TRIBE'S REFUSE

Washington .-- When the Calusa Inlans, who dominated southern Florlda when the Spanlards landed, and who were reported to have grown rich on the shipwrecked gold of the Conquistadores, became extinct, they left behind them as almost their sole monment the refuse of the food they ate Their principal diet was shellfish and the shells they threw out piled up into heaps thirty feet high and hundreds of feet long.

The Smithsonian institution's recent expedition under Henry B. Collins, Jr., determined the point about which there had been some uncertainty, that these shell heaps were really kitchen middens and not artificial structures- with some other signifi cance. The proof is that all the shell heaps investigated were stratified with ashes, small animal bones and other refuse from the kitchen.

The language of the Calusa, except for a few isolated words and place names, is lost, little or nothing is known of their beliefs, customs or ma terial culture. Some mounds of soft beach material and loose sand do exist, some of which were foundations for houses, and others burial mounds. Mr. Collins excavated several of these. His most important find was of twenty-five well preserved skeletons in a

Most of the bodies had been folded with the knees to the chin and burial was very close together. The skeleburials probably took place before the coming of the white man, since only one bone was found with any evidence of disease and the artifacts associated with the burials were purely of native origin. The only objects In the way of mortuary offerings were pieces of broken pottery placed around the heads, an arrangement not known among other Indians. The and contained no other artifacts.

Reeves believes that every town in the United States should motorize its force. His plan would banish the oldtime "sidewalk pounder" and would put all policemen except traffic men in well equipped vehicles, automobiles or motorcycles with sidecars.

A criminal, he said, can keep tab on the old-time patrolman, but be cannot tell when the motor mounted policeman may show up at any given In suburban and thickly setnlike, he says, police are needed who can be summoned at top speed.

Capital Punishment the Result of Fear, Hate USE OLD AUTO TIRES and Lust in Human Heart

By REV. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Community Church, New York.

APITAL punishment is the result of fear and hate and lust within the human heart and should be abolished, as some of the world's greatest minds have advocated for centuries. We must banish capital punishment from society as we have banished infanticide and chattel slavery, as we are banishing child labor and the subjection of women, as some day we shall banish war.

Opponents of capital punishment include all the greatest and noblest sported annually to meet the demand. names from Confucius, Buddha and Jesus to Channing, Abraham Lin- Each tire makes three shoes. coln, Victor Hugo, and Leo Tolstoi. In the course of centuries of discussion every plea against the practice has been vindicated and established. The evidence is all in, the arguments all heard, the case closed, the judgment rendered. There remains now only the task of carrying out the verdict of condemnation, and getting rid of capital punishment | gear is a luxury.

The nine states which have the highest murder rate in this country some of them fled as far east as are all capital punishment states.

But capital punishment at bottom is not supported as a protection against anything. Psychologically the death penalty is an instance of that of the Greeks. And in recent revenge; sociologically it is the institution of blood sacrifice; ethically it is the practice of retribution. In capital punishment we have a survival into modern times of the barbarism of primitive times.

Person Reaching the Age of Sixty Should Be in the Prime of Life

By JAMES J. DAVIS, Secretary of Labor.

A man or woman of fifty or sixty years of age is just as capable a worker as he or she was at thirty, perhaps more capable, even physically. The reason is that the years have brought the reward of experience and added skill. Instead of becoming a liability at fifty or sixty, the intelligent worker is all the more an asset to his employer.

Many a time, I remember, when I was a boy at work in the iron mills I saw a faithful worker who had rounded out fifty years of life. The custom was to present him with a gold watch, in token for age. But he was also presented with a discharge. It was assumed that at his years a man had outlived his usefulness. A man that old was thought to be old indeed. A man that old thought so himself.

Since then science has added years to the span of human life. Today nobody feels old at any age. We not only have abolished the feeling of old age, but people are healthier. They lead a more active life.

In the face of this tendency of science and our better life to abolish age and keep us young and even more productive, we have a tendency among employers to drop good workers at an ever younger and younger age. I think it is something that is serious and should be watched.

Organized Labor Aims at Establishment of Close Tie to Employers

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

The organized labor movement urges the establishment of a collective relationship between the management of corporations and their employees. It is only in this way and through such contact that the human problems of industry can be understood, and through such a process the worker will become more than a mere number in the great industrial machine and the corporation more than an agency formed for the purpose of advancing the material interests of its members through the exploitation of the spiritual, physical and human qualities of its employees.

The modern age has seen a great change through which a great many workingmen and their families have shown a lack of interest in de veloping their spiritual lives. This situation is not due to the lack of their legs. any desire or determination on the part of working men and women to elevate their standards of life and living or to develop the spiritual, artistic and cultural side of their lives. Rather it is due to the materialism which seems to pervade and control industrial policies and industrial life, and to the fact that very often poverty forces them to turn their undivided attention toward providing for their families.

Independent Statehood for Large Cities a Vision of the Future

By PROF. CHARLES E. MERRIAM, University of Chicago.

Responsibilities of large metropolitan regions, like New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, for governmental functions might be discharged more efficiently if such regions were granted independent statehood. It is clear that the future United States will be dominantly urban. In 1920 there were 17 regions, each having a population of more than 500,-000 and a total population of $6,000,000, while at the same time there were nine states with a population of less than 500,000.

It is obvious that some more compact form of organization is necessary to enable such groups to carry on their governmental functions Its course it runs under an old Roman

It is probable that in the near future there will be heard a strong plea for the organization of metropolitan regions as independent states. Such an experiment would give adequate scope for development of a public weifare system appropriate to urban communities and for the development of a metropolitan system of jurisprudence, differing from the now dominantly rural type.

Courts Should Be Given Full Authority to Find Way to Unroll Control Capital Cases,

By GOV. ALVAN T. FULLER, Massachusetts.

A plan that will place our courts in the position to take and hold control of capital cases, from their beginning to their ultimate conclusion, and which will make certain that the governor will not be compelled to encounter the difficulties which were forced upon him in the year 1927 by the zealous defenders of persons convicted of first-degree murder, should be formulated and made effective by appropriate legislation.

In this connection I repeat that for the prevention of crime generally we have to rely principally on justice, swift and sure, and that the criminally inclined must be made to understand that it is well-nigh certain that any criminal acts on their parts are sure to be found out and quickly punished, and that no politics, nor money, nor influence, nor organized demonstration can help them to avoid the consequences of their chemistry has been invoked to salvage another relic of the remote past. An ancient leather roll of Egyptian writing had iain unopened for 50 years in the British museum because it was so brittle that no one dared unroll it. Experiments with a broken fragment of the leather in the mu seum's laboratory, however, finally gave scientists a clew as to how to handle the mysterious manuscript.

Several thin contings of celluloid were soaked into the pores of the leather, after which it was cemented with strong celluloid on to a piece of celluloid-treated cheesecloth. In this way it was unrolled without a break and pressed flat between two glass plates to dry. It remained perfectly flat after drying and can now be read

By ETHEL HUESTON

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous coltapse, due to overwork, Gay De-lane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She-rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine,"

CHAPTER II

Returning to the island on the early norning steamer, Gay was the only passenger to leave the boat at Everreen pier, where she found no line of cars, no group of unburried drivers, receive her. While with her two hands she carried her heavy bags through the orchard and up the long grass-green slope to the Lone Pine. Gay's heart sang a soft little song of

"I shall sleep," she thought, "Oh, Idle, Idle little Island, how I shall

As she stood at last beneath the craggly pine, fumbling in her bag for the keys, it was the pride of possessien which throbbed in her pulses. This was her summer heritage, the reward of ten years of constant labor;

Even with her hand on the knob. Gay readized that it was not she who epeted the door of the cottage; that it opened to her, instead, from within. And as she stepped back, startled, she was confronted suddenly by a woman. not Mrs. Andover, not one of the three quiet figures from the Captain's kitchen but one she had never seen before.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," she cried, "I didn't know there was anybody

The woman did not speak for a mo ment, but stood peering up, nearsightedly, into Gay's face-a small weman, short and slight, and a soft flush gave her face a pleasant girlish look, although as Gay learned later, she was very old, older even than Alice Andover. But for all her smallness and her pinkness, there was something impressively determined, something indomitable about her that was

"Are you the Captain's wife?" Gay asked, as the woman stared at her, smiling faintly, puzzled.

