Culture Club Executive Board Meets

The Executive Board of the Sanderson Culture Club met in the ladies parlor of the Kerr hotel last Friday. As this was the first meeting of the board since November, 1930, the ladies spent a very busy and interesting two hours planning the club's work for the balance of this year. Several committees were appointed. Plans for raising the scholarship fund were discussed, but nothing definite was decided at this meeting.

One of the most important things the club members are doing at this time is sponsoring the semi-annual clean-up campaign with Mrs. Lea as chairman of the committee, assisted by Mrs. H. R. Laurence and Mrs. A. D. Brown. This committee is working with the county health officer, Dr. A. P. Utterback in the clean-up campaign to be put on some time in April. It is hoped that this year's clean-up week will receive the same fine co-operation of the citizens of our town that it has heretofore.

The regular monthly meeting of the club is held the third Friday of each month in the afternoon. Let us try for 100 per cent attendance.

CLEAN UP CAMPAIGN

The Sanderson Culture Club is sponsoring the clean-up campaign of this city.

We ask the co-operation of each individual to make Sanderson cleaner and healthier town. Clean all vacant lots, yards and alleys. All trash that can't be burned put in containers in your alley to be hauled off. Dates for hauling by county will be given later.

Club Clean Up Committee,
Mrs. W. E. Lea, Chairman

R. N. Allen purchased lot No. 16 in Block "G" in this city.

The Indian Territory Company, The McGraw Oil Co., Zack L. Miller, Wm. Braden, W. G. Burch, Ward L. Oldham, have recently purchased assignments of oil and gas leases, including major companies and independents.

A geologist of a Major Oil Co. just arrived in town from an inspection trip to the Transcontinental's Mid-Kansas test, Goode No. 1, on section 26 in Block 161, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey and reports the well to be drilling in a very hard petroliferous lime which is more than likely the cap rock of the future oil field in the northeastern portion of Terrell County. He reports that this well now has four separate gas showings, and estimates the inflammable dry sweet gas to be now making around 30,000,000 cubic feet. He compares this gas to be similar to that found in the Texon and Big Lake districts without a doubt.

It is reported that Mr. A. V. Chenberg and associates are now preparing to get material on the ground to sink a deep test on his 40 acre lease in section 49 Block D-6, M. K. & T. E. Ry. Co. survey.

J. Calvin Stansell of this city just received a letter from an oil man in the East indicating that quite a few of the operators in the newly discovered pool in East Texas have their eyes on Terrell County and the western portion of Val Verde County beginning at a point on the Southern Pacific railroad in Val Verde County, that is from McKee's station west to Lemon's Gap in Brewster County, the latter point being about 35 miles west of the town of Sanderson, Texas, with the probability of the best play along the line of development to be made in Terrell County, west of the Pecos and south of the railroad.

Sanderson Girls Lose to Del Rio

Last Saturday night the girls basket ball team from the Del Rio high school were here to play the Sanderson high school girls basket ball team. The contest took place in the new gymnasium and the game was called promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

Opal Shelton, Mattieue Newton, Novis White, Jennie Appel, Martha Stradley, composed the line-up for Sanderson at the beginning but during the progress of the game other players took part. The home girls played a good game but from the very start it was plainly seen that they were outclassed by the peppy squad from Del Rio. In fact the fast playing and great team work of the Del Rio girls would have swamped a professional team. The Sanderson girls were defeated by a score of 15 to 51.

After the Del Rio-Sanderson contest the Eagles played a game with the town team. In this game the Eagles showed improvement over their playing during the recent tournament held here. However they were unable to down the seasoned players in town team and the final score was 23 to 40 in favor of the town team.

Gay Prints for Spring and Summer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

As every woman knows, there's nothing in the costume realm to equal a frock of any print when it comes to toning up the complexion, adding a new sparkle to the eye and imparting in general that much-coveted look of being young. In fact in the piquant, colorful patterned prints which have been fashion's idol year in and year out, the fair sex seems to have discovered the very fountain of youth.

And so the lure of prints abides with us, and this season the world of fashion seems to have grown more print-conscious than ever. In the new collections, no matter how temperamental one may be, there's a print for every mood. They run the whole gamut of emotions.

That up-and-going spirit which exists during the practical busy hours of the day is reflected in sprightly tailored-looking prints whose tiny patterns on dark backgrounds are just the thing to wear about town, in the office, the schoolroom and for travel. For sports, the new plaids, stripes and checks are frankly bizarre and flamboyant. Comes evening, when mildy dines and dances the hours away in ravishing, filmy flowery chiffons whose flowing draperies sway to the strains of sweet music under glamorous lights. In fact in selecting prints one must be guided by environment and occasion.

A distinctly new message is carried in certain prints for daytime wear in that their motifs are in a single color and so placed as to give an impression as being entirely detached from each other—a leaf here, a single blossom there or if conventional, triangles, squares, dots and the like spaced far apart. For this type black or navy on white, or vice versa, achieve the startling contrast which is so outstanding on the present style program. In the picture to the right Sue Carol, who as a Radio Pictures featured player, is winning fame and fortune because of the winsomeness of her vivacious youth, shows what a college girl will wear for afternoon. It is a flowered chiffon in pastel shades with a blue background.

Meringue Adds Much to Dessert

In some ways a cream pie is easier to make than a custard pie. The shell is baked first, the filling is made in the double boiler, and then a meringue is spread over the top and nicely browned. For "company" purposes a dessert with a meringue seems a little more attractive than just plain pie. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture furnishes the recipe.

1 pint milk or thin cream 2 eggs
4 tbs. flour 2 tbs. butter if milk is used
1/2 cup sugar 1/2 tsp. vanilla
1/2 tsp. salt Pastry

Heat the milk or cream in a double boiler. Mix the flour, sugar, and salt thoroughly. Pour some of the hot liquid into this, mix well, and return to the double boiler. Stir until thickened, cover and cook for 15 minutes. Beat well. Pour some of this mixture into the beaten egg yolks, and add to the rest of the mixture with the butter and vanilla. Pour into a baked pie crust and let stand for a few minutes. In the meantime make a meringue from the beaten egg whites—four tablespoonfuls sugar and a few grains of salt and a drop or two of vanilla. Spread over the pie filling to the edge of the crust and bake in a very moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) for 15 to 20 minutes, or until lightly browned.

To make a banana cream pie, add sliced bananas to the custard mixture after it is cooked, cover with the meringue and bake in the usual way.

Standards for Canned Food Products

Testing canned peas and recording the results in a Washington laboratory of the Federal Food and Drug administration. Reading from left to right: V. B. Bonney, chemist, Food and Drug administration; Miss H. Jeffrey, proprietor of a Washington cafeteria; Dr. P. B. Dunbar, assistant chief, Food and Drug administration; and Dr. G. Adams, nutrition specialist, bureau of home economics.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

"A housewife with limited budget should be enabled, under the terms of the McNary-Mapes amendment to the food and drugs act, to buy a substandard product within the reach of her pocketbook which will carry the nutritive if not the esthetic value of standard canned foods—provided she reads intelligently the labeling required by the amendment to appear on the product," said Dr. P. B. Dunbar, assistant chief of the federal food and drug administration, addressing a joint session of the National Canners' association and the National Wholesale Grocers' association, held at Chicago, in connection with the National Canners' association's twenty-fourth annual convention. "And she should be able to buy that food without suspicion that she is purchasing something unfit for her family's consumption."

The McNary-Mapes amendment, Doctor Dunbar explained, authorizes the secretary of agriculture to establish standards for canned food products—excluding only meat and meat foods subject to the meat inspection act, and canned milk—and to promulgate a form of label designation for substandard foods coming within the jurisdiction of the amendment.

"When the President, on July 8, 1930, signed the McNary-Mapes amendment to the food and drugs act, the food and drug administration was assigned a task of tremendous magnitude," said Doctor Dunbar. "The administration recognized the merits of this legislation, however, and was willing to assume the added burden of enforcing it. The administration believed that the measure offered a materially increased protection to the American consumer of canned foods and likewise offered a protection to canners against the damaging competition of low-grade products. This initial conviction of the administration has not changed.

"The amendment is remarkable as a piece of legislation for two reasons," said Doctor Dunbar. "It is the first step taken by congress in the direction of granting the secretary of agriculture formal authority to make and promulgate legal standards for food products. Second, it is an outstanding example of a voluntary imposition, by a great industry upon itself, of additional and drastic legislative requirements. The amendment was enacted solely through the initiative and effort of the canning industry.

"I am afraid," declared the speaker, "that I cannot accord the canning industry a philanthropic or wholly unselfish interest in the welfare of the American consumer as the only motive for seeking this legislation. On the contrary, the canning industry recognized in a far-sighted way the need for just such legislation if the industry itself is to prosper. That recognition grew from the appreciation of the fact that the consumer's best interests are parallel with those of the business. So it was by deliberate design, not by mere chance, that a definite recognition of the consumer's interests being paramount was incorporated into the measure."

Food the Family Will Enjoy

By NELLIE MAXWELL

German Pot Roast.—Select a large roast weighing four or five pounds, rub with spices on all sides. Take one teaspoonful each of nutmeg, cinnamon, clove, mix well and use to cover the meat. Slice one large onion and lay half of it in a large bowl with two bay leaves and a clove of garlic. Lay over this the meat and cover with the remainder of the onion. Pour over one cupful of vinegar mixed with one cupful of brown sugar. Let stand 24 hours, turning several times. Cook meat like any pot roast, in a tight iron kettle, with iron cover, using all the liquid, adding water if necessary.

Chicago Chicken.—Take one pound each of veal and pork steak cut thin. Cut the steaks into one and one-half inch squares, sprinkle with salt, pepper, paprika and celery salt. Put the squares on small wooden skewers, using five or six pieces, alternating the veal and pork. Dip into egg which has been mixed with milk; roll in flour and fry in hot fat until well browned. Place in a baking pan. Cover and bake one hour, basting frequently with butter and water.

Noodles Wilmington.—Take six cupfuls of chicken stock, one-half cupful of diced chicken, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika, one cupful of broken noodles, one-half pound of fresh mushrooms, and the following vegetables diced: One-third of a cupful of celery, one-fourth of a cupful of green peppers, one tablespoonful of chopped onions, two tablespoonfuls of chopped pimientos, one-third of a teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of water. Cook gently for 20 minutes, add to the chicken a bit of flour to thicken and cook until well blended, using four tablespoonfuls of flour and two tablespoonfuls of water.

Rice a la 1931.—Mix one and one-half cupfuls of cooked rice with five tablespoonfuls of sugar, fold in one and one-half cupfuls of whipped flavored cream, using a teaspoonful of maraschino sirup. Chill, serve in tall sherbet glasses. Cover with whipped cream, sprinkle with chopped nuts and garnish with a maraschino cherry. (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Preserve the Eggs for Winter Use

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

If you have chickens it is quite probable that more eggs will be laid during the spring and early summer than the family can use. Some of these surplus eggs can be saved by putting them down in waterglass, so as to have more available for the winter months when the hens do not lay so well. Fresh eggs properly preserved bone and tooth building, and certain of the vitamins, necessary for growth and development.

Probably no single article of food can be utilized by the housewife in a greater number of dishes than eggs. Eggs preserved in waterglass can be used with good results for all purposes in cooking and for the table. When such eggs are to be boiled, a small hole should be made with a pin in the shell at the large end, before putting them in the water. This is done to allow the air in the egg to escape when the egg is heated, and so prevent cracking.

Only very fresh eggs, preferably from one to three days old, should be preserved. If possible the eggs should be infertile. Under no circumstances should badly soiled eggs be used. Dirty eggs will spoil, and if they are washed the protective coating which prevents spoiling is removed. Cracked eggs should never be put down in waterglass. Even minute cracks may cause spoilage and contamination of the other eggs in the jar. It is a wise precaution to examine every egg by candling it before using.

Usually a few eggs are put down in waterglass at a time, whenever they are not needed for immediate consumption. A five-gallon crock, therefore, is a good size to use for the purpose. It should be set wherever it is to be kept before any eggs are put in, as it would be difficult to move it without endangering the eggs, later on. A five-gallon jar will be large enough to hold 15 dozen eggs and still permit at least two inches of the waterglass solution to stand over the tops of the eggs.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for the preparation of the crock and the preserving solution:

First clean the crock thoroughly. Scald it and allow it to dry. Heat a quantity of water to the boiling point and allow it to cool. When it is cool, measure out nine gallons of water, and add one quart of sodium silicate, or waterglass, which can be bought in most drug stores. Mix well. Eggs may now be put into the solution whenever there are any extra ones.

Evening Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

IN THE SWAMP

"I have such a nice suit," said Mr. Fox Sparrow. "It is stylish, I think, to wear a reddish brown coat and a spotted waistcoat."

"And your dress is nice, too," "Ah, yes," agreed Mrs. Fox Sparrow, "I am so much pleased with my own dress."

"I like to moult and improve my feathers, but I like to have them come back the same way as they were, that is the same color and of the same kind."

"Perhaps it's because of our reddish brown feathers that we are called fox sparrows," said Mr. Fox Sparrow. "Are foxes reddish brown, and have they feathers?" asked Mrs. Fox Sparrow.

Lower them carefully into the crock to avoid cracking them. Be very careful to keep at least two inches of the waterglass solution above the top layer of eggs. The crock should be well covered to prevent evaporation. Waxed paper tied around the top will be satisfactory, as it is easily removed for adding more eggs. If the solution evaporates perceptibly, more should be mixed in the same proportion and used to maintain the level.

Eggs preserved in this way may be taken out at any time. If waterglass cannot be obtained, eggs may be preserved in a solution of lime water made by dissolving two or three pounds of unslaked lime in five gallons of water. The liquid remaining after the lime has settled is used to fill the jar in the same way that the waterglass solution is used.

"Oh no, my love," smiled Mr. Fox Sparrow. "Foxes haven't feathers. They have fur. And their fur, I believe, is of different colors."

"Sometimes it is gray, and sometimes, it is true, it is red."

"So perhaps, you see, because there is red in our feathers, the same reddish shade which foxes have in their fur, that we are called fox sparrows."

"Well, we're settled for the summer," said Mrs. Fox Sparrow. "It is

They Sang the Most Glorious Song, nice and cool here, and in the winter we were south where it was nice and warm.

"What a fine swamp we lived in, and what nice old leaves we used to dig up, so as to find out what was underneath."

"We were like people who used to dig for hidden treasures." "Yes," said Mr. Fox Sparrow, "and we were like chickens, hens and roosters, for they dig and scratch the earth to see what they can find. "It was such fun to look under the leaves and to stop to talk over what we had found."

"We did have a fine winter. What are your plans now?"

"I'm going to build a nest," said Mrs. Fox Sparrow, "of moss and soft grass for a lining, and I shall put in some nice feathers, too, so it will be comfortable when the five little greenish-blue eggs which I shall soon lay turn into birdlings."

"The eggs will have nice little reddish brown spots on them, which shows that they are to have reddish-brown feathers later on."

"Of course that doesn't follow with most birds, but I like to think of the dear little reddish-brown birds there will be when the reddish-brown spots and the greenish-blue eggs turn into precious little babies."

Then they sang the most glorious song, for the fox sparrows sang so beautifully, clear and musical voices.

They were so happy thinking of the birdlings there would soon be and they talked of swamp life with such happiness.

In fact all around the birds knew that soon the little birdlings would arrive for the fox sparrows sang so beautifully and so joyously and so happily. Soon they were joined by other Mr. and Mrs. Fox Sparrows and they sang and made their plans in the same way. (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Amazes Mother

"Bobbie's stomach was often upset and he suffered a lot from colds," says Mrs. P. S. Fletcher, Jr., 4410 W. 30th St., Los Angeles, Cal. "We found he was constipated."

"Mother used California Fig Syrup, so we gave Bobbie some. He amazed me by the quick way he became strong, energetic, well again. His bowels act freely now, and his digestion is splendid."

The quick, safe way to cleanse and regulate the bowels of bilious, head-achy, constipated children is with California Fig Syrup. Every child loves it. It has the full endorsement of doctors. Appetite is increased by its use; digestion is assisted; weak stomach and bowels are given tone and strength.

Look for the word California on the carton. That marks the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Funny

"Isn't it funny?" spoke little Jean one evening after she had been stuffed with foods containing vitamins and fattening substances.

"Isn't it funny," she repeated, "that I eat to make me fat and mother and daddy eat so they won't be fat?"

Muscular-Rheumatic Aches and Pains

Draw them out with a "counter-irritant." Distressing muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond pleasantly to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant," because it gets action and is not just a salve. Musterole helps bring soreness and pain to the surface, and thus gives natural relief. You can feel how its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy; jars and tubes. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Air Bomber Can Fight Back

By carrying a machine gunner behind the rudder the newest British bombing plane can defend itself effectively. The innovation eliminates the one vulnerable spot of a military airplane. In war it is an accepted rule that a bomber should be attacked from the rear whenever possible and the practice has been to "sit on the tail" of a bomber and rake it with machine-gun bullets.

VERY NERVOUS AND DEPRESSED

"A few years ago, I was in a very nervous condition," writes Mrs. P. L. Reynolds, 327 W. Main St., Spartanburg, S. C. "I was terribly depressed. I felt every day just like something awful was going to happen. I did not sleep well at night. I had awful crying spells and did not know what in the world I was crying about. My mother told me to try Cardui. After my first bottle, I was better. I took several bottles and it did me a world of good. I quit having the nervous, blue feeling, and was soon all right. I have taken it since, just as a tonic."

And the name "St. Joseph's" on that little box is not only your guarantee of purity and conformity to all government standards but your economical price protection. It means that you can buy one dozen tablets of St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin for 10c. More than nine million boxes of St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin are sold a year and thousands of people everywhere have learned that it is safe, sensible, and economical to put down a dime and ask by name for a box of "St. Joseph's Pure Aspirin." The name St. Joseph's is a guarantee of absolute purity. The 10c price is an assurance of sensible economy,

MARGARET WEYMOUTH JACKSON

She looked through everything and found material with the dust of a year upon it. In a pile were pictures of the poplar tree. He had made the tree again and again. She caught a hint of desperation. He had been deliberately careless. He had distorted the limbs, but neither the carelessness nor the distortion had given him the quality that lay now on the board with the charcoal sketch of herself on the stairs—a thing called Life. Vitality!

Months of work. Months of struggle. Secret, silent—a new idea, a new stirring pain goading him out of his path.

And every morning he had to go and make the cat cartoons. He had to go from the Sun to the movie studio. When he was longing to experiment with this new conception. He was ready to leave satire for a new form of beauty. He was ready to establish a new and modern school of work.

It was not an unnatural development. Looking back, it seemed to Ernestine that the years had conspired in order to accomplish this. She remembered the little boy with his leg in a brace, who had made the book of bird pictures for her—a book she still loved and possessed, and which she had been showing to Peter only a day or two ago. Will had so loved the color of wings.

She recalled the water colors on his mother's walls: the smudged pictures of John Fryer when he was a baby—crude but warm. She remembered what Mrs. Todd had said—all the neighbors thought Will would be a great artist some day. If he were not subjugated to her biological necessities!

Through the newspaper environment and his hero worship of John Poole he had become a cartoonist. And he had had hard work and desperate struggle to accomplish that. But the very things this success had brought him had been a means of releasing this deeper, more sincere impulse. The comfort, the affluence, the sense of security, all had enabled him to begin to give heed to another voice.

And Will had thought in his simplicity that he could have a secret! He had imagined that he could, in his idle hours, pursue this new and delightful gift of artistry. He had experimented here alone with new tools, new methods, and thought that no one would ever know. Ernestine was wiser. She knew the consequences of activity, secret or open. This studio was going to destroy the cats as certainly as love destroys infatuation.

She stooped and brushed lightly with her lips the charcoal image of herself descending the stairs. She locked the door and went away, her lips firm, her eyes glowing in her lovely face.

"Whenever you are ready, Will, I will be ready, too."

But Will did not seem to be ready. He had changed. He had become silent, morose, irritable. There was no question now as to where he was spending his time, for he played bridge hours every day. He won constantly. Ernestine kept him as clean of money as she could, subverting all that she could lay hands on to her own purposes. She did not know how much money he won at cards, but his mania was a new thing, and she could not understand it. One night at a dance in the club to which he belonged she saw him through the open door of the cardroom, sitting at a heavy round table, his face absolutely set, his dark eyes watchful, playing in an intense absorption.

"How does he play?" she asked her partner, a friend of Will. "I've played with him, of course, but always with women, and he seemed indifferent—careless."

"I wish I could get him at a table when there were women there," the man, a middle-aged illustrator, answered. "He has a great deal of my money. Why, he plays an extraordinarily good game, and every one likes to play with him because he minds his own business. He plays for study, but he doesn't row. He makes no mistakes, but he doesn't jump on the fellow who does. And cards! Oh, boy—he has them. He has an absolutely marvelous memory."

Ernestine knew this. Will's memory was part of his equipment as an artist. He would be able to visualize each trick that had fallen, without error, she knew. But she was troubled. She understood the psychological use of the word "substitution," and it occurred to her in connection with Will at the bridge tables, but she could not get the thing clearly. Will was drugging himself with the mechanical occupation of cards. The cards interested, absorbed, fascinated him. The mesmeric fascination of the game were useful to him as a means of stilling something—she could not quite get it. She could not ask him whether he had ceased going to the little office. She felt balked and wounded.

One day when he telephoned that he would not eat at home, and came in after midnight, he flung down on the table a roll of bills.

"I've been playing for ten cents a point. Won rubber after rubber," he said indifferently.

Ernestine picked up the money and counted it.

"This will pay for—" she began, and Will exclaimed passionately:

"My G—d, Ernestine, what do you do with the money? I never see you that you don't have your hand held out to me."

Her fear gave her sudden fury.

"Am I to account to you for every penny?" she exclaimed. "I did without, long enough. Now that you're earning, are you going to be niggardly with me? Don't you dare ask me what I do with my money!"

He made no answer, his face bored and scornful. She had been thinking that when he came in she would try to talk to him, but now the moment was passed. He undressed and got into bed, and said in his quick irritable way:

"Either turn out the light or go somewhere else. I'm tired."

"From working?" she asked, and then regretted swiftly. That was too much like that other time—that other pain.

Will did not answer, but turned his back and flung his arm, in the blue pajama sleeve, up over his eyes. Ernestine put out the lights except the small lamp at her side of the bed, and sat on the bed for a while, her feet drawn up and her arms clasped around her knees, thinking, her mind turning this way and that, her heart full of pain.

"Will?" she said at last gently, but he did not answer. She went around and stood beside him, looking down at him. He was asleep. His eyes and brow were hidden by the fold of his arm, but his wide mouth, his mobile, sensitive, excited mouth was in repose. Where had she seen that droop before? It was Elaine's. It was the gentle enduring fold of her mouth, when she had been little and sick so much, and had borne it all with such remarkable patience. Will's mouth was like that. Not in cut or form, but in the line of its expression. Will was hearing something. He was sick. He was enduring. Ernestine felt herself lost in a dark wood. Fiercely, passionately, she buried in herself her personal resentment and pain. She must find a way out for all of them. If she could see what to do! If something would show her the way!

Next morning Will ate his breakfast and went out, his manner more normal than it had been of late. He kissed her cheek, and said to her:

"Was I rough last night, kitten? You're pale. Sorry. I left the money in your desk drawer. Use it. It's all for you and the children, anyhow."

"Thanks, Will," she said indifferently, for now she did not care about the money at all. "Do you know anything about Loring and Lillian? We've not seen them for days. I've been spring housecleaning, and haven't even phoned her. I tried to get her just now, and no one answered."

"I think Loring and Pastano are having some trouble," said Will. "I saw Ruby a day or two ago, and he was black in the face about something Loring tried to put over on him. He'll be hard, if he gets turned against your brother-in-law. I'll call Loring at his office today, and see if I can find out what's up. Well, so long. I'm late."

Ernestine was busy with her family and household all morning, but with a sense of troubled foreboding in her heart. She went to the phone two or three times, but could not get Lillian's house nor Loring's office.

"Funny thing Lillian's maid isn't at home," she thought, but no one answered the prolonged ring at the other house. Ernestine went on about her work, and at eleven o'clock, Molly called her to the phone.

"Hello," said Ernestine.

"It was a woman's voice, crisp, young and businesslike."

"Mrs. Will Todd?"

"Yes."

"This is the Van Hueten Clark Street Savings bank calling. Could you come down here right away?"

"Why—I don't know. Why should I?"

"I'm afraid I can't tell you that. You're to come here for a private conference. I believe it's important."

"Why, yes," said Ernestine. "I can come. But I don't understand. There's not a run on the bank, is there? I've all my savings—"

"Oh, no," said the cheerful voice. "Nothing like that, I assure you. Can you be here about ten minutes of twelve? The doorman will take you to the private office."

"Well," said Ernestine, "it all seems very mysterious, but I'll come. I'll be there at ten to twelve."

"Thank you, Mrs. Todd. And, please, I was to ask you to come by the Clark street car, and leave the car at Ontario street, instead of coming in your own car."

The crisp voice was disconnected. Ernestine put the receiver in place wonderingly. Well, there was no answer to her questions until she was there.

She left the street car at Ontario street and walked south. The doorman at the bank greeted her with a stiff nod, left his place and walked back through the big downstairs room. Ernestine followed him. He paused at the foot of the wide stairs that led to the balcony.

"The last door, on the left side of the balcony," he said to her in a low voice, and Ernestine went up the stairs, half frightened with this secrecy, walked forward again, toward the street, passed indifferent employees and opened an unmarked door, entered a private office, and closed the door behind her.

Ruby Pastano was standing by the green-curtained windows, looking down into the street through a tiny slit he held open with his finger. He turned to her.

"Ernestine!"

"Mr. Pastano!" She did not know whether she was relieved or more frightened. At least, here was some one familiar.

"Will you shake hands with me?"

He came to her, big, sober, non-committal and offered her his hand. Ernestine laid her hand in his big thick palm and noticed, as she did so, how extraordinarily long his fingers were, as he took her hand in both of his.

"I've been wondering, all the way over here, who it was that had sent for me," she said nervously. "I did not expect to see you—I don't know what I expected. I had a dreadful dream last night, and I've been frightened and nervous all day."

"Sit down, won't you?" the voice, silky, soft, as always, had in it a note of gentleness that went to Ernestine's heart, in spite of her formed and set prejudices against Ruby Pastano.

He drew up for her a chair upholstered in red pigskin, and she sat down, upright, rigidly for flight, on the edge of it. He seated himself before her on the empty desk.

"I didn't want you to come to my office, and I didn't want to go to your home, but I felt that I had to see you, Ernestine," he said gently, "do you believe that I am Will's friend?"

Ernestine felt that the occasion was momentous. She felt herself thrust back from the ordinary conventional judgments of her class and generation to something more fundamental. She answered naturally, honestly:

"Yes," she said, "yes, I do."

"Good," he said. "I've not done many unselfish things in my life, although I've done plenty that were dangerous—but for my own gain. But I'm going to do something for you now. I'm going to give you a chance to do something for somebody else. All last night I couldn't sleep, knowing that the plans that are coming forward today would hurt you. I knew that I must work some change if it were possible. I wanted to take into account the existence of little Ernestine, knowing that I must at least give her her chance."

"What do you mean, Ruby? she asked, her thoughts turning to Will. How could he be involved with this man? He had never had any contact with Pastano except the free contact of friendship. He had never had a favor from him.

"No," he said, reading her thought, "not Will—but Loring—your sister's husband, Loring Hamilton. Did you know that he is ruined?"

"Loring—ruined? But how?"

"He will tell you, if he is fool enough to talk, that I have ruined him. I tell you that he ruined himself. He's in debt, he's in trouble, and he's under the shadow of an indictment—for bribing witnesses, in federal court—serious business, Ernestine."

"You mean—the grand jury? But how did this happen? Tell me, please."

"I cannot tell you everything. It's a long story, and involved, and besides, it is unwise and unnecessary. I can give you a few facts. A week ago today your brother-in-law was secure. His security was dependent on his obedience. He had placed himself deliberately in a position where he had to do as he was told, in return for all that he had—and wanted. A week ago he decided to take a step that had been in his mind for some time. I knew that it was there. I was expecting it. Loring decided that he would break faith with me, cash in on his knowledge and cut the ties. He was thirsting for the water that he carried, but could not drink."

Ha paused, and the red of old anger burned in his cheeks.

Grain Rusts Formed by Natural Crossing

New Importance Given to Barberry Eradication.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

The reason certain rust-resistant varieties of wheat and rye lose their resistance to stem rust is that new hybrid forms of rust constantly arise.

Dr. Moses N. Levine and Dr. Ralph U. Cotter, pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture, suspected that new rust forms were originating by the interbreeding of old forms and were overstepping the bounds of resistance of certain so-called resistant varieties of both wheat and rye not formerly damaged by either parent rust. The reaction of this hybrid was almost identical with that of a rust, described in 1911 and scientifically termed Puccinia graminis Hordei, which, the scientists now assume, originated by a similar process of hybridization in nature.

The discovery gives new importance to barberry eradication throughout the wheat belt, for it is while the rust spores inhabit the barberry leaf that various strains interbreed and create new hybrids. For many years it has been common knowledge that stem rust survives in northern wheat-growing regions only by means of the stage produced on barberry bushes. In warmer regions rust can survive without barberry bushes. It now becomes evident that no plant breeder can be sure his new variety of wheat or rye will remain resistant to rust in the presence of barberry bushes on which new hybrid forms of rust may arise.

Care of Young Turkeys Is of Much Importance

When the poulters are very young the hen should be placed in an enclosure made over four boards a foot wide and twelve or fourteen feet long set on edge and well nailed together to prevent falling. In a week the little turks will learn the call of the hen and not be so likely to follow moving objects and thereby become chilled. When the hen is first turned out, care must be exercised not to let her go to a branch or get in swampy land. Until poulters are six or eight days old, they seem to relish and to grow on rolled oats and chopped grass or soy bean leaves. They should have all the clean sour milk they will drink. After ten days they may be gradually given cottage cheese, dry bread crumbs and wheat bran. A change of feed for turkeys should always be made by mixing with a former food or they may refuse to eat enough to keep up the growth of body so important to combat disease. If turks are to be allowed to range, at an early age, they may be turned into a pasture field where the grass is short and it is dry. They soon follow the mother hen and in a few days they will come up for food at any regular time. They always come in before night if they find food waiting.

Cattle Feeding Has No Definite or Set Rules

Cattle feeding is a business that does not adapt itself to any definite rules. About the only thing that is certain is that conditions change. Because Farmer Jones did it this way, or that way, with success, is not sufficient reason for assuming that his plan will repeat on his farm or your farm.

To be a successful cattle feeder, learn all you can about the business from different sources, and then fit these different factors into your own farm conditions as best you can. Nobody knows what the future market will be. On a rising market it is well to have your neighbor's corn in your cattle, but on a mean market too much of the other fellow's corn may ruin the feeder.

FARM NOTES

Call upon your grocer to save you a few shallow boxes for seed flats.

One dollar invested in 18 per cent bulk superphosphate to mix with manure can be counted on to return from $5 to $8 in increased crops.

Try some pole beans this year as a space economizer. One pole occupies little more space than one hill of bush beans and gives a vastly greater supply of beans.

When the horses are allowed one feed a day of good alfalfa or clover hay, with all the other roughage they will eat, no grain will be required until the last few weeks before spring work begins.

Corn silage, up to ten or fifteen pounds per day, is good for horses. It should be fed with some good hay, however. Moldy silage must be avoided as it is poisonous to horses and frequently causes death.

Plant a better string bean this year than you did last if last year's showed any signs of strings. There are real stringless string beans now. Look over the catalogues of reliable seed houses. They will tell you.

With feed scarce in many sections and grain costs relatively high coupled with the unsatisfactory cattle market, there may be a tendency for feeders to cut their feeding period short rather than lengthen it.

To be a Healthy Woman watch your Bowels!

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients. It doesn't sicken or weaken you. No restrictions of habit or diet are necessary while taking it. But its action is thorough. It carries off the sour bile and poisonous waste. It does everything you want it to do. It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all druggists keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

Early Horseback Riders Disdained the Saddle

Ancient Greeks rode bareback or used a saddlecloth. Even the saddlecloth does not appear to have been used until the Fifth century. Xenophon says that the saddlecloth had been adopted by the Athenian cavalry, and from his advice as to the seat to be adopted pads or rolls seem to have been added. There were no stirrups until the time of the Emperor Maurice, 602. On a funeral monument of the time of Nero, in the museum at Mainz, is the figure of a horseman on a saddlecloth with something resembling the pommel and cantle of a saddle, but the first saddle proper is found in the so-called column of Theodosius at Constantinople, usually ascribed to the end of the Fourth century A. D., though it may be more than 100 years earlier.

In medieval times the saddle was much like that of the oriental saddle of today. In the military saddle of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries the high front parts were armored. The side-saddle is said to date from the end of the Twelfth century.

"Great Britain"

Britannia Major, meaning Great Britain, was the name formerly given to the whole island to distinguish it from Britannia Minor, which was the name given to Brittany. James I used the title king of Great Britain, but without the sanction of parliament. It was not officially adopted until after the union of England with Scotland in 1707. After the union with Ireland in 1800 the country became known as the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

I ask that all rubbish and refuse be collected and reduced to ashes.

Tin cans, broken glass, etc.,

 and drained.

Surface toilets cleaned and disinfected with lime or strong

THE SOUL'S ANCHOR

Without desire hope cannot exist, and in the absence of expectation hope is dead. Hence, hope is made up of the two elements, desire and expectation. Hope in the human heart makes one strong when he is weak and gives strength to character.
 Hope enables one to face adversity with a smile and climb again.

It is like the beam of heaven,
 it glows with indistructable light, cheering, blessing, invigorating.
 Hope touches through the shadows of life and shines as the sun on the hill top when the valley is as dark as death. Life is a voyage from the scenes of time to the shores of time to the shores of eternity.

Its varied experiences are as changable and restless as the ocean; and what the anchor is to the ship so is hope to the soul, its salvation, support and security.
 The soul is anchorable to Christ.
 There is only one link between the soul and Him to whom the soul is anchored. That link is the gospel obeyed. As we turn to the gospel of Jesus, we at the same time flee to Him for refuge, protection and salvation.
 He. 6:49.

A warm welcome awaits you at all services at the Church of Christ.

R. E. Griffith.

Trade among Friends

No matter what some folks say to the contrary, there certainly is a lot of sentiment in business. Friendship, for instance, makes more satisfactory sales than all the cleverness and argument in the world.

You like to trade at a certain store—not because its counters are arranged in a scientific way, but because the folks who serve you are always friendly and helpful.

Just that very thing—FRIENDLY SERVICE—is the power that draws people together into communities like this, where everybody can enjoy the many benefits of neighborly cooperation.

And FRIENDLY SERVICE is the sentimental reason why you find it very much to your advantage to trade with our advertisers—to buy where you feel at home, where your friends will see that you are well satisfied.

Proved to Be a Real Sport
By HELEN ST. BERNARD
(Copyright.)

THE dean of men swung around in his chair and faced President Leavitt of Harhurst college.

"The culprit is a member of the College Glee club, Mr. Leavitt and now is an excellent opportunity to question them. They are in the auditorium practicing for the May festival . . ."

The president raised his hand. "But, why are you so sure he is a member of the Glee club, Whitney?"

"The night the offense was committed, the Glee club was out serenading! A half-prepared program of the May festival was found in the mayor's car when it was abandoned on the Miller road . . . and further than that, this blazer—with the initials of the Glee club on the front—was given Miss Carlotta, the mayor's daughter, by the culprit . . . the night was cold."

There was the sound of laughter from the auditorium at the end of the hall; the notes of the scale, the squeak of a violin played by amateur hands and a litching voice singing. Then—silence, followed by the resounding perfectly played notes of the piano—the first chords of Chopin's Polnalise in A minor. The two men stopped short outside the closed door.

"Marvelous!" breathed President Leavitt. "That lad is a master, and with another year under Artini—and then if he gets the Ledyard scholarship, a year in Europe. Ah, his Alma Mater is going to be proud of Julian MacKay . . . a splendid lad and a genius."

A dozen boys were grouped about the piano silent. A boy in his late teens sat on the bench, his head thrown back, his eyes half closed, long sweeping lashes against white cheeks. He leaned forward, his head bent a trifle, and the notes pealed forth like bells; then, dexterously his hands flashed the length of the keyboard, rested there a second, and with a final throw of his handsome head, he crashed into a resounding finale and his wrists went limp as his hands dropped into his lap. A wild burst of applause from his classmates followed.

Mr. Leavitt laid his hand on the boy's shoulder. "A wonderful gift, my boy. You are blessed indeed and Harhurst is proud of you."

The boy looked up and laughed awkwardly. "I sometimes wonder if it is a gift, Mr. Leavitt. I like to play—music is everything to me—but folks think I am queer; not like the other fellows and I . . ." his face flushed . . . "I am—like them."

"The curse of being an artist, Julie," laughed Billy Eldridge, his roommate. "Now, ever since I learned to play the uke . . ."

"Boys, I am here on a very unpleasant mission," began the president. "You all know the circumstances of last week's episode. Mayor Kent's automobile was driven away from his house . . . It was waiting for him at the curb, and had not his daughter, Miss Carlotta, been asleep in the back seat of the car waiting for her father. It probably would have gone still further. The culprit—a student of Harhurst, compelled her to share his—er—joyride until midnight when he finally left her in front of her home and abandoned the mayor's car on the Miller road. The culprit—is a member of the Glee club."

He confirmed his statement by holding out the accusing blazer worn only by the members of that organization. Some one in the group whistled softly. He then held aloft the May festival program.

"Is there anyone here who will claim this blazer without further delay?" he asked. There was a potent silence. "No? Then, Mr. Whitney, we will adopt other measures. The last resort will be to search the effects of the members of this club. I hope that won't be necessary. A missing blazer will indicate the culprit. It will mean dismissal from college. Millard, Blume, Grosslight, Evans, Carter, Eldridge . . . six at a time . . . step forward and wait for me. The rest of you will please go to the rear of the room with Mr. Whitney—that is, all except MacKay here. You may leave, MacKay. No man that can play the piano . . . a genius like you . . ."

The boy had come to his feet while the president was talking, his arms straight at his sides, his fine young head thrown back much in the same manner as when at the piano a few moments before.

"You are like all the rest," he burst out angrily. "That blazer is mine! I'm fired! I took Kent's automobile . . . and his daughter . . . on that joy ride. That program is mine! And I'd do it again if the fellows will believe I'm not a sissy . . . a piano-playing mamma's boy!" He half turned towards his classmates.

"By, fellows! Hope you'll think of me as a—a real sport!"

"Rah! MacKay! Rah, MacKay . . . Rah! Rah! Rah!" roared eleven hearty young voices. "Rah—Julie!"

Back in his office, President Leavitt shook his head and wiped his face with his handkerchief.

"Harhurst hasn't only lost a genius, Whitney . . . but a real sport," he said. "Yes, sir, Julian MacKay is a real sport . . ."

Walter C. Teagle

It was hearing commencement time at Cornell. The seniors were making their plans as to what they would do in the world that seemed so far removed from the campus on the hills overlooking the little up-state city of Ithaca. Walter C. Teagle was included in the group that was about to go out into the "cold, cold world," to follow the words of a popular undergraduate song.

He received word that his professor of chemistry would like to talk to him. Young Teagle had specialized in chemistry during his college course. He was what his fellow students called a "shark" in the subject. Naturally he was a prime favorite with the head of the department.

He answered the summons promptly. The professor urged him to return to Cornell the following year to work for a Ph. D. degree. The educator offered him an instructorship in chemistry and held out high hopes that his prize pupil would eventually be promoted to a full professorship.

The salary of an instructor of chemistry was $600 a year. Young Teagle was highly gratified at the offer. He saw his way clear to work and study under the most pleasant conditions. A useful, if not a highly lucrative, career stretched before him.

The young man wrote home to his father, a leader in the oil industry in Cleveland, telling him the good news. The letter indicated that he would like to return to Cornell and to make teaching his life work perhaps. His father, in reply, ordered him to report at home as soon as possible, making no comment on the offer of a career that was evidently rather pleasing to his son.

The elder Teagle didn't mince words as to his opinion of the proposition when his boy arrived home. He pointed out that he had been allowing Walter $1,200 a year while he was getting his education at Cornell. He added that he didn't feel inclined to make up the difference between that amount and the $600 of an instructor's pay.

Moreover, the father couldn't see any real promising future ahead for his son in a teaching career. Furthermore he needed the boy in his oil business. So the young man was ordered to get a new suit of overalls and stand ready to use them as his working clothes until he knew the oil business at the bottom.

Walter Teagle was born in Cleveland in 1878 and knew a thing or two about oil even before he went to Cornell. As a youngster he spent much time around his father's refinery. He had served an apprenticeship, from time to time, at firing stills and unloading coal, for he was a powerfully built and strong lad.

He wasted no time in college as is shown by the fact that he completed a four-year course in three and stood high in his classes. He wrote the thesis for his degree on the subject of oil. That was a natural enough topic for him to select, considering the business his father was in, and that his maternal grandfather, Morris B. Clark, was a partner of the senior John D. Rockefeller in the grain business and was later interested with him in oil ventures.

The first job at which his father put the recent college graduate was at firing a still. The pay was 19 cents an hour. The young man earned every penny of it by the sweat of his brow. Weighing over 200 pounds and standing 6 feet 3 inches, he could hold his own with any man on the shift. He didn't remain a laborer long. He knew too much about the industry to waste much time in such a job.

He inherited his liking for the business from his father. His progress was rapid as soon as his parent convinced him that the industry offered him much more than a teaching career. But the days as a laborer must have been trying, for all that, to the young man who had been a leader in the student life at Cornell with no hard work to do beyond studying his books and working on his experiments. Fortunately, he had the physique to stand up under his grueling task.

He realized, once he went to work, that there was more to getting oil than merely putting down a well. He knew that it took wide knowledge to determine on a likely location for finding the crude product, that refining and transportation were problems requiring much study and wide experience.

He made up his mind to know the industry from the bottom up. His father's concern merged with the Republic company shortly after the young man entered the business. He was made a traveling auditor. While on this job he reached a country station and found the agent gone. He hitched up the horses and made the deliveries until a new representative arrived.

After three years with the Republic he became a Standard Oil man. He marketed the company's products abroad and was so successful that he was promoted to more responsible positions, finally being elected president of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey.

If the teaching profession lost a distinguished member big business gained an outstanding leader when Walter Teagle's father persuaded him against becoming a Cornell instructor. (©, by The North American Newspaper Alliance.)

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Methods found successful in growing sugar beets in the humid states are outlined in a new publication of the United States Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin 1637-F, Sugar-Beet Culture in the Humid Area of the United States. Where drought has reduced forage supplies seriously as was the case last summer in much of the area to which this bulletin applies, the facts brought out as to feeding value of beet tops and beet pulp are especially pertinent. The bulletin says that five to eight tons of forage may be obtained from an ordinary beet crop.

Designated Area.
The area designated as humid includes Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and part of Nebraska. About 30 per cent of the nation's sugar-beet acreage is in this region. About 60 per cent of the beet acreage is in the Mountain states area and the other 10 per cent in the Pacific coast area.

"An adequate supply of moisture during the growing season, soil of a proper type, and a long, moderately cool growing season are essential to success with sugar beets," the bulletin says. "The adaptability of the sugar beet has permitted its culture on a wide range of soils, but the best yields are generally made on the heavier types."

Intensive Measures Necessary.
In the culture of sugar beets intensive measures are necessary, the bulletin says. Careful preparation of the soil, proper planting practices, liberal use of manure and fertilizers, and frequent cultivation are necessary for success with this crop.

The bulletin discusses diseases and insect enemies of sugar beets, and gives the best methods of control, as determined by experiments of the Department of Agriculture and state experiment stations. Farmers' Bulletin 1637-F may be obtained free from the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Sanitation Is Woefully Weak in Some Stables

Sanitation in the mangers and drinking cups is woefully weak in some stables. One farmer was heard to complain recently that his cows were not doing well, that they didn't drink as much water as they should and always left a certain amount of meal in the bottom of the mangers and drinking cups will locate the source of such trouble almost every time. The smell of either should indicate what is wrong. The drinking cups become fouled with chaff and spoiled silage and when left for even a day the water is filthy. Naturally cows will not drink such water freely. Anywhere from a quarter to an inch of hard accumulated filth, originally feed, can sometimes be scraped out of the manger, left over from many feedings and seldom cleaned out. It, too, has a stench which makes the animal quit eating long before it has had enough. Drinking bowls and mangers should be kept clean.

Turning Hatching Eggs Made Quite Easy Task

Many poultry raisers who have only small flocks need to save eggs for several days to get enough to set. As they must be turned every day before they are put in the machine, it becomes quite a task. I have simplified this by packing the eggs in the egg cases when they are gathered, says a writer in an exchange. Then the lid is put on and the crate is turned, thus saving the work of handling each egg separately. Even though there are not enough eggs to fill the crate, the fillers may be put in and the crate turned just the same.

Feed Consumed by Cows of Average Production

A cow will consume about 35 pounds of silage a day and 15 pounds of hay. If her annual yield is 210 pounds of butterfat and her milk averages 3.5 per cent of fat, her milk yield will average 6,000 pounds for 300 days a year, leaving her 65 days for a dry period. This means that her average production would be only 20 pounds of milk a day.

Such a cow will not need a heavy grain ration. If she is fed two pounds of grain a day of a mixture composed of 400 pounds each of ground barley and oats and 100 pounds of linseed meal she should do very well.

Sweet Clover Seed
When left alone sweet clover will form its seed crop in July and die out in August; but if the sweet clover be pastured so as to gradually keep the tips of the branches clipped off, the seed crop may be delayed considerably, and may not be formed until August, and its ability to ripen the seed may be postponed even into September and a little later. There is another strain of sweet clover which forms seed the first season and dies before winter.

Lesson for March 22

THE USE AND ABUSE OF GOD'S GIFTS. (Temperance Lesson)

GOLDEN TEXT—And he not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit.
LESSON TEXT—Luke 12:13-48.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Use God's Good Gifts.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Use God's Good Gifts.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sin of Drunkenness and Gluttony.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Enslaving Power of Strong Drink.

I. Warning Against Covetousness (vv. 13-15).

1. The occasion (v. 13). The occasion of this warning was the request of one of the company that Jesus be the umpire regarding a disputed estate. Two brothers were in trouble over an inheritance.

2. Jesus' reply (v. 14). He said, "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" He refused to enter the sphere of the civil law. Christ's mission was pre-eminently spiritual.

3. The warning (v. 15). The clear implication is that if due attention is given to inculcating right principles in the hearts of the people, civic and economic problems will largely adjust themselves.

II. The Parable of a Rich Fool (vv. 16-21).

The parable of this rich planter shows clearly that to be concerned with earthly riches while neglecting God is the height of folly. Observe:

1. The increase of his goods (v. 16). This clearly implies that his riches were rightfully obtained, for the ground brought forth plentifully.
2. His perplexity (v. 17). His land was producing more than his barns would hold. He was at a loss to know what to do. No thrifty man wants to see the legitimate fruits of his toil perish. If he had possessed right views of life and a sense of stewardship before God, he would have seen that his barns had enough for his personal needs and then have distributed the surplus to the needy.

3. His fatal choice (vv. 18, 19). He chose to enlarge his barns and give up his life to ease and luxury. He made plans without consulting God.
4. His awful indictment (vv. 20, 21). God called him a fool. His plans were cut short by an immediate death sentence.

III. The Certain Cure for Anxiety (vv. 22-34).

Having shown the folly of rich men who gained gold and lost God, Jesus now urged the disciples to trust God and dismiss all anxious care.

1. The argument (vv. 22, 23). It is summed up in one brief sentence. "The life is more than meat and body is more than raiment."

2. The illustrations (vv. 24-28). (a) God's care for the fowls (vv. 24-26). The ravens do not sow nor reap. They have not storehouse nor barn yet they live, for God feeds them. If God does not forget the fowls, certainly he will do more for his children. (b) God's care for the flowers of the field (vv. 27, 28). If God is so careful of the flowers which appear but for a day, how much more will he clothe his children?

3. The exhortations (vv. 29-34). (a) The getting of food and clothes should not be man's chief concern. (b) Seek the kingdom of God (v. 31). Those who make God's kingdom first shall have all their needs supplied (Phil. 4:19). (c) Be not afraid (v. 32). God's good pleasure is upon his own, and all good things he will give. (d) Practice self-denial in order to be able to give to those in need (vv. 33, 34).

IV. Be Ready for the Coming of the Lord (vv. 35-48).

Having warned the disciples against the acquisition of worldly goods while forgetting God, and shown them the needlessness of anxiety for food and clothing, he showed them the blessedness of being in a state of readiness when the Lord shall come. This attitude of heart he made clear by two parables:

1. That of the returning lord (vv. 35-37). The Lord will be so pleased with those who are waiting for him that he will take delight in sitting at the banquet with them and even serving them.
2. The thief in the night (vv. 38-40). This parable shows that the time of the Lord's coming is not known. The proper thing is to be ready.

3. Reward will be given to the faithful (vv. 41-48). The faithful servant will be promoted at the coming of the Lord. A faithful judgment will be meted out upon the unfaithful servant.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

BAYER ASPIRIN

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monosodiumsalicylate

The Isle of Good Men

The following proud record is claimed for the Isle of Man: "The Isle of Man contributed more money and fighters to the World war than any other nation in proportion to its population. The prison on the Isle of Man is empty. The saloons are open, but properly regulated. There is not a pawnshop on the Isle of Man. There has been only one Manxman murdered since Queen Victoria went on the throne, which was 1837."—Vancouver Province.

Can't PLAY Can't REST —child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child. All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:
