Plane Upsets at Dryden Landing

An airplane, enroute from Fort Bliss to Kelly Field, turned over on the Dryden airdrome landing field late Monday evening. Four men were in the plane at the time of the accident, namely: Sgt. Bizsot, pilot, Sgt. Kaecebo, mechanic, Lt. H. D. Enriquez, Fantada Maria of Columbia South America, and Lt. Richard P. O'Keefe. All escaped unharmed except Sgt. Bizsot who sustained injuries to his back and arm. Drs. Robertson and Doty were summoned and gave medical aid. The doctors reported the injuries not serious. The plane was on the ground preparing to rise when the accident occurred. A heavy wind caught under the wings and turned the plane completely over. Sgt. Brizsot was pinned in his seat and about half an hour elapsed before the workmen could get him out.

Oil Activities in Terrell County

Transcontinental's test, the Goode No. 1, reported drilling in broken lime and shale with favorable oil and gas indications. Big Bend Oil Corporation's test Bassett No. 1, reported drilling in broken lime and shale with a slight showing of oil and gas. Keck Pecos Trust test Hamilton No. 1, reported drilling in dark sand and broken lime with favorable indications of soon becoming a good producer. Mrs. J. B. McPhee of Los Angeles, Calif., was here again this week seeing after her interest in the Sam Bell No. 1 well, and it is reported that this well will soon be drilling again with a standard string of tools.

According to the Deed Records of this county and the oil and gas lease records this county is still looming in the limelight toward the path of oil and gas development. Mr. Stansell received a communication from Mr. G. E. Cornelius from the North indicating that quite a bit of development work will soon take place in the southwestern portion of Terrell County and the extreme southeastern portion of Brewster County, due to the fact that Mr. Tyler encountered a good showing of oil and gas on the O. T. Schupbach ranch in Brewster County at the shallow depth of 750 feet in black lime and slate.

The location of this well is only about 16 miles southwest of this city, and being only a few miles south of the Terrell County line. Geologists of another major company are now working in the county, and seem to be very favorably impressed with the various outcroppings in this county.

MRS. MARY SCHUPBACH

Mrs. Mary Schupbach died Wednesday, June 4, at a hospital in San Antonio, and was buried in Sanderson cemetery Thursday evening at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Schupbach was 76 years of age. Obituary will be published next week.

MRS. DARLING'S MOTHER VERY ILL

The editor of this paper was called to Buenavista Saturday night on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Simmons. On Mrs. Darling's return Sunday night her mother was very little better.

LATER Mrs. Darling was called to Pecos City Tuesday morning where her mother had been taken to a hospital. A phone message from Mrs. Darling Wednesday night said that her mother would be operated on Thursday, and very little hope for her recovery. Mrs. Drilling has the sympathy of her friends here.

Methodists Meet in Conference

The pastor of the Methodist Church, Brother Justice, was recently away for about three weeks in attendance at the General Conference meeting in Dallas, Texas. He reports a very fine and inspiring experience there.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is the legislative body of that church. It meets once in four years to make the laws of the church, and is made up of representatives from all over the entire church. At the recent session just closed there were representatives from all the mission fields, including China, Japan, Korea, Siberia, Mexico, Poland, Belgium, Cuba, Africa, and Brazil; together with representatives from all the home conferences in the South and Southwest.

In addition to much important legislation which included the granting of autonomy to the churches in Brazil, Korea, and Mexico; the unifying of some of the Connectional Boards of the church, and the changing of many features of the present book of discipline, three new bishops of the church were elected: Dr. Paul B. Kern of Travis Park Church, San Antonio; Dr. A. Frank Smith of First Church of Hodston, and Dr. Arthur J. Moore of First Church, Birmingham, Ala.

Among the many fine speakers of the conference who were on the program were the following:

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald; Dr. J. E. Rattenbury, Southport, England, who was Fraternal Delegate from the Methodist Church of England; Dr. J. E. Hughson of the United Church of Canada; Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Nashville, and many others of national and international reputation.

A very fine service was held during the conference on the night that the Fraternal Delegates from the African Methodist Episcopal Church were received. Preceding the speaker, Bishop W. Samson Brooks of that church, the Booker T. Washington High School of Dallas put on a very fine musical program consisting of some hundred and fifty school children from that school.

Many social questions were presented as facing the church now and in the near future. Among these questions such as: the race question, the breakdown of the American home, the problem of marriage and divorce, Christianizing industry, the daily press, prison reform, etc.; perhaps the ones which received the greatest emphasis at the conference were the question of the proper enforcement of the 18th Amendment; the part which the church must play in securing permanent world peace; the union of the various Protestant bodies, especially the union of the various bodies of Methodism; and the making Christian the Orient. These were some of the major questions which the conference faced at its recent session in Dallas.

Missionary Society

The Woman's Missionary Society had their regular weekly Bible study Tuesday afternoon, June 3, at the church. After the study was finished the president held a short business session and completed plans for a Mexican dinner to be served Saturday evening, June 7, at the Masonic Temple. Ten members and one visitor were present.

John S. Oglesby of Dallas, was here this week auditing the books of the county and precinct officials.

Sanderson Man a Close Bidder

C. M. Breeding, local contractor, went down to Bracketville last Monday to put in a bid on the new school building contract to be let at that place.

The School Board of Kinney county had specified that each bidder should put in two bids, one for the erection of a new school building and one for the remodeling of the old school house. There were a large number of contractors present in Bracketville and fourteen bids were put in. Out of the fourteen bidders Mr. Breeding was the second lowest bidder on both contracts. On the contract for remodeling the old school house he was beaten by only $20, and on the new school house contract he was within $225 of being the winner.

Manuel Perez and Martin Rodriguez of this city have been accepted as applicants to the Citizens Military Training Camp at Fort Sam Houston and will leave Wednesday for San Antonio to enter the camp.

Tuesday Club Members Meet

The Tuesday Club was entertained by Mrs. P. E. Dishman with a charming party. The guests assembled at her home at 10 a. m. and played bridge until noon, when a delightful salad course was served to all.

