AS IT LOOKS TO ME

By Jack Ainlie

The Heroes of Peace.
 Unusually heroism is regarded as something that has to do with battles and combats and things—a thing of brawn and strength. Only those who have distinguished themselves in the exploit calling for physical prowess have much chance of being acclaimed as heroes. The heroism of the physical kind is fine and inspiring thing—an admirable quality which spontaneously calls forth our cheers and our plaudits. Whether in the form of a hero who braves the respect while cowardice wins the sneers and contempt. But physical heroism is not all heroism. There is another kind of heroism that abounds in our lives. It is that quiet, unassuming, unostentatious heroism that prevails in the hearts of those who "carry on" amidst the ordinary experiences of life. Regardless of where we may be, whether it be in the exclusive environment of the well-to-do or among the toiling masses of the workaday classes, we are men and women who are quietly battling moral and physical enemies with a sense and determination never surpassed and not often equalled upon the world's greatest battlefields. These heroes and heroines of our day after day struggle against various physical handicaps, disadvantages, disappointments and diseases never hear acclaim of the multitude nor their names upon the roster of the great. But their courage is high, their hearts as brave, and their spirits as unconquerable as that of the most intrepid of history. As it looks to me, we ought to honor the heroes of peace no less as we do the heroes of war.

The following out of town relatives were here Tuesday to attend the funeral of little Herbert Frazier:
 Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mansfield and children; Mr. and Mrs. Noah and children, all of Uvalde; J. H. Lemons, Marathon; V. Lemons, Tucson, Arizona; and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Frazier and children of Texon.

Mr. and Mrs. Doc Turk visited friends and relatives in Uvalde this week. From there they will go to San Antonio where Doc will be under the care of a physician for some time.

Miss Helen Watson of this city, Miss Hazel Ward of Uvalde and Eric Patterson of Alpine, and Ervin Grigsby made up a party that motored to Carlsbad Friday, where they enjoyed a trip through the caves on the following day.

SURPRISE SHOWER

On last Friday afternoon the home of Mrs. O. H. McAdams was the scene of a delightfully novel entertainment in the form of a surprise shower for the recently married Mrs. Richard Turner. In a room tastefully decorated with cut flowers of dahlia and zinnias, the affair was carried off in a most original manner. The cleverly arranged plot of the party centered on a little play enacted by the guests. A short farce which ended in a bestowal of the gifts on the astonished bride. The scene of the play was a small mining village in which the wealthy class of people were encountering much difficulty getting laundry work done. Mrs. McAdams as the social leader of the village was entertaining one afternoon when two Chinese servants entered with a large basket of laundry brought by Bess McAdams and Katherine Erwin. The opening of the basket, which contained many lovely presents for the honor guest, brought Mrs. McAdams' party to its surprising climax. Those present were: Mesdames D. A. Pollard, Annie Ware, W. L. Erwin, C. V. McKnight, E. P. Halley, W. H. Savage, W. J. Ferguson, Ed Downie, Fred Yeates, W. M. Druse, H. R. Laurence, S. S. Daggett, John Green, O. E. Schuppach, J. W. Savage, Joe Nance, Richard Turner, H. D. Johnson, Cap Mussey, C. L. Surratt, Harry Sharp, J. R. Black, Misses Marjorie Erwin, Estelle Harrison, Lillie Strange, and Sidney Laurence. Lovely refreshments of angle food cake and ice cream was served.

INFANT DIES

Herbert Marion Frazier, the five-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tip Frazier, died Monday afternoon following a short illness. The little one, while here only a short while, had endeared itself to those who came in contact with it. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning from the residence of Mrs. Luella Lemons, Rev. J. A. McMillan of the Presbyterian church preaching the service. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

TERRELL COUNTY OIL NEWS.

Ryan & Breen's well on section 10, block 176, reported getting tools and machinery in shape to resume drilling operations.

Wooley & Jones' Packerham No. 1 well on section 43 in block B2, reported shutdown at 715 feet in sandy shale, waiting for casing.

Big Bend Oil Corporation's No. 1 well on section 155 in block D, drilling at 530 feet in shells, marl and gravel. The present indications are that this well is drilling in an old river bed. The drillers on this well are very optimistic about bringing in a good oil producer.

Milham Corporation's Bassett No. 1 well, reported drilling on section 76 in block Y, at depth of 5,340 feet in puffy shale. It is reported that some oil has been bailed from the well.

Jessie McPhee's Sam Bell No. 1, reported running casing at the depth of 710 feet.

Keck Pecos Trust's Hamilton No. 1, drilling at depth of 2530 feet. Drillers feel confident of bringing in a good producer.

J. W. Carruthers and Ben H. Brown report they have contracted to lease 12 sections for oil and gas development on the Sanderson anticline, a few miles south and east of Sanderson.

It is reported that Stansell Brothers and Jones & Stansell are about to consummate leases on the balance of their holdings south of the Sanderson anticline. Their holdings are in all probability on what most geologists term as being on a rocky mountain uplift, and in a locality that will likely produce oil and gas in commercial quantities. Quite a few geologists have recently been doing detail and reconnaissance work in this district.

Jim Smith of Tulsa, Okla., was here a few days inspecting his holdings in block D-11, T. C. Railway Co., survey, just across the Terrell county line in Brewster county. Smith was favorably impressed with his holdings.

J. Calvin Stansell of this city has been endeavoring to induce Joe Kerr of this city to do a little development work along a fault line on the Kerr ranch about 3 miles southwest of the town of Dryden, in order to test a portion of the subsurface, as the rocks in the vicinity of the fault seem to be somewhat similar to the rocks in Val Verde county where asphalt is found.

To All Those Interested in Our Public Schools

On the 10th day of August, the citizenship of Terrell county will be called upon to vote a maintenance tax for the support of the public schools. At the time the entire county was put into one school district, the old tax was automatically stopped. It is necessary for a new tax to be levied in order that the school may have funds for this school year. This tax is of vital importance; therefore, as citizens interested in the welfare of the children of Terrell county, come to the polls and prove your interest by casting your vote for the school tax.

We also invite you to share with us the pleasure of taking part in the classes of the religious training school—the Sunday school—meeting at 10 a. m.

The evening service is cancelled owing to the evangelistic services being held at the Methodist church, in which this church joins for the evening worship.

The TREASURE of the BUCOLEON

SYNOPSIS
In New York, Hugh Chesby, English World War veteran, relates a story of a treasure in Constantinople in the existence of which his uncle, Lord Chesby, firmly believes. A cablegram notifies Hugh of his uncle's sailing for New York. At the dock Hugh and his chum, Jack Nash, learn that the old gentleman has left with a stranger, purporting to be a friend of Hugh. A mysterious telephone message notifies Hugh that his uncle is in a hospital, dying, victim of an assassin. Before his death he babble of the treasure, and tells them he was stabbed by "Toutou." With Lord Chesby's body, Hugh and Jack sail for England. In London Hugh and Jack meet their war buddy, Nikka Zarenko, famous gypsy violinist, and pore over some old documents seemingly having a bearing on the treasure and its location. A hidden room, referred to as the "Prior's Vault," is frequently mentioned. Monty Hilyar, man of shady reputation, but owner of a neighboring estate, calls on Hugh with a party of friends, mostly foreigners. Conversation turns on the "Prior's Vault." Jack and his friends and the hidden room, and in it documents relating that the treasure is located in the palace of the Bucoleon in Constantinople. Jack Nash's cousin, Betty King, with her fiancée, is in Constantinople, and Hugh, Nikka, Jack, and Watkins set out for the Turkish capital. The party splits, Hugh and Watkins proceeding to Constantinople by sea and Nikka and Jack by land. Nikka persuades his uncle, Wasso Mikail, gypsy chief, to accompany them.

I could not help laughing at my reflection in the mirror. I felt uncomfortable, as though I had dressed for a fancy-dress ball, and overdone the part. But there was none of this effect in Nikka's getup. With the donning of his gypsy costume he discarded his last visible link with the West. He looked the gypsy, the oriental, a king-like vagabond.

"You belong," I said. "But I feel like an impostor."

"You'll grow used to it," he answered, folding in the ends of his sash. "Did they give you a knife?" I exhibited the horn-handled, eight-inch blade, with its sheath hooked to a leather belt that encircled my waist beneath the sash. "Good! Got your automatic and spare clips?"

"And these clothes?"

I pointed to the civilized garments we had discarded.

"Kostabidjan will send them on to Constantinople in a few days," he sighed. "Personally, Jack, I don't care if I never wear them again. I can earn a thousand dollars an hour with my fiddle, but what's it worth compared with this? Rawhide or your feet that flexes with your soles, glistening that covers you, but doesn't blind; and the open road ahead! Civilization is a fraud, Jack. I was a fool to ever quit the gypsy life."

"Well, you're back in it again," I replied, "and perhaps you'll be seeing you were a fool to return to it. I know I feel like a fool. Let's go."

It was still dark when we left the house. Kostabidjan and his servant were waiting in the courtyard. They had saddled two horses, and a mule was loaded with bulky packs, food, and blankets, tarpaulins and several cooking utensils.

"Heldi, Jakkai!" called Wasso Mikail.

"Mount, Jack," added Nikka. "The other horse is for you. We must hasten. My uncle does not like to be seen entering or leaving the town."

We rode out in single file, Wasso Mikail, then Nikka, then myself, last a young Tzigane, leading the pack mule. The gypsies set a pace that made the horses trot to keep up with them, a slack-kneed stamper, ungainly in appearance, but tremendously effective. During the early part of the day we passed frequent villages, melancholy collections of hovels that had been scorched by the awful visitation of wars the Balkans had known for a decade. When night came we made camp in a lonely ravine with the stars for roof.

The next day it was practically the same. The trail we followed was a mere trace that sometimes disappeared.

As we progressed that day the mountains became wilder and more barren. In the early afternoon, I saw what I took to be a castle perched atop of a huge crag miles away across a tumbled plain of hills. But Nikka explained that it was one of those fortified monasteries which kept the fires of learning alight during the gloomy centuries when the Turk's rule ran as far as the Danube.

The path we followed was eccentric in the extreme. In fact, there was no path. We climbed a succession of cobbles of the court, squatted in every gallery or leaned over the railings shouting to each other. Women sat on balconies and nursed their infants. Children ran about with the usual alacrity of children to escape sudden death in dangerous places. It sounded like a boiler factory and an insane asylum holding a jubilee convention.

But Wasso Mikail and his young men pushed through the confusion with the same bored air I would have worn in bucking the subway rush at Grand Central. They appropriated a corner of a stable, and put up the horses, uncinched the packs and climbed a flight of stone stairs to the second floor, where the old gypsy rented two cubicles, each lighted by a grated window two feet square and containing nothing except some foul straw.

Such food as we did not have with us we bought from a general store conducted in an angle of the courtyard, and the cooking was done over a brazier. When night fell, and the cooking fires blazed out all over the courtyard and in the galleries it was a sight worth coming to Constantinople to see. There was an acrid reek of dung in the air, the sweaty smell of human bodies, the pungent aroma of the charcoal, and an endless babble of voices in a score of tongues and dialects.

We were astir early in the morning, and before eight o'clock Wasso Mikail, Nikka and I left the khan—Wasso having given strict injunction to else within twenty feet of our groups at the moment. "Jack speaking, Hugh. You and Watty follow us. Go around the block the other way from us. We'll pick you up."

Hugh and Watkins watched us disappear, then said good-by to King, and walked down the street. They were rounding the corner of the further side of the block as we entered it, and when we made sure they had seen us, we turned into a cross street that led between buildings toward Galata and the Golden Horn.

When we dodged into the gateway of the Khan of the Georgians, Hugh was bursting to talk, but Nikka motioned him to be silent. The appearance of two Europeans like himself and Watkins was bound to attract some attention, and we rustled them up the steep stairs to the second gallery, and Wasso Mikail opened the door of our cubicle and stood aside until Watkins had entered. Then he came in, himself, and locked it and squatted down with his back against it.

Nikka introduced his uncle, and Wasso Mikail met Hugh with the unadorned courtesy that made it so difficult to remember that he knew nothing of what we call manners or the gentler aspects of life.

"Is Toutou here?" Nikka asked Hugh.

"I think not. So far as we have observed, none of the headliners has appeared on the scene, but the underlings are very efficient. Vernon King and I have been over the ground rather thoroughly. He's been a process-hunter on our side. She has a motor-launch her father chartered so they could run up and down the coast on his archeological trips, and we used that to mark down the house where we think the treasure is located."

"Have you really got a line on the site of the Bucoleon?" asked Nikka.

"Yes," said Hugh. "Matter of fact, that was comparatively easy, thanks to Vernon King. You see, he knows his Constantinople of old; and after consulting with some other learned Johannes out at Robert college and several ancient Greeks of the Syllagos, the historical society, you know, he was able to point out quite accurately the general site of the great palace. When we had gone so far, it became a case of picking out the building within that area that held our prize. There isn't any doubt about it. It's in what they call Sokaki Masyeri, a mean little street in a mean quarter that skirts the old seawalls beyond the railroad tracks."

"This house is built right on the walls. It has a kind of battered magnificence, elaborately carved cornices and window-moldings, and it rambles over a good bit of ground, including a fair-sized courtyard, just as you would expect of the wreck of an old palace. There can't be any mistake. Why, the bird who lives in this house is the king of the Stamboul gypsies, the chief mad man of Constantinople. He has a whole flock of cut-throats at his beck and call. Ask anybody here about Bernan Tokalji—"

Wasso Mikail leaped to his feet at sound of that name and strode over to us, his hand on his knife.

"What's the row?" inquired Hugh as the old gypsy and Nikka engaged in a brisk exchange of ill-natured phrases.

"Our friend has this person Tokalji's number," I explained. "He told us about him. He had heard about the treasures and the house."

"Then we must be right," cried Hugh.

"You're right enough," agreed Nikka, while Wasso Mikail returned to his place by the door and rolled a cigarette. "It seems, also, that this Tokalji is a particular enemy of my uncle. He was suggesting a little exterminating expedition."

"We've got six of Nikka's cousins in the next room, first-class knife-handlers, every one of them," I put in. "With Wasso Mikail and us, that makes eleven."

"And Vernon King is twelve," added Hugh. "He wants to be in on the whole business. It appeals to his archeological bump, as well as to his sporting tastes. But we can't have a rough house yet. We don't know the ground well enough. The next step is to get inside that house, by stealth, if possible, by force, if every other means fails."

Cake Has Long Held Place in Big Events

From birth to death man has made a cake the symbol of the great events of his human existence, although, neither the cake which signified the christening nor the cake that was eaten at the funeral could be partaken of by the one supposed to be thus honored, says Helen Buckler, in the New York Herald Tribune Magazine.

In olden times guests at obsequies in Yorkshire were served light, sweetened cakes, washed down with hot speedie ale poured from a tankard in whose handle was stuck a piece of lemon peel, bespeaking the bitterness of death.

Or if the family were wealthy enough, wine replaced the ale, and savory biscuits were given out to be carried home wrapped in paper on which were printed coffins, skulls and crossbones, hour glasses or spades, insignia of mortality, and sealed with black wax.

Modern Things Not New
Many things believed to be modern are not so new, declares a European prober who has just made a report. He declares that the pneumatic tire was invented as early as 1845, but apparently was unwanted as being ahead of its time; the fountain pen was patented in 1806, but found little acceptance, and roller skates prevented their use. The roll-top desk was described in 1772; safety razors in 1762; a loud speaker in 1671; a diving bell in 1694, a periscope in 1702, while the Chinese claim that a bamboo arrangement served as a phonograph many years ago.

Women's Eyes.
"Woman's black eye wins divorce decree," says a court note. And many a blue eye has exercised an equal potency, and some brown ones also.

Causes of Storms.
Electrical storms are generated by sudden or sharp changes in atmospheric temperature. Since the upper atmosphere is always cold, such changes are much less frequent in winter, when the temperature near the earth is also low. Hence, thunder and lightning are much more frequent in summer than in winter.

Student Earnings

The bureau of education has recently made a survey with regard to the amount of money earned by students. In 703 colleges 94 per cent of the students were earning part or all of their expenses. In 315 co-educational schools, 134,716 men earned $23,000,000 or $159 each. The women earned only one-fifth of this amount, but then there were only one-fifth as many employed, so the average was about the same.

Silent

Gypsy Smith, the evangelist, never used a knife nor a fork until he was seventeen years old and, according to his own story, spent his youth peddling clothes pegs and singing in parlors to the accompaniment of his father's fiddle. Gypsy preached his first sermon to his father's turnip field and later in life frequently referred to the turnips as the most attentive audience he ever had.

SARGON TURNS TABLES AFTER 15 LONG YEARS

"Sargon turned the tables for me after I had tried for 15 years to get well of stomach trouble. Now I am gaining every day. I went from 119 to 130 pounds, a gain of 11 pounds in three weeks on just three bottles. That's pretty good for a man 62 years old."

"I suffered day and night for almost 15 years and spent many hard earned dollars for medicines, but none of them reached my case until I got Sargon. I felt weak and sick from morning until night. I would just drag myself around but now I feel years younger and can keep going all day. I eat anything I want and have no trace of stomach trouble, headaches or dizzy spells any more."

The Sargon Soft Mass Pills straightened out my liver and I no longer suffer from biliousness and constipation. It sure is great to be feeling like my old self again and I will always praise the Sargon treatment. There never was any medicine equal to it."

THOSE SIX-YEAR MOLARS

E. K. Halbert, D. D. S.

If any one thing is more important than another in the care of the child's mouth it is the pre-eruptive care and maintenance of its first permanent molars or six-year molars.

The first permanent molars are called the six-year molars because they usually erupt when the child is about six years of age. These molars take their places in the arches directly behind the baby molars, before any of the baby teeth have been lost; and they closely resemble the baby molars. For this reason they are commonly mistaken for baby teeth.

Normally, all children have 10 deciduous teeth in the upper arch and 10 in the lower arch, making a total of 20 baby teeth. When the mother can look in the child's mouth and count more than 10 teeth in either arch, she may be assured that all above this number are permanent teeth. Normally, at about the sixth year they will consist of the following teeth on either side, in order from the median line in front to the back of the arches:

- 1 deciduous central incisor
- 1 " lateral "
- 1 " cuspid "
- 1 " first molar "
- 1 " second "
- 1 permanent first molar.

You will note there are no bicuspids in the first dentition. The bicuspids come in later by replacing the first and second baby molars.

All parents should know the importance of and be able to recognize the six-year molars. In case of doubt they should consult their dentist.

This article is merely intended to assist the parents in identifying these all-important teeth. In this short article the writer makes no attempt to give the reasons for their special importance or outline any methods of procedure in their care. However, he will be glad to go further into the subject in subsequent articles if the readers will only make it known by calling or writing to the editor or to Dr. Halbert, or by the indorsement of any of the various local clubs or welfare societies.

Watch Tongue For Signs of Illness

Your tongue is nothing more than the upper end of your stomach and intestines. It is the first thing your doctor looks at. It tells at a glance the condition of your digestive system—and physicians say that 90 per cent of all sicknesses start with stomach and bowel trouble.

A white or yellowish coating on your tongue is a danger signal of those digestive disorders. It tells you why the least exertion tires you out; why you have pains in the bowels, gas, sour stomach, dizziness, etc.

And it's a sign you need Tanlac. This good old reliable medicine has helped thousands who were physical wrecks. See how the first bottle helps you.

JEWELRY OF CZAR JUST MELTED AWAY

Brooklyn Woman Discovers She Was Gyped.

New York.—When the Russian crown jewels melted and ran down the side of her kitchen radiator Mrs. Rebecca Barasch of 556 Crown street, Brooklyn, knew that she had been gyped.

She was further convinced when the few jewels which did not melt proved to be a poor grade of glass, and as a result she spent three days in the rogues' gallery at police headquarters.

In the end she succeeded in identifying three men from whom she had bought the treasure of the late Romanoff for $900, and all three were arrested and locked up at Brooklyn police headquarters on charges of grand larceny.

They said they were Stefano Anillo, thirty-four years old; Frank Russo, thirty-six, and Emanuel Fallacano, thirty. On being questioned regarding the jewel transaction all three denied they were in any way connected with it. Mrs. Barasch, however, is positive in her identification, and the police believe that the men have been doing a big business in the name of the late czar during the last few months.

Spoke in Russian. According to Mrs. Barasch two of them, Anillo and Fallacano, met her at the corner of New York avenue and Union street, May 22, and started talking in Russian. She is sixty-five years old and the sound of her native tongue was pleasant to hear.

The two told her they were refugees from the Soviet regime and that they were anxious to find the local Russian colony.

"You see," said one, "we stole the czar's crown jewels. They are worth a fabulous fortune and we must either sell them or give them to somebody to keep for us."

Mrs. Barasch had heard about the crown jewels being sold on the Rue de la Paix, but apparently forgot about it. She asked to see them, and was shown a pocketful of gleaming, crystal diamonds. They almost took her breath away but she asked:

"How can I tell that they are real?"

"Why we will take you around to any jewelry store," offered one of the refugees, and they started out. As they were about to enter one, Russo, it is alleged, stepped from the doorway.

He was identified as a jeweler and appraised the pocket of diamonds as being authentic, and worth a fortune.

In the end Mrs. Barasch took all three men to her bank. She drew out every cent that she had, $900, and apologized for not having more.

Then she took the Romanoff fortune home in her handkerchief and laid it out on the radiator while she prepared dinner. There were 20 big diamonds in all. Mrs. Barasch thought herself as wealthy as Czar Nicholas was, but when half way through peeling the potatoes she happened to cast a glance at her treasure.

