WITH OUR NEIGHBORS

Fort Stockton Pioneer—John M. Webster, Fort Stockton director of Pacific Air School, Ltd., announced Thursday that plans were taking rapid shape for opening in May of refresher courses for the civilian flying instructors who will train army flying cadets at the Fort Stockton school.

Monahans News—An average of $23 per hundred pounds was paid for seventeen 4-H club calves in the auction sales following the third annual Pecos Valley Livestock Show here Saturday. This figure fell below that of last year when an average of $27.83 was paid for eleven calves, but the price was unusually good for the number of animals being sold.

Fort Stockton Pioneer—Defense housing area designation for Fort Stockton is the goal toward which local efforts are directed this week, with the Ft. Stockton City Council having taken steps this week to set up a restricted building district in the northwest part of town in which to build the proposed 75 or more homes expected to be required for civilian employees and army officer personnel at the Pacific Air School, Ltd.

Menard News—Petitions bearing the signatures of one hundred and fifty-two Menard County property owners, asking for an election to decide whether $30,000 in bonds shall be issued for road improvement, were laid before the commissioners' court this week. Only fifty names are required by law before such an election can be called.

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY

(Wednesday and Thursday)

"How Great Was My Valley" is the way Walter Winchell described this one, and if you've never read Richard Llewellyn's prize novel, don't miss the show. It is a tale of a big family in a Welsh mining town, and a preacher who tries to keep them together. The family of Morgans has Gwilym, the father and head of the house; Beth, mother of the Morgans; Ivor, oldest of the Morgan sons, solid and dependable as the mountain; Ianto, boldest of the Morgan sons, a fight was better to him than the blood in his veins; Angharad, beautiful daughter of the Morgans; and Huy, the youngest and sometimes the wisest of the Morgans. There are more Morgans, but these are the outstanding in the fates that strike at the family.

When the mine owners reduce wages of the miners the Morgans, especially Ianto, talk of striking; and the family splits up over the ensuing argument with the father. Four of the boys leave the home, and Ivor, having married, has already gone. The miners meet in secrecy, and believing that Mr. Morgan is in league with the mine owners, threaten him. Mrs. Morgan warns them not to harm him, and returning to her home she falls into a stream, and is saved by Huw; but in the water his legs are frozen. Doctors tell him he will never walk again.

Mr. Gruffydd the Non-conformist preacher, heals the boy by faith, and becomes a member of the family, and is loved by Angharad, the daughter. She meets a mine owner's son and marries him, leaving her Welsh village to go with him. And the story continues to no conclusion, but to the fact that there is iron and gold in the hearts of these poor, struggling people.

Walter Pidgeon is Mr. Gruffydd; Maureen O'Hara, Angharad; Anna Lea, Bronwen, Ivor's bride; Sara Allgood, Beth; and Roddy McDowell, Donald Crisp, John Loder, Patric Knowles, and Barry Fitzgerald complete the major cast.

HELLZAPOPPIN' (Sunday and Monday)

There's nothing in this show to make a story, but there's more than enough to make a laugh. It's silly and meant to be. When Olsen and Johnson combine with Martha Raye, the result can be nothing else. But if you think it may be too silly to see, remember that it broke records as a play on Broadway; remember that it's got some of the season's top tunes in it; and remember that it's full of beautiful girls, and handsome Don Juans.

There is romance and a rockpile to throw it on, but so insignificant is it that it hardly merits mention. Jane Frazee and Robert Paige provide that bit of breathing spell amidst the madness.

WILD BILL HICKOK RIDES (Tuesday)

There's almost as much picture source in the life of Wild Bill Hickok as there is in the history of the United States Army, and Warner Brothers Co. has picked out another incident from that source. Bruce Cabot is Wild Bill, the frontier marshal.

The Chicago fire, blazing again in this picture, drives two people to the wilds of Montana. One is a dance hall operator, portrayed by Constance Bennett; and the other is a scheming, scoundrel, Warren William. The crook has a scheme for taking over some of the rich lands around Powder River, Mont., and he gets along fine until Wild Bill rides. Even then he might have gotten away with it if one of the ranches hadn't belonged to Bill's ward, Janey.

Besides the historical fire of Chicago, the camera depicts an old-time train robbery mugged up by Hickok, and the quick, sure and steady guns of Wild Bill.

As I Was Saying . . . .

By Aynah Nemus

"As I was out a huntin one day," said a fellow in a bunch of Monday morning Daniel Boone's the first of this week, "I had an experience that I don't like to talk about—unless there's a crowd of twenty or thirty people to listen.

"I was down in the canyons along the Rio Grande huntin quail one day and I had three dogs with me, good dogs, the fast kind that can get a quail as fifty feet afore he can crop twenty. It was mighty rough country we was in, and along about three in the afternoon, me and the dogs wandered into a big canyon and walked up it for about an hour.

"The walls on that dern ditch were straight up and fifty feet high. They were enormous, and there wasn't no way to climb 'em. It was a hell of a day. Hot, cloudy and sprinklin all about me. I stopped for a minute at one time and looked up ahead of me where the canyon turned. And when I did I seen the dangest head of water roarin around that bend that I ever saw in my life.

"Well, you kin imagin what I done. I turned and started runnin down that bed of loose rock and gravel like a goat goin by Dr. Brinkley. It was a mile down to where them walls kinda levelled off, and I knowed I had to make it. Them dogs was right behind, so close in fact that I could feel their hot breath on my ankles. All three were runnin break-neck and neck and neck, and that wall of water was gittin closer and closer.

"Then I seen the slope I was lookin for up ahead of me, and I touched on more speed and so did the dogs. I reached that slope and made a jump, and just as I did, all three of them dogs drowned."

OLD JUDGE'S JINGLES

A stranger passing through this town, Asked me, with a sarcastic hiss, "Who's the mayor of this town?" And so I told him this:

The guy that runs the hotel, He's the mayor of the town, And the fellows fillin gas tanks, And the printer and the drug store clown.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

VERY OFTEN these days, I get to thinking about the soldier boys at camp. And the sailors, too.

What worries me is . . . what happens when they get a day off after working their heads off all week? They go to town . . . and what then?

What happens? The answer is . . . mostly nothing! Because most towns near army camps just don't have nearly enough entertainment facilities to take care of the soldiers on leave. So the boys just stand around, leaning against lampposts or sitting on doorsteps. And sometimes, the local townsfolk find themselves wondering what's changed the town . . . instead of pitching in to help the boys have a good time in decent surroundings.

In many towns, however, the situation is better. Many towns have nice, community places where a soldier can go sit down and "chew the fat" and enjoy some cake and milk, or maybe a good glass of beer. The boys like that. And they're not likely to get in trouble . . . because common sense tells you nothing can be wrong with a couple of glasses of beer.

There's another reason the beer industry is co-operating with the army and with the government officers to help in places where beer is sold decent. The brewers want their beer sold to soldiers where bad conditions exist, they're right.

Seems to me that we ought to get together on everything we can to make pleasant for the boys who train. They're doing the . . . maybe we have some too, in this direction.

There are lots of ways of doing. We ought to support them. All of us have our part to win this war . . . and life a little easier for the camp is something we all something about.

American Aircraft in Battle of Australia

A group of American-built aircraft are now on active combat duty in Australia while their models are on their way to her defense. In a specially-prepared montage, the News Committee of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce brings you pictures of American warplanes that are in the vanguard of the vast "more aid to come" which will ultimately sweep the invader from the United Nations sky. Reading clockwise, the pioneer American warplanes are: 1) the Boeing Flying Fortress, with 2) the Consolidated B-24, or "Liberator," constitutes the Army Air Corps' heavy offensive weapons; 3) the Bell P-39, or "Aircobra," best described as a "cannon on wings"; 4) the Douglas A-20A, invaluable for lightning-like day or night thrusts at the foe; 5) the Lockheed "Hudson," affectionately called "Old Boomerang" by R.A.F. pilots for its amazing ability to return under the most trying conditions; 6) the Martin B-26, the twin-engine deadly attack bomber; 7) the Curtiss P-40, or "Tomahawk," the standby of the American Volunteer "Flying Tigers" in Burma; 8) the North American B-25, the Air Corps' twin-engine bomber which combines speed with a large bomb-load; and 9) the Consolidated PB-5, or "Catalina," whose job it is to patrol the coast and blast the U-boats from the seas.

ADMIRAL OF THE OCEAN SEA

By Samuel Eliot Morison
 Anyone who loves to read about the men who "go down to the sea in ships" or who loves to study maps and wind charts will find Dr. Morison's biography of Christopher Columbus very interesting.

Columbus, a native of the decadent kingdom of Genoa in Italy went to Portugal soon after that country had aroused from the apathy of the Middle Ages and was leading the world in oceanic exploration. Portugal, however, had no use for Columbus.

He then went to Spain, but Spain was too busy exterminating the Moors to pay any attention to this strange Genoese with his dream of a western route to China and the Indies.

But, after the last Moorish stronghold of Granada had fallen, Spain, too, turned her eyes westward lest her old enemy, Portugal, should get the better piece of the Atlantic Ocean pie. There followed a bitter rivalry in exploration between the two kingdoms of the Iberian Peninsula that was halted only when

HOME EC GIRLS MEET

The Home Economics Club met on April 17. The president called the meeting to order and members stood and repeated the motto.

Two reports were given, Earline Cox reporting on "Charm" and Billie Babb reporting on "The Three American Concentration Camps."

Some of the girls worked button holes on hot water bottle covers and some of them stitched the covers. Other girls knitted.

Pope Alexander VI drew his famous Line of Demarcation.

Then Spain was ready to listen to Columbus, and, with the moral and financial support of Ferdinand and Isabella behind him, this son of an obscure woolen weaver of Genoa stepped upon the stage of the world to become the Child of Destiny.

Dr. Morison retraced all four of the voyages of Columbus, and he describes them vividly and accurately.

SNOOPER

Snooper heard that Marshall and Edward aren't getting along very well these days. We wonder why.

Monday night, Bill Davis bought a picture of Betty Frazor from Theron Horton for 85c.

"Mississippi", a certain eighth grade girl thinks you are cute. Earline is wearing a senior pin—believe it or not.

We hear Marybelle got a picture that she likes very much. Betty Frazor isn't going to the banquet. Does "anyone really know why?"

Everyone is wondering how Marshall and Joe Ross will come out on their dance. Snooper bets they "go in the red."

Some girls change dates every day but we still have Margaret Ruth and Dewain. Maurine Frazier and Lee, Curtis and Billie Babb, Mickie and Bob, Pauline and Joe Ross.

Lee has the answer to modern traveling—well traveling, anyway. The girls are all crazy about it and the last time Snooper saw it, it was filled to capacity.

Edward Kerr, James O'Connor and Bill Davis went horseback riding Saturday afternoon. For some reason Bill Davis fell off his horse and landed in a ditch. He insists the horse fell first.

Wise Nation Should Destroy Its Enemies Says E. P. Editor

World conditions today and in the days of Rome and Carthage, about 200 B. C., were compared by E. M. Pooley, editor of the El Paso Herald-Post, Wednesday, when he spoke to soldiers and officers of Fort D. A. Russell in the theater at the army post.

In discussing a lasting peace as real end of this war, he reminded his audience that Rome was a great power but handicapped by Carthage which had possession of Sicily. In 260 B. C. Rome took Sicily from Carthage and an Armistice was declared. High reparations were charged to the Carthaginians, their navy was sunk, their armaments were reduced, and Sicily was taken away.

Carthage was destitute, but still possessed the same people and developed two great leaders, Hamilcar and his son, Hannibal. They began to grow in strength and power and conquered the people along the African Coast and finally Spain. From there another attack was launched on Rome. After eighteen years of victory, Hannibal was defeated and Rome charged ten times as much reparations as before. destroyed the Carthaginian Army, and took over the government.

The peace this time lasted fifty-two years. Rome amassed an army. Cato was the only light in Rome. He discussed public improvements at every Senate meeting but always concluded his talks with—"moreover, Carthage must be destroyed." Finally, Rome's army captured Carthage, destroying 450,000 people. The remaining thousands were sold into slavery, the city was destroyed and salt placed in the Carthaginians' fields. No one has heard much of Carthage since that time but Rome enjoyed 1,900 years of peace. It took them 118 years to establish that peace. In telling of the history, Mr. Pooley said:

"Today, America and some twenty-six allies are disturbed and forced into war by 170 million Germans and Japanese. Why should one-tenth of the people in the world be such trouble for the other nine-tenths? You men are in this war, and you will win it eventually, but don't let someone in a frock-tailed coat and horn-rimmed glasses sit around a peace table and talk you out of the real peace that you have earned.

"Muddled" thinking got us into this war," Mr. Pooley declared, "and it is that that makes it such a hard task to win. Pearl Harbor was only an incident, a beginning. Germany and Japan are nations 'on the make,' hungry nations. They are different people. Their industries and their countries must be destroyed. We must kill many, and we must teach them about freedom. They must be raised to our level of understanding.

"In this war someone must die. It is either Germany and Japan or it is us. There must be a big dog and a lot of little ones. I believe we want to be the big dog."

Culture Club To Have Pan American Program Coming Year

At the regular meeting of the Sanderson Culture Club, which met Thursday, April 16, with Mrs. W. R. Lea, it was voted that the program for the coming year would deal with Pan-America. An imaginary visit to other republics of the American continents will be made. Mrs. J. W. Sessoms was cohostess for the afternoon.

The executive board held a short business session at 2:00 o'clock just previous to the regular meeting. Mrs. Ira Deaton, defense chairman, reported total purchases of $193.75 in defense bonds and $20.60 in stamps for the month of April.

Mrs. T. R. Arrington was leader of the program on "Pan-American Goodwill", with Mrs. Landon Rose bringing the other message on the "United States Plans Cooperation with other American Republics". The Pan-American Good Neighbor Forum was discussed by Mrs. J. R. Link and a message dealing with Pan Americanism of the New World's "New Order" was brought by Mrs. Joe F. Brown. Mrs. R. A. Gatlin talked on "Two Declarations Signed at Lima," and Mrs. Ira Deaton on "Commercial Relations Between Latin America and the United States."

A round table discussion was led by Mrs. Arrington on the interchange of students of our Pan American universities and the exchange of letters between school children as a means of goodwill and better understanding between Latin America and the United States.

A delicious salad plate was served by the hostesses with iced tea, and little baskets from Mexico filled with Mexican candy were plate favors in keeping with the program for the afternoon.

Nineteen club members were present with Mrs. Ralph Ord and Mrs. M. H. Goode as club guests.
