Sanderson Boy Making Good

Minton White of Sanderson has been elected one of the co-captains of Uncle Billy Ditch's 1931 Longhorn baseball squad. White, who is also a forward on the basketball squad, has been on the campus three years, during which time he made a numeral in freshman baseball, a reserve letter in varsity baseball, and a letter in basketball and baseball.

White came up from Schreiner Institute at Kerrville three years ago, and reported for Marty Karow's freshman baseball squad. He played short-stop, and at that position he played brilliant if at times erratic baseball. Last year White reported for the varsity, and though he turned in some sensational fielding his light stick kept him from a berth on the varsity. During the latter part of the season he began hitting and it seemed as if he could not be held from a regular position, but then old Lady Hard Luck overtook him and he was forced to the bench for the remainder of the season. He was struck in the head by a batted ball in batting practice one afternoon, and as a result he sustained a painful injury that later caused an operation.

When the 1930 season opened White was switched to the outfield. Then, it seemed as if almost overnight he developed into one of the best players in the conference. He began running bases well, his fly chasing was unequalled, and he ironed out his batting stance and began hitting so hard that he was placed third in the batting order. The result of this was that when the season closed he ranked third among the Longhorn sluggers with an average of .305 and his fielding was 1,000.

Jessie McPhee, Sam Bell No. 1, reported unloading standard equipment.

Two sub-surface tests on the Stansell and Jones ranch in Block D-10 T. C. Ry. Co. survey, reported resuming developments. Just how deep these tests will go has not yet been determined.

Trans-Pecos Oil & Gas Company, Jones No. 1, on section 18 in Block G-15 G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey in Brewster County, about forty miles southwest of this city, is reported drilling at the depth of 2400 feet with another good showing of oil and gas.

The Schupbach well on section 1020 J. A. Carter survey in Brewster County, about fifteen miles southwest of this city, had three showings of oil and gas between the depths of 665 feet and 750 feet. The samples from these depths have been submitted by J. C. Stansell of this city to major companies for a laboratory test and he has been advised that these samples are somewhat siliceous and bituminous and also porous, and were classified as Fredericksburg subdivision of the Edwards limestone. The geological features on the O. T. Schupbach ranch seems to be similar to those of the Luff district, while the oil obtained from the well heretofore mentioned resembles in color that of the Texon field.

Wednesday Bridge Club

The Wednesday afternoon bridge club, was delightfully entertained at the Kerr hotel with Mrs. L. A. Lowe as hostess. The season's flowers made charming decorations in the ladies parlor in which 4 tables of bridge were enjoyed by Mesdames Lemons, Kerr, Griffith, Laurence, Daggett, Bogusch, Green, Carter, McKee, Savage, Dyer, Dishman, Breeding, Holman, McKnight, Bodkin, and Miss Kate Frazier tea guest. A delicious salad course with angel food squares displaying card emblems, and gingerale ice was served.

High scores went to Mesdames McKnight and McKee.

Old Pioneer Passes Away

Sorrow touched the hearts of the citizens of this community Wednesday morning, June 4, when news was received from San Antonio announcing the death of Mrs. Mary Schupbach. Mrs. Schupbach was taken to San Antonio a few weeks ago for medical treatment.

This venerable lady was born in Leesville, Gonzales County, Texas, on July 19, 1853, and died in San Antonio, Texas, June 4, 1930, aged 76 years, 10 months and 15 days. In 1874, at the age of 21 years she was united in Marriage to William Schupbach in Gonzales, Texas. Of this union seven children were born, five of whom are now living: Jim Schupbach of Webb, Ariz.; Carl Schupbach of Somerton, Ariz.; O. E. Schupbach of this city, O. T. Schupbach of this city, and Ralph Schupbach of El Freida, Ariz. Mrs. Minnie Comolli, a daughter, died at Douglas, Ariz., four years ago, and Edna, a daughter, died in babyhood. Besides five sons Mrs. Schupbach is survived by her husband, William Schupbach, and two brothers, Fin Callison of Seguin, Texas; Frank Callison of Florida, and a sister, Mrs. R. E. McGuffin of San Antonio. All the children were at the funeral with the exception of Carl Schupbach.

Mr. and Mrs. Schupbach came to Terrell County 31 years ago. She was a member of the Baptist Church, having joined in Sonora, Texas, 37 years ago.

The funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church Thursday evening, June 5, at 5 o'clock and were conducted by the Rev. Ira Harrison of El Paso, pastor of the church. Burial took place in the Sanderson Cemetery immediately after the services. The funeral cortege was one of the largest ever witnessed in this county, and the floral offerings at the grave were beautiful and in abundance.

The Times joins with a large circle of friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Bridge Party.

Mrs. Jack Reinke of San Antonio who has been visiting her father, Dr. P. F. Robertson, was the inspiration of a delightful farewell bridge party given by Mesdames Herbert Buchanan and W. C. After several interesting games were played prizes were awarded to Mrs. S. S. Daggett, first, maderia napkins; Mrs. Lewis Lemons, second, card table cover; Mrs. H. D. Williams, cut, a pillow. Mrs. Reinke was presented with a beautiful purse. Delicious refreshments were served to the following guests: Mesdames W. Banner, C. M. Breeding, B. F. Davis, S. S. Daggett, H. E. Fletcher, J. C. Green, P. F. Holman, W. Henshaw, S. C. Bodkin, F. L. Burnside, P. E. Dishman, Lewis Lemons, J. McKee, James Nance, Frank Robertson, H. Dishman, J. C. Stansell, J. E. Yates, Edward Sterrett, S. A. Mrs. Simmons Is Greatly Improved

The editor of this paper returned home Tuesday night of this week from Pecos, Texas, where she has been at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Simmons of Buenavista, Texas, who has been in the Camy Hospital at that place for the last ten days.

Mrs. Simmons had an infection from a small sore on the bottom of her left foot which developed into blood poison. On Friday of last week it was decided necessary she undergo an operation whereby her limb was amputated just below the knee.

