Know Your School

(That the patrons may have better opportunity of really knowing their school this column will each week be given over to school news. It is the desire of the school executives that the patrons become better acquainted with the faculty, school methods and school aims.)

Sanderson public schools open September 9. We are starting into this school year with every indication that this year will be the most successful in the school history of Sanderson. The board of education is making every possible effort to equip the school with adequate physical needs as well as with a capable faculty.

According to Superintendent Brannan there will be several changes in the school program. In the high school there will be a fully equipped commercial department. Every child in Sanderson will be given public school music. It is hoped that some start can be made to give to the children of Sanderson the same advantages that are to be had in the best school systems in Texas.

Students who are six years of age by January 1, will be permitted to enter school this year providing they enter at the beginning of school.

The following is a list of the faculty members for the ensuing school term:

- B. J. Brannan, Superintendent.
- S. E. Nelson, Principal High School.
- Miss Lena Wirz
- Miss Dorothy Weatherby
- Miss Bonnie Cox
- Miss Ophelia Spradling
- Miss Gladine Bowers
- Fuqua Younger, Athletic Director.
- Kelly Parker
- Mrs. J. W. McMillan
- Miss Martha V. Robinson
- Mrs. S. E. Nelson
- Miss Louise Nobles
- Miss Yula Mighell
- Jason Morgan, Principal Mexican School.
- Miss Stella Bede.
- Mrs. Ruel Adams

NOTICE!

Our store will be closed all day Monday, September 1, on account of taking our annual inventory.

Protracted Meeting in Progress

Those who have failed to hear Bro. Jesse P. Sewell at the Church of Christ have missed some soul-stirring sermons. The meetings are fast approaching a climax and those who desire to hear him at his best should not miss the remaining sermons.

The singing under the able leadership of Bro. H. Lee Reynolds is second only in interest to the sermons. Those who especially enjoy singing should come early. Bro. Reynolds is giving some very helpful lessons on the rudiments of music from 6 o'clock to 8 o'clock each evening. This is especially interesting and helpful to the young people and is being well attended. The young folks are especially invited to these lessons.

Bro. and Sister Reynolds are also rendering some very beautiful specials.

Please see the announcement of the hours of service in another column of this paper.

Come let us reason together saith Jehovah.

PLANS DRAWN FOR COURT HOUSE

Commissioners Advertising For Bids

Plans and specifications for the proposed new Terrell county court house has been completed by Henry T. Phelps, architect of San Antonio. This past week the Commissioners at their meeting ordered that bids for same be advertised.

The present building, which is in a rather dilapidated condition will be entirely remodeled. The plans call for a basement, and when the building is completed it will be modern in every respect. The jail, which is now located just east of the court house, will be placed on the third story of the new court house, and it too will be modern in every way.

We are certainly glad to be able to give this interesting bit of news to the public and we feel sure that soon our new court house will be completed and will be one that we have just cause to be proud of.

Mrs. Daugherty Takes Airplane Ride While in St. Louis

Mrs. Troxie Daugherty returned Monday from St. Louis and Chicago where she has been the past two weeks purchasing fall merchandise for the Kerr Mercantile Co.

While in St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Daugherty went for a ride over the city in a Ford Trimotor plane, taking off from the famous Lamberth field. They flew at the height of 3500 feet. Mrs. Daugherty said she enjoyed the trip very much and would not have missed the aeroplane ride for anything.

BECKER—LAURENCE

Last Sunday morning at seven o'clock at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Laurence, the wedding of Miss Sydney Laurence of this city and Mr. Alfred J. Becker of Austin was solemnized. Rev. W. M. Justice of the Methodist church read the impressive ring ceremony which united this popular young couple.

The bride is well known in Sanderson and the surrounding communities. For the past year she was a teacher in our public schools. She holds the B. A. and M. A. degrees from the University of Texas.

The groom is from a prominent Austin family and is salesman for the Schumaker wholesale house.

Following a motor trip to El Paso, Carlsbad Cave and to Clouderoft, N. M., they will return to Austin where they will make their future home.

The Times joins with the many friends of this happy couple in extending congratulations and best wishes for them as they travel down the pathway of life together.

CULTURE CLUB MEETS

The regular monthly meeting of the Sanderson Culture Club was held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. A. Pollard, with Mrs. Pollard and Mrs. F. L. Barnside as hostesses.

