Cheese Toast After Tiresome Trip

(Prepared by the United States Department |

You've been out for an all-day or all afternoon motor trip. Perhaps the whole family was included, and you've all returned hungry, somewhat tired, and a little chilly. You want something appetizingly hot that can be made ready in a jiffy. The speed with which a picked-up meal of this kind can be produced depends, of course, on your previous preparations. A good nucleus for it would be cheese toast, which can be almost entirely prepared before the ride, accompanied by cocoa, reheated, or quickly made tea or percolator coffee, or a hot broth of some sort. The bureau of home economics gives the following directions for making cheese toast with plain American cheese:

1 lb. cheese 1 cup rich milk or aream A little onion juice.

1 ths. flour mixed if desired with 2 tbs. water 1/2 tsp. salt 1 tsps. baking 1 OFFS drops tabasco, or a few grains of cayenne pepper powder

Shave the cheese into thin small pieces. Heat the milk or cream in a double boiler, thicken with the flour which has been mixed with the water, and cook for five minutes. Add a small amount of this mixture to the beaten eggs, return to the double boiler, add the cheese, and the seasonings. Cook slowly and stir constantly until the cheese has melted and the mixture is thick and creamy. Allow it to cool, then add the baking powder.

Toast one side of the bread. Spread the cheese mixture thickly on the untoasted side to the very edge. If the cheese mixture does not come to the edges of the bread, they become brown and hard. Brown the cheese delicately, under a low gas flame or in the oven. The slow heat allows the cheese mixture to heat through before it browns, gives it a chance to become light, and keeps the cheese tender and soft. Too great heat makes the cheese tough and stringy. If desired, place a strip of crisp bacon across each slice the oven. This recipe makes enough for 12 to 14 slices of bread. The cheese mixture may be prepared-except for the baking powder-the day before it is to be used. Since the mixture stiffens on standing, heat until soft in a double boiler, let it cool, and add the baking powder. Then spread the cheese on the toast.

Cosmetics Long in Use

The knowledge of cosmetics dates back to remote antiquity and their annals comprise the history of the folly, luxury and extravagance of past ages. The number of simple and compound substances employed as perfumes is incalculable and almost fabulous and the books written by Egyptians, Greeks and Romans on the subject almost constituted a library in themselves.

Black Is Relieved With White

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Black relieved with much white is | every style-wise woman so covets this an outstanding call of both the evening and the daytime mode. In answer to this plea of fashion for striking contrast comes from the atelier of Jeanne Lanvin a stunning twopiece formal evening dress as illustrated. It is made of black satin for the skirt, with a sleeveless blouse which is of white satin. In this instance the satin is of the supple crepe persuasion which adds to the elegance of its appearance.

The belt which is posed at the normal waistline is decorative in that it is made of milliner folds of the satin which have been braided together. The skirt is smartly styled with a full hemline. It took ten seamed-together gores of the satin to accomplish the snug fit about the hipline which I mode we would like to call attention ; season.

The fact that this costume is made of satin is very significant in that it announces a continued favor for this material among the haute couture of Paris, which of course means that we in America have grown definitely satin-conscious. So all-prevailing is the present favor for satin, it extends from the region of smart sports costumes on and on through a versatile afternoon program climaxing with a repertoire of formal evening gowns whose superb technique is expressed in intricate and ingenious seaming which leads to lines of utmost grace and distinction,

Before concluding our remarks about the prestige accorded satin in the

to the fact that washable satin has been launched for the summer spectator sports frock. Tailored to a nicety are these smart one-piece types. Then, too, the costume which poses a white satin jacket over a dark skirt for daytime wear registers among chic fashions of the hour.

And now a word about the two-piece movement which the evening mode has borrowed from the daytime style program. It's the latest, this idea of a skirt of one color, contrasted with a sleeveless blouse of another, for formal dine and dance wear.

Correct Posture Important When Sitting ‡

A Slouching Sitting Posture Induces Fatigue.

Did you ever catch yourself sitting in a slovenly way while you peeled the vegetables or finished other seated work when you felt "just dead tire"? The farm woman in the first illustration gives one an impression of discouragement and fatigue entirely out of proportion to the simple task she is engaged in. Notice how her head, shoulders, and abdomen are slouched forward, while her feet, rather tensely wound around each other, will soon add to the general weariness induced by her bad posture. Perhaps she has been "on her feet" a long time; she has flung berself down to start dinner by peeling the potatoes, erroneously believing that she is relaxing her muscles. In reality, she may be giving them some bad training.

She would feel much better if she sat well back in her chair, letting the | household routine.