The guests were: Mesdames J. S. Nance, F. L. Burnside, R. E. Stirman, C. M. Breeding, P. J. Holman, Willie Banner, D. B. Brown, W. C. Barksdale, H. Dishman, R. B. Dyer, H. B. Davis, and J. W. Sessoms.

Mrs. Brown was awarded first prize, Mrs. Sessoms second and Mrs. Stirman consolation.

Sunday School Picnic

The Methodist Sunday school will have a picnic Thursday evening June 12 at six o'clock, at three mile tank.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Borroum and daughters of Beeville visited their brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Nations this last week.

Little Folks Have a Birthday Party

Mrs. Earl Pierson entertained at her home Saturday, May 31, honoring the fourth birthday of her little daughter Margaret.

The table was decorated with individual bouquets of flowers and pink bows. Ice cream and cake was served to the following guests: Campbell Kerr, Jimmie Wilkinson, Al Creigh, Margaret Reid Arrington, Wallace and Maurice Harrell, Lewis William Lemons, Edward and James Kerr, Janice White, and Margaret Jane and Mary Nell Higgins.

Mrs. Louise Bauer of Pittsburgh, Pa., stopped over here last week-end to visit with old-time friends. Mrs. Bauer was formerly Miss Louise Tessman and grew to womanhood in Sanderson. She was enroute to El Paso to visit her mother, Mrs. Frank Tessman. Miss Mary Tessman, sister of Mrs. Bauer, accompanied her.

Miss Francis Larmer of Lubbock is visiting Lorene Harrell.

SOME FAVORITE RECIPES

By NELLIE MAXWELL

The most loveable quality that any human being can possess is tolerance. It is the vision that enables one to see things from another's viewpoint. It is generosity that concedes to others the right to their own opinions and their own peculiarities. It is the business that enables us to let people be happy in their own way instead of our way.—Rotary Bulletin.

Let us not forget the value of fruits and vegetables in our menus.

Banana Supreme.—Peel, scrape and cut four bananas crosswise into quarters. Put one-half cupful of nuts through a food chopper with four graham crackers.

Mix with one-third of a cupful of brown sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg. Roll the bananas in this and lay close together in a buttered pan. Bake 20 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Maids of Honor.—Beat two eggs with one-half cupful of sugar until light, then add two cupfuls of cottage cheese, two tablespoonfuls of cream, one-half cupful of seedless raisins, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of chopped almonds. Put a spoonful of the filling into individual tart pans lined with rich pastry and bake in a moderately hot oven.

Apple Fluff.—Peel, core and cut up three large apples, simmer with just enough water to cook without burning. Soften one and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one cupful of water, then heat until well dissolved. Add the grated rind and two tablespoonfuls of juice of lemon, with one-third of a cupful of maple sirup to the apples which have been previously put through a sieve. Cool, and when beginning to set, beat until light. Add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs folded gently into the mixture. Turn into a mold which has been rinsed in cold water and chill. Serve with a custard made of the egg yolks, or cream may be used as a sauce.

Poenta With Sausages.—Sprinkle one and one-half cupfuls of corn meal into a quart of boiling salted water, stirring and cooking for 20 minutes.

HOW TO COOK OKRA

Select young okra, wash it well, and cut crosswise in pieces about 1/2 inch thick. Heat the fat in a heavy skillet, add the okra, cover, cook for 10 minutes, and stir frequently to prevent burning. Remove the cover, continue to cook until the okra is tender and lightly brown, and serve at once.

2 quarts okra Salt to taste
4 lbs. fat

Okra is one of the vegetables which, after being used chiefly in a limited locality, suddenly began to find its way all over the United States, due to better marketing and storage facilities. One result has been that many people are not quite sure how to cook it when they see it offered for sale. In the South, there are numerous uses for okra, and various methods of preparing it. Here is one of the best. The recipe is furnished by the bureau of home economics.

Now add one pound of sausage meat which has been well cooked and broken into small bits. Stir it into the corn meal and pour into a mold to cool. Unmold, cover with tomato sauce and cheese and bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

Here is something different to serve with a lamb roast instead of the usual mint jelly: Cut grapefruit into halves and remove every other section, in the cavity place a wedge shaped piece of mint jelly. Mold the jelly in one-half grapefruit shell and the wedges will be of the same size. These are delightful substitutes for a fruit cocktail when serving lamb or fowl.

Bake small cup cakes, spread with jelly and roll in coconut. These make very nice little cakes to serve with a cup of tea.

Rhubarb Betty.—Mix one quart of dry bread crumbs with one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter. Place a layer of sweetened rhubarb sauce in a baking dish and cover with the buttered crumbs; repeat, adding a dash of cinnamon or nutmeg until one quart of sauce and all the crumbs are used. Bake fifteen minutes. The fresh rhubarb may be used, adding sugar for each layer and baking twenty-five minutes. Serve with a hard sauce.

Peach Dainty.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter with one cupful of sugar and add the yolks of two eggs lightly beaten. Now add one pint of whipping cream beaten stiff and one quart of sliced peaches. Scrape over sliced angel food or sponge cake.

Jellied Custard With Peaches.—Prepare the following custard and mold: Take one tablespoonful of gelatin, soften in one and one-half pints of milk, heat to boiling and pour over the beaten yolks of three eggs and one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of almond; cook well, adding the almond after the mixture is taken from the stove. Fold in the beaten whites and turn into a large mold. When chilled serve with sliced peaches and cream.

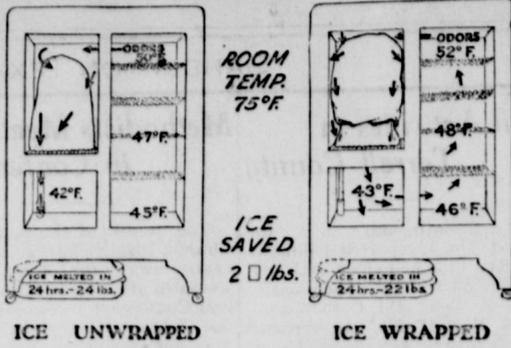

Asparagus Wholesome

Asparagus, freshly cut and immediately served is a wholesome and appetizing product of the garden. As it is one of the earliest green vegetables it is especially enjoyed.

Wild asparagus, which is often found growing on the farm, may be used by the housewife. It furnishes nourishment for the family which would otherwise be used by the plant in the growth of its stalk and leaves.

For green asparagus the shoots are cut near the surface of the soil, while for white asparagus the shoots are cut several inches below the surface as soon as the tops appear.

Ice Should Not Be Wrapped

ICE UNWRAPPED ICE WRAPPED
Difference in Temperature in Two Boxes.

Wrapping may save ice, (a cent a day), but it does not save food. Unwrapped ice melts slightly faster, therefore gives lower temperatures and furnishes surfaces for condensation of odors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A better understanding of what goes on when we put ice and food into a refrigerator has led to an absolute repudiation of "ice blankets."

or any sort of paper or cloth covering that retards the melting of the ice. It is true that wrapped ice does not melt as fast as unwrapped, but for that very reason it does not give as low temperatures in the refrigerator as unwrapped ice. In a good refrigerator the faster ice melts the lower the temperature of the air around it. More surface is also furnished by melting ice for the absorption of odors. The important thing in using a refrigerator is that it shall be possible to maintain temperatures low enough to safeguard milk and meat, especially since bacterial increase goes on very rapidly in these foods above certain temperatures. Below forty-five degrees is now considered proper for a 24-hour storage of milk and meat.

The diagram prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture shows the difference in temperature in two boxes, one with unwrapped the other with wrapped ice. Currents of cold air move downward from the melting ice so that the place just below the ice on the floor of the refrigerator is the coldest spot. In the first case it is 42 degrees Fahrenheit in this part of the box and in the second, 43 degrees Fahrenheit.

In laboratory tests made by the bureau the total amount of ice saved in 24 hours by wrapping was two pounds, worth about one cent a day, but to save this small amount the housekeeper runs the risk of insufficient refrigeration and failure to have odors absorbed. These shortcomings defeat the entire purpose of refrigeration.

SOME HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Cheese is an excellent meat substitute because it is rich in protein and fat and contains calcium, phosphorus, and vitamin A.

Blankets should be hung for drying so the stripes are vertical. This prevents the brighter colors from running into the ground color.

To cut butter without having it stick to the knife, rinse the knife off with hot water first, or fold a piece of waxed paper over the sharp edge.

The miles she walks in her work, not to her work, are what make the housewife weary. Rearranging equipment will often reduce the distances.

Historic Vessels

The names of the vessels which brought the first colonists to Jamestown, Va., were the Sarah Constant, the Godspeed and the Discovery. They came to anchor off the island where Jamestown was established on May 13, 1607.

Shakespeare's Family

William Shakespeare was the third child in the family. Two daughters, who died in infancy, were the first and second children. The others were Gilbert, Joan, Anne, Richard and Edmund.

Story for Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"My seasons," Saturn told Harry, "are like yours in their degrees of warmth, mild weather, and so forth—only every one of my seasons lasts seven years."

"Do you mean seven years of winter and seven years of spring and seven years of summer and so on?" asked Harry.

"Just what I mean," said Saturn. "Glad you get the idea at once."

"Do you find anyone grumbling over having a season last so long? Now if we have too long a winter or too long a spring people grumble."

"I never hear complaints."

Harry had hoped from the way in which he had put his question that Saturn would give himself away and answer that having no people on his planet there could be no complaints. But Saturn's eyes twinkled as he answered, for he knew what was in Harry's mind. However, Harry was just about certain that there was no life here. From the look of what he could see he could tell that it was very hot and that it was not like his earth where so many creatures lived.

It was the strangest thing—but at this moment Cosmo arrived with the plane. How well they were going to guard their secrets! Harry said goodbye to Saturn hurriedly for Cosmo said they mustn't be late.

"Don't forget to look at my rings through a telescope next time you get a chance," Saturn called out. "Sorry I couldn't have shown them to you here, but on account of going around me—" Harry did not hear the end of the sentence. For they were flying once more.

He made himself quite at home in the plane now. He looked at some of the charts as he ate sandwiches.

"We'll just whiz by Uranus," said Cosmo. "He's next to the most distant planet and you can't see him without a telescope. You're always asking about life on the planets. Of course they wonder most about Mars and a little about Venus, but I will tell you that there's no life on Uranus—nor on Neptune. Both are too hot. Stars are also too hot.

"Uranus was named after an ancient god. A brilliant man named William Herschel discovered him but was too modest to have the planet named after himself so chose the name of an old god instead."

"If I ever did anything like discovering a planet I'm sure I would want it named after me," Harry said, "although I'm not strong for conceited people."

They flew by Uranus, looking out at it from the windows of the plane. It seemed very large from their view of it—so close at hand—and then the pilot went in the direction of Neptune.

"Neptune was discovered less than one hundred years ago by an Englishman named John Couch Adams, but he named this planet after Father Neptune. About the same time, too, a French astronomer named Leverrier discovered this planet."

"Have either of these planets a moon?" Harry asked.

"Yes, Neptune has a moon to keep him company way off in the sky. And Uranus has four little ones."

"Better than none, I should say," Harry remarked.

"But now we must visit the stars. Oh, there is so much to be seen. Your Solar system amounts to so little when we think how much else there is—such countless stars, and other sky families."

Embroidered Fabrics Are Popular

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Fashions at afternoon parties and other daytime social affairs are resplendent with the motifs, fabrics, colors and the general gaiety so characteristic of the 1930 modes.

An interesting trend observed at these "dressy" afternoon occasions is the use of embroidered fabrics. It will be seen by the sketches herewith that we are slipping back gracefully to a designfulness, so far as materials are concerned, which for some time past has been omitted from the style program. We refer to the application of embroidery floss in decorative motifs on plain backgrounds, also embroidered eyelet effects.

