Important Vitamins in Low-Cost Foods

(Premared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) When neither the food supply nor the purse limits the selection of food, it is possible to afford so large a variety that the homemaker may choose somewhat at random within each of the food groups and be reasonably sure of meeting the food requirements of the family. When, as in the drought-affected regions, variety must be greatly curtailed because of food shortage and lack of ready cash, it is necessary to weigh with the utmost care the contributions made by each food material to the dietary. The subcommittee on nutrition, working under the direction of the national drought relief committee, which includes representatives of the co-operative extension service and the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, has prepared a list of foods that for the money invested in them offer good or excellent returns, in terms of vitamins, protein, and minerals. This list is part of the material assembled to aid professional nutrition workers who are called on to advise families in the sections where one-sided diets are common.

Modern Kitchen Tools Are Necessary

No workman can do good work with poor tools, and many a housewife struggles needlessly with a balky egg beater, dull or broken knives, or inadequate cooking utensils. A housekeeper of ten years' standing was seen trying to turn fried eggs with a paring knife. When asked why she didn't use a pancake turner, said she'd never owned one. Check over the kitchen equipment and see if some of the dissatisfaction with "kitchen drudgery" may not be remedied by adding a few time and labor saving devices, or by replacing wornout pieces.

The food groups mentioned by the committee are: Cereals, milk and cheese, eggs, lean meat and fish, fruits and vegetables, sugars, fats. Among the inexpensive protective foods listed, with a rough indication of what each furnishes to the diet, are included: Milk, eggs, lean muscle meat, liver, kidney, fish, shellfish, vegetables, including tomatoes, thin green leafy vegetables, potatoes, and certain root vegetables, dried peas and beans, fruits, whole-wheat products; wheat germ, rice polish, molasses, not highly refined; butter, cod liver oil, pure dier brewers' yeast. These foods, many of which can be grown on the farm, are recommended in addition to the cereals, fats, and sweet foods on which too many families depend entirely.

Plaids Are in Fashion Limelight

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

plaids adds zest to their vogue. It is possible to secure as modest or as flamboyant a plaid as one may wish in the new materials. The same may be said of the equal'y-as-smart stripes. In fact the problem is, whether to choose plaids or stripes, and the surest day of being right is to indulge in both, for these gay patternings are made use of not only for the dress or blouse entire but in the way of accessories such as scarfs, girdles and other trimming touches they are enlivening many a spring costume. In addition to plaids and stripes there is a third candidate for favorpaisley print. There's nothing smarter and so unmistakably new as a blouse or frock of paisley print. All to which

They were both rested and hungry. Such a banana eating party as they had, and the bananas seemed much pleased in their banana fashion that they were so much liked.

But after it was all over and the eating and the talking was finished, the Fairy Queen went back to Fairyland with the other fairies, and there she told everyone banana tree history, which they were all so glad to hear.

And she had a big bundle of bananas, too, which the banana trees had sent to Fairyland as their gift. (@. 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Spider's Valuable Secret

Vast engineering schemes at present unthought of would be possible if science could reveal the secret of the spider's web. If man could make ropes and cables with the approximate strength of a spider's web, suspension bridges could be thrown across on small cables, and, being light and easy to anchor, there would be no goes to prove that a decided innovation has taken place so far as the new patternings are concerned, in that the gay stripes, plaids and paisleys are a distinct departure from the usual florals which for so long a time have held the center of the stage.

The plaid silk which fashions the modish afternoon dress in the picture is choicely conservative at the same time that it is decidedly modern in its technique. The wavy lines which so delicately and gracefully trace a plaid patterning are black against a pale blue background with tiny red dots scattered in pretty confusion throughout the entire design.

Black buttons effectively trim this frock and the color scheme is further stressed in that a black belt, black scarf and black gloves are worn with this costume.

Salsify or Oyster Plant 8 as Winter Food

In the winter months salsify, or as it is often called, oyster plant, appears on our markets. Sometimes a homemaker finds when she has pared and cut her salsify it has turned dark. It is not altered in food value when this happens, but it is not sightly. To avoid difficulty, drop it into cold water as soon as it is cut, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Salsify is served in a white sauce more often than any other way, but it may also be dipped in flour and fri.el.

