TO OPEN NEW STORE AT SANDERSON JULY 1

Louis Forcheimer will open a new store in Sanderson on July 1, he said this week. C. M. Dever, who is now employed in the store here, will be in charge of the business at Sanderson.—Alpine Avalanche.

Cole Dever, an experienced dry goods man formerly of San Antonio, came in the past week and has been very busy all week getting the store ready for opening. It will be in the east side of the Nance building which has just been completed. Mr. Dever has been with the Forcheimer store the last three years. In an interview Tuesday with a reporter of The Times he stated that they would handle everything in the dry goods line and ready-to-wear at reasonable prices. Goods have been arriving daily and are being placed on the shelves.

Beginning today (Friday) they will have their store open for inspection by the public.

A. F. & A. M. LODGE ELECTS OFFICERS

At the last stated communication of Sanderson Lodge 985 A. F. & A. M., the following officers were elected:

Chester Smith, W. M.; Clyde Griffith, S. W.; John Stovell, J. W.; S. C. Bodkin, treasurer; Fred Savage, secretary and S. J. Dempsey, tiler.

Installation of officers will be held Tuesday night, June 25, after which refreshments will be served for Masons and their families.

ASPHALTING HIGHWAY COMPLETED.

The J. F. Dexter Company of Dallas, who had the contract to asphalt the highway through this county, completed their work last Saturday and the inspection of same was held by the highway department and accepted. The company did a good job and in time the highway here will be the best yet.

Famous Speaker Coming.

The patriotic mass meeting to be held in the school auditorium at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of July 4, under the auspices of the Parent - Teachers' Association, will not be an ordinary event. The speaker for the occasion is Hon. Oliver W. Stewart of Chicago, president of the Flying Squadron Foundation, with headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind.

While yet a young man Mr. Stewart was elected to the legislature of the State of Illinois, from the city of Chicago, in an independent movement which brought him the support of both Republicans and Democrats.

He has spoken many times in every state in the Union and is coming to Sanderson directly from Houston and the Democratic National Convention.

His address will be patriotic, suitable to the day and to the occasion. Everybody is invited.

Church of Christ.

Through His word, Jehovah makes us understand that we should walk by faith. We all understand that without faith we can not please God, but we so often forget that "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Since faith comes by hearing God's word (Rom. 10.17) then His Word must be the limit of our faith. Then whatever we do, unless it has the sanction of God's Word, is sin (Rom. 14.23) for it can not be of faith unless found therein.

V. L. WUNNEBURGER, Minister.

W. J. Ferguson, local Ford dealer, returned Sunday night from Houston where he went Friday. Mr. Ferguson was accompanied to Houston by Alton Franklin and they drove home two new Ford coupes which were delivered to Miss Jack Banner and to Shellie Barnes.

Mrs. P. F. Robertson and son, Charles, left Sunday for Austin where Charles was placed in the Austin Military School for the summer session.

SECURES HUNTING CON- CESSION IN MEXICO.

Six hundred and twenty thousand acres of land has been secured in Old Mexico by J. D. Ogle, who ranches in the south part of the county. Mr. Ogle has been working for some time to get this concession and just this week papers were closed on the contract. The land lies on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande and extends from Mr. Ogle's ranch through to Boquillas on the west.

Mr. Ogle has secured a five year lease on this land and it is his plans and intentions to use the range for hunting purposes only. He plans to have the place ready and will be prepared to take care of hunters who desire to hunt in Mexico. Mr. Ogle has assured the Mexican authorities that he will comply with all their hunting laws and expects all who hunt in this place to do the same.

He is in hopes that a part of entry will be declared at Shafter crossing, which is about 20 miles south of Dryden, and at Stillwell crossing at the west end of the concession in Brewster county. These points are near the hunting land and will be of help to those desiring to cross as they will save time.

Several applications have already been received by Mr. Ogle and he expects more by the time the hunting season opens. Once that he gets the place established and has it well advertised and the hunters know that they are safe, Mr. Ogle believes that it will prove profitable for him.

Also, just recently, Mr. Ogle has acquired the popular Boquillas Springs property which is located just south of Marathon and this is proving to be quite a health resort. Mr. Ogle is making considerable improvements on the place and has material on the ground for the erection of cottages and expects to have them all completed as soon as possible. Already these springs are becoming well known and famous not only in Texas but in other states.

New Restaurant Opened.

The New Texas Restaurant, located in the Nance building, was opened to the public last Friday. A neat, up-to-date restaurant has been established and good seasonable food at a reasonable cost is being served. The place is under the management of B. F. Davis and L. M. Howard. Both are experienced restaurant men and will appreciate the trade of the public. Since their opening they have done a good business and the restaurant is proving a popular place to eat.

Don't Make a Toy Out of Baby - Babies Have Nerves - By RUTH BRITAIN

Much of the nervousness in older children can be traced to the over-stimulation during infancy, caused by regarding baby as a sort of animated toy for the amusement of parents, relatives and friends.

Restlessness, crying and sleeplessness from this cause can easily be avoided by treating baby with more consideration, but when you just can't see what is making baby restless or upset, better give him a few drops of pure, harmless Castoria.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Deane, artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrators." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Aunt Almira," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." On an exploration of the island Gay is horrified by the appearance of a drifting body of a drowned man. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay returns with the "Captain," but they find no body there. Gay, being unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks for it, but Gay refuses. Next day the picture is missing. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, surprises Gay at household tasks. Gay's acquaintance with Rand rises to affection. Gay determines to stay for the winter. The stranger whom Gay had met the day of her discovery of the body introduces himself as Ronald Ingram. "Aunt Almira" tells Gay of her son, "Buddy," who has been missing for years. Rand is suspicious of Ronald in ram, and apprehensive of some evil-doing in a house known as the "Little Club," apparently unoccupied "Aunt Almira" is planning her Christmas party.

"I'm sorry he chose the Lone Pine for his hibernating this afternoon. He cheated me out of a pleasant hour. Does he think best in the top of your pine tree? I saw him perching there as if he were quite at home."

Gay laughed merrily. "No, indeed. He was putting up an aerial. He is building me a radio. No, he does not hibernate in my tree top, and I wish you had come in. You would quite like him."

"No, I shouldn't like him.—Not him, under any circumstances.—And I do not enjoy other people's cooking; it riles me."

"We don't cook. Fancy the state of Maine cooking." Ronald Ingram reverted again moodily to talk of the land. He was not yet sure what he really wanted to do with it, he said, wondering if he would be wise to sell it outright. "I haven't money enough to finance things on a big scale. Of course if the boom ever comes—and it ought to boom—it seems the logical summer refrigerator for New York and Boston, yes, even for Washington. I have two companies figuring on it. What would you think of a Chinese group, imitation bamboo stuff, pagodas and all that? I know a Chinese artist from Boston. My Sen, his name is. He's been up a few times, making sketches for me. Clever chap he is, for a Chink. He was here yesterday. He thinks we can swing it big."

Mercurially, Gay was fully in sympathy with him again. By his candor he had entirely stilled the suspicions that Rand had stirred to life. How frankly he spoke of the Chinese artist. How natural his explanation of the little foreigner's presence. In the face of his disarming, ingenious outspokenness, his honest admission of his financial limitations, how very petty and narrow and mean appeared the cold suspicious nature of New England.

He said he was obliged to return to Portland on the early boat, and Gay went with him to the door.

"You are very game, I know, but do, please, be careful. Keep yourself locked in and everybody else locked out, won't you?"

The genuineness of his solicitude touched Gay. "I will be careful," she said. "I wish you were staying all winter. You are such a pleasant interlude."

"Interlude between Cavaliers," he said regretfully. "Still it is something to see you, to touch your hand. I am grateful for that. You are very sweet. You will not forget me, will you?"

Half an hour later Rand came, and without waiting for a word from him Gay launched at once into a long and fervid defense of Ronald Ingram. "You may be right about some things, but on Ronald Ingram you are totally wrong. He's really a nice fellow, and you will like him. Perhaps he'll let you be Chief High Priest of his Chinese pagoda."

Rand laughed at her. The next day he went to the city to look up the records of real-estate transfers. He found that the entire property of the Little Club had been bought outright, for cash, by Ronald Ingram of New York city, and that all publication of the transfer had been withheld from the press at his request, presumably for business reasons. But the date of this purchase was not within the past month, as he had explicitly stated to Gay, but nearly two years earlier, since which time the place had not been offered either for sale or rental, and all taxes had been promptly paid.

CHAPTER VIII

Rand kept a jealous watch over the Little Club, and over the bit of forest land that served so effectively to conceal it from curious eyes. Every day with his gun he tramped the woods and shore, coming often upon the old house, as if by inadvertence, sometimes trying to knock tentatively, as did all casual strollers who passed that way. But in spite of his seeming nonchalance and the lazy aimlessness of his wanderings, he was always sharply alert for signs of life.

