All About Strange Man
He Cures and Kills
$500,000,000 Too Much
Aiming at Ford

Man is a strange animal. David Bernstein, Brooklyn tailor, deliberately killed a man against whom he held no grudge, pushing him off an elevated railroad platform in Brooklyn. No one saw him. He confessed to the police. Insane, probably.

The lawmaking machinery of New York decided to kill Frank Pina in the electric chair. Acute appendicitis threatened the electric chair program.

A good surgeon, hired at public expense, restored Pina to the death house. "Out of kindness" he is allowed to play cards with his partner in crime, Michael Sciafoni, a wall separating them.

Strange uses of science, killing men by electricity, saving their lives by surgery that the electricity may kill them, treating them kindly while waiting for the chair.

A cat does no worse with its mouse than a man with his neighbor.

Earth's 1,500,000,000 people are not QUITE CIVILIZED YET.

Further details concerning the massacre of 3,000 Mohammedans by Chinese in Kansu province show that the human race has still some distance to travel.

Of late Mohammedans had been murdering Chinese. Then came famine, most desperate, among the Mohammedans, who were invited by Chinese officials to come to Taichow for a conference, with promises of roasted barley.

When they came, men from fifteen to fifty were separated from the women, taken outside the walls and 3,000 of them butchered like sheep. When they saw that they were to be killed the Mohammedans asked no mercy.

After the famine the Mohammedans will doubtless murder ten or twenty Chinese for each Mohammedan killed in the massacre.

So it goes among human beings, most cruel and blood-thirsty of all animals.

The senate approves, 46 to 31, the amendments to the tariff bill forbidding "Americans with factories abroad to send foreign-made articles into this country under an American trademark."

Formerly goods manufactured abroad and entered with an American trade-mark could be brought in with the consent of the trademark owner.

The idea is said to be aimed at Henry Ford's tractor factory in Ireland, according to Senator Reed, and that is "a movement to transfer American-owned factories abroad to lower labor costs."

Henry Ford may easily manufacture his tractors in America. He did that before, until he needed the Dearborn tractor factory for his new car.

For the information of the tractor industry, it may be mentioned that Henry Ford before long will produce a new kind of tractor, made here in America.

Senator Borah says that President Hoover "must go through to the end and assume responsibility for the tariff." That new view of the President's duty interests Mr. Hoover and the people.

The old idea was that congress should write the laws, the President approve or veto them, the Supreme court interpret them.

Mr. Mussolini would agree with Senator Borah's suggestion.

French scientists at La Rochelle say the sunfish is, intellectually, the most stupid of all animals. Its eye is five inches in diameter, its brain measures only two-thirds of an inch in diameter. And the fish weighs 902 pounds.

A full brother of that sunfish is the American pacifist, who believes that this country can make itself safe and help the cause of peace by remaining unarmed.

Ask the fat sunfish what happens when a thin, hungry shark comes along. This country is a very fat goldfish.

OWNER OF PRINCESS BUILDING HERE HAS ACHIEVED SUCCESS

With the formal opening of Sanderson's new theater—the Princess—tonight, the citizens of our city and county have every reason to be proud of its owner, A. D. Brown. During the period of years that Mr. Brown has made Terrell County and Sanderson his home he has made a success. He is associated with Robt. W. Prosser in the ranch business and they have one of the best as well as the largest ranches in this county. Mr. Brown is also part owner of the Sanderson Mercantile. He is a man of keen business judgment, fair in his dealings with his fellowmen, a believer in the future of the city in which he lives.

200 Bands at State Fair.

More than 200 bands will be entered in the Statewide Band Contest to be held at the State Fair of Texas, October 12 to 27, under the auspices of the Texas State Band Teachers Association, according to Earl D. Irons of Arlington, who is chairman of the contest committee. A total of $10,000 in cash prizes is being offered the winners of the contest. A massed band concert will be played on the grounds each afternoon during the 16 day exposition.

HANDLESS WOMAN LOOPS HER PLANE

Stubs Serve as Arms, But She's Expert Pilot.

Los Angeles.—With stubs only six inches long to serve as arms, Miss Josephine Callaghan, twenty-two-year-old wealthy rancher and sportswoman, recently graduated from the "stunt class" at Dyer airport when she piloted her plane alone through all the maneuvers required in the post-graduate division.

Miss Callaghan bought a Lincoln Page biplane when she was allowed to solo after 50 hours of instruction from Charles F. Dyer, chief pilot for the Dyer School of Commercial Aeronautics.

Instead of the regulation short control stick, Miss Callaghan had the plane equipped with a stick extending shoulder-high. At the top of the stick is a padded forked rod, and in his Miss Callaghan inserts one of her shortened arms.

Because of her height Miss Callaghan also had the pilot's seat raised so that she can see out and had the foot rudder bar moved up and back. Switches and throttle control also have been placed so that she can work them with her fingerless members.

Just before she zoomed her ship through a series of loops, wing overs and spins Dyer took her aloft for her last instructions.

"She tried two loops," Dyer said, "and slipped out of both of them. That often unnerves the average pilot, but Miss Callaghan just nosed the ship over for the third time, gave it the gun and made a perfect loop. She is better than many of the men students I have instructed, having a high degree of persistence, nerve and ability to follow instructions."

"Nothing like it," Miss Callaghan declared. "Why, I can pilot that plane easier than I can drive an automobile and look at the time I save. Also it's the greatest thrill in the world, and I ought to know, because I've been riding my jumpers in horse shows for several years and driven all makes of automobiles."

Miss Callaghan keeps a stable of blue-ribbon winners on her estate at Encino and takes them East each season for competition in shows.

Thoughts lead on to purposes; purposes go forth to actions; actions form habits; habits form character, and character fixes our destiny.—Edwards.

LOCAL CONTRACTOR BUILDS NEW PRINCESS

To C. M. Breeding, local contractor, must go a great portion of credit for the beautiful and substantial building—the new and better Princess Theater, home of theatrical productions extraordinary. This new show place is a credit for Sanderson and Terrell County. It was planned and built for the future. Theater architecture, however, is by no means the only field in which Mr. Breeding is experienced or proficient. The new home of the Kerr Mercantile Co., the new office of Mr. Joe Kerr, as well as several other business buildings of every kind and description as well as residences, have also been erected by Mr. Breeding. At this time he is building the Masonic Temple in this city, which, when completed, will be one of the finest in the west.

INTERIOR DECORATIONS OF THEATER BEAUTIFUL

The interior decorating work on the Princess, which is a work of beauty, was done by John Tyler, a successful young decorator of this city. Mr. Tyler went to Detroit over a year ago and while there studied and worked under some of the best interior decorators and learned his profession. The walls which are of texture plaster highlighted in colors is a work of beauty. Mr. Tyler has shown his art in finishing the interior and has certainly made a success of his profession. He was assisted in the work by Austin Nance.

LATEST ELECTRIC SIGN FOR PRINCESS

The Neon Electric Sign Company of San Antonio installed one of their newest and latest electric signs for the Princess. The sign is blue light effect with the name Princess carried out in red. It is a very pretty sign and advertises the theater well.

This sign company has recently installed electric signs for the Loma Alta Service Station, Loma Alta Tourist Camp and for the cafe.

Mrs. Kathryn Harrell and Miss Louise White were weekend visitors in El Paso where they attended the rodeo.

SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS WOMAN IS MRS. WHITE

The new and better Princess Theater has come to the front as one of the best and most modern theaters through the untiring efforts of Mrs. Elouise White. Mrs. White has been owner of the Princess for the past several years and by her keen business judgment and her desires to give our citizens good clean shows she has built up a good movie theater. Ever alert to her public to please them in every way she is ever on the job to get the latest and best pictures.

The movie public is glad indeed of the fact that here they can see the best and latest pictures and congratulate Mrs. White on giving them the chance to see such good pictures.

Theater Well Lighted.

To O. H. McAdams goes the success for the well lighting effect of the new and better Princess Theater. Mr. McAdams has done all of the wiring for the theater and has ably and artistically placed the lights to give them the desired effects.

Mr. McAdams is an expert electrician and has successfully as well as artistically lighted several business as well as residences in this city.

GIVES EX-HUBBY RECOMMENDATION

Prospective Father-in-Law Gets Facts.

San Francisco.—Here's something just a little different—the testimonial of a divorced wife for her former husband, asked for and received by the father of the girl he intends to marry!

By a singular series of circumstances two remarkable letters came into the possession of the San Francisco Chronicle. They are the request of the father for a "character" for the man who intends to marry his daughter, and the answer of the divorced wife.

Here are the two letters, with nothing changed but the names of the principals:

"Mrs. Marion Brower, San Francisco:—Dear Madam: Please pardon this very personal letter as I am writing to ask a few questions about your former husband, Kenneth Brower. I will state as an excuse that he hopes to marry my daughter. I would like to have you tell the following things regarding him: Is he a real, clean, high-minded gentleman, as he appears, or one who puts up that front to the public and is a domestic tyrant?"

"Is he a man who is a good provider or is he one who spends what he makes on himself and lets his family merely exist? I am thinking only of my daughter's future happiness as I ask these things, so you can do me a great favor by giving me the facts, and if you think of anything more that I ought to know, please tell me."

And here is the ex-wife's answer: "Mr. C. K. Robinson, Savannah, Ga.—Dear Mr. Robinson: It's rather an odd situation, being asked for a recommendation for one's former husband. However, I quite understand your interest in and care of your daughter's happiness. It also gives me great pleasure that I am able to reassure you about Kenneth's character.

"He is a very fine chap and should make some girl very happy if they have tastes in common. He has always held a reasonably remunerative job as far as I know, and I never lacked anything as far as our finances were concerned. Our reasons for separating were based merely on incompatibility of temperament.

"We were very young—eighteen and twenty—when we were married and did not know exactly what it was all about. Trusting that this information will sufficiently allay any doubts that you may have about Kenneth's eligibility, I am, very sincerely yours, Marion Brower."

The New Princess Opens Doors to Public Tonight

Arrangements Made to Entertain Big Crowd With Fine Program

Sanderson's newest and up-to-date theater will open its doors tonight at 7 p. m. and will run a continuous show until 11 p. m. An elaborate program has been prepared and one of the very latest pictures to be shown on the screen will be offered the theater going public. The builders and promoters of this splendid structure are happy to extend to the public a hearty welcome to attend the opening of the new show house. The new theater will open with a recent screen success featuring one of the foremost and popular stars—Joan Crawford—in "Our Modern Maidens."

The building, which is modern in every respect, is of concrete and tile. The interior is of plaster and has a blending of colors that give it a touch of beauty. Modern facilities to insure comfort and safeguard health are installed throughout. No detail has been left undone to give the theater patrons a colossal and beautiful show house.

STATE FAIR WILL RADIO PROGRAM

Dallas, Tex., —A musical program by one of the best orchestras in the State will be broadcast each Saturday night by the State Fair of Texas over Station WFAA, it has been announced here by T. E. Jackson, president of the state exposition. The State Fair program will be directed by Bob Bool, station director, and will consist of musical features which will be a part of the 1929 State Fair of Texas. The programs will continue until fair time.

STAR WEARS ULTRA MODERN MODES.

Ultra-modern modes, specially designed for her, marked Joan Crawford's first starring role at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, when she emerged as a star in her own right in "Our Modern Maidens," which will be the opening picture at the new Princess when it opens tonight.

One of her costumes, designed by the famous Adrian, was a coat of white broadcloth, luxuriously trimmed around the collar, elbow cuffs and hemline with red fox fur. Black velvet sleeves extend from the dress and form the cuffs. A close fitting hat of black and white completes the costume.

The new picture is an epic of the jazz age directed by Jack Conway. Miss Crawford plays an ultra-modern girl who dallies with the pastimes of today, but in the end finds happiness in the old rules of right and wrong.

Herman Halsel attended the rodeo which was held in El Paso the latter part of last week.

Notice of Reward Offered.

A reward of $250 is hereby offered for information leading to the arrest, conviction and sentencing of any person found stealing sheep or goats from the ranch properties of the undersigned. A suspended sentence of a court will not entitle any informant of the benefits of this reward.

PROSSER & BROWN, Sanderson, Texas.

MARINE CORPS OFFERS SPLENDID TRAINING

Houston, Tex., Sept. 26.—Uncle Sam does more for his marines than showing them around the world while they in turn are defending his interests. If he wants to improve himself in any of the arts, trades or sciences the United States Marine Corps Institute is available to him. He may select his own course in fifty or more branches, in the mechanical lines, agriculture, the arts, architecture, salesmanship, foreign trade and others.

According to Arthur B. Pfeffer, sergeant in charge of the Houston station, hundreds of successful graduates owe their success in civilian occupations to their marine corps training. September 1 there were enrolled 5,480 men and since the establishment of the institute 4,253 diplomas have been awarded. In August alone 27 were graduated, ranging from captain to private.

Honorably discharged marines who have graduated are in demand all over the country as is evidenced by a circular just issued by the institute giving the names of business firms who desire to discuss with marine graduates employment in the lines of their choice. To this end the Institute issues a card of introduction to every marine who has received his diploma which brings him into immediate contact with his possible employer. Thus the ambitious marine is fitted to face the world upon the expiration of his enlistment, trained to specialize in the vocation of his selection and all at the expense of Uncle Sam.

MANY STARS IN STATE FAIR RODEO

Dallas, Tex., —Many stars are signing contracts to appear in the State Fair Rodeo to be held in the new Livestock Coliseum, Oct. 12 to 20, it has been announced here by W. T. Johnson, millionaire cattleman of San Antonio who will produce the cowboy contests.

Such stars as Tommie and Bee Kirnan, Fox Hastings, Mike Hastings, Mabel Strickland, Tad and Buck Lucas, Bennie McCarroll, the Blatherwicke Twins, Florence Randolph and many other luminaries of the rodeo world have already signed contracts to appear at the State Fair Rodeo.

Practically all performers appearing in the State Fair Rodeo will go from Texas to New York City where they will vie further for honors in the 5th annual World Series Rodeo at Madison Square Garden. Mr. Johnson has signed a contract to take all animals from the State Fair to the New York rodeo.

Chickens, native to practically every country in the world where there are chickens will be seen in the State Fair of Texas Poultry Show, according to Walter Burton, superintendent of the poultry department. More space has been added to the poultry building and a banner show is in prospect.

Kaleidoscopic settings and the whirl of the age of jazz-youth and its buoyant foibles, tinsel and glitter—and under it all the mighty undercurrent of the laws of life which no fashion, mode or cult can change—these are the dominating elements in "Our Modern Maidens," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's epic of the jazz age, which will be featured at the Princess theater as its opening picture tonight, Friday, October 4.

No better vehicle could have been found for Joan Crawford's debut as a full-fledged star of the screen than this mighty drama.

Though it echoes the spirit of youth—through its gay settings and gorgeous details are replete with the spirit of modern youngsters seeking fun and pleasure—there is a far deeper and more dramatic note in the play. Its drama rests on the immutable laws of life—which none can defy and "get away with it."

Miss Crawford plays a modern girl, raised in luxury and the spirit of jazz, who, like many another modern girl gets the idea that one can bargain with the devil and cheat him out of his due. She is engaged—a marriage of convenience, and tries to bargain for her fiance's success with a political power—for she wants a successful husband.

And then real love enters the lists, and a tremendous situation is precipitated.

It is all staged with gorgeous settings and lavish spectacle. The great wedding scene, the party in the huge futuristic mansion of the automobile manufacturing millionaire, and the rest of the elaborate detail intensify the huge thought underlying it. Josephine Lovett, who wrote "Our Dancing Daughters," has given the screen, without a doubt, her greatest story in this play.

Jack Conway directed the picture with a deft touch, maintaining a fine balance between the gay modernistic spirit and the deeper note of the drama, and the cast is more than excellent.

Rod La Rocque, as the politician, a man arisen from the masses by his own power and ruthlessness, is a striking figure, and plays the role with a direct convincingness that makes it a powerful factor in the story. Douglas Fairbanks Jr., as the young fiance of the heroine, a boy out of college and embarking on a diplomatic career, gives a finely restrained performance. Incidentally it is the first time he and Miss Crawford, whose marriage was recently announced in the screen colony, have ever played together, and it is interesting that it comes in her first picture as a star.