Speaking of remote control have you noticed how other noses in the family turn up when dad's is kept pressed on the grindstone?-San Francisco Chronicie, Expensive kitchen equipment is not necessary to make the room convenient to work in. It is more important to place each of the major work centers in the best relation to the others so that the usual kitchen tasks follow each other in logical order. Then the homemaker does not have to cross her own path repeatedly, taking many unnecessary steps, in doing her work.

Here is a farm kitchen photographed by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is furnished inexpensively, but it is very convenient because careful thought has been given to its arrangement. Light and cross ventilation are provided by windows on two adjoining walls.

This kitchen has only a plain iron sink, which is not ideal, but suffices at the present. It has running water from a home-made water system, but not running hot water. However, the stove, only a few steps from the sink, has a "water back" or hot water tank. and this arrangement is fairly satisfactory. There is a double drainboard at the sink, and splendid light, The best height for the sink has evidently been considered, as its level is somewhat above that of the table.

The kitchen table has a highly varnished top for easy cleaning. Built-in closets above it take care of food supplies and dishes. The homemaker has a high stool and a comfortable location for sitting at her work. Farther around the room, the woodbox is close

PLAYBACK,

THE STORY OF A THWARTED SUICIDE

>  By FANNIE HURST

ESCHERE CONTROL CONTRO (by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service.)

O THE druggist, what happened one motionless July evening, on one of those streets of lower New York that after dark, whether merited or not, take on a sinister gloom, while by no means routine was nonetheless not without frequent precedent in the many years of his shopkeeping. He knew the ear-marks so well. The strangely lit eyes, the smeared pallor, the elaborate manner of asking for rat poison. In the case of the gir with the strawberry-colored hair and the pitiful lower lip with a tiny mole that looked like a court plaster beauty spot, it was much the same as usual, except that she was so young. Not over sixteen, if the druggist was any judge, and he flattered himself that he was.

The thing to do in these cases was not to interfere; to interfere was to invite desperate and frightened recoil. There was a little shelf in the store for just such emergency. Neat little phials of barley water duly labeled "poison." In this wise, chances were the subject would have time to recover from the mental abberration and in all probability not repeat the attempt at self-destruction. That had been the druggist's experience where he had been in a position to follow up the case, but usually they fust drifted out of sight after the flasco he thrust on them, and it was left to his intuition, which he trusted, to gauge the results. On one or two occasions the wouldbe self-annihilators had returned to thank him for the deception. But more usually, at least according to the druggist's conviction, they just drifted sheepishly out of sight.

In any event, it behooved him to regard the matter that way. It assuaged his unease of mind.

The sixteen-year-old girl with the strawberry hair had not returned, but in the odd times his mind flashed back to her after the event, the druggist had leaned upon his conviction that failure to succeed that once had jerked her to her senses,

The druggist's life was too involved in the multitudinous affairs of his little business to let these matters obsess him. The exacting hours of his shop weighed heavily. It was at the period when his son was attending Pharmaceutical college and the fstant he had was all too inade quate. The druggist had been fourteen years in his small old-fashioned shop which the antiquated air of a pharmacy still pervaded instead of the modern electrified atmosphere of the newer type of drug store. He took pride in that, and further prided himself in the fact that when his only son had finished training, he, too, would carry on in the spirit of the chemist, rather than that of the new fangled department store regime which had overtaken the corner druggist. And even down there on the remote by-street, tidings of this small shop spread among physicians to whom the perfectly-filled prescription meant much. Motor cars that seldom, if ever, frequented that part of town swooped now with frequency into the druggist's street. His shop became a trademark of quality.

Curiously and against the modern tendency of the modern youth, the son had returned to fit himself with enthusiasm and valor for the cause of medicine, in the old shop.

Eight years after his graduation from the state college, he was practically carrying alone the increasing responsibilities of the drug store. Meanwhile of course the neighborhood had changed, becoming in a way even more remote and even more sinister in its implication.

Various the opportunities that had come and the offers from doctors to help finance the removal of the shop to a more likely part of town, but the old druggist, half bed-ridden now, was querulous when approached on the subject, and for one reason or another his son, twenty-nine past, of stendy caliber, and his father's passionate pride, did not urge it.

After all, the store was the old gentleman's life and work. It was he who had created it out of pennies; nurtured it, tended it in infancy and seen it flourish with the years. The world might well be said to have beaten a pathway to the door of the little shop. It was because of his integrity that doctors with national and international reputations recommended it to their patients, and once gained, a customer remained.

Not that it was a strenuous or tormented old age into which he had entered. The little rooms above the shop where he had dwelt the twentyeight years following the death of his wife were snug to him as the proverblal bug in its rug. Peace and pride ruled here; the peace of honest achievement and high pride in a son whose ideals were the ideals of the father and whose youth stood aside in deference to the conservatism of the older man began to feel upon him- throughout Europe for its destructiveself the Shadow, there began to move ness. It eventually causes the bulbs across his mind torments, fears, heart- to shrink and dry, so that they are unaches, even terror for the future of fit for consumption, this boy. There was something so naive and trusting and simple about disease, in itself describes the effect this son. His one weakness in the it has on an onion crop. Such a youth would fall easily and who desired him sufficiently, and at twenty-nine there was dignity to this fellow, fine clarity of eye and brow few other states. and a naive quality that gave him added attraction.

Some day, naturally, the boy would blossom out into a new and wider enterprise. It was right that he should. He had the ability, the opportunity, the ambition. But while the father lived, there he remained in the shop, right-hand to the business, right-hand to the parent.

With the old gentleman standing by to add his pinch of cynicism whenever necessary, all that was well and good. The boy had had his threats of pitfalls and come out unscathed. It was the aftermath the father dreaded. What about after he had passed

It therefore became almost a secret obsession with him. What about this boy's future? A woman could break or make him. What untold relief to see this boy settled in life before . . .

Intuitive always, the old man watched for signs. The reticence of secret thoughts-there was none of that. The absorption in some one of the many charming young women who come into the shop-not a suggestion of personal interest with anyone. The telephone's unexplained demands that might suggest a hidden sweetheartthere were no clews there to indicate a preparation for the inevitable.

Countless times he attempted to broach the subject but the boy would have none of it. Not interested in women! Why must father get on the morbid subject of death-nothing but gout the matter with him! Let the future take care of itself.

The future did take care of itself. One spring evening the son of the old. druggist entered the sick room with look on his face that caused the heart of the old man to leap in terror This boy was in love!

He was, and the matter of introduc ing the girl to a father who depended so strongly upon intuition was a time of untold nervousness to the boy.

"If you don't like her, Father, it's terrible to have to tell you, but if you don't like her I'm going to marry her anyway."

It required only one meeting to set the fluttering old heart of the fluttering old man at rest. She was right! She was the assured future of his boy. She was everything, in her strawberryhaired prettiness, with the mouth so prettily shadowed by a mole, her eyes so prettily shadowed by good common sense, that this father could wish for his son.

One felt so at home with her at the very first meeting. It was as if one had known her before. . . .

Native African Houses

The native of Kirdl-Massa, on the west coast of Africa, builds his home of a stiff clay much like the abode used by Mexicans and Indians. This is poured over a framework of slender wooden poles used as reinforcements, and allowed to dry in the sun. The design is worked on with a crude trowellike tool while the mud is moist.

The houses look like huge anthills, with only an inadequate opening for a door in the side and a small round chimney hole at the top to admit light and air. The design on the outside is often elaborate and worked out with the greatest pains, for it serves to identify the owner of the hut.

These are the lightest gases known and practically the only ones used for balloons. It is stated that the government helium plant in Texas can produce belium at about $12 per thousand cubic feet, or at a little more than twice the cost of hydrogen. Hydrogen is inflammable while helium is not. While heated gases and smoke have a tendency to rise, their lifting power will depend on their specific gravity and on the temperature.

Right Care of Calves

Means Improved Cows

A good starting point toward herd improvement is the purchase of a good bull. But it is only a starting point. A sire with good producing breeding behind him will, in all probability, sire a calf that can be made into a good cow. But a lot of these good calves are spoiled in the making. A visit is recalled to a dairy section in an eastern province where pure bred sires of one breed had been in use for two decades, says a writer in the Montreal Herald. The cows all showed their breeding in breed type and refinement but we saw precious few good cows from a production standpoint. They were all undersized and stunted. They had been spoiled in the making. It was sandy country, home grown feed was scarce and there was little disposition to buy imported feed. Less than 60 miles away we visited a farmer with a splendid nerd of the same breed-grades that looked like pure breds and looked like big producers. We mentioned the comparison between his herd and the cows of the community we had visited. He laughed. It seemed that every cow in his stable was purchased as a calf or was descended from cows purchased in that same community. Good feeding from the start had made the difference. We need what farmers in the middle western states call the "corn crib cross."

Prevent Scab in Barley

by Selection of Land Barley scab is carried over the winter in cornstalks, and attacks the barley plant at heading and grows until the crop is ripe. Rain and damp weather are necessary during the heading period for the scab to develop, according to R. G. Shands, University of Wisconsin.

Selection of land for the barley crop is important, as the land that lies near creeks or rivers seems to have more disease due to more fogs and heavy atmosphere than is common on high land. Lodged barley has more disease than barley that stands upright. Don't cut the barley until fully ripened,

Barley should be sown only on land which has had the stalks plowed under thoroughly.

Rape, because of its high protein content, is a desirable crop to be sown with corn that is to be used for hogging-off or sheeping-down.

Weed control is sometimes rendered difficult because neighbors neglect to do their share, and the careful farmer suffers with the rest. Co-operation is needed.

Soybeans require the same seedbed and cultural practices as corn. They should be planted in rows, like corn or beans, with hills 20 inches apart and two plants to the hill.

Machines That Are Almost Human By E. C. TAYLOR

The Robot Watchman

WASHINGTON, D. C., the National Capital, is a machine that is awe-inspiring in its ability to do the work of a human being.

The War department has charge of the water supply of the city, and when a new water-supply system was built there recently, a robot was invented to serve as guardian and watchman at each of the three reservoirs of the

This robot watchman answers the telephone when called in the ordinary way, and when asked the depth of the water, promptly informs his superior officer just how much water there is in the reservoir. Three of these robots are in constant use, one at each reservoir.

The engineer official in charge of the Capital's water system calls one of these robots on the telephone. He calls central in the usual way, and is connected with the robot's telephone number. The robot stands on constant curred in Pleasant Valley, Iowa, as duty. It is just another telephone

When the telephone bell rings at the reservoir, it is the first signal to the robot. The robot lifts the telephone receiver enough to signal the operator and answer, and then speaks into the telephone transmitter. It could speak words, but these robots do their talking by means of buzzer sounds. The buzzer gives the official a code signal which notifies him that he is connected with the robot.

On the official's desk is a small box. On the top of the box a small megephone aimed directly at a telephone transmitter. On the front of the box are three push buttons.

The official presses the first button. It starts an electric tuning fork vibrating. In front of the robot's telephone is another megaphone or loud speaker aimed at the iron watchman's electric ear of audion tubes and microphone diaphragms connected so as to operate a series of switches.

On receiving the first series of signals, the robot reports back to prevent error. The official, receiving the proper signal, knows that he is connected with the robot watchman.

Then he presses the second button, which sounds the tuning fork at a higher note. The robot's ear detects the difference and the iron watchman promptly brings into play more mechanism.

The depth of the water is indicated by floats placed at one-foot intervals up the side of the reservoir. The robot sounds a series of musical notes, seven, eight, nine, as the case may be, that inform the official the depth of the water in feet.

When the official receives this information he presses the third button. which starts the tuning fork vibrating at a still higher pitch. This says "good-by" to the robot watchman. The robot drops the receiver and disconnects.

Here is a mechanical man-or rather three of them-doing the work of human beings. And they are always on the job. When the telephone rings, they are prompt to answer It and they always give accurate information as to the city's water supply. The officials in charge know, too, that they can call up their robot watchman at any hour and the line will not be

The robots' telephone numbers are regularly listed numbers, although they do not appear in the capital telephone directory. So, of course, these numbers are frequently called by mis-

When these robots are called as a wrong number" by some one wanting the butcher, grocer, or husband, the robots answer as usual, but after a few seconds they hang up again. They have not received the proper signal from their superior officer and know the call was not meant for them.

These remarkable robots were built by R. J. Wensley, inventor of one of the mechanical men with which scientists have amused themselves.

They are operated, just as the robot men are operated, by a voice from a distance. The faint electric impulse created by the sound waves on delicate mechanism affect an electro-magnet which releases energies that perform the tasks of the robot watchman. (©. 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

THOUSAND DISASTERS RECEIVED RED CROSS AID IN 50 YEARS

American Society to Celebrate Its Birth Year With Nationwide Observance

Tornadoes, foods, forest fires and other calamities and upheavals of nature have visited the United States more than one thousand times in the last half century.

All of these were of severe intensity. causing loss of life and great property damage. Minor catastrophes were not counted in this list of disasters, which has been made public by the American Red Cross. In connection with the celebration this year of its aftioth birth-

It was on the evening of May 31. 1881, in the modest home of Miss Clara Barton in Washington, D. C., that the American Association of the Red Cross was first formed. Before the year was out, and before, indeed, the United moved to approve the Treaty of Geneva, adding this nation to the company of thirty-two others adhering to the treaty to protect wounded in warfare. Miss Barton had plunged the small society into a disaster relief task. Firet Red Cross Unit

This was in the north woods et Michigan, where forest fires swept the bomestead farms of ploneering families. Miss Barton, as president of the Red Cross, had organized a branch in Dansville, New York, where she was sojourning. This little group immediately raised money, food, clothing and other supplies and sent them to the forest fire victims. In Rochester and Syracuse, New York, nearby, word spread of this charitable enterprise, and Red Cross auxiliaries were organized there to help. So began the disaster relief work of the Red Cross fifty years ago. In the intervening years. millions of men, women and children have been aided. Thousands of homes have been restored. Thousands of persons, overwhelmed by floods, toruadoes, and fires until all they possessed had been wiped away, have been rehabilitated and prosperity and happiness again smiled upon them.

This year has been dedicated by the Red Cross and its chapters in 3,500 communities to commemoration of the events which led to the birth of the society in the United States.

President Hoover Speaks

The celebration of the anniversary was inaugurated in Washington at a dinner, attended by many distinguished men and women, at which presided, and President Hoover, who the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross, in which fiftyseven nations are joined in a Red Cross brotherhood, also was a speaker, as were Chairman John Barton Payne of the American Red Cross, and Mice Mabel T. Boardman, secretary, and veteran leader of the society.

The Red Cross standard, which files all around the world where mercy is needed, was first introduced as an ideal in our modern civilization in Geneva in 1864, when the international Red Cross convention, afterward to be known as the Treaty of Geneva, was should be given aid by doctors, nurses and others, who should wear the sign of the Red Cross, and be treated as neutrals in the warfare. Two Americans attended this first convention, the American Minister George C. Fogg, and Charles S. P. Bowles, representative in Europe of the United States Sanitary Commission, a volunteer organization of sympathizers with the North in our Civil War Facts they gave resulted in adop tion of some of the American ideas. Returning to the United States, Fogs and Bowles sought recognition of the Geneva Treaty, but the Grant admisletration took no interest. Under Hayes, the same lethargy was on countered.

Clare Berton Founder

But there had emerged from the Civil War period a middle-aged woman who had seen much service on the battlefields around Washington. This was Clara Barton. Ill health caused her to make a trip to Europe in 1869. There she became interested in the Red Cross idea, and joined a unit which saw service in the Franco-Prussian war. Upon her return home, she launched an active campaign for the treaty, but met the same opposition as her predecessors. However, President Garfield, when he came into of ace, recognized the merits of the movement, and when death by assaud! nation removed him, his successor, President Arthur, sought approval by the U. S. Senate of the treaty. Thue was consummated a seventeen-year aght in this nation for a humanitarian ideal. Clara Barton was recognized as the society's founder and was its prestdent for twenty-three years. She died in 1912 at the age of 90 years. It is not generally thought of, but the flag so familiar in every civilized nation as the emblem of the Red Cross. had a simple derivation. Because the originator of the movement, Henri Dunant, was a Swiss, and the first treaty to protect wounded in battle was drafted and signed in Switzerland. the flag of that Republic-a white cross spon a red background-was reversed and the Red Cross came into being

No Papers Served Yet In Real County Suit.

The $50,000 damage suit filed in Real County by Ed Welch et al of Camp Wood against Frank sheriff of Sutton County, and Charley Miller, livestock inspector, likely will not be prosecuted, according to information here. Thus far none of the men has had citations served upon them, it is reported here. The suits filed against the three men allege that the plaintiffs were imprisoned falsely in Real, Val Verde, Terrell and then Sutton County in an investigation of sheep theft cases in which no indictments were returned.

The suits were prepared by John W. Hill, lawyer of Uvalde, and the names of T. A. Williams of Rocksprings and Will Morris of San Antonio were signed to the petitions. The defendants must be served with the citameets in Real County in June.

Attorneys for Baker, Hutcherson and Miller say that these men were acting on the basis of what they considered reliable information from reliable persons. -San Angelo Times.

BOWEN MADE HEAD OF POWER FIRM

Former General Manager Electod Vice President and Director of Texas-Louisiana Power Co.

H. L. Bowen, well known in this city, has been elected vice resident and director of the Texas-Louisiana Power Comany, according to an announcent received by C. A. Moreand, local manager.

Mr. Bowen, who is a native of Van Alstyne, Texas, has been with the company since its inception in 1922, having started work in the capacity of line walker at Graham, Texas, when a very young man.

By successive steps, he was promoted to field superintendent, chief engineer, and western division manager, with offices in El Paso. In 1929, he was brought to the general offices of the company in Fort Worth as general manager, and his subsequent record of accomplishment resulted in his election to the vice presidency and directorship of this $30,000,000 public utility

Mr. Bowen's first schooling was received in the public schools at Van Alstyne and later, he attended Terrill School for Boys at Dallas. His college education was received in Blue Mountain, Miss., where he was a student in Mississippi College.

