkins, the obsequi- ous, omnipresent, invaluable head- waiter, contrived to preserve his re- spectful mask of professional imper- turbability.

I had a sneaking fondness for Wil- kins, based upon the fact that he at least did not underestimate Doctor McAllister. Tonight, for instance, it was Wilkins himself whom I saw conduct- ing him down the long line of tables, to the corner of the room where we al- ways sat.

"Tell our man what to bring us, Wilkins," he said, waving away the menu which that irrefragable func- tionary offered him. "You know what we want to eat, better than we do."

Then he turned to me, "Well, how do you read about it?"

"The Oak Ridge murder?" I asked smiling. "No, I've waited to get the account of it from you."

"You really haven't read a word of it?" he asked.

"Not a word. I know that Oak Ridge is one of our more remote and less fashionable suburbs, and that there has been a murder there within the past forty-eight hours. Beyond that, my ignorance is complete."

"Youth! Youth!" cried the doctor in mock dismay. "What is it coming to? Fancy being under thirty and waiting all day for such a story as that, rather than read an account of it in bad English. Well, you shall have the story now from the beginning— Wait a bit, though. Wilkins—"

The head-waiter looked up from a low-voiced discussion of the menu with the man who had special charge of our table. "Yes, sir."

"Has Ashton come in yet?"

"Not yet, sir, but he should be here before long. He's seldom later than this, sir."

"Serve for three at this table, then," said the doctor, "and when Ashton comes in, ask him to dine with us"; then, turning to me, "There are some points which the newspapers don't cover that he'll be likely to know about."

Ashton, I may say, was a rising young assistant in the district at- torney's office, and I will add that he worked at the detection and prosecu- tion of crime, con amore; it was not upon his salary that he lived at The Meredith.

Doctor McAllister has often told me that I take life seriously because I am young. That may or may not be the reason, but I am convinced that I know the reason why he takes it so light-heartedly. It is not because he is old, but because he has already won from life all the reward he wants. "Not a word. I know that Oak Ridge is one of our more remote and less fashionable suburbs, and that there has been a murder there within the past forty-eight hours. Beyond that, my ignorance is complete."

"Youth! Youth!" cried the doctor in mock dismay. "What is it coming to? Fancy being under thirty and waiting all day for such a story as that, rather than read an account of it in bad English. Well, you shall have the story now from the beginning— Wait a bit, though. Wilkins—"

The head-waiter looked up from a low-voiced discussion of the menu with the man who had special charge of our table. "Yes, sir."

"Has Ashton come in yet?"

"Not yet, sir, but he should be here before long. He's seldom later than this, sir."

"Serve for three at this table, then," said the doctor, "and when Ashton comes in, ask him to dine with us"; then, turning to me, "There are some points which the newspapers don't cover that he'll be likely to know about."

there would be no difficulty on that score; he would present his refer- ences in a day or two. As a matter of fact, he never did, but as he paid a quarter's rent in advance, and as he signed an indeterminate lease of a house which the agent never expected to get off his hands, McCloskey didn't like to press the matter. He used furniture that he found in the house, and never brought in any effects of his own, beyond what came with him on the first day, in his hand bag and his little trunk. He never got any letters from out of town, and apparently never sent off any. What his business was, if he had any, no one ever knew.

"You say that nothing on the first or on the second floor had been dis- turbed. That would dispose of the theory of robbery."

"The whole appearance of the house and its condition would contradict the theory of any ordinary robbery," the doctor said. "No one would break into that dilapidated old structure for such a purpose, unless he had knowledge of some secret and unusual sort of treasure there. But to my mind, the man- ner of killing disposes even of that alternative. The house is situated in a largely spot, remote from all other habitation. If a robber had found himself in a position where he was obliged to kill, he could have risked a pistol shot, and he couldn't have gar- roted his victim without taking him unawares. No, I believe it to be a case of murder, pure and simple— murder committed for its own sake and not the by-product of some other result. And these cases, you know, are rather rare—"

"Here comes Mr. Ashton now, sir," said Wilkins from where he stood not far away. "I'll have dinner served at once, sir."

