TEN TO LUKE

When we read where a newly-wed entertainer has an open house. The one that brings them back to when they get back from honeymoon is to find no use to move into. There is a trend back to the man is solicited to purchases with a small payment and small payments. So we may day when the property will be fixing up their property so that tenants can live in it.

ask us to settle the story that is raging over women's skirts shall be here and now demand neutrality on the subject is alright with us high there was a time when they have taken a stand on it, when our interest in matters was more keen. I recall days gone by when we saw instances where a skirt attracted our attention more than it does today. The ladies would have all to have lengthened skirts to add to their appearance, while in others, the shorter skirts were pleasing. Probably that will hold good but the skirt doesn't engage our attention as it once did. Other words, some of us to the generation that we have seen so much that it seems to us that it is a waste of time to see from it.

help in settling the story, however, to say some of the broad principles. One of these is, and perhaps the most important, is that there never had a pair of pants. There are grades, to be attractive, more attractive, still more attractive, more attractive, and so on, until they run clear out of styles.

males, the converse is here never was a good pair of male legs. Some appealing than others. The graduations running to those of the other sex. More unattractive, more unattractive, and so on to hideously repulsive. Years of observation, I'm sure that it was ever in the male figure to go out to a swimming pool and other places where they appear with the upper parts of their bodies bared to the gaze, and you will find in support of this thesis difficult to say which is the chest, the bare or the hairy more loudly to be heard. The intent of nature with respect to the male becomes still more obvious. One observes males shorts that leave most lower limbs exposed. The effect does violence to the sensibilities. There is to be a law or at least a national amendment.

EAGLES PRACTICE THIS WEEK; SEVEN LETTERMEN RETURN

The Sanderson Eagles 1947 football practice got under way this week with approximately fourteen players reporting for work-outs. Several more boys are expected to report when the school term starts next Monday. Of the fourteen players reporting, seven are lettermen returning to the Eagles squad from the 1946 season. Two of last year's lettermen are expected to report for practice soon.

According to Coach M. B. England the straight "T" formation with possibly an addition of a few box formations as the season wears on, will be used. He said that he was well pleased with the potentialities of the players who had reported and thought that this year held some good future prospects in competitive play. The boys have been working out twice a day this week, from 8 to 10 in the morning and from 4 to 6 in the afternoon. England says that the boys will learn to play football by playing and ironing out their faults on the scrimmage field instead of trying to do it on a blackboard or in instruction classes.

Those reporting for practice and their prospective positions are: Joe Mussey, lb; Frank Harrell, lb; Antonio Sanchez, lg; Thomas Hill, c; Edwin Smith, rg; David Thompson, rt; Walter Paul, re; Robert Joe Dishman, qb; Jimmy Joe Russell, lg; Jack Harrell, fb; Homer Hill, rh; Jimmie Harris, end; Bill House, tackle; Felipe Arrendondo, guard.

Eighteen new uniforms have been purchased for the players for this year. They have pants of solid black with an orange knit insert down the side of the leg. The jerseys are orange with black numerals front and back with black shoulders. The first game is scheduled with Iraan September 12 at Iraan. Even though this game cannot be considered a criterion for the future of the Eagle squad it will show what possibilities they do have and help to work out the kinks in their plays that will make for a better showing in their next game with Grandfalls at Grandfalls September 19.

GUEST SPEAKER

FRANK TRAYLER

Speaking on the subject of the economic, political and religious situation in the Philippine Islands, Frank Traylor, Church of Christ minister, guest speaker at the regular weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club Wednesday, and the Lions Club on Thursday, pictured the conditions as they exist since independence has come to the islands.

The parity citizenship has been adopted, Mr. Traylor said, whereby an American citizen has equal citizenship rights with the natives and American capital and business investments are solicited to help place the islands on a sound economic basis, the speaker declared.

Mission work being done there by the Church of Christ, he said, has met with encouraging results and the natives are readily grasping for the Christian religion.

Mr. Traylor will close a series of meetings at the local Church of Christ next Sunday when the congregation will have an all-day service and barbecue dinner on the courthouse lawn. The evangelist has had a very successful meeting here and says he has enjoyed the renewal of old acquaintances and the making of many new friends.

Mr. McGinley is a brother of Mrs. Mary Gregory.

Three lots, on which the Garden Club has a long-term lease, will be enclosed for the playground. It is hoped that the play equipment will be completed and installed so that the playground can be opened in the near future.

The regular September meeting will be the date for the annual meeting.

The plans for the paving of Sanderson's streets is left with the officers composing the executive committee to report all their findings at tonight's meeting. Sentiment seems to be in favor of the move and the cost of the paving is estimated to be much less than was at first supposed.

Chairman Harkins urged the attendance of all delegates chosen by the various clubs as well as visitors. "We want to encourage visitors to feel free to come to our meetings," Harkins said.