"No. I'm not." she disclaimed quickly, half laughing. "I'm just Auntal-miry. Come in." She still stared. closely. "1- This fight is bad." she added apologetically. "And my best glasses are broken. I can't seem to place you- "Tain't Mary Grover,

"I am Gay Delane-the new tenant." The soft little figure became rigid. "The new tenant," she repeated.

"Oh, they didn't tell you!"

"Tell me! Of course they didn't tell me. They were afraid to tell me. The cowards!" But she said this in the most amiable and cheerful tone imaginable. "I wish Alice Andover'd tell me. I'd like to hear ner. I told her, with my own lips, that I wanted to stay here myself this summer."

"Oh, I beg your pardon. She must have forgotten it. I'll run right up and tell them-"

When Gay stooped to lift her bags, Auntalmiry insisted that she leave them. "You'll be right back," she said confidently. "They'll send me word. Alice Andover never misses a chance to send somebody word. Just leave the bags; you'll be right back."

Gay trudged rather crossly up the pleasant lane to the Captain's door. The disarray of her plans annoyed her, and her tired nerves resented the postponement of rest. She found the Captain in the kitchen to his favorite chair by the window, fondling the largest cat, while the dog suiked Jealously beneath the table.

"Captain," Gay began curtly, "where is Mrs. Andover? The Lone Pine is not for rent. That woman-Auntalmiry-is going to stay there herself." "You don't say so," he ejaculated.

"Well, think of that now. What are you going to do about it?" "What am I going to do about it?"

she repeated, indignantly. "Nothing. What have I got to do about it? I will just take back my money-" "I don't think you can do that," be said cautiously. "I don't think so." Well, I think so. Renting a cot tage that isn't for rent! Whoever heard of such a thing? Of course I can take it back."

ile shook his silvered head doubt fully. "You have rented the cottage," he said. "It is yours. If an outsider comes in on you-why, you'll have to take measures to get her out."

Gay stared at him. "But she was there first! I am the interloper." "Then I don't think Alice will refund the rent. I don't think so."

"Oh, if she is like that!" Gay said cornfully. "She loesn't look so dis-

"Dishonest! My sister, Mis' Alice Andover? Dear, dear, what gave you such a notion as that? She's honest as the day-but she's a very good administrator, very good indeed." "If she is like that," Gay said. "you are her brother. You were a witness

He was deeply troubled. "I-I can't do that. Not trday I can't, Maybe tomorrow. But I got to go right up now and fix Mrs. Willoughby's roof-leaky roof-'fraid of rain. Looks like rain, think?"

"You fixed that roof yesterday," Gay said furiously.

"No, miss, I didn't get around to it." He sighed sadly. "Seems like I just can't get around to the things I got to do. There's Mrs. Willoughby's roof, and Miss Nixon's porch. Seems like I can't begin to get around to things any more. And I'd like to get a little work done on my boat if I could find time," he finished pathetically.

"Well then," she said kindly, unable to be very severe with one so lamblike, "just come along with me to get my money back from Mrs. Andover, and then you can hurry right along and get ever so many things done. It's

He sighed but put on his cap with disarming meekness, and they set out

"That's her cottage down there," he said, pointing off to the left. "It a'n't far. You go right down through that little gate, and see Mis' Andover. Be firm with her, miss, you be real firm. You hold out for your rights."

And with incredible celerity, before Gay could catch and hold him, he had shambled away out of sight around the cottage, and there was nothing for her to do but go on alone. Her in lignation rose again as she cut down the pretty, green-bordered cinder path to Mrs. Andover's door, but she was met with great friendliness by that affable and efficient woman, who took both her hands in wordial greting.

"My dear, how sweet or you to be o neighborly. How charming! You are a real acquisition to our summer colony.

