COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of Jodok

I have often pondered as to why this thing we call "Human Nature," is so complex and diversified, but thus far I have found no answer to the riddle. It seems that it is one of those things, which, the more we cogitate about it, the more complex it becomes so far as our understanding of it is concerned.

For instance there are some things, that we almost universally dread and abhor, even the thought of, and yet go on spending most of our lives in an effort to secure, and that to the greatest limit possible. One of these things and the most prominent of all in such conditions, is old age. "We, in a sense, dread it, and yet we are quite solicitous toward attaining it as though it was something to be desired, and in certain comparisons, it is.

One of the reasons, and, it is probably the only reason why the human mind entertains impressions of dread or maybe fear, horror or remorse when contemplating old age, is the fact that we, as individuals have never experienced it for ourselves nor can we experience it until we have personally attained that stage in earthly existence. And perhaps the only reason we are able to endure the dread of it is because it is always so far removed in the future from us.

Just why, you may say, am I going into this matter of old age, and just why am I interested in it at this particular time? I lay it to an incident which I encountered just a few days ago, and which made quite an impression upon me, and was, in most respects, a very pleasant incident. It was when a lady, who was far from "old" came to me and spoke my name, although I had never met her previously. She told me her name and that she lived at Hereford, and that a lady friend of hers had driven over with her, and wished to meet me and talk with me, and would I kindly go with her to where the lady was sitting in a parked car across the street. She mentioned that the lady is blind.

I gladly accepted the invitation and the friend introduced us and my new acquaintance invited me to occupy the seat in the car by her side, and we at once launched into a very pleasant conversation. She did not dwell on her physical affliction, except to mention it for my information. And, although her affliction had been varied and sad, she did not refer to them, but was quite cheerful in her outlook upon life. She spoke of the fine things in life with which she is blessed, rather than of those which she lacks. She has a good command of the English language and quite a talent for poetry, and writing short stories. She employs her time at writing, her poetry and stories and, if I understand her correctly, doing fancy needle work.

She recited for me two of her poems, one of which was truly an ovation to the Panhandle and Plains Country. I do not know that I have ever read or heard anything that could excel it as a tribute to this Panhandle country, which she seems to love with all her heart as a country. Her other poem related to a still fairer land than the Panhandle, the delights of which, all who enter, will share in the same degree of proportion, and toward which she is looking with the kindest of anticipation.

The fact that this lady is slightly beyond what is often referred to as the "sunny side" of life, and that she was entering on what is termed the "shady side" of life, or her declining years, held no terror for her; but she seemed to rather rejoice that such was the fact. Her mental vision of this "Land of Pure Delight" was so vivid that she could vividly see herself as entering its pearly gates and walking upon its streets of gold. She realized that there will be no blind nor mute nor lame nor halt there, but that all who enter that blissful abode will be on a par, each with the other, and her faith and confidence in the fact that she will be one of those, who shall enter therein was so firm and clear as to give her almost a veritable realization of its glory.

As to her present environment, she seemed perfectly contented and happy, while not rich in this world's goods, she said she has the best of neighbors and the kindest of friends, some of whom call on her each day to see that her needs are all provided for.

My words here but very dimly depict the glories and beauty of this future life as viewed by my new found friend, but the words of her poem very clearly pictures them as seen by her mental or spiritual vision, and the tone of her voice, as she recited the poem, seemed to emphasize her faith in its eventual realization in a manner that must have far exceeded all the joys of youth as she had experienced them in her earlier life. And so, why dread "old age"?

Since the little incident which I have so poorly pictured in the above paragraphs occurred, I have been doing quite a bit of cogitation in regard to the matter of "old age," and it occurs that as I stand on the street corner and note those about me who have passed the meridian of life, and speak with them, I do not bear any of them expressing any dread or horror at their accumulation of years, nor any forebodings regarding their future, but as a rule they are among the most cheerful of all those with whom I come in contact. They seem to have outlived and passed, the worries that have beset them in their earlier periods of life and now have naught to do but enjoy the days as they come and go.

I have always been fond of older people, even during my boyhood, and as I recall those days, I do not recall a single one of these older men that I did not enjoy being with after I became sixteen and on. Their sons were my playmates and chums, but I could have practically as much fun with their elders as with them, and no boy enjoyed his boy chums better than I did mine. I will relate just one occasion to illustrate my chumminess with older men, when I was, perhaps fifteen.

We boys had a custom of going on what we called a "shooting" on each New Year's Eve, and we had strolled at the home of this older gentleman, had enjoyed our treat and were ready to start on and as we passed my dear old friend called "Jack" held a minute, and I did so. He told me that I could easily overtake the others, and that I should spend a few minutes with him, and he went to the kitchen and returned with a large pitcher of sparkling homemade cider, and poured each of us a glass full, and we drank to each other's health, and the cider was at that sparkling stage when cider is at its best, and it sure was good, and I enjoyed and appreciated it. Then, also the girls of the family returned to the living room, and when we had extended to each other the compliments of the season, that is "A Happy New Year," I—but, somehow, the attractions of the "shooting" had lost most of its "draw" for me—but I went on nevertheless and soon overtook the other boys. No, I did not tell them why I had lingered. That would have entirely spoiled the pleasant remembrances of the affair.

Help The Girl Scouts Volunteer As Leader

Do you enjoy meeting new people? Have a hobby. Like the outdoors? Why not combine all these—and become a Girl Scout leader?

We are asking every woman, who likes to work with young people, to give some of her time. We need men volunteers, too. We need them to help us in Scout Committees and Councils, as program consultants and financial advisers. We offer no pay, but the rewards are rich in deed, as those of us, in the movement, can tell you.

There's a warm glow that comes from seeing girls of many different backgrounds, form friendships lasting into maturity. Don't be shy about volunteering—if you never led a group, we have leadership training courses.

This is National Girl Scout Week, from October 31st to November 6th, inclusive—seven service days. October 31st is also the birthday of Julla Low, founder of Girl Scouts.

Final Rites Held For Mrs. Meeks

Mrs. Nora Jane Meeks was born October 28th, 1876, near Viola, Tenn. She was married to John C. Berry on January 9, 1896, at Trenton, Texas.

They came to Farmer County in 1929. Having lived in different communities, they made many friends throughout this part of the county. They were living with a son, N. A. Berry, when Mr. Berry passed away in December, 1944. Mrs. Berry has continued to live with her daughters, Mrs. Willis Parker and Mrs. Clarence Ashcraft, since that time.

At the early age of ten years, she was converted and joined the Presbyterian Church. She was ever loyal to her church and her God. Though she has been an invalid most of the time for the past five years, she has been steadfast in her faith in God, and has not complained, in spite of her burdens. She has always had her pastors to pray with her when they would come to visit her. After Mr. Berry passed away she longed to be with him and her Saviour. She did not want to become a burden on any one.

She leaves to cherish her memory—many friends who have come to love and appreciate her through the years. Also her children, 3 sons and 2 daughters: A. N. Berry, Leonard; Mrs. Willis Parker and Mrs. Clarence Ashcraft; of Friona; E. A. Berry, Canyon; Noel Berry, Lubbock. Also a host of grandchildren and great grandchildren. She was preceded in death by two small children: Betty and Mary Dell.

C-C Meeting Has Poor Attendance

The Friona Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture meeting that was held Monday night was only fairly well attended, but a deep interest was displayed by those present.

Many matters of interest were discussed by the members in attendance, which is proof evident that the men of the organization are not all asleep and some very important matters and doubts may be expected to come to the front at no distant future.

Hospital Meeting Called Tuesday

The Annual Business Meeting of the Farmer County Community Hospital will be held in the Grade School auditorium on Tuesday night of next week, November 8th at 8:00 o'clock.

This is the regular annual meeting for the purpose of hearing reports from the various departments and the election of officers, if any are due to be elected.

Friona's New Grain Elevators Lend Pictures Of Prosperity To Growing Community

Santa Fe Grain Company
The Santa Fe Grain company was organized early in the month of January, 1916, by George T. Courtright and W. H. Warren, and the contract for the first elevator to be erected in Friona was let on the 27th day of that same month and year.

Work on the erection of the elevator was begun shortly afterwards and it was completed and ready for business before harvest of that year.