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks, and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

The lead article in Harper's Magazine for August is devoted to the important and much-misunderstood subject of "Negotiating With the Russians." Written by James B. Reston, long-time diplomatic correspondent of the New York Times, it casts a good deal of light on Soviet purposes, Soviet diplomatic techniques, and Soviet mentality.

First of all, says Mr. Reston, "Negotiating with the Russians is like playing tennis on a court without line or umpire. If the indefatigable Mr. Molotov hits one into the net (as he often does) and cries 'good,' there is nothing you can do about it except argue. If you call in the French, the British, and the Chinese, and they all say, 'sorry, it went into the net, Mr. Molotov is not only adamant but angry. Did we not agree he says, on 'the rule of unanimity'?"

To the Soviet mind, this is not, apparently, either dishonest or unethical. The Soviet diplomats enter every debate knowing precisely what the result must be. As Mr. Byrnes, the former Secretary of State, once said to Molotov, "We start with the facts and try to reach true and fair conclusions, while you start with the conclusions you want and try to select and twist the facts to your own ends." But even that, Mr. Reston observes, does not tell all of the story. The Russian policy, as shown in the various conferences held since the war, is a morass of contradictions. At one time, for instance, the Russians were completely opposed to the inclusion of France in the Council of Foreign Ministers, and the first meeting of the Council collapsed, having gained nothing whatsoever, over the issue. But, at the second meeting of the Council, the Russians demanded that France participate in the discussions. The obvious reason was that they then wanted to make a good impression on the French people, and the Soviet high command could see no reason why it shouldn't abandon its first stand without explanation or embarrassment. This has happened time and time again and of course, is a main reason why hundreds of international meetings of one kind or another have been held without major result.

One more difficulty lies in the fact that the Soviet diplomats, even including Molotov, are watched like hawks by Moscow, and a statement made by one of them one day may be disavowed by the Kremlin the next. When this happens, the diplomat simply reverses his position and the arguments start all over again. The representatives of the other powers naturally find this maddening, but there's nothing they can do about it. Cases are on record where the powers have accepted Soviet demands in all particulars — and then the Russians have vetoed the final draft on some obscure technical question of phraseology.

Mr. Reston gives several enlightening reasons for the Soviet attitude. For one thing, the Russians still feel that they were unjustly treated after the first World War, when allied troops were sent into Siberia, and the major powers refused them formal recognition for many years. The seeds of bitterness which were planted then still flower. Another, and perhaps more cogent reason, is that negotiation in the Anglo-American sense of the word is alien to the Russian mind. In the United States, as an example, labor negotiates with industry, industry negotiates with the government, the president negotiates with Congress, etc. Negotiation of some sort is our traditional means of settling every difference. In the Soviet Union, to the contrary, everything is done by order, and a sort of gigantic chain of command system prevails which no one who values his neck opposes. As Mr. Reston says, "Even

Most of us thought it would never happen. But it has. According to the Associated Press, the House of Commons on Aug. 8, approved a bill giving the British government authority to tell its people where they must work and what they must do. This means that the government may order men and women to do whatever job it pleases: coal mining, farming, fishing, a n y - thing. Moreover, it means that the government may choose the place where any man or woman must work.

This is a drastic step. Why is individual freedom thus destroyed by a country with such a long record of high devotion to the individual citizen and to freedom? The answer is simple. Two years ago a socialistic government management of leading industries in England Things were in such a bad way, because of weakness from war, that the people permitted this.

The socialistic government relied upon nationwide sympathy and cooperation. However, this lasted only a few weeks. Then, as absenteeism set in and productivity lagged, the whole system bogged down. The crisis came last winter, when a terrible coal famine came to that country with plenty of coal under the ground. Under socialism, crisis thrives on crisis, and there were more to come. In these crises, it is easy for men to accept disaster, if they think it will prevent more disaster.

This is what has happened. In an apparent final resort to keep the government management of industry from becoming a complete failure, the British are taking this most drastic step. Yes, in peace-time one of the greatest liberty-loving countries in the history of the world has given its government authority to draft labor, and to tell each man and woman where to work and what to do.

That England takes this most fatal step means forewarning aplenty to the American people. The heritage of modern Britain is also our own heritage. Our common forefathers loved freedom. Because England enjoyed the greatest measure of freedom compared with any large country in Europe, she became an influential power. English influence has done much to make men free the world around.

But despite their great love of liberty, the British people have now found that loss of individual freedom follows adoption of a government managed economy, just as night follows day. It leads to this every time. It is sad to see this great country, like others that have accepted the Molotov does not 'negotiate' with Stalin."

From the Soviet point of view, the eccentric Soviet diplomatic practices are producing excellent results. Of major importance, they force interminable delay in deciding almost every problem, from the smallest to the greatest. They thus constitute blocking tactics of remarkable effectiveness. And, while the weary talk goes on, the Russian empire extends inexorably outward. Little by little — and perhaps far faster than most of us realize — the Russians are getting what they want.

Mr. Reston is too able and experienced an observer to offer any pat solution to the problem of negotiating with the Russians — indeed, his whole article is designed to show that pat solutions are worthless. He just simply observes that, whether we like it or not, there are almost 200,000,000 Russians in the world, and they have a very high birthrate. It is obviously impossible to ignore them, and few people want to fight them if a fight is unavoidable. Perhaps, through trial and error, some workable method of negotiation between the Eastern and Western worlds will eventually be reached. But it looks like a long, tough job, and many more set-backs must be expected.

blatishments of socialism, willingly give up the freedoms for which her people have shed their blood through the centuries.

A considerable number of our people are evidently inspired by foreign ideologies, and some are asking for government control of American industry. This step England is now taking is a real warning to all American workers that with government management of industry there must surely come government dictation to workers. The workers, in the face of constant crisis, are told where to work and what to do.

Seeing that these things point in every direction toward a totalitarian government, our people should make up their minds now that we do not want government managed economy. What is happening in liberty-loving England is proof that such dictation cannot be avoided once government management is adopted. Let us determine now that such a blight will not fall upon the freedom-loving land of America.

I am an American worker. If I decide I'd rather work and live in Schenectady, I can go there. Or Racine, or Spokane. If I want to, I can settle down and make San Fernando Valley my home. If I've been a machinist, but decide that the radio industry is the place for me, there are ways I can train myself to get into radio. If I want to drive a Diesel locomotive instead of a bus, I can go into railroading.

Nobody tells me what I can't. I can try as many jobs as I like. If I don't like the job I can walk out the door. When I find a job that suits me, I can work right up to be manager of the department or even president of the company, if I have the ability and the enterprise. If I want to start my own business and become an employer, I can do that too.

In America nobody tells me I can't do all these things, but if I lived in a totalitarian country I would be told. A uniformed official would have the duty of telling me in what part of the country I could go to work. A representative of the state could inform me that I must train for a certain job. I would have no choice in the kind of job.

Being told to stay put I would have little chance for advancement. My wages would be regulated entirely by the state, and there would be no redress of grievance. Leaving a job would be impossible. There would be no firing for unsatisfactory work. Instead, I could be thrown into a concentration camp or a slave labor battalion. There I would be taught completely how to become servant to the master, the State.

I could never hope to start or to own a business of my own. My whole life would be dedicated to the State. I would become a pawn, like millions of others, to do the bidding of some "commissar" representing that undeniable quantity, the totalitarian State. My individuality, what there is left of it, would be subject to the whims of some "politburo".

Is not this contrasting picture accurate? Yes, you agree. However, what you are probably thinking is that America can never become a totalitarian state. Friend, we would have to ignore the history of the world to assume that such dangers do not confront America. When a

J. M. Harrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harrell, left Tuesday for Alpine where he will enroll at Sul Ross for his sophomore year.

Yet, in a recent survey from a cross-section of 5,000 persons, 63 per cent of college students and 43 per cent of the general population would get as much or more in America under government management and ownership of industries. In other words a lot of folks apparently believe that state socialism or totalitarianism would be more efficient and more desirable than freedom of opportunity and freedom of the individual. How mistaken, they are!

BACK TO SCHOOL!

New books... new clothes... but what about LIGHT for home study?

Scientists say that 87% of all that children learn they absorb through their eyes. Their progress in school and their ability to win advancement in later life depend to a large extent upon their eyesight. So don't take chances with your children's eyes. Give them enough light and the right kind of light for safe, easy seeing when they read or study at home.

BETTER LIGHT MEANS BETTER GRADES

Poor light causes drowsiness, fatigue and eyestrain, makes concentration on studies difficult. See that the lamp your children use for home study is equipped with bulbs totaling at least 100 watts and is well-shaded and free from glare. Better light means better grades!

Law Enforcement Phases Given At Del Rio School

A Peace Officers Training School for all law enforcement officers in this area will be conducted by the FBI at Del Rio on September 17, 1947, it was jointly announced by Sheriff Albert E. Steinmetz, Chief of Police R. C. Hawkins and Maurice W. Acers, Special Agent in charge of the FBI in San Antonio.