For the costume to the left in the illustration the designer chooses one of the very new embroidered fabrics—crisp linen in this instance, the patterning worked in soft dureau yarns of subtle luster and extremely clear and buoyant colors.

The formal afternoon frock to the left seen at Aiken, where the sun shines brightly and garden parties are consequently in order, illustrates the revival of sheer batiste with eyelets embroidered in softly sparkling dureau, which by the way is a new nationally used term referring to an improved method of mercerizing cotton. Durened cotton is stronger, more sparkling and more porous than ordinary cotton.

The use of the uneven peplum should be noted in the sketch at the right. It flares up in the front while the long skirt line remains even. The handkerchief cape is removable, leaving the frock with a definite sleeveless dinner-gown character.

These sketches point to more than one good fashion lesson—contrast in frocks and wraps for afternoon, both normal and high waistlines, hats, coats and shoes matching or their color harmonies contrasting the tone coloring of the costumes with which they are worn. Vogue for the hand bag, which is of the same material as one's gown, is accentuated in the figure to the right.

Shoulder of Lamb Easily Boned

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A shoulder of lamb is one of the most tender and juicy cuts, but it is sometimes passed by because the housewife believes it will be difficult to carve. All of the bones can be easily removed, however, and the meat is then sliced without any trouble. The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture likes a boned shoulder to be stuffed and sewed up for baking in the form of a "cushion roast" rather than a rolled roast. Directions for taking the bones out properly are given by the Bureau of Animal Industry.

The first requisite is a sharp knife with a narrow blade about 4 or 5 inches long and half an inch wide. Do not keep this knife in a kitchen drawer among other kitchen tools, or where it is likely to be picked up for odd uses, like peeling potatoes or whittling.

Lamb shoulder, as cut for the retail trade, is almost as square and plump as a cushion. It contains four or five ribs, the shoulder blade, the round arm bone, and part of the neck. To bone it, lay the shoulder flat on the table with the fat side down and the rib side up. First, slip the knife under the edges of the ribs and follow down along them to the neck bone, leaving just as much meat as possible on the shoulder. Cut the ribs and the neck bones from the meat. Inside the shoulder there still remain the blade bone and the short end of the arm. The flat blade and the round arm bone form a sort of ell that extends through the center of the shoulder. The edge of the blade bone can be seen on the rear of the shoulder, and the arm bone on the side toward the one who is cutting. Slip the knife deep into the meat along the top or smooth side of the shoulder blade. Continue the cut around the corner to the arm bone, raising a flap of lean meat that can be laid back far enough to expose the full length of the bones. Peel out the shoulder blade and arm bone. You now have a cushion of meat open on one side, with a fine large pocket to hold a tasty stuffing. Whether roasted with or without stuffing, the edges of the pocket should be sewed together before cooking.

EMMA Lee Stepp is seven years old and weighs 68 pounds. "Every time she has been in a contest," says her mother, Mrs. E. E. Stepp, Box 326, Jenks, Oklahoma, "she has been judged perfect."

"We almost always have California Fig Syrup. We give Emma a little when she shows the least sign of constipation, or seems to be catching cold. It has been of great help in keeping her in such splendid condition."

Children suffer when bowels aren't regular. Breath becomes fetid; tongue coated; eyes dull. When these symptoms are neglected, biliousness, feverishness, lack of appetite invariably follow.

The first spoonful of California Fig Syrup relieves all symptoms of constipation. Successive doses help tone and strengthen weak bowels; stimulate appetite and digestion. "The genuine, pure vegetable product is marked by the name California. So look for that when buying."

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island, though he does not disclose the name of the place. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshawe.

Three times, then—by my poverty, by her position, and by the significance of that ring—Pia was not for me.

I believed what Jinny had said; I was very sure she was no liar. It was merely a determination to leave no stone unturned, that made me decide I would see Pia once more—only once—before I left the ship, and ask her to her face if what I heard was true.

Once, across the saloon that night, I saw the clear profile, the beautifully shaped black head. Once, on deck, the rose-geranium perfume that Pia Laurier used, came floating across a little space of dark, and I saw a pale dress pass—hesitate—go on again. I did not move; I said no word. If I am angry, I am angry. That night, I had liefer taken the velvet neck of Pia in my hands, and twisted it back till it gave way, cracking, in my hands, (as I have twisted the neck of a German, rolling together in trench mud) than held her and kissed her as I had not yet done; as, I knew now, I never should.

It was very early when the engines came to rest next morning, and the ship, her way stopped, lay still upon the emerald-blue waters that surround Gele Island.

Here the tender from Thursday was to meet us, and here my false splendors were to end. Phil Amory, bit of war wastage, trader from the back end of nowhere, was "to be taken to the place from whence he came." And if, once arrived there, he chose to hang himself by the neck till he was dead, it would be nobody's business but his own.

My suitcases were on deck, my steward tipped, the tender rising and falling below the ladder, on which I was just about to set foot, when the sound of my name, clearly and almost precisely spoken, made me look round.

Pia was there, at the head of the accommodation ladder, holding out her hand, the hand that did not bear the emerald ring.

I could not refuse to take it. I felt her cool fingers in mine, for one everlasting moment; and it was as if they came, in that moment, home, where they had always belonged. I don't know which of us first let go. The tender that in one moment, with the tender dancing below and the luggage gone, and the passengers who were to join coming up the ladder, I realized that I had been an incredible fool, and that it was too late to do anything at all about it. If she was engaged—if she wasn't—she liked me. She had not been flirting. Her eyes were dark with sleeplessness, and the shadow that comes of love denied. She looked at me, and made the little movement with her lips that means "you know. And I would have given five years of my life for the chance—impossible now—of taking her in my arms and kissing her very breath away."

All round us there were deckhands scrubbing, stewards carrying things, the fourth officer was posted at the head of the ladder, a stewardess, armored in white starch—God knows what she wanted there—was gazing in the nearest doorway. Passengers, new arrivals, began to shove past Pia and myself, coming between us. "Sir," said some cursed person, "if you want to go ashore, you'd better not keep the tender; captain's anxious to get away."

I don't know what I'd have done—missed my passage, maybe, and trusted to luck to see me back from the East when I had spent every coin I owned, getting there—if, at that minute, a very tall, thin man had not come up the ladder, pushed determinedly between Pia and myself, and taken her by both hands. He kept pumping her wrists up and down, and staring at her as if he could never have enough of it. He was extremely handsome—sharp regular features, somewhat marred by a brief George V beard, chestnut hair clipped close to keep it from waving, large, brown, hard eyes, figure of an athlete. I could have cheerfully split his skull with an ax. I knew who he was without asking; but if confirmation was needed, I had it when an obsequious steward rushed forward, treading on my toes as he went, and bleated—"What cabin, Sir Richard? Shall I take your luggage, Sir Richard?" Instantly the whole weight of the social system by and in which the clan of Lauriers lived, seemed to press down upon me like a giant hand, pushing, relentlessly, Pia and myself apart. I saw in one thousand-faceted vision, the world my people had owned and lost; its myriad reserves, defenses, shibboleths, its fierce pride and pitiless scorn; its solid pedestal of property, lifting all who belonged to it far, very far above the mud and dust in which we others must go.

The tense moment passed. Sir Richard had let go Pia's hand; was busying himself with the traveler's eternal preoccupation of baggage. I had seen what I had seen, and I knew, as well as if I had had an hour to think it all out, instead of a couple of seconds, that what was—for Pia—was best. I could wreck her engagement if I chose—of this I was sure—but I was equally sure that if I could, I would not. I would drop out of her world as I had dropped in. The male Cinderella's pumpkin coach was ready; his hour had struck; back to the ashes! and let the fairy princess stay in her palace, undisturbed.

If I was sick at heart, as I went down that endless stair, I was doubtless no worse than many millions elsewhere who were sick at heart that day, and of the same disease. So I tried to tell myself, when the tender was reached, and I had found a seat on the roof of the cabin, and the engine was beginning to turn over with loud spitting and drumming noises. So I tried to believe, when I saw the face of Pia looking down at me from the rail, a long, long way above, and felt her eyes fall on me like the light of a star, strange, sad, remotely fair. I, who was merry enough by nature, had no laughter left in me that day, else I think I must have been amused at the sudden sight of Mrs. Laurier, arrived too late, shooting her celebrated death-ray at me "with intent," as she stood, kimono-clad, in the alleyway door. Or at the other, fairer vision on the ship's sacred bridge—I knew at once that only Jinny could thus profane the high altar—holding an imaginary glass to its lips, waving an arm at me, and shouting what I guessed at, but could not hear—"Drink hearty, we'll soon be dead!"

Then the tender champed and fussed away, and the ship receded faster and faster, and that chapter of my life was done.

CHAPTER III

I came back to Daru, off western Papua, on a brimming tide, that masked the mud-flats with acres of reflected island, miles of bright mirrored sky. The dream that I had dreamed on the great liner clung about me still, but only as the aftermath of an opium carouse may cling about a man who has left behind him, days and miles away, the place where he drank, and dreamed.

I reached the Daru roadstead, anchored, slung my dinghy out (for I had made the hundred-and-twenty-mile run across from Australia, alone) got pratique from the thin, young government official who rowed out to meet me, and changed with him the news of the islands.

By and by I slung my gear together, looked to the cable of the cutter, rowed myself ashore and pulled the dinghy upon the stones. I walked upon the endless stretch of Daru Jetty. The tide, now, was running fast away to sea, and the coming sunset was reflected in sheets of muddy flame upon the flats left bare. I had slipped through the magic door, got myself into the Fourth Dimensional world that lies beyond the world that most men know.

If the thought of Pia Laurier came back to me, in my trading store, behind the beach of Daru, I think it came as a chime of bells comes, from some distant clock tower, sounding often, scarcely heard; part of one's life, yet scarcely remembered, unless, for any reason, its music is withdrawn. Possibly I would have told anyone who asked, that I did not think of her.

She had gone through my life—it seemed—as a sudden gust of wind goes through a house, scattering the common things of hourly use, breaking the mirrors, slamming windows and doors, and making the place look as if nothing would ever be the same again.

But winds pass by, and household goods are gathered and set up once more. The wind that was Pia had blown, and passed—I thought.

One trace it had left, I could not keep from thinking of Sir Richard Fanshawe. He troubled me. Not so much because he was going to marry Pia, though that was a spot of raw pain, never unnecessarily to be touched—but because of a certain, odd, floating resemblance in his face to something, some one undetermined, that had struck me, in those few moments upon the ladder of the ship. It worried me as a name, half forgotten, worries; and that is like a loose tooth in the mouth.

It troubled me at the oddest moments. My store—I think I have not told you—was almost on the beach. It stood perched upon high piles, with a flight of rough steps leading up and in. The interior was one large dusky cave, with light that fell from doors set at each end. At first, you didn't see much; in a minute or two, the shining clusters of tin billycans and pannikins in the roof, and the piled strata of cottons, red, yellow, pink and green, and the loin cloths and the yard-long knives, and the strings of beads, like strange little fruits, and the plates and the lanterns and the sacks of rice and the towers of tinned meats and fish, became dimly visible, each in its place.

There was always a wind blowing through, from door to door, and there was a mossy and fishy smell from the reef, not unpleasant, and a warm whiff of frangipanni flowers; for Daru is full of these. . . . Daru, Daru by the western boundary of Papua, where civilization stops, ships come seldom, and time is marked by rise and set of sun—Daru, an island, filled with the spirit of the islands, holds in its heart, though it is Western Pacific, the secret of the true South Seas.

All very well, and I felt it, as I moved about among my cottons and tins, bargaining with wild fellows from the Fly for a canoe load of coconuts, selling tinned meat for turtle-shell, rice for a catch of trocas. I felt it, and liked it, for I had tasted the honey of the South Sea world, and its flavor was pleasant to recall, though in truth the strong liquor of the Western Islands suited me best. But why—why was the store, and the blaze of green bush and dazzle of seawater, seen through its open doorway, and the smells of reef and shell and frangipanni flower—ay, and the very winds that blew unendingly from door to door—why was all this connected in my mind with Richard Fanshawe, airman, company promoter, wealthy man and future custodian of Pia Laurier's life?

Temper Shortens When Age of 40 Is Reached

Are you approaching forty? Beware! Between the ages of forty and sixty ones "pet peeves" are "at peak." Savants of the international congress of psychology announce that the child, and the young man and woman, are fairly broad-minded about annoyances. Having survived such trivialities until forty, one is inclined to let go, and it is from that time until one is sixty that you should guard against becoming slave to your dislikes.

A better plan would be to remove one's self from the scenes of temptation. If one dislikes mosquitoes, he should try to find a place where there aren't any. If a man, and it irks you to dance with stout ladies, crash the high school dances and sub-sub parties. If, now in the thirties, you develop morose tendencies when the saxophone player next door tunes up, move away before forty, unless you wish to give your murder complex play. This may be bad psychology, but it's good advice.

Pen "Made Good"

Many years ago a boy went into an examination room with a new pen in his hand. He had great hopes of the new pen, but when he found he had failed in the examination he took his pen aside and gave it a good talking to.

"This won't do, old boy," he told the pen. "Somehow you and I have got to redeem this failure."

The pen must have understood, for the boy became Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, the famous author, and in telling this story of his early days he mentioned that all the books he had written under the pen name of "Q." had been produced with the help of that very pen.—London Tit-Bits.

"Old Abe"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

RECENTLY there was added to the war collections of the National museum in the Smithsonian institution in Washington an exhibit that is unique. In strange contrast to the imposing array of trophies and other relics of the conflicts in which this nation has engaged is the stuffed body of a scraggly-tailed pigeon with one leg shattered and twisted out of shape, yet it is mute testimony to one of the heroic deeds of the World War. For this bird is "President Wilson," the most famous carrier pigeon of all that served with the A. E. F. and hero of innumerable long and dangerous flights during the World War.

It began at Grand Pre. On the morning of November 5, 1918, advance units of the Americans were dismayed to find their communication lines dead. Radio failed, too, because of the overcrowded air. At Rampont, 25 miles away, was headquarters where staff officers anxiously awaited word from Grand Pre. Between the two points lay an inferno of fire and smoke, shot and shell. But there was no other way. The all-important message was entrusted to "President Wilson" which was soon winging its way toward Rampont.

Twenty-five minutes later the painting bird fluttered down in front of headquarters at Rampont, the message, intact, dangling from the torn ligaments of its wounded leg. Like many a human warrior "President Wilson" had been safely through the fighting from the start only to meet mishap with the armistice almost at hand.

That was the faithful little flyer's last time under fire. Nursed back to recovery "President Wilson" for the past eleven years has been an active member of the army pigeon loft at Fort Monmouth, N. J., giving the younger birds valuable pointers in the art of message bearing under war conditions. Death came quietly to the famous bird while asleep recently and the army decided to have the body stuffed and mounted. An officer of the signal corps accompanied it to the Smithsonian institution where it is now enshrined.

But even though "Taps" have sounded for this hero bird, there are still living others of his tribe whose records are nearly as remarkable. Visit Fort Monmouth, between Red Bank and Long Branch, N. J., today and you can see some of them.

Here you will see most of the famous war birds which rendered such valiant service with the signal corps in France, among them those two veterans, "Spike" and "Mocker," almost as renowned as "President Wilson." Here also you will see a number of captured German birds, but perhaps most interesting of all are the various pigeons which played an important role in the operations of the famous "Lost Battalion."

The story of the "Lost Battalion" is so familiar to most Americans that it needs no retelling—even though the name is a misnomer and most Americans therefore have a wrong idea about it. For Major Whittlesey's outfit never was really "lost"—it was "cut off" or "beleaguered." But be that as it may, the fact remains that had it not been for seven carrier pigeons, which the commander of that devoted band sent out from time to time, Major Whittlesey could not have sent word of his location back to his superior officers, they could not have rendered him such aid as they did, the Germans probably would have wiped the detachment out of existence before help arrived and it would have been a "Lost Battalion" indeed.

It was during the "push" of the Seventy-seventh division in the Argonne on October 2 that six companies of the first and second battalions of the Three Hundred and Eighth Infantry, one company of the Three Hundred and Seventh Infantry and two sections from the Three Hundred and Sixth machine gun battalion, all consolidated under the command of Maj. Charles W. Whittlesey, discovered that German forces were behind them and they were cut off from communication with the rear. At 8:50 a. m. on October 3, Major Whittlesey sent his pigeon with this message: "We are being shelled by German artillery. Can we not have artillery support? Fire is coming from northwest." At vari-he flew back to his place of peril, and held it until the close of the contest. At the battle of Corinth the Confederate general, Price, discovered him and ordered his men to 'take him if they could not kill him, adding that 'he would rather capture that bird than the whole brigade.'

It is of "Old Abe's" conduct at this same battle of Corinth that another historian writes: "The regiment is in Mower's brigade and 'Old Abe' is on his perch, looking out over the scene. Cannon are thundering around him; there are long rolls of musketry; the air is thick with bullets. From the flank comes a fearful volley, enflaming the line, cutting down scores of men, and severing the cord which holds 'Old Abe' to the staff. He flaps his wings, rises above the two armies, circles out over the Confederates, then back again to his friends and lights once more on his perch. The regiment is in retreat, and Old Abe goes with it, to be in a score of battles and to come out of them all unharmed."

Almost as renowned as "Old Abe" of the Civil War in our national tradition is a game cock which enjoyed a brief moment of fame during the War of 1812. In 1814 Lieut. Thomas MacDonough was placed in charge of a small American fleet on Lake Champlain to resist a strong British fleet which was moving down the lake to attack northern New York. On the morning of September 11 the British attacked the Americans in Plattsburgh bay. At the beginning Commodore Downie, the British commander, on his flagship, the Confiance, attempted to break the American line but was met by a devastating fire from the Saratoga, MacDonough's flagship.

Thereupon the battle resolved itself into a sort of a duel between the two flagships, both of which dropped anchor and at a distance of 250 yards from each other prepared to "shoot it out." The first broadside from the Confiance, which had heavier guns than the Saratoga, all but wrecked the American vessel. But it did something else. According to one of our school histories "At the first broadside fired by the enemy a young game cock kept as a pet on board MacDonough's ship, the Saratoga, flew up upon a gun; flapping his wings, he gave a crow of defiance that rang like the blast of a trumpet. Swinging their hats, MacDonough's men cheered the plucky bird again and again. He had foretold victory. That was enough. They went into the fight with such ardor, and managed their vessels with such skill that in less than three hours all of the British ships that had not hauled down their flags were scudding to a place of safety as rapidly as possible."

Cyrus Townsend Brady gives a slightly less theatrical version of the incident. He says "It has been fondly noted by various writers that the first terrible broadside of the Confiance smashed a chicken coop on one of the American vessels, thus liberating a game cock, which sprang into the rigging and with lusty crowing encouraged the cheering crews. Inasmuch as nearly every writer puts the chicken in a different ship, it is safe to conclude that there must have been one chicken there, and the incident probably did occur. At any rate, if it was an American chicken, it would certainly crow upon being made free."

Before the battle began "MacDonough bade his waiting crews to prayer. There at their stations with bowed heads they knelt down upon the white decks, soon to be stained with their own blood, while with his own lips, in the familiar words of the Book of Common Prayer, the young commander invoked the protection of the God of Battles for the coming conflict—a rare and memorable scene indeed!" Spears, the naval historian, in commenting upon these two incidents, says, "with all due respect to religion, that for the purpose of rousing the seamen a rooster in the rigging is worth more than a dozen prayers on the quarter deck."

Lesson for June 8

JESUS IN THE SHADOW OF THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:1-46. GOLDEN TEXT—He went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O, my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Proves His Love for Us. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Suffering for Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Agony in the Garden. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Gethsemane.

I. Plotting the Death of Jesus (vv. 1-5).

Christ with divine insight predicted not only the fact of His death, but its time and manner. The Jewish authorities in secret conclaves were plotting to silence His voice by putting him to death. In spite of themselves they were moving in the line of God's decree.

II. Mary of Bethany Anoints Jesus (vv. 6-13).

1. The meaning of the act (vv. 6, 7). This anointing occurred when Jesus was at meat in Simon's house. Mary had the keenest apprehension of all the disciples. By sitting at His feet in loving fellowship, she obtained a grasp of truth which none of the other disciples had.

2. The indignation of the disciples (vv. 8, 9). The action of the disciples is in strange contrast with Mary's love. 3. Mary defended by Christ (vv. 10-13).

Jesus could not allow His most appreciative disciple to lie under this curse, so He came to her rescue. As a result of Christ's defense, Judas is so stung by rebuke that he hastens away to betray his Lord.

III. Jesus Betrayed (vv. 14-30).

1. The bargain of betrayal (vv. 14-16).

2. The betrayal announced (vv. 17-20).

3. While they were eating the Passover Jesus made this announcement. Who knows but that the reason for the announcement at this time was to give Judas an opportunity to repent?

4. The disciples warned (vv. 31-33).

This took place as they walked from the upper room to the garden of Gethsemane. Jesus plainly told them, "All ye shall be offended because of me this night," quoting Zechariah 13:7 as proof. Though He told them of the darkness which was gathering, yet He gave them a glimpse of the coming light. He said, "After I am risen again I will go before you into Galilee."

V. Jesus Praying (vv. 36-46).

1. The place—the Garden of Gethsemane (v. 36).

2. His companions (v. 37).

3. Peter, James and John. The same disciples who had been with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration are permitted to go with Him into the deep shadow of the Garden. They slept, while He prayed.

4. Jesus sorrowing even unto death (vv. 37, 38).

The cause of His suffering was not primarily physical, but spiritual. The physical is not to be minimized, but the burden of sin—the world's sin—was pressing heavily upon Him. He was being made sin for us (II Cor. 5:21).

5. The prayer itself (v. 39). "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." What was this cup? It was not prayer to be delivered from the cross. The idea that He desired to escape from the cross and thus stop short of His redemptive work is not to be entertained. Redemption through the sacrifice of Himself was the supreme purpose of His coming into the world.

6. An Important Power. Man has one power in particular which is not sufficiently dwelt on. It is the power of making the world happy, or at least of so greatly diminishing the amount of unhappiness in it as to make quite a different world from what it is at present. The power is called kindness.—F. W. Faber.

7. Four R's Needed. We need the four R's, not three: Reading, Rithmic and Religion.—The Burning Bush.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA By G. M. KILBOURN

Mountain With a Hippopotamus Mouth

NEW MEXICO, within the last five years, has become the Pied Piper of the nations. Sounding a strange and persistent melody of countless buried treasure for every scenic freebooter on the main, she has drawn from every American state and from many foreign nations a steadily increasing horde who ride hundreds of miles, or even thousands, just to disappear 'Pied Piper style, for a day, in a gaping, almost bottomless hole in a barren little mountainside. This multitude—jumping from thirteen hundred in 1924 to seventy-seven thousand in 1929—is probably the fastest-growing army of pilgrims that ever stampeded for an American scenic shrine.

Add to that amazing gain the fact that this hippopotamus-mouthed mountainside is far off the beaten tracks of both commerce and travel, remote from any large population center, that ninety per cent of its last year's visitors had to come from some other state, and you will have some idea of the tremendous lure and fascination which has made the Carlsbad cave national monument, southeastern New Mexico, a major national scenic celebrity almost overnight, and which has imparted to most of its visitors not only the convert's assurance but the missionary's zeal. Yellowstone National park of course is the classic western wonderland; but this new rival has drawn more visitors in its sixth season than Yellowstone attracted in its fiftieth!

Although the existence of the cave was long known to ranchers of the locality, it was the interest of Jim White, a cowboy who first visited it in 1901 and who devoted his spare time for years to exploring it, that attracted national attention and led to its designation as a national monument in 1923. Scientific recognition followed in the reports of the late Dr. Willis T. Lee of the U. S. geological survey, which appeared in the National Geographic Magazine in January, 1924, and September, 1925, the latter article summarizing: "Carlsbad caverns, New Mexico, is the most spectacular of underground wonders in America. For spacious chambers, for variety and beauty of the multitudinous natural decorations, and for general scenic quality, it is king of its kind."

The famous big room of the cave is three hundred feet high, six hundred feet wide, and three-fourths of a mile long. But even such a cavern is only a small part of the whole, which is a many-decked, three-dimensional lacework or honeycomb of caverns known to reach back as far as twenty-one miles. Visitors make a seven-mile loop, entering daily at 10:30 a. m. the year round, and spending from five to six hours in the cave. Guide service costs $2 per adult, with children free. Rail visitors pay $3 each for the twenty-eight-mile bus trip from the town of Carlsbad, while autoists drive to the cave entrance. Round-trip rail fare on the Santa Fe branch line to Carlsbad from Clovis, N. M., on the Bolen cut-off branch of the main line, is $6.62.

No less amazing than the size and variety of the cavern is its dramatic quality. A visit is a one-day trip to Mars or some other distant world; its sights are sculptured poems of Miltonic sweep and ecstasy. And in that huge gateway where daylight meets gayest dreamland, you know exactly how Columbus must have felt.

A War One

Vice Commander John E. Curtis of the American Legion told a war story at a banquet in Lincoln.

"Bullets and hand grenades weren't the only things," he said, "that passed between the trenches in those days. Wit passed between, too. It was passable. For instance:

"A German shouted in good English one morning from a front line trench: 'Hey, anybody from Chi over there?'

"'I'm from Chi,' a young Chicagoan shouted back.

"'Good old Chi!' roared the German. 'Give her my love. I used to live there. I got four wives and seventeen children in Chi.'

"Then the Chicagoan came back as quick as a flash with: 'Well, stick yer head up, Hoine, and I'll turn 'em into four widders and seventeen orphans.'"

LIGHTS By GRANT DIXON of NEW YORK

Beauty Contract

The recent death of a show girl, whose health had been broken through dieting to keep her figure, brings to light a more or less standard contract which beauties sign with music-show producers. It states: "It is expressly made part of this agreement, that if at any time you should, during the term of said arrangement, increase in weight more than sixteen pounds, or decrease in weight more than ten pounds, or let the dimensions of any part of your figure vary more than one-half inch from the following: weight, 115; neck, 12½ inches; bust, 34; upper arm, 11; lower arm, 7½; waist, 26; hips, 34; thigh, 18; calf, 12; ankles, 8½; then and in that event we shall have a right to cancel this contract upon giving you one week's notice." Measurements, of course, vary with each girl.

Radio Chat

Short-wave wireless telephone communication with far-distant points on the globe depends upon many factors which wireless engineers have charted, with the result that, if one wishes to broadcast to Java, Madagascar, South Africa, Germany or any other place, it is a simple matter to find out the wave length, the time of the year and the time of the day when one will be most successful.

Not long ago a radio engineer was conducting experimental communication with a station in Sydney, Australia, where a man named McDonald was operating the apparatus. They chatted about this and that, and then McDonald introduced his wife to the American.

"This is Schenectady," said the American. "Can you say Schenectady?" "Oh, yes," said Mrs. McDonald. "But what does it mean?"

"It's the name of a city. It means the river valley beyond the pines."

"How clever!" said Mrs. McDonald.

Ho, Hum!

Commissioner Whalen is authority for the statement that New York is one of the safest cities in the country, as far as burglary, assault and robbery go. Basing his figures on every 100,000 in population, he recently told insurance men that New York has, each year, 73.6 of these three crimes per 100,000 persons, while Los Angeles has 331.3, Chicago 170.4, Detroit 161.8, and Cleveland 288.3. That's a comfort on a dark night here, but what about Los Angeles?

Reason Why

Tourists returning from Paris aren't bringing in as much jewelry as they used to, according to customs officials, and one of the reasons is the ambition of Parisian salesmen to collect rewards. The story of a couple who spent their honeymoon in Paris is typical. A jewelry salesman visited them at their hotel, and persuaded the bridegroom to purchase a bracelet for his wife. "It's cheaper over here," he said, "and you can smuggle it in. Here: I'll show you how." And he showed the girl how to wear the bracelet under her glove to escape detection.

They purchased the bracelet, and the salesman, armed with information concerning the boat they were taking home, warned United States agents of an attempt to smuggle jewelry. When the bride and groom arrived in New York they were assessed a stiff fine—and the Parisian jewelry salesman got 25 per cent of the fine as a reward.

This and That

Long evening gloves, colored to match the costume, have appeared in Fifth avenue stores, at $40 the pair. A scientist has figured it out that we first-nighters are in peril of our lives. One person out of 150 regular theatergoers, says he, becomes diseased and dies from the impurity of the theaters. Ho, hum. And while that is going on, five more die of ennu, in his guess.

Buffalo in the Arctic As a result of the success attending the introduction of the reindeer into the American Arctic, the experiment has been tried with buffalo taken from points in the northern part of the United States and southern Canada. Nineteen American buffaloes were liberated more than a year ago at Jarvis creek in Alaska, and while they have been carefully watched they have been given no special care, except an occasional ration of food when nature had cut off the supply. The last reports indicate that the animals were thriving in the most satisfactory manner.