Albert Gran, as the automobile manufacturing father, Josephine Dunn, Anita Page, Eddie Nugent and the rest of the cast were ideally chosen for their roles, and Cedric Gibbons, who created the settings, surpassed by far even his triumph as a modernist in "Our Dancing Daughters."

In the great wedding scenes, with hundreds of people and a complete church ceremony staged in fantastic and bizarre modernistic settings, the underlying note of drama begins to approach the dramatic climax of the story. Miss Crawford's emotional scenes with La Rocque, and the clever work of Anita Page and young Fairbanks in another angle of the story are superb pieces of acting that must be seen to be appreciated.

Besides teaching a mighty lesson, and giving a perfect cross section of the so-called jazz age, the picture is a perfect piece of entertainment. Never once was the entertainment factor forgotten in the handling of the play. There is much healthy comedy interspersed in the spectacle and drama and the heart interest portions of the play are perfectly worked out.

HERE'S REAL OPPORTUNITY FOR SANDERSON WOMEN

$1,250 Offered for Best Jar of Canned Food in National Canning Contest.

Just how good at canning are Sanderson women and girls?

This question suggested itself today from an announcement in Chicago of a National Canning Contest to find the best jar of canned fruit, vegetables or meat in the country. Twelve hundred and fifty dollars ($1,250) in cash awaits the woman or girl in the United States whose entry is selected as the best jar of canned food entered in the contest.

The contest, which is sponsored by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, seeks to acquaint more housewives with the economy and healthfulness of home canned foods. For years the U. S. Department of Agriculture and home demonstration agent: throughout the country have worked for increased production of native canned foods. It is to further this excellent idea and at the same time to help absorb the threatened surplus of farm products in many sections, that this canning project was conceived.

Two hundred and twenty-two cash prizes, totaling $5,825, will be disbursed to the winners in the contest, which has three major divisions: fruit, vegetables and meat. The best entry in each division will be awarded $250, and one of these will also receive the thousand dollar sweepstakes prize, thus bringing the total cash prize for the best jar of canned food in the contest to $1,250. Second prize in each of the three divisions will be $200, third prize $100, and fourth prize, $50. There will also be five prizes of $25 each, ten prizes of $10 each and fifty prizes of $5 each. In addition, a thousand dollars in cash will be awarded to the home demonstration agent whose county sends in the greatest number of entries, $500 to the agent whose county has the next largest number, and $100 to the agent whose county sends in the third largest number of entries. A number of lesser merchandise prizes are also offered.

Contest Closes October 15.

According to the rules, the contest is open to every woman and girl in the United States. There are no restrictions as to the nature of the food sent; any fruit, vegetable or meat, whether home grown or purchased, is acceptable. Contestants may enter one, two or all three divisions. Entries, regardless of when canned, must not be sent in prior to August 15 nor later than October 1, which is the closing date of the contest. No entries will be returned, but instead these will be sent, with the name and address of the contestant, to an orphanage, hospital, infirmary or other charitable institution to be selected by the Foundation.

Specimens of canned fruits and vegetables in the contest will be judged on the basis of clearness, color, pack, neatness, flavor and texture. Meat specimens will be judged in their relation to pack, neatness, texture and flavor. There will be three judges, to be selected by the Foundation from a list of outstanding authorities on home economics, domestic science, and canned food. Their decision will be made known just as soon as possible after October 1.

Gives Hints on Canning.

"Any method of canning may be used for this contest," announces Anne Williams, director of the contest. "The use of a steam pressure cooker, however, is highly recommended by canning experts and by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, especially in canning meats. Not only does this method of canning save time and fuel and assure absolutely, sterility and preservation, but food canned under pressure retains all its natural flavor and texture, which are vital points in any canning contest."

That the judging may be thoroughly impartial and the display of canned samples absolutely uniform, contestants are required to submit their entries in standard glass jars of the quart size. All contestants will be furnished with one Ball Mason jar and carton for sending in a canned article, but those making entries in more than one division are expected to supply their own jars and shipping cartons. The sample jar and prize entry labels for use in submit-

CHRISTMAS SEALS BEING DISTRIBUTED

Over 500 miles of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals are being distributed throughout Texas by the Texas Public Health Association in preparation for their annual seal sale which starts Thanksgiving Day. Approximately 100 chairmen are being appointed.

Each seal is seven-eighths of an inch wide and one inch long and 32,000,000 have been allotted to Texas. If placed end to end they would reach from Houston, through Austin, Dallas and Denison. The seal this year has a background of blue on which is shown a bellringer tugging at a bell, the double-barred cross in red and the words, "Health Greetings 1929," complete the design.

For the past 15 years the Texas Public Health Association, a volunteer health organization, through its affiliated local agencies, has sold Tuberculosis Christmas Seals and with the funds thus obtained, has carried on a State-wide campaign against tuberculosis and other preventable diseases.

The work consists of teaching health habits to school children, physical examination, lectures to all ages and races, literature, exhibits, clinics and tuberculosis surveys. Ninety-five per cent of the total amount of money raised has been used in Texas, and has been a great help to the official agencies engaged in promoting public health.

Statue of Savior to Guard Rio de Janeiro

Rio De Janeiro.—A great statue of Christ, to watch over Rio de Janeiro from a 2,300-foot hill commanding the harbor and city, is being built on Corcovado (Hunchback) peak, and will be finished in two years.

This 125-foot figure, which with its pedestal will reach 150 feet above the famous Hunchback, will vie with New York's Statue of Liberty in prominence and will surpass greatly in size the Christ of the Andes, which stands at the border of Chile and Argentina as a symbol of perpetual peace between those nations.

A fund of $720,000, which the statue will cost, is being collected by the Catholic Center of this city. Work was begun two years ago. Thirty workmen are putting up the ironwork for the reinforced concrete pedestal and body over which will be placed a surface of blue-green tiles. The Christ's outstretched arms will cover 125 feet of width, and can be seen for many miles both on land and sea.

Paul Landowski, a Russian sculptor, designed the monument, and Silvio Costa is the architect. It bears the words, "Christ conquered, reigna rules," in Latin.

Cat Brings Rat Home for Kitten's Playmate

Asbury Park, N. J.—Employees of a Main street grocery store were treated to the unusual spectacle of a rat playing about with Mollie, a local cat, and her four kittens. What made it most unusual is that Mollie is a feline known to be rough on rats, and had just killed two rodents before taking up with this one.

The rat, ungrateful that Mollie had spared his life, tired of his strange playmates and tried to wander away but Mollie picked him up by the scruff of the neck and returned him among her brood. He climbed up on Mollie's back and went to sleep.

Oil Men Turn to Alfalfa in Search for Riches

Coalinga, Calif.—A California oil company, while waiting for development, is planning to add to its income by planting 100 acres of alfalfa on its holdings five miles from here. This reverses the usual condition in an oil region. Ordinarily farmers are looking to oil development to bring them wealth.

This Proves Bridge Is Dangerous Game

Winslow, Neb.—To the casual player, bridge may appear to be a harmless game, but Miss Ella Durham, a teacher living here believes it is a strenuous sport. She is suffering from a dislocated arm—the result of playing bridge.

She was dealt an unusual hand. In expressing her surprise and pleasure, she waved her arms in the air and clapped her hands so vigorously that her right shoulder was dislocated.

School was closed the next day.

CIRCUS WILL SET NEW RUN RECORD

Dallas, Tex., —The longest engagement ever played under canvass by any circus in the world, will play at the State Fair of Texas, October 12 to 27, when the Hagenbeck-Wallace moves on to the "grandstand lot" for a 32 performance engagement. This circus will come to the State Fair with the greatest number of wild animals ever taken on tour by any organization.

One of the big features of the show is the act of Clyde Beatty, 24 year old animal trainer who handles a mixed group of "cats" — lions and tigers. Beatty has an act in which 32 "cats" perform. He worked all last winter putting the lions and tigers through their routines.

The circus will unload in Dallas the night before the fair opens and be on the "lot" before the gates open on October 12.