Mrs. Simmons has been dangerously ill and it is only through the ability of very able physicians and her ever-endurance and patience which gave her strength and faith that she is now with us.

R. M. Darling, husband of the editor, a lineman and electrician and who has been with the Western Public Service Company, at Holdrudge, Nebraska, arrived in Pecos Monday night of this week and accompanied Mrs. Darling on her return to Sanderson and

Improvements At The Post Office

Postmaster LeRoy Grigsby has been making a lot of improvements and re-arranging of the postoffice fixtures during the past few days. The box space has been changed so that instead of running straight across as heretofore it now forms an "L" shape, thereby giving more room for the installation of boxes. The stamp and call windows, and letter mailing box has been placed on the end instead of directly in front as formerly. Among the new improvements is the installation of 190 new keyless lock boxes at a cost of $700. This makes a total of 350 lock and key boxes and will make a total increase in the box receipts of $147.25 every quarter.

will make his home here. Mr. Darling will be connected with the Austin Bridge Company working some few miles out of Sanderson.

On Mr. and Mrs. Darling's departure from Pecos they left Mrs. Simmons resting the best possible and in wonderful spirits.

The writer wishes to thank all who have been so thoughtful the last ten days to hand in news items, also send in their changes for ads on time and wait patiently for all job printing.

Boys Like Belts on Their Clothes

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In the effort to do away with some of the usual complicated fastenings on small boys' suits, clothing specialists of the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture have eliminated several types of belts and are suggesting improvements in others. The belts that had to be put through a succession of loops around the waist, some of them out of reach in back, were especially aggravating. This type of belt had to be pulled out and put back whenever the trousers were unfastened.

Nevertheless, having a belt of some sort may be a very real pleasure to some small lads. They will not be very critical about the construction of it, just so it is a belt. The bureau has designed a very satisfactory and practical kind of belt that does not have to be released at all when the front drop is used. It is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The facing of the back is extended to the center front where it buttons securely, easily and attractively. Only one more button is needed than when the facing stops at the side plackets. When the side buttons are set forward no straps are needed for holding the belt in position.

In this style of trousers a front drop is formed by slashing each side of the front section to form slanting plackets. These openings are finished to simulate welt pockets and the buttons at the top of each can be buttoned without undoing the belt. This general type of trouser with a front drop has been found excellent for the child who is being trained to dress and undress himself. Clothing specialists recommend that only one style be used at first with buttons always in the same place, so that the child will learn to manipulate every button without aid. Later on variations and changes in style may be introduced. The blouse of this suit has a very simple one-button opening. The set-in sleeves clear the elbows and are loose enough to permit all normal activity. A flat collar facing and sleeve finish matches the trousers.

CAUSE OF CRACKS IN FLOOR

Cracks in a new well-laid floor are the result of a change in moisture content within the wood itself. This change is due to improper preliminary seasoning; improper storage conditions at the mill or retail yard; delivery of the flooring during wet weather or before the masonry or plaster walls are dry; or it may be due to the absorption of moisture from the air within the building either before or after the flooring is laid. The use of the heating plant may be advisable, says the United States forest service, to maintain a temperature that will prevent excessive humidity in the building from the time the flooring is delivered until the house is occupied.

Another Way to Serve Eggplant

Here's an eggplant recipe from the bureau of home economics which may be new to those who have always fried this vegetable.

- 1 large eggplant 1 quart canned 4 tbs. butter or or chopped raw other fat tomatoes
 - 1 green pepper, 2 tsp. salt chopped Pepper
 - 1 small onion, 1 cup bread crumbs chopped
- Pare the eggplant and cut it into small, even pieces. Melt 2 tablespoons of the fat in a skillet, add the green pepper and onion, and cook for a few minutes. Add the tomatoes, eggplant, salt, and pepper, cook for ten minutes and place the mixture in a shallow greased baking dish. Melt the remaining fat in a skillet, stir in the bread crumbs, and sprinkle the crumbs over the eggplant. Bake in a moderate oven for 15 minutes, or until the eggplant is tender and the crumbs are browned.

Evening Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The button bush flowers aren't like the big buttons one sees in a work box.

So, really, there is no special reason for such a name. Each button bush plant has a great, great many flowers upon it and each one of these flowers is filled with the most delicious honey.

There was going to be a banquet that day, and the banquet table was to be the bush.

It was being held in the swamp where the bush grew. Perhaps you could say that the many, many flowers on the button bush looked a little bit like very small buttons, but anyway each of these flowers was filled with the most delicious honey.

"When is the banquet to begin?" asked one little flower.

"In a very short time," said the Button Bush.

"Patience, though, little flowers. The guests will come soon."

"Who are the guests to be?" asked the flowers.

"All the little insects of the swamp," said the Button Bush.

"Oh, goodie!" they said. "It will be a great and magnificent banquet, a great and gay banquet."

And they all looked very happy.

At last the guests began to arrive, and once they had started to come it seemed as though they would never stop.

Of course, they held banquets every day in the swamp, and many times a day, but this was a very special banquet.

One little insect was seated upon the edge of a tiny button bush flower.

"Will you tell me a secret?" asked the insect.

"What is it?" asked the flower.

"Ah, it's a secret you all have; but if you will tell me I will promise to tell only my friends and companions, the insects."

"You don't mind if we know. We're all such friends."

"What secret have we that you

Guests Began to Arrive.

want to know?" asked the little flower.

"Ah, sly one, sly one, you know," said the insect.

The flower moved a little in the breeze. "Have another good sip of honey and I will tell you," said the flower.

"That's an easy command to obey," said the insect.

Wide Brims Chic for Summer

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

As to the right hat for the right occasion than a wide brimmed black Milan, none other comes nearer to registering 100 per cent perfect. Wherefore the revival of broad-brim fine black Milans for summer will be hailed with delight by the majority of women.

The beauty about these flattering big brims of fine, finer, finest Milan straw is that they top flattery, summery chiffons and other frocks as back to the almost forgotten cart-wheel types.

That very handsome drooping brim, first in the picture, with its modish shallow crown which has white roses posed at the back, combines the ultra-narrow coarse straw with fine Milan in its making.

Another black Milan mushroom-brim model is shown to the right. It is trimmed with pink velvet ribbon. If any color is smarter combined with black than white, that color is pink, turquoise, or light blue following next in order.

The Milan down in the left-hand corner is made in sections which are fagoted together by hand. Quite a considerable fagoting is being employed by the milliner both in connection with straw and with fabric. The little bow at the side on the hat portrayed is of straw.

Lacy straws distinguish the two other models shown. The dressy chapeau in the center has a fancy straw crown, a network of black and white horsehair forming the brim. A band and underbrim bow of black velvet completes this model.

Natural colored crocheted Tuscan straw is mounted on a black horsehair cloche for the concluding hat.

Some Facts About Vitamins

Several Common Sources of Vitamin B.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Our knowledge about vitamins has been undergoing constant expansion. It is still far from complete. First came recognition of the fact that in natural food materials there existed, in minute quantities, certain substances other than proteins, fats, carbohydrates and salts, which appeared to be essential for normal nutrition. Further investigation showed that these substances, or vitamins, also prevented various pathological conditions or "deficiency diseases." Early in the work these separate vitamins were identified, and called A, B, and C. Each one had functions peculiar to itself. Several years later two more vitamins, D and E, were discovered. Comparatively recently it has been found that another vitamin, named G, occurs in a great many foods which are also rich in vitamin B. The identification of vitamin G was obscured for a long time because of this parallel occurrence.

The functions of the two vitamins differ. Vitamin B. prevents beriberi, while vitamin G prevents pellagra. An abundance of both vitamins is essential for growth and well-being at all ages, but particularly necessary for nursing mothers and young children. As both occur to a large extent in the same foods and in a very wide variety of foods, a varied diet containing fruits and vegetables will usually be satisfactory in respect to these two factors. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests the following: Asparagus, beans, fresh and dried brains, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cowpeas, egg yolk, fish, grapefruit, kidney, lemons, lentils, whole grain products, lettuce, liver milk, nuts, okra, onions, oranges, parsley, parsnips, peas, potatoes, pineapples, rutabagas, spinach and other greens, tomatoes. With so long a list from which to choose, the diet may be pleasingly varied and yet always meet the requirements for an abundance of vitamin B.

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling," who becomes interested in Pia Amory, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island, though he does not disclose the name of the place. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshawe. Amory, however, is confident that the girl is not indifferent to him. His holiday ended, he arrives back at Daru.

I could not tell. Often I did not think of it. I was reasonably busy as a trader, and my beat, up and down the coast in a cutter, was a long one; the crucial peak of solvency had just been reached, and passed, and I was beginning to send money up to Port Moresby bank. Not much, heaven knows—but still, it was prosperity, or the dawn of that pleasant condition; and it promised, in due time, the fulfillment of my dream of exploration. Nothing in the world to do with Sir Richard Fanshawe, far above me and my little affairs, as Pia Laurier was above us both.

Where was the connection? I would have given much to know. But weeks passed, and I was no nearer recalling the vague, three-parts forgotten thing that linked Sir Richard Fanshawe to Daru and its sea-scents and windy doorways, and my little trading store. And now I have to relate when, and in what manner, enlightenment came.

I had gone up to the Residency, on an afternoon when there was something doing more than usual; the R. M. (resident magistrate) was back from a wild patrol beyond the utmost rim of civilization or knowledge; an A. R. M. (assistant resident magistrate) and a patrol officer happened to be "in" at the same time, and this was an occurrence so unusual as to warrant, fairly, a dinner party. David Bassett, the R. M., a very good friend of mine, had sent a prisoner to my store with a note—

"Dear Amory:

"Come round to dinner if you can. Northanger and Purchase are back. No particular food, but a good deal of jangling. Have you an egg? If so, order bring it, under careful escort.

"Yours,

"D. Bassett."

I sent him all the eggs I could muster. In Papua, you must know, eggs are the test of popularity, the medium by which friendship, servility, hope, esteem, all find expression. You borrow eggs from prudent people; beg them from anyone who you think may be fool enough to give; buy where you can (but that is seldom), present to your sweetheart, your chum, your friend in hospital; bring, with a servile grin, to the man in high position, the man who has lent you money, or can get you promotion. Eggs, in Papua, are the true social barometer. . . . I had eggs, and always gave Bassett some when he asked for them. Bassett was R. M., and could be useful to me; besides which, I liked him; furthermore, on this occasion, I was going to be asked to eat the eggs, or help to do so.

Following my eggs, I went up to the Residency. Several men, like large joints of meat enclosed in a rather small meat safe, were sitting within the transparent hessian walls. I had expected three, but I saw four. Who else, besides Northanger and Purchase, I wondered, was "in"?

"Hello, here's Black Sheep," somebody said; and my host began introducing.

"Northanger, Purchase, you know the Black Sheep. Mr. Spicer, Mr. Amory."

The newcomer—he was a fattish man with extremely flat feet and a sleeked head of fairish hair; young, good looking in a disgusting sort of way, and dowered with an excess of the manner sometimes miscalled "Oxford,"—fixed me with a cool stare, and demanded of the R. M.—"Why do you call him Black Sheep?"

"Mostly because his eyes are black, and his hair, and partly because he's a decent sort of chap," replied Bassett, staring back at the fattish man. Mr. Spicer immediately dropped me out of notice, took a watch from his pocket, and yawned.

Bassett rang the bell for dinner. "Who is he?" I asked, in a whisper, of Northanger, as we went into the dining room, a clean, polished, rather prisonlike apartment that shouted in every foot of its barren expanse, its owner's bachelor condition.

"Fellow who's come across to make arrangements for some mineral prospecting crowd," answered Northanger, a little wearily.

We filed in. "Why did you ask him?" I found time to demand of Bassett. And Bassett, looking at me with large sad eyes, answered simply—"I never did; he wished himself out of the party," and took his seat.