With powerful field-glasses he examined the cove from a distance, and watched every day for a cloud of smoke to tinge the blue above the woods. But all of his efforts were unavailing.

After the first few tingling, nerve-racked days, Gay's excitement flagged, her interest waned and all of her suspicions rested. "Oh, it's just a bunch of rum runners, if it's anybody at all," she assured him, half jealous of his immersion in the mystery. "Pay attention to me. It's none of our business.—Besides, maybe he's right, after all—Ronald Ingram. Perhaps the Chink is just an artist from Boston."

"He Was Putting Up an Aerial."

But Rand would not be drawn from the pursuit. The mass of evidence was too convincing. And now that his suspicions were fully aroused, he marvelled that he had never before realized how completely the Little Club was adapted for secret criminal exploitation—as was the island itself for that matter, securely bedded in sanctity as it seemed.

The occupation of the summer colony continued but for a scant three months of the year, and with its going the entire northern peninsula was deserted. Except for the Lone Pine on the hilltop and the Apple Tree in the orchard below, there was no residence within a mile of the cove, which was admirably protected, shut in snugly by high cliffs to east and west, while directly before it lay the little rock-girt dome of Punkin knob. While the cove offered a perfect landing for small boats, it lay to the west of the course taken by ships going in and out of Portland harbor.

Examining those locked doors and windows afresh, with his suspicions aroused, Rand saw clearly that it was now far more securely shut in than it had been in former years of its desertion. Every crack and seam of the frames that covered windows and doors had been sealed from within. It was locked from chimney to solid rock foundation, as tight as a drum.

Often, in wandering about, both in the woods and near the club, Rand had a feeling that he was watched, but all his efforts to discover the secret source of this were unavailing. Gay admitted that she, too, felt watched sometimes. She said it was with incredible rapidity. It is the swallow among insects, and so swift is its flight, and so keen its vision, that it will recognize, follow, and catch on the wing the finest prey.

It can fly backwards or forwards, and turn at a right angle at top speed. Like the swallow, too, its flight seems tireless, and it is seldom seen to alight.

Little Soil Not Tilled
In Guatemala and Salvador, the two most populous countries in Central America, the population is so dense that there is very little waste land. Guatemala has 2,000,000 people and Salvador with an area of only 7,225 square miles, 1,040,000 or 144 persons to the square mile. This is the densest population in the western hemisphere. These countries are rich in sugar, coffee, minerals, rice, hemp, cotton and bananas.

Slap at Education
Education is really a very simple matter. A wise man once said that it consists of a log, with a teacher sitting on one end and a student on the other. Or it is a bowl of soup and a ladle and a hungry child asking for more. The rest is largely dogma, or the whistling of educators to keep up their courage.—Don Rose in the Philadelphia Ledger.

the troubled spirit of the body that had come to her in the cove.

And then, after three weeks of keeping a watch so strict that he would have sworn that nothing untoward could possibly have occurred in the island without his knowledge, it was not, after all, the result of his assiduous guard that brought result, but the idle curiosity of the Females Wallace, the thing that Rand particularly disliked and took pleasure to defy.

"Rand," began Miss Lida timidly, as they sat at supper, "you don't know who is moving off the island, do you?"

"No," he said briefly. "Is anybody?"

"Well, a big furniture van came by this afternoon. It went up toward the point. I walked up to the end of the lane, but it was out of sight, and I don't know if it went down the back shore or up to Colony corner. But it didn't come down."

Then for the first time Rand turned around with some interest. "It didn't come down," he repeated. "It must have come down. There's no body on the Back Shore, nor up at the Colony either. It must have gone back to town on the last ferry."

"No, it didn't. Mary Malcolm was watching for it, to ask the driver."

"If I hear anything about it, I'll let you know," Rand said, with unusual kindness.

Quickly he excused himself from the table and went out. At the end of the lane he paused to consider. The Back Shore was a long open road, subject to traffic. If a strange motor van went that way, it had legitimate business there. But the Colony corner, although nearly half a mile from the Little Club, which stood at the other end of the forest, was separated from it only by thick and impenetrable forest. It was not the nearest point from the club to the motor road, but it was by all odds the most desirable for one who desired secrecy.

Anyone, then, who wished to remove something from the Little Club without attracting undue attention, would most certainly run a car to the end of the road at Colony corner, for the road ended there, and carry a secret burden through the dark and deserted woods to that point.

With this in mind, Rand turned up to the Colony corner on a dead run. Like every other islander, he carried in his pocket a small electric flash. But like no other islander, he carried also a revolver on his hip.

