Incidentally I think that, in the selection of a teacher, all the qualifications of a good teacher should be considered, in preference to what particular church he or she may belong to.

A late rumor has it that I am opposed to the band and orchestra, and, if elected to the board, will endeavor to discontinue same. Those boys have gotten a stronger lesson in co-operation and organization there in the band this year than they ever had at any other one opportunity in their lives, and I want to go on record to the effect that I am very enthusiastically in favor of the development of the band.

Very sincerely yours, R. N. Allen.

Evening Fairy Tale for the Children

Joan, she had taken the kitten into her arms, and had said:

Oh, you precious black kitten. Why, you are as black as black as-wellas black coal.

"I know. I shall call you Mrs. Coal, That will be your name."

And so the name had always stuck to the kitten, and now that she was a big cat the name seemed to suit her very well.

Whenever anyone asked the name of the cat and heard that she was Mrs. Coal, no one was in the least bit surprised, the name almost seemed made for her.

And another thing, which Joan said showed how much Mrs. Coal did approve of her name, one of her favorite places in the house was in the old coal bin.

Often Joan would go to look for Mrs. Coal and there on top of the coal bin she would be sitting, her green eyes the only part of her showing a color different from the coal.

And of course no one could tell if Mrs. Coal was dirty or not from sitting in the coal, but just looking at her -though Joan naturally suspected that if she had been sitting in the coal she would be pretty dirty.

But Mrs. Coal was very fussy about

Frankfurts Popular, Easy to Cook

Almost everybody likes frankfurts. They are easy to cook, especially for a large number of people, so they are often used for picnics, community suppers and similar gatherings. A good extra dish in which frankfurts are used is suggested by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The quantity given in the recipe below is suitable for a family of about six persons.

quarts water tsp. salt tbs. chopped onion 1 pound frankfurts

spound spaghetti 1 cup canned tomato puree diluted with 2 cups water, or 2 cups tomato sauce 1 tbs. butter

Cook the spaghetti in the water for about 30 minutes, or until tender. Drain well and mix with the tomato. Cook the onion in the butter until lightly browned and mix with the spaghetti and tomato. Wash the frankfurts, barely cover with boiling water and simmer for ten minutes. Put the spaghetti and tomato on a hot platter, lay the hot cooked frankfurts on top, garnish with cress or chopped parsley and serve at once.

The spaghetti mixture may be placed in a greased casserole, the cooked frankfurts laid over the top, covered, and heated until the sauce bubbles. Serve from the dish.

Now one morning Mrs. Coal was missing. Poor Joan did not know what to do. She looked in the coal box and there was no Mrs. Coal. She called through the house "Mrs. Coal, Mrs. Coal," and then she burst out crying.

Never before had she called for Mrs. Coal that from somewhere or other the sound had not come of: "Me-ow, me-ow, me-ow."

But this time not a sound came. "Where has Mrs. Coal gone. Where could she have gone?" asked Joan of everyone.

But no one had seen Mrs. Coal all day.

Joan spent a wretched time. What could have happened? She knew Mrs. Coal would not want to worry her, I name Oberammergau.

When Mrs. Coal had been given to | herself and kept herself looking fine | and so that was why she had always come to Joan when she called.

Besides Mrs. Coal loved her little mistress and how she would purr when she was stroked! Joan kept thinking now of all these things as she looked, in vain, for Mrs. Coal.

It was getting late afternoon when Joan was eating her supper. Nothing tasted very good and she was feeling so mournful. As a rule Mrs. Coal had come to sit by her side during supper time, and had always had a nice bowl of warm milk.

"Me-ow, me-ow," came a little sound.

Joan gave one cry of gladness. And what do you suppose had happened?

Mrs. Coal was behind the closet door of the dining-room and with Guess! Guess! Guess!

Globe Artichokes Served With Sauce

How to Serve and Eat a Globe Arti choke.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service. Perhaps you have seen in food stores a curious looking green, coneshaped vegetable, covered with scalelike leaves, called a "globe" or "French" artichoke. You may have wondered what to do with it. Until comparatively recently, in this country, globe artichokes were considered expensive delicacies, served chiefly in hotels and restaurants, although they have been well known in France and other European countries for a long time. An increased supply and more widespread distribution has now brought them, like many other foods into our everyday markets.

People are asking whether or not globe artichokes have value as food, and how to cook and serve them. The globe artichoke, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, supplies vitamins A and B and carbohydrates in amount simular to young peas, as well as other nutrients. It is not to be confused with the Jerusalem artichoke, which is a tuber, growing profusely in many parts of the country. The characteristic flavor of the globe table, wash them in cold water, trim off the stems and remove a few of the outer leaves. Drop them into lightly salted boiling water and cover and simmer for 20 or 30 minutes, or until the central part is tender. Test by pulling off a leaf. Artichokes are usually served with drawn butter or hollandaise sauce in a small individual dish beside each plate. As the leaves are pulled off they are dipped in the sauce, one by one, and eaten from the fingers. The flower center or, hairy portion growing on top of the heart is discarded, but the bottom or "cheese" is considered by many the I choicest part of all.

Even a five-year-old may be stimulated to make a protest like this about her clothes when the first warm break comes after the bleak windiness of March. You may try to point out that all the cool days are by no means over, but more likely you give thoughtful consideration to the long-sleeved winter dress your child is wearing. To begin with, some kinds of sleeves tween the elbow and the shoulder and finished with an invisible hand-sewn hem. That would give the child more freedom for climbing and playing ball and other games in which she uses her arms.

Then you observe that your little girl's dress is several inches too short -a condition which is bound to grow worse as time goes on. The hem must come down, perhaps to its very edge. Obviously a few new and larger dresses will be needed very shortly, also exercising a marked influence cunning cape effect, and the result pounds sterling, or, sometimes, $500. for this and other let-down dresses raveling.

> The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has designed a great many children's dresses with a view to the child's normal activities, easy making and easy laundering. The design shown in the picture is made up in plain light green chambray. Cotton broadcloth or other firmly woven cotton fabrics would have done equally well. It has rather wide set in sleeves, hemmed invisibly, by hand. Four inverted box pleats, two in front and two in back, take up the fullness at the shoulder that is needed in the skirt. These are stitched down on the underside for about two inches and pressed in place before the shoulder is cut out by the basic pattern. The plainness of the front coat-style opening is relieved by three square tabs for the buttonholes, lapels of white at the neck in front, and a colored decorative edge. This is made by first finishing the edge with a very short blanket stitch and then whipping this edge with a thread of another color.

Certain details of making should be mentioned. All seams are "french"stiched first on the right side, trimmed, and stitched on the wrong side-with the exception of the sleeve seam. This lies flatter, on account of its curves, if first stitched on the wrong side and then double overcast, or finished by turning in the edges of the seam and stitching again. The hem is very deep to start with, to allow for letting down and is put in by hand. The first turn in the edge of the hem is stitched on the machine to keep it firm and make the hand-hemming easier. The hem itself looks better when the stitches do not show on the outside, and it is easier to rip for letting down.

The collar lapels are double. The back of the neck is finished with a narrow shaped facing and an edge of colored thread like the front opening. The underfacings of the front edges are not stitched down but are held in place by the buttons and buttonholes. On the extreme inside edge of this facing a quarter-inch turn-in is made. like the top edge of the skirt hem, and stitched on the machine to prevent

The tendency for the silhouette to trend away from stereotyped form to lines of gentle grace is notable this season, especially in the suit realm where the jaunty bolero in all its versatile moods is injecting a refreshing note of youth.

