Know Your School

(That the patrons may have better opportunity of really knowing their school this column will each week be given over to school news. It is the desire of the school executives that the patrons become better acquainted with the faculty, school methods and school aims.)

A part time health instructor furnished by the University of Texas will arrive in Sanderson about September 9th to help the teachers of the public schools initiate a thorough health program for the entire year.

Only one other public school in Texas has such a health instructor provided for by the University of Texas.

Attention to the health program of the Sanderson Schools was first attracted last year when the dental survey of all the school children was made in the spring. Miss Jeanie M. Pinckney, Health Supervisor, of the University, who learned of the survey through an article in THE TEXAS OUTLOOK, became interested in the health work of Sanderson and wrote Mr. B. J. Brannan, superintendent of the Sanderson schools, for specific information in regard to the dental campaign. When she discovered that the good teeth campaign was the initial step in a health-minded program for the Sanderson school children, she immediately offered the services of her bureau in establishing such a program.

With the opening of school in the fall of 1930 every public school in the state of Texas will be required to give one year of physical education, which will be compulsory for all school children. The Sanderson school is preceding this program by one year. With the aid of Health Bureau at Austin, every child in the Sanderson schools will this year receive physical education as a part of his daily school work.

Since such a health program has been installed in Sanderson, it is expected that other public schools of the state will follow the example of Sanderson, and at an early date establish in their communities a similar health program.

School children who will be seven in January will be admitted to the first grade at the beginning of this term, Monday, September 9. This is written in correction of the statement in last week's paper, which read that children who will be six in January will be admitted.

Pick Up Injured Man at Rosenfield

A white man giving his name as William Brooks was found beside the railroad track at Rosenfield last Thursday. The man was badly bruised especially about his head, one eye being swollen so badly he could not see out of it.

The train crew picked the man up and brought him to town and gave him medical attention.

In conversation with the local officers he states that he does not remember how he came to be by the track nor if he was struck by a train.

Communications have been obtained with his mother in Los Angeles, but it seems that none of his people are able to come after him.

Papers on his person indicate that he has been writing for several papers and that he has traveled about a good deal.

Since being brought to town, Sheriff Banner has had the injured man under his care having given him a room in the living quarters of the jail. Dr. Doty has been attending him. Soon as he is able, he will be sent on to his people in Los Angeles.

Return From Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Brown and children have returned from a motor trip through New Mexico, Colorado, and Wyoming. They visited the Yellowstone National Park and other points of interest, traveled 3400 miles and enjoyed the trip very much. Mr. and Mrs. Brown say it is worth any ones time to visit Yellowstone National Park. In speaking of the geysers in the park, Mr. Brown said:

"There are many geysers in Yellowstone National Park, but the one of most interest, in my judgment, is the one called 'Old Faithful.' This geyser spouts up regularly every 63 minutes, day and night. The water is thrown up into the air more than 200 feet; then the geyser will settle down and remain quiet for 63 minutes when the same process will be repeated again. We saw many black and grizzly bears and a few elk and moose in the park."

Mrs. A. M. Lemons and son Jack of Tucson, Ariz., visited Mrs. Luella Lemons and other relatives here this week.

INSTITUTE TO BE HELD IN ALPINE

More Than 300 Teachers Expected to Attend Annual Gathering at Sul Ross

A very interesting program has been planned for the annual Trans-Pecos Teachers' College September 2 to 6. Several prominent educators will be present to deliver addresses and take part in the program, among these being State Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs and Dr. H. T. Manuel of the University of Texas.

All facilities of Sul Ross college will be placed at the disposal of those attending the institute, including the fine library, cafeteria, swimming pool, etc. Also, the Sul Ross cottages may be used by the teachers and their families, which will provide facilities for the visitors bringing their families. J. H. Head, conductor of the institute, said Wednesday that the committees are making arrangements to take care of more than 300 teachers from all the Trans-Pecos towns including Sanderson, Marathon, Fort Davis, Marfa, Van Horn, Sierra Blanca, Valentine, Pecos, Balmorea, Pyote, Wink, Menahans, Crane City, Mcamey, Big Lake, Fort Stockton, Grand Falls, Rankin, Iraan, Toyah, and others.

Prominent on the program beside those mentioned above will be H. W. Morelock, president of Sul Ross; Eva Brown, Catherine Gorbett, J. E. Gregg, V. A. Byrd, Capt. A. E. Lang, Marfa; Judge Latson, Rankin; Judge R. D. Blydes, Fort Stockton; John Perkins, Alpine, and others.

With the recreational facilities available for those attending the institute this year, it is believed that the teachers will get a great deal of pleasure, as well as good, out of the meetings.

Mrs. Clyde Mill Honored

Mesdames D. A. Pollard and J. W. McKee were hostess to several friends last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Pollard where they gave a bridge party honoring Mrs. Clyde Mills who will soon leave for Uvalde to make her home. The decorations, tallies, score pads and plate favors featured the Japanese idea.

The attractive tables were arranged under the arbor where the guests enjoyed playing bridge. The high score prize, a brass Japanese incense burner, was won by Mrs. James Kerr. The second prize, a Japanese scarf, went to Mrs. Jim Nance. Mrs. F. B. Carter was presented a Japanese lemon fork as the booby prize; while Mrs. F. L. Burnside drew the cut prize, a Japanese rose vase. Mrs. Mills was presented with a beautiful caresole bowl.

Refreshments of rice apricot whip, angel food cake, iced tea and ju jube, a Japanese fruit, were served. Potted kohlias and tiny Japanese umbrellas were favors.

Benefit Bridge Party

At the home of Mrs. S. C. Bodkins last Thursday a benefit bridge party was given for the Scholarship Fund of the Sanderson Culture Club. Mrs. Bodkin and Mrs. Guy Nation were hostesses.

Mrs. Herbert Buchanan made high score for the afternoon and Miss Novice White the second high score, angel food cakes being given as the prizes. A good sum was realized for the fund.

Mrs. Mart Adams and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Adams of Fort Stockton visited Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Carter this week. Mrs. Adams is a sister of Mrs. Carter.

"I suppose you are right," she sighed. "Well, don't blame me if anything goes wrong. Of all the hare-brained—"

"Hats!" I scoffed. "If they jump us, and there are too many of them, we'll retreat. But maybe we can clean up this job tonight for good and all. If we can, it's worth trying."

Watkins emerged from the cabin with the tools. Nikka insisted that he was the best climber of the party, and took charge of the rope. Hugh and I carried the crowbars, which we wrapped in sailcloth to prevent their clinking against the stones of the wall.

It was a perilous climb to the shore, and we negotiated it slowly, helping one another and taking every precaution to avoid making any noise.

At last we found ourselves in the jumble of bowlders constituting the breakwater at the foot of the sea wall, which reared its moss-grown battlements high overhead.

We who watched him stood with knocking hearts for what seemed an eternity. Spread-eagled against the wall, he appeared as infinitesimal as a fly in the darkness.

"Very well," she answered, "we will leave you to think it over. If you are wise, you will understand that having blundered into this trap—as you must have blundered sooner or later—the best you can hope for is life in exchange for what we want. I cannot continue to save you from the cruelty of those who relish brutal measures.

"Right O!" endorsed Hugh cheerfully. "Jack, you and Nikka will come with me. Professor King and Watty will be rear guard and second-line for emergency use. Stay where you are, professor, until you hear from us."

"We crossed the room toward Sokaki Mayser, the large courtyard on our right, the Garden of the Cedars on our left. The trap door was shut, but unfastened, and Hugh lowered himself gently, and creaked down to the door.

"I've picked up a chair leg," Nikka whispered by the broken door. "You fellows use your crowbars!"

"Right," Hugh whispered back. "Can we lift this door aside?"

The hinges rattled slightly as we shifted it. The next moment we peered through a yawning cavity, ears alert. Not a sound reached us and we stole forward with the utmost care. Midway of the hall were the corkscrew stairs up which Kara had guided Nikka and me. I judged we were close to them when a door jarred beside us.

"A man seized me by the shoulder, and I drove my fist into his face. Two others leaped on me. I cracked the skull of one with my crowbar, and broke the arm of the second. Hugh in front of me was driving his opponents down the stairs. I heard Nikka exclaim once, then a gasp—and a light flashed. Hugh had cleared a space, but went down as I looked, throttled from behind. Nikka was just rising from beside a man whose head was crushed in. Then the rush began again.

I reached for my pistol, but did not have time to draw it. The attackers surged in from all sides. I had a fleeting glimpse of Hilmi Bey, Serge Vassilievich ran up the stairs. I heard somewhere the snarling voice of Toutou LaFitte.

"Jack, hold them for me!" cried Nikka. "Must warn—King!"

I swung my crowbar in a circle, and backed toward Nikka's voice. He had shaken himself clear. "In that door—opposite—reach window!" he gasped.

over my shoulder with the crowbar, but somebody caught my wrist. As I felt I heard Nikka's cry: "Run, Professor! Save Betty! We're—"

"That was all. Toutou had me on the floor and was choking the life out of me. I lost consciousness. When I came to I was lying on a very damp, hard floor. Several lights dazzled my aching eyes, and a number of people were talking in French.

"If you take my advice,—I recognized Hilmi Bey's falsetto tones—"you will have Toutou operate on all three of them. He has ways to make silent men speak. Do you remember Battner, the Swiss broker, Toutou?"

"Allive now to the position I was in, I opened my eyes wider and tried to rise. But I was bound hand and foot, and could not move. I could, however, see where I was. Not far away Hugh and Nikka were propped against the stone wall of a chamber, which I suppose you could call a dungeon. It had no window. The door was open. The floor sloped gradually toward the center, where there was a square stone grating about two feet square.

"I hope they will not try anything foolish in the way of a rescue," said Nikka. "If Wasso Mikal establishes touch with them, I am afraid they may be tempted to do something."

"There is nothing they can do," answered Hugh. "Our goose is cooked. We're hopt, finished. As Helene said, if the O. C. of the Force of Occupation jammed his way in here, they could make a clean sweep of us. They might—"

"You are in a serious fix," said Helene. "I've tried to make you boys understand that the Boches were merciful enemies compared to us. We don't recognize civilization. For us it doesn't exist. We have gone back to primal principles. Now we've got you, and you've got to talk."

"Words, words," lamented Hilmi viciously. "Let Toutou take his knife to them. That will do the trick."

Two slightly different stories appear to have been passed down to posterity concerning the origin of the bowie knife, famous as a weapon in the days of Texas independence.

The other story of its origin gives to James Bowie entire credit. He is said to have made a model of the knife and a Louisiana blacksmith fashioned it for him. Major Wright appears in both stories, although in the second he is supposed to have shot Bowie in the leg. It was this circumstance, the second tale contends, that led James always to carry the knife on his person thereafter.

Chicago's First Settler The first settler in the territory now covered by the city of Chicago was not a white man. About the time of the revolution Gene Baptiste Point de Saibie, a colored man from San Domingo, established himself in what is now Chicago as an Indian trader.

"I'll carve them," he purred. "They do not look now as they will when I have finished with them. Ha, yes, Toutou's knife knows the way to truth. Soon they will be asking to die."

"I'll stand for a good deal," he said, "but I won't permit torture. You are a fool, Toutou. You'd only kill them the way you did the old lord. Here, you people, we must call him off. He'll spoil the whole show."

"They have killed three more of my men," howled the gypsy. "Shall they now be sent through my tribe, and live unharmed?"

"They shall," declared Helene calmly. "She stepped beside Toutou, and placed her fingers on his wrist. Her eyes sought his. He snarled in his cat-like fashion, and drew away from her. But she fearlessly came closer to him, and slowly, under the compulsion of her fingers, he returned the knife to its sheath.

"There has been enough of this," Helene went on. "Mr. Nash, do you join with your friends in refusing to give up your secret?"

"I nodded. "Very well," she answered, "we will leave you to think it over. If you are wise, you will understand that having blundered into this trap—as you must have blundered sooner or later—the best you can hope for is life in exchange for what we want. I cannot continue to save you from the cruelty of those who relish brutal measures.

"I advise you to make intelligent use of the next twenty-four hours. You cannot be saved. Your friends cannot reach you. The authorities cannot interfere. If they did, you would disappear. You have twenty-four hours more."

"They took all the lanterns, except one, and went out, clicking the door after them."

CHAPTER XI

Watkins to the Rescue

"Well, this is a nice mess I got you chaps into," said Hugh unhappily. "It's not your fault any more than it is ours," returned Nikka. "We walked squarely into a trap and were bagged. That's all. Did the Kings and Watty get away?"

"I hope they will not try anything foolish in the way of a rescue," said Nikka. "If Wasso Mikal establishes touch with them, I am afraid they may be tempted to do something."

"There is nothing they can do," answered Hugh. "Our goose is cooked. We're hopt, finished. As Helene said, if the O. C. of the Force of Occupation jammed his way in here, they could make a clean sweep of us. They might—"

"You are in a serious fix," said Helene. "I've tried to make you boys understand that the Boches were merciful enemies compared to us. We don't recognize civilization. For us it doesn't exist. We have gone back to primal principles. Now we've got you, and you've got to talk."

"Words, words," lamented Hilmi viciously. "Let Toutou take his knife to them. That will do the trick."

Chicago's First Settler The first settler in the territory now covered by the city of Chicago was not a white man. About the time of the revolution Gene Baptiste Point de Saibie, a colored man from San Domingo, established himself in what is now Chicago as an Indian trader.

"I'll carve them," he purred. "They do not look now as they will when I have finished with them. Ha, yes, Toutou's knife knows the way to truth. Soon they will be asking to die."

We slept fitfully, frightfully harassed by the curtailment of circulation due to the straitness of our bonds and the discomfort of our positions, which we might not change.

Of course, we had no means of estimating the passage of time, but we figured it was well into the forenoon when we abandoned further efforts for sleep. Nobody came to us, and we began to be aware of the pangs of hunger and thirst.

For a while we talked and mung and told stories, but our cracked lips and swollen tongues soon felt the strain of vocal effort. What the others did then I don't know, but I fell asleep to awaken with a gasp of agony as I lost my balance and fell sideways, striking my head on the stone floor.

"Too bad," came Hugh's voice from the darkness, strangely muffled. "Hit your head, Jack?"

"Twenty-four hours must be nearly up," croaked Nikka. "I fought for a while to work over to me on my back, but my limbs had become so stiff that I could not. I had to lie on my stomach, with my head resting, now on one cheek, now on the other. In this position, ear to the floor, it seemed to me that I heard a clink of metal, not outside the door of the dungeon, but somewhere underneath it. I asked the object, if they heard it, but they said no, and I could tell from their pitying tones that they thought I was becoming delirious.

Yet again I heard it, and almost immediately afterward a wholly different sound; footsteps approaching the door. The two noises persisted together until the dungeon door was thrown open with a clatter. I forgot all about the first noise in the sight of Toutou LaFitte, standing by himself in the doorway, his shirt sleeves rolled up and a grin of horrible anticipation distorting his beautiful face.

In the doorway he stood motionless for a moment, surveying the three of us. Then he advanced, leaving the door open against the wall, and unhooked the stable lantern which hung from his belt. He placed this close to the grating, and prowled over to where I lay.

"I say 'prowled,' and I mean just that. He walked like a big forest cat, or, rather, like a gorilla, investigating a likely meal awaiting the kill. When he stood by me, I felt up and down my spine the shiver of apprehension, of sheer horror, that I had known before in his proximity. When he turned his hands, with their smooth fingers and polished nails, explored my muscles, I could have screamed with terror. I twitched at his touch, with an involuntary exclamation of repugnance. He snarled, and his fingers pressed on a nerve of the upper arm, with a force that made me faint.

But almost at once he flung me from him, and walked across to Hugh, who met him unflinchingly. "I take it, Monsieur Toutou," said Hugh, "that the twenty-four hours are up."

Toutou stood over him, with that peculiarly animal, bent-necked posture of meditated attack, arms flexed forward. "Not quite," he answered in the throaty, guttural voice that I always identified him with. "But we are tired of waiting."

He swooped and snatched Hugh into his arms, just as a gorilla might, squeezing ferociously. Hugh's face showed above his shoulder, white and beaded with perspiration. I thought the fiend intended to crush Hugh's ribs, but he ceased as suddenly as he had begun and tossed his victim down on the floor again.

"First, you shall see your friends suffer." Hugh was too weak from the bandaging he had just experienced and the shock of his fall to see what happened next, but I did. Toutou leaped on Nikka with one tigerish spring, lifting him to his feet and propping him against the wall. Then he prodded Nikka from head to foot, testing out muscles and joints, all the time growling in his throat. He did not hurt him, simply felt of him as though to determine the parts of his body which would be juiciest.

"Do you eat men, Toutou?" he gibed. Toutou flashed his knife, and I closed my eyes, thinking to see the torture begin. But when I opened them again, the knife was slashing the ropes that bound Nikka's limbs. For a second I credited the incredible. Were we to be set free? But no. Toutou snatched the knife, and crouched before Nikka once more, animal-like, menacing.

"I'll break men, bone by bone, joint by joint. Have you ever felt your bones breaking, your sinews cracking? Gouh-her-her-her-her-her!"

He pounced and Nikka screamed, screamed in an excess of agony as the beast's fingers sank into his shoulder, torturing the nerves, tearing the sinews and muscles, dragging the bone from its socket.

"You were going to be a truck driver," he growled.

HE DISCOVERED WHAT WATER IS English Genius World's Most Timid Man.

London—Any schoolboy fresh from his first chemistry lesson, will tell you that water is H2O—a statement, by the way, with which modern scientists do not altogether agree. Not everybody, however, can say who first made that stupendous fact known to the world.

It was a millionaire bachelor, Henry Cavendish by name, nephew of one of the dukes of Devonshire. He was so shy that he kept many of his discoveries secret lest he should become famous after his death; so shy that if he ever caught sight of one of his own women servants, she had to pack her bag and leave that day. He was so shy that when his banker came to tell him he had $400,000 in his account—and wasn't that rather a lot to be idle—he sent the man of business away, told him to do what he liked with it, but said he would close his account if they ever bothered him again.

He was so shy, says the London Mail, that having a wonderful library of books he was quite willing to lend, he took a separate house in Soho, so that borrowers need never disturb his studies. Whenever he took out a book himself he always signed for it like any stranger.

Not only did he tell how water is made. He was one of the first to discover that heat is not a substance but a state; one of the first to measure the density of the earth; a pioneer of electricity, an astronomer, a geologist. Rustics at Clapham, where he had his country seat, peered through his windows and saw, instead of furniture, a laboratory and a forge. They thought he was either a wizard or a madman; but he was merely a genius.

Air Post Office Designed to Sort 250,000 Letters

Seattle, Wash.—When the government desires to move all first-class mail by air, especially designed planes will be available for such service. A fully equipped airplane on display in a local plant will carry three tons of mail, or a quarter million letters, at 125 miles an hour.

Eighteen-passenger transports built for use on the transcontinental air route this summer are so constructed that they can be quickly transformed into mail planes. Sorting tables and sacks can be placed around the cabin for the distribution of mail en route, as is done on mail trains. These cabins are 19 1/2 feet long, more than six feet high and five and one-half feet wide.

These newer planes have a wing span of 80 feet and a length over all of 55 feet. Letter clerks will have their meals aboard the planes in well-equipped buffets electrically heated. Each plane is provided with a fully equipped lavatory with hot and cold water. Large, unobstructed windows of non-shatterable glass give excellent vision. Instruments mounted over the sorting tables would tell the clerks how fast they are flying and how much time they have to distribute mail for various cities en route.

Numerous applications for airplane mail clerk jobs are on file with the Post Office department, it was announced here.

Towns' Names on Roofs Guide Distance Flyers

Washington.—Remarkable progress in the movement to have names painted on the roofs of prominent buildings of towns throughout the country was reported by W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail, on his return from an inspection trip over the air mail lines.

The campaign was started by the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics and postmasters have been enlisted to further the movement. Mr. Glover said he was surprised with the results already accomplished.

He said the people in the West were more interested in the air mail than those in the East.

Four Finnish Spies Go to Prison in Russia

Leningrad.—Four men, charged with espionage on Soviet soil in behalf of Finland, have pleaded guilty in a military trial here. They were sentenced to eight years of imprisonment and confiscation of all their properties. The self-confessed spies are Yalmar Lempiainen, Edward Vesterlin, Solomon Uttu and Uri Reiman.

Sun and Tape 'Brand' Bathers in Virginia

Richmond, Va.—The vogue for sunbath here has brought the "brand." A "brand" is easily acquired with a few strips of adhesive tape and an afternoon at the swimming pool.

It consists of shaping the desired design or initials from the tape, applying them to the sun and stepping into the sunshine. The space covered by the tape remains white and is easily seen when the tape is removed. Check letter fraternity "brands" appear to be the most popular.

Acidity

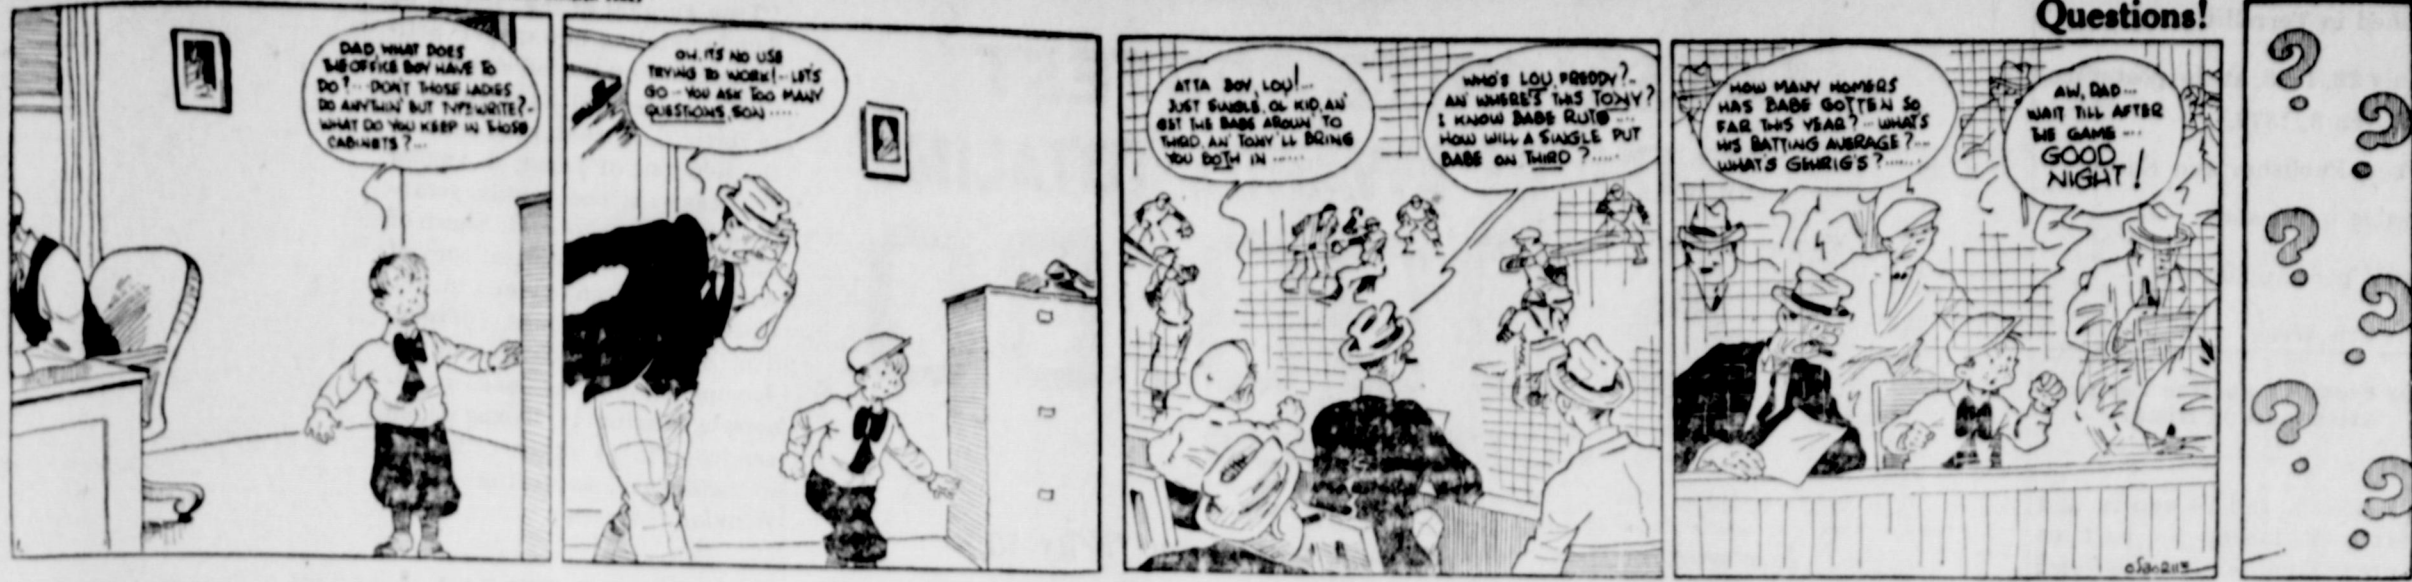

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is expelled; all sourness is removed; the whole system is sweetened, and member it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take. Any drug store has the genuine, prescription product.

SAYS SARGON PROVED A TRUE BLESSING TO HER

"Sargon has done more for me in a few weeks than all the other medicines I took put together during the ten years I suffered.

I had awful attacks of nervous indigestion and my stomach was in such a disordered condition I could not eat a good meal. I could not even drink a glass of buttermilk without suffering. In fact, for the ten days before I started Sargon I had not swallowed one mouthful of solid food; I had lived on orange juice. I had sharp pains in my stomach and was so weak I had to give up and go to bed. My nerves just went all to pieces and I never got a good night's rest.

"Sargon has surely proved a blessing to me. I can now eat most anything I want without bad after effects. My nerves are normal, I sleep fine and never have to use a laxative any more like I did before I started taking the Sargon Soft Mass Pills.

Boy Scout Camp Has Largest Attendance in History

230 scouts and 74 adults and children registered as part of the great camp family this year; many of them contributed great deal to our camp program and moral, if in no other way by just being present.

The camp was under the leadership of V. A. Brown of Rock-springs, assisted by president E. K. Fawcett of Del Rio and scout executive H. B. Palmer, camp director.

Many prominent men of the Area and from other councils were a part of the camp personnel. Rev. Chas. Nixon, Rev. F. H. Stallknecht, and S. A. Worley of the Central Power and Light Co., of Del Rio, contributed much to the camp, as did Chaplain John McWilliams of Fort Clark; Hons Richard of Sabinal; Mabry Ogle of Sanderson; Prof. Patterson of Carrizo Springs, Phil Jagge and Rev. Nelson of Hondo, and a number of others that are too numerous to mention.

Those from out of our Council whom we owe our thanks to are K. N. Clapp and 4 Eagle scouts from Lubbock; Eagle Scout Manire and his brother from Slaton; Chief White Boy Lehman of Loyal Valley; L. C. Picot of San Antonio; G. W. Simpson, scout executive for the Missouri Pacific lines, Houston; L. S. Harkey, field executive of San Antonio; Scout executive Jack Brunberg and 8 fine men of the Pecan Valley Area Council of Brownwood, passed many tests for our boys, and are regular guys. An average of 575 visitors came to camp for our evening camp fire programs and life saving demonstrations.

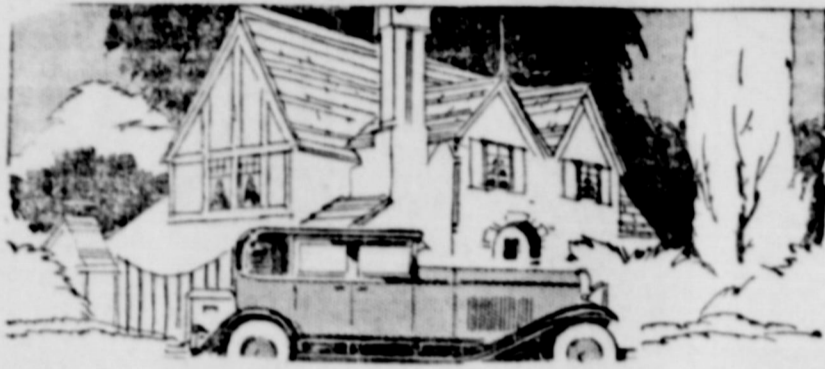

Our last day in Camp was featured by the landing of Captain Robt. C. Murphy and his pilot, Lieutenant Fowler, on the Boy Scout landing field at about 5 p. m. They remained for the night as our guests. Captain Murphy told the scouts who stayed over, many interesting things about aviation. A scout guard of honor was placed about the big Douglas ship during the stay. The scouts met around the ship Friday evening to hear a dedication talk by Captain Murphy. On leaving he dropped two messages of greetings from the air to all scouts in the Area.

BOUILLING jacket suits of handsome black or colorful velvets and other weaves, many lavishly furled, is the message which fashion is flashing across its sky.

ENTERTAINMENT

Peter Gnome invited the Brownies, Elves, Fairies, old Mr. Giant, Witty Witch, and the members of the Bogey family to his entertainment.

It was a splendid entertainment with animal acts (the Gnomes dressed as animals), marvelous tricks, and much turning of somersaults!

A parade was the beginning of it all and Peter Gnome led the parade, carrying a basket filled with goodies in one hand and a clock in the other.

"What's the reason for the clock?" asked Witty Witch.

"Just as soon as the clock's hands are at the same place—that is when they shake hands or nod to each other, or whatever you want to call it, we start the performance."

"That will mean that when the clock says twelve we will begin."

They all saw that the clock was now five minutes of twelve, and at twelve promptly Peter Gnome threw the clock up in the air.

It didn't mind for it was a special clock made for Gnomes and Fairies.

The clock landed on the branch of a tree and it struck twelve times in a very cheery little voice, for it was looking at the performance.

Of course, as the clock has a face, they said it could see!

Now of all the performers the Bogey family were quite the most wonderful.

"We've never seen them before," said some of the guests.

"They're distant cousins of ours," said Peter Gnome, "and they used to live far away."

"They used to feel so badly because in the old days people used to say: 'The Bogey man will get you if you're not good.' And the Bogey family felt terribly about this so they tried to hide all they could."

"They wouldn't hurt a child—bad or good—for anything in the world."

"It seemed very unfair to them to have such a thing get around about them when it wasn't true at all."

"It was just a lot of mean gossip. They love children just as we do and wouldn't hurt them for anything."

Oh, such interesting tricks as were performed, and how happy the Bogey family were that the truth was known about them at last.

It was as fine an entertainment as had taken place in a long time and everyone was pleased with Peter Gnome for having planned it.

Of course Peter Gnome was delighted that they all liked it so much and they all took part in it sooner or later.

Then when they were having their most delicious supper of moss ice cream and fern cookies Witty Witch told stories around an old fire which Mr. Giant made.

It was a beautiful, beautiful time enjoyed by every one of them!

And Peter Gnome received the vote of thanks from everyone.

FLOCK HISTORY IS GUIDE IN CULLING

Always Better to Improve Production by Care.

"In culling poultry the history of the flock should be the first important consideration," say the extension specialists in poultry husbandry at the Ohio State university.

"If the flock as a whole has been laying heavily throughout the entire year, culling should be comparatively easy, as the good birds will show evidence of high production, while the few poor birds will be outstanding, showing very definite evidences of low production or none."

"If the flock has laid indifferently throughout the year, or has suffered from parasites such as red mites, lice, or intestinal worms, or is improperly housed or cared for, the culling will be very difficult, for many of the birds that are really worth keeping will be questionable, due to their condition."

Under such circumstances the first step should be to correct conditions, and allow the good birds to come back and show their value, which will cause the poor birds to be more easily recognized.

"It is always better to improve average production by better management rather than by culling, which decreases the number of birds and cuts down the possible earning power of the flock."

Get Rid of Parasites on Chickens in Flock

The hens have enough to bother with in the summer with the hot weather without having to fight lice and mites in addition.

There are various remedies on the market which can be used, or a drug known as sodium fluoride can be bought at the drug store and can be put on the hens, applying it on the back, head, throat, on the breast, around the vent, between each thigh and the breast and on each wing. This is a rather tedious process, although it will get all the lice.

Within the last year and a half, however, it has been found that painting Black Leaf 40 on the perches will rid a flock of lice. This is easy and effective.

Mites are a worse pest than lice, since these little bugs stay in the cracks and crevices around the nests, droppings boards and perches during the day and get on the birds at night, at which time they suck the hen's blood. These can best be fought by using a strong disinfectant on the nests, roosts and droppings boards.

If these pests—lice and mites—are allowed to remain on the birds, they will sap the chicken's vitality and will hinder egg production considerably.

Ducks and Geese Are Fed Pretty Much Alike

Ducks and geese are fed just about alike. They should be kept warm and dry and fed about four or five times per day.

Raising good chicks is about the most important thing on a poultry farm. That to a large extent determines your profits.

Turkeys on Upgrade

Turkey raising is on the upgrade, now that the blackhead bugaboo has been done away with.

Scratching Shed

In some of the warmer sections of the country, fowls will prefer to spend their nights in the trees and on outdoor roosts but severe storms, driving snows or heavy rains will in most instances, send them into the houses.

JACKET SUITS AND DAYTIME FROCKS FOR AUTUMN WEAR

BEWILDLING jacket suits of handsome black or colorful velvets and other weaves, many lavishly furled, is the message which fashion is flashing across its sky. There is a very important postscript to this foreword, which has to do with that intriguing theme of themes—the blouse.

One really cannot expatiate on the glories of the autumn street costumes without paying enthusiastic tribute to the blouse, which is such an all-important factor in their design. In the creation of the blouse, color and fabric play a brilliant duet. At this moment the blouse which is wrestling the honors from among more elaborate types, is the one fashioned of lustrous quality-kin crepe satin, with color its "big idea." A blouse in tangerine or pumpkin satin, or worked out in two shades of blue, or of green, completes the color scheme of many a tweed ensemble, for two-tone effects are the call of the hour.

The blouse which is receiving a majority vote to wear with the midseason suit, is the one made of crepe satin in that most delectable new eggshell tint. Of such is the model shown here. The first detail to attract attention is the artistic bowfastening which ties at the left hip-line.

A survey of blouse fashions gives the feeling that stylists are making blouse hemlines a matter of particular concern. Instead of finishing off in a straight-around prosaic way, they either tie in a draped effect like the model pictured or they show a bordering of scallopes or embroidery, or which is frequently the case they are drawn in with tucks or shirtings or belted effects so as to accent the fitted hip-line.

However, hiplines are no more important in the process of blouse styling than are necklines. In the matter of neckline designing, genius is prolines, for the street frock to be cut in a princess, treats the vogue from a new angle.

A glance at the daytime frock of black satin in the picture below carries the conviction of a novel departure from the usual order of things. It suggests not only the new princess lines, but its hemline ripples in latest approved fashion. The scalloped effect outlining the hem adds to the charm of this model.

It is also interesting to note that while princess frocks are "coming in" this in no wise means that full hemlines are "going out." On the contrary, flares below the knee are a most important feature in the field of current dress design.

While many flares are circular cut, the newest flares are accomplished by setting in as few or as many godets or gussets as the designer may care to employ. Both dresses and coats are yielding to the influence of semi-fitted lines which slenderize the upper portion, until somewhere about the knees, or below where the flare begins either mildly or for extreme types in a series of flares and flares and never cease flaring.

In some instances two rows of circular or plaited ruffles achieve the coveted flare. In sympathy with the movement, even sleeves are beginning to flare. If the skirt shows a jagged full-flaring hemline, then a similar flare is repeated on the sleeves, ceeding at the rate of a thrill with every blouse. Now that the backless back has received such enthusiastic endorsement, for the blouse it reveals a new road to style prestige. All sorts of cunning contrivances are being devised to add zest to the vogue for these suntan necklines, such as rows of tiny bows, strappings arranged in crisscross, ribbons laced through eyelets, not to forget streamers, scarfs and caplike collars.

In the matter of "lines" styles are changing. The fashion-alert woman will immediately sense in the new fall frocks, the long, also, for that matter, a trend to flares and to princess and molded silhouettes.

While it is true that evening modes for some time have favored princess beginning just below the elbow. Likewise if circular ruffles give fullness to the skirt, they are apt to be employed on the sleeves.

Then, too, if the frock happens to be styled with a blouse or hipline jacket, not infrequently it is finished off with a peplum whose flare takes on the character of the flares finishing both hemlines and the sleeves.

Godets of lace set into the hemline to give it fullness appear on many of the dressier frocks, especially those of sheer fabrics.

The new women's far coats also are showing a disposition to flare, and be semifitting for the upper portion. Flares of fur are also attached to cloth coat tops. JULIA BOTTOMLEY. (© 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

The hens have enough to bother with in the summer with the hot weather without having to fight lice and mites in addition. The flock owner can do a great deal to help the hens get rid of these pests.

There are various remedies on the market which can be used, or a drug known as sodium fluoride can be put on the hens, applying it on the back, head, throat, on the breast, around the vent, between each thigh and the breast and on each wing. This is a rather tedious process, although it will get all the lice.

Within the last year and a half, however, it has been found that painting Black Leaf 40 on the perches will rid a flock of lice. This is easy and effective.

Mites are a worse pest than lice, since these little bugs stay in the cracks and crevices around the nests, droppings boards and perches during the day and get on the birds at night, at which time they suck the hen's blood. These can best be fought by using a strong disinfectant on the nests, roosts and droppings boards.

If these pests—lice and mites—are allowed to remain on the birds, they will sap the chicken's vitality and will hinder egg production considerably.

Ducks and Geese Are Fed Pretty Much Alike

Ducks and geese are fed just about alike. They should be kept warm and dry and fed about four or five times per day. All young water fowl should have soft feeds, that is to say, wet mash mixed as follows: Three parts yellow corn meal, four parts bran, one part red dog or low-grade flour by weight. Add to this 10 per cent of high-grade meat scraps, 1 per cent of the sand, and mix with water or milk so that it is quite moist but not sloppy. Feed this every two or three hours for two weeks.

Care for Chicks

Raising good chicks is about the most important thing on a poultry farm. That to a large extent determines your profits. If you neglect the chicks by crowding them too closely, by letting the house become filthy and the soil in bad shape, you may produce weak chicks that do not live well and lay well. It is comparatively easy to grow good chicks if you are willing to do the necessary work of properly caring for the chicks.

Turkeys on Upgrade

Turkey raising is on the upgrade, now that the blackhead bugbunny has been done away with. And the turkey growers are getting the marketing system down to a fine point, too. Six turkey marketing associations have just been formed in various parts of Colorado, and the next thing will be a statewide pool. Profits received by members of turkey marketing pools in the West last year were very pleasing—that's why new pools are being formed to handle this year's crop.

Scratching Shed

In some of the warmer sections of the country, fowls will prefer to spend their nights in the trees and on outdoor roosts but severe storms, driving snows or heavy rains will in most instances, send them into the houses. It is the storm more than the cold that the hen objects to, and for this reason, if in other, a scratching shed where the fowls are sheltered from the wind, should be provided where the layers can sing and keep busy during the entire day.

MOTHER!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup." A teaspoonful never fails to clean the liver and bowels. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

We are pleased to announce to our subscribers that we now have our electrical press in operation which we recently purchased. Our entire paper was run on this press this week.

Sooner possible we will increase our paper, printing here the inside of our paper as well as the outside, thus giving our readers more for their money.

We have gone and will go to less more expense to give our community a first-class weekly which they should have and will have. We ask your co-operation in every way for without it a first-class paper cannot be had.

Several new features are to be added to our paper real soon, thus making it interesting for our readers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robertson visited relatives and friends in San Antonio this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Wilson of El Paso visited Mrs. Wilson's aunt, Mrs. Lucila Lamore here this week.

Miss I. H. Elder of Kerrville is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Nation.

AS IT LOOKS TO ME

By Jack Ainslie

TEXAS

A friend has requested me to say something in this column about Texas—a huge assignment for so limited a space. It is also an assignment to which a far more facile pen than mine must needs fail to do justice.

But I must not, cannot, will not fail to say a word for my adopted state—my dear old Texas.

Like every other country and clime under heaven, Texas harbors within her borders a few slanders, scamps, scaldwags, and hinders—just a few, very few. But place a cross-section of her citizenship under the microscope of everyday scrutiny and it will show an unusually high percentage of gold and very little dross.

Texas is vast in size but vaster still in the caliber of her men and women. Texas is not always right in her moral judgments, but she is far more frequently right than wrong—and when she is wrong she is big enough to realize her position. Texas is not the biggest state in point of population, but she is by far the biggest state from the standpoint of real sociality and true democracy.

In climate, Texas is as varied as the world in wealth, as rich as Gomorrah in vision, as keen-eyed as the eagle in self-reliance, as independent as necessity; it conjures, as unconquerable as the Alamo in history, more glorious and fascinating than Babylon in fame, as far flung as the outposts of civilization—and in future, luminous with promise.

Texas is a state that is misunderstood by the ill-informed, ridiculed by mis-empoos and fourth-rate scribes, and about by her enemies, caricatured by the cynical, lamped by her inferiors. Populated by pioneers, coveted by the Democrats, dearly loved by her native sons, and abundantly favored by the Almighty.

As it looks to me, anyone wishing to make his home in a near ideal state, and who is not quite ready to go to paradise, ought to move to Texas.

And be it hereby known that these lines are written by one who has acted upon his own suggestion!

Don't throw that old suit away, we will make it last for many a day. The Model Tailors; M. P. Lester.

The Presbyterian Church.

Snobbery, wherever and whenever practiced, is the product of "small" thinking. No really great person will willfully snub anyone. This same principle holds in the matter of our religious habits. Sunday morning's sermon will bear upon this fact. The subject of the sermon will be, "Snubbing God." Our morning worship begins at 11 a. m. And you are invited.

The evening sermon will have as its subject, "Mirages." Very common to the desert are mirages. They are no less common to the experiences of life. That is why we make them the subject of a sermon. We think these sermons will be both interesting and helpful—and solicit your presence. The evening worship hour is 8:15.

And while we are on this subject, we extend you an invitation to the Sunday school. It meets at 10 a. m.