The State Fair engagement is not only the longest run ever made under canvass by a circus, but is also the greatest number of performances ever played by one show at one place in the entire south. There are but few cities in the entire country which can support a circus for 32 performances.

STATE FAIR PLAY IS IN COSTUME

Dallas, Tex., —"The Red Robe" auditorium attraction at the State Fair of Texas, is a costume affair, displaying the styles, furniture and habits of the period of Louis XIV of France and Cardinal Richelieu. It is said to be one of the most brilliant musical plays ever produced in this country.

Walter Woolf, the leading man of "The Red Robe," who scored such a hit in "Countess Maritza" at the 1927 State Fair, has reached his zenith in this production. Two other stars of "Countess Maritza" will also be in "The Red Robe," Marjorie Peterson and George Dobbs, dancing team who were popular here at the 1927 State Fair.

The new Baker Hotel box office has been opened and mail orders for "The Red Robe" seats are now being sold. The new box office has six windows, and facilities to handle the largest crowds in the shortest possible time. Ticket sales to date have been very gratifying, according to State Fair officials.

Folks, this is your paper and we welcome articles for it. Any news items that you know, won't you please phone it in? Thanks.

Another Biggest Bank Poor Broker—Sold Short Our Disgraces A Fight for John D.

Again "The world's biggest bank" makes its bow, bigger than any thus far.

Charles E. Mitchell, head of New York's National City bank, absorbs the Corn Exchange bank, creating an institution with resources of two thousand five hundred millions of dollars.

This one financial giant will have 100 branch banks in New York. The old-fashioned million has given way to the new "billion."

When will the TRILLION be transferred from books on astronomy to the books of United States bankers?

In Wall street a broker has closed up. His story is sad and brief. HE SOLD SHORT.

And, most strange, he sold bank stocks short.

To "short" a bank stock with banks getting from 10 to 20 per cent for money on call, calls for an investigation in lunacy.

The Prince of Wales buys his first airplane, making his first flight as an owner to see his father at Sandringham. It is a G. H. Gypsy Moth, price only $3,300.

The prince would not buy anything not "pure British." The little Moth makes ninety miles an hour, is painted bright red and blue, and carries a silver plate marked "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales."

We have an assortment of "national disgraces." One, our high percentage of illiteracy; another, the high efficiency of bootleggers, hijackers, or ganized criminals.

Another is the official usury established by the federal reserve as a basis for dealing in American securities.

Our worst disgrace is the fact established by the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons, that this nation has the highest maternity death rate in the civilized world.

Of the thousands of mothers dying every year in childbirth, 65 per cent are killed by septicemia and toxemia, both preventable.

You read that the naval conference will depend largely on what Japan wants and agrees to. The powerful face of the Japanese Premier Hamaguchi, who will do the deciding, tells you that Japan will talk plainly.

If Uncle Sam and Britain cannot agree, Mr. Hamaguchi might be useful as a good excuse.

Why doesn't Uncle Sam decide for himself what he wants in airplanes, cruisers, submarines and everything else? Do we NEED the approval of another country?

Col. R. W. Stewart, formerly head of Standard Oil of Indiana, beaten in a fight with Mr. Rockefeller, has gone to England. Perhaps he goes to join the Shell company in a great British oil merger and anti-Standard oil fight.

Colonel Stewart will visit Sir Henry Deterding, head of British "Shell," the biggest Rockefeller rival in the world's oil trade.

If the British want action and an American representative who knows the oil business, they show intelligence in selecting Colonel Stewart.

It looks like a real oil fight. Betting is wrong, and apart from that it might be unwise to bet against the Rockefeller's. They have never acquired the habit of losing.

News from Jerusalem that will doubtless cause indignation and mass meetings tells of the arrest of 44 Jews of Haifa, held without bail, accused of premeditated murder of Arabs during the recent Arab-Jewish riots.

The President announces the appointment of Harry F. Guggenheim as ambassador to Cuba.

Cubans will welcome Mr. Guggenheim, representing an able and powerful American family well.

Americans will be glad to hear that Mr. Guggenheim's work for aviation in America is conspicuously recognized.

Happy Free State of Ireland! It lacks the blessing of prohibition, but on the other hand it lacks our stupendous crime wave.

Irish military barracks are being changed into dwellings for workers. And Irish prisons are changed to broadcasting stations and other uses.

While this country multiplies its prisons, containing thousands of prisoners, with occasional frightful rebellion, the Irish Free State reports a total prison population of 700.

Britain is disturbed because the nation seems to have reached the "stationary point in population." No wonder—the same animal cannot be a good brood mare and a good cart horse.

MAN WAS TRYING TO FLY BEFORE CHRIST

Experiments With Queer Devices in Ancient Times.

New York.—Although authenticated records show that man first rode the air successfully only 145 years ago, aviation as an idea is at least 2,300 year old.

Indications are that men were experimenting with fantastic devices for the conquest of the air long before the birth of Christ, according to a compilation of ancient chronicles made by the Golden Book.

Although the narrated flight of Archytas of Tarentum in 400 B. C., recorded by Gellius, is regarded largely as a flight of imagination, it is accepted as an indication that even then men were attempting seriously to imitate the birds.

"Many men of eminence among the Greeks, and Favorinus the philosopher," says Gellius, "have in a most positive manner assured us that the model of a dove or pigeon, formed in wood by Archytas, was so contrived as by a certain mechanical art and power to fly, so nicely was it balanced by weights and put in motion by hidden and enclosed air."

Da Vinci's Plan Scientific.

Old's story of the fall of Icarus shows that the ambition was still alive in the First century of the Christian era, as does other mention of man-made wings and ships modeled after birds.

At about the time that Columbus discovered America, Leonardo da Vinci gave his famous and scientifically sound plan for a flying machine. "A bird is an instrument working according to mathematical law, an instrument which it is within the capacity of man to reproduce with all its movements, though not with a corresponding degree of strength, for it is deficient in the power of maintaining equilibrium," he said. "To attain to the true science of the movement of birds in the air, it is necessary to give first the science of the winds."

Unless the movement of the wing is swifter than the movement of the air so pressed, the air will not become condensed and the bird will not support itself."

But even before Leonardo, Roger Bacon in the Thirteenth century conceived the idea of an artificial bird—an idea which is the subject of experimentation even today. The Golden Book article points out. Bacon set forth that "an instrument may be made to fly without if one sit in the midst of the instrument, and do turn an engine, by which the wings, being artificially composed, may beat the air after the manner of the flying bird."

The compilation also contains first-hand accounts of the two ascensions by which the Montgolfier brothers and Pilatre de Rozier proved the practicality of the first hot-air balloons in 1783.

First Successful Flight.
On June 5 of that year at Annonay, France, the Montgolfiers sent up their first balloon, a bag 110 feet in circumference and weighing 300 pounds. Without a passenger, it shot up to a height of 6,000 feet in ten minutes, and traveled a mile and a half before it descended gently to earth.

On October 15 of the same year, in another machine built by the Montgolfiers, de Rozier rode the air for the first time successfully, stoking the fire which heated the air within the gas bag with straw and wool.

"After a few trials close to the ground, he desired to ascend to a great height," says the account. "The machine was accordingly permitted to rise, and ascend as high as the ropes, which were placed there purposely to detain it, would allow, which was about 84 feet. There M. de Rozier kept the machine about four minutes and twenty-five seconds by throwing straw and wool into the grate to keep up the fire. Then the machine descended exceedingly gently."

Fish Liars Club Now Issuing Liar's License

Waterloo, N. Y.—Prompted by a real need, the Liars club of Waterloo now issues a liar's license.

It all started when W. Fred Bacon, an attorney, returned from Florida with a story, accompanied by photographs, of catching 88 fish totaling 800 pounds in a single day. He was immediately awarded a card of honor by the Liars club.

But the lying became so rampant that the executive committee decided to issue a card permitting its members to falsify. The card allows recklessness with the truth in all matters pertaining to fish or fishing for the current season. The grand seal of Ananias is affixed to the document.

Link Ancient Egypt China in Snake Rites

Stockholm.—Belief that the Chinese during the Stone age had the same kind of snake worship as the inhabitants of Egypt, Mesopotamia, Persia and Russian Turkestan, was expressed by Prof. J. G. Anderson, Sweden's foremost expert on Chinese archeology.

Professor Anderson based his belief on the discovery of the cover of a Chinese grave urn made during the Stone age in China.

Around the head of the figure of the urn, and down the man's back, Professor Anderson found a twisted and plaited band of snakes corresponding almost exactly to snake designs found on Stone age objects discovered in northern Africa and in the Near East.

Know Your School

(That patrons may have better opportunity of really knowing their school this column will each week be given over to school news. It is the desire of the school executives that the patrons become better acquainted with the faculty, school methods and school aims.)

American Education Week is observed each year during the week that includes Armistice Day. It is sponsored jointly by the American Legion and the National Education Association. It begins on Monday and ends on Sunday. The program for 1929 is built around the seven cardinal objectives of education as follows:

Monday, Nov. 11.—Armistice Day: Education for Faithful Citizenship.

Tuesday, Nov. 12.—Home and School Day: Education for Worthy Home Membership.

Wednesday, Nov. 13.—Know Your School Day: Education for Mastery of the Tools, Technics, and Spirit of Learning.

Thursday, Nov. 14.—School Opportunity Day: Education for Vocational and Economic Effectiveness.

Friday, Nov. 15.—Health Day: Education for Health and Safety.

Saturday, Nov. 16.—Community Day: Education for the wise use of leisure.

Sunday, Nov. 17.—For God and Country Day: Education for Ethical Character.

The Sanderson Public Schools will observe American Education Week every day with the possible exception of Saturday. The public is invited to attend every program sponsored that week by the school.

Some of the special programs that will be carried out by the school authorities in the high school auditorium are the Armistice Day program emphasizing fair play, justice, co-operation, integrity, patriotism, and citizenship; a Home and School program showing what the schools have done to improve the home; a Know Your School Program, when the parents will be urged to visit the school to see every department of the school at work. A special feature of this program will be a school exhibit arranged in the different rooms to inform the visitors of the kind and quality of activity being carried on in the school plant. A health program showing what the school does to promote physical vitality, good health, and habits of safety will be stressed on Thursday, November 14.

The one unusual number already planned for the American Education Week is the enactment of the patriotic drama, "Texas Under Six Flags," to be presented by all the school children Friday night, November 15. Every child in grammar school and high school will have a part in this all-school program.

Sunday, November 17, the ministers of the town will be invited to preach on the higher values of education and living.

BELCHER ENTERS RACE FOR CONGRESSMAN

Judge C. C. Belcher of Del Rio has announced that he would be a candidate in the Democratic primaries next July for the place of congressman from this district to succeed Claude E. Hudspeth, who will not be a candidate for re-election.

Judge Belcher will make his formal statement later.

His announcement had been delayed until he could learn of the sentiment toward his candidacy over the district. During the past few days he has received letters and messages from leading men throughout all parts of the district urging him to make the race, and pledging their support of his candidacy, and it is due to these expressions that his candidacy is announced, Judge Belcher said.

Sentiments had been expressed by Roscoe Runge of Mason, Alfred Petsch of Fredericksburg, T. A. Kincaid of Ozona, Alex Collins of San Angelo, Judge C. I. Sutton of Marfa and Judge John Sutton of San Angelo pledging support.

Judge C. I. Sutton of Marfa was formerly a law partner of Judge Belcher and is a former college classmate.

Mayor R. E. Thomason of El Paso is the only other candidate who has announced for the place which has been held by Mr. Hudspeth for the past ten years. Mayor Thomason announced immediately following Mr. Hudspeth's decision to retire.—The Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Robinson and family came in last Friday from Edinburg, Texas, to make this city their future home. Mr. Robinson has accepted the position of assistant secretary-treasurer and manager of the Sanderson Wool Commission Co. They are located in the Ed Downie home.

EAGLES LOSE TO BUCKS

A very hard game of football was played on Jackson Field last Saturday afternoon when the Sanderson Eagles met the Alpine Bucks.

The two captains met and flipped a coin and Captain Lattimore of the Eagles received the ball. Green, left half, received ball and ran goal for about 30 yards, the ball was down and signals and was called through center. Laughlin, full, carried it through center for about a four yard gain. Henry, half, went around left end for a few yards gain but did not count much. Laughlin punted on third down. Alpine gets ball and after a few downs makes goal and kicks goal. At the end of the first half the score stood 7 to 0 in Alpine's favor. In the last half Alpine overthrew Sanderson for a few goals and the final score was in their favor 31 to 0. The men worked like a clock all through the game but was awfully light.

Under the coaching this week of Duck Younger the Eagles will improve 50 percent.

Sanderson Eagles will play the Fort Stockton team this afternoon (Friday), at 4 o'clock on Howard Field. Everybody come out—the Sanderson Eagles are out for blood and victory.

SCHOOL BOND ELECTION

Friday, October 11

Opportunity for a progressive step in public school education comes to Sanderson by means of the school bond election, which will be held from 8:00 a. m. to 7:00 p. m., Friday, October 11, at the courthouse. The bond issue covers a $150,000.00 building program, which includes a new high school building, a gymnasium, and other school buildings in the county.

The carrying of this bond election will mean that the children of Terrell County will be provided with the best system of schools in this section of the State. The citizens of Sanderson have already established a thorough and vitalized curriculum through the careful choice of teachers. Only one other action awaits their approval, the assertion of their complete faith in the Sanderson children and their future by the erection of a school plant adequate for the needs of a rapidly increasing scholastic population and present-day educational standards.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

There was a crackle of pistol fire in front of us, and a knot of figures swayed into view, distorted, indistinct. The deluge seemed to act as a freak lens to play tricks with normal vision; and possibly that was why comparatively few were shot. Twice I had men fair over the barrel of my pistol, and both times I missed—and I am rather better than a good shot. But I had no time for philosophizing.

Toutou and Hilmi Bey went for Nikka. He was bleeding from a cut in the arm, and all his men were engaged. Hugh, with King and Watty, was developing an encircling movement on the opposite end of the line. I started to go to Nikka's aid, but a man sprang at me from nowhere, and I was obliged to dodge him until I had a chance to shoot. I did not miss that time. When I looked again, Nikka and Toutou were circling each other, and Hilmi was at grips with Kara.

At first I thought the Levantine was scheming to throw the girl, but as I drew near I perceived that he had clinched with her in mortal terror of her knife. She held his own powerless by her grasp of his wrist. A mocking light gleamed in her eyes, and she shook back her loose hair and jeered at him in the Tzizone dialect. With one pudgy hand he strove to ward off her blade, but he could not control her lithe muscles. She tore her wrist free, the steel drove home through his sudden frock coat and he collapsed with a squeal.

Kara pulled out her knife as casually as though it had been a familiar occurrence, and turned to watch Nikka's fight with Toutou. Nikka from the corner of his eye saw the two of us, plainly waiting a chance to help him, and he leaped clear of the circle long enough to snap:

"Let be! I finish this alone!" I couldn't have helped him. In any case, for as redoubtable a person as Tokalji, himself, attacked me at that moment, Kara did not even notice my danger. She also ignored the man she called father. Her whole attention was concentrated upon Nikka. I fired once at the gypsy chief, and missed. That was the last cartridge in the magazine, and I attempted to lose him in the rain. But he refused to be lost, and I was making up my mind to take his knife in my wounded arm and batter his head with my pistol butt, when Watkins loomed in the mist and brought down his trusty crowbar on Tokalji's knife-wrist. The gypsy yelped like a dog, and the knife clattered on the ground. Watty produced some rope from a pocket and deftly twisted the man's arms behind him. Tokalji yelped again.

"Easy," I said. "The fellow's wrist is broken."

"I'm tying 'im above the elbows, Mister Jack, sir," answered Watty. "But if it did hurt 'im a bit I wouldn't worry, sir. I 'ave an idea, sir, 'e was one of the scoundrels that bashed me 'ead."

My one thought was of Nikka, and I sought him over the rain-battered area of the court. The fighting had drifted away toward the sea wall. There seemed to be nobody near me. I listened hard, and in a lull of the storm my ears detected the click of blades. I stumbled toward it, and nearly fell on top of Kara, crouching as I had left her, eyes glued on the two men who circled tirelessly, steel-tipped arms crooked before them.

Toutou had a huge advantage in reach, but Nikka had the benefit of lithe agility, a wrist of iron—the result of years of bowing; a hawk's eyes; and all the tricks with the blade that the people of his race have amassed in centuries of bloody strife. Four times, while I watched, Toutou endeavored to force down Nikka's knife by the sheer strength of his gorilla-like arm, and each time Nikka disengaged and refused to give the opportunity his adversary needed. Twice Nikka tried a certain trick, a combination of lightning thrusts and clever footwork. But the Frenchman parried it each time, and retaliated so quickly as to drive Nikka out of reach.

Neither of them said anything. Toutou spat and whined in his throat, cat-fashion. Nikka panted from exertion. Both of them dripped with sweat, notwithstanding the rain. There was something of an epical quality about their struggle, and I discovered myself taking the same almost impersonal interest in it that Kara demonstrated. By all the principles of normal right behavior, I should have ignored Nikka's command to let him fight it out alone, and rushed in at the first opening to kill a monster, who did not deserve and had no appreciation of knightly treatment. But I could not. I was chained by an emotion I could not fathom.

And yet I was absorbed in Nikka's success. My heart leaped in my throat when I saw that he was trying for the third time the trick which had twice failed. His knife went up in the same way, he shifted posture as he had in his other tries, and Toutou mechanically side-stepped as experience had told him was safe and aimed a stab which should have cut Nikka's throat. But Nikka was not there. He had varied the trick. Stooping, his knife had fallen, then sliced upward—and Toutou staggered, a look of bland surprise on his face, ripped open from belly to chest.

"It'sss-ss-tss-ss!" he hissed, and fell forward.

Kara buried herself into Nikka's arms. "You are the greatest knife-fighter of the Tzizones!" she cried triumphantly. "You are a king! You are my man! See, while you conquered your enemy, I, too, stabbed the rat who tried to put his knife in your back."

And she led Nikka to the body of Hilmi, which I regret to say, she kicked with her brown toes. Nikka absently minded leaned over to wipe his knife on the Levantine's coat-tails, but Kara intervened.

"No, no," she exclaimed. "Here is my hair! Wipe it on my hair, beloved of my heart. Let me suck it clean with my lips! So we shall have strong sons."

Nikka looked sufficiently annoyed to show that he had some instincts of civilization remaining.

"Peace," he ordered royally. "Be quiet, girl!"

She covered before him, and he recognized me.

"Oh, hullo, Jack! Where's Hugh?"

Hugh loomed up through the rain as he spoke.

"That you, Nikka? We think we've got Tokalji's people rounded up, but we need you to talk to them. Has Toutou—"

"He's there."

Nikka pointed his knife to the heap of drab garments that had been the French "killer."

"Good for you!" exclaimed Hugh. "I'm glad he didn't get off. When you think of Uncle James—and that girl we saw—and I suppose others! What a beast!"

We splashed after him, Kara following Nikka like a dog. Wasso Mikail, his surviving young men, King and Watkins were guarding thirteen shivering gypsies in the lee of the bath-house quarters. In reply to questions, Tokalji told Nikka—and Kara, shamelessly throwing in her lot with us, corroborated him—that there had been fifteen of their band on the premises. A search of the courtyard disclosed two of them dead, together with one of Wasso Mikail's men. We bound the arms of the prisoners, most of them suffering from bullet wounds or stabs, and marched them over to the House of the Married.

The one lantern was still flickering when we entered, and Betty rose to greet us.

"Thank God!" she said soberly as her eyes envisaged us all. "What did you do with Mrs. Hillyer?"

"Isn't she here?" asked Hugh.

"No, I don't know just when she left. There was a lot of firing, and I looked to where she had been sitting by her husband, and she was gone."

Nikka and I sped back into the courtyard. We picked our way over the occasional bodies to the street door. It was ajar.

"I locked it myself!" cried Nikka. "Old Wasso Mikail picked it without damaging the spring. I took time when we entered to fasten it again."

I was feeling very weak. My shoulder throbbled. Nausea assailed me in recurrent waves. But I clutched the gate post, and peered into the street. Nobody was in sight.

"She escaped," said Nikka. "Too bad! We might have—" What's the matter, Jack?"

He caught me as my knees bent under me. I felt the rain on my eyelids, and then everything was blotted out.

When I opened my eyes Watkins was bending over me.

"Ah, there, Mister Jack," he said, "ave a drink of this. Thank you, sir. And as I struggled to a sitting position; 'No need of 'aste, sir. All's well. And you 'ad a bit of a knock, if I may say so, sir."

"It seems as though you and I were the Jonahs, Watty," I answered. "This is the third time I've passed out cold."

"Quite right, sir. The same thought was in me own 'ead. If Mrs. Prouty and 'Awkins—the butler, sir—and the others in the servants' all could 'ave seen me last night, they would 'ave been startled, sir. I do assure you they would. There was that Russian young lady, now. I give you my word, sir, she cursed like a maniac, and 'er brother was no better when 'e came from 'is flat. A fair rowdy lot of people we 'ad on our 'ands—including the young person in whom Mister Nikka happens to be interested, as the saying goes, sir."

"You said 'last night, I believe,'" I interrupted.

"Yes, sir. It's close to noon, Mister Jack. But Lord bless you, sir, there's been no rest. We 'ad a largish hundreder's job, let alone tiding up and minding the prisoners."

"What have we done with the bodies?"

"In the garden, sir. The prisoners did the work—except of the Russian person, sir. 'E couldn't, account of 'is leg, and she, being a lady, so to speak, was hexascused."

"Well, I'm going to get up," I announced. "My shoulder feels better."

"If you wish, sir. My instructions were to get you anything you required, but with submission, sir, might I suggest you sleep a little 'onger? There's nothing—oh, 'ere's Mister Nikka."

Nikka strolled in from the courtyard, with Kara trailing him.

"Hullo, Jack!" he greeted me. "Tough luck you had to stop a bullet. We're all more or less cut up, but you had the worst of it, although my uncle, who is a practical surgeon in a crude way, claims the bullet missed the bone."

"So Watkins told me. Any news? The police—"

"No, the storm covered the shooting. Hugh has been to Pera with Betty in the Curlew this morning, and they heard no comments. One of Wasso Mikail's men stopped in at the corner coffee shop, and made sure there was no local gossip. The only danger, I think, is from Mrs. Hillyer. We've got to risk that."

"Aren't you all worn out?"

"No. Too much excitement, I expect. We're just going to eat. Then Betty insists on going after the treasure again."

Kara sidled up to him, with a venomous glance at me, and ejaculated a remark soto voce. Nikka laughed, and pushed her behind him. She heeded him like a dog that is contented with a rebuke, so long as notice is taken by its master.

"She said," Nikka translated, "that I ought not to talk with you any longer. She wants me to pay attention to her."

"Humph!" I growled, returning Kara's look with interest. "Help me up, will you? Thanks! What are you going to do with her?"

"Tame her, I expect," he answered cheerfully. "I've begun by taking her

He lowered himself, feet first, knife away from her. She wanted to stick Betty because I talked more than five minutes to her about you."

"A sweet job! She'll end by sticking you."

"Perhaps," agreed Nikka equably. "Come and get some breakfast. A cup of coffee will help you to take a more charitable view of a wild little gypsy girl."

Hugh, Betty, and Vernon King welcomed us as we entered the atrium, where a low table of packing boxes had been rigged. Wasso Mikail and his men were either guarding the prisoners or else keeping watch on the street entrance. Kara scowled at all of us, but squatted determinedly behind Nikka.

We talked very little. The one idea in the mind of each of us was to get at the red stone, which we could see from where we sat, and we choked down our food as rapidly as possible. I forgot completely my injured shoulder. Watkins actually hurried himself in passing the eggs. Betty and Hugh crumbled a few bits of toast, and struggled over their coffee. Vernon King alone ate placidly, with the zest of a man who feels he has done a good job well. At last, Betty could stand it no longer, and she sprang up with an imitation of Kara's scowl so faithful that everybody, except Kara, laughed.

"Daddy, you've had time for two breakfasts," she decreed. "That's enough. Besides, I won't have you getting fat in your old age. Come! Everybody! We've got our chance, our chance that we began to think was gone aglimmering. The treasure of the Bucoleon is at our feet—under our feet, I mean. Up with the red stone!"

"Up she goes!" assented Hugh. "Crowbars, chisels, mallets, picks and shovels appeared, and Hugh paced the distance from the Fountain of the Lion. His calculations indicated the stone that I had roughly estimated on our first visit to the garden. We all watched him with madly beating hearts. It was really true! We were going to lay bare the secret covered by the red stone, to grasp the prize that the Emperor Andronicus had concealed seven centuries before, the sealed generation after generation of men had striven for in vain.

The thought exhilarated us, and when Hugh stepped aside and seized a chisel and mallet we all set to with superhuman energy. I was unable to do much, but I experienced a sharp pleasure in the mere act of holding with my one hand the head of a chisel upon which one of the others rained blows with a mallet. We could not take time for conversation. We worked. Even Vernon King, who had millions at his command, succumbed to the lure of the red stone's secret, and panted as he clipped the rotten mortar from the interstices between the red stone and those surrounding it.

Working at such a pace with so many willing hands, it was only a matter of a few minutes before the stone was detached from its neighbors, and Nikka thrust the tip of a crowbar under its edge. Followed then a struggle of some duration, but in the end it sagged up and was overturned. Below it was a second stone of equal dimensions, granite, un-mortared, although the dust of ages had sifted into the cracks around it. This yielded to our efforts much sooner than had the capstone, and Hugh, kneeling amongst the debris, peered down into a yawning hole in the pavement.

"Careful!" warned King. "A compartment which has been sealed for centuries will be full of carbonic-acid gas."

Hugh sniffed. "It's as damp as—as—that beastly drain," he said. "But it smells reasonably sweet."

We poked our torches into the hole. All they showed was a steep flight of stairs descending straight into blackness.

"Most extraordinary!" mumbled Vernon King. "Byzantine masonry, beyond a doubt. Observe the squaring of the blocks, and the composition of the mortar. This is no such slovenly work as Turkish masons do. The master-builders of old laid these stones."

"If it's safe, what are we waiting for?" I barked.

"Our nerves were on edge."

"Oh, take your time," said Hugh impatiently, and he lowered himself, feet first.

The others followed him, one by one, and I brought up the rear, ashamed of myself for the temper I had exhibited. The pitch of the stairs was so sharp that we had to bend only a little in passing under the rim of the opening. They were barely wide enough for one man, and I counted thirty of them before they terminated in a passage that led off at right angles, with an appreciable downward slope.

"Hold up!" Hugh called back to us a moment later. "Here's an opening into another passage. There's a step down. Why, this is the drain again!"

We joined him, incredulous, only to be convinced at once that he was right. The passage debouched on the sewer some distance inland from the grating of the dungeon.

"My G—d!" groaned Hugh. "And we've gone through everything for this! Was there ever such a sell!"

The vaulted roof echoed his words. The "drip-drip" of slime and fungi was a melancholy punctuation for them. But the reaction loosened our taut nerves. The one thought of all of us was to comfort Hugh.

"There may be some explanation," said Nikka.

"Perhaps we overlooked something," I volunteered.

"It is a most unusual archeological discovery," offered King.

"There is an explanation," cried Betty. "We have overlooked something. I know it. There must be."

"It's no go," answered Hugh despondently. "I've brought you on a wild-goose chase."

We all looked rather white and wan in the cold light of the electric torches. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

New York Leads All in Orgy of Wasting

In America, waste is an old habit of long standing and not wholly dishonorable descent. It is a legacy of the pioneers, a part of the old American tradition; for with a wilderness to subdue and the wealth of a continent at their doorsteps, the first settlers troubled themselves little over what they wasted. There was plenty more, whereas speed in producing food or clothes or shelter was a matter of life and death. So the tradition became established; and the descendants of the earliest fathers have blithely agreed with the latest immigrant grants to get things quickly, to build hastily, to tear down when it is convenient, and to use up at breakneck speed the gifts that the generous gods have lavishly provided.

And as all things American are on their grandest scale in New York, it is there that we must look for an orgy of waste that would have appalled imperial Rome. If the Yankee metropolis is not the most American of cities, either in its culture or its population, it is at least the most observed, both by foreigners and by other cities of the land. It occupies more land, builds higher buildings, handles more business, receives more visitors and attention, lives at a quicker tempo than any other city in America—which means that it wastes on a more lavish and stupendous scale than any other city in the world.—John Bakeless in the Forum.

Wealth From "Scrap"

By the system of reclamation of the scrap pile now being generally followed by nearly all the railroad companies, bright new tin buckets, cups and other articles are being manufactured from old metal roofing, empty powder and carbide containers and other junk salvaged. Old broom handles are made into staffs for signal flags, old canvas is transformed into curtains for the locomotive cabs and coaches, steam-pipe coverings and aprons. Thrift practices such as these save the carriers hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

Death's Daily Harvest

It is estimated that about 90,000 persons die every day. This includes the entire world.

A BABY REMEDY APPROVED BY DOCTORS FOR COLIC, CONSTIPATION, DIARRHEA

Texas Lady's Life Takes New Turn

"When I think of how I used to wake up morning after morning with a headache, I feel like I have just started living," says Mrs. Lawca Clooney, popular manager of the Telephone Exchange Cafeteria in San Antonio.

"I did not know what it was to be without a headache, the kind which make you weak and nervous until I heard my brother's family telling about how good Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is. I took the first one and liked it. I have been taking them ever since. Everyone wants to know what I have taken because I am so well now."

Results like that of what makes Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) so popular. More than three million are used a day. Any druggist will tell you to use them if you suffer from sour stomach, biliousness, tight bowels, sick headaches, indigestion or rheumatism. They are 25c a box.

Needless Pain!

Some folks take pain for granted. They let a cold "run its course." They wait for their headaches to "wear off." If suffering from neuralgia or from neuritis, they rely on feeling better in the morning. Meantime, they suffer unnecessary pain. Unnecessary, because there is an antidote. Bayer Aspirin always offers immediate relief from various aches and pains we once had to endure. If pain persists, consult your doctor as to its cause. Save yourself a lot of pain and discomfort through the many uses of Bayer Aspirin. Protect yourself by buying the genuine. Bayer is safe. Always the same. All drugstores.

Health worth more than fortune

THE baby to be envied is the one who is born with an inheritance of perfect health, to begin with. And who's lucky enough to have a mother who knows how to build up this fortune.

"Perhaps I'm old-fashioned," she'll say to the doctor who pronounces her child physically 100% at a baby show, "but this health certificate means more to me than all the stock certificates in the world. If my baby grows up strong and well, I'm willing to leave it to him to make a career and fortune for himself."

"Already I'm teaching him the value of regular habits. Regular sleep, regular meals, regular functions. He's never once been off schedule, not even when he was cutting teeth or traveling to the country. I make sure of that by giving him Nujol regularly."

Nujol works so easily and naturally that it won't upset a baby under any conditions. It keeps everything functioning properly. It not only prevents any excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming but aids in their removal. It is safe and sure. Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York.

Heir to millions

Just try Nujol for your baby. Give it to him regularly for the next three months. See if it doesn't make things much easier for both of you. Certainly it could do no harm—for Nujol contains no drugs or medicine. Your druggist carries it. Be sure you get the genuine. Sold only in sealed packages.

THE ANIMALS

"I am so sick of that old story about a giraffe having a sore throat," said the giraffe to himself.

He hadn't any real voice for you never hear any sounds from giraffes.

Maybe that is the reason the story has got around for the giraffe has not been able to say it was not a new story and that he was tired of it.

People always seem to think they are being funny when they speak of a giraffe and a possible sore throat.

"I Am Lame." If a giraffe had a sore throat, or ever has one, it is not funny.

And it is foolish to say the same thing so often.

"I have a sore throat today," said the hippopotamus. "I really have."

"And it hurts."

"I have something the matter with me," said the elephant.

"I am so sorry," said the hippopotamus.

"What is the matter with you?"

"I am lame," the elephant said. "My ankles have become a little weak and strained."

"Oh, that's too bad," said the hippopotamus, shaking his big, strange head.

"That's too bad, indeed, it's too bad."

"You're certainly being very polite and sympathetic."

"I don't think I know the meaning of the word 'Sympathetic' and I'd like to know its meaning when you say I am being that way."

"Oh, it's a lovely word, and it means that you have the power of sympathy or the power of being sorry for some one beside yourself," said the elephant.

"I am glad then, that you said that to me, and I am really sorry your ankles hurt."

"Even though ankles are far away from one, in a way, it doesn't matter how far away when they hurt."

"If I have a sore throat I think it is worse than anything because it is right up so close to me, as it were."

"But if a toe hurts it is just as bad, or if ankles hurt."

Quite a few of the animals had little complaints, but they were brave about them, and then the keeper came along and he fixed them up so wonderfully.

He looked after each one of them in turn, and how much better they were.

They were so happy feeling better and they kept saying to each other:

"Isn't it so much nicer to talk about aches after they are over?"

And that very next day when the animals were so very much better the keeper gave them a special treat.

Each animal had an extra meal of his favorite food.

It was wonderful to have such a treat, and the animals were very pleased and delighted. They enjoyed it.

No longer did they have to be sympathetic or sad, for all was pleasant in the zoo, and all were well again.

That was making all the difference!

Had an Extra Meal.

When Bilious I Remembered Black-Draught

Mr. O. B. Davis, Manager of the Commercial Hotel, Dexter, Mo., writes:

"MY parents used Black-Draught for years, and gave it to us when I lived at home. I knew it was a good remedy. When I would get bilious, my head would feel dull, I did not feel equal to a day's work, and had a bad taste in my mouth. Then I remembered Black-Draught and took a few doses. It helped me. The dull, tired feeling left me and I knew, by that, that Black-Draught was as good as ever—a simple home remedy to cleanse the system and make you feel better for having taken it."

Unimportant at a Wedding

By RUTH SPENCER

"It's all arranged," Fred's aunt had written. "You are to come out for your vacation. There is always something doing, and Muriel (that was Fred's cousin) is bringing home a pretty roommate. They're both seniors now. You and Muriel are, of course, like brother and sister, but you may find Laurel diverting."

Fred Maston was twenty-four. He was quite convinced that he really wasn't in the least susceptible; still, he bore the name Laurel Dering in his mind.

He interviewed a candy dealer in the city, and left a few of his cards, in case he should send a message ordering bonbons.

When he found Laurel to possess the bluest of blue eyes in connection with hair so golden brown as to be nearly auburn, Fred Maston capitulated at once—he admitted to himself after that first evening at his aunt's that she was by all means the most charming girl he had ever seen. He did not have to admit this to his aunt. It was apparent he had been charmed.

"How I envy Muriel," Laurel told him, with wide-open eyes the second day of their visit, "to have a cousin like you. I have two or three cousins,—well, they're different." On the strength of this Fred sent a telegram to the city candy store with an order.

There was a dance at the country club that second day. Fred searched out the florist in town and ordered flowers for Muriel and Laurel. He let the fact drop to his aunt.

"You'd better cancel the order for Muriel," she said. "Tom Robinson is pretty serious about Muriel, and he'll probably send her something."

So they went to the dance.

It had been agreed that the merry-makers should not attempt to rise for the family breakfast next morning, but Fred woke up by eight, grew restless and wandered downstairs. With a book in hand he found a secluded spot in the music room off the living room.

Presently he was aware that some thing was going on in that living room. There were modulated feminine voices and the sound of cups and saucers.

"I always get Bridget to bring breakfast in here before the living-room fire," he heard his cousin saying, "when I'm late."

"Everything has been so picturesque, ever since I came here," came Laurel's enthusiastic reply.

"I don't suppose Fred will be down for some time, but I just couldn't sleep any longer," Muriel was saying.

"You know I couldn't sleep at all," said Laurel. "I guess I was too excited. So I lay awake and had the nicest time just thinking—and what do you think I was planning?"

"Your trousseau, I suppose," said Muriel.

Laurel giggled. "Not quite. I was planning my bridesmaids' frocks. You know, I'm going to have you and Nettie and Jane, and I think violet would be becoming to you."

"Oh, I'm going to have my bridesmaids dressed in ecru. I shall have two—unless, of course, you're married—then I shall have you for matron of honor."

"This was too much for Fred. The only door led through the living room, but there was a window. Quickly he opened it, jumped to the ground and hurried through the frosty air to the kitchen. There he encountered his aunt making meal plans.

She asked Fred to join the girls in the living room for breakfast, but Fred insisted that he'd rather eat alone in the dining room.

"I didn't know until just now," Fred began, "that Muriel was really engaged. But she knows him—Tom Robinson—long!"

"Oh, there isn't any engagement yet," assured the aunt, and Fred was about to express the point when the door bell rang. Some one cried, "your post," and Fred and his aunt the next while Muriel and Laurel fled to the door.

"But I know for a fact that Laurel is engaged," Fred tried to continue. "She and Muriel were making plans—"

Fred got no further. The parrot post-purchase delivered to Laurel had been quickly opened. There were wires and then the voices of Laurel and Muriel drew nearer.

Muriel pushed her classroom into the dining room and Laurel, blushing very prettily, looked stage at Fred.

"Why, didn't you have breakfast with us," asked Laurel. Just then the parrot and Fred entered to announce Muriel to the party.

"I didn't think you would ever whether I did or not," Fred announced. "The candy is lovely."

"Perhaps I ought not to ask you to accept it," said Fred gravely. "Since you are engaged—"

"You know very well I'm not engaged," said Laurel with a pout. "I am sure," continued Fred, "but I mentioned your name. I happen to know that you are visiting plans for your wedding."

Laurel looked up brightly at Fred. "A bridesmaid is very interesting at a wedding," she said. "I shall be glad to think of being one."

Fred was very glad to be invited and was the second post-visit bride on a date.

"I'd like to make a toast," he said. "I'd like to make a toast," he said. "I'd like to make a toast," he said.

NAME OF SARGON NOW SPREADS OVER NATION

When Sargon was first given to the world, well known authorities predicted it would become one of the great outstanding health-giving remedies of the age, but the men of science who labored for years to perfect it little dreamed it would become a household word in so short a time.

According to the statements of people everywhere who have actually put it to the test, it is restoring literally hundreds of thousands of weak, rundown, half-sick, discouraged men and women by some of the latest and most advanced methods known to medical science.

The demand for Sargon is probably without parallel in the history of the drug trade. In the State of California alone, it will require over one million bottles to supply the people of California during the first twelve months after it was placed on sale.

One big New York firm, with wholesale houses in leading cities, have sold and distributed 908,184 bottles in the past eight months, or at the rate of one million and a quarter bottles per year.

Kansas City wholesale and retail firms have sold and distributed over 300,000 bottles within twelve months, or an average of almost one bottle for every family in the State of Kansas.

Texas dealers required nine carloads the first four months. In the Northwest the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul have been selling at the rate of over $100,000 per year, to say nothing of the immense wholesale distribution. Sales in other sections have been correspondingly large.

Back of Sargon's triumph in the drug stores is Sargon's triumph in the homes. When a suffering man or woman finds a medicine that helps them, they invariably tell their friends about it, and in this way the fame of Sargon is spreading from coast to coast, sweeping the country like a great tidal wave.

No matter where you go—North, East, South or West—Sargon is bringing health to thousands, and many foreign countries are now clamoring for it.

Watch Tongue For Signs of Illness

Your tongue is nothing more than the upper end of your stomach and intestines. It is the first thing your doctor looks at. It tells at a glance the condition of your digestive system—and physicians say that 90 per cent of all sicknesses start with stomach and bowel trouble.

A white or yellowish coating on your tongue is a danger signal of those digestive disorders. It tells you why the least exertion tires you out; why you have pain in the bowels, gas, sour stomach, dizzy spells.

And it's a sign you need Taylor's. This good old reliable medicine has helped thousands who were physically weak. See how the first bottle helps you.

Taylor's contains no mineral drugs, it is made of herbs, barks and roots—enough even medicine for the sick. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.