2 bunches salsify or 1 cup milk oyster plant 1/2 tsp. salt

2 tbs. melted butter Pepper or other fat 1 tbs. chopped 1 tbs. flour

Wash the salsify, scrape, cut into small pieces and drop into cold water to prevent it from turning dark. Boil in an uncovered pan in a small quantity of water for 30 minutes, or until tender, and drain. Prepare a sauce of the fat, flour, milk, salt and pepper, pour this over the cooked salsify, reheat, and serve with the chopped parsley over the top.

Tasty Confection May Be Made of Pumpkin

A delightful confection may be made of 1-inch squares of pared pumpkin. To a pound ofthese pieces, threequarters pound of sugar is added, and allowed to stand overnight. In the morning the sirup may be drained off and cooked until it coats the spoon, after which the pumpkin, one lemon, and a tablespoonful of preserved ginger are added, and boiled until the pumpkin is clear. The pumpkin should be simmered until the sirup is absorbed, and then lifted out and drained first on plates, then on a screen covered with cloth. When it is no longer sticky, it is rolled in granulated sugar and packed in glass jars.

Manners of Men

William of Wykeham wrote over the doors of New college, "Manners makyth man." . . . No citizenship can be good in which individuals are not willing to subordinate their own individualities to some extent for the advantage of others . . . There are a few common chemicals which are necessary to remove stains, and these should be kept in every household. Some of them are poisonous, so don't put them in the family medicine cabinet or in the pantry. The chemicals most frequently needed are javelle water, potassium permanganate, oxalic acid, ammonia water, and carbon tetrachloride. Keep these out of reach on a high shelf, together with a medium-sized bowl, a medicine dropper, a glass rod with rounded ends, several pads of cheesecloth or old muslin, a small sponge, and sheets of white blotting paper, suggests the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agricul-

If the nature of a stain is not known and it does not appear to be greasy, sponging with a wet cloth may be effective. Try this on some part less you are sure the fabric will not water spot or lose its color. Potassium permanganate can be used in removing certain stains from all white fabrics except rayon. One or more repetitions of the treatment may be necessary in the case of persistent stains. Any pink or brown stain left by the permanganate is removed by applying hydrogen peroxide made very slightly acid, if not already so, with hydrochloric, acetic, oxalic, or tartaric acid. Oxalic acid in saturated solution, or lemon juice, may also be used on cotton, linen, or silk for removing potassium permanganate stains. Follow by thorough rinsing.

Ancient Ophir

Ophir was a seaport or region from which the Hebrews in the time of Solomon obtained gold. The precise geographical situation has long been a subject of doubt and discussion. It was probably in India or perhaps southern Arabia; at any rate, it appears from scriptural mention of the place that it was accessible by water from the towns on the Red sea.

Will was only slightly aware of her weeping. He seemed to have entered into a new and stimulating plane of existence. He had passed out of the role of adorer and slave for Ernestine, he thought, with some indefinable vexation at her in his heart. He felt himself a man grown now, and full of sap. A wife was only one part of the complex and fascinating business of living.

He was late at the office in the morning, as they had overslept. There was something heavy against the door, so that he could scarcely open it, and, on entering, he almost fell over the lifeless form of John Poole.

He had come back to the office after his birthday party, and had been at work. The light still shone over his drawing board. He had died here, alone, and Will, even in that first shock, was full of the knowledge that his death had come, not alone in the night but with the loss of his gift.

Yet on the drawing board was a plcture-his last. It was different from his other work. It was a bend in the stream with a great tree overhanging the water and the meadow beyond and the figures of half a dozen small boys naked and white in the sunshine, playing about the tree and on a springboard caught beneath a great root, There was in it no mockery, no satire, no clowning. It was simple, kind. Staring at it, before he went to give the alarm, Will felt sure that this work of the skilled pencil was the externalization after half a century of some remembered scene of his boy-

Will grieved honestly for John Poole and thought often and mysteriously about that last picture. If John Poole could draw like that, why had he never done so? The answer to this was disturbing.

Will established his rights to Poole's cartoon ideas only to find them worthless. Contracts ran out, strips piled up unused, and he found himself working against a vast indifference, more crushing, more impenetrable than that which he had fought for a place for Poole's strip. But his new inner activity carried with it such personal joy that he could not be sufficiently chagrined by the collapse of his business enterprise and the danger to his

CHAPTER XI

The Rift in the Lute

"I think you'd better go to Pastano's, don't you, Ernestine?" Will asked one night in June. The children sat at the supper table with them, and the heat, turning more sultry with dusk, was already stifling. "It's one way of getting rid of us," said Ernestine, a quality of familiar bitterness in her voice.