He joined the Pershing Expedition to Mexico in 1916. The day following his mustering out of the National Guard service, the United States declared war on Germany and Mr. Bowen enlisted immediately, leaving within a few months for France, where he served almost two years in active service during the World War.

In 1919, he returned to the States and was married in August of that year to Miss Bertha Booth of Austin. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen made their home in San Antonio where Mr. Bowen engaged in real estate work for several months before joining the forces of A. P. Barrett who was then organizing several small companies which were to become the nucleus of the Texas-Louisiana Power Company. Mrs. Bowen was also associated with the company in its early days.

Mr. Bowen, being a native of the Southwest, has always had a deep interest in this section and has made important contributions to its development.

Fine furniture has for decades been upholstered in mohair velvet, but only in recent years has it been possible to get it in such variety of up-to-theminute colors, designs and styles. last great chief. Ever since his body was removed to this grave in 1925, Utes from all the bands in Colorado and Utah have gathered yearly to honor him with memo-

It is hard to tell whether this is a custom patterned after the white man's Memorial day or not. It is true that only six days later, we who read these lines will pay tribute to our dead. There will be parades and speeches, and flowers and flags will deck the resting places of our soldier and sailor departed, while elsewhere in the cemeteries wreaths and bouquets will symbolize our tender recollections of kinfolk and close friends.

There are few communities in our country which have no sort of servives. On this day, from coast to coast, the American people give special thought to those who have entered upon the Great Adventure. But if the shosts of those other folk who lived here before us look back and see us, they understand what we are doing, for once, long ago, the red-skinned people held their day of remembrance, It was not always on the same date, across all the country. Sometimes it was twice a year; sometimes many years elapsed between the days set apart for the dead, according to the tribes which observed the custom. But none the less the Indians before us, in their own way, which was sometimes very much like ours, honored their beloved dead. The Puebios call them "Those-whohave gone-before." To their minds the next world is very much like this, but the departed are closer to Those Above, and may intercede for the living. They come back, also, not in the luminous robes and with the trumpets and slates of seance-spirits, but in the persons of certain living tribesmen who, when they have donned the grotesque masks of their ancertor-worship rites, seem to acquire something of the power of those whom they are representing. They come back, also, in the quiet hours when their children are immersed in thought, and give advice and counsel.

It is only fitting, then, that the Hopi should hold ceremonies in their honor, when their representations walk through the villages and hear the supplications of their living children. It is a queer sort of Memorial day, true, but it is conducted with real reverence and love, and who can ask more? What a beautiful faith this is, which does not admit of death separating the Hving and the dead, and which holds that it was the burial place of one these symbolic "family reunions" in token of that faith.

Even with this belief, however, it is impossible for loving hearts not to grieve at the loss of dear ones. Thus we hear Hopi wailing on the anniversary of a death, and if there has been an epidemic which took a number of the tribe, an official anniversary is fixed, and observed with orrow year after year.

So, too, the New Fire ceremony sees the Zuni matron, dressed as if to meet loved friends, weeping softly to herif as she casts food into the fire n her hearth. This food is for the cestors and for those who died in he past year, but if we could see into her heart we would surely find some oved one enshrined there, of whom he thinks especially as she makes her

The first anniversary of a death was e one most widely observed. Then widow could put off her mourning. nd the bereaved family could take up ery-day life again. The official time sorrow was passed at the end of s year. But who, be he Indian or ite, can say to the mourner, "Do weep longer; do not grieve fur-"? The sorrow of death makes a sting impression on the heart, which nnot be erased at the end of a year. Anniversaries come as naturally as seasons themselves. Pere Sebastien Rasles, who wrote an account of the Illinois tribe long ago. spoke of their holding dances that were "a token of their sadness at the death of the most important men of their tribe. It is by these dances that they profess to honor the deceased, and to wipe away the tears of his relatives." During these dances, it was thought, the spirits of the departed ones came and danced also, enjoying themselves as they had once

Here we find again the great unlikeness of thought between white man and Indian. Standing between the graves, placing flowers on them, listening to the prayers and speeches which seek to recall the dead to us, we would shudder at the idea that they stood by us, admiring the flowers and hearing with appreciation their eulogies! Yet the Illiniwak found only pleasure in this thought, as if some dearly-loved ones had returned from a journey to be among them, and the fact that they were invisible did not make them fearsome or less welcome to the feast in Indian burial mounds were not forgotten by their tribesmen, even though they moved far from the place where their people were interred. No less a person than Thomas Jefferson, speaking of a mound near Monticello, related that "a party passing, about thirty years ago, through the part of the country where this barrow is, went through the woods directly to it, without any instructions or inquiry, and having stald about it some time, with expressions which were construed to be those of sorrow, they returned to the high road."