Through the turtle soup we are usually sick of turtle soup in Daru—through the fish (we are almost always tired of fish, because we get it plentifully, and free) through the roast of dugong, and the inevitable custard pudding and tinned pears, Mr. Spicer talked, with just so many pauses as would allow of his eating an excellent dinner. It seemed that he had acquaintances among most of the titled families of England; that they all valued him highly, and that he had been chosen to come ahead and "organize" the expedition, by a mass meeting of marquises, dukes and earls.

"This," he did not forget to tell us, "is Emplah stuff. Nothing colonial about it. Development of the British Emplah, on which the sun never sets."

"Our chief, Sir Richard Fanshawe—" At this point, my slack attention tightened. "Your what?" I rapped. "Who did you say?" For I thought—being bored half asleep—that my ears were playing me false. So often had that name hummed in my head, between sleeping and waking, that I could not believe I was hearing it actually spoken by some one else.

"Sir Richard Fanshawe, K. C. V. O. Celebrated alman in the War. Extremely successful manager of companies devoted to the extension of Emplah interests. Chief in this matter, if any one is chief but myself. I expect him to follow very shortly, via Port Moresby."

I don't know what it was—maybe the new interest, the fresh channel of feeling opened up, by Spicer and his talk; maybe the mention, from an unexpected quarter, of Fanshawe's name—but something, at that moment, set off a fuse beneath the long dormant part of my memory, and exploded it into action. I knew, with certainty, where and how I had seen Sir Richard Fanshawe before—my G-4, I knew!

In the glass that hung opposite the table, I saw my face turn to something like a piece of white blotting paper, with black blots for eyes and brows. I didn't know that I saw it; I remembered that after. At the moment, I was only concerned with getting out of the house. Spicer, the R. M., Northanger and Purchase, might all have been taken out and drowned together in a bag, for what I cared. There was nothing that I cared about, nothing that I knew, save that mad instinct to bolt off the course and get away.

We had done dinner, and were just moving back into the miscalled mosquito room. I touched my host on the shoulder.

"Sorry," I lied, "but I've got a touch of fever; I'll have to go home."

"You do look most awfully sick, Black Sheep. Better get to bed; you might be going down with black-water."

"Night!" I said, and slipped away. As I descended the veranda steps, the loud, high voice of Spicer was still holding forth. "Where you have failed," he was telling Northanger and Purchase, who had mapped out enough new country to deserve a dozen R. G. S. medals—"Where you have all of you given way"—(there was not a man in the room but had performed feats of surprise, attack, capture among the wild cannibals of the interior, enough to furnish plots to a dozen "movies")—"I shall succeed; I and my chief. We shall plant the flag of the British Emplah where never flag has waved before. We are organized; prepared, for anything that may happen. What we expect to find . . ."

I remember wondering, as I went through the garden, and into the croton walk, at dog trot, if Spicer and his gang, perchance, had picked up some rumor of the secret that was my capital and my hope. I remember telling myself that it did not matter if they had. Nothing mattered except what I had, with shock and horror unexpressed, recalled.

Nineteen—nineteen the year; myself, newly demobilized, spending my gratuity money in a hurried trip through the South Sea Islands that I, in common with thousands of others, had always wished to know. Somebody who said—"You should have seen The Islands years before, before the War—ten years before. They're not what they were. Too many dashed tourists now. If you can handle boats, get a cutter with a bit of a cabin, and go away back. Where from? Anywhere almost. Out of reach of steamers and Cook tickets, that's all. . . ."

The cutter hired; a native or two engaged as crew. Weeks, then, of the happiness I had come far to seek. "Through the Looking Glass," I had gone like the child in the immortal tale—and everything now was magically changed. With delight, I learned what life can be when that tyrant Time, is toppled off his throne; how in the year that is a day, and the day that is a year, a man perhaps may lose his way, drop the clues that lead through the tangled maze called life, and wander, timeless, aimless, till the dark. . . .

It must have been about the sixth month of my journeying, when, with money running low, and mind almost sated with tropic beauties and wonders—so that I began to think I might soon, without regret, return to civilization—I came upon a group of islands that I shall call Omega.

There is a town in the Omega group, a town that, for reasons I cannot give here, offers more commercial interests and possibilities than most island places. This is important, and should be remembered; it has to do with what I am going to tell.

The town appealed to me but little. It was the outer part of the archipelago that drew me; thin atoll islands, barren and very bright; islets with here and there a coconut palm, and here and there a lost melancholy looking pandanus tree; shoal waters that were mauve and sapphire, pearl and celadon-green. I had bought the cutter by this time, with a small windfall of a legacy that came my way, and I had just enough money left to run her for a few more weeks. I hadn't cash for anything of a crew, however, save one old silly fellow who was willing to come without wages. He professed to know the group from end to end, and though I was a little doubtful of his knowledge, I could not afford to quarrel with it, or him. After all, I thought, we shall get somewhere, and come away somehow, and that's all one really wants. . . .

If I had known!

It was on a windy, wicked afternoon, with high clouds flying, that we got blown away from our course, such as it was; obliged to abandon all attempt to get to the group of atolls for which I had been aiming. I gave the tiller into the hand of Taviti, the "crew," slung my two sleeping boards across the seats, and lay down with a rice sack under my head. Taviti was to call me at moonrise, which I judged to be about ten o'clock.

I didn't sleep for a while. The cutter pitched violently in the cross sea raised by tide and wind, hammering with her bows on the water till you might have thought she would stove herself in. It looked like ugly weather, I thought—and then, of a sudden, I slept.

I was awakened by the smothering dash of salt water over my head, and a blow from the cutter's gunwale, that got me in the ribs as I was being swept overboard. Everything about me was white foam and swilling water; I felt sand beneath my toes, but could not grip it, because the short, breaking waves had me at their will, and were knocking me about as a child batters a toy. I fought, and got foothold at last. The cutter was lying on her side, smashing her mast and rigging as she swayed about with the seas. Taviti was just crawling out onto a stone, like a rat escaped from the drowning pail.

"Where are we?" I shouted to him, as I crawled out beside him. There was no use scolding him for his careless handling of the boat, now. Low tide would strand the cutter; till then, one could do little or nothing.

"I d'know, Arik! (chief)," mournfully answered the old man. Then, with a burst of animation—"I think we somewhere."

"Well, wherever we are," I said, "the first thing to do is to get the cable of the boat fast to something." And that, with considerable difficulty, we did, securing what was left of her to one of the big black stones, so that she might not be carried away by outgoing tide. Taviti, after this, found a little hole—you could hardly call it cave—among the rocks, and dragged himself into it, covering his lean, wet body, so far as he could, with a mass of seaweed.

I left him there, while I started to explore the place, and find out, if I could, where Taviti's mad seamanship, backed by my own carelessness, had landed me. It was not much past full moon time; and nowhere on earth's surface does the moon shine with more effect, than on a coral island. I could see everything about me almost as plainly as in the day. And I did not like what I saw.

Mythical Giants Known to Eskimo as "Tornit"

The Tornit is a fabulous race which the Central Eskimo believe to be akin to themselves, but much taller and stronger, having very long arms and legs and being able to toss huge boulders as though they were pebbles. The Akudmiruit call them Tanigdq-Juait. They lived with the Eskimo in the stone houses larger than theirs, as still shown by the ruins that are still pointed out. Under their long deer-skin coats they carried lamps with which to cook the meat of seals as soon as they were killed. They could make stone implements only, no bows or kalaks, but these they stole from the Eskimo, who were afraid to defend their property until a young Eskimo drilled a hole in the skull of one of them who had ruined his kalak, while the giant was asleep. The Tor-nit then feared that they would all be killed, and secretly stole away, cutting off the skirts of their coats and tying up their hair so that they should not be recognized if pursued.

The Greenland Eskimo believed the Tornit to be a mythical race of giants who lived on the ice cap, and were seen rarely hunting at the heads of the fjords. The Labrador Eskimo, like those of Hudson bay and Baffin-Land imagine them to be more like themselves.—Literary Digest.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

By G. M. MILBOURN

Bridge That Won't Turn Flips

ONE of the problems which engineers of the national park service recently encountered in making the world safe for America's sightseeing democracy was that of replacing the suspension footbridge at the bottom of the Grand canyon—because the old one turned flips in the wind!

Casual travelers who stay on the rim of the canyon and see only a narrow ribbon of water winding through the depths may imagine that crossing so small a river would be child's play. But by the time you've dropped a mile nearer the center of the earth and got in sight of the river again, the little ribbon has grown to be a swift brown current some four hundred feet across.

For many years, however, all crossing had been via a single cable which whirled the traveler swinging uncertainly and perhaps dizzily with only air and rushing brown water below him.

Then came the suspension bridge, built in 1920. It was a good bridge, as long as the weather was right and not too many people or horses climbed on it. But it was temperamental; it swayed a bit too enthusiastically to the marching rhythm of each passing pack train; and in the fitful winds which sometimes swept through the canyon bottom it rocked too wildly to be considered a bridge at all. Then a time or two, when the gale was wilder, it had turned a complete flip.

New Steel Footbridge.

So a new steel bridge was planned, one that would remain steady however wild the wind, and that would hold a pack train as long as the bridge or even longer, in case the animals crowded on leaving the trail. It had to be five feet wide to permit a pony's burden to pass freely, but no wider lest the greater width tempt the steed to about face and start home. And it had to be just five hundred feet long, to fit the gap between the canyon walls at the exact elevation where trail travelers would be stepping forward in hopes of hitting a bridge.

You would think that the Grand canyon is big enough already, and that anyone wanting to build a tunnel would go somewhere else. But at the south end of the new bridge the canyon wasn't big enough; there was no room for a trail. So a tunnel 105 feet long, ten feet high, and six feet wide was built.

And finally, to keep the steel bridge from getting nervous in the wind and turning even the slightest kind of a flip, wind cables were anchored in the cliff both up and downstream; placed at an angle of 26 degrees below the bridge, they protect it against lifting gusts as well as horizontal winds. Jack-hammer operators who did the drilling for these cables worked hanging by a 125-foot rope suspended from a 200-foot cliff.

The Kaibab trail which crosses this bridge joins El Tovar hotel on the south rim to the new Grand Canyon lodge on the north rim. There's a lot to see from either place. But the next time you go across, remember that patient little donkeys had to carry 122 tons of steel and cable and asphalt down a steep 7 1/2-mile hill for your benefit; then stop and ask yourself at least once, Am I really worth my weight in bridge?

The Best Husband.

Perry Belmont, while returning home on the steamer Majestic, was discussing an international divorce. "The difference between American husbands and foreign husbands," he said, "is that the American expects to make his wife happy while the foreigner expects his wife to make him happy."

"A foreign husband with his American wife went to a restaurant for dinner. Two birds were ordered. But the waiter came back in a few minutes and said that there was only one bird left."

"This is annoying, waiter," grumbled the foreign husband. "What is my wife going to have?"

Going With Dad

Joseph was found filling his father's traveling bag to its full capacity with his various possessions. His mother inquired what it was all about.

"Daddy said when you started housecleaning he was going to leave home, and I'm packing to go with him," replied the counterpart of the man of the house.

WORLD OF LEISURE SEEN BY YEAR 2030

Lord Birkenhead Visions Amazing Progress.

London.—In a new and entertaining book entitled "The World in 2030," Lord Birkenhead, one of England's most original thinkers, plunges deep into the future with prophecies of a world so highly developed as to make the current state of affairs almost unbelievably backward and semi-civilized.

Lord Birkenhead forecasts the coming of a time when this will be a world with plenty of money for all, a world of boundless leisure, synthetic food at ridiculously low prices, weekend skiing excursions from Europe to Labrador and Greenland, of the manufacture of artificial human beings, perhaps on the style of the Frankenstein monster, to relieve the burden of genuine humanity.

Synthetic Food Certain. "The perfection of the synthetic diet," Lord Birkenhead writes, "cannot be delayed far into the Twenty-first century; and when the first synthetic food factory begins to undercut the prices of naturally-grown food the doom of agriculture will be sealed. Synthetic foods will be much cheaper, more palatable, more various, perhaps more hygienic, than their natural predecessors.

"Therefore they will drive the products of agriculture off the market and ruin the farmers of the world. By the year 2030 synthetic bread, sugar and vegetable substitutes may be cheaper than water is today."

Lord Birkenhead says the world's development since 1830 has been so tremendous that if the progress continues at the same pace the exploitation of new sources of vast power is certain before the expiration of another century.

Points to Travel Possibilities. He points out that intramolecular energy may transform travel and transport and thus spell the end of the coal age as well as making possible air journeys at 400 miles an hour. He writes:

"The Himalayas are provided by nature with an abundance of waterfalls; capable, when harnessed, of generating vast supplies of electricity. It is probable that before 2030 an intensive industrial life will grow up among the foothills of this mighty range, drawing its life blood in the gorges and ravines of the mountains."

"By 2030 dirt will have disappeared from the ordinary man's experience. Chimneys, blighting vegetation and poisoning the atmosphere with their acid fumes, will be banished from industry. The machine shop and the foundry of 2030 will be as clean as any bakeshop or dispensary of 1930."

"The author believes that in the next century the populations will live in vast blocks of flats, with communal refectories."

Montana Canyon Said to Hold Buried Fortunes

Helena, Mont.—The famous Sun river canyon may hold the secret of at least two buried treasures. The pioneer bandit sheriff, Henry Plumer, is said to have buried a large portion of the Wells-Fargo Express company loot near his Sun river honeymoon cabin. And now it appears an unknown bandit gang may have buried $140,000 in gold within a few miles of the canyon mouth.

Conway Firkins of Ferguson Falls, Minn., has come into possession of a map purporting to show the location of a lost treasure.

He said the map came into his possession indirectly from a man who claimed he was the last member of a five-man bandit gang which robbed a guarded gold laden stage in 1882 six miles from the mouth of Sun river canyon. Three bandits were killed, a fourth fatally wounded, and the fifth, according to the story, escaped with the loot which he later buried. To date, authorities have been unable to unearth any record of the holdup.

Boys Free Dog Catchers' Roundup of 19 Canines

Butte, Mont.—"Guess we might as well get that one too," said one dog catcher.

"Sure, let's go," answered the other and the pair turned down the street after a slinking cur, deserting their pound wagon in which were 19 yapping, barking dogs all condemned to die unless somebody produced money for a license.

Eventually the weary dog catchers caught their twentieth dog and returned to the pound wagon, but it was empty.

Shrill shouts of juvenile dog lovers and the retreating forms of 19 canines told the tale. Brave little boys had opened the pen and released the captive animals.

Calf Has Two Faces, but Lacks Balance

White Sulphur Springs, Mont.—A little two faced calf on the William Crabtree ranch would be only too willing to trade one for a balance wheel. Apparently healthy in most respects, the animal was born without a sense of balance. Whenever placed on its four gangly legs it topples over. Incidentally, the two faces and almost two heads come in handy at meal time, as the calf can eat equally well with either mouth.

Guards Animal Feed

Uncle Sam, who watches over the food of the nation so carefully to see that the consumer is not cheated, is just as particular in the character of the food that is shipped for the animal population. During 1928 there were twenty-six seizures of stock feed on the ground of being below standard in protein and fat, and being overblessed with crude fiber. The feeds seized included cottonseed meal, mixed feeds and beef scraps.

Land for Forest Crops

In western Oregon and Washington there are 10,000,000 acres, in both public and private holdings, which are permanently best suited for forest crops. In the whole of both states, says the American Tree association, there are probably 25,000,000 acres suitable. It is estimated that 36,500,000 acres in the inland empire, including Idaho and western Montana, or about 25 per cent of the area, is better adapted to forest growth than for any other purpose.

Would Call New Planet Pax

England has taken great interest in the newly discovered planet. The selection of a name was also discussed. One commentator said that the astronomers should hand the task over to the League of Nations, and if so it probably would be called Pax.

Texas Mother Has Healthiest Child

Mrs. Lena Rolling is perhaps the happiest mother in Houston, and it is all because her little son Royce Lee finally got over a spell of sickness which pulled him down terribly.

"His blood must have gotten very thin because he broke out so badly all over his little legs," said Mrs. Rolling in her home at 3011 Harrisburg Blvd. "From the time I started giving him Nature's Remedy Juniors it so thoroughly cleaned out his system that all the broken out places healed and others did not come back as they did before. Now he is in so much better health that I wish every mother could see him and see what those little chocolate candy NR Jrs can do for ailing children." All drug stores which sell Nature's Remedy, the safe dependable laxative and corrective, also have NR Jrs. They are just 25c.

IN MEMORIAM

Gone, just for a day, our friend Mother Schupbach. How we shall miss her kind sweet smile, her encouraging word along the way. She was continually, in her quiet way lending a helping hand to those who were in need, offering a tender word of sympathy to those in sorrow, and bearing her cross just as she thought her Savior did.

She has bravely faced her Gethesmane and all the joy bells of heaven must have rung out with gladness as they welcomed her beautiful spirit. Our loss is her gain. We shall miss her but she has passed on to where—"There is no death, the stars go down

To rise upon some fairer shore,
 And brighten heaven's jeweled
 crown,
 They shine for ever more.

Passing out of the shadow into eternal day.

Why do we call this dying,
 This sweet going away?"

SERVING MANY BUSINESSES

Experience of large fleet owners reveals the unusual reliability and economy of the new Ford

A SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance—speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker
 Ice Company, Morton Salt Company,
 Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter and Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks. The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

 Beneath its graceful lines and beautiful colors there is a high degree of mechanical excellence.

An example of the value built into the Ford is the use of more than twenty ball and roller bearings. They are hidden within the car and you may never see them. Yet they play an important part in satisfactory, economical performance.
 Their function is similar to the jewels of a fine watch.

Throughout the Ford chassis, a ball or roller bearing is used at every place where it is needed to reduce friction and wear and give smooth, reliable mechanical operation.

At many points, as on the transmission counter-shaft, clutch release, fan and pump shaft, and front drive shaft, these ball and roller bearings are used where less costly types of bearings might be considered adequate.

Additional instances of the high quality built into the Ford are the extensive use of steel forgings, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Rustless Steel, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, and the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.

The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part and then, through large production, give it to the public at low cost.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

RECENTLY there were unveiled in the Hall of Fame on the campus of New York University, busts of nine great Americans. It is a remarkable fact that of these nine immortals who have thus taken their places in this American Valhalla, seven were natives of the same state and five of them were graduates of the same university. Insofar as Massachusetts this year is celebrating its tercentenary and honoring the men who helped add to her renown as a colony and a state, the ceremony at the New York Institution might properly be regarded as a part of the tercentenary celebration. For these seven men all sprang from the soil of the Old Bay State and five of them were graduated from Harvard!

The line who were thus honored in this year's ceremony included two statesmen, two historians, an author, a poet, an educator, an inventor and a jurist. Their names and their records of achievement are as follows:

John Quincy Adams was born in Braintree, Mass., July 11, 1767. After graduation from Harvard he practiced law in Massachusetts and first entered public life in 1794 when President Washington appointed him minister to Holland and two years later minister to Portugal. In 1797 he became minister to Prussia, and at the end of his career in that post returned to Massachusetts where he was elected to the state senate in 1802. The next year he was elected to the United States senate. President Madison appointed him minister to Russia in 1809 and he played an important part in arranging the treaty of peace which ended the War of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States. Adams was next appointed minister to England, and after an absence of eight years abroad he was called back to America to serve as secretary of state under President Monroe.

Adams' principal achievement as secretary of state was the treaty with Spain, whereby Florida was ceded to the United States for $5,000,000. In the campaign of 1824 he was elected President over Andrew Jackson when the election was thrown into the house of representatives, but in the election of 1828 Jackson was the victor. However, the ex-President did not long remain in private life. In 1831 he was elected to congress where he remained, representing the same district of Massachusetts, until his death in Washington February 23, 1848.

George Bancroft, born in Worcester, Mass., October 3, 1800, was also a Harvard graduate. After studying abroad he selected history as his special branch and soon became widely known, both in Europe and America as a historian and teacher. The first volume of his greatest work, "History of the United States," was published in 1834. When James K. Polk became President he appointed Bancroft secretary of the navy and his greatest achievement in this position was to win the title of "founder of the United States Naval Academy" by establishing the training school for our future sea captains at Annapolis, Md. Bancroft died in Washington, January 17, 1891.

James Fenimore Cooper, born in Burlington, N. J., September 15, 1789, was the author who immortalized the American Indian in his "Leatherstocking Tales," and whose sea stories revolutionized the literature of the sea. One day while reading an English novel he made a remark which has become a classic of would-be authors: "I believe I could write a better story myself." Encouraged by his wife, he attempted it, and in 1820 his first novel "Precaution" was published anonymously. It attracted some attention in England and it encouraged him to continue his writing. The result was "The Spy," published a year later, and "during the winter of 1821-22 the American public awoke to the fact that it possessed a novelist's spirit." Cooper died in Cooperstown, N. Y., September 14, 1851.

One phrase, "Give me liberty or give me death" is synonymous for the name of Patrick Henry, "the Orator of the Revolution." Born at Studley, Va., May 29, 1736, the future advocate of freedom was an indolent pupil in school and a failure in business. But when he took up the study of law he found himself and soon became known as one of the most brilliant lawyers in a state noted for its legal luminaries. By 1763 he had acquired renown as an orator and this was increased in the famous "Parson's Case" when he denied the right of the British king to abrogate acts of the colonial legislature.

Henry was an influential member of the Continental congress from 1774 to 1776 and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. In 1776 he was chosen governor of Virginia and served until 1779. He sat in the legislature from 1780 to 1784, again served as governor from 1784 to 1786, and once more, from 1786 to 1790, was a member of the state assembly. He declined to serve in the Constitutional convention and opposed the ratification of the Constitution. Again in 1799 he ran for the legislature and was elected but died in Charlotte county, June 6, 1799, before he could take office.

Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, was another Bay State product, having been born in Spencer, Mass., in 1819. In 1843-45 he experimented with a lock-stitch sewing machine and finally perfected it, securing a patent in 1846. For years he vainly sought recognition of his invention, both in this country and in England, where he sold his rights in 1847 for 50 pounds sterling. While absent abroad his patent was infringed upon by others, but eventually the courts decided in Howe's favor, and after years of wretched poverty Howe suddenly found himself wealthy. In 1863 he erected a large sewing machine factory at Bridgeport, Conn., where he died in 1897.

James Russell Lowell, born in Cambridge, Mass., on February 22, 1819, was one of the famous groups of writers which Massachusetts gave to the nation during the middle half of the Nineteenth century, and of them all Lowell was undoubtedly the most versatile. Having been graduated from Harvard in 1838 he immediately entered the Harvard law school, took his degree in 1840 and began to practice.

After several years abroad Lowell returned to become a teacher in Harvard and to enter upon an epoch in his life as a scholar and critic. He became the first editor of the newly established Atlantic Monthly in 1857, resigning in 1861 to become associated with the North American Review in 1864. He resigned that position in 1872 and again went abroad, where the famous English colleges of Oxford and Cambridge conferred degrees upon him. In 1877 he was named United States minister to Spain and in 1880 was transferred to England, returning to America in 1885. On August 12, 1891, he died in Cambridge.

Horace Mann, born in Franklin, Mass., May 4, 1796, after his graduation from Brown university became a teacher, and then a lawyer. He was a member of the Massachusetts legislature from 1827 to 1837, and from 1837 to 1848 served as secretary of the Massachusetts board of education. Mann visited Europe in 1843 and brought back with him reports on foreign school systems which attracted wide attention. Due to his efforts the school system of Massachusetts was entirely reorganized and became a model for many other states. From 1848 to 1853 Mann served as a member of congress. After his term was over he became president of Antioch college in Ohio and served there until his death in 1859. History has preserved his fame as the founder of the normal school system in this country and "father" of the American public school system.

John Lathrop Motley won his fame as a historian of a European country. He was born in Dorchester, Mass., April 15, 1814, and was graduated from Harvard in 1831. He then went to Germany to study, and upon his return to this country studied law, although literature was more to his taste. He published an American novel in 1839, but it attracted little attention. After a short career at the American legation in Russia he returned to America again to serve a term in the Massachusetts legislature.

After ten years of hard labor, during which he returned to Europe and found it necessary to rewrite much of that which he had already written, he published his "History of the Dutch Republic" in 1856 and was immediately acclaimed both in America and abroad. Along with these literary honors came a call to public service, and from 1861 to 1867 he served as American minister to Austria, and from 1869 to 1870 to Great Britain. Motley died in Dorchester, England, May 29, 1877.

A statesman, a writer, an educator and inventor and two historians—such was the contribution of Massachusetts to the 1890 Hall of Fame ceremonies. To make it complete, she also provided a great jurist—Joseph Story. He was born at Marblehead, Mass., in 1779. Harvard graduated him in 1798 and Salem saw him begin practice as a lawyer in 1801.

He was elected to congress in 1808 and in 1811 became speaker of the house. Soon afterwards President Madison appointed him associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and during his long career of 34 years on that high tribunal he assisted in the development of American constitutional law and in fixing the status of the American admiralty, patent and equity jurisprudence. He died in Cambridge in 1845.

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for June 15 JESUS ON THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 27:1-66.
GOLDEN TEXT—Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Suffering of the Cross.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Calvary.

The grand climax of the six months' lessons is reached in this one. To miss the significance of the crucifixion of Christ will be to render valueless all the preceding lessons. It is not a matter of learning the lessons taught by a great teacher or imitating the examples of a great and good man, but of apprehending the atonement made by the world's Redeemer.

I. The Place of Crucifixion, (vv. 33, 34).
They led Him away to Golgotha, a hill north of Jerusalem, resembling a skull. He was crucified "without the gate" (Heb. 13:12). At first He was compelled to bear His own cross, but when physical weakness made it impossible for Him to continue, they compelled Simon the Cyrenean to bear it for Him (v. 32). In order to strengthen Him for the ordeal before He was nailed to the cross, the soldiers offered Him a stimulant of vinegar mixed with gall. He refused the stimulant offered and consciously drank the cup of sin to its bitter dregs.

II. Gambling for the Clothing of the Lord (vv. 35, 36).

It was the custom for the soldiers who had charge of a crucifixion to receive the garments of the one crucified. We have here a fulfillment of Psalm 22:18. What sacrifice for them to gamble for His seamless robe under the very cross where He was dying!

III. The Accusation (v. 37).
It was customary to place over the victim on the cross his name and indicate his crime. This superscription was placed over Jesus by Pilate to vex the Jews. He was their King in absolute truth. They had long looked for Him and now, when He had come, this is the kind of treatment they gave Him.

IV. Two Malefactors Crucified With Him (v. 38).

We are not told who they were. Perhaps they belonged to the band of Barabbas. This was another fulfillment of Scripture (Isa. 53:12). In these three crosses we have set forth a spiritual history of the whole world.

V. The Dying Savior Reviled (vv. 39-44).

This reviling was engaged in by the passersby, the chief priests, the scribes, elders, and the malefactors who were crucified with Him.

1. "He saved others, Himself He cannot save" (v. 42).

This jest was meant to show the absurdity of Jesus' claims, but it demonstrated them and showed the reason for His suffering. He could not save Himself and others, so He chose to give Himself to save others.

2. "If he be the king of Israel, let him now come down from the cross" (v. 42). His refusal to abandon the cross established His rightful claims. The devil offered Him the kingdoms of the world if He would escape the cross (Matt. 4:8-10). Through His death He came into His place of kingship over all who bow to Him.

3. "He trusted in God. Let him deliver him now" (v. 43).

His obedience unto death was the sacrifice which met God's full approval.

VI. The Death of Christ (vv. 45-50).

Who is sufficient to comment upon this tragedy! Let us contemplate it in adoration and wonder. So shocking was this crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud that the godless company could not gaze upon him. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. Upon the termination of the darkness, He cried with a loud voice, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" He became sin for the world and the world's sin hid God's face from Him. God forsook Him, turned from Him who had taken the sinner's place. God was dealing with sin on the innocent substitute. No one can understand that but God, but we can believe. When the price of sin was paid, He cried out with a loud voice, showing that He still had vitality; but His death was not from exhaustion, but by His sovereign will. He yielded up the ghost and sent away His spirit.

Kindness

Full half our holiness is shown in simple, everyday relations with our fellow men; and nine times out of ten the best immediate expression for our love of God and gratitude to Christ is found in some small kindness to our neighbor.—Isaac Edwards.

FAMILY DOCTOR
MADE MILLIONS OF FRIENDS

Fifteen years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became famous for a single prescription which now, after forty years, is still making friends.

Today Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people never think of using anything else when they're constipated, headachy, bilious, feverish or weak; when breath is bad, tongue coated, or they're suffering from nausea, gas, or lack of appetite or energy.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made today according to the original formula, from herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant-tasting; thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

Scotch Women Curling

Curling, long considered a man's game, has become a feminine pastime in Scotland. Some women have become experts at the game, and many new curling clubs for them were formed during the winter. The famous Scottish organization, the Kinross Curling Club, is the latest to form a women's section, which is already flourishing.

Duchess Claims Vassals

Claims of the duchess of Norfolk that some of her tenants are her "vassals" have just been upheld by the Sheriff court of Dumfries, Scotland. The duchess, as Baroness Herries, claimed the redemption on certain Dumfries properties of the old "dues" known as "casualties," a form of ground rent in respect to land she inherited in 1908. The system has grown from the time when vassals held land from the feudal lords in return for military service.