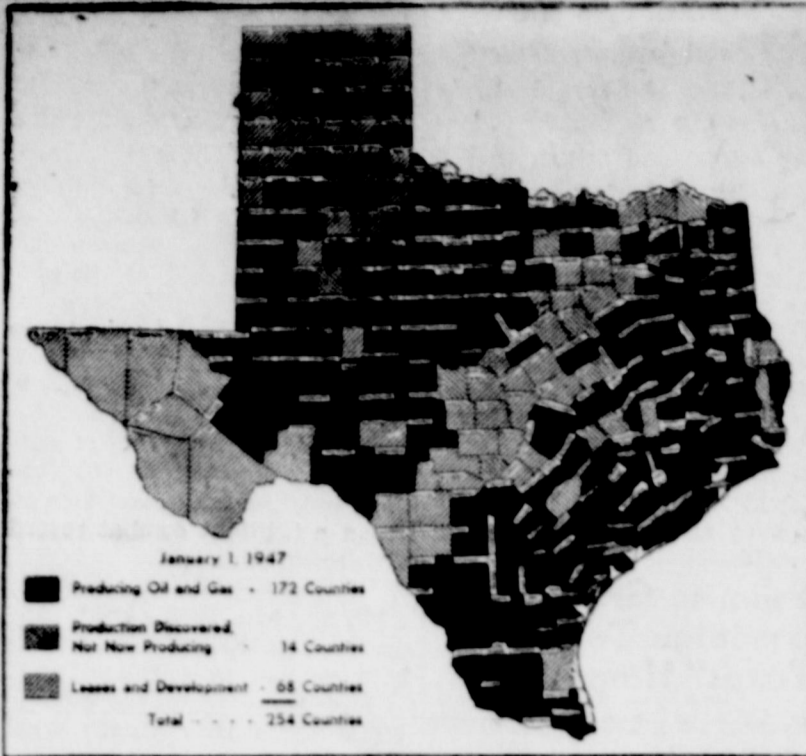

Invitations are now being extended by Sheriff Steinmetz, Chief Hawkins and Acers to representatives of all law enforcement agencies in Edwards, Kinney, Terrell and Val Verde counties to be on hand at 1 p. m. on September 17, to receive this course of training.

The course of instruction will include a discussion of the latest and most effective methods of investigating hit and run accidents by Sergeant Tom Laws of the Texas Highway Patrol. This will be followed by a lecture and discussion by Special Agents of the FBI on the various techniques being used most successfully in apprehending and searching criminals.

The program will be concluded with a practical training course for the officers in the use of side arms shooting from the hip at man size targets. This training will be under the supervision of specially qualified FBI firearms experts and instructors.

"We are quite enthused over this course of training being provided for us by the FBI," said Sheriff Steinmetz. "It will afford all of the officers of this area a splendid opportunity to get together and receive practical training and ideas in the solving of our law enforcement problems."

Acers pointed out that his organization plans to make this

Oil Industry Statewide In Texas

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11, 1947 —

The oil business is literally a statewide industry in Texas where billions of dollars have been spread across each of its 254 counties which either produce oil and gas, have had production, or now have land under lease for development.

A map prepared by the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association shows actual oil and gas production in 172 counties. Sixty-eight counties, now without production, have leasing and development activities in progress. The other fourteen counties which once produced are no longer in production.

The Association's study showed that since 1919 more than the first in a series of similar schools to be conducted at frequent intervals for the peace officers of Edwards, Kinney, Terrell and Val Verde counties. The program, he stated, has been especially prepared to bring to the officers a continuous course of practical training. It is designed to provide the greatest possible assistance to them in enforcing the laws in their respective communities.

"A full two hours of personal instruction will be provided for each officer in hip shooting," said Acers. "The course they will fire will be identical with that provided for our own agents, both at our barracks at Quantico, Virginia, as well as in the field. The agent in charge of this phase of the school, James C. Kennedy, was for many years a firearms instructor at the FBI Headquarters at Washington, D. C."

"In fact every instructor appearing before the group, the representative of the Texas Highway Patrol as well as all of the agents of the FBI are full time peace officers who have had long years of actual experience in the field of law enforcement as well as special training to qualify them as instructors," Acers continued.

This training program, being conducted by the FBI, will provide for future schools to be held at intervals of two to four months depending on the desires of local officers, according to Acers. The subjects to be handled at the later schools will be based entirely upon what the officers request, he pointed out. It may even include specialized schools covering fingerprinting, defensive tactics, and the use of all types of police firearms.

two and one-half billion dollars have been paid — chiefly to farmers and ranchers — for bonuses, leases, rentals and royalties.

These payments in 1946 totaled $248,108,000, which is equivalent to 10 cents for every dollar of Texas farm and livestock income, according to the survey. The Association estimated there are 169,560 owners of royalties in Texas, which has 58,232,557 acres, or 34.4 per cent, of its land surface under lease. There are now approximately 28,900 producing leases of which 12,700 produce gas, the Association said.

Mrs. James Hatchel and son, Bobby, returned Saturday from El Paso where they had been visiting Mrs. Hatchel's aunt, Mrs. E. M. Reeves for several days. Mrs. Hatchel also took Bobby for medical examination. Mrs. E. P. Halley, mother of Mrs. Hatchel, went to Sierra Blanca on the train and accompanied Mrs. Hatchel home by car.
