

Ad Man Killed In Accident Near Here

William J. Merrill Jr., 34, of Houston, was instantly killed and his wife and nine-year-old nephew were injured, when the Stutz sport coupe they were riding in struck the side of a concrete bridge near Longfellow late Tuesday afternoon.

The couple, together with Billy Beckwith, a young nephew from Birmingham, Ala., were enroute to California. The car, which was traveling fast, after striking the guard railings of the bridge, evidently turned over several times. It was found on the opposite side of the bridge in the ditch and in an upright position. Merrill's body was thrown about 40 feet from the car. Every bone in his body was broken and death was instantaneous. The car was brought to town by G. W. Carpenter, of the Ferguson Motor Co., garage and is a total wreck the tires being the only thing on it that is good.

Mrs. Merrill and her young nephew were brought into town by H. A. Dobbins, a salesman of Del Rio, who came along soon after the accident. She was carried to the Kerr hotel, where her injuries, which consisted of scratches and bruises, were treated by Dr. Robertson. She also had several teeth to be knocked out. The nephew was lacerated on the head and bruised.

The body of Merrill, who was a Mason, was taken in charge by the local Masonic lodge, who got in touch with relatives and friends both in St. Paul and Houston. The remains, accompanied by the widow and nephew, were taken to San Antonio Wednesday. In all probability the body will be cremated or taken to St. Paul, Minnesota, for interment as his parents and a sister resides in that city.

Merrill, who was in the outdoor advertising business was on his way to Los Angeles on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Mrs. Fannie Merritt Trimble

Funeral services were held last Wednesday in Del Rio for Mrs. Fannie Merritt Trimble, 70. Mrs. Trimble died last Tuesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Oliver Prentiss, who resides on a ranch near Dryden. Her death was brought about as the result of injuries received when she broke one of her hips in a fall about five months ago.

Mrs. Trimble was born in Jourdanton Junction, Atascosa County, January 18, 1861. Survivors are: four daughters, Mrs. Oliver Prentiss and Mrs. G. L. McConaughey, Dryden; Mrs. W. F. Schmidt, Mission, and Miss Frances Trimble, San Antonio; one son, W. W. Trimble, Phoenix, Ariz.; a half sister, Mrs. M. P. Gates, El Paso; 14 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Glass of Sterling City came in last Friday to visit their daughter, Miss Melburn.

"KIBITZER COMING TO CHAUTAUQUA"

Stock Market Comedy to Be Performed by Sprague Players

A rollicking farce, comedy, fresh from the bright lights of the Broadway Theatrical district, is the opening night attraction on this year's Chautauqua. It will be welcome news to Chautauqua fans who know that there are to be two plays on this year's program, and one of them coming on the first night, to be given by the well known Sprague players. "Kibitzer" is Jewish for "butinsky," and during the three acts of the play the stock market is indiscriminately mixed up with the problem of love's young dream and are thoroughly butted into, upset, and trampled over by the leading character of the play. The first act of the story is laid in the cigar store of "Kibitzer," who is a Jewish would-be business man. He compels his daughter to wait on the customers while he gives advice on horse racing, stock market, and other subjects. Rosy, the daughter, falls in love with a young soda fountain attendant, while her father wishes her to marry the son of a wealthy society lady who has made money in the stock market. Rosy's lover loses his money on a horse race at the advice of Kibitzer, and Rosy almost decides to marry the rich young man rather than live a life of poverty.

In the second act "Kibitzer" has a stroke of luck and wins a big block of steel stock, and the rest of the play is devoted to showing how the plot works out with every thing lovely and "everybody living happily ever after" at the finish.

It is rollicking, happy so lucky, thoroughly modern in tone, and thoroughly clean and fine in character. It has been called the most up to the minute play of the American stage since it deals with the problems of the last twelve months as well as the eternal problem of romance.

The Sprague cast is up to the usual Sprague standard and since road shows have almost been eliminated throughout the country except on Chautauqua it will be doubtless the finest opportunity of the year to see a thoroughly amusing New York hit put on in a thoroughly entertaining way.

FIRST DAY'S PROGRAM, MAY 11

Old-Time Ball Players Will Play

Dr. J. A. Ludlam, pastor of the Marathon Methodist Community Church and Rev. E. M. Stradley, pastor of the First Methodist Church, who are old baseball players, were talking recently of the many old time stars of the game who were members of their churches, and Dr. Ludlam threw out the challenge to the Sanderson pastor for a game, which was immediately accepted by the Sanderson preacher.

This game will be played at 4 p. m., Saturday May 16th, and should draw quite a crowd for it will see many old time stars lined up.

Marathon boasts of Dixon, Mathews, Richey, Todd, and Ludlam, and these will be seen in action in this game.

Sanderson has on the Sanderson church team such stars as Chick Wilson, the old Luffkin slugger; Latimar, the old Sherman, Texas, portsider; W. D. O'Bryant, the old peppery backstop; L. A. Lowe, the old catcher, and Stradley, the old Appalatchin and Southern Association slow hop ball pitcher.

Sanderson Winners Interscholastic Meet

The annual interscholastic meet was held in Alpine Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week with over 400 students from the different schools in the district competing in the various events.

The first day's events were given over to the preliminaries in tennis. Due to hard luck and to the fact that our students were not accustomed to the outdoor courts the entrants from here were defeated.

On Friday the debates were held. In the boy's debate Sanderson was represented by D. C. Thrift and H. D. Johnson. These two students won and had ten teams in the contest to debate against. In the girl's debate Opal Shelton and Bess McAdams won second place. They were in the finals and also had ten teams to contest. Hazel Powell received a gold medal for first place in the ward school essay. In the junior boys' declamation, Melvin Pollard represented Sanderson and was only eliminated in the finals.

All winners in the meet will go to Austin next month where they will compete for state honors.

Terrell County Ranchmen Busy

The shearing of sheep and marking of lambs is getting under full headway in Terrell county now. Ranchmen report a good lamb crop, ranging all the way from 75 to 90 per cent. The wool clip is also reported to be turning out remarkably well.

Feed is fine everywhere. A number of ranches in the north section of the county is covered with a carpet of "filaree" which is a very fine feed, while ranches in the south section of the county are covered with weeds and grasses. In the Kerr pasture this side of Dryden, on both sides of the highway there is a luxuriant growth of wild oats over a foot high. This is the first time within the knowledge of old timers here that wild oats has ever grown in that place and it is a mystery to some how it got started. Several of our ranchmen have given it as their opinion that there are many different kinds of grass and weed seeds that lie in the ground for a number of years until the proper season is in the ground and then take root and grow. Judge Henshaw reports that several different kinds of weed and grass are growing on his ranch now that have never been known to grow there before this season.

All the local shearing gangs have gone out and the rounding up, shearing, and marking will give employment for awhile to a large number of idle men in this vicinity who are in need of work at this particular time.

USED TO SUFFER EACH MONTH

"I used to have severe headaches each month," writes Mrs. Henry Heape, of 245 Lincoln St., Savannah, Ga. "I suffered a great deal. The pain in my head seemed to run down the back of my neck. I felt like I was drawing back. I would get very nauseated and have chills. I would have to go to bed. My mother and my mother-in-law both had taken Cardui, and I knew it was good. I bought a bottle, and after I began taking it I felt stronger. I kept on taking Cardui, for I found that by doing so I could avoid the headaches. I have taken about eight bottles of Cardui."

One-Shirt Order Scored

Poor law functions in London have been harshly administered since the London county council took charge of administering it, was the accusation of Cecil Manning, Socialist member, at a recent council meeting. In siding with Manning, T. J. Blacketter said that at a meeting of one of the districts an aged applicant was granted one shirt, and the committee had the audacity to tell him he must sit in bed while it was washed.

Musical Screech Owl
A screech owl that seems to enjoy music is reported by Thomas B. Smith in Detroit. "Every evening when we turn on the radio," Smith said, "the owl comes and perches on the railing of the front porch and appears to be listening. As soon as we turn the radio off he leaves. Opening the window doesn't bother him, but if we open the door he flies away."

COATED TONGUE, BAD TASTE

"I suffered from heartburn and indigestion. My tongue would get coated, and I would have a bad taste in my mouth. I had gas pains, and if I belched it would be right bitter. I know that Black-Draught helped me." —Harbert Bailey, Gainesboro, Georgia. Insist on Theodor's

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Now, my dears," said Grandfather Frog, "I am very grateful to you all for hopping along and telling me that you wish me these kind wishes of happy returns of the day in honor of my birthday.

"But I have just been thinking," "Oh, Grandfather, Grandfather, goog-a-room, goog-a-room," said the little frogs. "How wonderful."

"Yes," said Grandfather Frog. "I have been thinking ever since I spent the early part of the morning looking and searching for bugs and other delicacies for the party."

The frogs were pleased to hear that there was going to be a party. That pleased them immensely, and they knew that their grandfather would have found a lot of goodies for it.

"But," he continued, "when I was thinking I said to myself, that it was really very foolish to say many happy returns of the day, even though it is a pleasant thing to say.

"You see," he went on, rolling his great bulging eyes and sticking out his chest, "it is impossible to say such a thing."

"We all said it," said the little frogs, "so it is not impossible to say at all."

"That was not exactly what I meant,"

Cook for 2 minutes and add the mint leaves or the finely cut celery and the other seasonings. Push this mixture to one side of the skillet and in the empty part melt the remaining butter and stir in the bread crumbs. When they have absorbed the butter, mix all the ingredients together. When using watercress allow the liquid which cooks out to evaporate before the buttered bread crumbs are added.

said Grandfather Frog. He panted for breath. He was so excited at having the little frogs listen to him so attentively and pay him all this attention.

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, goog-a-room," he said. "Of course you could say it without choking, I suppose.

"Because, of course, you did say it. "But, at the same time, it is a senseless thing to say."

"Goog-a-Room," He Said.

"Won't you tell us why, dear Grandpa?" all the little frogs asked.

"I am so pleased you all came to me, and I appreciate it very, very much.

"But how can this day ever come back? There will be other days. Yes, other ones.

"They will be different. They may be rainy days, or sunny days, or days when the sun and rain are both here and there is a rainbow.

"No, I cannot have many happy returns of this day, because this day will never return.

"It makes me a little sad to think of it."

Grandfather's eyes filled with water. One tear trickled down and he swallowed it. And then he swallowed quite a few.

"I am drinking tear water," he said, "and I don't like it much."

"Ah, don't cry, Grandfather, it is true this day won't come back, but when we and others wish many happy returns of the day, we wish that happy days such as this will return."

"Oh," said Grandfather Frog, "that's a lovely thought. That makes me very happy.

"And now come back in one hour for the party. I shall be all ready for it then."

It was a fine birthday party. The bugs were simply delicious.

Beefsteak Pie Liked as Dinner Dish

Round or chuck beefsteak may be used in making a beef pie—in fact, any of the less tender lean cuts will make a very good meat pie. The meat is cooked with the onion, parsley, tomatoes and seasonings, until it is tender. Then it is combined with canned string beans, covered with a crust of pastry or mashed potatoes or biscuit dough, and baked in a moderate oven until the top is a golden brown. Left-over cooked beef may be used in a similar way without simmering to make it tender. Simply combine it with the vegetables, gravy and seasonings, cover with a crust, and bake. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the following ingredients for a beefsteak pie:

- 2 lbs. fat
- 1 lb. chopped parsley
- 1 medium-sized onion, sliced
- 1 pound round or chuck beefsteak cut in inch cubes
- 3 lbs. flour
- 1 pint canned tomatoes
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 1/2 teps. salt
- 1 1/2 cups canned string beans
- Few drops tabasco

Melt the fat in a heavy skillet, add the onion and parsley and cook for a few minutes. Roll the meat in the flour, add to the fat and the onion, and brown the meat well on all sides. Pour the tomatoes over the meat, add the water, cover and simmer until the meat is tender. Season and stir in the string beans, adding some of the bean liquid if the stew is too thick. Pour the stew into a baking dish, cover with a pastry crust or mashed potatoes and bake in a moderate oven until the top is golden brown. Serve at once.

Foods that Will Interest the Family

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"Our spectacular opportunities for courage may be few or none at all. Our commonplace opportunities for courage start when we wake and last until we go to sleep. The courage of the commonplace is greater than the courage of the crisis."

For the cake par excellence, the torte is one of the daintiest. Our German cooks excel in this kind of a cake combination. They are rich with nuts, chopped or rolled fine, plenty of eggs and crumbs, with spices. The baking is another important point, as slow, careful baking is necessary for a light and tender torte.

Schaum Torte.—Beat three egg whites until stiff but not dry, add one cupful of sugar very lightly and gradually, not to lose the lightness, a pinch of salt, one-half teaspoonful of vinegar and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in two deep layer tins for one hour. Put together with whipped cream, or add nuts and chopped pineapple with the cream.

Walnut Torte.—Beat the yolks of six eggs with one cupful of sugar, add one-fourth pound of walnuts and six lady fingers grated, two tablespoonfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Add the juice and rind of a lemon and when all the ingredients are well mixed, add the stiffly beaten egg whites to which a pinch of salt has been added. Bake in layers in a moderate oven and use the following:

Filling.—To one beaten egg yolk add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Cook, stirring constantly until the mixture coats the spoon, add one and one-half cupfuls of grated walnut meats with a flavoring of almond and vanilla. Use between the layers and ice the top of the torte.

Date Torte.—Rub sixteen dates to a smooth paste with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Beat two whole eggs, add seven yolks, add one and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar, beat well, add the dates, three tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate and one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, and a cupful of cracker crumbs. Stir well and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of seven eggs. Bake in a large spring form forty minutes.

Peach Omelet.—This is not a soup but is equally as good. Press three ripe peaches after peeling and stoning, through a sieve, add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and the well-beaten yolks of three eggs; fold in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs and pour into a well buttered baking dish. Bake 15 or 20 minutes and serve at once.

Cherry and Quince Soup.—Stem and stone a pint of deep red cherries; place them in a saucepan with the juice and grated rind of a lemon, half a cupful of quince juice and a pint of water; cook until the cherries are tender, then thicken with cornstarch and cook until the starch is well cooked. Serve hot.

Attractive Headgear for Weddings

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lovelier than ever are the hats which crown with glory the heads of bridesmaids who have been chosen to add their picturesque presence to the spring wedding pageant.

Due to the favor expressed for very sheer and lacy straws and other media, there is a fragile beauty about this season's models which is captivating. Tuned to the exquisite delicacy of the materials of which these enchanting confections are made, are their fairy-like colorings—opaline colors—to speak of these delectable tones and tints correctly.

All that fashion's followers have been hearing of late in regard to a return of romance in millinery, a revival of flowers, ribbons and feminine graces, together with the picturesque lilt and tilt of brims because of their lately acquired bandeaux, is confirmed in the sketches herewith.

The immensity of some of the new brims is a matter of comment this season. One of the very wide brims is seen at its loveliest in the first sketch in this group. The original of this model is of transparent crin in a pale rose opaline tint. To carry out the scheme successfully, each bridesmaid in the party will wear a duplicate of this lovely creation in a different color.

Centered at the top, in the picture is a charming little shape which faces its wee upturned brim with tiny flowers, with a full-blown rose posed to one side.

The lacy straw capeline in the upper corner to the right is in natural color, the idea being to trim each hat with ribbon in a color tuned to the frock with which it is worn.

Trimming is conspicuous by its absence when it comes to the exquisite hair shape shown in the center of the picture to the left, the emphasis being placed on the deftly draped brim and the fact that the color of each hat for the coterie of the bride's attendants is different, achieving a symphony of opalescent tones and tints.

A perfectly charming version of the smaller-brimmed hat is centered to the right in the illustration the arrangement of the flowers and the ribbon bespeaking true artistry of the designer.

The little Watteau hat down in the lower left hand corner is a millinery gem. It is lace and straw, the flowers are every color and the ribbon is velvet, for velvet ribbon is a trimming featured throughout the mode this season.

A deftly draped flower-trimmed hat of very sheer hair braid is shown in the opposite right-hand corner.

The group concludes with a huge and extremely effective hat of starched white lace. If preferred, capelines of lacy straw may be draped after the lines of this lace model.

Owing to its vogue throughout the realm of fashion, lace is playing a very conspicuous role in bridal array. It is not alone sponsored for frocks, but its favor is reflected in the lovely hats which milliners are creating for bridesmaids this spring. If the hat be not all of lace, then it is apt to have a lace edge, while many large hair capelines are elaborated with insets of either throat lace or straw lace.

Carving Roast Stuffed Lamb Shoulder

Shoulder of Lamb, Boned and Stuffed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Many people think the meat of a shoulder of lamb is just as tender and quite as delicious in flavor as the leg or any other part. The shoulder is not so easy to carve as the leg, owing to the irregular shape and central position of the shoulder blade. This difficulty about carving is easily met, says the bureau of home economics. Select a shoulder of lamb weighing from 3 to 4 pounds. Have the butcher remove all the bones, as well as the fell, or outer papery covering of skin. The bones may be saved for making soup. The shoulder may then be stuffed, and either left flat or rolled, and the pocket holds twice as much stuffing. Either of these completely boned stuffed shoulders can be carved straight through in attractive slices of part meat and part stuffing.

Wipe the meat with a damp cloth. Sprinkle the inside of the pocket with salt and pepper, pile the hot stuffing in lightly, and sew the edges together. Rub salt, pepper, and flour over the outside. If the shoulder has only a very thin fat covering, lay several strips of bacon over the top. Place the roast on a rack in an open pan without water. Sear for 30 minutes in a hot oven (480 degrees Fahrenheit). If bacon is laid over the roast, shorten the time of searing so as to avoid overbrowning. Reduce the temperature of the oven to 300 degrees Fahrenheit, and cook the meat at this temperature until tender. From 2 1/2 to 3 hours will be required to cook a medium sized stuffed shoulder at these oven temperatures. Serve hot with brown gravy.

Mint or Watercress Stuffing.

- 2 cups fine, dry bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup fresh mint leaves, or 1 1/2 cups finely cut watercress
- 1/2 lbs. butter
- 3 lbs. chopped celery
- 1/4 cup onion
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. pepper

Melt one-half of the butter in a skillet and add the onion and celery.