Only eight remained. The others were a puddle of paste on the floor and these eight she later found to be glass.

In arresting the three men, the detectives stated that they watched their house for three days and that reports of their having sold crown jewels in Detroit have been received.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

Mary Graham Bonner
AUTHOR OF "MELTIE'S REMEDY FOR COLIC"

HAPPY BIRDS

"Miss Sparrow," said Mr. Tree Sparrow, "won't you call me Sammy and won't you be my mate?"

Mrs. Sammy Tree Sparrow. "I would love that," said Susy Sparrow.

"We'll start this very day," said Sammy.

So off they flew, Sammy and Susy Tree Sparrow, two devoted little birds, and Sammy said:

"Little Mate, I love you," and Susy said:

"I love you, too, little Mate, chirp, chirp."

So they flew along and along, they sang and they chirped and they talked.

They got delicious things to eat and they drank of many a little spring.

Mrs. Sammy Tree Sparrow, as she now was, always looked at herself in the little ponds and brooks where they stopped to drink.

Mr. Sammy Tree Sparrow teased her and said:

"Ah, my vain little mate, she is looking to see how beautiful she is."

And Mrs. Sammy Tree Sparrow laughed and said:

"Only trying to smooth my feathers and look my best for you, my love."

After awhile they stopped near some northern plains and Mrs. Sammy settled down to her housekeeping while Mr. Sammy saw that everything of the best was brought to the little nest in the way of goodies to eat.

And soon, very soon, in that dear little nest there appeared some eggs of greenish blue color, covered with tiny brown specks.

Mr. Sammy sang for joy and Mrs. Sammy joined in the song, too, until it seemed as though their little throats would burst—so joyful they were.

"They are the most beautiful eggs I've ever seen," said Mr. Sammy.

"They are the most beautiful ones I've ever seen," said Mrs. Sammy, "and soon they will be our dear little feathered babies."

Mr. Sammy drew very close to Mrs. Sammy and said softly:

"A loving mate, a happy nest, and little birdlings, too, ah what a lucky tree sparrow am I!"

And soon, very soon, the little eggs became little birdlings and soon they were good-sized birds with plenty of feathers.

How quickly they learned their lessons. How bright they had been. Oh the Tree Sparrow family were happy, happy birds!

H. H. Fisk, Esq., President of the Company, summarizes from his letter to us as follows:

BUSINESS

Western Newspaper Union, successor to a company of the same name and a business founded in 1865, serves more than 10,000 daily and weekly country newspapers, maintaining fully equipped plants in 36 key cities of the United States from California to Massachusetts. The Company supplies these newspapers with ready printed inside pages or with columns of prepared plate, containing various feature stories, serials and special articles selected by the newspaper publishers; places national advertising in their papers and prepares cuts and copy for local advertising campaigns.

The Company also does a large volume of commercial printing, prints in their entirety various magazines and trade journals and is responsible for the mechanical production of many of the feature services of The Associated Press.

FINANCIAL

During the past 20 years net profits of Western Newspaper Union, after all charges including depreciation, but before Federal taxes, averaged more than $680,000 annually, and in no single year were such net profits less than $450,000.

Net profits after depreciation, but before Federal taxes, for the past 4 years, as certified by Messrs. Arthur Andersen & Co., after eliminating operations of the paper mill, which is being sold coincident with this financing and after other adjustments arising from the reorganization as stated in their certificate, were as follows:

1925	$741,336
1926	955,383
1927	571,249
1928	765,825

Such net profits as above have averaged about $758,448 annually, and for the year ended December 31, 1928, amounted to $765,825, equivalent to more than 3 times the annual Debenture interest requirement.

After deducting from such net profits in 1928 Debenture interest requirements, Federal Taxes (parent company) at 12% and Preferred Stock dividends, the balance amounted to over $352,000, or about $2.35 per share on the 150,000 shares of Common Stock to be presently outstanding.

The net assets of the Company, available for these Debentures, based on the balance sheet, as at April 30, 1929, adjusted to give effect to the present financing, including the sale of the paper mill, were in excess of $8,500,000.

MANAGEMENT

Since the death in 1916 of the former owner, George A. Joslyn, his widow and other heirs have owned the majority of the Common Stock of Western Newspaper Union, control of which is now being acquired by the executives who have been responsible for its successful operation during the past 13 years.