"Mrs. Andever, excuse me, but that cottage you rented me is not for rent.

"I Don't Think You Can Do That," He Said Cautiously.

Auntalmiry is keeping it herself this summer. So if you will kindly refund-"

Mrs. Andover's affability froze upon her face. "My dear, do you mean to tell me that that creature had the brazen effrontery, the unmitigated audacity, the-the-to stay there after John told her I had rented that

"John didn't tell her. She didn't know it. The cottage was not ready for me as you promised-"

"John didn't - John - John Wallace- Didn't you bear me tell him to tell her to-

"Oh, yes, you told him. And that was the end of it. And as she is the original tenant, I have had all my trouble and worry for nothing."

And then, with reluctance, with innate delicacy, sparing Auntainity in every way possible, Mrs. Andover explained the situation. The little old woman in the cottage was not a tenant. She just lived there. She paid no rent, she had no money, and the cottage stood idle all winter without her. Much better for the house to be o cupied, much better for Auntalmiry who needed homing-

"Oh, please," interrupted Gay, "let her stay then. Don't turn the poor thing out on my account-" And then Mrs. Andover grew really withering in her retaliation. Turn her out! What kind of people do you think we are? Do we look like the sort to turn anybody out? We just want her to move down into her own house, the Apple Tree.' "Oh, then she isn't so poor, if she has a house of her own." But Auntaimiry did not own the Apple Tree. Auntalmiry did not own anything. Mrs. Andover said it was the Estate, the Estate which owned the land, the Estate which had built the little Apple Tree exclusively for Auntaimiry, for her very own, furnished it for her, maintained it for what the notice was." The Apple Tree was a dear little to the transaction. You go and get it | cottage, well built, charmingly located. Mrs. Andover sald, rather petulantly, that it was the nicer of the two cottages, and the only reason Auntaimiry preferred the Lone Pine was simple and pure perversity. The Lone Pine was too big for her, it was more inaccessible away up on the bluffs, it was farther from the shops and from her friends, but she pre ferred it "for her Christmas party."

And then Alice Andover's voice sank to a whisper. "If she says anything about a Christmas party, you tell her John and I say she can't have a Christmas party this year. Tell her it is too expensive in the first place, and it wears her all out in the second place, and it's just nonsense anyhow. Tell her John and I say so."

But when Gay suggested that of course, she, herself, Mrs. Andover. was going 'own with her to give these explanations to Auntalmiry, the administrator was regretful, but firm.

"I can't," she said. "I wish I could, but I can't, I-I am expecting guests to dinner." She looked at her "Good heavens, It is after eleven, and the potatoes not so much as peeled. You see how it is. I wish I could but I can't. You tell ber. She'll understand. Just tell her you have rented the cottage, and paid the rent, and tell her we insist-John and I both insist-that she give up the Lone Pine immediately. Tell her if she doesn't-we'll-we'll burn the Apple Tree to the ground, and sell the Lone Pine over her head." So Gay Delane, alone, unaided by the lamblike Captain, unsupported by the efficient administrator, broke the news to the indomitable little old woman on the hill. As she repeated. very modestly, almost diffidently, the dire threats of Alice Andover, Auntalmiry broke into laughter so hearty it seemed impossible it could have emanated from so small a source.

"My dear," she gasped, wiping her eyes, "I wish they would. I'd like to Why, I'd have the law on them." She fell into helpless laughter again. "I'm a sort of a common-law wife, my dear. If you keep me long enough, you can't get shut of me Such talk. Alice Andover indeed! Why didn't they come and tell me all these high doings?"

"The Captain had to fix Miss Nixon's porch, and Mrs. Andover is peeling potatoes for a company dinner,

"The Captain's been fixing that porch for four years, and never set foot on it yet. And as for Alice Andover, my dear, she never peeled a potato in her life. She's aristocratic. Peeling potatoes. My dear, Alice Andover wouldn't know a potato with the skin on if she saw it."

"But Mrs .- Miss-" "Auntalmiry, dearle, just call me Auntalmiry, I'm not proud."