Sauerkraut Valuable Addition to Diet

Sauerkraut has been found to make a valuable contribution to the diet. In fact, sauerkraut juice is used as an appetizer and featured on the menus of many well-known restaurants. As with cabbage in other forms, the old-fashioned way of cooking sauerkraut was to boil it for several hours. Unfortunately this method of preparation destroys the very things for which the sauerkraut is valuable. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests the following recipe for preparing savory sauerkraut to eat with ham, corned beef or other meats.

- 1/2 cup butter or other fat
- 1/4 tsp. celery or caraway seed
- 1 quart sauerkraut

Heat the fat in a skillet until golden brown, and add the sauerkraut and the seasoning. Mix well, using a fork to separate the kraut. Cover and cook for five minutes. Serve hot.

Trouser Suits Fine for Youngsters

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Every mother is relieved as the time comes when her child learns to dress and undress himself and go to the toilet alone. She is then much more free for other household duties. Training in self-dressing may be started between two and three years old and a boy will soon take great pride in being independent.

Good clothing design is the first requisite in encouraging self-help in dressing. Small trousers should be made with as few fastenings as possible, and these should be placed within easy reach of a two-year-old's little fingers. The child learns by repetition if the buttons and buttonholes are always in the same place at first, so it is best to use only one pattern until the little one has completely mastered its fastenings. Vary the material, color, and minor style details as much as you please.

A very good type for the first trousers of a two-to-three-year-old is here illustrated. It was designed by a clothing specialist in the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture, after studying the needs of a group of nursery school children. These trousers can be buttoned on to a blouse in the Oliver Twist style. The back and front button independently, and it is not necessary to unbutton the front in order to drop the back. Sometimes bound side openings are used. Another plan is to make a two-button drop front which fastens midway between the center seam and the side placket. This is finished with simulated welt plackets and replaces the fly. Two buttons instead of three are used on the back drop, so the child can reach them more easily. These little trousers are straight and short, well above the bend of the knee, and they have plenty of room in the seat and sufficient length in the crotch.

Elbow sleeves and flat trimmings, stitched to look like a collar and cuffs are recommended on the blouse. These insure easy laundering and greater comfort when the child is playing actively than pieces that move or wrinkle.

Crocheted loops are used for closing. They are made by first crocheting the edge with a single stitch, forming loops opposite the buttons with a chain stitch and finally strengthening the whole edge with a "double cro-

Berliners Like Weissbier

Munich may lead the beer-producing cities in Germany, but Berlin follows a close second. It has a production of one-tenth of the total beer output of the country, as compared with Munich's one-seventh. Berlin's specialty is the so-called "weissbier," a light beer with low alcoholic percentage. The annual output of "weissbier" totals 5,284,000 gallons—a quantity which requires 2,000 railway cars to transport.

THE GREAT OPEN SPACES

By FANNIE HURST

(© 1931, McClure Newspaper Syndicate, (WNU Service.)

THE grayish little town of Della lay scattered off both sides of a railroad track. If you glimpsed it at all, you caught sight of it from the window of your coach because not more than two or three trains a day stopped at the small thatched station of Della, with its small waiting room of pot-bellied stove, tin water cooler and composite ticket-baggage-and-telegraph agent.

Two thousand souls resided in Della. One the south side of the tracks, which was probably the least desirable from the realty value point of view, Mr. and Mrs. Isalah Moore conducted a grocery store. It was an old-fashioned green grocer's establishment with a porch roof, reaching like an awning over the wooden sidewalk, supported by wooden props for pillars. There, were three inverted barrels standing outside the Moore grocery store for loiterers; probably the only three such barrels in the state.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore lived in a two-story frame house one block removed from this place of business. It was a typical frame house; six box-like rooms, no modern improvements, a truck garden in the side yard, a picket fence closing it in from the wooden sidewalk, a pump with a tin dipper dangling, a woodshed which contained a dilapidated flivver, used chiefly for grocery deliveries, a dog house, a summer kitchen and some beautiful old plane and maple trees.

Mrs. Moore, who divided her days in the grocery store with her husband, did not have a great deal of time for housekeeping; but just the same her spring crocuses and summer roses and late dahlias could vie with the best in Della. So could the primness of the interior of her little frame house. Spick, span, rigid, filled with the cold smell of matted, horse-hair covered furniture and unaired front parlor.

But the Moores had a dream. It had begun back in the days when young Isalah Moore, evenings off from his father's grocery store, had wooed the pretty Abby Ross in the stiff front parlor of her father's house in Della. Even back there, Isalah was full of the dream of the "wide-open spaces." Every pre-nuptial plan of theirs, even that which had to do with the immediate reality of Moore's grocery store and taking up residence in the little frame house in which they were to live for a subsequent thirty years, was tinged with that sunny vision of the remote "wide-open spaces."

Of course, the usual happened. Quick tides of life caught up Abby and Isalah and carried them along to a destiny not planned by themselves. A year after their marriage, the father of Isalah died, leaving him the somewhat doubtful legacy of the debt-encumbered grocery store. The next year, Abby's twins were born, to die five years later in a local epidemic. It is probable that, more than anything that had ever happened to them, this unseemly catastrophe frustrated the ambition of Abby and Isalah, or at least inhibited it for the period of the next five or ten years.

The Moores found themselves clutched by circumstance, restrained by routine, saddened by calamity. And so during the years that this erstwhile vision of the "wide-open spaces" lay fallow, thirty springtimes swung around into the little garden surrounding the frame house. Thirty winters, many of them bitter and cold, with thick layers of snow on the flat roofs and the runty cornfields of Della; thirty autumns that melted into gold and russet the fine old oak trees and plane trees and maple trees that lined the leisurely streets of Della; thirty summers that warmed Abby's roses in life and kept the three barrels in front of Moore's grocery store crowded with loiterers.