As he neared the end of the road, where it fell abruptly away to a steep decline of rocks, he skirted wider into the woods behind the Shingle shack, and drew up slowly to the fringe of the woods. It was very dark, but distinctly he could make out a huge bulky shadow against the trees that outlined the end of the road. It was the motor van, beyond all shadow of doubt. There was no light attached, no sound from within, no stir of life. Rand held his breath to listen, but it was silent as a tomb. Suspecting the presence of a guard, he dared not venture on examination, but as he knew the van could not possibly get off the island until the ferry at six twenty-five in the morning, he felt he had plenty of time.

Gingerly, then, he worked his way to the rear of the cottage, with which he was familiar, and let himself into a basement window and up through the cellar stairs to the front room. There with blankets from an adjoining bedroom, and pillows from the couch, he made himself comfortable on the floor beside the window—too comfortable, for he fell sound asleep.

Hours later he was awakened by the sudden sound of a motor, and cursing his negligence he sprang up. It was not yet full daylight, but the pale gray mist that creeps between day and night, holding a hand of each, lay over the island.

In the driver's seat of the van a man huddled in a great coat, his cap drawn low, his hands encased in shaggy gloves. The motor was cold, and he was obliged to press the starter again and again.

Between Hernando de Soto, first to blaze a trail through the wildernesses of the New World, and Kit Carson, last of the great frontiersmen, streams an endless procession of tremendous figures—Homeric in courage and achievement, flaming hugely against the dull background of uniformity; yet not in the whole colorful story of America is there record of a more amazing career than that of Sam Houston, the Colossus in Buckskin who won an empire for his country.

From the cradle to the grave he walked with drama. As a boy he ran away from home to live in the wigwams of the Cherokees; serving under Andrew Jackson in the war against the Creeks, he led the charge that carried the Indian breastworks, receiving wounds that stretched him on the prisoners thrive outdoors. Sunshine and open-air work are the best and most advisable in the treatment of prisoners, believe administrators of Swedish prisons. In the near future the obligatory one-year confinement in cells for those under sentences of 20 years or more will be reduced to 6 months. It is not always wholesome for prisoners to be alone with their thoughts, the authorities say, and often cases of physical depression result in physical ruin. Sweden also has found prison farms practicable and their number will be increased.

Celluloid Models
In construction of great engineering works such as bridges and dams it has been the custom to construct replicas, sometimes costing many thousands of dollars, which are destroyed in the tests made upon it to determine the capacity of the structure to resist the strain that is likely to be put upon it

How Come?

Auto Dealer—I've got a suspicious character here—he wants to pay cash for a used car!

When the engine ran smoothly at last, the driver backed it around, carefully, for the road was narrow and the rocky cliff rugged and precipitous, with trees jutting close. As it turned Rand saw the license plates, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, in conformity with the law which requires Interstate vehicles to bear the license of each, and Rand had time to jot down the New Hampshire number before the car was finally backed away from him.

Rand looked at his watch. It was a quarter past six. The first ferry went over at six twenty-five.

"Well planned for a getaway," he thought, approvingly. No time for Mary Malcolm to ask them any questions.

The guard stepped briskly down from the rocks and threw open the big doors in the rear of the van. A sudden jerk of his head toward the wood was evidently a signal, for on the instant appeared a line of men, small, stooped and shuffling, who came in a sort of loping run down the narrow path from the woods, single file, their soft feet making no sound at all, either on the rocks or among the dry dead needles of the pines. The guard at the back of the car gave each a hand in turn, and swung them up, docily, into the van, one after another.

And as they turned about, facing him, to make the little spring into the car, Rand saw their faces. They were Chinese, every one, twenty-five of them by count. The guard hastily closed the door, snapping a lock upon it, and sprang up beside the driver, and almost before he was in his seat the car was rolling swiftly away down the cinder road.

For one moment Rand was irritable. He could telephone to the police on the mainland, and a detail of them would meet the ferry at the pier and take the truck with its foreign freight into custody. But on afterthought, it seemed that the capture of these twenty-five little old Chinese men meant nothing. It was the ring that counted, the hand that had grouped itself together to mock at the law. Making his decision quickly, he hurriedly got out of the cottage and ran through the woods toward the Little Club.

Hastily selecting the trail in the rocks where the descent was least difficult, a trail held in his memory from boyhood adventures years before, Rand dropped swiftly down, from crag to crag, until he stood in the cove. The one great door beneath the piazza was securely locked, every seam and crack impenetrably sealed.