During the first few years of the service of this elevator, several men owned half or whole interests in the property and the business including—other than the original owners—R. G. Clinin, George Mauer, John Staley, John M. Teague, and another whose name the writer cannot recall. The total ownership finally came into the hands of its present owners, Mr. Leo Potishman and his associates. Previous to the erection of this first small elevator, the only grain elevator at Friona was a scoop shovel.

Since M. Potishman took over the ownership of the business, the plant and equipment has gradually been expanded as the business of the company demanded, until its present culmination with the large new elevator shown above.

This new elevator, the construction of which is concrete throughout, with steel reinforcement, contains 12 circular bins each 17 feet in diameter, and 7 star bins, all reaching a height of 120 feet, with a head house 28 feet high, making a total of 148 feet in height.

This elevator is fully equipped with the most modern machinery for the rapid, safe and economical handling of the grain, which equipment includes conveyor belts for the moving of the grain from pit to the bins and for loading cars, bucket elevators are used. The most modern of weighing and dumping equipment is also installed.

As to storage capacity, in addition to the 12 bins of the new elevator, the plant contains six large steel bins, holding a total of 126,000 bushels and also two older and smaller elevators making in all 50 bins with a total capacity of 515,000 bushels.

G. (Preach) Cranfill, vice-president of the company, is general man-trucks to be completely emptied and is ably assisted in the weighing, testing and bookkeeping part of the business by J. C. Wilkinson and Jack Tedford.

Friona Wheat Growers, Inc.
The Friona Wheat Growers, Inc. came into existence some time during the later "twenties" and begun operations by the purchase of the small elevator then owned and operated by John Gischler & Son. For a few years it was operated as a member of the co-operative elevator pool, and the present organization was formed and named about the year 1934.

It is under the operation and management of managers appointed by directors of the organization, with Arthur Drake as its present very efficient manager, and he is assisted by Roy Lee Johnson as bookkeeper.

The small elevator purchased was soon supplemented by a much larger building and more modern equipment, and its storage capacity was enlarged some years ago by the addition of several large storage bins, but it was only a matter of a few years until this added capacity was far insufficient to handle the ever increasing business of the organization, and a new, large, modern building of concrete and steel construction was erected during the past spring and summer.

This new structure, which is one of the largest of its kind in the Texas Panhandle, contains 14 round bins, each of 20-foot diameter, and 5 star and 11 overhead bins. The height of the main structure is 120 feet, with a head house 68 feet in height on top, making a total height of 188 feet. The excavation beneath the super structure is 15 feet deep.

Belt conveyors are used throughout the building for the filling and emptying of bins.

A large loading scale with a capacity of one car load, is built in the top of the elevator, which completely loads one railroad box car at one dump, and is strictly modern automatic recording scales are used at the buying end of the business.

Two dumps are installed in the driveway of the building, one for dumping small trucks and the other for dumping the long 35-foot trucks. This equipment enables these long without the aid of man power. The building is also equipped with ventilating shafts and blowers for keeping the structure free of dust. All machinery is operated by electric power.

This large grain handling concern is co-operative in its form of operation and government, and is owned by over 600 members.

The above pictures give a fairly good idea of the size and construction of Friona's two new grain elevators, that were erected during the past spring and early summer, by the Santa Fe Grain Company and the Friona Wheat Growers, Inc. a very brief history of which are given in the following stories.

Amarillo Candidate For State School Board Is Endorsed By Supt. Caffey

By SUPERINTENDENT CAFFEY

The November 8 election is one of the most important in the history of Texas as far as the public schools are concerned. The 21-member State School Board, as provided by the Gilmer-Aiken Laws, will be elected. This Board will set up the State's administrative department of public schools.

A. R. "Dick" Bivins, of Amarillo, a candidate for the Board from the 18th Congressional District, has been an advocate of the Gilmer-Aiken Laws since they were first proposed. "These laws," he said, "form a strong framework for the efficient reorganization of our public schools. They will make it possible for the small district to have as good schools and as good teachers as the large districts. The basic purpose of the law is that of bringing equality in education for all the school age children of Texas. The proper administration of these laws will develop the teaching profession as a leading one in our State. It will assure teachers of adequate pay and assure every district of a good school."

