Mrs. Luella Lemons and son, Mrs. E. D. Pipes and son, Mrs. Clyde Wheeler and Mrs. Addie Lee Boling spent Sunday in Marathon visiting with relatives.

Musical Program Enjoyed.

The musical entertainment given last Saturday night at the high school by Mesdames Cox and Summers and a few of their pupils was enjoyed very much. The opening numbers were played by the orchestra. Following the orchestra numbers there were several solos played on the violin and saxophone by the boys in the orchestra. Violin solos being played by Jim Stovell, Melvin Richard and James Robert Nations, while saxophone solos were played by Robert Kerr, Junior Lemons and Keith Mitchell. Roberta Ross Luchhausen delighted the audience with a little reading well rendered. The Burlesque Doll Drills given by seven boys was a decided hit.

A Tea Party Song by five little girls was well received and a complete success. Erie Peoples, Lillian Hailey, Mildred Stavley, Gladys House and Dorothy Lew-glady were in the party, piano solos being played by Dorothy and Gladys.

Special mention is made of the piano solo by Mrs. Rufe Murrain, a saxophone solo, "Berceuse," from Jocelyn by Godard, played by Keith Mitchell, and the "Florida Song," sung by Mrs. Stovell. The program was concluded by a reading entitled "Christmas for Lonesome Folks" given by Mrs. Adelaide Summers and a musical reading by Mrs. James Lee Cox.

Special Service is Held For Athletes at Presbyterian Church

On Sunday evening, November 25, at the Presbyterian Church the Rev. J. A. McMillan delivered a very interesting sermon to the high school athletic organizations on the topic "Playing for the Grand Prize." Members of the football, basketball, and volleyball teams and their coaches were guests of the church for the occasion.

Various games in the athletic field were compared to the game of life and the prizes received for playing these games squarely were held up in comparison to the grand prize received for playing the game of life squarely and well. Temporal prizes that fade and die are but petty things of the moment as compared with the unfading prize of immortal life received by all those who play the game of life well, according to Reverend McMillan.

THE EAGLE NEWS.

Night Bridge Club.

Mrs. A. E. Creigh Jr. was hostess to the members of the night bridge club at her home last Saturday. Tallies and favors carried out the Thanksgiving theme.

Following the playing of the usual number of tables scores were added. Mrs. R. S. Quikken made high score for the ladies, a silk vanity set being the prize. A tie was the men's high score prize that was won by Max Bogusch.

Refreshments of toasted cheese sandwiches, mince pie à la mode, coffee and salted nuts were served.

MAZZARE-TODD

Last Friday about noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Wilkinson Miss Ruth Todd of Taft and H. R. Mazzare were united in marriage, the Rev. I. E. Owen of the First Baptist Church, officiating.

The bride is of a prominent family in Taft, while the groom, who is from Corpus Christi, has recently accepted a position with the Kerr Mercantile Company as bookkeeper.

The prominent young couple have made many friends in Sanderson since their arrival, who extend congratulations and best wishes to them. Following a short Bridal trip to Alpine they returned to this city Sunday and will make their home here.

What Accounts Are Profitable

Contrary to general opinion, banks do not make 6 per cent profit on each deposit made in a checking account. A general average of profit is 4 per cent and from all deposits 15 per cent must be deducted as a cash reserve.

In banking circles, it is generally accepted as truth that accounts whose balance falls below $200 are an expense to the bank.

In view of this, our service fee of 50c per month for accounts whose balance falls below $50.00 is just and reasonable.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headache, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophesy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia! When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.
Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

The Colfax Bookplate

By AGNES MILLER

CHAPTER X—Continued

"In a few minutes I went back to my regular work. Then Mr. Grosvenor was found unconscious. And he was so badly hurt! It made me ill. The sight of blood always makes me feel faint; I have a refined nature. And his wrist was so badly slashed! And presently I suddenly remembered that that yellow paper in my pocket had been all cut into silvers, too! I was so scared I absolutely didn't dare throw it away. I realized it must have been slit up during those three or four minutes I was away from the professor, because when I laid it down on the pile of four books, it was just as he had given it to me. I was so frightened I didn't know what to do, for days and days! It did seem terribly exciting that I should have picked the note up; and presently I felt that maybe I could solve the mystery of the attack with it—"

"What led you to think that?" interrupted Mr. Almy, interestedly.

"Why, you did!" confessed Daisy joyfully. "Don't you remember that day you interviewed me up in Mr. Roberts' office? When I told you all about Miss Grosvenor and Mr. Burton? I could see you thought I had more information than anybody; I knew it was useful to you, no matter how much Mr. Roberts tried to squelch me. And I did have more information than anybody, so when I—"

"Pray, Miss Abbott," interposed Mr. Almy, "proceed, in reference to the yellow note."
"So, when," repeated Daisy, insistently, "I read in the paper that the weapon used to attack Mr. Grosvenor must have been a small, thin blade, I felt sure it had been used to try the blade first. But I couldn't understand the cuts in a pattern on the paper; and Miss Grosvenor wasn't arrested; and, of course, I was sure Professor Harrington had had nothing to do with the affair, so I decided that Mr. Case must have known Mr. Grosvenor and done it!"

Mr. Roberts and I gaped. Mr. Almy merely said: "Let me hear your theory, please."
"Well, Monday noon Mr. Case was dreadfully cross to Ulysses, right in front of me. And you know he's never cross, least of all to a person like Ulysses. We were both in Mr. Case's office, he and I; I was writing a letter for him. Ulysses came in and asked him some question about the shelves he was putting up in the stockroom, and then he started to gossip about the accident."

"He asked Mr. Case if he knew the old gentleman; and Mr. Case said that though a number of the staff reported having seen him before from time to time in the shop, he had never happened to Ulysses then asked if the old gentleman was going to recover; and Mr. Case said the doctor thought not, he had lost so much blood. Ulysses said that was different from the old days, when they bled people on purpose. He told us his father had had pleurisy when he was a boy, and had been bled by a powerful fine doctor from the navy and got well right away. I said, 'Your father wasn't a sailor, was he?' and he said: 'No, the doctor was visiting his folks down to Elliot's Crossing. My father he used to live there.' He said Elliot's Crossing was in Virginia, and when I asked him what it was near, he said, 'It ain't near nothing 'cept the woods and the mountains. I was born there at midnight 'tween October and November, and my horoscope was cast. And the horoscope says that folks that's born at midnight 'tween October and November gets messages. An' I got a message this mornin'. I knowed some'n powerful bad was go'n happen, and it done happen!' And then Mr. Case told him sharply he was a superstitious old fool!"

"Well, this, naturally, he went away; I was sorry for him, but he did give me the creeps with his bleedin' and his woods and mountains and horoscopes. I didn't understand him at all, but he seemed me to death. And I got scarer and scarer about that yellow note with the silvers in it, until finally I just made up my mind that I wouldn't have anything to do with it. So I went and stuck it into the most unlikely looking book I could find in the history section!"

"Oh, it was so terrible!" shuddered Daisy. "I finally decided Thursday mornin' that I ought to try to find it and give 'em up, after all. And I couldn't remember what book I had put it in; that is, I couldn't remember the book by name. I was scared just absolutely stiff. I knew I shouldn't have hidden the slip, for it wasn't mine, in the first place, and if I suspected it was important, I should have told some one in authority. And then, gradually, the more I thought about the thing, the more I realized that Mr. Case hadn't responded to all to Ulysses; in fact, he'd shut him up much too quickly."

"And then, that same Thursday, I suddenly remembered, without any warning—you know the way you do sometimes when you're thinking about a thing very hard?—that I had seen Mr. Case walking along the south gallery, to the door that leads upstairs, on Monday mornin', just before the clock struck eleven!"

"Why didn't you ever say so before?" demanded Mr. Roberts, evidently as much stunned as I was—and maybe as Mr. Almy was—at this totally unexpected corroboration of Julia Grosvenor's statement that she had seen Mr. Case in the same place at the same time.
"I never thought of it again until that minute!" cried Daisy, sharply. "Why should I? And why shouldn't Mr. Case walk along the south gallery? He does, every day, nearly! But I had remembered that the attack was said to have been made shortly before eleven o'clock, and that made me uneasy, taken in connection with the way Mr. Case had lost his head before Ulysses. And then he got me a wonderful position in Fernald's; I couldn't help wondering if he had done it to put me under obligation to him, because I had heard him and Ulysses."
"Have you anything further you would like to tell me, Miss Abbott?" Mr. Almy inquired. "That is positively all you know about the yellow note?"
"Absolutely!" vowed Daisy, solemnly.
So she was permitted to depart.

CHAPTER XI

The Spring-Lantern

When Ernesto's box trees were half a block away, Mr. Almy said: "Suppose you take back this key and the bookplate. If at any time you think they might get a response from Miss Grosvenor, show them to her. I give them to you because she associates you, rather than me, with that book, and you might have a chance to win her confidence more adroitly. Once more, do your best to get her to talk."

We passed the box trees; we paced the blue-and-white tiled hallway; we mounted the steep staircase to the second floor, and approached the door of the Grosvenor apartment. And—
"Out of it walked Mr. Case!"
I decided that the hall was too dark for me to see him; what Mr. Almy did, I don't know, for he was behind me, but at all events, he didn't speak. The maid admitted us to the living room; and there sat Julia, in the same chair where we had left her the previous evening, so still that it seemed as if she had never moved.

"Miss Grosvenor, we want to do something for you, if you will only let us," said Mr. Almy.
"Nobody can do anything for me," she answered in a dead, level tone.
Mr. Almy glanced at me.
"You're mistaken," said I, rather bluntly, to rouse her. "I should not have dreamed of intruding here if I could not help you. You see, I was here last night when you and your cousin had that discussion—and you remember you asked me to stay!—and I think I have here what you were discussing with him, that object you want."

I took the key from my bag, and held it out to her. She looked at it with perfect blankness, her expression changing from bewilderment to disappointment, then to suspicion.
"What is it?" she demanded with some asperity. "I haven't the faintest notion!"
I swung it down on the table, and drew the bookplate out of my bag.
"Is this what you want, then?" I asked.
Her eyes fairly blazed with recognition! With trembling fingers she snatched it from my hand, hesitated almost imperceptibly one instant as if screwing her courage up to a supreme effort, then turned the stout paper oblong over and scanned the blank back avidly. Then, with a heartrending cry of bitter disappointment, she flung the bookplate on the floor.

"Mr. Almy snatched it up."
"Miss Grosvenor, you recognized this," he announced sharply. "You saw it at the auction galleries in Richmond, a week ago last Thursday."
Julia Grosvenor caught her breath sharply, half in chagrin in having betrayed herself so utterly, half in consternation at Mr. Almy's information.
"You wanted to buy the book with the bookplate, didn't you? Surely there was no reason why you should not have done so if you wished."

"Yes," she finally whispered; "but I had no money. So I really went to see who would buy it—where it would be afterward."
"Your cousin entered a bid for five hundred dollars," resumed Mr. Almy. Julia made no sign or movement.
"But, as you know, he was outbid. Mr. Burton got the book. It was in Darrow's shop last Monday."

She gazed steadily at the floor, in dead silence. "Miss Grosvenor, I must remind you that the authorities are still waiting for you to explain your presence at that shop on Monday mornin' for an hour and a half."

"I have explained it! You won't believe me! You think I followed my grandfather there to kill him!" suddenly blazed the girl, frightened and furious.
"No," denied Mr. Almy, very quietly, "I think you went there after that bookplate again. But you didn't find it, and something else happened. What, I am going to find out. Miss Grosvenor, when did you learn that Mr. Burton was Darrow's buyer?"
"When I left the auction, directly after the book had been bought. I made inquiries," she answered reluctantly.
"Did you tell your cousin that Burton had bought it?"
"No. I didn't even meet him in Richmond. If he knew, he must have found out from the galleries."

"He did," rejoined Mr. Almy. "Your constant avoidance of your cousin while both of you are attempting to get possession of this drawing makes certain only one conclusion, Miss Grosvenor: Your motive for wanting it conflicts with his. Now, your cousin went to Darrow's Monday mornin' and bought a book. Did you see him there?"

Turned the Stout Paper Oblong Over and Scanned the Blank Back Avidly.

"No."
"Did you at any time during that mornin' know he had been there?"
The question started her, but she looked at her questioner steadily and answered point-blank, "Yes!"
"How did you know?"
"That," said Julia in a tone of finality, "I cannot tell you."

"Why did your cousin go to Darrow's Thursday night?"
"Perhaps for the book again," said Julia, in pathetic desperation.
"You know better than to say that," said Mr. Almy, with a touch of sternness. "What obligation are you under to him?"
"He has often treated me with consideration; not too many people have," returned Julia, with dignity.
Mr. Almy looked at her hard and shrewdly. Suddenly he shot out: "What did he go to Darrow's to get for you on Thursday night?"
Her eyes dilated with surprise and horror. She shuddered, and gasped: "For me? For me? Well, if he wants to tell you, let him! There are some things I can't do!"

Her lips snapped shut just as they had done the previous evening in that very room, when, after all the abuse she had received at the hands of her cousin, when it was utterly useless to try to withstand the search for him, she would do nothing to betray him. Her loyalty was again making

Marriage No Light Ceremony in China

Getting married is complicated business in China, Anna Louise Strong, writing in Harper's Magazine, gives the following description of Chinese wedding customs as related to her by a Chinese student:
"If a marriage is honorable in China, the parents of the groom will pay the money needed. They will send notes from the son will marry the daughter of Mr. So-and-So. Your presence is requested at the feast." But it is worth much to him, for at the wedding, all honor is shown to this old man, who will now be a grandfather, since his son has taken a wife.

"But if the marriage be without parents' consent, then the young folks cannot be at home on their wedding day. A proper, honorable marriage—it really cannot be done without the parents; otherwise, all is disorder. There are only two other ways for young folks. One is to wait and beseech the parents. Even if they do not like the girl, still they love their son, and if they see him always unhappy, refusing to take any other woman or to give them grandsons, in the end they will often give way."

Daddy on Fire
Little MILDRED ran into the house the other day and screamed: "Oh, mother, I just saw daddy on fire!"
"On fire!" the startled mother cried, and Mildred vigorously nodded her head.
After a maternal cross-examination it turned out that Mildred had passed the barber shop and saw a barber applying matches to her father's hair. She had run all the way home to tell mother and save daddy's life.
When father came home a few minutes later he was surprised at the affectionate greeting of his little daughter, who was delighted to see that he had escaped from the fire dead alive.—Philadelphia Record.

faithful return for treachery. Equivocal as her position was, she was so admirable that, forgetting all about Mr. Almy, I broke out uncontrollably: "I heard your cousin last night, you know. He offered you a 'liberal settlement' in exchange for something he wanted. He treated you with great contempt, in such contrast to others, almost strangers to you! They proffer you their aid freely; why do you spurn it just as you have spurned his offer?"
"I'm not ungrateful! I'm not!" cried Julia, clenching her hands. "But you see, it's different. What Charles offered me was a bribe out of my own money, for all I know!"
She had started to talk, at last! And not because of my appeal, but because I had unwittingly hit on a grievance. But Mr. Almy was quite indifferent to cause, being interested only in effect:
"You think you have a legal claim on property your cousin calls his, do you, Miss Grosvenor?" he demanded swiftly.

"I do!" she cried, intent on her wrong. "Otherwise why should I have been ignored and rebuffed so pointedly all my life? If I had really been on the estate—which was all my grandfather cared about, except Charles, and everything in the world that Charles himself cared about—why should those two men have spent their time trying to safeguard themselves by repudiating me?"
"Did you ever do anything to try to prove your claim?"
"Not until the last fortnight. You know I've been home from abroad less than a year; and I came to the conclusion I've just explained, only a few months ago, and gradually."

"And how did you try to prove your claim within this last fortnight?"
With a groan, Julia cried: "I went to Richmond!" and then fell upon a despairing silence. The grievance had cut deeper. In a minute, Mr. Almy asked gently: "Why did you go there?"
"It's such a long story!"
"Take your time. Just begin at the beginning, and go on."

"Well," began Julia, wearily, yet with a sort of relief, "a week ago last Tuesday evening I was reading the paper to my grandfather, as I sometimes did. He liked especially to hear all the news of book sales and auctions. And I read the notice of the auction of Judge Leavitt's library in Richmond, the coming Thursday. Of course the sale of a Virginia library was of special interest to him, particularly as this notice named many important books."
"Among them, no doubt, Claribew's 'Notes'?" inquired Mr. Almy.
"Yes; it was the last on the list, and it seemed to interest him especially."

"Did he say anything?"
"Not until I had finished reading the description of the book, or rather of the bookplate, for the book was briefly described as a clean copy in good condition. But of the bookplate the notice said: 'Tactical bookplate inside first cover. No owner's name. Undated.' And I saw he was very much interested in the whole description, so I said, in perfect innocence then, I ought to mention: 'You know I'm going to be in Washington anyway for the studio on Wednesday—' I was talking down some designs for a church window there—'and I can easily go over to Richmond, and buy that book for you, on Thursday, if you want it.' To my utter surprise, he was much startled; for a second he seemed suspicious and angry; then I saw him glance at Charles—"

"Oh, your cousin was present, was he?" put in Mr. Almy.
"Yes, we were all in this room. Charles was studying at the other end of it. And then my grandfather suddenly changed his attitude and said, very pleasantly, that he was much obliged to me, but I had better simply attend to my employer's business, he thought; anyhow, he didn't know how suitable it would be for me to go and bid alone at a public auction in a southern city. But he admitted, frankly, that the sale did interest him; and turning to Charles, he asked him if he could arrange to go for him, as he had done, by the way, on a number of other occasions when my grandfather couldn't leave home."

"What obligation are you under to him?"
"He has often treated me with consideration; not too many people have," returned Julia, with dignity.
Mr. Almy looked at her hard and shrewdly. Suddenly he shot out: "What did he go to Darrow's to get for you on Thursday night?"
Her eyes dilated with surprise and horror. She shuddered, and gasped: "For me? For me? Well, if he wants to tell you, let him! There are some things I can't do!"

Her lips snapped shut just as they had done the previous evening in that very room, when, after all the abuse she had received at the hands of her cousin, when it was utterly useless to try to withstand the search for him, she would do nothing to betray him. Her loyalty was again making

What Doctors Think of the Laxative Habit

In all history, no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. Today, we have the candy Cascaret.

Cascaring the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional Cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer knows of none.

An evacuation brought gently about by cascara will, nine times in ten, be followed by full functioning of the bowels on the morrow—and for days after. For there is no REACTION as with sickening salts, or any of the man made purgatives that go through one's system like a bullet.

Physicians tell us cascara is the ideal laxative—and the tongue tells us candy Cascarets are its ideal form. At least a million people know this; what a pity there are any who don't! Especially parents; because children love to take a Cascaret. After which, for days-on-end, the bowels will be seen to work of their own accord.

The only habit from cascara is that of regularity! Cascarets tone and train the bowels. But at the first sign of returning sluggishness another Cascaret is as effective as the first.

There isn't a druggist who hasn't Cascarets, so WHY experiment with laxatives?

Large, Generous Sample of Old Time Remedy Sent Free to Every Reader of This Article

More than forty years ago, in a small way, good old Pastor Koenig began the manufacture of Pastor Koenig's Nervine, a remedy recommended for the relief of nervousness, epilepsy, sleeplessness and kindred ailments. The remedy was made after the formula of old German doctors. The sales were small at first, but soon increased, and another factory was added to meet the increasing demand. Today there are Koenig factories in the old world, and Pastor Koenig's Nervine is not only sold throughout the United States but in every land and clime.

The manufacturers want every reader of this free offer to try the old remedy at their expense. They will send a large, generous sample to every one who mentions this article.

Try it and be convinced. It will only cost you a postal to write for the large, generous sample.

Announcing -

The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History - a Six in the price range of the four!

The Chevrolet Motor Company announces The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History... a Six in the price range of the four!

Spectacular as Chevrolet's achievements have been in the past... notable as its engineering triumphs have proved themselves to be—this remarkable new car dwarfs every previous Chevrolet accomplishment. Not only does it introduce into the low-priced field a new measure of performance, comfort, beauty and style—but it is sold at prices so low as to alter every previous conception of motor car value.

The new six-cylinder valve-in-head engine—developed from more than a hundred motors designed especially for this sensational car—stands out as an engineering masterpiece. With a power increase of approximately 32% over the previous Chevrolet motor... with sensationally greater speed and faster acceleration—it offers a type of performance that is literally astounding... even to those who have been accustomed to driving cars costing hundreds of dollars more. And it affords an economy averaging better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline!

In appearance, this Outstanding Chevrolet is destined to become an automotive sensation—so smart, so stylish and so distinctively appointed that it rivals the costliest custom creations. The marvelous new Fisher bodies are longer, lower and roomier with adjustable driver's seat in all closed models—and reveal the matchless artistry of Fisher designers. With their modish new colors, their smart dual mouldings and their distinctive concave pillars, they achieve a degree of original beauty that has seldom been equalled.

You are cordially invited to visit our showroom and secure complete and detailed information on this sensational new car which will be ready for delivery beginning January 1st.

SANDERSON ROTARY CLUB TO ENTERTAIN

At eight o'clock Saturday evening, December the eighth, nineteen hundred and twenty-eight, the Sanderson Rotary Club will entertain Rotary-An's, school faculty and trustees with a banquet at the Kerr hotel.

It was the voice of the committee that Jesse act as toastmaster with the assurance that there shall be no "lengthy speeches,"—however that does not mean that any member of the club or guest may be called upon to sing, dance, or in short do anything at the command of the toastmaster.

The banquet will be followed with a short, spicy, and "peppy" programme, after which there will be dancing for those who care to participate.

Snake's Bite Deadly

The mamba is much more poisonous than the rattlesnake. It inhabits jungles and swamps in South America although it is found elsewhere. A long, thin snake which coils itself about branches of trees it darts at the unwary passerby like a flash. Its bite is so poisonous that death quickly follows.

Unfounded Belief

Experiments made by scientists to determine whether there is any foundation for the popular belief that a rattlesnake will not crawl over a hair rope show that such a belief has no foundation in fact.

School Lunchroom Has Been Installed and Is Now Serving Lunches Daily

One of the most recent additions to our school has been the lunchroom which has been installed in the foods laboratory. The lunchroom has been equipped with the help of the Parent-Teachers Association who donated funds for purchasing tables and dishes.

Miss Cox, teacher of home economics, is supervisor of the lunchroom. Under her direction delicious and wholesome meals are served daily. The meals are inexpensive enough to be accessible to all the students, and the arrangement is proving very satisfactory, especially for the Dryden students, since it eliminates the necessity of their having to eat a cold lunch or take their lunch down town.

Meals are prepared by high school students, who work during their off periods. The lunch is also served by these students and the room put in order by them after the meal. These students are paid by the hour for their services.

An average of thirty persons or more are eating their lunch at the lunchroom each day. However, while the patronage is good, little or no profit is being made from the enterprise. The object of the project is not to make money, but it is to accommodate the students.

Eighth Grade English Class Finishes Attractive Booklets

The eighth grade English class has recently completed a very attractive set of booklets on Poems Children Like. Included within the booklet are poems most commonly read by children taken from such authors as James Whitcomb Riley, Eugene Field, and Robert Louis Stevenson. Attractive illustrations have been supplied for the poems by children. The booklets will be on exhibit, together with other work done by the class, in the high school building on the first Friday in December.

Unemployed Teachers and College Students, Why Don't You Enter Business?

There is a wonderful opportunity in business for the unemployed teacher or the college student who by force of circumstances had to drop out of college. Because of your unusual literary qualifications, business concerns prefer you. You make better trained office employees. No matter what your circumstances are, you should have a business training; no matter what your circumstances are, you CAN have a business training.

We have a novel yet simple plan that is helping hundreds of young people through our school—a plan that enables them to pay the greater portion of their expenses after they are placed on a business man's payroll.

No need to wait till after Christmas to begin because any one who desires may visit home at least ten days during the Christmas Holidays. So, if you enter now, you will be just two months ahead of the fellow who waits until after Christmas to start.

You will be surprised at what we can do for you for just a few dollars and a few months of your time.

To learn of our plan, clip the coupon and mail it for our catalog, "Achieving Success in Business." No obligations on your part if you don't enter school.

CHRISTMAS SEALS NOW ON SALE.

Over 530 miles of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals have been distributed by the Texas Public Health Association for the annual sale which starts tomorrow. The seals this year show an ancient galeon with a red double barred cross on the main sail and the words, Christmas Greetings 1928.

The proceeds from the sale of these seals finance the work of the Texas Public Health Association and their 23 local affiliated associations.

Over 100 volunteer chairmen have been secured to sell seals in their localities and in counties where no organization occurs. The public is offered an opportunity to secure seals by mail.

Last year the State Association reached over 100,000 persons in their State-wide educational campaign. A great deal of attention is being paid to health work in schools, consisting of health educational work and the examining of pupils by registered, public health nurses. Tuberculosis clinics have been held in several counties. Special effort has been made to reach all races.

In 1929 it is expected that a continuation of the present program will be carried on, increasing the clinic work wherever possible. Dr. Z. T. Scott, executive secretary, stated that the deaths from tuberculosis had been reduced over 50 per cent since the first campaign against tuberculosis and that we are now on the last half of the fight and the efforts must be continued. He also stated that tuberculosis was still the major cause of death in the age group—15 to 25—and that special work must be done with this group.

We have a good supply of Nema Worm Capsules now on hand at standard prices. Sanderson Drug Co.

The new Ford has a very simple and effective lubrication system

THE lubrication system for the engine of the new Ford is as simple in principle as water running down-hill.

A gear pump in the bottom of the oil pan raises the oil to the valve chamber reservoir. From here it flows on to the main crankshaft bearings and the front camshaft bearing. Overflow oil drops into the oil pan tray and runs into troughs through which the connecting rods pass.

As the ends of these rods strike the oil they scoop up a supply for the connecting rod bearing. At the same time they set up a fine spray that lubricates the pistons and other moving parts.

From the tray the oil runs into the bottom of the pan, and is again drawn up through a fine mesh screen and pumped to the valve chamber.

This system is so effective that the five-quart contents of the oil pan pass through the pump twice in every mile when you are traveling at only 30 miles an hour. Yet there is only one movable part—the oil pump.

As a matter of fact, the lubrication system for the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires practically no service attention.

There is just one thing for you to do, but it is a very important thing... watch the oil! Change the oil every 500 miles and be sure the indicator rod never registers below low (L).

If the oil level is allowed to fall below low, the supply becomes insufficient to oil all parts as they should be oiled.

To insure best performance it is also advisable to have the chassis of your car lubricated every 500 miles. This has been made easy in the new Ford through the use of the high pressure grease gun system.

Proper oiling and greasing mean so much to the life of your car that they should not be neglected or carelessly done.

See your Ford dealer regularly. He is especially well-fitted to lubricate the new Ford and he will do a good, thorough job at a fair price.

College Men Under Obligation to Preserve and Disseminate the Truth

By DOCTOR ANGELL, President Yale University.

THE college man who fails to dedicate himself first to the preservation and dissemination of knowledge and truth and the discovery of new truth wherever it may be found is false to the trust reposed in him by his forebears who founded the institution, to the contemporary society which maintains it, and to the company of scholars who conduct it. To abstain from such dedication argues lamentable ignorance of what is involved, sheer moral perversity, or hopeless incapacity to appreciate and take advantage of great opportunity.

There are few pleasures so disinterested, few so stimulating, so intrinsically delightful and refreshing, few so permanently rewarding as those which come from the intellectual entry upon wholly new, appealing and significant fields of knowledge or upon unfamiliar and moving beauties in literature or in art. To miss this kind of experience, by failure to improve the opportunities college offers, is altogether tragic, and especially if it means that one has not made effective contact with the great teachers who can kindle the flames of intellectual enthusiasm and appreciation.

To sit at the feet of great scholars is one of the privileges of which the college man should be most jealous, following him who can lead revealingly into the mysteries of history and literature, of science and art, of philosophy and religion. To forego such opportunities, because one is absorbed in some trivial, extraneous activity, is simply to sell one's birthright for a mess of pottage. Here lies the great and unequalled treasure of the college. To miss it is to sin against the enlightenment of one's own spirit, to be in the presence of wisdom only to pass it by. Folly is too mild a term for such ineptitude.

Great Need of Farmer Is Provision for Stable Weekly or Monthly Income

By S. J. HIGH, Tupelo (Miss.) Banker.

Nearly all of the industries have adjusted themselves to the many changes of the last ten years except agriculture. Most of the farmers are still farming as their grandfathers did.

The old-style farmer buys on long credits and long profits, in contrast with modern forms of credit cash buying.

The farmer has seen his expenses increase year by year on account of giving his family the luxuries and comforts that others have, and he has staked his whole future on what is called the money crop. He mortgages his land, his crop and his live stock for farm and family expenses not knowing what the harvest or price will be.

Such farming is hazardous and harassing for the farmer and unsafe from a credit standpoint for the banker and merchant. The farmer needs something that will give him a weekly or monthly income.

Large crops are not the solution of the farmer's problem, because large crops usually lower the price. Diversified crops and live stock are his need.

One of the greatest needs of profitable farming is farm efficiency. As it is with business, so it will be with farming in the future—efficiency and low cost of production. The farmer can get his low cost of production by following a safe and sane plan of farming. In most, if not practically all sections of the United States, the following will be a safe plan:

Pigs, poultry and dairy cows on every farm; raising food and feed; selling milk or cream, chickens and eggs, and raising more and better (cash) crops on less acres.

Laws Should Set Maximum Profits to Be Retained by Merchants

By DONALD E. MONTGOMERY, Madison, Wis.

To alleviate unemployment businesses should stabilize competition by trade associations. I would have laws set the maximum profits to be retained by business men, amounts exceeding the legal maximum to revert to the state to reduce tax bills.

Although stabilization of competition by agreements among competing business organizations would not reduce competition, the trade associations would eliminate waste, mitigate the hazards and uncertainty of business collapse and unemployment. These trade associations must be able to show the courts that their restraints merely regulate and thereby promote competition rather than suppress or even destroy it.

If business delays too long in taking the initiative, persuasive legislation may be necessary. Such legislation should go directly to the source of the trouble and penalize the business men who insist upon treating the market as a circus in which they can acrobat themselves to a sudden fortune, to the detriment of those business men who plan for years ahead and are trying to make a profit every year and to offer full employment every year.

As long as unemployment is among the leading products of our national system, there is something wrong. When clothing workers go threadbare because they have produced too many suits of clothes; when families of miners are cold in winter because they have mined too much coal; when the unskilled worker in the city goes hungry while the farmer—perhaps only 20 miles away—is losing money because he produced too much food, something is wrong.

More Human Understanding Called For in the Dispensing of Justice

By JUSTICE SELAH B. STRONG, New York Supreme Court.

The abolition of ironclad legal procedure and the introduction of a greater degree of human understanding in the dispensing of justice are prime requisites of legal procedure. Justice should not be bound by hoary rules. The law of evidence often becomes a joke, for example. A judge feels like saying to the jurors, "Now, listen, pals. Here's the case in a nutshell. Let's settle it in such a way that the greatest good will fall to the greatest number."

One of the silliest things in law is the charge of conspiracy. Why should a man receive a greater penalty for conspiring to commit a crime than for its actual perpetration? Or why should a man be punished on both counts of conspiring to and committing a crime?

I have in mind an example of a case I heard recently concerning the right of a builder to construct a garage next to a church, which made me hope for greater judicial freedom.

The law prohibits the construction of a garage next to a school, but it has failed to provide for churches. I felt like telling the jury that a garage should not be built beside a church any more than beside a school, but the law forbids me to do so.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BOY OF THE NORTH

"Oh," said one of the reindeer, "won't it be glorious when we start our trip all over the world?"

"We will go over roofs and Santa will stop and go down the chimneys, or he will go down the fire escapes."

"You know in many of the city homes they don't have fireplaces," the reindeer explained to Boy of the North.

"Of course Santa Claus would not let children go without their Christmas simply because they had to make lots of city homes without fireplaces."

"Of course not," said Boy of the North.

"Of course not," said the other reindeer.

"We'll be starting before long," said the first reindeer, "but not any too soon for me."

"We'll hear Santa Claus as he comes back up the chimney and he will chuckle and laugh."

"He will tell us that some of the children heard us as we pranced over the roofs."

"Yes, and that he has to be very, very quiet so no one will awaken and see him."

"He doesn't mind if we make a noise on the roof with our hoofs, as he says children like to hear the sounds of Christmas morning on the way!

"Come and Hear of This Child."

"Oh, I feel like going on the journey this very minute."

"That's just it," said the second reindeer, "we all get so excited about it beforehand that when the time comes we can hurry as we do."

"Now, how-wow," said Boy of the North, "I mustn't forget to ask you to be sure to tell me all the news."

"I want to hear about the children who heard you, and how Santa Claus said they looked when they were asleep."

"I shall want to hear every scrap of Christmas news."

"I look forward to seeing Santa Claus come back, tired and happy, his cheeks as red as ever from his drive with you, Reindeer, and then I have my Christmas story."

"Santa Claus sits down in his great big chair, his shop empty of toys for almost a year, and he calls me over to him."

"Come, Boy of the North," he says, "come and hear of this child."