Reluctantly he abandoned hope of admission from below and made his way up the cliffs once more. Rand knew the construction of the building perfectly, having assisted indeed in its erection. In the beginning there had been no bank of loose rocks beneath the piazza other than that afforded by nature, and there was a window to the basement on the eastern side, opening just above ground. Later on, for the sake of warmth, small rocks had been thrown under, and although Rand felt some distaste for the task, he felt sure that by pulling out the rocks, he could get at the window beneath the piazza floor, and thus into the basement. It was unlikely that the small basement window would be subjected to such right sealing, sheltered as it was behind six feet of piazza floor well walled with rocks.

In spite of his profession of indolence, Rand was not averse to labor when the end justified the effort, so he fell sturdily to work at a distance which he judged, and correctly as events proved, would lead to the basement window.

It was a long time before his efforts were rewarded by a cleared window, the usual small basement window, perhaps two feet long by eighteen inches high. The glass was covered on the inside with a thick black curtain, so that he gained no view of the interior, and the window itself he found, to his disappointment, not only locked, but sealed with a fine cement, or wax, along the four edges of it.

Convinced, however, he concealed there to necessitate these precautions, he resolved to gain admittance at all costs. With renewed eagerness he attacked the window with the stout knife which had served him well a hundred times in the emergencies of boating, fishing and hunting, and worked it slowly around the edges, pecking at the cement which bound it in place. And finally he felt it give, sway slightly beneath his hand, and drew it carefully out.

Cautiously he thrust his hand into the aperture, and drew aside the black curtain which veiled it. The room was in absolute darkness. He listened long, but could hear no slightest sound in any portion of the house. Breathlessly, then, his revolver cocked alertly in his right hand, with the left he extended his pocket flash, pressed the button, and swept the yellow light into the room, moving it slowly about, inch by inch, from wall to wall. The silence was like the grave itself.

Rand felt the emptiness of the house, sensed it, and unwilling to lose an opportunity he might not have again, he determined to go in, although realizing fully the risk he ran.

To get in he was obliged to replace both his flash and his revolver in his pocket, and drop down, defenseless and in the dark, but this was a chance he felt he was obliged to take. And after that breathless moment of his descent, when he flashed his light into the room again, it seemed surprising commonplace, just what one would expect to find the basement of an old abandoned clubhouse.

A Colossus in Buckskin

SAM HOUSTON MONUMENT IN CITY OF HOUSTON

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WITH THE eyes of the nation turning toward Houston, Texas, where the Democratic party will soon be engaged in choosing its nominee for President, it is particularly appropriate that the name of the man for whom this city was named should be rescued from the comparative obscurity which has been its fate and that the deeds and importance of this man be better known to all Americans. There are thousands of cities and towns in the United States named after men, but comparatively few of these individuals are worthy of having their names thus perpetuated. If ever a man deserved that honor, however, surely it was Sam Houston, of whom it has recently been said "Unless 'Old Sam Jacinto' is known and understood, until he is given his just dues, there can be no clear and proper understanding of the stars that stud the flag. Leave Sam Houston out of the story, and the American chronicle is a thing of gaps and many unintelligibilities for not only did he make history at various times, but in a great critical period he WAS history."

Although three states vie for the honor of calling Sam Houston their own, he belongs not only to them but to the whole nation. So it is appropriate that the name "Houston" should be upon the tongue of all Americans with honor in the next few weeks. It is also appropriate that there should appear at this time a new biography of "Old Sam Jacinto" such as George Creel's "Sam Houston—A Colossus in Buckskin," published recently by the Cosmopolitan Book Corporation.

That sweeping characterization of Houston, the new biographer justifies in this statement: "Between Hernando de Soto, first to blaze a trail through the wildernesses of the New World, and Kit Carson, last of the great frontiersmen, streams an endless procession of tremendous figures—Homeric in courage and achievement, flaming hugely against the dull background of uniformity; yet not in the whole colorful story of America is there record of a more amazing career than that of Sam Houston, the Colossus in Buckskin who won an empire for his country. From the cradle to the grave he walked with drama. As a boy he ran away from home to live in the wigwams of the Cherokees; serving under Andrew Jackson in the war against the Creeks, he led the charge that carried the Indian breastworks, receiving wounds that stretched him on the ground for dead; elected congressman and then governor by the adoring Tennesseans, even the Presidency was not beyond his hopes, yet that happened which sent him into exile between two seas; seeking refuge with the Cherokees for a second time, drink and melancholy sank him to a dark level beneath the regard of men; entering Texas, resolved to build a new life in a new land, he lifted himself high above his degradation, again, when the colonists rose in rebellion against the brutal tyrannies of a Mexican dictator, it was a clear-eyed, indomitable Houston who marshaled and roused volunteers, conducted masterful retreats and finally crushed Santa Anna and his army in a day of slaughter.