Intense seasons, all of them, filled with too much rain or too much snow or too much heat or too much wind. The hard, chapped face of Isalah Moore, when he came out of the grocery store to survey a snow scape, or to watch the blinding heat dance across the cornfields of the outlying country, automatically, even after thirty years, turned to the west. There was something almost fanatical in his craving for the milder, sun-kissed "open spaces." He yearned for the relaxation of kinder climates, for the grandeur of mountains and the brilliant and cozy security of the far-famed bungalows of the western coast.

So did Abby. When sleet beat against the little wooden box of the house they called home, when icy winds roared in through the windows or spring rains tapped dainty fingers along the sills, Abby was given to taking out the great box of travel folders, real estate prospectuses and maps that Isalah kept tucked on a closet shelf, to pore over them.

There was one picture of a bungalow colony on a sunny coast. A row of adorable-looking Spanish houses, drenched in sunlight, backed in mountain tops and surrounded by gardens that took your breath away.

As they grew older, and a little more tired, this old dream of the Moores began to resuscitate itself. They sat together on wintry evenings and planned their sunny, flowery future. Old man Isalah climbed into his topcoat, wound his ears in a large woolen muffler and talked of perpetual summers. The townspeople, the friends, the loiterers and the cronies began to shake sad heads over these two obsessed old people.

"Get out or shut up," they said, among themselves concerning them. To their own surprise, as much as anyone else's, the Moores did the former. The opportunity presented itself to sell out the grocery store to the first chain store venture that had come to Della. All in a fortnight it happened, the opportunity, the sale, the departure.

Two bewildered and happy old people, with cash in their pockets, stepped off a train into the riotous brilliance of a southern climate.

"They've been too active all their lives. They'll get tired of loafing," had been the prediction of their cronies.

The Moores knew better. The dream within their grasp was too incredibly good to be true. For the first months of setting up their household goods in one of the pale-pink Spanish bungalows, surrounded by color and backed by mountain, the unreality of their happiness had been the only flaw in the ointment. It was impossible to wake up and quite believe yourself lying out in this cradle of botanical beauty. The old pair pottered about two-thirds of the day in their brilliant garden, walked about the wide streets of their little community, or sat gazing upon the rhinoceros-like hide of the towering mountain so easily within their view. The sun beat ceaselessly; winds were warm and drowsy; rain was so rare that you reckoned with it not at all.

At the end of the first year a consciousness of this for the first time took concrete form in the mind of Abby. To her amazement she found herself hankering for the sweetness of the springlike tapping of rain on the window sills, or the solemn gray respite of a steady downpour that used to wash the landscape in mist. Abby found herself yearning for a day cold enough to wind a good old woolen scarf about her neck and scurry along the road to keep the blood warm and going. And, to her surprise, when she explained this fact to Isalah, he admitted to a longing that was older than Abby's for some of the sterner stuff of those sterner days back home.

The Moores were sunshine-glutted; satiated with brightness; their eyes ached with the torrents of cerulean light that poured over their days. There came the time when they contemplated the brilliant fury of each noonday with a certain antagonism to the relentless consistency of the sun. The geometry of the new wide streets, the pink imitation Spanish bungalows, the narrow shade of the eucalyptus trees and the treeless flank of mountain began to pall on eyes accustomed to a fluctuating climate and geography of their own state.

A new dream began to form in the Moores. After all, they were too young to withdraw from life in this tedious fashion. The idea of going back into the grocery business was pretty firm in Isalah's old mind. The site they finally chose as the scene of the new enterprise was a town called Della.

Austrian Invented Postcard?

One of the facts of life not often wondered about is the penny postcard, says a dispatch from Vienna. People imagine the postcard as something more or less traditional—as traditional, say, as a letter. But such is not the case. The postcard was invented only in the middle of the Nineteenth century, and it took many years before governments permitted its use with cheap postage. The inventor, Emanuel Hermann, was an official of the Vienna post office; he died in 1902. He turned the Austrian civil service upside down by his demand for permission to send printed or written communications without an envelope. His postcard was introduced and spread immediately all over the world.—Detroit News.

Handicapped

Struggling with a three-year-old appetite, she had a mouthful of potato and was reaching for her glass of milk. Some one asked her a question and her answer was: "Uh huh."

"Is that the way to answer?" her mother prompted.

"Why," she replied, gulping down her mouthful, "I didn't have anything to talk with!"

FASHION HINTS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Do not let flannel or other woolen materials freeze after they are washed, because freezing causes shrinkage.

Velvet and lapin make a truly delectable combination of materials when used for a negligee that is the epitome of luxury. It is made of pale pink velvet cut on the lines of a coat and as a finish inside the edges of neck, fronts and sleeves there is a narrow band of beige lapin.

Pastel linens trimmed with Irish crochet bands are made with tiny cap sleeves and a skirt which depends on deep pleats set on a yoke at the hip-line.

A belted coat of white kidskin worn over a black wool dress and complemented by a black felt hat, with its touch of white fur, constituted one of the smartest costumes shown this season.

Minor Blemishes on Onions Hurts Value

Sun Scalds Become Dry, Slippery and Bleached.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Onions frequently acquire unsightly blemishes and discolorations—for the most part damaging only the outward appearance—when exposed to certain chemicals, sunlight, or some fungi. The United States Department of Agriculture says in Circular 135-C, Blemishes and Discolorations of Market Onions.

"Scorched spot" and "bag print" frequently appear on colored onions that have been in damp storage for some time. The names are descriptive of the appearance of these blemishes. The chemicals in some bags print the weave of the bag on the outer surface of the onion, when the bag is moist. Ammonia fumes escaping in a storage plant or emanating from manure piled over ground-stored onions as protection from freezing often discolor onions. Ammonia turns yellow onions brown, red onions deep greenish-dark or metallic black, and white onions greenish-yellow.

Sometimes the sun scalds exposed onions at harvest. The scalded tissue first becomes slippery, then dry and shrunken, and finally bleached. Sun scald frequently opens the way for destructive bacteria and fungi. Growing bulbs may develop sunburn or "greening" on exposed parts, a blemish which is self-descriptive. The greened portions are usually bitter and unpalatable, but not particularly subject to decay.

A fungus growing on Bermuda onions in California produces a dark "soil stain" in the outer scales on the bottom of the onion. It damages the onion only in appearance.

Copies of Circular 135-C may be obtained by writing to the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Climbing Peach Borer Is New Orchard Problem

Orchardists' difficulties in controlling peach-tree borers have been further complicated in recent years by the increasing numbers of the lesser peach-tree borer, a species which has a habit of working in the lower and larger branches of the tree. There it is out of reach of the deadly fumes from the paradichlorobenzene crystals customarily applied on the ground around the tree to control peach borers.

Entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture now recommend the use of the same insecticide but in a different form. They found that paradichlorobenzene crystals could be dissolved in crude cottonseed oil, paraffin, grafting wax, or any highly penetrative solvent and "painted" on the bark around the borer burrows. The insecticide applied in that manner kills a large percentage of the borers.

While developing this control measure the investigators also learned how to "snare" many other borers of fruit and ornamental trees in their "dens," for the same process is likely to prove generally effective against pests of like habit.

Control Is Important in an Apple Plantation

The development of an apple plantation and the bringing to maturity of a good crop of high grade fruit depends not only upon correct cultural practices, good nursery stock, fertile soil, and favorable climatic conditions, but also upon the attention given to the control of diseases of various kinds and insects injurious, observes Dr. I. T. Scott, plant pathologist of the plant division of the Missouri state board of agriculture.

Neglect of proper control measures often results in complete loss of crop, and sometimes the loss of the trees themselves. Therefore, the ability to recognize those troubles that are most common and serious, and knowing how to control them is a necessary part of the equipment of every apple grower, the plant pathologist says.

FARM NOTES

Plant Kentucky Wonder beans for the succotash season.

Don't be afraid to sink the spade when you do your garden digging.

Try some of the cucumber-leaved sunflowers for cutting—nothing finer.

Don't expect to cut a newly set asparagus bed. Give the plants a chance to get established.

When you irrigate or sprinkle, apply sufficient water to soak down to the root system of your plants.

Reports state that the San Jose scale is increasing again. Thorough control measures are necessary.

Get plenty of beet seeds, an ounce, and plant a week and a half apart until midsummer for baby beets. Same for carrots.

Experiments conducted at the Pennsylvania state college to determine the value of commercial fertilizers for use in coniferous seedbeds show that they aid in producing vigorous seedlings in the field.

HOW TO PRAY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 18:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—And it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Teaches Us to Pray.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaches Us to Pray.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What is True Prayer?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Pray?

I. "Men Ought Always to Pray" (v. 1).

Prayer is absolutely necessary to the spiritual life. It is to the spiritual life what breathing is to the physical life. Men ought to pray under every variety of circumstances—in times of sorrow and burdens for strength to endure, in times of joy and success for grace to behave aright. Prayer ought to be persisted in even when the answer is not immediately seen. "All men pray at times." To the Christian alone belongs faith-filled and persistent prayer.

II. The Urgent Prayer of a Widow (vv. 2-8).

The picture here is of a helpless widow who was being cheated out of her property rights, coming to a godless judge for redress. Her only means of getting help was to prove the justice of her claim by her persistence. Even this did not gain access to his heart for he feared not God nor regarded man. He complied with her request to get rid of her. The point here is not that God is like this unjust judge, that he can be teased into compliance, but rather the teaching is by contrast. If such action can be secured on the part of a godless judge by persistence, how much surer will the help of God be given to his elect who cry unto him day and night. The helpless widow pictures the church in this age suffering the deprivation of her rights. It is not the church praying for vengeance upon her enemies, but suing for the possession of her rights by virtue of her covenant relation in Christ. The inheritance of the church will be actualized at the coming of Christ. This is why the truth concerning the coming of Christ is so vital to Christianity, and why so disastrous consequences follow the loss of this blessed hope. Every prayer offered by the church will surely be answered. The apparent delay in the vindication of the church may dishearten some and cause others to mock (II Peter 3:4). Jesus' question should be a solemn warning against allowing apparent delay of the coming of the Lord to crowd out our praying. Though many may give up, we should be assured that genuine faith will abide and that the divine promise concerning the coming of Christ shall be fulfilled.

III. The Prayer of the Proud Pharisee (vv. 9-12).

1. He took a striking attitude (v. 11).

The Jewish custom was to stand while praying, but the word "stood" implies the assumption of an ostentatious position. He was self-righteous and trusted in himself.

2. He prayed with himself (vv. 11, 12).

He used the name of God, but it was really a soliloquy. He pretended to be thanking God when he was really complimenting himself—rehearsing his own goodness. His whole thought centered in himself. He congratulated himself for his morality (v. 11). He thanked God that he was not as other men are, such as extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as the publican who was standing afar off. One who has been kept from these gross sins ought to be grateful to God but should not set himself above his fellow men because of it. He congratulated himself for his religious merits (v. 12). He fasted twice a week and gave tithes of all he possessed. He thus informed God that he did more than what was required, implying that God was under obligation to him.

IV. The Prayer of the Humble Publican (v. 13).

In contrast with this supposed saint stood the publican, whose shame kept him from even looking up to heaven, beating upon his breast as a sign of anguish of soul and crying out to God to be merciful to him, a sinner.

V. Christ's Testimony (v. 14).

Christ declared that the publican went away justified rather than the Pharisee. The one great and urgent need on the part of men is the confession of sin and a willingness to cry unto God for mercy.

The Ear of God

A friend of any kind and to any extent or degree is something in this cold and lonely world, but to have a friend who has the ear of God, and who fills God's ear from time to time with our name and our cause, Oh, who shall find such a friend in me!—Alexander Whyte.

Trusting in God

Surely it is a poor creed that will only allow us to trust in God for ourselves.—George Macdonald

POISON in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

Process Saves Much Oil

The fact that oil and water do not readily mix has been turned to good purpose in some of the failing fields in New York and Pennsylvania, where old wells have been made to flow again by flooding with water, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The process is simple. Water is pumped into wells under pressure, with the result that oil is forced through the sands into other wells that have been abandoned, but have not been flooded. Oil so recovered is said to be of superior quality, and experts estimate that some of the wells thus treated will have a commercial life of 30 to 50 years in the future.

Recently a suggestion and a move was made to start a church library.

A splendid selection of books have been contributed already, and the idea is hailed with unanimous sanction.

The fine spring weather and better health, along with other good conditions, have resulted in more people attending church services.

Two splendid crowds greeted this minister last Sunday with an excellent response. The services were warm and inspirational.

A warm welcome and a hospitality are some of the characteristics of the Church of Christ.

Patrick E. Crowley

Cattaraugus was a railroad town on the Erie line. It was the ambition of most of the boys born and raised there to learn railroading. A conductor in his natty uniform, an engineer, fireman or mechanic in work-stained overalls was a common enough sight to the boys thereabouts. Still it always gave them a thrill. They hoped to rise that high in the world themselves some day in the future.

Patrick E. Crowley shared the ambition of his playmates to become a first-class railroad man. He was born in a house near the tracks of the Erie in 1864. His father had worked on the Erie for years. He was the station agent at Cattaraugus and as such was a man of authority and prestige in the little railroad community.

The youngster knew the language of the railroad almost as soon as he was able to talk. His ears would tell him when the puffing engines were in need of repairs or overhauling before he was ten years old. He could tell at a glance the condition of the rolling stock as it passed through Cattaraugus. He was inquisitive and friendly with the train crews from the time he was able to get around alone.

He was a wiry youngster, rather on the smallish size. While he played in the fields with the other boys, he managed to spend much time around the station and in his father's little office. He took particular interest in the work of the train dispatcher.

His mind was made up while he was in grammar school that he would seek a job on the railroad as soon as his father would permit. In those days the generally accepted way to learn the business was to begin young and work your way up. The boy's father thought that as long as he was so anxious to start railroading he might as well pass up a high school education.

So the lad left school when he was fourteen years old and went to work as a messenger and odd job boy for the Erie in his home town. Each month his pay envelope contained $5. While that wasn't much financial incentive the youngster was satisfied and proud of being a wage earner. He was learning the business he liked, getting a lot of fun out of it and being paid in the bargain.

Getting up at 5:30 in the morning, going to work at seven o'clock and not finishing the day's tasks until nine o'clock at night, might not seem so much fun to boys of the present day. But young Crowley thrived on the hard grind. His thin legs carried him over many a mile in the course of an average day's work as messenger.

When he wasn't on the jump he sat and watched the telegraph operator at his work. There was something in the click of the instrument that seemed to fascinate the lad. The train dispatcher, noting his interest, helped him to learn the Morse code. The boy proved to be a mighty apt pupil. By the time he was sixteen he was a full fledged operator.

Most boys would have gone to bed as soon as they arrived home from such a hard day's work as this youngster put in. But not young Crowley. He was a great reader of history and technical books dealing with railroad problems. Often he remained up reading until midnight or later. In this way he continued the education that was halted, so far as school was concerned, when he finished his grammar school course.

Long before he was able to vote he was known as a boy who always was on the job, who studied it thoroughly until he knew his particular work better than anyone else. It wasn't so strange, in view of this, that when he put his mind to it he became an expert telegrapher at the age of sixteen.

The Erie sent him to Custer City, Pa., as telegraph operator. There were only a couple of trains a day at the little way station, but it was a start for the boy. He didn't remain there long. Soon he was transferred to Buffalo and became a train dispatcher at an important point.

He continued to be a wide reader of good literature in his spare moments, burning the midnight oil to improve his mind. He worked as hard as he had done on his first job. He was gaining a thorough foundation in railroading. He went with the New York Central in 1890 as a train dispatcher. Next he became chief of the department and then chief train master. He was already a man marked for promotion.

When he was offered the place of superintendent of the Pennsylvania division of the Central system, he refused it at first. He was so modest he didn't think he deserved such an important post. Friends persuaded him to change his mind.

From then on his promotion was steady and sure until he was named president of the vast Central system. His thoroughness in mastering every job as it came along has paid him and the New York Central big dividends.

Auto Takes Heavy Toll of Country's Wild Life

Here is something from the Ohio State Journal for tourists to think about:

"On a recent automobile drive across the state of Kansas, Columbus tourists estimated they saw a dead jack rabbit each mile of the distance. Crossing Iowa the cottontail of that state was found dead in about the same numbers. In Iowa also the red-headed woodpecker is found in large numbers on the casualty lists. A study made there showed that quail and occasionally a pheasant had been in collision with an auto.

"An Ohio naturalist drove to the Pacific coast during the summer and was amazed at the number of dead birds and small animals along the roadway. He counted 106 wild birds dead and saw skunks, rabbits, squirrels, snakes and other wild life specimens in large numbers. This country has over 3,000,000 miles of highway, most lines being busy during the summer months. To what amazing figures would the destruction of wild life mount if all casualties were known?

"Some wild animals fear man and flee, but the little wild animals and birds appear to lack instinct and ability, or have lost their natural sense of fear, and the slaughter goes on with the touring seasons. Obviously no driver wishes to destroy any form of wild life, but cannot avoid it when the birds and animals are numerous on the highways. And the busy new paved highways appear to be a favorite playground for these little people."

Poet Prepares His Tomb

Gabriel d'Annunzio, sixty-six-year-old Italian warrior and poet, sent a telegram to Rome stating that his order for a mausoleum was most urgent. This picturesque son of Italy now lives in his Villa Vittoriale near Gardone, where he spends most of his time in a study into which no visitor is admitted. Some time ago he decided that he desired to be buried near the villa under a tomb consisting of four massive columns surmounted by the statue of a racing greyhound. His friend, Renato Brozzi, was selected to sculpture the statue. D'Annunzio has provided in his will that Vittoriale is to become a national monument after his death.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HERE are eight states in the Union with nicknames related to birds or animals, presumably because they are so characteristic of those states that a person invariably thinks of them together. They are the following:

- Arkansas, the Bear
- Delaware, the Blue Hen state.
- Iowa, the Hawkeye state.
- Louisiana, the Pelican state.
- Michigan, the Wolverine state.
- Minnesota, the Gopher state.
- Oregon, the Beaver state.
- Wisconsin, the Badger state.

But it is a curious fact that in addition to every state having a popular nickname, there are some states which have symbols that are in no way connected with the nickname. If they were connected, whenever you thought of Arkansas, you would think of a bear. But the fact is that whenever you think of that state, the chances are that there rises to your mind the image of one of those lean, lanky porkers with its long snout and high, sharp backbone which gives it the name of razorback. For the razorback, descendant of the pigs which the Spanish explorer, De Soto, brought to America and which escaped to the woods and ran wild for generations, is Arkansas' native hog and as such has become that state's symbol rather than the bear.

Time was when the razorback was such a familiar figure in the Arkansas landscape that it became a part of those "popular legends" which are responsible for fixing in the public mind certain ideas, as often erroneous as not, about the people in some one state or some section of the country. Hence the tradition of the "Ozark hill-billy" whose "shiftness" has been perpetuated in the famous "Arkansas Traveler" story. And a similar story in which the razorback figures is this one:

Traveler Through Arkansas (observing a razorback scratching itself against a post)—Your hogs seem to be troubled with the mange.

Ozark Hill-Billy—Mange nuthin', stranger. That there is a razorback and he's just stroppin' himself!

So while it may be true that the razorback hog was once the most distinctive domestic animal in Arkansas, modern farming and modern live stock raising in Arkansas have largely done away with him and he is more of a relic and a tradition than a living fact. The tradition has been preserved, however, by the athletic teams of the University of Arkansas which have become widely known as the "Razorbacks," especially since an Arkansas football star made the All-American.

In fact, such has been the wide-spread interest in college athletics in recent years that the mascots and nicknames of athletic teams, especially those of the state universities, have done much to fix in the public mind a certain state symbolism, even though it may not always agree with that suggested by the "official" state nickname. Outstanding examples of those which symbolize both the state and the college athletes are the "Wolverines" of the University of Michigan, the "Gophers" of the University of Minnesota and the "Badgers" of the University of Wisconsin.

In that connection there has come to light recently the curious paradox that in all probability Michigan, the Wolverine state, does not now have a single wild wolverine within its borders! That is the discovery that Fielding H. Yost, famous football coach and athletic director at the University of Michigan made, according to an article which appeared recently in the Detroit Free Press which says:

"When Professor Yost started out to ascertain why Michigan is known as the Wolverine state, he ran up against two printed explanations. It appears most likely that the name was given Michigan because hales of wolverine furs used to reach the New York fur market from the trading post at Sault Ste. Marie, although most of the furs were brought in from Canadian trappers and not from Michigan territory."

"In the early days of exploration," said Yost, "a trading post was established at Sault Ste. Marie. Many wolverine furs were shipped to the New York market from this post. A large proportion of these furs were supplied by Canadian trappers, although Michigan had wolverines at this time. As the result of these large shipments of wolverine furs, this territory came to be associated with wolverines and eventually the state came to be known as the Wolverine state."

"This explanation does not coincide with the theory of A. D. P. Van Buren, in volume five of the Michigan Pioneer Historical Collections published in 1884, but Dr. Norman Wood of the university museum faculty, who co-operated with Yost in his search for living wolverines in the state of Michigan, declares that the second explanation is not at all plausible.

"Van Buren's explanation holds that the appellation, Wolverine state came about as the result of an incident which occurred at the old Ten Eyck tavern at Dearborn. A party from Detroit stopped there one day and were served wolf steaks, his story relates. One of the men facetiously remarked, 'We have eaten wolves; we must have the appetites of wolverines.' The story spread, Van Buren says, and the name came to be applied to the natives of Michigan.

"Game wardens, trappers, and fur dealers were called upon to aid Yost in his attempt to learn whether the wolverine is extinct in Michigan. With two exceptions, these men supported the findings expressed by Dr. A. C. Roche, of Calumet, who wrote: 'I waited to look this matter up pretty thoroughly. I have seen practically all the game wardens and hunters in these parts and not one has ever seen a wolverine up here.'"

Mr. Yost's inquiry was made during his quest for a native Michigan wolverine to be used as a mascot for the Michigan athletic teams, a quest which was unsuccessful. True, live wolverines have been displayed at some of the big football games at Ann Arbor in recent years but they had been captured in Alaska and borrowed from the Detroit zoo for the occasion!

In contrast to the "Wolverines," the "Gophers," the "Badgers" and the "Hawkeyes" which symbolize the state, its inhabitants and its university teams, there are states in which all three are vastly different. South Dakota is the Sunshine state but it has an animal symbol—the coyote—and South Dakotans and the athletes of its state university are known as "Coyotes." Louisiana is the Pelican state but its inhabitants are more widely known as "Creoles" than they are as "Pelicans." For the chances are that mention of the latter word, instead of painting a word picture of a state, will more likely result in there being quoted the famous jingle about:

A wonderful bird is the pelican
Its neck holds more than its belliean;
It can hold in its beak enough food
For a week
But I don't see how the belliean.

The largest state in the Union is called the Lone Star state but it has a symbol which never fails to bring to mind instantly the name of Texas. "Kicked like a Texas steer" and "wild as a Texas longhorn" are similes which are a part of our everyday language, so the ideas of Texas and longhorn steer are inseparably linked. It is wholly appropriate that this animal should be the symbol of Texas for upon the vast cattle trade which began after the Civil war was Texas' present prosperity based.

If you don't say "kicked like a Texas steer" then you probably say "kicked like a Missouri mule" and every one knows of the dynamite that is concealed in the heels of that animal. Which brings up the fact that Missouri, the Show Me state, is blessed with not just one state symbol but two and either one of them as surely spells "Missouri" in the mind of the average American as longhorn steer spells "Texas." One of them is the mule and the other is the houn' dog.

Not only is Missouri famous for the number of its houn' dogs, and their high value for hunting purposes, but there are two other reasons for the association of the words "Missouri" and houn' dog." One is the famous oration delivered by a famous Missourian—Senator Vest's "Eulogy on the Dog"—delivered during a lawsuit over the killing of "Old Drum." The other is the famous Houn' Dog song, "They Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dog Around," which played an important part in the campaign for the nomination for President of another famous Missourian, Champ Clark.

Senator Vest's oration, which has become a classic in American literature, not only immortalized the Missouri houn' dog but has become a veritable monument to "man's best friend."