Mr. Bivins served many years on the Amarillo School Board. He has studied all phases of the public school problem. He resigned from the Amarillo Board to become a candidate for the State Board. He has made no campaign, but has been endorsed by a vast majority of school leaders in the district. "I feel that this is an office for which a man should not campaign," he said. "It pays nothing and requires a lot of time and work. Campaigning for such an office could very easily be made to appear as if a man had ulterior motives. My only motive is to do all I can for the public schools. I have offered my services on that basis."

Legion And Auxiliary Near Contest Deadline

There will be a meeting of the Legion and Auxiliary on Monday, Nov. 7th, to decide how many members each side has to that date.

Our quota is 95 for this year, and to the best of all indications we will have more than that.

Letter From Les

The letter which the Star will quote here is from Lee Spring, who is one of Friona's most popular young men, and, therefore, well and favorably known by—may we say—all the people of Friona and surrounding communities. He is the youngest son of two of Friona's most highly esteemed citizens, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Spring.

Lee is in attendance at a medical college at Galveston, preparing himself to become one of the state's most dependable M.D.'s and we all know Lee well enough to know whatever he plans for himself he will most surely carry out, and it was quite a temptation to not so identify him in the above caption, for his friend may just as well begin to accustom themselves to using his professional title in front of his name or the abbreviation following it. Here is his letter.

Collision Victims Reported Improving

Connie Stone, Mrs. Jerry Pate and "Bump" Phillips, the parties who escaped death in the car pickup collision that occurred 3 miles east of Friona on the forenoon of Thursday last week, October 27th, and who are patients at the Farmer County Community Hospital, are reported as making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

China's Religions Are Topic For Study Club

Melba Miller acted as president at the meeting of the Modern Study Club Tuesday night. After a short business session the program was opened with a piano solo by Maurine Dunn, entitled "Saved by Grace." The subject for discussion was "China's Three Religions." Hinduism was discussed by Decima Beene, Confucianism by Doris Boggess and Buddhism by Wilma Jones.

Tom Connally Makes Peace Offering To Offended Colleagues In Senate

By DON WHITEHEAD
Washington, (AP) — Texas' Tom Connally has offered the olive branch of peace to fellow senators scarred by the whip of Connally's sarcasm during debates over American Foreign Policy.

It's an unusual gesture for the old-school lawmaker who generally uses barbed anger, scorn and ridicule like a shillelagh, without totting up the score in wounded pride.

But this time Connally can afford the peace move. As chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he has won every battle of the session for the administration's foreign program.

First it was the $3,778,000,000 (B) foreign recovery program. Then the North Atlantic Treaty. And finally the $1,314,010,000 (B) program to arm friendly nations against communism.

In these, three history-making moves in American Policy, Connally carried the ball for the administration in the Senate.

"In prosecuting and advancing this program," Connally said, "I have had of necessity to differ with some Senators. But the words were not personal. I merely intended to accomplish our objectives and bring the program to a successful issue."

That's going a long way for Tom Connally.

He doesn't belong to the suave and polished school of diplomacy. Connally prosecutes foreign policy in the same direct manner he used to handle cases as a young attorney in Texas.

His courtroom style of oratory and questioning witnesses hasn't changed much over the years, his friends say. He's just improved on the technique.

When former Vice President Henry Wallace appeared before the foreign relations committee to oppose the Atlantic Treaty, he fell victim to a Connally tactic which took much of the steam out of his testimony.

At one point in the hearing, Wallace said earnestly: "If you ratify this treaty, you will turn Russia into a wild, cornered beast..."

Connally's head came up and he looked over his shell-rimmed glasses. "What's that about cornered beef? What's cornered beef got to do with this treaty?"

The audience chuckled. The drama evaporated.

At another point, a distinguished witness got a Connally build-up and then quick deflation.

After the witness testified, Connally said: "You have done a great service. We are pleased to hear from a man of your distinction, integrity, high-mindedness—" Connally paused—"and all that stuff. That's all."

Connally makes it clear he doesn't have much use for what he calls the "striped britches" school of diplomacy.

A good example of this came when Senator Donnell (R-Mo.) challenged the qualifications of Mrs. Perle Meza to be U. S. Minister to Luxembourg. Donnell's argument was that Mrs. Meza's fame as Washington's top-ranking hostess and No. 1 party-giver did not necessarily give her the background to be a diplomat.

Connally came charging to Mrs. Meza's defense. And with edged sarcasm he blasted at Donnell.

"Does the senator know that Luxembourg is a Grand Duchy? And it is ruled by a Grand Duchess—a female—a woman, if you please. I suppose the senator would prefer we send someone in striped britches."

Connally is skilled in the use of the oratorical broad-axe as well as the rapier in promoting the administration's foreign programs. When a group of Republican-led Senators proposed a China-aid program, Connally saw it as a political move to embarrass the administration. And he set out to cut it down. Perhaps more than anyone else, the Texas blocked a China-aid proposal which could have meant U. S. support for Chiang Kai-shek.

In the debate, Connally bluntly accused Chiang of deserting his people and "abandoning" to the Communists a $138,000,000 (M) gold hoard that rightfully belonged to the Nationalist Government. He shouted against pouring any more aid "into rat holes, at the bottom of which you will find Chiang Kai-shek."

A China-aid amendment was tacked onto the Foreign Arms Bill, but it was a watered-down version that gave the president the authority to spend $73,000,000 (M) in the "China area" only if he chooses.

The Chinese Embassy issued a denial that Chiang had taken the gold for his personal use. And some Senators were critical of Connally's attack on Chiang.

The next day Connally arose on the senate floor and with mock solemnity apologized for his remarks about Chiang.

"I was wrong when I said he took $138,000,000 (M)," Connally began. "I now find that he took $300,000,000 (M)."

Connally has been helping to shape American Foreign Policy now for more than 30 years. He was elected to the House in 1914, and John Nance Garner—then a house member and later Vice President—put him on the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Connally's first vote was for war with Germany.

He came to the Senate in 1928 and became chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1941.

And, barring any political upsets in party control of the senate, Connally will be around for a good many more years.

As one senator put it: "There's nothing wrong with Tom that a good fight won't cure."

Be Sure Pork Will Pass Thorough Cooking Test

Austin, Texas — "Please pass the pork" is a familiar sentence around many dinner tables these days, as cold weather approaches. A juicy roast pork or pork chops are dishes that can't be beat, according to many connoisseurs of meat. However, pork can be dangerous if it isn't cooked long enough. So, be sure that pork passes the test of thorough cooking before you put it on the table. Otherwise, trichinosis may result, said Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

Trichinosis is a big word, but the disease is easy to prevent. All you need to do is cook the meat until the pink color turns to white. When the change color occurs, the meat is safe to eat. Farmers who raise hogs for sale as meat, and who feed them garbage, should cook the garbage first, or the meat may become contaminated. If butchered pork is stored at a temperature of five degrees above zero, Fahrenheit, for 20 days, trichinosis parasites should die, if there are any.

If a person eats a pork chop, for example, that contains trichinae, they are swallowed in the form of tiny capsules. In the intestines these capsules develop and discharge minute worms which are carried by the bloodstream to various parts of the body — settling in muscles, where after a period of time they become calcified and die.

What are the symptoms of trichinosis? Stomach upsets and muscular pains, a feeling of chilliness, sore throat, and sometimes considerable fever, are some of the signs. An acute attack of the illness lasts about one or two weeks. The disease has a low death rate, but recovery is fairly slow.

Amateur Boxing In Clovis Monday

The following letter has been received at the Star office, from Ralph Schultz, Publicity Chairman of the Clovis 20-30 Club. The letter reads as follows:

CLOVIS, N. M., Nov. 1, 1949.
 Dear Sir:
 Would appreciate it very much if you could announce that, on Monday, November 7th, there will be an amateur Boxing Match at the Clovis Grand Armory. The Clovis Amateur Boxing Team will meet the Amarillo, Texas, Amateur team. There will be 12 bouts, plus one exhibition bout, on the program. This match is being sponsored by the 20-30 Club of Clovis. I wish to thank you in advance.
 Sincerely yours,
 Ralph Schultz.

Basketball Workouts Scheduled Thursdays

 The practice night is Thursday night of each week, at 7:00 o'clock. Come and bring someone with you.

Bazaar, Chicken Dinner Scheduled Tuesday Night

The ladies of the Congregational Ladies Aid, announce that they will hold their annual chicken dinner and bazaar in the basement of the church building on next Tuesday, November 8th, and will serve dinner from eleven a. m. until two o'clock p. m. The fare will be $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for children.
 They will have also, their usual assortment of nice things for Christmas presents or presents for any other day.

Cal Farley Will Speak To Friona Lions Club

CAL FARLEY
 Cal Farley will make another effort to speak in Friona. Mr. Farley was billed to speak here several weeks ago, but something happened that he was unable to meet that appointment, so he is going to speak at the Lions Club meeting here on Thursday night, November 10th.
 Mr. Farley came to Amarillo 22 years ago, and became interested in youth and was leader in establishing Maverick Boys Club here in 1930, and Boys Ranch, "Old Tascosa," of which he is president. He started with ten boys and now more than 100 boys are being given a chance to become good citizens.

Farm Bureau Offers Blue Cross Again

Raymond Euler, Service Representative for Farmer County Farm Bureau says that applications for new Blue Cross-Blue Shield members will be accepted from November 10 to December 10. During this thirty day period, anyone interested in health and hospital protection may make application by calling at the Farm Bureau Office in person, or writing to Box 522, Friona, Farmer County Community Hospital reports that Blue Cross-Blue Shield has paid $1,534.75 in hospital and doctor bills for members since April 1, this year, when Farm Bureau first offered this service to its members in this county.

The rural telephone bill, which Farm Bureau has been working for was passed by Congress this week. The bill to tax exported natural gas for the purpose of building rural roads and maintaining them without the burden of local tax increases is one of the major issues supported by Texas State Farm Bureau this year. If enough members are obtained by the time the Legislature convenes, it is believed that this measure will be approved. Anyone interested in this subject is invited to discuss it with Farm Bureau men, who will be glad to give all information available on it.

School Carnival Rated Success By Attendance

The School Carnival held here last Saturday night, sponsored by the Friona P-TA is spoken of by all as a decided success, both socially and financially.

The crowd in attendance, was immense and all booths were most liberally patronized.

The leading feature of the program, was "The Womanless Wedding," in which no woman appeared in the cast—not even the bride was a woman. Many favorable comments are being heard regarding the complimentary manner in which the characters display their parts.

Texas Railroad Commission Handles Oil Industry And Transportation

By MAC ROY RASOR
 Austin, Tex., (AP)—Throughout Texas' mighty petroleum empire, oil flows or stops at the beckoning of three men.
 They compose the state's important regulatory railroad commission—police, judge, jury, advisor and boss over every ounce of Texas' "flowing gold" and those who make it flow. Sometimes their decisions wind up in the courts.
 Young, oil-experienced William J. (Bill) Murray, Jr., heads the elective body as chairman. Ernest O. Thompson and Olin Culberson, both of whom have also served as chairmen, complete the membership.
 Oil is only one of the big businesses they oversee. By statute, they have control as well over operation in Texas of railroads, gas production and gas utilities, liquefied petroleum gas, the motor bus and the trucking business.

The body is administrative, legislative in a sense, and quasi-judicial. It administers the laws passed by the legislature. It makes the rules and regulations empowered to it by the legislature. It holds public hearings and decides questions of fact and law related to any of its duties.
 For the mammoth job assigned to it, the commission has divided itself into four operating divisions staffed by scores of technical and clerical assistants:

1. The main office and rate division administers laws relating to railroads in Texas; determines fares, rates, and charges for all common carriers except pipelines; holds hearings ranging in scope from individual wells to statewide permissive crude oil production; acts with the Interstate Commerce Commission in joint hearing involving southwest rates; and keeps the fiscal records for all divisions of the commission.

2. The oil and gas division administers the laws relating to conservation and prevention of physical waste of crude oil and gas, and the laws relating to pipelines as common carriers, and maintains statistical and accounting records.

3. The gas utilities division administers the laws relating to the operation of gas utilities and the liquefied petroleum gas industry, collects specified taxes and fees, and maintains statistical and accounting records.

4. The motor transportation division administers laws relating to the transporting of passengers and freight for hire on the state highways; collects specified fees and taxes, and also maintains statistical and accounting records.

Besides its Austin headquarters, the commission maintains district offices at Abilene, Corpus Christi, Houston, Kilgore, Midland, Mount Pleasant, Palestine, Pampa, San Antonio and Wichita Falls.

Only since 1917 has the commission been under legislative mandate to administer the state's oil and gas conservation laws. Before that, the commission from its creation in 1891 had been primarily concerned only with regulation of railroads.

The oil industry itself pays the expenses for its regulation by the commission. A tax of 2/10ths of one cent per barrel is levied on all crude petroleum produced within the state for the "oil and gas enforcement fund" which is paid into the state treasury. The operating expenses of the oil and gas division (and other agencies) are appropriated by the legislature to be paid from this fund. All excess balances in the "oil and gas enforcement fund" finally revert to the state's general revenue fund.

Well over half the million-dollar-a-year cost of operating the Railroad Commission comes in the oil and gas division.

Commissioners are elected for six-year-terms, one at each general election every two years so that terms overlap. Their annual salaries were raised to $10,000 each by the last legislature.

Murray's term which he inherited first by appointment of the late Gov. Beauford H. Jester when Jester left the commission for the governor's office and later by election, ends in January, 1951. Culberson's term runs to January, 1953 and Thompson's lasts until January, 1955.

Murray, 34, came to the commission from a background of oil and gas fields. He was born at Coleman; educated in Texas public schools, Hardin-Simmons University and the University of Texas; and taught University of Texas courses in petroleum engineering before he left in 1937 with both a bachelor's and master's degree in petroleum engineering.

He had worked in the fields as a tool dresser, a geologist and lease superintendent, did consulting work, served as chief enforcement engineer for the commission's oil and gas division, and worked as federal conservation engineer over six states before he came to the Railroad Commission as a member.

Off duty, Murray and wife, Jo, like to fish both fresh and salt waters. They have three children, all girls.

Thompson came to the Railroad Commission by appointment to succeed Gov. Pat M. Neff in 1932 and has been elected continuously ever since. He has gained international recognition as a petroleum authority and was once the late President Roosevelt's personal representative to the World Petroleum Congress.

A native Texan, he was reared in Hill County and educated at Culberson's Select School at Hillboro. He is former Hill county clerk and county judge, a former secretary of the County Judges Association and for 25 years was secretary of the Volunteer Firemen's Association.
 Still affectionally called "judge," Commissioner Culberson always has an anecdote and a chuckle for anyone with time to listen.

Few Texans' careers have been more colorful than Thompson's. Born at Alford 57 years ago, the red-haired Irishman quickly proved himself a dynamo of energy and automobile business employing four persons by the time he finished high school.

He got his law degree from the University of Texas and then served in World War I where he won the rank and title of "colonel" that has stuck with him 'til even now when his actual rank is lieutenant general as commanding officer of the Texas National Guard.

Word was received here Sunday, of the death of Mrs. L. B. Fawver, of Floydada. Mrs. Fawver was a sister of our fellow citizen, Leon Hart, who lives a mile and a half north of Friona.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Grace Hart and children, Roy, Wanda and Elda, drove down to Floydada, Monday to attend the funeral.

In Memory Of Mrs. Nora Berry

Last Wednesday, Oct. 26, our hearts were saddened by the death of our darling mother, Mrs. Nora Berry. For many years she made our lives and homes so happy, and now we are left so sad. We miss the smiles and the sunshine of her dear face. We miss the counsels, oh, we miss thee in every place. We loved you so much, dear mother, No one could lessen our pain, Children, grandchildren and friends tried

To keep our mother again, But Jesus came so quickly, And took our darling away.

Our own sweet mother, to heaven, To brighten and pave the way.

We tried to keep you, darling, But Jesus sent an angel here To take sweet, sweet mother.

And make our way more clear, So patient, loving and gentle, Our mother we loved so well, We will miss thee, dear darling, More than anyone can tell.

Our mother has left us, We will hunger, wait and long, Till Jesus sends her spirit, To guide us safely home.

Stay dearer mother, thy heart was so pure, Too noble, too gentle for earth, Our Father has called you to Him, we are sure.