"Auntalmiry," Gay said appealingly, "see how I am fixed, I have paid fifty dollars rent-'

"Fifty dollars For this shack? My dear, they robbed you. They never got more than forty for it in the world. Last year, they only got thirty-five. Poor child, poor dear, they robbed you."

"And see They have my fifty doltars, you have my house. I have noth-

"My dear, I'll go. I'll go right away. We'll show them they can't get away with this sort of thing with us. It won't take me long to pack up. I haven't got much."

While Auntaimiry bustled about, putting her things together, Gay, having removed her cap and gloves, set and went to the wide couch. She was very tired. The window corner tempt-couch, luxuriously, and closed her The lids were dark, darkly The lips, in relaxation, drooped with weariness.

For two hours Auntaimiry slipped oftly about the house, gathering together her modest belongings, packing baskets, bags and bundles. And for two hours Gay slept without stirring, moaning faintly now and then. At one o'clock, Auntalmiry prepared dinner for two, with a great pot of strong hot tea, and set the little gateleg table. Then, with a light touch, she wakened Gay.

"Come and eat, dearle," she said gently. "You can rest better on a full stomach.

Gay smiled at her, yawning, stretching luxuriously. "You are a darling," she said. "I wasn't a bit hungry, and now I am." She stood up shaking

She curled the tips of her shoes, boyishly, about the legs of the chair at the table, and although she was not hungry, the tea she sipped with relish. And as they ate. Auntalmiry descanted at great length on the outrageousness of fifty dollars a month for that rock-pile, told her to look out for the draughty window on the ocean side, and enlarged on the condition of the kitchen woodwork.

She recommended Lumly Lane for lobsters, and promised to send him up for orders. And at Auntaimiry's suggestion Gay made out a grocery list to initiate her own light housekeeping, and gave it to that same small obliging person to leave at the Pier grocery store.

While they were still at the table, Gus, the taxt boy, came up for Auntalmiry's things, and trudged off down the hill, heavily laden and Auntalmiry, hastily catching up an armful of coats and dresses, tripped after

Gay waved them away and turned back, yawning, into the pretty cottage, turned again, gratefully, to the wide couch in the shadowy corner, stretched herself out upon it, and closed her eyes.

The afternoon waned. A boy from the Pier grocery store brought her basket of groceries, and left it on the kitchen table without disturbing her. Dusk crept out of the forest and stirred, restfully, sensed presence in her sleep, seemed to feel the gaze of human eyes upon her in the silence. Resentfully she forced the heavy lids to raise. In the shadowy, dying light she seemed to see a small figure crouching near her, and a small face, yellow and wrinkled like parchment.

"It is a dream," she thought mist-"Dream on."

She closed her eyes again. The little yellow face receded into the authorization of an appropriation the dusk, the small figure taded of sufficient money from the United noisely into the shadows, and there States treasury to pay the expenses was not the slightest sound from the of the reunion. In introducing the bill Congressman Howard acknowledged his indebtedness for the idea to two veterans of the War Between the States, Judge Morley Cain and L. D. venture" when the word "exploration" is used. To the explorer, however, adventure is merely an unwelcome interruption of his serious labors. He is looking, not for thrills, but for facts about the unknown. Often his search is a race with time against starvation. To him, an adventure is merely a bit of bad planning, brought to light by the test of trial. Or it is unfortunate exemplification of the fact that no man can grasp all the possibiltles of the future.

Serious work in exploration calls for as definite and as rigorous professional preparation as does success

A short-sighted man who was also very inquisitive was walking in the country one day when he saw a notice board nailed on a tree that stood in a field. As he could not read the notice at that distance, curiosity prompted him to climb over the fence and

"Just imagine how hard it would be to think, 'Oh dear, which porch shall I take my nap on? and then remember there was only one porch." Now the turtles have three logs outside their homes which they call their

in 47 Years Practice Dr. Caldwell watched the results of onstipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are

of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible hence his remedy for constipation known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love It. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and to break up fevers and colds. ind harm to the system.