Both the doctor and I like Ashton, and he often dines with us, even when there is no particular excuse, such as was offered by the Oak Ridge murder, for doing so.

He is a burly, confident, quick-tem- pered, generous-minded young chap of about thirty, and if he keeps on as he has begun, he will some day ac- quire a reputation as one of the greatest prosecutors in the country.

He was not in evening dress tonight, and he dropped into his chair at our table with the air of one who has put in a trying day.

"Confound these suburban trains," he said. "I just spent the better part of an hour in one coming in from Oak Ridge."

"Ha!" cried the doctor, with an air of the most intense satisfaction. "Then you're just the man I want to see. Did you turn up anything at the afternoon session of the inquest? The account in the evening papers leaves off at noon."

Ashton laughed. "You'll not get a word out of me about that murder, until after the fish. If you attempt to I shall call on Wilkins here for help. However," he added seriously, "I do want to talk about this case with you, for I think it not unlikely that you may be able to help us."

Curious Old Custom of Literary Giants

Litogrammatic works, the product of the early Greek authors, are those books in which one letter of the alphabet is omitted throughout the volume. Tryphiodorus, when writing his Ody- sey, had not an "a" in his first book, nor a "b" in his second. In so doing he was but copying the Litogrammatic Iliad of Nestor.

Athenaeus writes of an ode by Pin- dar in which the latter purposely omit- ted the letter "s," thereby leading us to surmise that this little homx was one of the literary fashions of the day. A Persian poet once read to the cele- brated Jami one of his own composi- tions with the letter Alf consistently omitted throughout. Jami, who did not care for the sonnet, sarcastically made the following recommendation: "You can do a better thing yet, take away all the letters from every word you have written."

Although the Greeks originated this ingenious literary device, its use was by no means exclusive with them. Lope de Vega, the celebrated Spanish dramatic poet of the sixteenth cen- tury, Gregorio Leti, and at a much later day Lord North of the court of James I all employed this literary de- vice and produced Litogrammatic books—Market for Exchange.

Train Speed Cuts Static

Static decreases and radio-station strength increases with and in propo- sition to acceleration in the train's speed, experiments with a receiver have shown, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. A steel bridge with no superstructure helped to in- crease the volume of the reception, while one with a superstructure de- creased it.

Build House for Comfort

stambling rooms may be romantic to look upon, but the romance caused by inconvenience and lack of comfort soon fades. Not only should a house be big enough and not too big, but its rooms need to be related to each other so as to save steps and lessen labor.

(Seal) LUELLA LEMONS,
Clerk, County Court, Terrell County, Texas.

STATE OF TEXAS, COUNTY OF TERRELL.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terrell County, Texas—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summons Grant Wilmer, by making publication of this Citation, once in each week, for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some weekly newspaper, published in your county, if there be a newspaper published in your county, if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Terrell County, Texas, to be held at the Courthouse thereof in Sanderson, A. D. 1928, the same being the 23rd day of January, A. D. 1928, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 29th day of November, A. D. 1927, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court No. 1704, wherein Emile Wilmer is plaintiff, and Grant Wilmer is defendant, said petition alleging that the plaintiff was lawfully married to the defendant in Austin, Travis County, on the 29th day of October, A. D. 1922, and that they lived together as husband and wife until the 12th day of November, A. D. 1924; that there was born to the union, a son, Grant Wilmer, Jr., who is an infant; that on or about the 12th day of November, A. D. 1924, the defendant, Grant Wilmer, deserted and abandoned the plaintiff, and has not since been seen or heard of by this plaintiff.

Wherefore plaintiff prays in this suit that her petition of divorce be granted, and that she be given custody of the minor son, Grant Wilmer. Herein fail not, but have you before the said Court on the first day of the next term thereof, this Writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

LUELLA LEMONS,
Clerk of the District Court of Terrell County, Texas.

fore the said Court on the first day of the next term thereof, this Writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

DETURABLE people," said Helen, wasting a glare on the crowd milling about a bargain table. "Each one in search of the very best I am trying to get."