"Oh, she was lovely. She looked so happy and so sweetly as she slept and she was dreaming of my beautiful reindeer."

The reindeer all smiled when Boy of the North said this.

"Yes," continued Boy of the North, "and he will tell me about the houses he visited, of the trees and stockings, of the candy canes and the candy animals."

"He will bring back some candy canes to me, and he will stroke my ears and pet my head, and he will say, as he does every day after Christmas Eve:

"Boy of the North, my fine dog, it was a glorious, glorious Christmas and now I'm going to look through my magic and wonderful telescope to see the children as they smile over their presents."

"And I will be given a look too."

"Oh, yes," ended Boy of the North, "I am getting impatient, too."

An Odd Nesting Place

There is a pigeon in New York that has evidently very strong leanings towards a sea-faring life.

When the Cunard liner Aquitania was leaving dock it was discovered that this pigeon had built a nest on one of the bow anchors of the liner.

Nothing daunted by the watery prospects before her, this little pigeon laid an egg in her precarious nest and gallantly protected it across the Atlantic.

The tragedy occurred when the ship reached Cherbourg harbor, and the anchor was dropped—when the little home descended into the sea, leaving behind a sadder, but wiser pigeon.

Easily Pleased

Virginia, aged three, went to the home of her little friend, Susanne. Upon being met at the door by Susanne's mother, she said, "I came to play with Susanne."

When informed that her playmate was not at home, she replied, "Well I came to play with myself, then."

As He Saw It

"Is the clock running, Willie?" "No, ma'am; it's just standing still and wagging its tail."

How to Get Rid of a Severe Cold

"Last August I took a very severe cold and it seemed that I couldn't break it up. I got so bad that I was confined to my bed for five weeks, doctoring all the time without getting any relief. I had no appetite, naturally lost flesh. In fact, I had given up all hopes of ever getting any better."

"A friend recommended Milks Emulsion and I commenced its use. When able to leave my bed I weighed 111 pounds. Now, after taking Milks Emulsion five weeks, I weigh 125 pounds, feel better than I have felt in two years, can eat anything, have no effects of the cold and work every day. I thank God and Milks Emulsion for restoring my health."

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of medicine for 47 years, and believed that the matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation occurs from time to time. Of importance, then, is how to treat it as it comes. Dr. Caldwell always favors of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound, that not harm the system and is not purgative. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of the use of medicine for the purpose of getting rid of "any good" in any body. In a practice of 47 years he has never seen any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as well.

Do not let a day go by without a movement. Do not sit after meals, go to the nearest druggist and get the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for trial bottle.

HUSBAND DISTRIBUTES BOOKLETS

Wife Tries Compound

Every year the Pinkham Medicine Company distributes about 30,000,000 booklets from house to house. Mr. Ted Hinzman does this work in Lodi, California. His wife writes: "It was in these little books that I read about so many women being helped by the medicine. I thought I would give it a trial. I can truly say that it has done good. My neighbors and friends know what I am doing to make me so much better. I tell them that I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

The Presbyterian Church. "What's In a Name?" will be Sunday morning's sermon topic. The famous Shakespeare, in one of his great poems, raises the question, "What's in a name? That which we call a rose, by any other name would smell as sweet." Solomon also had something very important to say about the value of a name. This sermon will deal with his statement. The service begins at 11 a. m.

The Sunday school meets at 10 o'clock. There will be no evening service next Sunday. We expect to worship with the Methodist Church at their evening service. J. A. McMILLAN, Minister.

Looking Ahead

Now that vacation days are ended, children have returned to school and the lure of the great outdoors gives way to a dinner conversation of "What's at the movies tonight?" Good will and patronage have been generously extended to us in the months gone by and we hope to merit a continuance of these cordial relations to an even greater extent in the future.

With this in mind we announce hereafter a new

Princess Theatre P-O-L-I-C-Y

We greet the new season with a frank statement of our plans and intentions.

Experience has taught us that there is no such word as "GREAT" in the theatre. Entertainment that pleases many leaves others dissatisfied for tastes differ.

And so we present herewith free from all fancy phraseology, minus all superlatives, just what the

has in store for the season that will begin December 1st.

- Four big photoplays of outstanding merit and recognized reputation will be shown each week.
- Change of programmes in the future will be Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays.

Every day will be "hooked" with your happiness in mind. YOU are the one who must be satisfied at all cost, and to this end International News and the new "COLLEGIAN" series, selected comedies, screen novelties, scenes, and travel-features will be carefully and judiciously selected.

Lack of space prevents a full outline, but here you will find a few of the

Pictures to be Shown AT THE Princess Theatre

- Uncle Toms Cabin, Show People,
- The Man Who Laughs, Our Dancing Daughters,
- The Last Warning, The Patroit,
- Cohen's & Kelley's at Atlantic City, Wings,
- The Girl on the Barge, The Wedding March,
- Showboat, We Americans,
- Lonesome, Love Me and the World is Mine.