The promotion of the cape theme is the two together, the bolero plus a model in the picture, as any college girl might envy. The fact that the capelet and brief jacket are scalloped. all the more emphasizes the departure from the severely tailored. Very interesting and style-significant, too, is the skirt which achieves its smart flare via many sections of

No less important than the jacket suit itself is the blouse which is worn with it. As every woman knows, there's magic in a blouse. In the twinkling of an eye it can change a suit of tailored aspect into as dressy

looking costume as one may have need of during the daytime hours and vice versa. This season, more than ever, designers are playing up blouses with vim, vigor and intriguing artistry. The sleeveless blouse worn with the suit pictured is of aquamarine geor." gette. The assortment of blouses for spring are bewildering in their diversity of color, fabric and styling. Two types are, however, outstanding-those of plaid or stripes and those of lace.

As to the lace blouse it may be as frilly and frivolous as fancy can picture, and this type is adorable with the youthful bolero suits. Designers are also very enthusiastic in regard to the new linen lace. Many of the handsomest blouses in the season's collections are of this type of lace in either natural tint or in any of the pastel colorings.

-23-Will and Ernestine Choose Will was nailing up a wooden box. The shelves and the table were empty. Ankle deep on the floor was a litter of papers.

"Ernestine!" He stopped, a hammer in hand, to stare at her.

"What are you doing?" she exclaimed, and then, with a little cry of horror she stooped and picked up from the rubbish on the floor, a torn picture.

"Oh, Will, how could you tear it up? It was good-it was wonderful, Why did you destroy it?" With trembling hands she tried to put the ragged pieces together on the drafting desk. He looked at her astonished, voiceless. Before her, racked against the wall, was the sketch of herself, with Elaine on her arm

"I'm glad you didn't throw this away-oh, Will, I like it so! But what are you doing? Are you moving?"

"What do you mean, Ernestine?" he said sharply. "Did you know about this office-when have you been here?"

"Of course I knew," she said impatiently, confused to find the need for explanations, now, at this vital hour. I've known you had this office, since last spring. I knew, long before that, that you were hankering for something -some new work. You remember the night you made this picture?" She picked up the sketch of herself. "You remember? Of course you do. I knew then, that you were working. Lillian had told me she saw you in this neighborhood, and I came here the next day, and looked at all your work. Oh, Will, don't look at me so! I wasn't spying on you! You were so strange, and I was very unhappy-I had to know what you were doing. But aren't you going to work here any more?

He laughed strangely. "Rent's due tomorrow," he said. "I decided to let it go. I'm closing this office, and I'll never open another. I suppose, since you knew I was working here, that you were worried about the cats-but you needn't have worried-I'll stay with the job. I've given up my wild ideas. We'll keep the income-that's what counts."

"Why Will," she said swiftly, "you don't think there's any conflict between your desire and mine, do you? That's what I've been saving for-all this time. I knew that you would want to quit the cats, and I've saved a great deal of money-you'll be astonished. I had to know-it was right for me to know. It's made it possible for us to build a reserve. And why should I worry about the cats? Do you think want you to stick to the cats, if there's something bigger, something more compelling upon you? Why, Will, Will-all I want is just what you want." Suddenly she remembered her errand, with a wail. "Oh, Will, Pastano wants the money for Loring-a bribe. Loring's in terrible trouble, He'll have to go to jail, but, oh, I don't want to give them the money for him. It's your money, Will-don't give it away-don't let them take it from us."

He caught her wrist and held it hard.

"Are you out of your senses?" he asked sternly. "What do you meanmoney? What money have you?"

She opened her purse and took her small savings deposit book from it, She opened the book, and put it in his hand, the total across the narrow page. His eyes were wide, incredulous. He rubbed his hand across his face. "It's yours, Will," she said with sudden gentleness, "I have robbed you of every cent I could get from you, and I've lived as cheaply as I could, and I've banked the difference-for you." Deep within her she heard a warning bell. She remembered that they had much to tell each other. She laid her hand upon his arm, and said in the same low tone:

"Look at me, Will." He looked at her-his brilliant black eyes fixed on her brown eyes-he looked at her deeply, with astonishment, and suddenly Ernestine was filled with a strange power and wisdom. She passed out of self-consciousness and was controlled and guided by deep instincts and ancient mother wisdom. She moved toward Will, put her face up to his and kissed his lips,

"Will," she said, smiling up at him, her lovely face alight with feeling, her tender mouth curved in a smile of sweetness, "Will, I love you. You forget it. You ignore it-you make love a burden instead of a support. I've seen it in the deeps of your artist's mind-that love betrayed and entrapped you, instead of letting you free. Haven't you thought that?" His arm trembled a little under ber hand. "Only once," he said, and his face flushed, "only once-the day after I had made that picture." He motioned to the picture she still held in her free hand. "The next day, I knew that I could not go on with my dreams, I knew I would have to quit it-that day, I felt so-it seemed as though-" He paused, stumbled on, with courage. "It just seemed to me -a woman is so sweet and warm in one's arms-so generous-so lovely; and then, suddenly, there are a house, and a car, and children, and nurse malds, and cooks, and doctors-a thousand things-just suddenly. I shouldn't bave felt so-I fought it-but it got me. I'm telling you-you asked me." Her eyes were full of tears.

"I knew, Will-not just that way, but I knew-that's why I've been saving and been silent—that's why I didn't ask you any questions. But, Will, I love you. It's the biggest thing in the world to me, Will. It means to me what these pictures—what this work means to you. I'm not an artist-I'm not even artistic-but I know what your work means to you, because I love you. And when you shut me out, Will, it was for me just as it was for you when you were shut off from your work. I want you to be happy." She was solemn, young, uplifted, filled with the glory of unselfishness, her face a blurred and lovely picture seen

"Dear heart, what does the money matter? Why, Will-even more than the children-yes, though I ought not say it-more than the children, than my people, than myself. You've told me how you felt, and I'll tell you, that for a little while, for one dark time, I was jealous of your work-of your love for it. But not any more, Will.

Deep Within Her She Heard a Warning Bell.

I want you to have what's best for you; I want you to have your work. There isn't any conflict between your desire and mine, Will, or your future and mine, because I want what you

His face began to shine. He reached up, took her hand and held it.

"Ernestine," he whispered, and stopped as she leaned forward, her against his shoulder, her face hidden so, while she went on swiftly:

"Will, I knew you were tired of the cats. Will, I spent only about a third of what you earned, last year. But you wouldn't tell me, you didn't want to talk to me, so I just went ahead, planning for the time when you would. I knew that you wouldn't want, probably wouldn't take, the money I'll have from grandmother and from papa, some day. But this is yours-it's savings from your earnings, Will. It's for your stake."

"You understood," he said hoarsely. "Will," she said again, and now her arm was around his body, the picture up between his shoulders, "I'll tell you

"No, no, Ernestine," he said with quick passion, "you can't let me; we can't go back. Do you know what it means? A living-I think I could make that-but it will be precarious-I've been into it all with some thought. It will be years before I can make even half what the cartoons bring me. Even if I get darned good-there's not the money to be found- I've thought it all out. I've been up and down and around this problem. I've tried to save some, too. But it won't work. It's precarious-it's too scanty. I've been through it all, and made up my mind. Don't tempt me with your savings-they wouldn't last us a year."

"If we went back to the West side, back to the old house, I could do my own work, and the children and I could live on the trust fund, until you got started. You could keep this studio, and you could go to Philadelphia and to Paris and study."

"Would you-would you do thatfor me? Ernestine, my wife." He kissed her, and she shook the tears from her own lashes and drew him down and pressed her lips against his

"It wouldn't be necessary for you to do that, darling," he said to her, and he laughed a little. "It wouldn't be that bad. I could make a living-and you've your trust fund, and your grandmother has promised you the house at Langley lake. No, you won't have to go back to the West side-you can keep Molly, I believe. We can manage that much, Ernestine, with good luck and good management."

"Oh, Will," she said to him, "I almost wish it would be hard like that again. I've been so lonely-longing to help you, feeling outside. What does the car and the house and the things mean if I'm cut off from you? I know I can't help you with your painting. I know that travall is yours-that's your work-your life. It must be first with you, Will. And that's right. Gifted people can't choose. But if your work must be first, to you, you can understand what love and marriage mean to me. That's my life. And if I can feel that you can go on -because I understand-"

They were both crying, his arms were around her-tight-tight. As their tears mingled and they stood together in the long embrace, the kiss that was free from passion but frought with tenderness, the purest and holiest feeling, true married love, welled over them. It seemed to Ernestine, straining so in his arms, that for the first time she was truly wife to Will. Not only bride, bride of his body, star of his imagination, object of romantic adoration, not only the mother of his children and the keeper of his house, but wife-wife-in the deep places, the secret places of love.

"Ernestine," he whispered, after a little, and she wept afresh to hear her name so on his lips as he had whispered it when first they loved, "forgive me-that I didn't understand, that I didn't confide in you. You seemed always to have a child in your arms, a thousand needs. I felt that this other was a foe to you. I was stupid, blind. I thought you wanted the money-needed it. You were hard with me that summer before I made the cats. I didn't want to go back to that bad time again. I didn't know how wonderful you are. You're my good luck-you always were. I'll never forget it again. Oh, Ernestine, I'll do big things for you-I will."

A clock somewhere boomed two, and Ernestine started in his arms. She had remembered Loring-at last. She withdrew herself from her husband's arms and made a gesture of helpless-

Ernestine saw Ruby Pastano near the bank entrance and, though he bowed formally and did not speak, he gave her a flashing, radiant glance, like the flash of a mirror held in the sun. She knew that he understood. from the happy countenance and from Will at her side, that they were looking after Loring.

Raising Pop Corn May Be Overdone

As a Result of Attractive Prices Interest Is Gaining Momentum.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service. Indications now point to the possibility that pop corn growing may be overdone in 1931, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Pop corn prices, they point out, are very sensitive to supply, and price depressions due to overproduction have occurred in the past. After a few years of fairly normal production, if a short crop occurs as the result of unfavorable weather or other causes, the price rises to a figure attractive to growers. Immediately many new producers appear who flood the market with disastrous effects to the old growers as well as to themselves.

Relatively high current prices for pop corn and low prices for field corn have combined to make pop corn appear a desirable crop, says specialists of the bureau of plant industry, Judging from current correspondence, they say, many old growers are expanding their acreage and others, attracted by stories of their neighbors' profits, are planning to substitute pop corn for part of their field corn acre

Interest Gains Momentum.

The present interest in pop corn has been gaining momentum for more than a year as the result of attractive prices. Ordinarily the unbalanced situation would have corrected itself before now, but the weather of 1930 conspired to reduce the yields of pop corn as well as of field corn and so put off the day of price rectification. Stocks of old pop corn were pretty well cleaned up during the winter of 1929-30 and prices rose considerably. In response to this stimulus, acreage was expanded in 1930 but the effect was offset by the unfavorable weather. Prices of pop corn have declined somewhat lately, partly at least in sympathy with general price levels, but they are still relatively high as compared with field corn, the speciallsts point out.

What is happening may be illustrated by the situation in Iowa, they say, which is the leading state in the production of commercial pop corn. In 1930 Iowa increased her pop corn acreage to nearly twice that of 1929 and nearly three times that of 1927. If, instead of the heat and drought of last summer, the weather had been favorable for corn, enough pop corn would have been produced to glut the market, and overproduction such as that of 1925 would have occurred.

Pop Corn Acreage.

The pop corn acreage of the United States is only about one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total corn acreage, pop corn is concentrated in certain districts to a considerable extent, of the corn belt is suitable for grow-"I don't need twenty thousand dol- ing pop corn. It can be appreciated, -if you can live that economically high prices at present, as compared in 1931 if the season is favorable. It may be well for those who are plan-

Home Conveniences Are of Great Importance

Home conveniences such as light and water are assuming greater economic significance in connection with the production of poultry and dairy products. The high percentage of investment in farm buildings adds also to the importance of the water system and saves lights in their protection against fire. The increase in number of farm housewives who add to their Income by keeping "paying guests" has also created a larger demand for water systems, farm light plants and gas plants for cooking. The newer models of farm light plants will do more than 100 jobs on the farm, all at a very low

Demand for Dwarfs Met by Inhuman Exploiters

Dwarfs were the lapdogs of medieval times. And so popular were they that many merchants specialized in selling them to the nobility. "Marc Antony owned a dwarf," writes M. R. Werner in Liberty, whom he called, ironically, Sisyphus. In Rome there were dwarf merchants who, when they could not obtain natural specimens for the emperors and nobles, manufactured dwarfs by undernourishing normal babies, or by binding their limbs to prevent full development. "Tiberius, Domitian and Heliogabutus paid high prices to their dwarf merchants, who experimented constantly to supply the demand. Cath- to be .- Passing Show, London.

More Than Million in Twenty States Fed by Red Cross Volunteers

Hot School Lunches and Balanced Rations Given to Drought Victims-Seed Programs Instituted on Wide Scale

More than 1,000,000 persons in 862 drought-stricken counties of 20 States came under the care of the American Red Cross in what developed into the most extensive relief operations in half a century of ministering to stricken

Measures to lessen the severity of the blow inflicted by drought were taken as early as last September, when seed was distributed to more than 58,-000 families for the planting of rye and other pastures, and to more than 27,-000 families for the planting of kitchen gardens. The expenditure for this purpose amounted to $326,800. Green vegetables were made available up to the first of January.

Early in February another Red Cross garden program got under way and 507,000 packages of seed were distributed in 15 states. Quarter-acre plots were planted to beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, collard, sweet corn, kale, lettuce, mustard, okra, onions, peas, spinach, squash, tomatoes and turnips Once again were farm families given the opportunity to participate in their own salvation.

A comparatively mild winter contributed to the success of the Spring and Fall seed campaigns. Many habitual single-croppers were introduced to the advantages of kitchen gardens, balanced cropping and balanced diet. Numerous land-owners have expressed the opinion that this constitutes the one apparent blessing to come out of the drought catastrophe. The United States Department of Agriculture and the local county agricultural agents and home demonstration agents cooperated in making this part of the relief operations outstandingly success

Balanced Meals Served

Red Cross feeding was aimed at adequacy and scientific correctness, as well as simple economy. In large numbers of schools, where children were found to be attending with little or nothing in their lunch boxes, hot meals were served at noon. A typical menu consisted of vegetable soup and bread one day; thick beef soup or stew with vegetables another day; cocoa or milk and cheese, peanut butter, or jam sandwiches, a third day.

In some places where lunches were not served in the schools, but were provided for in the regular food orders, each family having school children received extra staples for school lunches including peanut butter, raisins, prunes and tomatoes. Red Cross nutritionists instructed mothers in the preparation of lunches

County health officers and private physicians commended the adequacy of rations procured on orders issued by Red Cross chapters, which were filled at local stores. Besides the usual staples, such as corn meal, flour, lard, meat, beans and potatoes, such items as canned salmon, cabbage, tomatoes, vegetables and milk were provided, each order being adapted to the special needs of the family for whom it was issued. Where pellagra threatened, eggs, yeast and other preventives were

> More than 500 carloads of foodstuffs were contributed. These were given free haulage by railroads. Farmers of more fortunate sections embraced the opportunity to help their pastoral cousins of the affected area. Shipments eggs, beans, vegetables, onions, rice, corn and mixed vegetables were included.

As the result of co-ordinated Red sult of drought has been uncovered.

Large quantities of new and used clothing were distributed. In direct consequence many school children resumed their studies who had been kept at home for lack of sufficient protection from the elements. In some instances, rural schools that had been closed were enabled to reopen as a result of

He had no trouble getting a job as a laborer in the plant of the New Haven Wire company. He was paid $4.65 a week for twelve hours daily of backbreaking work.

Such a life didn't fit in with the plans young Farrell had made when in certain major farming regions more he was attending grammar school in New Haven, Conn. With his sturdy body and good health he was able to hold his end up with the grown men with whom he worked. He made such progress in his work that he became a mechanic when he was seventeen years old. Here again he showed an ability to work long. hard and intelligently. By the time he was nineteen he was a foreman over 300 workmen and earning $30 a month.

As a boy he had made several voyages with his father. These trips aroused his interest in geography. He poured over the maps of far away places when he studied at night after a hard day in the mills. He would memorize his self-taught lessons and then draw the maps from memory, filling in the important cities, rivers mountains and seaports.

In this way he cultivated a memory that was to serve him in good stead later in life. His associates say that he never forgets an important matter that he once files away in his head. Early in his career he was able to call off fact and figures without having to refer to books or statements.

The boy found it hard at first to cultivate a good memory, but he kept doggedly at his plan to remember the facts he thought he might need. Soon the task came easy to him

He had been quite a trader when he was a little fellow. He swapped marbles, jack-knives and other treasures of boyhood with his playmates. He seldom got the worst of a deal. He had the instincts of a good salesman before he entered the steel business as a lad of fifteen.

After nine years' work in New Haven he went to Pittsburgh. He had made up his mind to learn all there was to know about the steel business. He was convinced that Pittsburgh, the seat of the industry, held an oppor-

He was soon assistant superintendent of a mill after having worked in the white hot heat of the blast furnaces and toiled, bare to the waist, in the rolling plant. He was promoted to the superintendency and later was made general manager. He was learning how to make steel and not forgetting a thing he had

His company finally put him in charge of sales for the United States with headquarters in New York, He was so successful that the steel corporation hired him and sent him to Europe in charge of sales. Here his knowledge of foreign conditions, that had its beginning in his study of foreign geography as a boy, helped him

Facing National Erosion Problem

Rapid Depletion of Fertility of Farm Soils Seen as Big Evil.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)-WNU Service.

The most serious problem which confronts American farmers today is the rapid depletion of the fertility of their soils by man-induced erosion, which has come to be recognized as an evil of such national proportions that the government, through the United States Department of Agriculture, has within the past two years established seven regional experiment stations to work out practical methods of erosion control, members of the Asso- Children. clation of American Geographers were told at their annual meeting in Worcester, Mass., by H. #### Profits in Wisconsin Farmers are losing millions of dollars yearly through small crops of fruit and inferior fruit, caused by lack of spraying and other attention, says the Farm Journal.

In 16 counties of Wisconsin, the problem is being solved by spraying rings of eight or ten farms, with 800 to 1,500 trees. Each ring purchases a sprayer producing at least 300 pounds pressure, a tank, hose, etc. A reliable operator is hired and trained, and trees are given six sprays each season. In addition, the trees are properly pruned and commercial

Care in Feeding Silage Required for Results

Sliage is an extra good feed if it is not abused. Two kinds of abuse are to feed too much and to let the surplus accumulate in the mangers. It should not be forgotten that silage is largely water. If the cows are encouraged to cram themselves with silage at the expense of grain and hay they will not be getting enough nutrients to sustain their bodies and a profitable flow of milk. Preferably the grain should be fed on top of the sllage so that it will be eaten first and then not more silage than will be eaten readily. If there is a surplus it should be cleaned out of the mangers daily.

Care for Harness

Every spring before farm work begins, the harness should be taken spart, loose dirt cleaned off, washed thoroughly with warm water and mild soap, hung up until the surface is barely dry, thoroughly oiled with good harness oil, allowed to dry in a warm room, and all excess oil wiped off. It should then be gone over carefully and all rips and breaks carefully sewed with good waxed thread.