Will made no answer for a moment, then he said, with more gentleness than had become his wont, "I think perhaps it'll be a good thing for all of us. It will give me a chance to work out some ideas here in the house alone, and it will be a rest and change for you. Anyhow, kitten, don't you think you could dispense with a little of the heavy irony? If I want you to stay in Chicago it's in the hope that you will die of the heat, and if I want you to go away, it's to rid myself of you. Let's think about only the chil-

"Wrong again," said Ernestine, and laughed unhappily.

They were poor again now, and it was so hot. It was necessary for them to go either to Pastano's or to mamma's, and this fact spoiled the prospect of a summer at the lake. She wondered why she was reluctant to leave Will when they rubbed each other so raw!

It was not like it had been, that other hard time, when they were close -heart against heart, sharing every thought and feeling. For now, she was poor, but he was not. She was looking upon the face of poverty that John Poole had depicted for her years ago when she was a careless bride. But Will, either because of longer and closer acquaintance with Lack, or, more probably, because of his own secret happiness, was not dismayedwas, in fact, unfeeling, All day long, with the front bedroom door shut, he worked in there on drawings which he would not let her see, but which he could not seem to sell. Their difficulties, her fears for the future, did not pierce him. He was intolerably good-natured and happy. Ernestine was filled with a deep despair and vexation with him that he could be so casual.

As she sat, trying to swallow a little of the food she had prepared so carefully, Ernestine saw ahead of her a long vista of the years in which she washed and ironed Will's clothes, tended to his bodily needs, for food, for comfort, for sex, and was for ever outside the circle of his reality, a person whom he saw only to forget when his glance left her. She could bear any hardship, and pain. But to do without love-this she could not bear.

"I really don't see why I shouldn't go to mamma's," she said. "All those silly old quarrels with Loring-what do they amount to? But mamma isgoing to have guests all summer-and you don't want me to go there."

"I don't care what you do," he said stiffly. "Only I'll neger go to Lake Haven again."

"I'll go to Pastano"," she said listlessly. "Til write tomorrow."

The day came when Pastano's big

I'm doing all I can." "Are you?" she asked, and smiled n a secret annoying way.

Will's temper rose within him. You think I'm not?" "Did I say that?"

"Yes -- practically -- yes, you did. Your tone-

He flung his hands up in a gesture of despair, and made no further effort to woo her. After a moment she turned to him with her great tragic drawings. Well, he could not share with her what was so ephemeral that a stray thought in his own head destroyed it. He couldn't talk about it. All the strong instinct of self-preservation for the gift that was developing within him forbade it utterly. The processes he was trying to put upon paper were nebulous. He was acutely fearful for them. If Ernestine did not like them, they would be destroyed.

"Don't open that suitcase, Peter," said Ernestine, and they went out and got into the car, bags and all,

They met Madame Pastano and her tall, silent, handsome husband, whose expressive eyes glanced at once into Ernestine's with a penetrating look. Will went into the coach with them. kissed them all goodby, and went away.

The children waved to him from the windows, but he did not look back, hastening off through the gate, his very back eager and relieved.

Ernestine leaned back against the cushion and closed her eyes against Madame Pastano's friendly curiosity. Through everything that had happened to them they had been in love, until these last few months. Would she ever have Will again as she had had him once-his tender love, his gentle passion, his strength? Not if she kept on striking and wounding him, common sense told her. But she sighed with helplessness. In the face of her knowledge the starvation at her heart for the old love, the old confidence and affection between herself and Will, she could not control her pride, her desire for revenge. The word brought her up short. Revenge? What had she to revenge? Will had not harmed her. Bewildered, she could not un-* derstand by what steps they had come into this impasse. Yet there they were. The condition, however unreal its beginnings, was now real enough. It was beyond her knowledge, or his either, that the rift in the lute had been simultaneous with the awakening to activity in Will of a true creative gift.

CHAPTER XII

The Death Car

"If you came home again your father would make a settlement upon you. He thinks you fear that the money would destroy your marriage. But if you came home, he would do it for

"I wouldn't leave Will. I'm still of the same mind that money doesn't solve problems."

"But, Ernestine, think how nice it would be for you to be home again. It isn't as though you were happy. We can see that you aren't. We can all see such a change in you this summer. And another baby! Of course, it's your own affair, but Lillian and your mother would be so delighted. It's impossible for us to be friends with Will. We've tried-"

Ernestine smiled scornfully and glanced at Loring with such disdain that he flushed.

"Never mind," he said, "you don't know how we have tried. You don't know. Will doesn't appreciate you at all. I don't care what you say."

They were lying in the sand on the beach at Langley lake. Mrs. Pastano's gaudy white and green summer house reared its red roof back of them. The water was very shallow at this point so that the children could run in and out of it.

"Oh, Ernestine, if you would come home, we would be so good to you." Loring's voice implored her.

"We?" she asked, turning to look at him. "Is it that you want me back in the family circle or that you want to break up Will's home?"

"I think he is by way of breaking up his own home," he said slowly, weighing his words, moving cautiously against her loyalty to Will. "I understand that he hasn't written to you since you came down here four weeks ago. Maybe he wouldn't be sorry to

Ernestine laughed at this, and he said solemnly:

"At this time such neglect must seem cruel to you."

"I wish," she exclaimed impatiently, 'that people were able to ignore my so-called 'delicate condition.' After all, Will has his own problems. Let's not talk about it. Probably he hasn't written because he has no news to write about."

he took up the matter again from a man. Given half a chance by the different point of attack.

"It's wonderfut what a little money can do for chbdren. I've noticed Elaine every time I've been down this poorly timed sprays? summer. She's sa happy here-by the cool water-"

Ernestine wondered why she listened to him. Certainly the child had responded to the opportunities of the lake shore, the sleeping porch, the cool nights and sunny days. But not even for Elaine would she go back on Will -on her marriage.

If only Will would write to her! Her longing for some word from him was intolerable. She felt that if she did not hear from him she would leave the children behind and go to Chicago. Twice she had made all her arrangements for such a trip, but both times pride had held her back. If anything happened to him, the neighbors would know. She wrote to Mrs. Pryor ence a week or so. Will wanted to be alone, He wanted the tie between them to be in abevance. She could not go after him. Not now. "Oh, Ernestine, my dear little sister." Loring pleaded with her, seeing her tears, being unable to suppress his feelings. "Why do you keep yourself tied to him, when he has brought you only unhappiness? You have done everything for him-everything. What have you had from your marriage but poverty and child-bearing and distress? He needs to be wakened-he doesn't realize what you have meant to him. She was listening to him now, for the first time, and her heart trembled under the dark suggestions of his words. If she could hurt Will, as he had hurt her!

Vegetable Crops for Early Sale

Hotbeds Help Produce Truck to Meet Demand of Variious Market.

Early maturity of several vegetable crops grown for the early market may be obtained with the use of coldframes or hotbeds, says E. B. Tussing, extension specialist in vegetable gardening at the Ohio State university.

Hotbed and coldframe structures, he points out, are best located conveniently for the workmen, near a good supply of water, and sheltered by a windbreak. Such structures need to be located where they will receive the maximum amount of sunshine in the early season. A well-drained site is necessary

Glass Covers Best.

Glass or muslin covers are frequently used on hotheds and coldframes. he states. But during extremely cold weather it is best to provide additional protection by using rye straw mats, burlap or loose straw. Glass covers are the most durable, and if properly cared for will last from 20 to 25

Muslin covers, according to Tussing. are used extensively on coldframes late in the season when the weather has moderated. A good heavy grade of muslin should be used and it needs to be large enough to provide an overlap of from 6 to 12 inches on all sides. Source of Heat.

For the surface and pit type of hot beds a good source of heat is fermenting manure. Fresh, strawy, moistened manure is piled near the hotbeds for a few days before they are started. Fermentation usually starts at once and in a few days the manure will be ready to place in the hotbeds.

If the manure is to be used for sur face hotbeds, he declares, it should be placed in piles from 10 to 14 inches deep and 2 feet wider than the hotbed frame. If the manure is placed on the pile in thin layers and tamped evenly, it will furnish a moderate supply of heat for a long time, but the loosely tamped pile of manure produces higher temperatures for shorter periods.

Where a pit hotbed is built, much less manure is required. Pit hotbeds are prepared by excavating the soil to a depth of 18 to 24 inches. The pit is slightly larger than the frame of the hotbed and it is well drained. Manure is packed in the pit in thin layers until the manure is 12 to 18 inches deep. Special precaution is taken to see that the corners are well tamped.

Honeybee Dependable

> A number of states have laws prohibiting the spraying of fruit trees with arsenicals or other polsonous material during fruit bloom. Most of these laws are inactive, however, because the majority of fruit growers have recognized the necessity of saving the bee by not spraying at that time. There are, of course, a number of fruit growers with supposedly good reasons who think they should spray at that time, but when the costs are counted they find-if they ever do count them-that the practice was rather expensive. Rain, high winds, wet weather, spray rigs breaking down during the "pink spray," a large acreage or an overlapping blooming period of different varieties, and a host of other reasons perhaps, may contribute to the delinquency of poorly timed sprays, thus giving rise to the thought that the spraying program should continue regardless of the cost in bees, the thinness of the crop and eventually the thinness of the pocket book.

Selecting Good Seeds

Insures Fall Profits With all living things, both plants and animals, "Like Begets Like" and therefore the farmer cannot be too careful in choosing his materials. Poor scrub animals produce scrubs. Plant poor scrub seeds and get poor scrub crops. Though the better quality seed may cost a little more, it pays. There are many things influencing the amount of the barvest in the fall. but no single one has more effect upon good returns than the simple thing of selecting good seeds. This truth is so self evident that it hardly bears repeating, but it is a fact that many farmers are tempted to take a chance on their own seed supply knowing that it does not measure up to the proper standard.

Insulation of Poultry House Increases Eggs

Under even reasonably good conditions, insulation of the poultry house can be depended upon to pay. The Nebraska experiment station estimates the cost of insulating a 20 by 20-foot poultry house at approximately $50, or 40 cents per bird. If this cost is spread over the life of the house, it amounts to about two eggs per hen each winter. Every one realizes that quick changes in temperature may throw a flock out of production for several days, or even for the balance of the winter. Proper insulation of the poultry house will do much to overcome this and may be expected to pay for itself within a comparatively short time

DOCTOR'S Prescription gives Bowels Real Help

Train your bowels to be regular; to move at the same time every day; to be so thorough that they get rid of all the waste. Syrup Pepsin-a doctor's prescriptionwill help you do this. When you take this compound of laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, you are helping the bowels to help themselves. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the sensible thing to take whenever you are headachy, bilious, halfsick from constipation. When you have no appetite, and a bad taste or bad breath shows you're full of poisonous matter or sour bile.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for 47 years. His prescription always works quickly, thoroughly; can never do you any harm. It just cleans you out and sweetens the whole digestive tract. It gives those overworked bowels the help they need. Take some Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin today, and see how fine you feel tomorrow-and for days to come. Give it to the kiddles when they're sickly or feverish; they'll like the taste! Your druggist has big bottles of it, all ready for use.

Romance

By HELEN ST. BERNARD

'Clack, clack clack; clack clack

The old toom stood in one end of the low veranda which fronted the log cabin of Jerry Logan. Clarey Logan's bare feet were shifting the barness that carried the warp, while her nimble hands were throwing the shuttle back and forth with a regularity and a grace of movement that were the rhythm of motion. Clarey was eighteen, and she was as pretty as the wild hydrangeas that grew on the mountainside. She smiled at her work, and occasionally a burst of song would issue from her throat. She was trying to convince herself that she was indifferent to the loss of Zeke Odom whom she had dismissed with a fiery denunciation, only the night before. Zeke had been to meeting with Sallie Black, and Sallie was a notorious flirt. Zeke had denied that he was infatuated with Sallie; and he had vowed that he loved no one but Clarey. But Clarey had been badly out of humor. and she had delivered a "piece of her mind" accordingly. Zeke finally had accepted his dismissal, and had turned song. Faster flew the shuttle from Clarey's hands. Presently her lips assumed a queer twist, and two tears came to her eyes. Slowly the pedals of the loom harness came to rest. The girl's bare toes toyed with them, as she leaned forward against the frame of the loom. Her bosom rose and fell, and a sob broke from between her lips. Suddenly she sat upright again, her teeth and lips came firmly together; and again the "clack, clackclack" of the old loom resounded down the mountainside.

"Ef Zeke Odom ain't got no more sense 'an to fool away his time wi' Sallie Black, he ain't no feller o' mine. nohow," she declared to herself.

"Clack, clack-clack." A more rapid movement was given to the harness shifting, and the shuttle flew faster.

Clarey was weaving a piece of linesey-woolsey she had started sometime before. Into the warp of it she was weaving many colors of wool yarn. A skirt made from it would be the admiration of the countryside; and no one could produce a cut from the loom as smoothly finished as one that Clarey Logan could turn out.

"What for?" The question suddenly bobbed up in Clarey's thoughts. "I ain't got no call to dress up none, now.

Once more the pedals came to a stop, and the shuttle slipped from Clarey's hand. She leaned against the Presently she was aroused by the sound of a footstep coming from be hind the cabin. Some one was coming up the spring-branch trail.

"Clack, clack-clack," the loom was saying, when a figure strode into view at the end of the veranda. The vis-Itor was Dave Moore. "Whar's Jerry?" he asked in hurried breaths. "Gone over to Saddle-back," an-hands, and he knew no fear. He would take any risk to speed the work in his hands. Clarey's thoughts ran rapidly with all of these things, as her bare feet beat a rapid tattoo along the hard trail, over jagged stones, and thrusting aside the undergrowth along her way. A knot of men were gathered upon the bank of the river. "Don't know what had got into Zeke," one was saying. "Never see'd 'im so reckless afore in my life. 'Peared like he jest wanted one o' them logs to come end over, an' git 'tm."

"Git back!" shouted Clarey. "Don't yuh know Zeke's got to have air?" She began shoving men to the right and to the left.

In a moment the girl was upon her knees, with a arm under the injured man's head. "Zeke, honey," she cried, "open yuhr eyes, an' look at me? Hit's "Zeke! Zeke!" Clarey was sobbing now. "Yuh got to come to, honeyyuh jest got to! I'd die, Zeke-yuh jest know I would!"

Zeke had gone upon a voyage of silence that lasted for twenty minutes: but something now came glimmering through the haze of his vision, and finally his eyes cleared to an object which brought a wan smile to his lips. A moment later his arm went about Clarey's neck, and he held her against his breast.

"It's Clarey?" he murmured. "Yes; hit's Clarey, Zeke," she cried; 'an'-an'. Zeke-I take hit all back, what I said!

The Boyhood of Famous By Americans 1. V.

Ralph Modjeski

Few of us are fortunate enough to make our early dreams come true. But Ralph Mod-coming a great engineer. He sacrificed one career that held high promise and overcame an initial failure to achieve his ambition.

This genius in the construction field was born in Cracow, Poland, in 1861. He was the son of Mme. Helena Modjeska, famous tragedienne. His father was a director of theatrical companies. As a lad he traveled with his parents through the country sections, Often the troupe made its journey in wagons.

It was hard but an enjoyable and instructive life. Young Ralph, like so many children of theatrical folks, was a juvenile actor of ability. He played children's roles in either German or Polish in his father's companies.

He was taught by tutors while traveling about the country. He didn't enter school until he was over nine. Then he took up his studies in Cracow. There he became a piano pupil of Cazimir Hofmann, father of Josef Hofmann. Young Modjeski possessed such high musical talent that friends of the family were certain he would become as famous a planist as his mother was on the dramatic stage.

But when Madame Modjeska came to this country in 1876 and brought her son with her, Ralph was thinking of other things than music. While he did not neglect his piano practice, he was beginning to think in terms of construction and to dream his dreams of becoming an engineer. The artist in music was making way for the artist in steel.

The newcomers to America lived in Hoboken for a time because expenses were less there. Then they went to California and bought a farm. They knew nothing of agriculture. Their savings dwindled fast. Their first income from the venture was obtained when Ralph lasooed a neighbor's calf that had gone astray. His reward amounted to three dollars.

Madame Modjeska learned English. She made her American debut in San Francisco to which she and Ralph moved. There he, too, quickly learned the language of his adopted land. All the while his mother insisted that he continue with his music. He practiced much while he was acting as advance agent for Madame Modjeska on her first tour of the United States in the year 1877.

But his dreams were becoming more insistent. While he liked the life of travel, the atmosphere of the theater, the company of artists, there was something lacking. His own career as a musician seemed promising enough yet he finally cast it aside to take up the profession of engineering.

He sailed for France in 1878 to study for the entrance examinations to the famous Ecole des Ponts et Chaussees (School of Bridges and Roads). He worked hard on his books. Still he failed in the examinations and didn't qualify for entrance. It was a bitter disappointment to the young-

Out of that failure grew a determination to conquer the task he had set for himself. He stuck to his books, definitely deciding to pass up a musical career for that of engineering-one of the hardest and most exacting of the professions. His perseverence was rewarded. When next he tried the examinations he stood fourth | troit. on the list. Before the end of the year he reached the top of his class in scholarship. He maintained that standing throughout his course.

Graduating with honors from the Ecole des Ponts et Chaussees, he was a marked young man in the engineering profession from the outset of his career as a bridge builder. He has lived up to his early promise and today is rated as one of the greatest engineers in the world. It is estimated that Ralph Modjeski had been the directing genius back of almost $200,000,000 worth of bridges. The structures he has designed span mighty rivers in many parts of the world.

The Ambassador bridge, connecting Michigan and Ontario, Canada, the greatest suspension bridge in the world, is a monument to his ability. He built the Dalaware River bridge, supervised part of the construction of the Manhattan bridge and the Quebec bridge over the St. Lawrence. With these and many other great structures to his credit, Ralph Modjeski has accomplished what so many of us fail to do. He has, indeed, made his dreams come true to the great benefit of the traveling public.

Pruning Helps Quality of Fruit

Profits Depend on Apples of Uniform Size and Good Color.

Pruning as a part of the management program in an apple orchard does not always increase the number of bushels to the tree, but it does make a difference in the quantity which will grade out as first-class ap-Profits From an Orchard. "The profits from an apple orchard always depend on the number of baskets, boxes or barrels which contain apples of uniform size, well-colored and free from blemishes," says H. R. Niswonger, extension borticulturist at the North Carolina State college. "Thick, bushy trees afford protection to insects and diseases and shield them from contact with spray materials. The highest percentage of cull apples is nearly always harvested from that part of the tree which has not been thinned or is left unpruned. Apple trees of this kind should be opened up so that it will be easy to cover the fruit and leaves in all parts of the tree. Cost of Pruning.

As to cost of pruning, Mr. Niswonger says two orchards in the Brushy mountains, one containing 3,500 trees and the other 600 trees, spent $57.75 and $8.75, respectively, a year during the past two years. The trees in the first orchard were from eight to twenty years of age and the latter from six to fourteen years old. These costs cover the labor in hauling join in preaching it to others. the brush from the orchard as well as the actual work of pruning.

The main object in pruning a bearing apple tree is to maintain a wellbalanced top, and the even distribution of fruit spurs. In the young tree, the purpose is to develop a well-balanced top that will fruit uniformly, apostles were supported. says Mr. Niswonger.

Feeding Experiments Directed at Missouri

The Missouri agricultural experiment station reports a series of feeding experiments. In one case the hens were given all the corn, oats, bran, shorts and cornmeal they would consume, but on these rations they were able to produce only 60 eggs in a year's time. It required 9.3 pounds of feed to produce a dozen eggs. Now when identically the same rations were fed, but in addition three gallons of liquid skim milk or 11/2 pounds of commercial meat scrap was added to the daily ration of 100 hens, the egg production was more than doubled and the feed required to produce a dozen eggs was reduced nearly one-half.

By adding 88 pounds of milk or 6 pounds of meat scrap to the yearly ration for each hen from 5 to 6 extra dozen eggs were produced. While the extra cost of the ration amounted to 30 cents per hen per year, the extra eggs produced were worth at least five times the extra expense.

Provide Farm Animals With Grain Ration Now

This is the time of the year that the farmer should begin to get his horses ready for spring work, says A. L. Harvey, horse specialist at the Minnesota agricultural experiment station. In recent years it has been the common practice of farmers to allow their horses to "rough it" through the winter months. Horses have been turned out in the fall after the season's work. and have been compelled to pick up a living from pastures, stalk fields, and straw piles. This is an economical method of wintering horses, but it does not fit them for a hard spring's

Use Electric Heat on Michigan Truck Farms

Truck and nursery farms in Michigan are using electric heat to force their plants with quite astonishing results, according to reports from De-

After several months of development and experiment, a low wattage element has been designed which plugs into a convenient outlet connection and is being used by truck farms for seed germinating, propagating, cutting bench and outdoor hotbed.

During the spring season an electric element of this type in an outdoor hotbed prevented freezing of the plants when neighboring hotbeds of the nonelectric variety were frosted.

Feeding for Milk

Feeding for milk production really begins before the cow starts to produce milk. The cow that freshens in a thin condition or that milks up to the time of freshening cannot produce what she should. A cow must be prepared for milk production if she is to do her best, and the time to prepare her for her next lactation is during the dry period which should last about six to eight weeks before freshening.

Watch Breeders

Prof. C. F. Platt of the New Jersey Agricultural experiment station points out that husky chicks cannot be produced from weak parents. He urges all poultrymen carefully to watch the quality of their breeding stock. On the female side, the breeding birds should have good body weight and must be active and alert. Birds with heavy layers of hard fat on the abdomen, are not suitable.

I. The Field of Jesus' Ministry (v. 1.) "He went throughout every city and village." It is the will of God that the gospel should be preached to the whole

II. The Message of Jesus (v. 1).

The gospel message is truly good tidings, for God the Great King is offering to rebellious sinners salvation gh Jesus Christ.

III. Jesus' Helpers (v. 1). The twelve apostles were with him. The gospel preacher should utilize the help of others. Those who have heard the good tidings of the gospel glady

IV. Jesus Supported by Saved Women (vv. 2, 3).

Certain women who had been saved from Satan's power, out of hearts of gratitude looked after the comfort of the Lord and his disciples. This throws light on how Christ and the

V. Jesus Teaching (vv. 4-21).

Jesus was not only a gospel preacher but a great teacher. When the people from every city gathered unto Him, He taught them.

1. By the Parable of the Sower (vv. 4-15). (1) The sower was Jesus himself (Matt. 13:37). (2) The seed was the Word of God (v. 11). (8) The kinds of ground (vv. 5-15).

The kinds of ground show the condition of the human heart as the Word of God is preached.

a. The wayside (v. 5). The foottrodden path of the wayside pictures the hard-hearted hearers upon which no impression can be made. The word preached finds no entrance and Satan snatches it away as the birds pick up the grain from the hard-beaten path.

b. Stony ground (v. 6). This is not ground where stones are mixed with the earth, but a thin layer of earth in ledge of rock. This pictures the hearer who receives the gospel with joy, but when persecutions and trials come, he gives up and deserts the company (v. 15).

c. Thoray ground (v. 7). The ground here is good, but it has thorns growing in it. This pictures those whose lives are fruitless because of being preoccupied with earthly cares, riches, and the pleasures of life (v. 14).

d. The good ground (v. 8). The seed here sprang up and bore fruit to the full measure. This is a picture of the honest heart which receives the gospel message and allows it to produce in its life a full harvest of grain

2. By the lighted candle (vv. 16-18). The Word of God is compared to a lamp or lighted candle. A lamp is of use only as it sends out light. One who hears God's Word and does not witness for Christ is as a lamp cov-

22-40). 1. Calming the storm (vv. 22-25). Jesus fell asleep while the disciples were sailing the ship. They were overtaken by an unusual storm and were affrighted. In response to their cry of distress Jesus arose and rebuked the storm, and likewise the disciples.

2. Casting out demons (vv. 26-39). When Jesus came into the country of the Gadarenes he was met by a demon-possessed man. Knowing their doom, the demons requested permission to enter a herd of swine. Jesus granted their request, after which the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake. The effect upon the people was such that they besought Jesus to depart from them. The salvation of this man from demon possession ought to have awakened gratitude on the part of the people. The delivered man desired to be with the Lord. His request was refused because it was more important for him to make known to his friends at home the great deliverance which had come

How to Escape FLU

Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.

Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.

Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. If you have a sore throat, dissolve some Bayer Aspirin tablets in water and gargle; this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.

If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

When you neglect those first symptoms of constipation - bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness, the whole system soon suffers. Appetite lags. Digestion slows up. You become headachy, dizzy, bilious. It's easy to correct sluggish bowel action! Take a candy Cascaret tonight. See how quickly-and pleasantly-the bowels are activated. All the souring waste is gently propelled from the system. Regular and complete bowel action is restored. Cascarets are made from pure cascara, a substance which doctors agree actually strengthens bowel muscles. All drug stores have Cascarets. 10c.