As this was the annual business meeting the following officers were elected to serve for the coming two years: President, Mrs. Fred Montgomery; vice president, Mrs. H. L. Stuckey; secretary, Mrs. B. J. Brannan; treasurer, Mrs. H. R. Laurence; parliamentary, Mrs. Addie Lee Boling; reporter, Mrs. F. L. Barnside.

Following the business meeting refreshments of orange punch and cake were served.

CHAPTER X

Out of Luck

"So far, Jack, you and Mr. Zaranko seem to have had most of the fun," pronounced my cousin Betty, as we sat at luncheon in the Kings' private sitting-room in the Pera palace. "What interests me," said Hugh thoughtfully, "is how many of those Johnnies you scragged last night."

"Who's we?" I inquired. "See here, Jack," she flashed, "you might as well understand that I am in this and I am going to have my part in whatever we do."

"I don't see that it is," asserted Betty stubbornly, "and I intend to play my part."

"There's no question in the minds of you two chaps but that any attack ought to come from the water front, is there?" he asked.

"It would be a task of some difficulty to pry loose the covering of the treasure chamber," King remarked.

"By choosing a time when the occupants of the house are off-watch and their numbers diminished," declared Hugh.

"True," agreed Nikka, "yet I confess I don't see how—"

"I say, Chesby," he drawled in tones that reached all the bystanders, "I don't know what sort of a lark you fellows were up to last night, but really, you know, you can't take liberties with natives in the East—and especially, with their women. Really, old chaps, you ought to be careful. In your place, I think I'd clear out of Constantinople. No knowing what kind of trouble you may get into."

going to be victimized by a gang of foreigners." "Well, whatever you are doing, I should prefer that you keep away from me in the future," said Hugh. "I can't afford to have the Jockey club stewards hear that I've been talking to you."

"All right, Chesby," he said curtly, "I won't forget that."

"You were hard on him," said Nikka seriously. "After all, why should you mind anything that he can say?"

"It was a rotten thing, he said, admitted Helene frankly. "And of course, he is a rotter. But as I told you boys once, they are a queer pair, and Maudie—well, she really thinks that if they ever get into a state of affluence, they can both turn around and live straight. It's d-d silly, but—do you believe in fairies? Those who don't generally envy those who do."

"We don't believe in fairies," I answered, "and we don't believe in letting a man who is a thief get away with a gratuitous insult."

"What about my uncle?" asked Hugh eagerly. "By your mind telling how your push got on to him?"

"N-no, I suppose there's no harm now," she answered slowly. "Poor old fellow! I was darned sorry he was croaked. We none of us—well, what's the use talking? That Toutou is a devil. Mr. Nash knows it. I only hope he and the rest of you don't get to know him any better. But about your uncle, Lord Chesby. He was a clunch. He ran around here like a kid in a game of 'Cops-and-thieves.' Every-body knew he was up to something. The authorities thought he was just a nut. But when he took to snooping around Tokalji's house, our folks got wise to it he might be on to something good. Tokalji's tribe have always had the tradition of a treasure—but you know about that. Tokalji had been working with us since before the war, and he realized this was more than he could tackle by himself, so he called on Toutou. Say, Mr. Zaranko, on the level now, did that girl of Tokalji's sell out to you last night?"

"I had a good deal of trouble with her," he returned. "Had to tie her up. She was right on our heels, with her knife."

"Te-es, that's true, but—I saw her this morning. Humph! Maybe I'm a fool. I told Toutou to mind his own business, and not mix into the tribe's affairs. Tokalji said she was all right, and that ought to be enough."

trouble. As ever, your well-wisher, Helene." And she tripped off. "What a delightful criminal," I remarked. "Somehow I don't mind so much the idea of being plucked by her."

"You're losing your perspective," growled Hugh, who was in a righteous frame of mind, partly because he was in love and partly because of his clash with Hil'yer. "A crook is a crook. They're all against us. I don't know but that the women are the most dangerous whers you are concerned. Jack. Why are you so d-d susceptible?"

"At which I laughed, Nikka walking beside us, had no ears for our conversation. His thoughts were on that slim, brown Tzigane maid about whom Helene de Oespedes had inquired. But he woke up a block farther on, when a big, turbaned figure slambled past us, with a guttural exclamation from the corner of his mouth. At the next corner there was a traffic block, and we groined casually around Wasso Mikail.

"Tokalji's women and children are in camp beyond Boghazkeul on the edge of the forest of Belgrade," he murmured. "There are five men with them."

"If That Gypsy Tokalji Catches You—Phew!"

them. Five other men have left Sokaki Maseri since morning. If Franks were there they have gone."