The Oneida often visited a mound near Richfield Springs, N. Y., saying of their chief men. The old chroniclers omitted to state whether these visits were performd with any memorial ceremonies, but judging from what we have learned of other tribes, we believe that there must have been something of the sort.

A strange Sloux memorial custom was that of "keeping the ghost." A lock of hair from the head of the deceased person was made into a roll with cloth and various articles of value. This was kept for a year or so, and other presents collected, when the friends of the dead person assembled to hold ceremonies. At this time the gifts, together with small pieces of the lock of hair, were distributed. This ceremony was sometimes repented. Another memorial observance which corresponds slightly to our custom of erecting headstones over the dead, was that described by Adair as follows: "To perpetuate the memory of any remarkable warriors killed in the woods, I must here observe that every Indian traveler as he passes that way throws a stone on the place. . In the woods we often see innumerable heaps of small stones in those places, where, according to tradition, some of their disgruntled people were either killed or buried." Each heap is increased, he goes on to say, as a lasting monument in their honor. No discussion of Indian memorial observances would be complete withed ones were merry. Thus, the out a description of the strange cus-

These people did not inter their dead, but placed them on scaffolds parts of their harvest and placed them | or in trees. In time the bones of the deceased were all that was left, and these, perhaps, fell on the ground as world is so much like this, why should the scaffolds or platforms, weathernot the departed spirits return on beaten and old, gave way. The relatives gathered and buried the bones, all but the skulls, and these they gle a little while with those beloved | placed "in a circle in the plain," says Father De Smet, speaking of the Assiniboln, "with the faces turned toward the center. They preserve these with care. . . . The Indians call the cemetery the village of the dead. They visit it at certain seasons of the year, to converse affectionately with their deceased relatives and

Many travelers of the early days have observed and commented on these circles of skulls, and we are given pictures of them in many of the imes. It is only natural that such a strange custom should be misunderstood. Some of those early observers did not realize what real affection prompted the preservation of these relics of the dead, and hence we read the scornful note that "several skulls were kicking about on the ground."

Catlin observed this same custom among the Mandan, and goes on to tell us that each skull was placed on, a bunch of wild sage, which was renewed as often as necessary. "There is scarcely an hour in a pleasant day, but more or less of these women may be seen sitting or laying by the skull of their child or husband, talking to it in the most pleasant and endearing language that they can use (as they were wont to do in former days) and seemingly getting an answer back."

This custom may seem a revolting one to us, but to the Indians it was a natural and common observance. Indeed, to the white men who knew these people well, their strange ideas grew less fantastic, and Catlin remarked, as he noted the Mandan women "visiting" with the skulls of their loved ones, "There is something exceedingly interesting and impressive in these scenes." Indeed, they recall to us the famous vault under the Capuchin convent, where the bones of monks who have died are used to make patterns on the walls, and the skulls stand in rows. Travelers have remarked that the monks who showed them these strange designs appeared to know many of the skulls, and could relate their names and something of their histories. It was noteworthy. also, that they had no horror of the grim vault, but looked forward serene ly to their own time of departing. when their skulls also would help to decorate the walls, and some later brother of the order would name them and tell their stories.

So it is with the Indians, Not all of them, of course, regarded death without dread, but surely those of whom we have been reading did not recoil at the unavoidable step. True to their beliefs, they went out bravely. The "Happy Hunting Grounds" of the Plains people beckoned; the Underworld of the Pueblos waited for their return. And they believed with firm conviction that they would know about the memorial ceremonies, and be able to share, with the beloved living, in the rites,

Whether we agree with them or not, it was a pleasant sort of faith. And although our own beliefs have gone in a far different direction from theirs. sometimes, still we unite once a year to recall the virtues and to honor the memories of Those who have gone be-

JESUS PREPARING FOR THE END

GOLDEN TEXT-And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying. This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:7-30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Wants Us to Beauther Him.

to Remember Him, JUNIOR TOPIC-How We Can Remember Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-

IC-Meaning of the Lord's Supper I. The Last Passover (vv. 7-18).

