THE GREAT WALTZ

By MACKENZIE

Economic Highlights

To paraphrase Mark Twain's famous remark concerning the weather, everybody talks about inflation but no one does anything about it. The political proposals for dealing with this No. 1 domestic problem seem unrealistic, to put it mildly. Mr. Truman and his official family are still bent on rationing and control of prices — policies which, in other countries, have led to declines in production and the growth of the black market. The Republicans lean to rather indefinite voluntary controls, that have been ineffective when tried in the past. In both political camps there is an obvious effort to advocate measures that will attract as many voters as possible, and step on the minimum number of toes.

It has been accurately said that the political proposals, for the most part, deal with symptoms rather than causes. They are concerned with what happens during an inflation, instead of with what creates and implements an inflation. This is regarded by many as a very dangerous example of putting the cart before the horse. To find programs which attempt to deal directly and conclusively with the fundamentals of the condition, it is necessary to turn to non-political sources.

One of the most extensive programs was recently proposed by 53 members of the Economists'

National Committee on Monetary Policy. Thirty-eight of the economists are connected with universities; six are employed by commercial business; one works for a research institute; one is with a national business organization, three are on the staffs of publications, and four showed no connection. Their program included eighteen points, of which brief summaries taken from various press reports, follow:

1. Drastically reduce government spending, particularly for public works.
2. Reduce taxes.
3. Reduce the public debt.
4. Return to a gold-coin monetary standard, give the people greater control over the government's "use and abuse" of the public purse, and reverse the trend toward a government-managed economy.
5. Increase production and productive effort.
6. Abandon feather-bedding and other devices for collecting pay for work not done.

7. Business should hold down inventories and avoid hoarding.

8. Tax laws should be revised so that business can retain a large percentage of its earnings for the purpose of improving and expanding facilities.

9. Credit should be used more cautiously, and the safety margins against credit extensions should be increased.

10. Sellers should operate on the lowest possible profit margin, in order to prevent a large price decline followed by forced liquidation.

11. Tariffs and other restrictions on both domestic and foreign trade must be reduced.

12. Government must realize it cannot buy scarce goods in large quantities without further forcing up prices.

13. Price-parity and price maintenance laws must be repealed, and federal subsidies not necessary to the national defense should be abandoned.

14. Government should stop confusing symptoms with causes, and, further, get away from controls of various kinds which maladjust the economic machine.

15. Consumers should not buy what they do not actually need, nor should they borrow to buy things they can do without.

16. The apparent tendency to loan too freely and too much to foreign nations should be curbed.

17. Interest rates must be permitted to find their natural level.

18. The federal reserve system should adopt monetary policies that will foster more harmonious relationships in various segments of economy.

This is a big and controversial program. And not all of the economists agreed with it. Twenty were against tax reduction. Twenty-one went along on all 18 points. The balance entered reservations or disagreements with one or more of the points. On the other hand, No. 1 on drastic government economy, received the vote of all 53, a very interesting commentary on the thinking of professional economists in this time of vast budgets.

Assuming that such a plan as this would strike at the base on which inflation rests, what is its chance of enactment? The obvious answer is none, at this time. Everybody would be in favor of the particular points that benefited them, and against the particular points which might hurt them financially. The government, industry, labor and agriculture would want sections of it eliminated or modified. And Congress, in an election year, is going to move very cautiously and dodge going to the mat on controversial issues as long as is possible. Yet, in the opinion of the most impassionate observers of the national scene, we will have to deal with real causes if uncontrollable inflation is to be avoided.

New System of Education Planned

Every county and small community in the state of Texas will be engaged in determining the kind of educational system the state should have under a program announced today by the Gilmer-Aikin Committee on education.

Senator James E. Taylor, the chairman of the committee, speaking before five hundred representatives of city and county school systems in their annual meeting in Austin, revealed far-reaching plans for carrying a study of education to the people of the state.

Under the plan announced committees will be formed in each county of the state to advise and inform the Gilmer-Aikin committee. "Thus," said Senator Taylor, "the eventual recommendations of the Gilmer-Aikin committee will become the recommendations of the people of the state. We are convinced that the people want an educational system even better than our present excellent one, and this means will be used to carry out their wishes."

The new program is to be implemented by the appointment of Dr. H. A. Moore, of Austin, as executive agent of the committee and by the retention of Dr. I. D. Lasky, Dean of the College of Education of the University of Texas as Technical Consultant to the committee. Both men are assuming their duties at once, it was announced, and a speedy program of action is contemplated.

State Comptroller Reveals Tax Spending on Schools

Only five cents more of each tax dollar was required to educate the more than 1,500,000 grade, high school and college students in Texas during the last fiscal year than it did to pay the pensions of fewer than a quarter-million aged, blind persons and needy children.

Figures from the offices of Geo. H. Sheppard, state comptroller, also reveal that the cost of public school education, as compared with the overall cost of state government, decreased 5 per cent during the last fifteen years while pensions skyrocketed from 3 per cent of the total cost to 28 per cent.

The 33 cents of each tax dollar expended by the state for higher and public education is also only 5 per cent more than went into the maintenance and construction of highways last year, the comptroller's figures disclosed.

At the same time it was revealed that the total cost of the state government has more than tripled in 15 years while cost of education to the state has not kept pace.

During the 1932-33 fiscal year the total expenditure for all governmental functions was $107,922,451. Of that amount, $40,529,256, or 38 per cent went for college, high and grade school educations. Only $3,242,564, or 3 per cent, went for public welfare. A total of $49,589,036 was expended upon the highway system, that being 46 per cent.

In contrast, during the 1946-47 fiscal year total governmental expenditures amounted to $319,988,100. The schools, colleges and universities got $106,031,331, or 33 per cent. Pensions for 217,458 aged, blind and children skyrocketed to $90,213,091, or 28 per cent of each tax dollar. Highways, while dropping to 28 per cent, had a total expenditure of $91,146,484.

The comptroller's records reveal that pensions have marched upward each year during the last fifteen years, but the cost of education has fluctuated.

Welfare checks have skyrocketed each year since 1932-33. They reached a total of $22,031,982 within five years. During the next ten years aid for the aged, blind and children gained until their total was more than $90,000,000 last year.

While the pension cost was steadily increasing, the schools' aid ebbed and flowed each fiscal year. It reached a low of 28 per cent in 1938-39, when $45,640,985 was expended upon them.

"The spotlight of late has been on the increased appropriations for our schools, but official figures disclose that the cost of education has not kept pace with the total cost of government in Texas," Charles H. Tennyson, director of public relations for the Texas State Teachers Association pointed out.

Educators in Texas have fought long and hard to bring the state into the front ranks in education. We are making progress, but we are not doing so at the cost of other governmental functions."

Tennyson pointed out that not only does the 33 cents of the tax dollar help educate 1,500,000 grade and high school students and an estimated 50,000 students in state universities and colleges, but that it helps pay 46,500 public school teachers, a large number of persons on the college teaching staffs and an estimated 18,000 other persons employed by the various school systems.

The last legislature increased appropriations for the little red school house, its modern counterpart and the colleges, but the percentage of the tax dollar going into education is not expected to be much greater than the high for the last fifteen years," Tennyson said.

Dudley Ingham, of Sheffield, was in Sanderson on business Tuesday.

Mrs. J. C. Halbert has returned after spending several weeks in Johnson City. Mr. Halbert remained to complete some improvements on the farm that were hindered by the recent bad weather.

Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Evans, San Antonio, arrived Sunday to visit their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Dyer. Mrs. Mabel Ross was a Rio visitor Saturday.
