MARY NELL GATES BITTEN BY RATTLER

Mary Nell Gates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gates, is recovering this week from a rattle snake bite suffered Sunday Gives Personal evening as she and Violet Billings were walking on the Roger Mary Nell was spending the week-end with Violet, whose father, Neal Billings, is employed at the Rose ranch, and they were walking about a mile from the ranch house when the incident occurred. Quick thinking trict of Texas. In doing so I on the part of Violet saved Mary Nell much suffering, and possibly her life. She had nothing with which to make an incision over the bite so she sucked the blood from the fang wounds. Tearing the strap from her tourniquet, and then assisted Mary Nell to the house.

Upon being advised of the snake bite Mr. and Mrs. Billings rushed Mary Nell to Sanderson where she received medical attention. She is getting along fine at the time of this writing.

You've read about the hen that took over the job of mothering a litter of kittens, or some other animal, but it is doubtful that you have ever seen it happen. Now it has happened in Sanderson.

A hen at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Wilson had hid her nest away under the steps of the home, laid a few eggs and decided to hatch them out. Last week Mr. Wilson decided that he should dispose of some kittens he knew were under the steps. When he went for the kittens, which were less than a week old, he found the hen with her chicks just hatching. After taking five chicks from under the hen he found one egg which had not hatched and decided to leave. The hen. in the excitement, moved over on top of what Mr. Wilson discovered was the mother cat and sat down on her. Since the hen was off the nest and the cat was on the nest he simply pushed the egg under the cat, leaving it there.

Later in the day he returned and found the mother cat gone and the hen covering the one chick which had hatched out and five baby kittens. The mother cat was not around.

Mr. Wilson said that he supposed the hen took care of the kittens while the mother cat was away, but was not sure that the mother cat had coverd the eggs while the hen was away.

JENNY JERK - who yanks appliance cords from outlets

Almost everyone but Jenny knows that yanking on an appliance cord may loosen connections, break the fine wires under insulation and perhaps cause a short circuit. Homemakers who want their cords to last always release them by taking hold of the plug itself. And they also follow these other tips on the use and care of their cords:

• Don't place cords under rugs , where they will be walked on or crushed by heavy furniture.

· Don't run cords through doorways where they will be squeezed by opening and closing of door.

 Don't use frayed or defective cords or cords with loose connections. Have them repaired. Never tack or nail through a cord. If long extensions must be used, run them through screw-eyes or over hooks.

• Keep non-waterproof cords

 Don't wad up cords or allow them to knot and kink. Coil them loosely and lay them in a drawer when not in use.

By keeping your appliance cords in good condition, you will get better service from your appliances. Take good care of them and make them last.

We Have Appreciated Your

Patronage

Effective May 1st, I have sold my interest in the Joe Kerr Service Station to James Word.

I wish to take this opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation for the patronage which has been given me during the time I have operated the station, and to express my wish that my former customers will continue to support Mr. Word. He is an experienced service station operator, and I feel sure that he will offer the best that is available in products and prompt and efficient service.

For the present the stock of ranch supplies, which has been retained by me, will be carried at the station. Persons desiring ranch supplies, drenching or vaccinating, may call at the station and leave word there, or should contact me.
