Bo' Burns, Martha Raye More in Laugh Hit 'Waikiki Wedding'

his campaign Crosby takes it upon himself to make Waikiki really glamorous, which he does with a vengeance. He falls in love with Miss Ross in the process and when she discovers that he has tricked her she is heartbroken. Then Crosby has to win her back all over again and the way in which he does this furnishes some genuine high comedy. A second romance between Burns and Miss Raye, runs thru the picture.

Frank Tuttle directed "Waikiki Wedding." There is a native wedding ceremony in it which is one of the finest things ever captured by the camera. Songs you'll hear and later be whistling are "Blue Hawaii," "Sweet is the Word for You," "In a Little Hula Heaven" and "Okolehao."

The supporting cast includes several of the screen's most prominent players.

Claudette Colbert Fred MacMurray In New Romance

The romance of a Puritan maid and a dashing Virginia cavalier in old Salem town, brings Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray together again in "Maid of Salem," a gripping story which will be shown at the Princess Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, June 16 and 17. This popular pair who scored in the "Gilded Lily," and then triumphed again as the scrappy couple in "A Bride Comes Home," enact their latest love story in the period of American history when the famous witchcraft scare of 1692 broke out in Boston, spread to adjoining colonies and, before it was over, was responsible for the execution of nineteen innocent women who were charged with being in league with the devil.

In "Maid of Salem" Miss Colbert is seen with a handsome stranger by some children. After she practices a gavotte step by herself and jocularly tells a boy who watches her that she "dancing with a man." A short while later the witchcraft hysteria begins. Fear-stricken persons begin to remember strange things their neighbors did and this is used as evidence that the latter are "bewitched." When Miss Colbert is arrested and charged with witchcraft, the stranger in the wood and the "dancing with a man" episode is recalled and she is convicted on this testimony.

When the stranger, MacMurray appears in the flesh and proves that he is a very human and romantic young man and not the devil at all, the folly of the witch hunt is suddenly borne upon the populace and the scare dies away as suddenly as it appeared.

The film romance is directed by Frank Lloyd the only director who won the coveted Academy Award three times, and is based on actual occurrences in Salem in 1692.

The huge supporting cast includes Harvey Stephens, Louise Dresser, Bonnie Bartlett, E. E. Clive, Gale Sondergaard and a host of others. It is lavishly and beautifully produced, with the entire village of old Salem, as it existed in 1692 recreated from old maps and charts.

To Offer Awards For Beautifying Service Stations

Details of a statewide highway beautification program in which service stations along state or federal highways will compete for an award for the most attractive station were announced last week by the State Highway Department, Landscaping Division, through the local committee on highway beautification.

Handsomely designed emblems of merit will be awarded winning stations in two divisions in each Texas county. Company operated and privately owned stations will compete in separate groups. The winner in each group will receive the award.

In launching the contest it was announced that its purpose "was to promote greater comfort for the traveler and to further a statewide appreciation of beauty and cleanliness along the highways of the state. The slogan, 'Clear away all unsightliness in Texas,' depends for its success on the commercial establishments along the public thoroughfares. Service station operators should realize the importance of the appearance of their premises in order that they may increase their business, and they should be induced to become leaders in this clean-up campaign."

Service stations will be judged on the following points: General appearance, 10 points; cleanliness of rest rooms, 10; neatness of the premises, 10; absence of unnecessary and unsightly signs, 20; maintenance of building, 10; generous distance between stations and pavement, 30; planting of flowers, shrubs, etc., 10.

Know Texas

(T. S. C. W. Feature Service)
Denton, Tex., Summer travelers who feel the call of the "wide open spaces" must, of course, look to the West to find a vacation spot. Texas' Panhandle — painted with the glowing colors of its cowboy legends, offers a varied bill of fare to visitors.

Probably the most inclusive route through the Northwest section of the state begins at Fort Worth on Federal highways Nos. 81 and 370, passes on through Wichita Falls to Amarillo. After a circle of the Panhandle it turns south through Plainview and to Lubbock.

Remains of ancient Indian cultures are glimpsed by the tourists in the interesting old towns of Tascosa and Old Mobeetie up in the eastern corner. Then, by traveling along the scenic Canadian river and southward he will come upon the land which formed the well-known XIT ranch, a 3,000,000-acre tract which was paid for the building of the state capitol. Just a remnant now remains.

Another large tract is the Goodnight ranch in the lower Palo Duro Valley southeast of Amarillo. Nearby is a state park of 15,000 acres, and also a museum of relics collected by the Panhandle Historical Society.

Although most of the great old ranches are being replaced by fields of wheat and cotton, and more recently by oil and gas fields, between the high plains and Fort Worth are four ranches large enough to deserve mention: Spur, 6666, Matador and Waggoner. In the nearby towns rodeos are held throughout the summer.

The territory of most historical importance is around Albany, Throckmorton, and Graham, where Forts Richardson, Balnap and Griffin are located. These are among the most famous of the old frontier forts.

Column Right—

A Missouri paper reporting a birthday party, wound up with the following: "There sat grandpa and the birthday cake, beautifully lit up."

Wholesale poisoning of dogs is reported in Del Rio. In our time we've known of a million dogs—purebred, midding, and mongrel—to be poisoned, but the nearest solution ever reached as to who did the poisoning was a mere suspicion. It seems to be in the same class as Mark Twain's weather: lots of talk about it, but no one ever does anything about it.

But that wisecrack of Mark Twain has now fallen by the way side. They are doing something about the weather. If you want proof, just ride in the modern trains, or stop at the high priced hotels. Air conditioning has taken Old Sol to a cleaning. And in most theatres today, where the control system has not yet been mastered, you'll need an overcoat on the inside when the mercury outside is butting its head against the dome of the thermometer.

A big shot in industry persistently refused to take a rest on the grounds that the business couldn't get along without him. One day a sombre vehicle backed up to his door, and he was whisked away for a long rest. The business never even slowed up, and in a few weeks he was forgotten.

That the old man in nightgown, with a scythe plays no favorites is proven in the death recently of John D. Rockefeller, and this week of Jean Harlow. The one had lived his span and was half way through another; the other, in the prime of youth, pretty, popular and wealthy. Theatre-goers will miss this glamorous star, for she was double entertainment—pretty to look at, and a superb actress.

Hearing that the sun would be in eclipse Tuesday, we watched for it most of the day, and was finally rewarded when it dropped behind the western hills, headed in the general direction of Alpine.

Sunday, the 20th, is Father's Day. We hear lots of criticism about commercializing the special days. But, being a father, we don't concur, and hope we'll get some sox this year, as we have only 22 pairs left since the deluge at Christmas time.

Women's hats are one of life's mysteries. A short time ago they wore a dinky little thing plastered over one eye. Being able to see only on one side they kept stubbing their toes against rocks on the other side. Now they've got widespread, sharp-domed Think hats, which are impossible to keep on their heads in the gentlest breeze. The other day we were walking behind a girl wearing one. We were whistling; she was frantically clawing at the hat. Finally she said "I wish you would quit that whistling, so I can keep this hat on."

"Today's drivers don't care about safety," states the Texas Weekly. About the truest remark we've heard on a situation that is becoming appalling. Two out of every five drivers today are potential suicides or murderers. The other day down the street of our fair town thundered a car, passed another at the intersection of the highway, finally perked with the front wheels on the sidewalk. Thinking there was an emergency we strolled over, and the driver was eating a pop-sicle—which food fitted in admirably with his brain capacity.

FORD "60" OWNERS REPORT
22-27 MILES PER GALLON

The 60-horsepower Ford V-8 is writing remarkable mileage records on American roads. Private owners and fleet operators alike report averages of from 22 to 27 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

You can fill the tank of your Ford "60" and drive all day — 300 to 400 miles — without stopping again for fuel. Besides costing less to run than any Ford car ever built, it sells at the lowest Ford price in years. That's double economy!

The "60" delivers V-8 smoothness and quiet at speeds up to 70 miles an hour. It is built into the same roomy body as the famous "85"—with the same modern features of comfort and dependability that make the 1937 Ford V-8 unquestionably THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD.

Ford V-8 "60"

FORD V-8 PRICES BEGIN AT $529 at Dealership. Transportation charge. State and Federal taxes.

"STREAM OF DEATH"

By Floyd Gibbons

MAURICE DUNFORD of Chicago, is today's distinguished adventurer, and it was another man's yarn in this same column that prompted Maury to send in his own story.

"I was reading Bill Behm's story about holding on to a railroad car and not daring to turn loose," he says, "and it reminded me of the time I would have given almost anything if I could have let go of what I had hold of."

It was just a common nozzle on a fire hose that Maury had hold of. Yet it produced the strangest kind of an accident. That nozzle was spouting water at a blaze. And down the length of that stream of water the burning house struck right back at Maury and almost wrote "curtains" at the end of a promising career.

Yes, it was a strange accident, but Maury says it's liable to happen any day in the life of a city fireman.

Maury wasn't a city fireman. He was a volunteer fire fighter and "smoke eater" in the little town of Russellville, Ark., in 1929, when his adventure happened. It was August 13—a quiet, warm, summer afternoon—in the little town that nestled in a valley at the foot of the Ozarks close to the banks of the Arkansas river. Every one was dozing and taking life easy, but suddenly the fire siren let out a shrieking blast that brought the whole town to life.

Maury made a rush for the station. Firemen from all over town were running to the same point. They poured into the building and the big truck rolled out even before the sound of the siren had died away.

The burning building was only two blocks from the fire house. It was a small dwelling and the fire was in the attic. Maury says that smoke was pouring from under every shingle. He grabbed a line from a coupling and went around to the back of the house looking for an opening through which to get to the fire. Then, seeing no opening, he went into the house, dragged the hose up through a small trap door in the ceiling, and crawled with it into the attic.

In the Flooded Attic
"The heat and smoke was terrific," he says. "I started creeping forward so I could get at the seat of the blaze. Water was now belching through the nozzle in my hands, and the boys outside had found a window through which they were playing the other hose. The water from that hose was drenching me, but it was doing little toward putting out the fire."

The little attic was fairly flooded with water now. What's more, that water was hot. "It felt like it was cooking my knees," says Maury, "for I was kneeling in it, between the sills, with my head bent down to my chest to keep as much smoke out of my lungs as possible."

And then it happened. He felt as if something had grabbed him all at once. He tried to look around—and found he couldn't. He simply couldn't move a muscle.

His whole body was stiff. It wasn't exactly trembling, but it felt to Maury as if something was trembling inside of him, giving him the shaking up of his life. All at once he realized what it was. An electric shock.

Deadly Stream of Electricity
Where was the shock coming from? He had stepped on no wires. There wasn't any wiring within ten feet of him. It took Maury a minute or two to figure that out. The hose! That stream of water had found a bare electric wire somewhere back there in the smoke and flame. The electricity was traveling down the stream to the nozzle, and Maury was gripping that nozzle with both hands. His wet clothes and the water-soaked floor were completing the hook-up that was sending the voltage through his body.

He tried to move the hose—divert the stream of water away from that wire—but he couldn't budge an inch. He tried to drop the nozzle, but for the life of him he couldn't let go of it. He tried to use his voice—and that worked. Somehow, his vocal cords were not paralyzed by the flow of electricity, and he shouted at the top of his lungs. "Shut off the juice," he was yelling. But he didn't think any one could hear him over the bedlam and confusion of sounds that came up from below.

"The pain was getting terrible," he says. "Every joint—every muscle—every bone in my body was aching. Smoke was choking—blinding me. I was held there by that shock, as immovable as if I had been chained there. Was I going to stand there until the fire crept over and burned me alive? Or would I succumb to the shocks of the electricity before the fire reached me?"

Someone Turned It Off in Time
Maury knew that even house current could kill a man under the proper conditions, and he was sure that current would kill him if he held on long enough. The pain was getting worse by the minute. He felt as if he were about to lose consciousness, but he fought the giddy feeling that was making his head spin round and round. Once he let go of himself—well—he knew that would be the end.

And then all of a sudden Maury felt his body relax. He tried to move—found that he could—and turned the nozzle upward. Some one downstairs had pulled the main switch, shutting off all the current in the building. And he'd done it just in time to save Maury from collapse—and probably from death.

Says he: "The force of the upturned stream of water battered through the roof. Shingles went flying. Sunshine came pouring in. And I felt like a million dollars!"

Good Comedy "As Good as Married" Coming Monday

The New Universal's brilliant comedy drama, "As Good as Married," the story of a marriage for convenience, comes to the Princess Monday, June 14 for one night only.

It is delightful comedy and a worthy successor to such hits as "My Man Godfrey," "When Love is Young," and "Three Smart Girls." It sparkles from the first scene to the last.

The main situation is novel, intriguing and amusing. John Boles is a successful architect harrassed by the demands of gold digging girls and income tax collectors, who threaten to strip him of all his earnings. So what does he do but propose marriage to his secretary, played by Doris Nolan, who takes him up on it because she happens to be in love with him.

The ensuing complications will send you into inner handspings of mirth and amusement.

And you cannot see this picture without being struck by the beauty of the sets. They fairly take your breath. According to the official credits they were designed by John Harkrider, the New Universal's art director, and whose sets in that studio's super-musical "Top of the Town" have placed him at the head of the list of Hollywood set designers. The sets in "As Good as Married" are the very last word in interior decoration. You can only sit and marvel at them.

"As oGod As Married" is sure-fire entertainment.