"Impossible," returned good old Cyrus from over his lading of bundles. "Some are men and cannot be in pursuit of the articles on your list."

"Where can we be?" asked Helen, gazing at a black highway. The man laughed grimly. "I don't even know where we are," he responded.

"Well," he cackled, "this is Middleton, the town folks forgot. Years ago trains stopped running. We got no garage, no phone, pretty nigh no inhabitants. Me'n my sister live here 'cause we ain't able to live nowhere else."

"Inside the quaint house, with his shoe cut off, Clay made apology to Helen.

"I could kick myself," he said, "for getting you into such a scrape. I must have dreamed that sign 'Detour'. The truth is, I shouldn't have been driving. It's the—"

"Holiday rush," interrupted Helen. "I understand. I won't complain, though a roll of red tissue paper and—" bolt of green ribbon aren't very efficient provisions for an overnight stay. But—doesn't that coffee smell good?"

"You May Say It," Returned Helen. "I'm Reconciled."

"Rather. If it wasn't that I know you are anxious to get home and finish your Christmas preparations, I'd say, 'What larks!'"

"You may say it," returned Helen. "I'm reconciled. Glory be, there are no signs of holly in this house."

"Perhaps," said the young man, following her mood, though rather amazed, "we've reached a land where Christmas ends. A test! Miss Eliot, addressing their hostess as she entered with a tray, "Can you tell us the date of day after tomorrow?"

"Day after tomorrow is the twenty-fifth," she said calmly. Then she went out for more food, and Helen grinned at Clay, as if they were old friends. The twenty-fifth of December was just a date!

They had actually got away from Christmas.

It proved a delightful evening, prolonged as the two young folks discusSED everything but Christmas. The next day came, bringing a blizzard. For a little they spoke of a search being made for the jitney, but it became evident "detour" had indeed been a dream. Never mind, Clay's ankle was getting better, and Helen felt like a child out of school.

In the afternoon of the two hobbled and tripped, respectively, into the kitchen entry. Through the half-open door they saw their hostess and the daughter of the bed-ridden woman. What was it they bent over?

Helen's parcel, with its bunch of scarlet tissue, its bolt of green ribbon, its sprigs of artificial holly. But with what wistful eyes were the women regarding these gewgaws.

"They say," whispered Miss Gould, barely touching the pretties with finger tips discolored by iodine, "that in lots of places one never has a Christmas gift not tied up nice. I read it somewhere—the wrapping is half the gift!"

"Maybe so," said Miss Eliot. "I never had a Christmas present."

"I did have some good times," returned Miss Gould, "before ma took sick. Hung up my stockings and always got some little tricks. Wasn't contented, though. Used to hanker for a tree."

Helen turned quickly, not to be caught eavesdropping. In the parlor

For He Pulled Birchbark From Sticks in the Woodbox.

she confronted Clay Hamilton with the air of one about to reply to a loud-spoken objection.

"For goodness gracious' sake," she exclaimed, "don't say whatever you were about to. Stop right where you are, and help me. I have to contrive a Christmas present for at least a dozen people, and deck a tree for two. And nothing to do it with—not a thing. And it's already late and night closing in."

Right here was where Clay scored above any possibilities of Cyrus, who would surely have observed the inconsistency. "Let it close," said he. "The local shops aren't closed. They never open! How would a branch of that hemlock we ran into do for a baby tree?"

"Splendiferous," said Helen. Then she wanted to know what became of the wishbone she had seen on his plate at dinner? He had saved it, for good luck. And what was it used to do with a wishbone? Why, make a pen wiper, to be sure. So Helen made one, and dressed it in red felt cut from her overshoe lining. Clay printed the rhyme:

Once I was a little part
Of a little hen,
Now I'll be a little slave
And help you clean your pen.

"It has all the earmarks of the perfect gift," quoth Helen, "for I doubt if any one here ever uses, much less has occasion to wipe a pen."

Then she sent Clay to gather the alder berries reachable from the porch. Later she strung these for a necklace on a bit of colored string from her parcel. After the Eliots had retired she went as eagerly to work as if she had never forsworn Christmas. Twisting the strands of hay she made dainty baskets. She also constructed candlesticks of cornstalks, trimmed prettily with fringed husks. In the meantime Clay was not idle, for he pulled birchbark from sticks in the woodbox and borrowing needles and thread from the Eliot workbasket, sewed tiny hemlock sprigs into "Merry Christmas" making objects that Helen asserted would be considered "just wonderful" if discovered in a gift shop.

All was at length completed, but the two had little time for admiration of their handiwork, since the parcels must be wrapped with all the wealth of the tissue, the ribbon, the holly, and the seals.

And was Helen "tired to death" when all was complete? Nay, standing beside Clay on the little porch, listening to the crackling ice as trees swayed in the rising wind, she felt as if swaddled in the comfort of a great joy. Vainly had she thought herself "sick of Christmas." At her first chance to forget, she had worked her utmost to bring holiday to the forgotten town. With dawn, she knew the extent of her success. Clay, who had been limping about, told her that in every house some old body with trembling hands was unwrapping a gift sure to be treasured for years.

"And nothing for either of us," laughed Helen.

Yet a few moments after, when Miss Eliot entered the room, it was to say, "My dear, I never before noticed the pretty ring on your finger!"

Two golden hands, clasped, an old-fashioned betrothal token, which Clay Hamilton had from his mother, and because it was always with him, had quite providentially taken on detour!

Still Seek for Gold in the Black Hills

By searching for gold in her leisure hours many a farm wife in the Black Hills of South Dakota adds to the pin money yielded by poultry flocks and gardens.

Every farm in the hills has its roaring mountain stream, the sands of which contain gold dust for those patient enough to seek it. Using the same primitive methods of placer mining employed by seekers of wealth in the early days, several farm women diligent at their tasks pan $4 or $5 worth of dust a week. Occasionally a nugget is found worth several dollars.

Prospecting days are over in the hills, but every bank vault in the vicinity has its little bottle into which are poured the gold dust gleanings of country women.

Handball Played in River

In accordance with an old custom the annual handball game between hundreds of young people representing the "Uppies" and "Doonies," was strenuously played through the streets and lanes of Jedburg, Scotland, and even into the River Jed recently. The contest started at noon and lasted for several hours, the players finally working their way into the river. Just at the moment when the "Uppies" were apparently losing the battle in a spell of river play, George Balfour, an Argentine farmer at present visiting his native town, headed a counter move, and despite a strong rejoinder by the "Doonies," the "Uppies" reached the Abbey Caud. There, in deep water the ball was cut and the game declared won by the "Uppies."

The MODERN WAY for the MODERN DAY

My invisible servant is the Westinghouse Automatic Electric Range

PERHAPS the paramount advantage of Westinghouse Ranges to the modern woman, who has so many things calling for her time and attention, is the automatic feature. No longer need she stay at home to start dinner cooking, and to watch over it to be sure that it will be perfectly done at the proper time.

While the clock and the thermostat take care of that for her, she is free for the afternoon, or indeed, for all day, and will return to find dinner ready to serve, beautifully cooked, at the appointed time. It means to her more leisure, more playtime, more opportunity for other interests. You owe it to yourself to get acquainted with the possibilities of electric cooking for you. Even though you are not ready to consider the purchase of an electric range at this time, we want to show them to you, and explain their operation. You will find it most interesting.

AIRPLANE FLIGHT

Upon receipt of a telegram from Cisneros Pharmacy at Brownsville for Infantile Paralysis Serum to come by Fidelity First arrangements were made with our pilot to have the ship in readiness for immediate flight and as soon as the plane was ready for the take-off we left at 1:45 p. m. Sunday, November 21, flying south into a very strong head wind which held us back during the entire trip.

We were forced to land at Orange Grove, Texas, to refuel and lost about thirty-five minutes of precious time in doing so. While waiting at Orange Grove Mr. Perry Klatt of Orange Grove Pharmacy came out to see the plane and I talked to him a few minutes telling him to give my regards to Mr. Heyland who was due there in a day or two. We had landed in a small field but experienced no difficulty in taking off.

