Austin—The raiding rangers and Jimmy Allred's policy of using them to close open saloons and gambling houses in the state's principal cities has temporarily diverted public attention from the legislature. The first reaction from the large cities was rather severe criticism of the governor.

But the secondary reaction has proved again that Jimmy Allred is perhaps the keenest judge of what is going on in the minds of the majority of people of Texas who sat in the governor's chair in many years. It also proved the governor makes few political mistakes.

The governor has talked rather freely about his action. He has pointed out that law enforcement was one of the principal planks in his platform, and his friends say he warned the saloonkeepers and gambling house operators from every platform in Texas last summer that he intended to enforce the law.

Actually, the governor has no idea or intention of trying to enforce the laws with the handful of rangers at the disposal of Adjt. General Carl Nesbitt. But already sheriffs and district attorneys have been falling all over themselves to assure the governor it isn't necessary to send rangers to their communities, and begging for a chance to enforce the law in their own counties and districts. All the governor ever intended to do was "turn the heat" on these delinquent local officers. The spectacular raids in Galveston, San Antonio, Fort Worth, and Houston and elsewhere have sent the criminals who have defied the law openly scurrying for cover. The rangers were criticized by some well-meaning citizens for smashing the expensive furnishings of the gambling houses. But the governor, in his radio talk, quickly pointed out they were directed by the law to do just that.

There is a good story going the rounds in Austin which may or may not be entirely true, but it is given wide credence. It is said that the proprietor of one of the smashed night clubs in a south Texas city sent a check for $25,000 as a contribution to Allred's campaign fund during the campaign last summer. The check, so the story goes, was promptly returned from the Allred headquarters. The club operator, loudly bewailing his smashed night club, is said to have cursed Allred very loudly for his "ingratitude." The ease with which certain local enforcement officials have been persuaded to ignore open saloons and gambling houses makes it difficult for their operators to understand a governor who makes campaign pledges and then goes right out and fulfills them.

a mess of pottage, seasoned with the sacrifice of principle, she would surrender her birthright." He might have been talking to the boys who want to accept federal control and "aid" for a Texas oil industry that is returning more than $45,000,000 in state taxes alone to Texas.

The hearing before a senate committee on the proposed constitutional amendment to exempt homesteads up to $3000 assessed valuation from all except school taxes was a remarkable session in several respects. There was virtually no "opposition" to the plan, although a score of city officials appeared as nominal opponents, they were for relief for the small home owners, on a practicable basis, and merely cited figures to show what would happen to the cities and towns if the amendment should be adopted in its present form. Bailey Jones of New Braunfels, Mayor Tom Miller of Austin, City Manager Bill Taylor of Longview, Mayor Pete Renfro of Beaumont, and others all pointed out that exemption of $3000 homes would halve their cities' revenue, cripple municipal services and force many to default on bonds heretofore issued in good faith.

"I don't believe that we ought to carry the man who owns a $3000 homestead for a free ride on municipal service," said Mayor Tom Miller. "I believe any good American wants to pay and ought to pay, a little something for what he gets from his community. I think the idea of this exemption originated in the minds of members of the legislature, and not with the people. Nobody has come to my office and asked for it—and if the people of Austin demanded it some of them would have been in to see me."

Airport Chatter

By the Old Man

As stated last week, a radio station is to be installed at the Johnson ranch, and the personnel who will do the work are on their way from Ft. Sam Houston, making the trip by slow stages, on account of the new trucks being used. The first night's stop will be at Fort Clark, the second at Marathon, then to the ranch. This station, WYY, has been in contact with the convoy since it left early Wednesday morning. Those who have radios and care to listen in may hear the two stations working. Their call is GOI.

A visitor is expected at the port this week and we're all hoping he will like the appearance of the station, and all are doing their part to see that every nook and corner is spick and span. The visitor is the C. A. inspector, and his job is to find fault with the way things are done. One never knows just what he's looking for so it is our job to give EVERYTHING the O. O. In this way we might get by him. These inspections come once a year whether we are ready for them or not.

RATTLE OF THE RAIL

It is understood that ground necessary for the expansion of the airport will soon be available which will pave the way for some badly needed improvements to care for the increased number of planes using this field.

Those who want a good free ride had better get their name in the pot as Capt. Foster will soon be leaving. The new control officer is an older man than Foster and doesn't take much time out for pleasure. So be on hand next week for the ride.

If all the school kids enjoyed the swimming party as much as Constance—and there was one every day—there would be nothing but smiles.

Pleasing Film Tonight. Starring Margaret Sullavan

At least one Hollywood extra knows what it is to get in a terrific lather over Herbert Marshall.

Margaret Sullavan and Herbert Marshall, co-stars of the Universal drama, "The Good Fairy," worked one day recently in a barber shop setting where Marshall, at the behest of the girl, brings himself to the point of sacrificing his beautiful beard.

In the next chair, with his face soaped, preparatory to a shave, reclined an unidentified extra player, there simply as "atmosphere" for the scene. There were long rehearsals and many retakes of the scene just up to the point where Marshall's beard was about to be stripped by the scissors, and all the time the extra lay beneath a mask of soap which was replenished every few minutes. Only once, during the lunch hour, did he come up for air.

"The man who wrote 'I'm Always Blowing Bubbles'" he said "must have been an extra."

"The Good Fairy," which is one of the season's most hilarious comedies will be shown at the Princess Theatre tonight and Saturday, April 5 and 6.

In the cast supporting Miss Sullavan and Mr. Marshall are Frank Morgan, Alan Hale, Beulah Bondi, Reginald Owen, Cesar Romero, June Clayworth and Hugh O'Connell.

Mrs. Carlton White, Mrs. Luella Lemons and Miss Louise White returned Sunday from San Antonio where they spent the past week visiting with relatives and friends.

Helpful Household Hints

Though "April showers" may come your way, you won't need to worry at all if you have a bright shiny raincoat.

The raincoats nowadays are so pretty that it is a shame to hide their attractiveness under ungainly umbrellas.

Bananas, peaches, pineapples or any fruit you wish, pressed thru a sieve and added to a plain tapioca will make this old stand-by take on new fascination.

Chocolate fudge will have an unusual delicacy of flavor if, while it is hot, marshmallows are beaten into it until they are thoroughly blended with the sirup.

Baked apples that are stuffed with shredded pineapple and raisins, chilled and served with whipped cream, make a "different" dessert?