Before healing this man, he submitted his case to their judgment. They were free on the Sabbath to hold a feast where their selfish pride and vanity could be displayed, but they were horrified that a fellow man should be healed on that day.

3. Jesus healing the man (v. 4). While they were in a state of embarrassment, Jesus healed the man.

4. Jesus rebuked them (vv. 5, 6). He laid bare their hypocrisy by showing them that their willingness to show mercy to a beast on the Sabbath should induce them to regard as not sinful the relieving of a human being of distress on the Sabbath.

III. Jesus Rebukes Selfish Ambition (vv. 7-11).

1. The occasion (v. 7). He observed that the guests while taking their places at the table chose the best seats for themselves. This is still true of men and women in railway cars. hotels, street cars, etc.

2. Instruction given (vv. 8-11). When bidden to a feast take the lowest place lest you suffer the humiliation of being asked to take a lower seat. This is more than a lesson on courtesy or table manners. It was a severe re buke of that selfishness which fills the human heart, causing it to seek to be ministered unto instead of ministering to others. The declaration of Jesus, "Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted," sets forth the fundamental principle of the philosophy governing the moral world. The one who has experienced the redeeming love of Christ will gladly take the place assigned him. IV. The True Motive In Deeds of Charity (vv. 12-14). The Jews, like many of the rich today, made social dinners occasions for display. They invited only those whose wealth would enable them to recompense them by inviting them in return. Jesus took note of the selfishness thus displayed and set forth to them the right principle governing hospitable deeds. Such benevolent acts should be extended to the poor and afflicted. All charitable deeds should be done with unselfish motives. They should proceed from the one aim; namely, to confer benefits without expectation of a recompense. Jesus assured them, however, that recompense would be made at the resurrection of the just. V. The Child Example (Luke 18:15-

Spiritual contact with Christ sought for children (v. 15). Presumably this was done by the parents. The time of all times to effect contact with Christ is in childhood. 2. Rebuked by the disciples (v. 15). Seeing Christ's time so completely taken up with adults, the disciples thought that bringing the children would be an instrusion.

8. Welcomed by Jesus (v.16). Mark says, "Jesus was displeased with the conduct of the disciples"; that is, was indignant. Christ called the children unto himself, thus showing their relative value.

4. What he said about children (vv. 16, 17). "Of such is the kingdom of God." Childhood is the character which proves citizenship in the kingdom. Two traits are pre-eminent in childhood: (a) Absence of self-consciousness; (b) Natural trust. The way to realize this character is through surrender to Jesus Christ.

Teachings of the Bible

The foundations of our society and our government rest so much on the teachings of the Bible that it would be difficult to support them if faith in these teachings should cease to be practically universal in our country .-Calvin Coolidge.

Wakeful restless CHILD needs Castoria

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Other times it's constipation. Or diarrhea-a condition that should always be checked promptly. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother continues it in more liberal doses as a child grows up.

Dishes That Will Not Break

After experimenting for several years, a British inventor has succeeded in treating cotton in such a way that it can be made into serviceable dinner plates and other light articles usually made of some material that is easily broken, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Aside from being unbreakable when dropped, the cotton dishes and other articles also are light in weight as compared with the materials used ordinarily for such purposes.

Astonishing

Freddie-Julia, dear, I have something to say that may surprise you.

I think-Julia-My! That is a surprise.

Readily obtained at any drugstore, the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature and the name Castoria on the wrapper like this:

The Nation's Fuels During 1929 the energy supplied by water power was only one-thirteenth of that furnished by mineral fuels in the United States, according to a special study by F. G. Tryon, of the United States bureau of mines. Anthracite coal and natural gas each supplied more energy than did water power, while oil furnished 31/2 times, and bituminous coal 71/2 times as much. If the figures for the work done by windmills, animals and the energy contained in firewood and miscellaneous fuels are taken into consideration, the proportion of water power in the total of the nation's energy supply is less than ?
