National Interest In Lamb Club

Hundreds of clippings from newspapers over the United States indicate the interest being shown in the sheepman's attempt to stabilize the lamb industry and to promote the consumption of lamb and mutton. The establishing of the "Eat More Lamb" Club of Texas as the fund raising medium for the advertising of lamb and mutton is being commented on and discussed throughout the United States, and especially in the other sheep raising states. The Texas sheepmen should be proud to have taken the initiative in this lamb advertising campaign and that their leaders are such capable men as Sol Mayer, R. H. Martin, T. L. Drisdale, J. T. Baker, V. I. Pierce, H. W. Rieck, and E. S. Mayer. Other states are now watching to see how the Texas sheepmen succeed in raising their part of the national quota. As Texas is now leading the way let's continue the drive and be the first state to raise the full quota. Will Texas sheepmen raise their part of the National Fund?

To date, over half of the Texas quota has been subscribed. The sheepmen have entered into the work of the fund raising with enthusiasm. Over 500 sheepmen have joined. They believe in the "Eat More Lamb" Club campaign! They realize that great good can be had from this promotional method.

However, in a few important sheep raising counties the sheepmen are hesitating to join in the campaign work. The "Eat More Lamb" Club needs the assistance of EVERY sheepman and every person interested either directly or indirectly in the prosperity of the sheep industry. Concerted effort, united effort, and it is only by the united effort of the sheepmen that the goal of stabilized prices, increased prosperity, is to be reached. Sheepmen! Have you joined the "Eat More Lamb" Club? See your county chairman and enlist today.

Airplane Is Used To Locate Trappers

For sometime the State Game Department has been trying to locate persons who are trapping beaver on the Rio Grande river. A few days ago Warden Crawford of Alpine communicated with Customs Inspector W. L. Barler and asked him to help in the search, saying they would probably need an airplane. On last Saturday morning Captain Barler and Lieutenant Foster, a government flier from San Antonio, and a mechanic, left the Dryden airport and after flying around for a short time located a gang of trappers 10 miles below Reagan canyon. They then flew back to Dryden and late Saturday evening game wardens Crawford and Miller and Customs Inspector Barler left for the John Nichols ranch where they remained on watch at Bone Watering hole until 2 p. m. Tuesday when the men put in an appearance and were promptly arrested by the officers. There were three men and three boats, and they had 27 beaver hides in their possession, also a doe deer that they had killed.

The men were brought to Sanderson and Wednesday morning were arraigned in Justice Court on three charges, possession of beaver pelts, possession of doe meat, and trapping and hunting without license. They plead guilty to each charge and were fined and committed to jail in default of payment of fines. The men told the officers that they put their boats in the Rio Grande at Presidio a few days after Christmas.

MEN'S, BOYS' WOMEN'S AND GIRLS' CONTEST DAY

The board of directorship with the heads of the various departments of the activity of the church have set aside Sunday, February 22, as winter rally day with a general attendance contest in all departments for the day.

The Senior Epworth League will have two divisions this day, viz.: the division of young men, and the division of young ladies—the losing side to entertain the winning side at a social at the parsonage.

The Women's Bible Class of the Sunday school will run an attendance contest with the Men's Fellowship Bible Class, the losing side to entertain the winning side at a social at the parsonage.

At the 11:00 a. m. preaching service, and the 7:30 p. m. preaching service on this day all the men and boys will sit on one side of the church, and the women and girls on the other side of the church. Couples soon to be married will be given reserved seats together.

The offering in all departments for this rally day will go for the parsonage liquidation fund.

Special music will be provided for all services for this rally day, Sunday, February 22, at the First Methodist Church.

District Court In Session This Week

District Court convened here Monday in its regular January term. District Judge Joseph Jones, District Attorney Julian LaCrosse, and court stenographer Mrs. Belle Sutherland were on hand. At ten o'clock those who had been summoned for grand jury duty were called together, given the oath and instructed by the Judge. The following men composed the grand jury:

A. D. Brown (foreman), R. N. Allen, C. H. Arvin, Roy Barksdale, Sam Bell, Max Bogusch, Joe F. Brown, Bustin Canon, C. C. Chambers, R. B. Dyer, Clyde Griffith, Roy Harrell. Bailiffs for grand jury were Joe Nance and Vernon Buchanan. The grand jury returned four indictments as follows: Rex Tumlinson (two indictments) one for sale of intoxicating liquors and one for theft by bailee. Everett Miller, indicted for sale of intoxicating liquors. Jesus Flores, indicted for child abandonment.

Monday and Tuesday the following civil business was disposed of: Sanderson State Bank vs. Charles A. Bell; plaintiff given judgment on note. A. A. Burdwell vs. Marnie McBee, suit to set aside judgment for damages; decided in favor of McBee.

The following divorces were granted: Addie Lee Boling vs. Maynard A. Boling.

The petit jury was called to meet Thursday morning and were sworn in. As we go to press Thursday evening the case of Clyde Deaton vs. Ben Brown is being tried. Ben Foster of Del Rio is representing Deaton and Boggess & LaCrosse of Del Rio is representing Brown.

Delphians Meet.

The Alpha Delphian Chapter of Sanderson met Wednesday Jan. 28, for their regular study. The following program was rendered:

Newsy Notes From The High School

On Tuesday afternoon, January 20, at 3 o'clock, at the high school auditorium, Miss Julia Lipscomb, supervisor of Primary work in Texas State College for Women at Denton, spoke to a large group of parents and teachers on some of the school problems of Sanderson, demonstrating with a group of first graders some of the newer methods now employed in teaching. Although Miss Lipscomb visited with us only three days we feel that her visit was a most profitable one for us. We are very grateful to Dr. Hubbard, president of Texas State College for Women, who so graciously afforded us the opportunity of securing the services of Miss Lipscomb.

Open House last Thursday night was again well attended by both parents and students; however, the number of parents present did not reach the attendance mark of the week before. During the study hour several interesting talks were made by faculty members. Miss Cox, head of Home Economics department, talked on the "Nursery School Movement and Its Importance." At the end of this hour refreshments of punch and wafers were served in the H. E. department, after which time the gymnasium was opened to all for games and sports.

Big Tournament Opens at 2 p. m.

The big tournament opens this evening at 2 o'clock. The teams that draw No. 1 will play the opening game. There will be three games this afternoon; three games tonight; two games Saturday morning; three games Saturday afternoon, and 3 games Saturday night. All games on Saturday night will be championship games, as the finals will be played then.

McCamey, Marfa, Alpine, Del Rio, Big Lake, Odessa, Rankin, Pecos, Peacock Military School and Sanderson will participate.

P. T. A. HOLD MEETING

The next regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be Thursday evening, February 5, at 7 o'clock, at the high school auditorium. A special invitation to attend this meeting is extended to all members, both mothers and fathers. This meeting is of great significance because of the fact that it is in commemoration of child welfare day. A very interesting program has been arranged for this occasion, so come yourself and bring your neighbor with you.

Selecting Hangings for the Doorways

Hangings That Frame a Doorway With Pleasant Vista Beyond.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In selecting hangings for doorways, some of the principles that apply to window curtaining are also useful. For example, if the walls of the room are covered with figured wall paper, then the use of a plain fabric in a somewhat darker tone serves to relieve the severity of the door line and at the same time frame whatever view is glimpsed beyond it. In the picture shown, which was taken by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, the double doorway at the farther side of the dining room leads to a sun porch. A bit of the garden is seen from within the room. Leaving most of the door space open gives a vista as far as the other side of the porch, and adds to the impression of spaciousness in the room.

In this case dark green cotton velvet or velours, matching the rug, was chosen for the hangings. The figures in the wall paper are chiefly green in a lighter, but harmonizing, shade. The furniture is of red mahogany—making a delightful scheme of furnishing for this room, in which the portieres play an important part. As it was not intended to draw them across the opening, they were hung on short rods, after being arranged in permanent french pleats, which are pleats in groups of three, pinched together and sewn in place.

Another good way of curtaining this doorway would have been to use a wooden pole with brass or wooden rings inside the frame of the door and

Crying Will Do the Baby No Harm

Always provided he is well and has no vicious pin jabbing his pink skin, let baby cry as he will. Many baby experts maintain it does him good. At the least, it will do him no harm. And by the same token, says Dr. Philip Stimson, it is strictly up to the parents to see to it that crying does baby no good. When a vigorous howl invariably gets him lifted from bed and petted or walked, or even fed between the meals, no baby is so dumb as not to learn the system.

Parents who cannot determinedly let the baby cry his cry out, but feel that something must be done about it, are only laying up a peck of trouble for themselves, and not a little for the baby.

Crying will do him no harm; see that it does him no good, either.—The Farm Journal.

Too Much Food Not Good for Children

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Give small amounts of food at a time when serving little children," advises the specialist in child nutrition of the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture. "Even when they have learned to like a number of foods children are bewildered by too much variety at once. The very young child is a 'one-at-a-time,' and gets along best when allowed to clear his plate of one or two foods before anything else is given him. Always serve children small enough portions so that they can finish the whole amount. Parents sometimes overestimate the capacity of the young child, and serve him so much that he is too discouraged to begin to eat, or that he cannot finish even though he makes a good start. If a child is unusually hungry, second helpings may be given."

The little girl in the picture is seated comfortably at her own little table, where her meals have been given from the time that she could first handle a spoon or fork. The joy of accomplishment became all-absorbing when she first learned to pour her milk without spilling out of her own little pitcher, into her tumbler, which was carefully chosen, to fit her tiny grasp. The meals are served on an oilcloth dolly of gay pattern, the floor is washable, and she wears a large bib, so that if she spills a little food in the process of learning self-help, it just low enough for the rings to slide easily. The curtains could then be arranged as draw curtains by means of a cord with two pulleys, a double one at one end and a single one at the other. The bureau of home economics will be glad to explain how draw curtains are arranged.

Portieres or doorway hangings are usually lined, unless the material is decorative on both sides. The color of the lining may match or contrast with the right side of the curtain, but more important, it must harmonize with the color scheme of the room in which it is seen. The fabric may be of the same or lighter weight.

"The tender morsels on the palate melt. And all the force of cookery is felt."

Caramel is a favorite flavoring with a large majority of people. It is equally as good as a flavoring for meat sauces, soups and made dishes, as in desserts and ice creams. It may be quickly and easily prepared as follows:

Melt a cupful of granulated sugar slowly in a smooth omelet pan and cook until it becomes a rich brown, being careful to avoid scorching. Pour in a cupful of boiling water and stir until a thick sirup is formed. The caramel may be kept indefinitely if kept covered or bottled.

Ink stains on the fingers can be removed by rubbing with a cloth moistened with household ammonia. Rinse the hands in clear water afterwards.

Lemon juice and sunshine is an excellent remover of rust spots on linen or white fabrics.

When it is necessary to use boiled water for drinking it will taste better if it is poured back and forth from two pitchers, giving it more air.

Use a lump or two of sugar instead of starch when washing fine laces.

really doesn't matter. This child's mother has made a special point of serving the child's food so it will be attractive, and the little girl always has her own dishes and utensils. This helps the mother to say also, "This food is for you—children do not have the same kind of food, always, that grown-ups do." In this way, the problem of a child's teasing for foods that it should not have, may often be successfully avoided.

Evening Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Mr. Hoatzin Bird was sitting on the limb of a tree, in the far off country where he lives.

Along walked Mrs. Lovely Bird, who had been so named because she was so beautiful and so lovely.

"Good morning," said Mrs. Lovely Bird politely.

"Good morning," said Mr. Hoatzin Bird calmly.

Just then Mrs. Hoatzin and the children joined Mr. Hoatzin on the branch of the tree and sat looking at Mrs. Lovely Bird.

They looked far from intelligent, and they didn't seem to notice what a lovely bird she was.

"Won't you tell me something of your life's history?" asked Mrs. Lovely Bird.

"What do you want to know?" asked Mr. Hoatzin.

"Well," said Mrs. Lovely Bird, "I've heard it said that you couldn't sing."

"Quite true," said Mr. Hoatzin, "we can't so much as warble."

"Indeed, isn't that sad," said Mrs. Lovely Bird, very sympathetically.

"I don't see why it is sad. We don't care whether we know how to sing or not."

"It makes not a particle of difference."

"But I've also heard it said that you could hardly fly at all," said Mrs. Lovely Bird.

"We can't. We're really hardly birds at all, but somehow they called us birds years and years ago because they couldn't think of anything else to call us."

Just then Mr. Hoatzin climbed to another limb, and he used his claws, neck and wings to get along.

"How queerly you do move," said Mrs. Lovely Bird. "You really creep like a snake."

"Did they ever think of calling you a snake?"

"Yes, they thought of it, I believe, but then we're not like the snakes because we cannot really crawl at all."

"Now some of the people who were calling or giving us a family name

Mr. Hoatzin Climbed to Another Limb.

thought we should have been called monkeys.

"We have a good many of the habits of the monkey family. But then we have no sense of humor, and they said that monkeys had, so they thought that name wouldn't do.

"I don't see any sense in being funny, anyway."

"Neither do I," said Mrs. Hoatzin, who looked more stupid than her mate.

"I've also heard," said Mrs. Lovely Bird, "that your family were very hard hearted."

"It has been said that a member of your family could be shot down while sitting along side you on the limb of a tree and that the rest of you would not mind at all."

"True," said Mr. Hoatzin, "we're not wasting any of our time being fond of anyone."

"Strange, strange creatures," said Mrs. Lovely Bird. "And why do you live in those trees covered with thorns. They look so uncomfortable."

"Oh, no," said Mr. Hoatzin. "We don't mind them. We have our nests and we are quite contented."

"Nothing bothers us, nothing makes us particularly happy or sad or gay or gloomy."

"Strange, strange creatures," said Mrs. Lovely Bird again.

Serve Potatoes and Tomatoes New Way

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When you are tired of serving the same old foods in the same old way, sometimes a very simple and easily made alteration will please everybody. Take such everyday foods as potatoes and onions and canned tomatoes—winter standbys, all of them. Any one of these alone ceases to be interesting after many repetitions. But just try cooking the potatoes in tomato juice instead of water, with a suggestion of onion flavoring—and you have a vegetable dish that might have been conceived by some famous chef. Or try baking a few onions in strained tomato juice, with a savory seasoning—and the result is a casserole dish worthy to be set before company. The bureau of home economics gives both recipes herewith:

Potatoes in Tomato Sauce.
1 quart potatoes, 2 cups strained sliced tomato juice
1 onion, sliced 2 tsp. salt
4 tbs. butter or other fat Pepper

Brown the potatoes and onions in the fat for twenty minutes, add the tomato juice, salt and pepper, cover, and simmer forty-five minutes, or until the potatoes are tender. The potato thickens the tomato juice so that no other thickening is necessary.

Baked Onions in Tomato Sauce.
6 medium-sized onions 2 cloves
1 quart canned tomato juice 2 tbs. flour
1 bay leaf 2 tbs. melted butter or other fat
1/4 tsp. celery seed 2 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper

Skin the onions, cut in-half, simmer in lightly salted boiling water for ten minutes, drain, and put in a large baking dish. Cook the tomatoes with the bay leaf, celery seed and cloves for ten minutes, and strain. Blend the flour and melted fat, add to the tomato juice with the salt and pepper, and mix well. Pour over the onions, cover, and cook until the onions are tender, about one hour. Serve from the baking dish.

Some Food and Household Hints

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Success in housekeeping adds credit to the woman of intellect and a luster to a woman's accomplishments."

"The tender morsels on the palate melt. And all the force of cookery is felt."

Caramel is a favorite flavoring with a large majority of people. It is equally as good as a flavoring for meat sauces, soups and made dishes, as in desserts and ice creams. It may be quickly and easily prepared as follows:

When it is necessary to use boiled water for drinking it will taste better if it is poured back and forth from two pitchers, giving it more air.

Use a lump or two of sugar instead of starch when washing fine laces.

An easily prepared mushroom sauce which adds tremendously to the attractiveness of a broiled steak is prepared thus: Mix in a frying pan one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, stir in gradually one cupful of brown stock; when boiling point is reached add one cupful of mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste, a tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, with a teaspoonful of caramel.

When white stains on polished wood surfaces cannot be removed by a cloth dampened in alcohol, use powdered pumice mixed with linseed oil to make a thin paste. Rub over the spots until they disappear. Wipe off carefully with a soft cloth dampened with furniture polish.

A quick relish may be made for an occasion by chopping cooked beets with celery and cabbage and a tablespoonful or two of freshly grated horseradish root, sugar, salt and a little vinegar or lemon juice to taste.

One can do marvelous things with just a pickle. Cut into the thinnest of slices, spread in the form of a fan on a tasty sandwich it not only garnishes it but adds an appetizer as well.

Every hostess enjoys serving something a little out of the ordinary, and by observing the dainty things in homes and shops she may make her entertainments very much worth while. There can be nothing more gratifying to a hostess than to give pleasure to her friends.

Garnishes should be featured as much as possible. Not only are they appealing to the eye but they serve as appetizers and in many cases supply the body with mineral salts greatly needed.

Touch of Fur Effective on Print

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The fur-trimmed idea is gaining. That a touch of fur is wondrously effective on gay sheer print is one of the proud discoveries made in the realm of fashion during the winter months and which because of its exceeding great charm holds promise of a widespread vogue for the future.

Be the dine or dance gown of sheer print or of heavier crepe it is almost certain to be styled with a matching jacket and in almost every instance the sleeves of the complementary jacket whether long or short or in bolero fashion are quite certain to be bordered with fur. Frequently the hemline of the jacket is also fur outlined.

Chiffon in a woodland pattern done in vivid colors on a black background is the chosen medium for the charming frock in the illustration. Wide fur borders the sleeves of its accompanying bolero. This winsome gown can be transformed into an evening formal simply by removing its short jacket, which is the way of most of the newer ensembles, the demand for a matching jacket having increased to such an extent that practically every frock has its accompanying jacket.

An exception to the gown with a jacket is the short-sleeved dress. This type also subscribes to the fur-trim idea in that the sleeves, which in some instances are not much more than caps and from then on vary to elbow length, are also bordered with fur.

For the evening mode the new prints are very gorgeous and for the most part patterned in large florals. This is in direct contrast to daytime prints which are conservative both as to their colorings which run largely to grays, beige and browns together with black and white. Navy as a background and especially with white promises to be in the lead.

Plaids, stripes and checks are the smart new note in prints both sheer and of firm weave. Sometimes the plaid is indicated merely by thin hairlines, then again the plaid design is worked in definite vivid colors and a third class is charmingly interpreted in "invisible" broken effects. These plaid chiffons and crepes are welcomed with enthusiasm as they offer something so entirely different from what we have been having in prints.

Healthiest

"Arthur had a bad case of measles," says Mrs. Clara Gilliam, 4137 Bowdoin St., Des Moines, Iowa. "He was having a hard time until I gave him California Fig Syrup. It regulated his bowels, seemed to give him new strength and energy."

"I have since used it for all his colds or upsets, and it has helped make him the healthiest boy I know."

For over fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Doctors advise its use when children are bilious, headachy, constipated; and to keep bowels open during colds or upsets. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor. It is mild in action.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine.

Midsummer Traveling
The dust, heat and humidity of railroad traveling in summer will be removed by a new system which cleans and tempers the air. It is calculated to cool a car from 10 to 15 degrees below outside temperature on the hottest and most humid day. Since it also removes excess humidity from the air, the effect on the passengers will be even more refreshing and cooling than the thermometer indicates, while excessive chilling will be avoided.

It often happens one gets a job by just hanging around pleasantly without ever asking for it.

THE LAXATIVE WITH HIGHEST ENDORSEMENT

When you get up headachy, sluggish, weak, half-sick, here's how to feel yourself again in a jiffy.

One of the greatest medical developments along popular lines has been in the use of aspirin until today it has come into more general use than quinine. Just as quinine is quinine or is not quinine—so aspirin is either aspirin or it is not aspirin. The medical profession and public alike have learned to depend upon St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin because of its guaranteed purity and conformity to every government standard. The fact that more than nine million boxes of St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin are used per year is definite proof that thousands of people know that it is neither sensible or necessary to pay more than 10c for one dozen pure aspirin tablets. St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin is sold everywhere for ten cents for twelve five grain tablets in convenient tins. One of the reasons that have made St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin the largest selling aspirin in the world for ten cents is that it is so generally known in medical circles that the manufacturers of St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin guarantee that it's as pure as money can buy.

It was dull in Chicago that summer. Mamma was still in Europe, and Ernestine felt that she could not confide in Lillian about Will. There were times when she was frightened about her own health. She felt faint in the heat. She could not eat at all. She had not felt this way before Peter was born, but then she had been strong and well. She couldn't understand this—her feet were swollen until she could not wear her shoes. Mrs. Schluss and Mrs. Pryor expressed their anxiety. Only Will, engrossed in his own troubles, was unaware of her frailty. She presented to Mr. Poole and to Will a superb calm, and a facetiousness that was easier for her than tragedy.

Will found some work for an advertising agency, which he brought home to do. He might have taken one of the jobs papa had offered him from time to time, but papa was in Europe and Loring in charge of his affairs.

Ernestine could not forgive Will for playing baseball in the streets with John Pryor and a half a dozen other half-grown boys, when he came back from his fruitless jaunts after work. "He doesn't care," she thought, and longed to wound him, to strike through his carelessness. She grew almost morbid—"Perhaps he'll have reason to waken—to understand that life's a job for a man."

Will took five dollars, almost the last of their cash, one morning early in August and went out, looking very clean and spruce, and with the light of adventure in his eye.

"I'll find work today, on stay out till I do," he told Ernestine and kissed her on both cheeks.

Peter clung to him ecstatically. "Peter loves Will the better," she thought, pressing any thorn at hand against her heart. After he was gone, she went to her trunk and got out the bankbook she had obtained that day two years ago, when she had come out here and found Will's father dead. Here was a secret source of supply of her own. She looked at her bank balance. It was enough to pay for herself and the new baby, if she went into a two-bed ward, as Doctor Grey had planned for her. This was her money. Will would have to manage for himself and Peter. She decided to go and get the money and have cash in the house if anything happened. But she would not let Will know she had it.

She put the small bankbook on the dining room table and went about the clean and tidy house, washing dishes, setting the rooms in order.

There was a long letter from mamma in the morning mail. Ernestine did not finish reading it, for she had to go and lie down on her bed, seized with such pain that she could scarcely forbear crying out. She felt within herself no light at all, no buoyancy, no spark of life. She was dull, leaden, submerged. She felt she ought to make some effort to resist this spiritual inertia but she was too ill. She wondered if her child would be born too soon. This thought goaded her into action. She rose and gathered from her trunk Peter's little baby garments, long since washed and mended and laid away. She made the things she might need for the baby into a bundle and put it in her dresser drawer. She would get her money. She would arrange her own affairs—with competence. When the call came, she would be ready.

But she must rest first. She made herself a pot of fresh tea, asked Mrs. Schluss to look after Peter, and at length in the early afternoon she started off on the long walk to the street car.

She rode interminably, withdrawing her spirit from the concussion of the heat waves that came up from the stone pavement into the street car. Walking in a mist she reached the bank and went inside. She opened her purse, but found among its contents no bankbook. Like a picture in a dream she could see the leather square of it on the dining room table in the little house. She had left it at home.

If she had been in normal condition she would have realized that it was quite possible for her to establish her identity at the bank. She had made many small deposits. The teller would have remembered her. But as she stood in disappointment, the world grew black before her eyes, and for a straining moment, fully conscious but blind, she stood in silent terror. The blindness passed, and she picked up her purse and went out of the bank, turned, half instinctively, toward Mrs. Bennett's. A strange girl was at the door, a colored girl who rolled her eyes at Ernestine.

"Miss Bennett's out, ma'am. Will you wait?" Ernestine left without a word and went back to the boulevard. The darkness, the blindness was coming down on her again. She felt that she was going to faint. She could not hold on any longer—there was nothing with which to cling—she no longer cared.

The great bulk of the bus was moving down toward her—gigantic, menacing. She felt that it would crush her, and moved back a little on the sidewalk, her horrified eyes fixed upon the monster which seemed to swell and grow, and then, strangely, to rise from the pavement and to turn slowly and gracefully about in the air. She knew it was delirium, she knew that the bus could not act that way. But her knowledge could not pierce her fear of confusion. And then the bus lunged at her—the blindness came down again, and Ernestine, alone and very ill, fell down upon the pavement of the boulevard with a soft and plaintive moan.

CHAPTER IX

Loring Finds Ernestine

It was nine o'clock when Lillian reached Chicago from Langley lake in obedience to Loring's frantic telephone call. She turned the car into Erie street, as Loring had instructed her, and stopped before Mrs. Bennett's door, her hands falling from the wheel of the car with nervous weariness. She went up the stairs quickly, her heart full of repressed terror for Ernestine. She could not imagine what might have happened to her. It wasn't time surely for her baby. Loring had been brief and unsatisfactory over long distance.

"We Don't Know. We Can't Find Her."

The door was opened by a colored maid who stared in silence.

"Is Mrs. Bennett in? I'm Mrs. Todd's sister. They told me to come here."

The girl gave a squawk and threw her hand up over her mouth and rolled her eyes at Lillian.

"Can you tell me where Mrs. Todd is?" asked Lillian sharply.

"Lard, Miss, Wisht I cud. Nobody knows. But you better e-min and talk to Miz Bennett. She kin tell you the fac's."

Trembling seized Lillian, but she followed the girl in silence to Mrs. Bennett's sitting room, and in a moment found herself confronted by a plump little woman whose face was gray and ravaged. Lillian looked at her with pleading eyes, afraid to trust her voice. Her throat was dry and closed.

"Please—where is she? What has happened?"

"We don't know. We can't find her."

"Tell me—please."

"She's not been well—you know of course that she was expecting another confinement?"

Lillian nodded, realizing that she was ignorant of the date.

Advices Use of Slogan to Overcome Dejection

Slogans are advocated as an aid to a healthy mental outlook by James D. Weiland, who considers their effect and lists a number in an article in Hygeia Magazine.

A good slogan can brighten our whole horizon, fill us with courage and be an emotional stimulus. It directs and holds the attention to a bracing thought. For instance, when a man is down in the dumps it is comforting to think that "the men who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing and succeed," or that "there are more chances and opportunities in life than we know."

There are slogans hidden away in the world's literature that fit almost

"Well, since Will's been out of work, she's not been well."

"Will out of work? I didn't know that." Her heart was shaken with remorse. Will out of work, and Ernestine ill, and she had known nothing of it—playing bridge and golf and swimming at the lake.

"But where did she go? Who was with her last? What happened?"

Mrs. Bennett tried to be coherent. "She left her little boy with a neighbor and went out alone, early in the afternoon. Evidently she intended to go to the bank, for Will found her bankbook lying on the table. We can't find out whether she was at the bank or not. No one noticed her, and she did not withdraw any money. But she came here about four. I was out and she left, but the maid said she looked as though she were going to drop then. That's the last that's been seen of her. Will got home about three, and he began to worry because Ernestine had not told him she was going out, and it was so hot, and she's not been well. He decided to come over here to the bank, and when he found that she hadn't been there, he went to your mother's. Ernestine wasn't there. Then Will came here, and Mr. Hamilton met him here. I phoned to Mrs. Schluss for them, but Ernestine wasn't at home yet.

"Wherever she was she would have come home to Peter, as Will argued, and I agreed with him. Will was nearly distracted—the men quarreled bitterly, and Mr. Hamilton called up Ruby Pastano and the papers, and organized a search—of course, people in the city go off and are delayed and don't get home on time. But, you see, now it's nearly tea and we haven't heard anything of her. Mr. Hamilton has notified the police. They'll find her—unless—"

"What do you mean?" cried Lillian sharply. Her hands were shaking so that she could scarcely hold her purse and gloves.

"Well—your husband—Mr. Hamilton, he's got the idea that she may have destroyed herself. But Will says no—she wouldn't do that."

"Will is right. Ernestine wouldn't do such a thing."

"But pregnant women get wonderful queer notions in their heads," insisted Mrs. Bennett dolefully. "Mr. Hamilton was nearly wild. He told Will that he had killed Ernestine—it seemed hard for Will to hear, but he brushed it away like nothing." She paused.

"Mr. Hamilton's got a taxi for us out there—had it since six o'clock. I don't know how much this'll cost him."

"That doesn't matter," said Lillian impatiently, and tried to control her perturbation. She was disturbed anew at the thought of Loring violent, uncontrolled—she had never seen him so, except on the other occasion of his quarrel with Will. But this was worse. He had always been so fond of Ernestine—as though she were his own little sister. She felt a great relief to think that he had taken charge of the search. He would find Ernestine if she were to be found.

But the thought of her sister out in these hot streets, lost, ill and alone, caused her such anguish that she could scarcely breathe. What would mamma say to her? Mamma loved Ernestine the better—always had. Mamma had really left Ernestine to her.

The door was flung open and Loring stood there. His eyes were glittering with fear or fever. He looked at her as if he scarcely knew her.

"Lillian!" he exclaimed.

"I drove," she told him, "all the way. I've been so worried."

"You had cause to worry," he said grimly. "When we find Ernestine she is going home with us—to stay. Don't you agree? She's got to have somebody to take care of her."

"Of course, Loring."

"I've news of a sort," he said slowly, and they stared at him. "I don't know what it's worth. There was a woman taken to the County hospital this afternoon—from this neighborhood. She was a young woman, and she was to be confined. It might have been Ernestine. I've sent Will out there, and I came by to see if you were here"—to his wife—"and to wait here for a phone call."

The telephone shrilled, and the sound leaped through them all. Mrs. Bennett picked up the receiver with a trembling hand, while they all watched her in straining silence.

"Yes—yes—this is Mrs. Bennett. . . . Oh, he did. . . . Oh, thank you. . . . Her sister is here. I'll tell them."

She turned from the phone. "It's the hospital office. Will has identified Ernestine, and he's there with her. Oh, Mr. Hamilton—you found her!"

"Get your hat," said Loring. "And come with us. Never mind your keys, Lillian. We'll take the taxi." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

Owen D. Young

The life of a county boy in rural New York fifty years ago was made up of much work and little play. It meant getting up before daybreak on the cold winter mornings, helping with the stock, cleaning stables. It meant cutting and hauling wood, plowing, seeding and harvesting in season. Early to bed and early to rise was the program.

Most of the day during the summer was spent in tasks that made for a strong body. The development of the mind was left largely for the winter. Then a boy took his books and sometimes trudged miles through the snow to the little rural school house. He had to quit a warm bed, dress by candlelight in a chilly room and do his share of the chores before he set out on his tramp to school in quest of an education.

That was the sort of a life Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company, financial genius and diplomat, led as a boy. He was born in Van Hornesville, N. Y., in 1874. His ancestors had settled there before the Revolution. His father owned a farm five miles from the town. The boy had to perform all the tasks that fell to the lot of other youngsters in the same environment.

The Young farm was 15 miles from the railroad. Itinerant peddlers were its chief contact with the outside world. Trips to town were taken only when necessary. Such excursions meant much lost time in the days of the horse-drawn wagon and poor roads. Electric power, which has lightened the work in rural sections, the radio, which has put the farmer in touch with the world and its affairs, were not thought of as farm equipment when Owen D. Young was a boy. They were made largely possible for the farmer through his genius for organization.

Education, beyond the rural school, was seldom considered worth while for farm boys of the time unless they planned on a professional life in town or city. If they could read and write and do simple problems in arithmetic, they soon qualified for the job of running a farm. Such a rudimentary training with books was bolstered by hard and practical schooling in matters of agriculture.

Owen D. Young was not the average farm boy. He walked five miles a day to the rural school and back during the term, helping his father the while with the chores. He was an only son.

It was a red letter day in the boy's life when he was taken to Cooperstown, the county seat of Herkimer. Dressed in blue jeans he went to the courthouse and heard the lawyers argue a case. They wore boiled shirts, stiff collars, black ties and broadcloth, impressive garb to the little boy from the farm. Their arguments fascinated him. He decided that when he grew up he would be a lawyer.

But there were many obstacles in his path. He had to obtain a better education than the rural school offered. If he was to qualify for his chosen profession. Any effort to gain advanced schooling meant that he would have to leave home. His father needed him on the farm.

When an uncle came to help his father the way to an education opened for the lad. He went to the East Springfield academy, encouraged by his parents in his ambitions.

His father drove Owen to school each week and brought him back home on Friday. His mother prepared the food on which he lived while away from home. Each week the boy carried away with him, packed in a big box, the good things his mother cooked for him to eat.

He was ready for college when he was fifteen years old. He wanted to go to Cornell, thinking he could win one of the state scholarships there. But he was too young to be eligible to try the competitive examinations. So he returned home to help his father again. He became interested in church work and conducted the Sunday school in the little church in Van Hornesville.

Alpheus Baker Harvey, then president of St. Lawrence university, came to the town to preach. He heard Owen Young speak in church. The lad interested him so much that the educator persuaded the elder Young that the boy was deserving of a college education even at a great sacrifice to his parents.

So the father borrowed $1,000 and on that money, and his own earnings, Owen D. Young went through college. He got his bachelor of arts degree from St. Lawrence in 1894.

He still held to his ambition to be a lawyer. He entered Boston university, knowing that he would have to work his way through the law school. He served as a librarian and tutor to earn all the money needed to meet his modest expenses. He completed the three-year course in two years.

After being admitted to the Massachusetts bar he went to work for the General Electric company. His promotion was rapid. The farm boy of 50 years ago is now the organizing genius of the electrical industry and one of the financial wizards of his time.

Cold in Head, Chest or Throat?

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours . . . what a glorious relief!
Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Keep Musterole handy—jars, tubes. All druggists.
To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

DON'T DO IT
Don't neglect your cold. Start taking Lax-ana (double strength); get over-night results. Combines best cold medicines with quick-acting laxatives. At all druggists.

The program for January,
 "Woman in the public eye" was very ably lead by Mrs. Alfred E.
 Creigh Jr. who gave a most interesting talk on the "three Ruths". The wise judge' Florence Ailen, was given by Mrs.
 Guy Nations, while Mrs. W. E.
 Lea told us about the life of Mrs.
 Gaudhi. Mrs. Joe F. Brown gave some very interesting facts about "The little Theaters Hope"
 Eva Le Gallinne

The club had as honor guest Mrs. John A. Craig, mother of Mrs. Creigh. Club members responded to roll call with short talks on the topic assigned each, for the year. After adjurnment the hostesses served delightful refreshments of mint flavored nut jelo with cake and coffee.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas an all wise Providence has seen fit to take from our midst Mrs. T. L. desLandes, who for many years has been a resident of Sanderson. Whereas, Mrs. desLandes' years of usefulness were prolonged to that extent that the entire community will permanently feel the impress of that life so well spent in the noblest work, the purest love, and the sweetest charity, and whereas, the Sanderson Culture Club feels keenly the loss of such a splendid christian character, whose everyday life inspired us to strive more earnestly to emulate her worthy example. Whereas the unselfish principles, the high standards, and the sweet pure life of Mrs. desLandes have done much to elevate our thinking and our living.

Therefore, be it resolved that we, who so deeply feel the loss of this faithful friend and club member, bow in faithful submission to the highest Sovereign whose infinite wisdom, we all respect, and portray in this manner our deep sorrow at Mrs. desLandes passing, and resolved further that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our club to be read in open meeting. That a copy be printed in the Sanderson Times and copies be sent to the family of the departed member.

FORD SMOOTHNESS

The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings

EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all — an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves,
 three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

EVEN big-city folks must have their "neighborhood stores"! Most of them would no more think of going down town to fight their way through the crowds in search of a roast for dinner than they would of walking to the factory to get a pair of shoes.

City women know that their neighborhood stores can supply them just what they want — and that, in most cases, the service is more alert and friendly.

The same thing is true of this "neighborhood". Our merchants—the men whose ads you read in this paper — are in position to furnish your home with the best and most popular brands of goods. Not only can they save you money, but they gladly relieve you of a lot of worry and loss of time.

The Lincolns—A Kentucky Family

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HERE is many a paradox in American history, but none is more curious than this: In the years of 1861 to 1865, when the North was arrayed against the South, a Southerner was the commander in chief of the Northern forces. For Abraham Lincoln was a native of a Southern state, Kentucky. More than that, his wife was a Southerner, and that fact undoubtedly not only profoundly influenced his career but it shaped American history as well.

There is an "if" in American history, too, and one of the most interesting is this: If Abraham Lincoln had not married Mary Todd of Lexington, Ky., it is possible that he would never have been President of the United States, and thereby be called upon to lead the armed strength of the nation against his own people. When the Republican party in 1860 was considering possible candidates for the Presidential nomination, their choice upon Lincoln depended partly upon the fact that he was a conservative in regard to the "dominant question" of slavery. This conservatism brought to him the powerful support of the Border states' delegates who believed that he possessed a sympathetic understanding of their problem and could deal with it better than any other candidate before the convention.

He had this sympathetic understanding because his marriage to Mary Todd gave him an opportunity to see both sides of the question. It was in Lexington, in the heart of the largest slave-holding section of Kentucky, that Lincoln saw at close range the more favorable patriarchal elements of the institution. His father-in-law owned slaves, cared for them well and made a resolution, which he always kept, never to sell a slave and thus risk bringing suffering to a human being who had a claim, through faithful service, to his affection. In the home of the Todds and of their friends he saw negro slaves, well-fed, well-housed and kindly treated—the institution of slavery at its best.

But there in the chivalrous and romantic Blue Grass region, Lincoln also saw slavery at its worst. Some of the masters there abused their slaves; only a short distance from where Mary Todd was born stood a notorious slave prison; and in Cheapside, the market square of Lexington, scarcely a day passed without seeing the public sale of black men and women.

More than that, in the town of Lexington there was a miniature reproduction of the tempest which was rocking the nation—the slavery dispute. It was on the borderland and in it were pro-slavery and anti-slavery factions, both strong. The leader of the most radical pro-slavery men was Robert Wickliffe, father of two of Mary Todd's girlhood chums and the husband of her father's cousin. Leaders among the anti-slavery men were Robert J. Breckenridge and Cassius M. Clay, both personal and political friends of his father-in-law. So when Lincoln made his famous "house-divided-against-itself" speech, he could have pointed to the homes of dozens of families in or near Lexington, Ky., as concrete examples of his symbol.

It is such facts as these that William H. Townsend, a citizen of Lexington, has brought out in an important study of Lincoln—the book, "Lincoln and His Wife's Home Town," published recently by the Bobbs-Merrill company. In the preface Mr. Townsend says: "The name of Abraham Lincoln is forever associated with slavery in the United States. Biographers have traced the gradual development of Lincoln's views on the subject from his first public utterance in the Illinois legislature down to the Emancipation Proclamation twenty-five years later.

1. Mary Todd Lincoln. From a photograph taken during the early part of Lincoln's administration.
2. Lincoln in 1848. From an old daguerreotype, the earliest known portrait of Lincoln.
3. Mary Ann Todd. A portrait made about the time of her marriage to Lincoln.

The sources, however, from which his convictions on the great issue largely sprung, have not been hitherto revealed. It is the purpose of this book to show Lincoln's personal contacts with slavery which gave him a first-hand knowledge of the "peculiar institution" that he could have acquired in no other way.

Lincoln and Mary Todd were married in 1842 and soon afterwards Lincoln was elected to congress, his first appearance upon the national stage, a position which brought him into more direct contact with the all-important question was so soon to be shaking the nation to its depths. Of the importance to Lincoln's political future of his marriage, Mr. Townsend writes: "So it happened that the little wife who went to live with Lincoln at the modest Globe Tavern (in Washington), through her girlhood experiences in Lexington, was peculiarly fitted to share in the great task which would make the man she married immortal. She had been taught every phase of the great question, which finally came to be nearest his heart, by the very man whom her husband regarded with the most admiration (Henry Clay).

"It may have been that gentle Ann Rutledge, or portly, complacent Mary Owens, or youthful, light-hearted Sarah Rickard would have endowed the tall Sycamore of the Sangamon with a richer measure of marital bliss, but never did a young wife bring to a husband, interested in statecraft and anxious for perfection, such wealth of first-hand information on a grave, moral and political subject—such fruits of intimate association with great public men of her day as did Mary Todd to Abraham Lincoln."

One of these great public men was John C. Breckenridge, a childhood friend of Mary Todd Lincoln in Lexington, later a United States senator, vice president when Buchanan was President and the candidate of the pro-slavery Democrats in the fateful campaign of 1860. One of the most dramatic incidents in Mr. Townsend's book is the story of how it fell to the lot of this friend of Mary Todd's girlhood to declare the election of her husband to the Presidency. He tells the story as follows:

On February 13, 1861, the two houses of congress met in joint session to count the electoral votes for President of the United States. . . . For days rumors had flown thick and fast that Vice President Breckenridge would refuse to announce the election of Lincoln and thus give the signal for the seizure of Washington by the overwhelming number of southern sympathizers within its gates. General Scott had directed that no person should be admitted to the Capitol building except senators, representatives, government employees and those who had tickets signed by the speaker of the house or the presiding officer of the senate. Armed guards were stationed at every entrance to enforce this order.

Shortly after noon the senators filed into the house chamber, and took their seats in a semicircle arranged for them in front of the speaker's desk. The presiding officer was conducted to his chair, and tellers took their places at the clerk's table. Vice President Breckenridge then arose and in a calm, firm voice, announced that the two houses were assembled to count the electoral votes for President and Vice President of the United States.

"It is my duty," he said, "to open the certificates of election in the presence of the houses, and I now proceed to the performance of that duty."

No one knew the gravity of the occasion better than the chairman. None realized more than he that fully three-fourths of those who sat beneath the vaulted dome were armed to the teeth, and that the slightest spark might touch off a shocking conflagration. But those who expected John C. Breckenridge to stultify his high office by a conspiracy to overthrow the government did not know the man. Firmly believing the triumph of the Republican party to be a menace to the South, he would shortly return his commission as senator to his constituents in Kentucky, forsaking fame and fortune under the Stars and Bars. But today he was presiding officer of the federal senate, and Jupiter never ruled a council of Olympus with a firmer hand.

A southern member arose, but the chairman anticipated him. "Except questions of order, no motions can be entertained," he declared.

The senator stated that he wished to raise a point of order. "Is the count of the electoral vote to proceed under menace?" he shouted. "Shall members be required to perform a Constitutional duty before the Janizaries of General Scott are withdrawn from the hall?"