"It is good, my uncle," returned Nikka, affecting to speak to Hugh. Continue the watch. If there is more to report bid one of your young men lounge before the khan where we are staying tomorrow in the forenoon."

There are about 2,000,000 spinsters in Great Britain, but how many of them can spin? And although every man is Mr. So-and-so, very few are entitled to the Mr. in its true meaning of master.

My grocer is certainly not an engrasser, though he retains the old name in its abbreviated form; my chemist knows little or nothing of chemistry, from which his predecessors got the name of alchemist.

Costers no longer sell costard apples, some sailors have never been on a ship with sails, and the humble "navy" has long since ceased to make navigation automatically assumed command, and Hugh and Watkins as automatically accepted the role of crew. Vernon King, Nikka and I tried to be as inconspicuous as possible.

We chugged slowly through the glut of shipping in the Golden Horn, edging away from the Galata shore toward the picturesque bulk of Stamboul. Seraglio point loomed ahead of us, high, rugged, tree-covered, dotted with infrequent lights. We rounded the lighthouse twinkling on our starboard beam, and turned southwest in-bow to the Bosphorus, with the wide sweep of the Marmora just ahead. The steamers from Rodosto and other Marmoran ports steamed past us with a swash and gurgle. A related fishing-boat flapped by. Then we had the waters to ourselves.

"Have you the night-glasses, Hugh?" questioned Betty. "See if you can make out the St. Sophia minarets." And to us: "That's our first landfall in making Tokalji's house."

"Fetch the sweeps, Watkins," she whispered. "We'll pull in. Quiet, everybody."

"That's a good idea," approved Nikka. "If you could enter by the House of the Married you could seize the valuable part of the position first. Sound military strategy."

"Yes," assented Hugh, "you could consolidate your position—how the old lingo come back, though!—and occupy the rest of the place as convenient. By jove, if you didn't want to occupy it, you could—"

"Oh, you'd have to occupy it," I interrupted. "I say, do you know that place looks deserted?"

"There's somebody there, never fear," rejoined Betty. "According to Nikka's uncle, a good part of the garrison were withdrawn today," returned Hugh.

"There is no use in hurrying," cautioned my uncle. "We shall have plenty of opportunities."

"Yes, they won't be looking for us so soon again," agreed Nikka. "They will be figuring that we had enough of a fright last night. What could be more unexpected than a raid from us tonight? They probably think that we will go slow after last night, and they don't even know we are out here."

ESKIMO BOYS FLEE TO ESCAPE DISEASE

Ends Experiment With White Civilization.

Toronto.—Ben and Sam, two Eskimo boys on whom the hopes of their race had been pinned in an experiment with the civilization of the white man, are fleeing for their lives back to the safety of the Arctic wastes. Not from the roar of the cities are they fleeing, nor from a white man's learning, but from a mightier agency—disease. The experiment has failed.

Two years ago an Eskimo chieftain, far up in the silent Arctic, asked the head of the missionaries to send his son to the unknown lands to the south to learn the ways of the white man. "My people haven't a chance unless they are able to meet the white man on his own ground," he said.

Attend White Man's School. And so nine-year-old Ben, son of Chief John Eli, head of the Southampton Island Eskimos, accompanied by his friend of the same age, Sam Pudbut, of Lake Harbor, Baffin Land, were handed over to the headmaster of the Lakefield Preparatory school, near Peterboro. They had been brought down from the North by Rev. F. H. Gibbs, a returning missionary.

It is of the utmost importance that these boys should be considered in every way on the basis of white men. The instructions of Venerable A. L. Fleming, archdeacon of the Arctic.

Ben and Sam knew no English, but they were good-natured, good sports and intelligent. They were unanimously acclaimed as general favorites by their new white playmates.

But Ben and Sam were forced to relinquish their studies to face an ordeal of sickness, from which they barely escaped with their lives. After influenza, they took pneumonia, measles, tonsillitis and underwent operations for mastoids and adenoids.

It had been pronounced that for them to remain here means only one thing—death.

So Ben and Sam sailed from Montreal on a Hudson Bay company's ice-breaker, the Nasopie. They will be taken back by returning missionaries. They do not want to go back to the land of the midnight sun, and the reason they expressed was just "Baffin Land" too cold.

"This experiment has been thoroughly satisfactory from one point of view," declared Ven. A. L. Fleming, who bore the responsibility and expense of the enterprise. "It has shown that the Eskimo is in no way inferior to the white man."

The archdeacon said the Eskimo was an intelligent but undeveloped race. The way Ben and Sam picked up the white man's language and customs in such a short time was remarkable. "I wish white men could learn Eskimo as quickly as these two picked up English," said the archdeacon.

DOCTORS quite approve the quick comfort of Bayer Aspirin. These perfectly harmless tablets ease an aching head without penalty. Their increasing use year after year is proof that they do help and can't harm. Take them for any ache; to avoid the pain peculiar to women; many have found them marvelous at such times. The proven directions with every package of Bayer Aspirin tell how to treat colds, sore throat, neuralgia, neuritis, etc. All druggists.

ASPIRIN

United States Wise in Giving Up Old Things

When a seventy-five-year-old Maine blacksmith recently shed a twenty-five-year-old horse in a one-hundred-year-old shop, using a vise and an anvil even older, the happening was chronicled afar in the press. A similar combination of what, to us, were ancient things would not have caused the flicker of an eyelash in Egypt or China. There are many other places in the world, too, where the peoples are immune to curiosity of the kind displayed. Not that their men or their animals live, or continue active, longer than ours, but they have been less inclined than Americans to seek improvements in equipment, and so have clung closer to old buildings and old tools. Here the search is constant for better design and better materials. The ancient is discarded when the new makes its added merit certain. And that is not the least of the reasons for the start the United States often gets in achievement.—Indianapolis News.

Hindu Festivals. The outstanding Hindu festivals which have a national appeal are the Durga, the Lakshmi and Kali "pujas" in northeast India and their equivalent, and the "Dewali," in the rest of India. The pujas and Dewali take place in October and are celebrated with pomp for several days. Government trade is all but suspended. Business at the bazaars during the few days preceding the puja is very active.

Their Acquaintance. "And do you know him?" "Yes—well enough not to speak to him."

Dallas Lady's Child Came Through Fine

Mrs. S. C. Carr's experience with her little girl is just one of the many cases which we hear about. Mrs. Carr says "My little Nettie Virginia had something like the flu. When it left, she was puny, had no appetite, and was very cross and feverish. I had known for years that Nature's Remedy is such a dependable medicine and I decided to give her a course of the Juniors. Nobody knows how happy I am to see her eat heartily again, and laughing and playing like she used to."

Very often those simple little chocolate coated Nature's Remedy Juniors (NR Jr's) are all the system of a child needs to straighten it out. Then the wastes can't remain in it to form the acids which sour the stomach, bind the bowels and rob the blood of the red corpuscles it must have plenty of to keep children from becoming puny, feverish, and pale. Any druggist will recommend NR Juniors to you for your child. Only 25 cents.

STRENGTHENING EFFECT REMARKABLE, HE SAYS

"The Sargon treatment is simply wonderful for bringing back strength and energy for now, after a few weeks taking it, I feel like a different man entirely."

"On account of my work I was forced to eat and sleep irregularly for a long time, with the result that I became very run down and debilitated. Chronic indigestion gradually weakened me and kept me in bad health. I would suffer terrible pains after every meal, no matter how light it was. At night these pains robbed me of sleep and my condition finally got so bad I couldn't even eat an orange or a grape fruit without suffering afterwards. Naturally I was always tired and listless."

"Then I started Sargon—and commenced to feel better right from the beginning. I now enjoy my food and my digestion is fine. I'm never bothered with stomach trouble and get plenty of good, sound sleep. I feel better and stronger than I have in years—and I'll never be without Sargon again."—E. D. Frank 1610 20th street, Galveston, Tex. Sanderson Drug Co., Agents.

Doing a Balcony Scene

By DUFORD JENNE

NELSON HALL swung briskly up the driveway through the attractive grounds of the estate. The errand he was on was largely business, but he told himself he would not mind lingering a bit in such a pleasant spot.

He went up the steps of the broad porch and touched the door bell. He heard steps, and expected when the door opened, to face a butler or a maid. Instead, he was a bit staggered when he saw, framed in the doorway, a golden-haired girl of decided beauty.

He caught himself. "Er—is Mr. Kilburn at home?" he asked politely enough.

"No—or—wait—perhaps he is. I'll see. Won't you come in?" her voice suggested, but in the voice was an odd note that disturbed its even modulations.

"Wonder what is up?" Nelson asked himself. "But I shall certainly linger if I can—with her preferably."

He followed her slight graceful figure through the hall and up the broad stairs, then into a room that evidently was used as a library. She ushered him in, closed the door behind them, invited him to a chair, then went to the other door, and turned:

"I'll see if I can find father," she said swiftly. "If you will please wait."

She closed the door, and then Hall heard a sound that made him sit sharply up. She was locking it!

"Well, what in thunder is up?" he asked of himself. "Of all weird stunts."

He waited a few minutes, then rose and tried the door through which he came. She had been the last through it and had fixed the lock so that it fastened as she entered. He tried the other door.

"Locked sure as shooting!" he muttered. "She has me cooped up for fair. Wonder who she thinks I am—some murderer or thug? I hate to think I look like one—especially in her estimation!"

He tried tactics of delay—read a bit, strolled around the room, but nothing happened. He found on a desk in the room her picture. He studied it—a picture of a girl in a tender, happy mood.

He calmly put the photograph in his pocket.

He went to the french windows and discovered that they opened on a small balcony. He stepped out and looked down—two stories—too far for comfort, but there were the heavy ivy vines.

"By Jove, I believe I could make it! I don't like this idea of being cooped up here—waiting for somebody to unlock a room as if I had been a small, bad boy," he took counsel with himself.

"I'll not take a chance of ripping that brand new coat," he continued.

He slipped it off and threw it down.

"Now for a Romeo act the other way around," he concluded.

Hardly had he extended a leg for the descent, when a quick, frightened cry made him turn. He looked around, then drew back. She had come from the balcony and was below him—a picture of blue and gold beneath him.

He sat down on the edge of the balcony.

"Escape I do—unless I am informed as to the reason for my imprisonment!" he announced.

She evidently felt unhappy over the situation, but she said bravely: "Father had been accused of misappropriating funds, but he knows a subordinate did it. If he is arrested, it means the papers will get it, and his reputation and firm will be hurt. This afternoon he is ending the matter—and he isn't going to be arrested just to please his enemies!" she added a bit triumphantly.

He looked at her. "Are you his daughter, Beth Kilburn?" he demanded.

She nodded.

"I came here to see your father—he and my old man were college chums. I'm the son and heir of Stanley Marks—and proud of it!"

Her voice was low. "You aren't!"

"I am!"

"You'll find a letter to your father in that coat," he replied pleasantly—then to himself: "Gosh, I forgot about that photo!"

It was the photograph she saw first. She gazed with startled eyes.

"Why did you take this?" she asked hesitatingly.

"I can tell you better, Beth, later on," he answered gently.

When she looked up again, her queenly head was submissive.

"Please, forgive me. I really have done a foolish, crazy thing, but I expect father at any moment—and I did not want to see him or have him under arrest. He will jolly me for years if he finds this out. You won't tell him, will you?" she almost pleaded.

He turned back at her in frank comradeship. "I'll keep it to myself. Now, please come up and unbar the door, Miss Jaller—but don't take that picture from that coat first!" he commanded.

"You are going to be hard to manage!" she answered as she slipped from sight.

He swung his legs. "There's no doubt of that—I am," he said by way of congratulating himself.

AS IT LOOKS TO ME

By Jack Ainslie

"Debunkers"

A new literary cult has recently risen in the land—risen to popularity, prominence, and opulence. Its members call themselves "Debunkers" and devote their literary efforts to wholesale attacks upon respectability, decency and idealism.

Professing to be advocates of truth and enemies of sham these literary vultures spread falsehoods by the ton and distribute sham by the carload.
Their main forte is to stress the banalities and gaucheries of the few and attribute them to the many.

These self righteous and blatant scandal peddlers always dote on lampooning virtue as a mere conventional mask for inborn libidinousness; paint the clergy of every faith as pusillanimous ninnies and base villains; deride religion as a mythical delusion concocted for simple minds. In short, they caricature everything cherished by honest folks as essentially evil and inherently contemptible. In fact, the "debunkers" catalogue all the rest of us as knaves, fools, and hypocrites—and themselves, of course, as honest souls ardently devoted to truth and honesty of mind.

Unhappily, this d-bunking vogue has captured a large slice of the reading public. It is "something new" in an age given to superficial thinking and having a flair for novelty. It is also a "gold mine" from a commercial standpoint. Consequently, every literary charlatan in the land has become a de-bunker.

As it looks to me, the best remedy for the debunking craze is the old standby—Time.
Applesauce, when taken as a steady diet, soon becomes more than enough.

Ditto the super-bunk of the professional bunker!

stated in her letter that it was very dry up there and that the farmers were very hard hit from no rain. She states that she is anxiously looking forward to closing her home and leaving for Texas as she is getting mighty lonesome to see all of us.
We are speaking for all the community when we state that we certainly will be glad to see Mrs. Reeve again.