His later years were no less packed with color and high accomplishment. As President of the Lone Star Republic, he beat down the greed, impotence and vagaries of men, building firm and enduring foundations under the tottering superstructure of government; it was his shrewd statescraft, pitting European powers against America, that made annexation possible; in the senate of the United States, although a Southerner and a slaveholder, he braved the hate and anger of the South by an unflinching stand against slavery and secession; contemptuous of threats against his life, he returned to Texas to run for governor on a Unionist platform and was again elected, on a slim odds; confronted with the necessity of declaring allegiance to the Confederate States, he suffered no hesitation rather than a surrendering principle, and walked out of office to the humble cabin that was his home, old, poor and proscribed, but with his head unbowed.

Such was the career which enables its chronicler to say by way of summary:

"A gigantic, towering figure, well worthy to rank with the illustrious and admired of America, yet, save in the Southwest, born of his courage, Sam Houston is but a name, known in detail only to the inquiring few. Cut off from the annals of the past, the important events of his life, perhaps better than any other, stands as a perfect expression of the frontier spirit, and his portrait is a composite of those amazing men who rode the forest and plain as the Vikings rode the sea—reckless, dauntless, indomitable, simple as children, craftier than the Indian, arrogant and invincible in their courage and pride of blood, lawless yet curiously law-loving, and fleeing from civilization only to extend it. Never was a biography more intensely American."

Prisoners Thrive Outdoors

Sunshine and open-air work are the best and most advisable in the treatment of prisoners, believe administrators of Swedish prisons. In the near future the obligatory one-year confinement in cells for those under sentences of 20 years or more will be reduced to 6 months. It is not always wholesome for prisoners to be alone with their thoughts, the authorities say, and often cases of physical depression result in physical ruin. Sweden also has found prison farms practicable and their number will be increased.

Celluloid Models

In construction of great engineering works such as bridges and dams it has been the custom to construct replicas, sometimes costing many thousands of dollars, which are destroyed in the tests made upon it to determine the capacity of the structure to resist the strain that is likely to be put upon it

While the average American may be but faintly interested in the work of Houston, the empire-builder, he cannot fail to be stirred by the deeds of Houston, the man. We can admire the pure grit he displayed when he received that dreadful wound in the assault on the Indian stronghold at Tobeoka, but we must admire more the moral courage he displayed when he faced a vast crowd of Texans, secession and dared to predict defeat for the South. For "it is far easier to do something spectacular with all the world applauding than it is to stand square for a principle and to flout the mighty monarch, Majority."

Small wonder then that three states should claim him as their own. Virginia's claim lies in the fact that he was born March 2, 1793 at Timber Ridge in Rockbridge county not far from Lexington, the son of Samuel Houston, who served in the Revolution as one of Daniel Morgan's stalwart riflemen, and one of those pioneer mothers, who were "tall and strong" and a fit mate for such a man. Last year Virginia, with Texas co-operating, erected a monument at that place and there each year memorial ceremonies are held on April 21, the anniversary of Sam Houston's greatest victory, battle of San Jacinto.

When the elder Samuel Houston died in 1807, his wife took her six sons and three daughters with her over the Alleghenies and established them a pioneer home on the borders of the Cherokee nation in eastern Tennessee. So Tennessee spreads upon the record of its contribution to national history that she sent Sam Houston to his first war under the leadership of her greatest hero, Andrew Jackson; in his expedition against the Creeks; that she sent him to represent her in congress and that she later made him her governor.

Texas' claim to Sam Houston is based upon events too well known to need repeating here. The events themselves are well known, but the significance of these events and the man responsible for them are not such common knowledge and that is why the appearance of a new biography of Houston at a time when it will be easiest for his name to be recalled is a happy circumstance. Virginia, Tennessee and Texas may claim Sam Houston for their own but as his contribution to the building of the United States becomes better known, these three states must share him with all their sister commonwealths. For this Colossus in Buckskin, like all other empire builders, belongs to us all.

The new rule for making jelly jell use PEXEL

PEXEL will surprise you with its speed and economy in making jelly. Does not change the color or flavor of your jams or jellies

USE any fruit you wish—the one that failed before. Add PEXEL to the juice and bring to boil. Then add sugar. Bring to full boil again. Skim. It's finished. Pour into glasses. You've made the most delicious jelly in all your experience—and it will jell by the time it is cold.

In addition to making jelly PEXEL is economical and saves time. Cuts out the long boil. Makes more jelly because fruit juice, sugar and flavor don't go off into steam. Time and fuel are saved. Countless examples show that PEXEL repays the cost it costs from one to three times.

PEXEL is different too! Made entirely from pure fruit. Tasteless, colorless, odorless—absolutely. A powder—not a liquid. Keeps indefinitely. Equally effective with bottled fruit juices or unsweetened canned fruits.

Get PEXEL from your grocer. Only 30c. The recipe booklet in every package gives easy-to-follow directions and accurate tables. The PEXEL Company, Chicago, Ill.

A few examples of how much jelly PEXEL makes:

- 4 1/2 cups strawberry juice, PEXEL, 8 cups sugar make 11 glasses jelly.
- 4 1/2 cups raspberry juice, PEXEL, 8 cups sugar make 11 glasses jelly.
- 6 cups currant juice, PEXEL, 10 cups sugar make 14 glasses of jelly.
- 4 1/2 cups grape juice, PEXEL, 7 cups sugar make 10 glasses of jelly.

SAY BLOODSTAINS CAN BE TRACED
System Will Help in Detection of Crime.

London.—Suspected persons who tell detectives that bloodstains on their clothing are due to nose bleed or to cuts while shaving may now have their stories tested by chemical and microscopic methods, described to the Royal Institute of Public Health in London by Dr. Roche Lynch, expert in legal medicine.

Comparison of the "blood group" to which the suspected person belongs with blood in the stain often proves, Doctor Lynch said, that the blood is not self-shed, but must have come from some other person.

There are four recognized blood groups to which a person may belong, and it is possible to divide these into several subgroups, depending upon the presence or absence of specific chemical substances in the liquid part of the blood or in the solid corpuscles.

Tests for these substances can now be made, Doctor Lynch disclosed, on bloodstains at least a year old. It is sometimes possible to say not only that a bloodstain in question was not made by the blood of the suspected person, but that it probably did come from a murdered victim, if that is the truth.

This can be tried whenever a sample of stain known to be of the victim's blood is available for comparison.

There are some uncertainties, Doctor Lynch admitted, but he believes that these new blood tests should be used in criminal practice more often.

New Pneumonia Serum Covers All Four Types

New York.—A new serum for treating pneumonia, developed by Dr. L. D. Felton of Harvard university, has given promising results in combating this highly fatal disease.

The serum marks an advance in that it can be used for all four of the recognized types of pneumonia, according to Dr. Russell L. Cecil of the Bellevue hospital, who has obtained very efficacious results from its use in the pneumonia clinic of that hospital. It works best with types one and two, the two groups that comprise the majority of pneumonia cases. The recoveries after its use with type one have been very encouraging. Indeed, Doctor Cecil declared, though the deadly type three has proved the least amenable of any group.

Pneumonia serums used in the past have been specific for each type. Since certain laboratory procedures have to be followed out before the type from which the patient is suffering can be determined, precious time often has to be lost before the doctors know which serum to give. The Felton serum of mixed cultures can be administered on admission to the hospital and frequently a gain of many hours can be made in checking the course of the disease.

Hunter Loses as Utah Deer Dies in Colorado

Ft. Morgan, Colo.—During the short season last winter when hunters were allowed to shoot deer in Utah, Harley Thomas, a hunter in the Diamond mountains near the Utah-Colorado state line, shot a large buck on the Utah side, but the wounded animal ran 300 yards into Colorado and dropped dead.

Thomas went after the buck, but when he arrived where it lay he found a Colorado game warden sitting on the carcass of the dead animal. Even though the deer was shot in Utah, which at that time gave the hunter the right to hunt deer, the Colorado warden refused to turn the animal over to Thomas, as the Colorado game law forbids transportation of the carcass of a legally killed deer beyond the state line.

Thomas was not allowed to kill another deer that season as he had already killed his allotment by law, although he was not allowed to keep it. This is the first case of this kind to happen regarding the killing of deer, but under the laws of both states officials were unable to do anything to aid the hunter.

Doctor's Bills Low on His Majesty's Estate

Sandringham, England.—The services and skill of King George's residential doctor for two pence (4 cents) a week a family are one of the many advantages of the employees on the royal estate at Sandringham that are due to the benevolence of his majesty.

The penny is a powerful coin at Sandringham, for this amount each week entitles workers on the estate to use a well-equipped club repete with billiard room, library and reading room. Beer may be obtained here at reduced prices.

On Saturdays popular concerts are arranged and again a penny covers admission, children one-half penny. The proceeds go to charity.

The estate contains many fine homes for the widows of estate workers, and retiring employees receive a pension with other advantages.

Prince's Simple Life on Ranch in Calgary

The prince of Wales, so they say, is developing an American accent. Seven years of annual association with the cowhands and neighboring ranchers at Calgary, Alberta, where he is owner of the EP ranch, have erased much of his carefully cultivated Oxford enunciation and substituted the drawl of the American Northwest.

The British royal heir even jokes about the change in his speech. "A favorite story with him is one in which an American acquaintance explains that the difference between a ranch and a 'ranch' is that 'a ranch pays and a 'ranch' doesn't."

"But everybody in Calgary knows that the prince runs a ranch and not a 'ranch'," says Chief Long Lance, a neighbor. "By 8:30 every morning he has breakfast and is out inspecting his cattle and barns. One of his chores is hauling manure in a wheelbarrow."—Los Angeles Times.

Name "Dark Continent" Credited to Stanley

Africa is called the "Dark continent" on account of the fact that it was for many years an unexplored region. Henry M. Stanley, who knew more about Africa than anyone else, traversed its darkest part, and told the story of his travels under the title, "In Darkest Africa." Stanley's white aides, Surgeon Thomas Parke and Lieut. William Bonny, both published books in England after their return home, and others returned with them. So it is untrue that Stanley's white aides perished as claimed by A. Aloysius Smith, alias "Trader Horn." Leopold, king of the Belgians, financed the expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha and the exploration of the Congo. That is why the territory came under the Belgian flag.

The simile "Dark as Egypt" may relate to the fact that the Egyptians were superstitious, and, as people who were continually seeking omens, they avoided work on certain days.—Literary Digest.

Color War in Edinburgh
Following the refusal of some restaurants to admit Asiatic and African residents, not because of their conduct, but because of their racial origin, Edinburgh has a color war that has gotten into the house of commons. The secretary for Scotland was asked to take steps, by legislation or otherwise, to stop the discrimination, and he replied that he did not have the power to intervene and did not think legislation along the line suggested would be practicable. A delegation of students representing the Edinburgh Indian association protested recently to the lord provost of Edinburgh, and the members of the organization refused to take part in the recent charity pageant.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

Terrell County—Greeting:
To the Sheriff or any Constable of You are hereby commanded to summon S. A. Weaver by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your County, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Terrell County, to be held at the Courthouse thereof, in Sanderson, Texas, on the second Monday in July, A. D. 1928, the same being the 9th day of July, A. D. 1928, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 8th day of June, A. D. 1928, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court as No. 1719, wherein Peggy Mary Weaver is plaintiff, and S. A. Weaver is defendant, and said petition alleging that on or about August 28, 1927, plaintiff was legally married to defendant, and lived with him as his wife until on or about May 27, 1928, when said defendant's treatment of plaintiff became unbearable and plaintiff separated herself from defendant and has not lived with defendant since said date.

Plaintiff says that during all the time she lived with defendant she conducted herself with propriety and managed the household affairs with prudence and economy, and at all times treated her said husband with kindness and forbearance.

But that defendant, disregarding the solemnity of his marriage vows and his obligations to treat plaintiff with kindness and attention, about four months after their marriage, commenced a course of unkind, harsh and tyrannical conduct toward her; in April, 1928, defendant cursed plaintiff, abused and called plaintiff vile names and twice slapped her face with sufficient force to make her nose bleed and cause her extreme pain.

That on or about May 1, 1928, defendant cursed and abused plaintiff and struck plaintiff in the eye with his fist with such force that plaintiff's face and eyes were blackened and stayed black for about one month afterwards.

Wherefore plaintiff prays the court that defendant be duly cited to appear and answer herein and that on final hearing hereof she have judgment dissolving said marriage relations and restoring her maiden name of Peggy Mary Bates and for costs of suit and for such other and further relief, special and general, in law and in equity, to which she may show herself entitled.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Sanderson, Texas, this 11th day of June, A. D. 1928.

D. 1928, the same being the 9th day of July, A. D. 1928, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 28th day of May, A. D. 1928, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court as No. 1715, wherein Annie Ware is plaintiff, and Joel R. Plaintiff prays the Court that defendant be cited to appear and answer therein, for judgment dissolving the marriage relations, for costs of suit, and for such other and further relief, special and general, in law and in equity that she may be justly entitled to.

Herein fail not, and have you before said Court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Sanderson, Texas, this 29th day of May, A. D. 1928.