"The point of order is not sustained," ruled Breckenridge emphatically, as he directed the count to proceed. Slowly, one after another, the long sealed envelopes containing the votes of the various states were opened. "Maine for Lincoln" was followed by a slight ripple of applause. "South Carolina for Breckenridge" was lost in an outburst of hand-clapping, quickly and sternly suppressed by the presiding officer. Then, in a breathless silence and with profound attention on the part of all present, John C. Breckenridge arose from his seat, standing erect, the most dignified and imposing person in that presence.

"Abraham Lincoln," he announced with a distinctness that carried his mellow voice to the most distant corner of the gallery, "having received a majority of the whole number of electoral votes, is duly elected President of the United States for the four years beginning on the fourth of March, 1861."

How the Civil war touched personally this southern family, the Lincolns, who occupied the northern White House during those four eventful years, is shown in another incident told by Mr. Townsend. Mary Todd had a half-sister named Emilie, and she married Ben Hardin Helm, a Lexington boy who was graduated from West Point shortly before the opening of the Civil war and cast his fortunes with the Confederacy.

The aftermath is told in these words of Judge David Davis:

"I never saw Mr. Lincoln more moved than when he heard of the death of his young brother-in-law, Ben Hardin Helm, only thirty-two years old, at Chickamauga. I called to see him about four o'clock on the 22d of September. I found him in the greatest grief. 'Davis,' said he, 'I feel as David of old did when he was told of the death of Absalom. I saw how grief-stricken he was, so I closed the door and left him alone.'"

Lesson for February 1 JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

LESSON TEXT—Luke 4:33-44; 5:12-18, 18-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and Health.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and Health.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Friend and Helper.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christian Ministry to Physical Ills.

I. Jesus Healing a Demoniac (4:33-37).

While engaged in teaching in the synagogue, Jesus was interrupted by a man who had a "spirit of an unclean devil," who cried out with a loud voice asking that he be left alone, professing knowledge of him as the Holy One of God. Jesus rebuked the demon and compelled him to come out of the man. At the command of Jesus the demon came out of the man with a violent struggle. This healing shows Jesus not only gracious but powerful to set free men who are under the power of the Devil, and also his ability to free men from the whole brood of diabolical passions such as lust, envy, anger, and jealousy which rule them. This manifestation of divine power amazed the people, causing them to cry out, "What a word is this!"

II. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in-Law of a Great Fever (vv. 38-41).

This woman was prostrate with a great fever. They of Peter's household besought Jesus in her behalf. He rebuked the fever and it left her so that she immediately arose and ministered unto them. No earthly physician has ever been known to heal in that way. Divine healing is immediate and complete. It is most important that we distinguish between divine healing and faith healing. Faith healing is the result of the action of the mind upon the body, and is measured by the degree of the faith of the individual, while divine healing is the action of the power of God upon the diseased one and is always complete and immediate.

As a result of this manifestation of divine power, the fame of Jesus spread abroad and many sick of divers diseases were brought unto him and he healed them all.

III. Jesus Heals a Leper (5:12-15).

Leprosy was a most loathsome and terrible disease. Because of its foulness, one afflicted therewith was an outcast. Leprosy was incurable by man, therefore, the leper was regarded as hopeless and dead. In response to the leper's earnest request Jesus touched him and bade the leprosy to depart, and immediately he was healed and cleansed. Leprosy is a type of sin. Though sin is loathsome, hideous and separating, Jesus has power to save those who come to him by faith.

IV. Jesus Heals a Paralytic (5:18-26).

1. Watched by the Pharisees and doctors of the law (v. 17). The spreading abroad of Jesus' fame only incited jealousy on the part of these men. They did not want to get too close to him, but close enough to know what was going on.

2. The paralytic brought to Jesus (vv. 18, 19). This is a fine lesson of Christian service. They could not heal the man, but being moved by sympathy they co-operated in bringing him to Jesus who could heal and restore. Their efforts in bringing the man show their willingness to go to pains and trouble to bring the needy man to Jesus.

3. The man's sins forgiven (v. 20). Jesus looked back of the paralytic to its cause—sin. The effect of his sin was before Jesus, but he proceeded to deal with the cause of it. All disease and death are the result of sin. The Lord deals first with that which was at the root of the trouble. Jesus saw the faith not only of those who brought him but of the man himself.

4. The purpose of miracles (vv. 21, 22). The Pharisees accused Christ of blasphemy when he declared the man's sins forgiven. Jesus showed them that back of the beneficent deed to the man was the demonstration of his deity. The main purpose in the working of miracles is the authentication of the divine mission of the one performing them. While the divine power and authority are thus shown, the wisdom and love of God are shown in that in all cases the supernatural work is for the good of the individual.

5. The relative value of physical ills and moral and spiritual maladies (vv. 23, 24). Physical ills are less serious than the sins which cause them.

Lift Up Your Eyes

Hath he a cup of affliction in one hand? Lift up your eyes and you will see a cup of consolation in the other. And if all stars withdraw their light while you are in the way of God, assure yourselves that the sun is ready to rise.—John Owen.

Great Peace

A compromise—half obedience, half rebellion—is never found to be the way of peace. "Great peace have they who love thy law."—J. H. Jowett.

Change in Membership of Congressional Body

Congress does not necessarily have to pass a new reapportionment law before the changes in the membership of the house, based on the 1930 census, take effect. Unless that body enacts a new reapportionment law before March 4 next, the report of the bureau of the census, as ascertained by the method used in the last preceding reapportionment, will become effective as applied to the Seventy-third congress, to be elected in 1932, and to succeeding congresses, or until congress does enact a new law. This gives several states new members to the total of 27 and takes a corresponding number away from other states. A fight may be made to increase the total membership of the house so that no state will have its present membership decreased.—Washington Star.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels, so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime.

Childhood's Favorite Toy

A set of blocks of various sizes and shapes will attract the attention of a child more quickly than any other plaything. Miss Eva Nelson, of the child welfare research station at Iowa City, Iowa, said after more than two years of research. The blocks will have a more permanent hold over a small child than a doll, sand pile, kiddy car, or any kind of animals, Miss Nelson said.

Habit

A young mother asked her butcher to weigh the baby. "With pleasure, madam," he said, as he put the child on the scales. Then he announced: "Thirteen and a half pounds, with the bones."

Castoria... for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—through the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine
