Range Conditions Over Area Benefited By General Rains

Terrell County received a downpour Wednesday night when a general rain covered this section of the country. Reports received up to press time show that all parts of the county were visited by the much needed moisture. Independence reported two and a half inches of precipitation, and Fred Turner ranch was covered by a heavy rainfall and the entire area between Sanderson and Alpine and Sanderson and Fort Stockton were included as having a good soaking water fall. The official reading at the Kerr Mercantile Company gauge up to 9:00 o'clock Thursday morning was 97 inches in Sanderson.

The ranchmen of the area were elated with the moisture. Range land was not suffering from drought as yet but the rain will greatly benefit the growth of feed. In some pastures grass was beginning to need moisture. Lambs are being shipped in great numbers now and some are in fine shape for shipping.

SANITARY STEP SUPPORTED BY AMERICAN LEGION

A plan to start a spray campaign in Sanderson as a sanitary measure was brought before the American Legion at the regular meeting of that organization last Thursday night.

The Legion pledged funds in the amount of $100.00 to defray the expenses incident to the work and Marshall Cooke was named as chairman to see that the work was carried out.

Under the direction of Mr. Cooke all out buildings and refuse will be sprayed, eliminating one of the greatest health hazards in the city. Plans are under way and maps are being made to further guard against filth and breeding places for flies. Dr. John W. Pate is active in the sanitation work and will have a program for the work at a later date.

The citizens are urged to lend any support possible to these workers who have only the good health and cleanliness of the town in mind in trying to see to it that healthy conditions are maintained.

Dishman Returns From Lone Boys' State

Robert Joe Dishman, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Dishman, returned Sunday from Austin where he was the delegate selected by the local post of the American Legion attending Lone Star Boys State. The school, which lasted for a week, was sponsored by the American Legion to teach the duties and responsibilities of citizenship.

At this, the 10th annual Boys' State, there were 318 young men in attendance, from all over Texas. Sessions were held at the State Home for the Deaf for an entire week the attendants at Boys' State learned the rudiments of municipal and state government by the practical method of electing their own officials and being governed by them.

The boys were divided into two parties, the Pioneers and the Longhorns, Robert Joe being a Longhorn. They nominated slates for all offices and for two days campaigning was furious. Then they went to the ballot box and elected their own officials. Similarly, county and city officials were elected. Last Thursday the boys officiated in the offices to which they had been elected. Young Dishman was elected to the House of Representatives where he served as head of the Appropriations Committee.

A group of twenty-seven trained counselors lived with the boys in the dormitories and advised them and aided them in directing their activities. Swimming, baseball and other forms of athletics were enjoyed.

Robert Joe said that the biggest thing he learned at Boys' State was how to get along with other boys. For him it was a most enjoyable trip as well as worthwhile. It was both an honor to his sponsor and Sanderson for him to be privileged to attend.

West Texas Animal Disease Research Laboratory is the name of the new state-federal institution to be established in Marfa for the study of diseases that handicap stockmen of this area in their raising of livestock. Dr. D. W. Dodd, of Del Rio, will be in charge of the laboratory.

A World War veteran who visited in Sierra Blanca last week said, "The people of this country don't know what war is like unless they could see what the atomic bomb did to Japan, also artillery fire and bombing. later known as King Oliver, Jelly Roll Morton, etc.

The district was ruled with an iron hand by a politician named Tom Anderson who owned a saloon on Rampart Street, the gateway to Storeville. No band could play in the quarter without the Anderson nod; no musician could join in an already entrenched band without Anderson's approval. Today, as fitting commentary on progress, gasoline is sold where Anderson supporters once sipped absinthe.

When the United States entered World War I and New Orleans became home for a moment to thousands of sailors, the City Council passed an ordinance closing Storeville to maintain servicemen's morale.

Flying squads of police — police never entered Storeville singly — passed the word around that midnight, November 12, 1917, would mark Storeville's death knell. By 11:30 that night there was not a sober head in the district and at midnight people filed out of the casinos and houses with their bedding and belongings.

Ahead of them marched the musicians, among them Louis Armstrong, currently featured in "New Orleans", coming Sunday and Monday, June 22 and 23, to the Princess Theater. Some lugubrious alcoholic besought him to play "Nearer My God to Thee" and on this note Storeville came to the end of its unsavory existence.

But the music it engendered lives on.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jeffries, of San Antonio, are guests in the E. H. Secret home. Mrs. Jeffries is an aunt of Mrs. Secret.

Story of Storeville Told in Film

Storyville, the once notorious, now almost legendary center of New Orleans' after-dark activity, is being hailed in Jules Levey's dramatic film, "New Orleans", as the birthplace of the blues — to the delight of Crescent City. Not so long ago, though, quite the reverse was true.

For the now extinct section of the city, which bordered on the fabulous Vieux Carre and boasted Basin and Customhouse Streets as its strongholds, was a festering sore in not only the body politic but the body geographic, too. An ordinance passed in 1897 had restricted the darker aspects of the city's life to that district — and there crime, loose living, gambling and dissolution flourished.

As a corollary to the drinking and dancing, preludes to the more violent activities which invariably developed, the music in the saloons was turbulent and tempestuous, pouring out unrestrainedly from the instruments of such fabled oldtimers as Bunk Johnson, Joe (Bad Eye) Oliver,

It costs less than you think to cook the modern way—Electrically

TODAY'S faster, more efficient electric ranges bring economical electric cooking within the reach of almost everyone.

The oven of a modern electric range uses current only about one-third of the time to maintain average baking and roasting temperatures. Surface units cook on low heat (one-eighth of high heat) up to 75% of the time in many cases. The deep well cooker will cook a meal for five for two cents or less.

See the new ELECTRIC ranges now on display at your appliance dealer's or at our office.

If you are using electricity for refrigeration, lighting and the average number of small appliances, the chances are that all or most of the current used by your electric range will be billed on the bottom step of your electric rate, which means that electric cooking will cost you little if any more than less modern methods.

Come in and get the full story about the low cost of carefree electric cooking today!

Bert Childers was saying, it's funny how so many of our wartime habits stick with us.

Bert likes plenty of butter on his bread, but even now he can't get over spreading it like it was scarce as hen's teeth. And as a war-worker, Bert used to stick to a temperate glass of beer on time off; and he still holds fast to beer and moderation.

Same way with Bert's wife. She not only has no trouble saving used fats, and waste paper. She's learned from wartime necessity to save every single thing that might possibly be used again.

From where I sit, it's mighty good that so many of these common-sense habits like thrift and moderation have stayed with us. Because they belong in America—along with tolerance, and mutual respect for one another's rights. They're habits that have helped to make this country strong and neighborly and free.