We left Orange Grove at 4:35 p. m. and flew east to pick up the railroad tracks which we had intended to follow into Brownsville. Darkness overtook us a short distance from Kingsville and the last hour and a half we were flying in total darkness, no object being visible from our altitude of about two thousand feet and as we had surveyed the country before darkness, we knew that we were flying over dangerous country in case of a forced landing.

It was nearly an hour after darkness before we sighted a light and at least a half hour longer before we came over a town. Seeing a body of water to the right we supposed it to be the Rio Grande and that we were over Brownsville, because the pilot could not read the map in the darkness.

We circled over Raymondville for several minutes and sighted a light which proved to be a bonfire in a fruit orchard. We rose and then saw another fire and after circling several times we came down very slowly and landed in a very small and rough clearing, in fact, the men had just cut down trees and dug the stumps up without refilling the holes. Fortunately we landed without damaging the ship other than blowing out a tire.

I inquired as to our location and was told we were near Raymondville being about five miles out in the mesquite thickets from the town. I then inquired as to whether or not there was a car to be had to take us into Raymondville and after some persuasion finally got the owner to drive us into town.

We had been in the air two hours and ten minutes between Orange Grove and Raymondville.

of March 3, 1879.

Upon reaching Raymondville I telephoned a friend, the Rev. Leslie A. Boone, and told him the story and of the importance of making delivery of the serum in Brownsville and he lost no time in preparing his car for the trip from Raymondville to Brownsville.

We made good time between Raymondville and Brownsville and upon reaching Brownsville went direct to Cisneros Drug Store and found Mr. Cisneros anxiously awaiting the serum and he immediately took it to the doctor for administration.

I sent the pilot back by car to Raymondville to bring the plane down to Brownsville as we were under the impression that it would be too hard to take off in the strong wind with two in the ship so I spent the night in Brownsville.

The condition of the field was much worse than was expected as it required four men two hours to fill up the holes to make the run-way. After the tire was repaired and the ship refueled it took off for Brownsville, landing there at 11:02 a. m., a distance of about forty-eight miles by air line.

Upon landing at Fort Brown, Brownsville, the pilot was met by the officer of the day who required him to state his mission and home station, this information was transmitted to the immigration officers who posted a guard over the plane until we

O'BRYANT HOME LAUNDRY

High in Quality---
Low in Price

Motorists are beginning to learn that there's a big difference in tires, although they all look pretty much alike.

Some are made with skimpy, short staple cotton. Some have an overdose of "Eller" in the rubber of the tread. Some are long on looks and short on quality.

But you won't need a microscope to be sure that the Goodyear Tire you get from me is a real buy. Goodyear mileages tell the story.

Goodyears are performing so satisfactorily for my customers that they invariably come back—not with a kick but with a boost, and for another Goodyear when they need tire equipment.

I have your size—in fresh, new stocks.

"THREE WISE FOOLS"

One of the fine attractions to be presented on our Entertainment course is the well-known comedy-drama success "Three Wise Fools," which was originally produced by Mr. John Golden and presented in New York at the Criterion Theatre with Claude Gillin, Harry Davenport, Helen Menken and a distinguished supporting cast. Its success which was instantaneous and enormous was duplicated in England and Australia. It is a brilliant blending of laughter and tears. There are moments when the audience rocks back and forth overcome with laughter. Then it is followed with those instants when a lump rises in the throat and a tear trembles on the eyelid.

The doctor reported to Mr. Cisneros that the condition of the patient had improved shortly before we left. The trip from Brownsville to San Antonio was uneventful and was made in two hours and forty-five minutes for the distance of approximately two hundred and seventy miles as we came in on a strong tail wind. Among the visitors at Brownsville was Mr. Turney of Turney Pharmacy at Harlingen, who had seen the article in La Prensa, and he wanted to know all about the trip which I gladly told him, also, Mrs. Fagan of the Donna Drug Company.