1. The Passover prepared (vv. 7-13). a. Peter and John sent to prepare the Passover (v. 8). As the time had arrived for the killing of the Passover, Jesus commanded these disciples to make ready for it.

b. The disciples' inquiry (v. 9). They inquired of Jesus as to where they should prepare the Passover. The true disciple is not only ready to do the Lord's bidding, but anxious to know exactly his will.

c. The Master's strange directions (vv. 10-12). They were to go into the city where they would meet a man bearing a pitcher of water. The usual cusiom was for the women to carry the water. This unusual occurrence would make it easier for them to find the man. He assured them that they would then be shown a large upper room furnished.

d. The obedience of the disciples (v. 13). They did as Jesus directed them. They did not stop to question the sanity of the command but, as true disciples, obeyed.

The Passover eaten (vv. 14-18). By whom (v. 14). Those who sat down to this last Passover Feast were the Master and the twelve

b. Jesus' words unto the disciples (vv. 15-18).

(1) "I have desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer" (v. 15). He greatly desired to show them the meaning of the passion through which he was to go.

(2) "I will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God" (v. 16). His death was the antitypical fulfillment of the Passover.

(3) "Take this cup and divide it among yourselves" (vv. 17, 18). By the token of the cup the disciples were partaking of his shed blood. Drinking anew in the kingdom of God does not mean that in heaven this service will be renewed, but that it was symbolle of the heavenly reality.

II. The Feast of the New Covenant Instituted (vv. 19, 20).

This feast took place at the close of the paschal supper.

1. The bread a symbol of Christ's body (v. 19). As bread nourishes and strengthens our bodies, so Christ io food to our spiritual nature. Unless our souls feed upon Christ, we shall

2. The cup a symbol of Christ's blood (v. 20). This was symbolic of the atonement which was made by the shedding of his blood on Calvary's cross. He said, "This cup is the new testament in my blood which was shed for you," indicating that each one must personally accept the atonement made by the shedding of his blood.

III. The Wicked Behavior at the Feast (vv. 21-27). The treachery of Judas (vv.

a. The time of its manifestation (v. 21). It was while they were eating the last Passover that Jesus made the announcement of the betrayal, perhaps that Judas might be given an opportunity at this last moment to re-

b. The betrayal was by the determinate counsel of God (v. 22 Cf. Acts 2:23). Nothing takes place by chance. Even the sinful acts of wicked men come within the permissive province of God. This does not, however, lessen the guilt of sinners, for Jesus said, "Woe unto the man by whom he is betrayed."

c. The sorrowful question (v. 23). The disciples did not seem to suspect one another but made the question a personal one.

2. The selfish ambition of the disciples (vv. 24-27). In this tragic hour the disciples were so concerned with the thought of position that they were striving among themselves as to who should be the greatest.

IV. The Apostles' Place in the Kingdom (vv. 28-30).

Jesus assured them that those who continued with him in his trials would be appointed a place in the Kingdom which would entitle them to eat and drink at his table and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel,

Newspapers Make Gain in Number of Readers

The aggregate circulation of papers daily in this country and Canada is 45,106,245 as against 44,110.-094 in 1930, a gain of about a million daily readers, according to a recent newspaper directory. It is a good sign if people are reading more. They are attending the greatest school in the world, as somebody has called the newspaper,

This school takes up every morn ing in the year and usually begins its sessions before breakfast. It has a voluntary student body and its cost is but a few cents per day. It is the cheapest tuition of any institution for adults on earth. It knows no vacations and no holidays. The teachers are on the job all day and through the night preparing the textbook for next morning. No time is taken out for examinations. If the entrant gets nothing out of it, that is his fault. Truant officers are not needed. Classes take up in homes, offices, on park benches in the open and even in commuters' cars.

We may not have as much in our pockets as we had a year ago; but we have more under our bats!

Wind Vane Insect Trap

Used by Entomologists A new wind vane insect trap devised by entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture is proving useful in determining the source of beet-leaf hopper migra tions, the department reports. Once the source of infestation is known it may be possible to apply direct control measures before the insec migrate to the sugar beet fields, if the natural breeding area is small. This new trap consists of a light wooden box housing a series of par allel upright screens, connected by a funnel with a jar containing cyanide. A weather vane attached to the box causes it to rotate so that It always faces the wind. The traps are mounted on high poles.

Insects flying with the prevailing winds are caught by the screens and carried by air currents down a tube, through the funnel, and into the jar of poison. By examining the jar at regular intervals entomologists can tell which winds bring the insects, at what height they are flying and the extent of the flight.

Hope for the Chestnut Groves

Belief the chestnut is not doomed to destruction in the forests of Pennsylvania, but will eventually regain its position of importance as a valuable timber tree, is expressed in a statement by State Forester Joseph S. Illick. The chestnut blight made its appearance in the state about 20 years ago and since then practically all chestnut trees of commercial size have been killed.
